Other: 3 romansa (A. Blok), op.4, 1927; Pesni [Songs] (S. Marshak), op.34, 1941; 4 pesni-shutki [4 Humorous Songs] (Marshak, S. Mikhalkov), op.42, 1945; 7 vesyolïkh pesen [7 Jolly Songs] (Marshak), op.41, 1945; 10 sonetov Shekspira [10 Shakespeare Sonnets], op.52, 1953–5; 5 romansov [5 Romances] (R. Gamzatov), op.76, 1963–4; Vremya [Time] (Marshak), op.100, 1975; Pesni pechal′nogo serdtsa [Songs of a Sad Heart] (O. Tumanyan), op.101, 1980; 7 pesen o lyubvi [7 Songs about Love] (Dolmatovsky), op.103, 1985

Principal publisher: Mezhkniga

WRITINGS

Izbrannïye stat′i o muzïkye [Collected articles on music] (Moscow, 1963)

Prekrasnoye probuzhdayet dobroye [Beautiful things evoke goodness] (Moscow, 1973)

Vospitaniye uma i serdtsa [Educating the mind and the heart] (Moscow, 1984)

Rovesniki: besedï o muzïkye dlya yunoshestva [People of the same age: talks about music for young people] (Moscow, 1987)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Abraham: Eight Soviet Composers (London, 1943), 70ff

L. Danilevich: Tvorchestvo D.B. Kabalevskogo [The creative work of Kabalevsky] (Moscow, 1963)

D. Daragan: Kinomuzïka D. Kabalevskogo [Kabalevsky's music for the cinema] (Moscow, 1965)

P. Nazarevsky, ed.: D.B. Kabalevskiy: notograficheskiy i bibliograficheskiy spravochnik [Kabalevsky: bibliography and list of works] (Moscow, 1969)

S.D. Krebs: Soviet Composers and the Development of Soviet Music (London and New York, 1970), 233ff

G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol′sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974) [incl. complete list of writings]

V. Viktorov, ed.: D. Kabalevskiy: tvorcheskiye vstrechi, ocherki, pis′ma [Kabalevsky: his creative contacts, essays, letters] (Moscow, 1974)

L. Mikheyeva: Dmitry Borisovich Kabalevskiy (Leningrad, 1977)

L. Grigor′yev and Ya. Platek: Sovetskiye kompozitorï i muzïkovedï: spravochnik v 3-kh tomakh [Soviet composers and musicologists: a reference work in 3 volumes], ii (Moscow, 1981)

DINA GRIGOR′YEVNA DARAGAN

Kabeláč, Miloslav (b Prague, 1 Aug 1908; d Prague, 17 Sept 1979). Czech composer. He attended Prague Technical University (1926–8) but did not complete his studies there. He received private piano lessons (from 1926) from Mikeš, who recommended that he should devote himself to music professionally. In 1928 he was accepted at the Prague Conservatory where he studied composition under Jirák and conducting under Pavel Dědeček. His other teachers included Hába (counterpoint; new composition techniques), and Schulhoff (instrumentation). He graduated in composition with his Sinfonietta (performed by the Czech PO under Jirák in 1931) and in conducting the next year. In 1931–4 he attended Vilém Kurz's piano masterclass at the Prague Conservatory, graduating as a soloist with his Fantasia for piano and orchestra, op.1.

He was employed as a conductor and recording director for Prague radio (1932–41), then as head of musical production (1945–55). In the years 1942–5 he was obliged to leave Prague radio because of his wife's Jewish origin; during the Nazi occupation Kabeláč's works were not performed. In 1958–62 Kabeláč taught composition at the Prague Conservatory. In his early career Kabeláč frequently worked as a conductor (particularly of 20th-century music), but later he devoted himself fully to composition.

Already as a student, Kabeláč revealed a distinctive musical personality. He seldom used 12-note techniques, but often created unusual modes. This sometimes involved alternating smaller (particularly semitone) and larger intervals, or the gradual expansion of intervals when repeating or developing a motif. Such modes do not always span a whole octave but only a 5th. Kabeláč continued to retain tonality, in a broad sense, for most of his work.

Much of Kabeláč's inspiration came from studies of Gregorian chant and from a lifelong interest in non-European musical culture; he commented that 'Oriental music has inspired many European composers, and even me, to make use of the principles of this music. I stress that my only concern is those principles and that I simply drew inspiration in my own way. I only quoted from oriental music in my works under altogether exceptional circumstances' (HRo, 1969, p.297).

Kabeláč had close ties (especially in his younger years) with folklore. His work includes accompaniments to folksongs, and he also liked to use texts of folksongs for his own compositions. Kabeláč remarked that 'If someone can compose drawing from folklore, gaining nourishment and strength from it, then move further afield to an area less accessible to folklore, to stretch, yet not break, the link, then what a fine road this is. I know no greater master who took this road than Janáček' (HRo, 1959, p.96).

The first truly mature work, in a style which was already characteristic, is the cantata Neustupujte! ('Do Not Retreat!'), op.7, composed in autumn 1939 after the Nazi occupation of Bohemia and Moravia. It was written for male chorus, wind and percussion to Bohemian folk texts (from the time of the Prussian incursions into Bohemia in the mid-18th century) and a Hussite war song, the final words of which give the work its name. It was here, for the first time, that Kabeláč's lifelong fondness for percussion instruments was displayed. The radio première of this cantata was intended for an auspicious occasion: it was broadcast during the election of Beneš to the office of president of the Czechoslovak Republic in 1945.

The eight symphonies form a remarkable series, each being written for a different combination of instruments. The first (for strings and percussion) was completed in 1942; the last was composed in 1969–70 for a performance in the church of St Paul in Strasbourg; the performers were seated along the four sides of the church: the organ was at the back, the ensemble Les Percussions de Strasbourg was seated in front at the altar, the mixed chorus was on the left and the soprano soloist was in the pulpit, hence the work's title 'Antiphonies'. This performance was part of a concert dedicated exclusively to Kabeláč's work 'Hommage à Miloslav Kabeláč' at the 33rd International Festival in Strasbourg on 15 June 1971. The composer was not permitted by the regime in Czechoslovakia to travel and was unable to attend the concert. The Prague première of this work took place after the composer's death.

Kabeláč had earlier composed one of his most famous works, 8 Inventions for percussion instruments (six players), op.45 (1962), for the ensemble Les Percussions de Strasbourg. Dance ensembles, such as that of Alvin Ailey in New York (for the choreography of his ballet Streams), have used this work many times. Kabeláč also wrote another cycle, 8 Ricercari, op.51 (for one to six players) in 1966–7, for Les Percussions de Strasbourg, first performed at the Albi Festival in France in 1976. Other works which arose through foreign commissions include Euphemias Mysterion ('The Mystery of Silence'), op.50, for the Warsaw Autumn Festival in 1965, and the Seventh Symphony, op.52, commissioned by Ernest Bour, then conductor of the SWF SO, for the orchestra's appearance at the 1968 Prague Spring Festival.

Miloslav Kabeláč

The Sixth Symphony, op.44 (1961), marks the start of Kabeláč's use of new notation for his compositions and the style of his final creative period. Other significant orchestral works include Mysterium času ('The Mystery of Time'), op.31 (1953–7), Hamletovská improvizace ('Hamlet Improvisation'), op.46 (1962–3, to commemorate the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth) and Zrcadlení ('Reflections'), op.49 (1963–4), nine miniatures using various composition techniques. His last orchestral work was Metamorphoses II, op.58, for piano and orchestra, based on the oldest Czech sacred song 'Hospodine, pomiluj ny' (Lord, have mercy on us), which Kabeláč completed in 1979 as another version of the vocal Metamorphoses I.

It was also thanks to Kabeláč (together with Herzog, Lébl and others) that studios for electronic music were established at several radio stations in Czechoslovakia. The result of his creative work in this area is the cycle E fontibus Bohemicis, completed in 1972. What is apparent in this work, as in many others written by Kabeláč in his last period, is the inspiration taken from the deeply experienced humanist traditions of Czech and European culture.

The works of Kabeláč rank among the most distinctive in 20th-century Czech music. Editio Praga began a collected critical edition of his works in 1999.

WORKS
(selective list)

ORCHESTRAL

Syms.: no.1, op.11, str, perc, 1941–2; no.2, op.15, 1942–6; no.3, op.33, org, brass, timp, 1948–57; no.4 'Camerata', op.36, chbr orch, 1957–8; no.5 'Drammatica', op.41, S (no text), orch, 1960; no.6 'Concertante', op.44, cl, orch, 1961; no.7, op.52 (Kabeláč, after Bible), spkr, orch, 1967–8; no.8, 'Antiphonies', op.54 (Bible), S, chorus, perc, org, 1969–70

Other orch: Sinfonietta, 1930–31; Fantasia, op.1, pf, orch, 1934; Ov. no.1, op.6, 1939; Ov. no.2, op.17, 1947; Dětem [For Children], suite, op.22, small orch, 1955; Mysterium času [The Mystery of Time], op.31, passacaglia, 1956–7; Hamletovská improvizace [Hamlet Improvisation], op.46, 1962–3; Zrcadlení [Reflections], op.49, 9 miniatures, 1963–4; Metamorphoses II, op.58, pf, orch, 1979

VOCAL

With orch: Neustupujte! [Do Not Retreat!] (cant., folk texts and Hussite chorale), op.7, male chorus, wind, perc, 1939; Suite from the music to Sophocles' Electra, op.28a, A, female chorus, orch, 1956; Suite from 'Master of Nine Songs', op.34a, Bar, orch, 1957, 9 [from incid music]; 3 Melodramas from 'Master of Nine Songs', op.34b, 1957 [from incid music]; 6 Lullabies (folk texts), op.29 (A, female chorus, inst ens)/(A, pf), 1956; Euphemias Mysterion [The Mystery of Silence] (Gk. words), op.50, S, chbr orch, 1964–5

With pf: Milostné písně [Love Songs], op.25 (folksong texts), S, Bar, pf, 1955; Ohlasy dálav [Echoes from Far-away] (textless), op.47, A, pf, 1963

Other choral: 6 Male Choruses, op.10 (J. Wolker), 1939–42; Modré nebe [Blue Sky], op.19 (F. Hrubín), children's chorus, pf, 1949–50; Přírodě [To Nature], op.35 (folksong texts), children's chorus, pf, 1957–8; Zpíváme [We Are Singing] (L. Macháčková), op.43, children's chorus, pf, 1961; Metamorphoses I, op.57, female spkr, Bar, male chorus, mixed chorus, 1978 [based on Czech chorale 'Hospodine, pomiluj ny']; Hebrew prayer (Kaddish), op.59, spkr, Bar, male chorus, 1976, rev. 1979

OTHER

Chbr: Sonata, op.2, hn, pf, 1935–6; Wind Sextet, op.8, 1940; Sonata, op.9, vc, pf, 1941–2; Sonatina, op.24, ob, pf, 1955; Ballad, op.27, vn, pf, 1955; Suite, op.39, sax, pf, 1958–9; Lamenti e risolini, 8 bagatelles, op.53, fl, hp, 1969; Osudová dramata člověka [Fated Dramas of Man], sonata, op.56, spkr, tpt, perc, pf, 1975–6

Kbd: Passacaglia TGM, op.3, pf, 1937 [to the memory of T.G. Masaryk]; Suite, op.5, pf, 1939; 7 pieces, op.14, pf, 1944, 1946; 8 Preludes, op.30, pf, 1954–6; 2 Fantasias, op.32, org, 1957, 1958; Cizokrajné motivy [Motifs from Foreign Countries], op.38, pf, 1958–9; 4 Preludes, op.48, org, 1963

Perc: 8 Inventions, op.45, 6 perc, 1962; 8 Ricercari, op.51, 16 perc, 1966–7, rev. 1971

Elec: E fontibus Bohemicis: 6 Tableaux from Czech Annals, 1965–72

Principal publishers: Panton, Editio Praga

WRITINGS

'S Miloslabem Kabeláčem o hudbě a lidech, kteří ji tvoří' [With Kabeláč on music and people who create it], HRo, xii (1959), 96–8

'Nové směry v současné hudbě' [New trends in contemporary music], HRo, xvi (1963), 12 only

'Skladatel ve zvukové laboratoři' [The composer in the sound laboratory], Sborník přednášek o problémech elektronické hudby, ii (Prague and Bratislava, 1964)

'S M. Kabeláčem o Invencích' [With Kabeláč on the Inventions], HRo, xviii (1965), 568 only
'S Kabeláčem o komponování a jeho názorech na hudbu' [With Kabeláč on musical composition and his opinions on music], HRo, xxii (1969), 294–8
'Třikrát o hudbě' [Three times about music], OM, ii (1970), 113–16

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
E. Herzog: 'Tvůrčí profil M. Kabeláč' [The personality of M. Kabeláče], HRo, xi (1958), 553–4
H. Hlavsová: 'O čtvrté symfonii M. Kabeláče', HRo, xii (1959), 972–5
J. Šmolík: 'Hamletovská improvizace', HRo, xvii (1964), 548–9
J. Pilka: 'Miloslav Kabeláč o svojej práci' [Kabeláč on his work], SH, xii (1968), 222–3
V. Lébl: 'Sedmá symfonie Miloslava Kabeláče', HRo, xxi (1968), 443–6
J. Doubravová: 'K hudebnímu myšlení Miloslava Kabeláče' [On Kabeláč's musical thought], HV, vii (1970), 7–19
J. Ludvová: 'Eufemias Mysterion M. Kabeláče', HRo, xxiii (1970), 172–6
J. Ludvová: 'M. Kabeláč – 8 invencí, op.45', Konfrontace, 1970, no.4, pp.4–11
J. Sieber: 'Miloslav Kabeláč', Musica, xxviii (1974), 150–53
J. Havlík: 'Druhá symfonie Miloslava Kabeláče', HV, xx (1983), 135–49
Z. Nouza: 'Nad tvorbou Miloslava Kabeláče' [About the works of Kabeláč], HRo, xxxvii (1984), 38–42
L. Stehlík: 'Poslední období tvorby Miloslava Kabeláče' [Kabeláč's final creative period], HRo, xli (1988), 380–83
V. Lébl: 'Životopis M. Kabeláče' [The life of M. Kabeláč], HV, xxv (1988), 8–69
I. Loudová and others: 'Vzpomínky na Miloslava Kabeláče' [Memories of M. Kabeláč], HRo, xli (1988), 378–9
'Miloslav Kabeláč – studie a dokumenty' [Studies and documents], HV, xxxvi (1999), incl. Z. Nouza: Seznam skladeb Miloslava Kabeláče [The Catalogue of Kabeláč's works]
P. Nardin and M. David: Miloslav Kabeláč ou le salaire de l'honneur (forthcoming)

ZDENĚK NOUZA

Kabos, Ilona (b Budapest, 7 Dec 1893; d London, 28 May 1973). British pianist of Hungarian birth. At the Royal Academy of Music in Budapest she studied with Árpád Szendy (one of Liszt's last pupils), also with Leo Weiner and Kodály, and won the Liszt Prize in 1915. She made her début in Budapest in 1916, toured the Netherlands, Germany and Austria in 1918, and from 1924 travelled extensively, giving first performances of works by Bartók, Kodály, Weiner, Dallapiccola, Roy Harris, Chávez and Seiber. For a time she was married to the pianist Louis Kentner, and made a home in London. Her sense of style, refinement of taste and liveliness of mind in a wide artistic sphere made her one of the most esteemed teachers in the postwar decades; among her pupils were Peter Frankl, John Ogdon and Joseph Kalichstein. From 1965 she spent five months of each year on the staff of the Juilliard School in New York, besides giving masterclasses in the USA and Europe (including regular visits to the Dartington Summer School). She was also frequently a member of adjudicating panels at international piano competitions.

JOAN CHISSELL

Kabuki. Japanese theatrical genre. See JAPAN, §IV, 3.

Kacapi (i). Plucked box zither used in Sundanese areas of West Java. The name is derived from the Sanskrit kacchapī viṇā. The kacapi may have a boat-shaped wooden frame (kacapi parahu) or a more box-like structure made of wooden planks, in both cases with metal strings stretched lengthwise over the soundboard. The strings are fixed at one end to metal or wooden pins and attached at the other to tuning-pegs; fine tuning is achieved by adjusting the movable wooden pyramids over which each string passes. The strings are plucked with the nails and flesh of combinations of thumb, index and middle fingers. The kacapi indung ('mother zither') usually has 18 strings, while the smaller, higher-pitched kacapi rincik has 15 strings. Both kacapi are used in the tembang Sunda ensemble, together with suling, in the accompaniment of sung poetry. The kacapi-suling ensemble is a derived recorded genre, featuring the metrical songs of tembang Sunda but without the vocal component.

The larger kacapi is also featured in the epic narrative genre pantun, in which a blind male vocalist accompanies himself. The 20-string kacapi siter is the central element of kacapian, a modern ensemble which can feature a variety of instruments including violin (biola), guitar (gitar) and even a gamelan in the accompaniment of kawih vocal music. (See also INDONESIA, §V, 1(ii)(d).)

The kucapi in Minangkabau is a similar instrument.

MARGARET J. KARTOMI/R

Kacapi [kacaping] (ii). Boat-shaped plucked lute used in the Buginese and Makassar (kacaping) areas of the province of South Sulawesi and on the island of Sumba, Indonesia. The handle, soundboard, foot and bridge are all cut from one piece of wood, and the back of the resonator is closed by a lid which is perforated with several holes. The proportions of the instrument vary. It is elegantly shaped and often elaborately carved. It has two strings. Men or women play it, either solo or accompanying a vocal part or in an ensemble together with a lea-lea (bamboo zither), ganrang (double-headed drum) and gong. Although it is a popular instrument it is not mentioned in the historical Lontara (chronicles), which suggests that it has not been used as a court instrument.

Similar instruments include the hasapi in Batak Toba, North Sumatra, the kulapi in Batak Karo and the kucapi in Minangkabau.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Sachs: Die Musikinstrumente Indiens und Indonesiens (Berlin and Leipzig, 1914, 2/1923)
W. Kaudern: Musical Instruments in Celebes (Göteborg, 1927)

MARGARET J. KARTOMI

Kachamba, Daniel (James) (b Limbe, Malawi, 1947; d 25 July 1987). Malawian composer. He was Malawi's foremost 20th-century guitar-song composer. He composed both for the six-string acoustic guitar and for the five-string band-guitar which he played in the Kachamba Brothers' Band from the early 1960s to the late 1970s. Within an original style, Kachamba's music integrates features of central and southern African guitar music of the 1950s.

His early compositions for band drew heavily on contemporaneous South African popular styles such as kwela and early simanje-manje, hauyani ('Hawaiian') guitar from Zimbabwe and lumba (rumba) from Kenya and the Democratic Republic of Congo (Zaïre). His international career began in 1972 with visits to Nairobi and Addis Ababa and an invitation to participate in an international conference on jazz research hosted by the Hochschule für Musik und Darstellende Kunst in Graz. Some of his most celebrated songs were written during this period, including Panali agogo ('There was a Grandmother'), I'm a Beggar Man, Wodala Sofiya ('Lucky Sofia'), Maliro aKachamba ('The Funeral of Kachamba'), Sunny Boy and Angoni ajiya ngoma ('The Angoni Gather for the Ngoma Dance'). After 1972 Kachamba published several 45 r.p.m. recordings made by the now defunct NZERU Record Company in Malawi.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

G. Kubik: 'Daniel Kachamba's Solo Guitar Music: Notes on the Sound Films E2136 and E2137, Encyclopaedia Cinematographica, Göttingen', Jazzforschung, viii (1976), 159–95

G. Kubik: The Kachamba Brothers' Band: a Study of Neo-Traditional Music in Malawi (Lusaka, 1976)

D. Evans: 'Review: The Kachamba Brothers' Band', Journal of American Folklore, xc (1977), 235–6

G. Kubik: 'Recordings and Films by Daniel Kachamba (1947–1987)', YTM, xx (1988), 251–4

M.A. Malamusi: 'Rise and Development of a Chileka Guitar Style in the 1950s', For Gerhard Kubik: Festschrift, ed. A. Schmidhofer and D. Schüller (Frankfurt, 1994), 7–72

RECORDINGS

Opeka nyimbo: Musician-Composers from Southern Malawi, Museum Collection Berlin MC15 (1989)

Kaseti ya nyimbo za chikumbutso cha malemu Daniel Kachamba [Memorial cassette of songs by Daniel Kachamba], University of Malawi (1992)

African Guitar: Solo Fingerstyle Guitar Music: Composers and Performers of Congo/Zaire, Uganda, Central African Republic, Malawi, Namibia and Zambia, videotape, rec. G. Kubik, Vestapol 13017 (1995) [incl. notes by G. Kubik]

MOYA ALIYA MALAMUSI

Kachulev, Ivan (b Yambol, 4 June 1905; d Sofia, 12 July 1989). Bulgarian music folklorist. After graduating from the State Academy of Music in Sofia in 1938, he taught music in Bulgarian secondary schools from 1939 to 1945. He then worked until 1948 in the folk music section of the Ethnographical Museum in Sofia. From 1948 to 1956 he was junior research fellow at the Music Institute of the Bulgarian Academy of Science and from 1956 senior research fellow. At the same time he taught the piano at the State Academy of Music in Sofia (1947–52). The main area of his research was Bulgarian folk music, particularly Bulgarian folk music instruments.

WRITINGS

'Balgarski narodni muzikalni instrumenti: tamburite v Razlozhko' [The Tamburi in the Razlog district], IIM, i (1952), 97–124 [incl. Russ. and Fr. summaries]

'Svirkarstvoto v selo Shipka' [The restoration of the Svirki in Shipka village], IIM, ii–iii (1956), 215–48

'Zvancharstvoto v grad Gotse Delchev' [The restoration of the Svantsi in the town of Gotse Delchev], IIM, ii–iii (1956), 249–78 [incl. Russ. and Fr. summaries]

'Narodni muzikalni instrumenti v Dobrudzha' [Folk instruments in Dobrudzha], Kompleksna nauchna dobruzhanska ekspeditsiya prez 1954 godina: dokladi i materiali, ed. I. Penkov and K. Krustov (Sofia, 1956), 163–75

'Gadulkite v Balgariya' [The Gadulkas in Bulgaria], IIM, v (1959), 131–99; partial Eng. trans. in GSJ, xvi (1963), 95–107

'Narodni muzikalni instrumenti v zapadna Balgariya: Transko i Kyustendilsko' [Folk instruments in western Bulgaria: in the Tran and Kyustendil regions], Kompleksna nauchna ekspeditsiya v zapadna Balgariya Transko, Bresnishko, Kyuestendilsko 1957–58, ed. P. Stainov (Sofia, 1961), 419–46

'Narodnite instrumenti i instrumentalnata muzika na balgarite mokhamedani v Rodopite' [Folk instruments and instrumental music of the Bulgarian Moslems in the Rodope mountains], IIM, viii (1962), 197–233 [incl. Russ. and Fr. summaries]

'Balgarski dukhovi dvuglasni narodni muzikalni instrumenti' [Bulgarian two-part folk wind instruments], IIM, xi (1965), 23–78 [incl. Russ. and Fr. summaries]

'Nauchni prinosi v oblastta na narodnite instrumenti i instrumentalna muzika' [Scientific contributions in the field of folk instruments and instrumental folk music], IIM, xii (1967), 29–56 [incl. Russ. and Fr. summaries]

'Zweistimmige Volksmusikinstrumente in Bulgarien', Studia instrumentorum musicae popularis I: Brno 1967, Bulgarian Folk Musical Instruments, ed. W. Kolar (Pittsburgh, 1978), 142–58

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Balgarski narodni pesni za Rusiya i Savetskiya sayuz [Bulgarian folksongs for Russia and the Soviet Union] (Sofia, 1953) with E. Stoin: Balgarski savremenni narodni pesni [Bulgarian contemporary folksongs] (Sofia, 1958) with R. Katsarova and E. Stoin: Narodni pesni ot severoiztochna Balgariya [Folksongs from north-east Bulgaria], i (Sofia, 1962)

Balgarski narodni pesni ot severozapadna Balgariya [Bulgarian folksongs from north-west Bulgaria], ii (Sofia, 1973)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Kachura. See CACHUA.

Kacsoh, Pongrác (b Budapest, 15 Dec 1873; d Budapest, 16 Dec 1923). Hungarian composer, teacher and writer on music. He studied the piano and flute at the University of Kolozsvár (now Cluj-Napoca) and theory with Ödön Farkas; he also organized a student orchestra. From 1892 to 1896 he studied physics, and he taught mathematics and physics in Budapest before turning to composition and criticism. As a contributor to the journal Zenevilág he was among the first to recognize Bartók's talent. The popularity of some songs and the musical play Csipkerózsa led to a commission for the operetta János vitéz (1904), which provided a welcome antidote to the Viennese works then in vogue and has remained the most popular Hungarian national operetta. It was followed by Rákóczi (1906), Mary-Ann (1908) and incidental music for Molnár's Liliom (1909). After a period in Kecskemét, Kacsoh returned to Budapest in 1912, where he held various positions as a teacher and chorus master. He composed many songs and some choral and piano music and also published textbooks on music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage (for more detailed list see GroveO): Csipkerózsa [Wild Rose] (Spl), 1904; János vitéz [Hero John] (operetta), 1904; Rákóczi (Spl), 1906; A harang [The Bell] (legend), 1907, collab. A. Buttykay; Mary-Ann op.14 (operetta), 1908; Pompei (op), 1913, inc.; Dorottya [Dorothea] (comic op), 1929

Choral works, songs

Piano pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GänzlEMT; GroveO

L. Koch: Kacsoh Pongrác János vitéze (Budapest, 1942)

ANDREW LAMB

Kaczkowski, Joachim (b c1786; d Warsaw, 2 Jan 1829). Polish violinist and composer. He began his musical studies with his father, and as a youth in Lwów knew Kurpiński and Elsner. He made his début in February 1810 in Warsaw, and for the next seven years lived in Germany, gaining recognition and publishing chamber music. From 1818 until 1822 he worked as a teacher and chamber musician in the homes of the nobility in eastern Poland. In 1822 he moved to Warsaw, giving his last public concert in October of that year in the National Theatre; he then dedicated himself to composing piano music and teaching. As a violinist Kaczkowski modelled himself on Viotti and Rode; critics valued his refinement of taste, bravura and expert bowing, but criticized his intonation. His compositions show a limited grasp of technique, and his prediliction for variations shows the influence of Rode. His polonaises for piano, written during his Warsaw period, number around 30, and are well-proportioned, lyrical and brilliant in style, and achieved great popularity; one was praised by Chopin. His other compositions include two violin concertos, duos and trios for strings and several sets of variations for string quartet (MSS and works in PL-Kj, PL-Wn, PL-Tu and the Library of the Jesuit Fathers in Święta Lipka).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; SMP

AMZ, xiii (1811), 456; xv (1813), 712; xvi (1814), 623; xvii (1815), 99–100; xviii (1816), 12–13; xix (1817), 19; xxi (1819), 19 [reviews of compositions]

Obituaries: Kurier Warszawski (4 Jan 1829); Przewodnik Polski (4 Jan 1829)

S. Burhardt: Polonez: katalog tematyczny ed. M. Prokopowicz and A. Spóz, ii (Kraków, 1976)

BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Kaddish. See QADDISH.

Kade, Otto (b Dresden, 6 May 1819; d Bad Doberan, nr Rostock, 19 July 1900). German writer on music and editor. He attended the Dresden Kreuzschule and was awarded a scholarship to study harmony and counterpoint with Julius Otto and Moritz Hauptmann, and the piano and organ with Johann Schneider. In 1846 he went to Italy for further study, particularly of early vocal music, and on his return in 1848 founded the Dresden Cecilian Society for the promotion of early church music. In 1853 he became director of music at the Dreikönigskirche in Neustadt, and in 1860 succeeded Julius Schäffer as music director at the court of the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, where he encouraged and promoted the performance of early works, in line with his research. He also taught at the Gymnasium in Schwerin from 1866 until his retirement in 1893. He was awarded an honorary doctorate by Leipzig University in 1884.

Kade was prolific both as a writer and as an editor of music. Many of his writings appeared first as articles in Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, the publication of the Gesellschaft für Musikforschung founded at Kade's instigation by Robert Eitner. They include historical and biographical studies, many of which deal with aspects of Lutheran church music in the 16th century, representing an intimate knowledge and a perceptive understanding of a wide range of musical sources. His interest in this subject resulted in a number of works, including Der neu aufgefundene Luthercodex vom Jahre 1530 (Dresden, 1871), which includes valuable information on early Lutheran church practice, and Die ältere Passionskomposition bis zum Jahre 1631 (Gütersloh, 1893), which quotes extensively from the works of Obrecht, Walter and Scandello. Among Kade's most significant contributions to music history was his supplementary volume to Ambros's Geschichte der Musik, containing examples from celebrated Renaissance works and representing the fruits of many years' research. His work on important music collections resulted in several publications, including Die Musikalien-Sammlung des ... Mecklenburg-Schweriner Fürstenhauses (Schwerin, 1893–9). He ranks with Ambros, Chrysander and Eitner as one of the leading musical scholars of the second half of the 19th century.

Kade's son Reinhard (b Dresden, 25 Sept 1859; d Dresden, 16 June 1936) taught at the Dresden Gymnasium and collaborated with Eitner in compiling the catalogue of the music collection in the Dresden Royal Library. His research concentrated on local music history, mainly that of Dresden and Freiberg, and resulted in a number of articles published in Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft and various local periodicals.

EDITIONS

(selective list)

Vierstimmiges Choralbuch ... zu ... dem ... Mecklenburgischen Gesangbuch (Schwerin, 1869)

Cantionale für die evangelisch-lutherischen Kirchen im Grossherzogtum Mecklenburg-Schwerin (Schwerin, 1868–87)

Der neu aufgefundene Luthercodex vom Jahre 1530 (Dresden, 1871)

with R. Eitner and L. Erk: Einleitung, Biographien, Melodien und Gedichte zu Johann Ott's Liedersammlung von 1544, PÄMw, iv (1876)

Johann Walter: Geystliches gesangk Buchleyn von 1524, PÄMw, vi (1878)

Die älteren Musikalien der Stadt Freiberg in Sachsen (Leipzig, 1888)

Die ältere Passionskomposition bis zum Jahre 1631 (Gütersloh, 1893, reprint Hildesheim, 1971)

Die Musikalien-Sammlung des ... Mecklenburg-Schweriner Fürstenhauses (Schwerin, 1893–9, reprint Hildersheim, 1971)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R. Schaal) [incl. list of writings]

R. Kade: Obituary, MMg, xxxii (1900), 169–72

C. Meyer: Geschichte der Mecklenburg-Schweriner Hofkapelle (Schwerin, 1913, suppl. 1919)

C. Gerhardt: Die Torgauer Walter-Handschriften (Kassel, 1949)

K. Ameln: 'Die Anfänge der deutschen Passionshistorie', IMSCR IV: Basle 1949, 39–45

H. Glahn: 'Otto Kades breve til Thomas Laub 1889–1898', Dansk kirkesangs årsskrift 1989–93, 71–141 [Danish trans. of Kade's letters on music theory and history, with translator's introduction]

RICHARD SCHAAL

Kaden, Christian (b Dohna, nr Dresden, 16 Nov 1946). German musicologist. He studied musicology and ethnography at the Humboldt University in Berlin with Knepler and Frederick Rose (1965–8). After working for one year as chief dramaturg at the Musiktheater am Landestheater Halle (1972–3), he completed a dissertation on Hirtensignale and obtained the doctorate at the Humboldt University, where he was appointed instructor in music sociology that same year. In 1983 he took the DSc at the Humboldt University with a study on notation and composition in early polyphony, and became reader there in 1986 and professor in 1993. His writings concentrate on music sociology, particularly on the relationship between social structures and the reception and analysis of music; he is also interested in how non-Western music may provide alternative models of musical production and reception. He has published works on the music of the Middle Ages, the history of musical terminology, semiotics and methodologies in music analysis. He became the editor of the series Musiksoziolojie in 1996.

WRITINGS

Musikalische Syntax und sozialhistorische Praxis in der arbeitsfunktionalen Signalgebung der Viehhirten (diss., Humboldt U., Berlin, 1973; Leipzig, 1977 as Hirtensignale: musikalische Syntax und kommunikative Praxis)

'Musikalische Normenbildung und ihre sozialen Grundlagen', IRASM, vi (1975), 57–66 [with Eng. summary]

'Strukturelle Segmentierung von Musik', BMw, xviii (1976), 149–62, 293–334

'Zur Spieltechnik der ungarischen Sackpfeife', Studia instrumentorum musicae popularis VI: Kazimierz Dolny 1977, 33–42

'Die Einheit von Leben und Werk Richard Wagners oder, über Schwierigkeiten mit Wagner heute zu kommunizieren', BMw, xxi (1979), 75–104

Notation – frühe Mehrstimmigkeit – Komposition (diss. DSc, Humboldt U., Berlin, 1983)

'Artentstehung in der Musik', BMw, xxvi (1984), 214–24

Musiksoziologie (Berlin, 1984)

'Sozialstrukturen als Bewegungsmomente des Musikhörens', IRASM, xv (1984), 175–202 [with Eng. summary]
'Ein Ritardando bei Hugo Wolf', Wegzeichen: Studien zur Musikwissenschaft, ed. J. Mainka and P. Wicke (Berlin 1985), 179–93
ed., with E. Stockmann: E.M. von Hornbostel: Tonart und Ethos: Aufsätze zur Musikethnologie und Musikpsychologie (Leipzig, 1986/R)
'Cultural Diversity: a Challenge to the World of Music', World of Music, xxxi/2 (1989), 114–40
'Abschied von der Harmonie der Welt: zur Genese des neuzeitlichen Musik-Begriffs', Gesellschaft und Musik: Wege zur Musiksoziologie: Festgabe für Robert H. Reichardt, ed. W. Lipp (Berlin, 1992), 27–53
Des Lebens wilder Kreis: Musik im Zivilisationsprozess (Kassel, 1993)
'"Was ist Musik?": Begriffsgeschichtliche Beobachtungen, Ketzereien, Paraphrasen', Zwischen Aufklärung und Kulturindustrie: Festschrift für Georg Knepler zum 85. Geburtstag, ed. H.-W. Heister, K. Heister-Grech and G. Scheit, i (Hamburg, 1993), 11–24
'Schönheit, entspannt: musikalische Werte im Prozess der Zivilisation', NZM, Jg.155, no.6 (1994), 4–11
'Ausser-sich-sein, Bei-sich-sein: Ekstase und Rationalität in der Geschichte der Musik', NZM, Jg.156, no.6 (1995), 4–12
ed.: Musiksoziolojie (Kassel, 1996–)
'Musiksoziolojie', MGG2
'Zeichen', MGG2

BRADFORD ROBINSON

Kadenz (Ger.). See CADENCE.

Kadner, Johann. See CADNER, JOHANN.

Kadosa, Pál (b Léva [now Levice, Slovakia], 6 Sept 1903; d Budapest, 30 March 1983). Hungarian composer, pianist and teacher. He studied the piano with Arnold Székely and composition with Kodály at the National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music (1921–7). From 1927 until 1943 he taught the piano at the Fodor Conservatory, and in 1943–4 at the Goldmark School of Music in Budapest. In 1928 he was a joint founder of the Society of Modern Hungarian Musicians, which later united with the Hungarian Association for New Music, the Hungarian section of the ISCM. It was under the aegis of the association that the first independent evening of Kadosa's compositions took place on 2 May 1933. At the same time his works began to appear in the international centres of new music: his Piano Concerto no.1 was first performed at the 11th ISCM Festival in Amsterdam, the Divertimento no.1 in 1934 at the Venice Biennale and the Divertimento no.2 in Strasbourg. After an enforced interruption because of World War II, Kadosa's career continued its development. In 1945 he was appointed professor of piano at the Budapest Academy, and from 1945 until 1949 he was vice-president of the Hungarian Arts Council. Also, in 1949 he became a committee member of the Association of Hungarian Composers, and in 1953 president of the Hungarian performing rights bureau Artisjus. For his work as a composer he was awarded the Order of the Freedom of Hungary in 1946, the Kossuth Prize in 1950, and in 1955 and 1962 the Erkel Prize. In 1953 and 1963 respectively he was made a Merited Artist and an Honoured Artist of the Hungarian People's Republic, and in 1967 he was elected an honorary member of the Royal Academy of Music, London.

Kadosa's early compositional style was influenced by Bartók, Kodály, Stravinsky, Hindemith and also Brecht. Rhythmically energetic allegro movements, harsh harmony, bewilderingly bizarre gestures, linear structures, gestures of an 'épater les bourgeois' type in the slow movements and aphoristic construction are the most important hallmarks of his music up to about 1937. The Hungarian influence appears in his works, as opposed to those of Bartók and Kodály, as a direct experience of nature, rather than an indirect, intellectual influence. Longer melodic lines and non-ironic lyrical moments first appear in the Piano Concertino (1938), while the works of around 1943–4, such as the Partita for orchestra, reflect in their convulsive melodies and their barren polyphony the apocalyptic mood of the time. The cantatas and orchestral pieces which appeared around 1949–51 are characterized by a deliberate lack of complexity, but these well-intentioned works, aimed to be accessible to the whole population, only led to an exaggerated simplicity and so to a creative cul-de-sac. The return to his natural complexity, the use of free 12-note elements, and the expression of collective and dramatic experiences in an individual but eloquent musical language all brought about the culmination of Kadosa's work, beginning with the Fourth Symphony. With all its triumphs and faults, the music of this important and highly educated composer represents the whole generation of Hungarians immediately following Bartók and Kodály.

As a pianist Kadosa was among the best interpreters of Bartók, and he gave numerous first performances in Hungary of important 20th-century works. He was equally important as a teacher; among his students were the composers Sárai, Mihaly, Lehel and Kurtág, and the pianists Ránki and Schiff.

WORKS

STAGE

Irren ist staatlich (comic op, 1, Kadosa), op.17, 1931
A Huszti kaland [Adventure at Huszt] (comic op, 2, B. Szabolcsi), op.40, 1949–50

ORCHESTRAL

9 syms.: Chbr Sym., op.10, 1927; no.1, op.33, 1941–2; no.2, op.39, 1948; no.3, op.50, 1953–5; no.4, op.53, 1958–9; no.5, op.55, 1960–61; no.6, op.62, 1966; no.7, op.64, 1967; no.8, op.66, 1968
Concs.: Pf Conc. no.1, op.15, 1931; Vn Conc. no.1, op.19, 1932; Conc., str qt, orch, op.26, 1936; Va Conc., op.27, 1937; Pf Concertino (Pf Conc. no.2), op.29; 1938; Vn Conc. no.2, op.32, 1940–41, rev.1956; Pf Conc., no.3, op.47, 1953, rev.1955; Pf Conc., no.4, op.63, 1966
Other: Divertimentos, nos.1–2, op.20, 1933–4; Partita, op.34, 1943–4; Gyászóda [Funeral Ode], op.36a, 1945; Márciusi nyitány [March Ov.], op.36b, 1948; Mezei csokor [Field Flowers], op.42, 1950; Becsület és dicső ség [Honour and Glory], suite, op.43, 1951; Suite, op.48, 1954; Pian' e forte, op.56, 1963; Serenade, chbr orch, op.65, 1967–8; Sinfonietta, op.70, 1974

VOCAL

cantatas

op.
30	Folksong Cantata, 1v, cl, vn, pf, 1939
31	De amore fatali (A. József), 1939–40
41	Three Cantatas, 1949–50: Terjed a fény [The Light is Spreading] (G. Devecseri), Sztálin esküje [Stalin's Oath] (Z. Zelk), A béke katonái [Soldiers of Peace] (G. Devecseri)
45	Március fia [Son of March] (I. Raics), 1952

other works

4	Four Songs (E. Ady, B. Balázs, E. Szép), 1923–4
8	Song (Szép), 1v, orch, 1926
24	Various works, 1935–6: 8 dal [8 Songs] (L. Kassák, Zelk, G. Juhász, A. Fenyő), 1v, pf; Regösének [Minstrel Song], chorus; Magyar népdalszvit [Hungarian Folk Suite], male chorus; Tréfás juhász [The Jolly Shepherd], chorus; 2-part Canons; Három zsidó katonadal [3 Jewish Marching Songs], male chorus; Három hasszid dal [3 Chassid Songs], 1v, pf; Zsidó népdalok [Jewish Folksongs], 1v, pf
44	Seven Petőfi Songs, 1951

46 Songs (J. Arany, Ady), 1952
60 Seven Songs (József), 1964
67 Six Choral Songs (Arany), 1969
68 Vier Lieder (N. Sachs), 1970

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

2 Three Sonatinas, 1923–4: vn, rev. 1960; vc, rev. 1961; vn, vc, rev. 1974
5 Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1925
6 Suite, vn, pf, 1925
12 String Trio no.1, 1929–30
14 Partita, vn, pf, 1931
16 Various works, 1931: Suite, vn; 4 Duets, 2 vn; Hungarian Folksongs, vn, pf; 5 Rhythm Studies, 2 vn; Little Suite, 2 vn; Nádihegedű [Straw fiddle], vn, pf
22 String Quartet no.1, 1934–5
25 String Quartet no.2, 1936
49 Various works: Wind Qnt, 1954; Str Trio no.2, 1955; Suite, pf 4 hands, 1955; Pf Trio, 1956; Sonatina, vn, pf, 1962
52 String Quartet no.3, 1957
56 Sonatina, fl, pf, 1961
58 Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1963

PIANO

Various works, op.1: Suites nos.1–3, 1921–3, 7 Bagatelles, 1918–19, 3 Etudes, 1923; Epigrams, op.3, 1923–4; Sonata no.1, op.7, 1926; Sonata no.2, op.9, 1926–7; Al fresco, op.11a, 1926–9; Sonatina, op.11b, 1927; Sonata no.3, op.13, 1930; 3 könnyű szonaténa [3 Easy Sonatinas], op.18a, 1931; 5 Sketches, op.18b, 1931; Népdal szvit [Folksong Suite], op.21, 1933; Various works, op.23a–h, 1935: 4 Pieces for Children, 10 Easy Pieces, 6 Folksongs, Folksong Sonatina, Little Suite, 5 Etudes, Toccatina, Capriccio; Rhapsody, op.28a, 1937; 6 Little Preludes, op.35a, 1944; 12 Little Pieces, op.35b, 1944; Sonata, 2 pf, op.37, 1947; Various works, op.38a–c, 1948: Epistulae ex ponto, Tristia, Sketches; Mezei csokor [Field Flowers], op.42, 4 hands, 1950; Suite, op.49c, 4 hands, 1955; 10 Bagatelles, op.51, 1956–7; Sonata no.4, op.54, 1960; 4 Caprichos, op.57, 1962; Kaleidoscope, op.61, 1965; Pillanatképek [Snapshots], op.69, 1971

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Editio Musica

WRITINGS

'Beethoven és Magyarország' [Beethoven and Hungary], Új zenei szemle, III/2 (1952), 8–10
'Beszámoló a német zenei plénumról' [Report on the plenary meeting of the composers in the GDR], ibid., iii/11 (1952), 26–8
'A nevelő' [The educator], ibid., iii/12 (1952), 11 only [on Kodály]
'Emlékbeszéd egy Bartók-szobor leleplezese alkalmából' [Memorial speech on the occasion of the unveiling of Bartók's statue], ibid., iv/7–8 (1955), 1 only
'Emlékezés' [Remembrance], ibid., vi/9 (1955), 71 only [on Bartók]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Maróthy: 'Kadosa Pál három kantátája' [Three cantatas by Kadosa], Új zenei szemle, i/3 (1950), 23–7
A. Mihály: 'Kadosa-Szabolcsi: huszti kaland', Új zenei szemle, iii/2 (1952), 5–7
F. Bónis: 'Pál Kadosa: Portrait of a Composer', New Hungarian Quarterly, no.15 (1964), 214–20
F. Bónis: Kadosa Pál (Budapest, 1965)
J. Breuer: Tizenhárom óra Kadosa Pállal [13 hours with Kadosa] (Budapest, 1978)
G. Kroó: 'Egy nagy muzsikus halálára' [To the death of a great musician], Élet és irodalom (15 April 1983)
G. Ránki: 'Búcsú Kadosa Páltól' [Farewell from Kadosa], Kritika (1983), no.5
Z. Kocsis: 'Kadosa Pál meghalt' [Kadosa is dead], Muzsika, xxvi/6 (1983), 7 only
J. Breuer, ed.: Töredékek Kadosa Pál levelesládájából [Fragments from Kadosa's correspondence], Muzsika, xxxi/9 (1988), 32–7

FERENC BÓNIS

Kafenda, Frico [Fridrich] (b Mošovce, central Slovakia, 2 Nov 1883; d Bratislava, 3 Sept 1963). Slovak composer, conductor, pianist and teacher. He studied composition with Jadassohn, Stephan Krehl and Heinrich Zoellner and conducting with Nikisch at the Leipzig Conservatory (1901–5). He remained in Germany until 1915, working as a conductor of opera and operetta in several provincial theatres and as a teacher at the Opernschule des Westens in Berlin (1908–9) and at his own former school in Dresden. As an Austrian soldier he was captured by the Russians in 1915 and incarcerated for the next three years in Russia. From 1920 onwards he performed with the Bratislava Piano Trio and taught the piano and other subjects at the Music Insititute for Slovakia (now the Bratislava Conservatory), which he directed from 1922 to 1949. He then taught the piano at the Academy of Music and Dramatic Art until 1953.

Kafenda's musical language, shaped somewhat by the conservative, Leipzig training, revealed first the influence of German late-Romanticism, approaching the style of Reger; later he drew more obviously from the Brahms classical-romantic synthesis, instances of which can be heard in Kafenda's Violin Sonata, composed while held captive in Russia. His compositions generally show remarkable sophistication and thoughtful treatment of subjects and motifs. Kafenda disliked naive folklorism; the third movement of his Cello Sonata, for example, already shows his ability to deliberately subordinate thematic folk material to his individual style (then with knowledge of neither Bartók's nor Janáček's achievement). As a teacher of composition during the 1920s, he introduced his students to recent developments in composition (including Schoenberg's dodecaphony), and his theory of artificial modality greatly influenced Eugen Suchoň in particular.

WORKS
(selective list)

Vocal: Offertorium, chorus, orch, org, 1906; 4 piesne [4 Songs] (S. Hurban-Vajanský), high v, pf, 1913; 3 mužské zbory na texty a nápevy slovenskej ľudovej poézie [3 Male Choruses on Texts and Melodies from Slovak Folk Poetry], 1949; Okienka do minulosti [Mirrors to the Past] (folksong texts), 3 male choruses, 1952; Májová pieseň [May Song] (A. Plávka), male chorus, 1953; Pieseň o hrdinovi [Song of a Hero] (Plávka), male chorus, 1954; Na troskách [On the Ruins] (Plávka), male chorus, 1955; 3 Songs (J. Smrek), male v, pf, 1956; 4 Songs (Smrek), male v, pf, 1960; 3 miniatúrne piesne [3 Miniature Songs] (Plávka), high v, pf, 1961; Óda na radosť [Ode to Joy] (V. Mihálik), high v, pf, 1961
Inst: Suita v starom slohu [Suite in Old Style], pf, 1904; Sonata, vc, pf, 1905; Str Qt, G, 1916; Sonata, D, vn, pf, 1918; 3 Piano Pieces, 1949, rev. 1954; Variácie a fúga na vlastnú tému [Variations and Fugue on Own Theme], pf, 1957

MSS in SK-BRnm

Principal publishers: Slovenské hudobné vydavateľstvo, Slovenské vydavateľstvo krásnej literatúry, Slovenský hudobný fond

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Palovčík: Frico Kafenda: život a dielo [Kafenda: life and works] (Bratislava, 1957)
I. Hrušovský: Slovenská hudba v profiloch a rozboroch [Slovak music in profiles and analyses] (Bratislava, 1964), 128–34
E. Suchoň: 'Príspevky k profilu Frica Kafendu' [Contributions to the profile of Kafenda], Pamätnica k 50. výročiu vzniku Konzervatória v Bratislave: 1919–1969, ed. J. Janičkovič (Bratislava, 1969), 35–43

VLADIMÍR ZVARA

Käfer, Johann Philipp (b Schney, 21 April 1672; d Pforzheim, 24 Jan 1728). German organist and composer. He became court organist at Römhild in 1692, where, in the same year, he married Anna Maria Sterzberg, widow of his predecessor; he remained there until 1708 when he was appointed court Kapellmeister at Hildburghausen. In 1715 Käfer moved to Durlach as court composer to Margrave Carl Wilhelm of Baden-Durlach; subsequently he was made court Kapellmeister. He composed successful operas for the Durlach stage until 1718 when the court moved to Karlsruhe and he was required to produce sacred music for the new chapel; he wrote at least three cycles of cantatas. His attempts to have his operas performed in Karlsruhe were hindered by the director of stage machinery Philippe Scandalibene and the bass singer and Catholic priest Natale Bettinardo. Without this source of additional income Käfer ran into debt and in moving petitions he implored the Margrave to improve his salary. Through misunderstandings the situation became strained and on 23 August 1722 he was dismissed and succeeded by J.M. Molter. Käfer then settled in Pforzheim where he built up a modest existence from teaching and directing cantata performances at local churches.

Little can be said of Käfer's musical contributions as an opera composer, since all the scores are apparently lost, but the overture, aria, choruses and dance movements in his Musicalische Battaille give an idea of his operatic style. His Sonata a 4 and cantatas would have been somewhat old-fashioned in the 1720s (a fact that may have played a part in Käfer's dismissal), but they prove him to be a gifted contemporary of Kuhnau, Zachow and J.P. Krieger.

Käfer's son Johann (b Römhild, 18 May 1693; d Karlsruhe, 24 Jan 1725), who played the flute and organ and was a court musician at Durlach, wrote an opera trilogy Die asiatische Banise (pt i, Balacin, pt ii, Chaumigren, pt iii, Banise; some arias from pt iii, D-SHs, librettos in Cl, W, WRtl). These operas were performed at Coburg in 1714 and later at Durlach (*c*1716), where his opera Almire und Fernando (to the same libretto as Handel's Almira) was performed in 1717 (music lost). In 1718 he wrote a cycle of epistle cantatas Musicalische Seelen-Erbauung (text only, Durlach, 1719) for the chapel at Karlsruhe, where he remained with his mother until his death. All his works have been frequently misattributed to his father.

WORKS

OPERAS

first performed in Durlach unless otherwise indicated

Des teutschen Schulmeisters Anstalt zur Lust-Music, Hildburghausen, 1711, lib in D-GOl, music lost
Der durch sein Siegen bezwungene Hercules, 1716, lost
Iphigenia, 1716, lost
Die erste Königin derer Amazonen Marthesia, 1717, lost
Ixion, 1718, lost

SACRED

Das Volk, so im Finstern wandelt, 4vv, 2 hn, 4 str, bc, D-LEm
Herr, es wartet alles auf dich, 4vv, 4 str insts, bc, LEm
Ich freue mich des, das mir geredt ist, dass wir werden in das Haûs, 4vv, 5 str insts, bc, LEm
Triumph, du nun erlöste Schar, 4vv, 4 insts, bc, Bsb
Gott verlässt die Seinen nicht, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, bc, F, Strasbourg, St Thomas
Kommt, zehret von meinem Brot, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, D-F
Siehe das ist det Mann, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, F
So spricht der Harr, der Got von Ewigkeit, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, F
*c*50 cants., *c*1704/5 and later, Grossfahner, nr Gotha

Texts of lost works: Gott-gehei ligte Seelen-Lûst (Römhild, 1705), some of the cants. in Grossfahner; arias, chorales, in S.C. Thomas, Gott-geheiligte Tafel-Music (Meiningen, before 1715); cants., in J.L. Hölzlein, Geistliche Freuden-Bezeugung (Durlach, 1717); 1st cycle of cants. for Karlsruhe and other cants., in J.L. Hölzein, H. Sabbaths-Freude, das, ist, Musicalische Andachten (Durlach, 1718); morning services, in J.G. Dietrich, Cum Deo et Die! Goldene Schaalen Voll heiligen Rauchwercks (Durlach, 1718); 2nd cycle of cants., in F.R. Crüger, Musicalische Andachten (Durlach, 1719); 2 passion orats, 2 lits, cants., in Die Grosse Wochen, Das ist, Verschiedene Geistreiche Andachten (Durlach, 1719); 3rd cycle of cants., in Das Lob-schallende Hertzens-Zion (Pforzheim, 1726)

Christmas orat and other sacred music, lost, listed in inventories in Bamberg, Rudolstadt and Karlsruhe

OTHER

Musicalische Battaille, 4vv, 3 tpt, timp, 2 hn, 2 ob, str, bn, bc, drum, bagpipe, *c*1718, D-ROu
Sonata, g, vn, 2 va, bc, ROu
Conc., G, vn, viol, bc, ROu, title page only 12 concerti zu Kleinen Tafel Musiquen, lost [possibly among anonymous works in KA]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Schiedermair: Die Oper an den badischen Höfen des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1913)
L. Schiedermair: 'Briefe J.P. Käfers', Festschrift zum 50. Geburtstag Adolf Sandberger (Munich, 1918), 121–8
M. Geck: 'Figuralmusik der Bachzeit in einem thüringischen Dorf', Mf, xviii (1965), 293–5
B. Baselt: 'Die Musikaliensammlung der Schwarzburg-Rudolstädtischen Hofkapelle unter Philipp Heinrich Erlebach', Traditionen und Aufgaben der Hallischen Musikwissenschaft, ed. W. Siegmund-Schultze (Halle, 1963), 105–34
K. Häfner: 'Karlsruher Musikleben im 18. Jahrhundert', Karlsruher Beiträge, vi (1991), 77–93

KLAUS HÄFNER

Kaffka [Engelmann], Johann Christoph (b Regensburg, 1754; d Riga, 1815). German composer. He studied the violin with his father, Joseph Kaffka (b Bohemia, *c*1730; d Regensburg, 1796), a violinist in the Thurn und Taxis court orchestra at Regensburg from about 1748 and composer of a Missa solemnis (D-Rtt). Later he studied music theory with Joseph Riepel and was briefly a violinist in the Regensburg court orchestra. After studying to become a Jesuit, then a Cistercian, he changed his name and began a long and chequered theatrical career in 1775 as music director of the Brunian company in Prague. He worked as a composer, librettist and actor-singer with troupes in Nuremberg (Moser, 1777), Frankfurt (Marchand), Leipzig (Bondini), Regensburg (Schopf, 1778–9), Stuttgart (Schikaneder, 1778, 1793), Berlin (Döbbelin, 1779–81), Brno and finally Breslau (Maria Wäser, to 1789), where he composed most of his operas. He had his greatest success at Breslau, and his 'extremely advantageous figure' won him an ardent female following. His wife Theresine (née Rosenberger) Kaffka was also a performer and dancer. Kaffka also wrote melodramas, incidental music, ballets, celebratory prologues, oratorios, masses, vespers, a requiem, symphonies and songs, now mostly lost; his collection Musikalischer Beytrag für Liebhaber des deutschen Singspiels (Breslau, 1783) was meant to be a periodical, but only two issues appeared. In 1803 he settled in Riga as a bookseller and continued playing the violin only in amateur concerts.

Kaffka's operas are his most important works. As a composer he was keenly aware of current fashion; in a crushing review of Bitten und Erhörung (for the birthday of Frederick the Great, 1783), Cramer accused him of copying long passages from Benda, Gluck, Schuster and particularly Naumann's opera Cora (printed in German translation, 1780), and the melodrama Rosemund (1782) was also criticized for plagiarism. According to Schilling, however, Das wütende Heer, oder Das Mädchen im Thurme (1782) earned a warm reception with its use of folk legend and its pleasant music.

Kaffka's elder brother Wilhelm Kaffka (b Regensburg, 11 July 1751; d Regensburg, 1806) was a virtuoso violinist, leader of the Regensburg court orchestra, and composer of a Divertimento for nine instruments (D-Rtt).

WORKS

STAGE

Die Zigeuner (Lustspiel mit Gesang und untermischten Tänzen, 5, H.F. Möller, after M. de Cervantes: La gitanilla), Munich, 1778
Antonius und Cleopatra (Duodrama mit Gesang, 2, B.C. d'Arien), Berlin, 15 Nov 1779, D-Bsb
Der Äpfeldieb, oder Der Schatzgräber (Operette, 1, C.F. Bretzner), Berlin, 26 June 1780
Rosemund (Melodram, 1, Bretzner), Breslau, Jan 1782, vs (Breslau, 1784)
Das wütende Heer, oder Das Mädchen im Thurme (Operette, 3, Bretzner), Breslau, Jan 1782, lost
Der Guk Kasten, oder Das Beste komt zulezt (komische Operette, 2, Kaffka), Breslau, 1782
So prellt man alte Füchse (Operette, 1, Kaffka, after F.L.W. Meyer), Breslau, 1782
Bitten und Erhörung (prol, 1), 24 Jan 1783, vs (Stettin, 1784)
Der blinde Ehemann (Operette, 2, J.F. Jünger), Breslau, 1788
Der Talisman, oder Der seltene Spiegel (romantisch-komische Oper, 3, Bretzner), Breslau, 1789, lost

Other works, lost, mentioned GerberNL

OTHER WORKS

Songs in J. André: Lieder und Gesänge (Berlin, 1779–80)
Musikalischer Beytrag für Liebhaber des deutschen Singspiels, pf, 2 vn, va, b (Breslau, 1783)

Many other works, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberNL; MCL; SchillingE
C.F. Cramer, ed.: Magazin der Musik, ii (Hamburg, 1784/R), 872–4
Allgemeine deutsche Bibliothek, lxxii/1 (1784), 163–4
S. Färber: Das Regensburger fürstlich Thurn und Taxissche Hoftheater und seine Oper 1760–1786 (Regensburg, 1936)
T. Bauman: North German Opera in the Age of Goethe (Cambridge, 1985)
J. Torgans: 'Johann Christoph Kaffka (1754–1815) und das Rigaer Musikleben um 1800', Musica Baltica (Sankt Augustin, 1996), 183–9

KLAUS RÖNNAU/THOMAS BAUMAN

Kafka, Johann Nepomuk (b Neustadt an der Mettau [now Nové Město na Metové], 17 May 1819; d Vienna, 23 Oct 1886). Bohemian pianist, composer and collector of music manuscripts. He won considerable popularity as a composer of light piano pieces, among them nocturnes, idylls, impromptus and rhapsodies, of which about 200 were published. He is remembered chiefly as the owner of a number of Beethoven manuscripts, including the autographs of the piano sonatas opp.28 and 53 and various sketch miscellanies and leaves. The most important manuscript from his collection (the 'Kafka' Sketchbook), which contains sketches and autographs of many of Beethoven's earliest works, was acquired by the British Museum in 1875 (part of Add.29801). Another miscellany of sketches in the British Library (Add.29997) contains material for works written between 1799 and 1826; it was purchased from Kafka in 1876.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; RiemannL12
J.S. Shedlock: 'Beethoven's Sketch Books', MT, xxxiii (1892), 331–4, 394–7, 461–5, 523–5, 589–92, 649–52, 717; xxxiv (1893), 14–16, 530–33; xxxv (1894), 13–16, 449–52, 596–600; l (1909), 712–4
J. Kerman, ed.: Ludwig van Beethoven: Autograph Miscellany from circa 1786 to 1799: British Museum Additional Manuscript 29801, ff.39–162 (The 'Kafka Sketchbook') (London, 1970) [facs. and transcr.]
D. Johnson, A. Tyson and R. Winter: The Beethoven Sketchbooks: History, Reconstruction, Inventory (Oxford, 1985)

WILLIAM DRABKIN

Kafui [Avotri], Kenneth (b Hohoe, 25 July 1951). Ghanaian composer. After learning the harmonium and becoming school organist at Kpandu Secondary School, where his father was the music teacher, he studied music at the University of Ghana, Legon (1972–5). Kafui's compositions at Legon were greatly influenced by N.Z. Nayo. In 1978 Kafui was guest composer for the Ghana Broadcasting Corporation Orchestra. He became a music tutor (1979) then head of department (1981) at Achimota School. He pursued advanced studies in African music at the University of Ghana (1980–82) then taught orchestration and composition at the National Academy of Music, Winneba. Kafui became a conductor of the Ghana National SO in 1986; in 1988 he received the Entertainment Critics and Reviewers Association of Ghana award for best contemporary art music composer in Ghana in 1986–7. He conducted and performed in many of the premières of his works at a concert held at the British Council Hall in Ghana in 1987. Despite initial scepticism towards avant-garde techniques, Kafui was prompted by his participation in the International Composers Workshop at Breukelen in the Netherlands (1982) to explore serialism in Visitation (1985) and aleatoricism in Black Visitation (1986). Indigenous rhythmic and sonic patterns feature prominently in such pieces as Pentanata, Kale and Drumnata; local dialects and themes are important elements of his choral works.

WORKS

(selective list)

Choral: Nutifafa [Peace], op.1 no.1, 1972; Yehowa fe Lolo Lolo [God's Love is Great], op.1 no.2, 1973; Dzifo Gbowo Navu, chorus, orch, op.2 no.1, 1974; Nunya Adidoe [Wisdom is like a Baobab Tree], op.1 no.5, 1979; Kokoeto [Holy One], op.1 no.6, 1980; Dom Ko Mayi, chorus, orch, op.2 no.5, 1982; Miwo Do Kple Lolo, SSAA, op.1 no.11, 1983; Ne Nyo Ko Noviwo, SSAA, op.1 no.12, 1984; Brighten the Corner where you Are, op.1 no.14, 1988
Solo vocal: Nunya [Wisdom], T, pf, 1976; Dzogbenyuie [Goodwill], T, pf, 1977; Eny yie Enuanom, T, orch, 1986
Pf: 6 Easy African Pf Pieces, 1976–7; Pentanata no.1, op.10 no.1, 1980; Visitation, 1985; Black Visitation, 1986; 4 Kbd Songs, 1986; Pentanata no.2, op.10 no.2, 1986; Divine Love and Peace, 1987; Sonata, D, 1987
Orch: Sym. no.1, D, op.3 no.1, 1975; Rhapsody, op.3 no.2, 1976; Kale, op.3 no.3, 1977; Cl Conc., B♭, op.3 no.4, 1980; Pentaphony, op.3 no.5, 1986
Other inst: Sonata, cl, pf, 1983; Drumnata (Drum Sonata), African perc insts, 1980s

DANIEL AVORGBEDOR

Kagan, Oleg (b Sakhalin, 22 Nov 1946; d Munich, 15 July 1990). Russian violinist. Born into a family with a love of the arts, he was brought up in Riga, Latvia, and from 1953 studied at the music school of the conservatory with Joachim Braun. At 13 he was taken to Moscow by Boris Kuznetsov, who took him into his own home while teaching him during the day at the Central Music School and then from 1965 at the conservatory. In 1964 he took fourth prize at the Enescu Competition in Bucharest, in 1965 he won the Sibelius Competition in Helsinki, in 1966 he took second prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow and in 1968 he won the Bach Competition in Leipzig. On Kuznetsov's death he continued his studies with David Oistrakh, who arranged for him to record all the Mozart concertos with Oistrakh conducting. In 1969 he began to play chamber music with Richter – their duo became known internationally – and gradually he acquired a circle of friends with whom he regularly appeared. Apart from Richter they included his second wife, the cellist Natalya Gutman, the viola player Yuri Bashmet and the pianists Vasily Lobanov, Aleksey Lyubimov and Elisso Virsaladze. With them he arranged chamber music programmes at the Kuhmo Festival in Finland and at his own summer festival in Zvenigorod. During his last illness he planned a further festival at Kreuth am Tegernsee in the Bavarian Alps; and he was able to give two performances there just before he died. As a player Kagan excelled in the more lyrical music, lacking the grand manner of David Oistrakh and Leonid Kogan. However, he and Gutman made a fine team in Brahms's Double Concerto, inspiring Schnittke, Tigran Mansuryan and Anatol Vieru to write works for them. Unusually for a Russian, Kagan also had an interest in Hindemith, Messiaen and the Second Viennese School; he and Richter played Berg's Chamber Concerto and pieces by Webern and Schoenberg, and Kagan was a leading exponent of Berg's Violin Concerto. Schnittke, Mansuryan, Lobanov and Sofia Gubaidulina dedicated compositions to him. At the other extreme, he was a refreshingly unselfconscious interpreter of both Bach's and Mozart's music. Many of his concert performances have since been released on compact discs, adding to Kagan's posthumous reputation. (CampbellGV)

TULLY POTTER

Kagel, Mauricio (Raúl) (b Buenos Aires, 24 Dec 1931). German composer, film maker and playwright of Argentine birth. Increasingly regarded as among the most important of late 20th-century European composers, his elaborate imagination, bizarre humour and ability to play with almost any idea or system has brought powerful and unexpected drama to the stage and concert hall.

1. LIFE. Born into an Argentine-Jewish family with strongly leftist political views, he took theory, singing, conducting, piano, cello and organ lessons with private teachers such as Juan Carlos Paz and Alfredo Schiuma, but was self-taught as a composer. He studied philosophy and literature at the University of Buenos Aires, where Borges was among his lecturers. Although he failed the entrance examinations for the local music conservatory, he became artistic advisor to the Agrupación Nueva Música (Buenos Aires) in 1949. In 1950 he began to compose, seeking ideas that opposed the neo-classical style dictated by Juan Perón's government. After co-founding the Cinémathètique Argentine and making an unsuccessful attempt to establish an electronic studio, he became a student conductor at the Chamber Opera, chorus director and rehearsal accompanist at the Teatro Colón, music advisor at the University of Buenos Aires, and cinema and photography editor for the journal nueva visión.

In 1957 Kagel travelled to Germany on a DAAD student grant and settled in Cologne. His first activities included attending the Darmstadt summer courses (from 1958) where he later lectured (1960–66, 1972–6), and conducting contemporary music concerts for the Rhine Chamber Orchestra (1957–61). He made several concert and lecture tours of the USA (1961, 1963) and held the posts of Slee Professor of Composition at SUNY, Buffalo (1964–5), visting lecturer at the Berlin Film & Television Academy (1967) and director of the Göteborg new music courses (1968). In 1969 he became director of the Institute of New Music at the Hochschule für Musik, Cologne, and, succeeding Stockhausen, director of the Cologne courses in new music (until 1975); in 1974 he was appointed professor of new music theatre at the Cologne Musikhochschule. A co-founder of the Ensemble for New Music, Cologne, he has worked at the WDR electronic studios as well as at studios in Berlin and Utrecht. In 1989 he served as composer-in-residence of the Cologne PO. He has conducted many of his own works and directed and produced all of his own films and radio plays. Among his awards are the Koussevitzky Prize (1965), Zürich's Scotoni Prize (Hallelujah, 1969), the Adolf Grimme Prize (1970, 1971), the Karl Sczuka Prize of Southwest Radio, Baden-Baden (1980) and the Erasmus Prize (1998). Other honours include the Mozart Medaille of Frankfurt, the French Order des arts et des lettres, the German Bundesverdienst Orden, First Class and membership in the Academy of Arts, Berlin. Festivals and retrospectives of his works have been held in Europe, the USA and Canada (1975–95).

2. WORKS. The structures of many of Kagel's works are based on subversive rhetorical gestures such as paradox, disjunction and irony. Many compositions feature unusual instruments or use traditional instruments in unusual ways (such as Musik für Renaissance-Instrumente, 1965–6; Exotica, 1971–2). While European and American avant-garde ideas of the 1950s were broadly influential to his style, most of his works developed from his own imagination. Some compositions, such as Tremens (1963–5), seem to reflect his clinically supervised experiences of mescalin and LSD. His typical practice has been to work on more than one piece at a time and to develop fragments of ideas over several years. Discrepancies and approximations of dates appear in all his published work-lists, as he changed his procedure for dating his works in mid-career: at first dates reflected the beginning and end points of composition; later they came to represent a single date of publication, first performance or completion.

Mauricio Kagel, 1971

In his early works, written in Buenos Aires, Kagel experimented with notation, the visual aspects of music and unexpected transpositions of elements from one medium to another; the composed and notated lighting for Música para la torre (1952) exemplifies these interests. Juan Allende-Blin (Klüppelholz, ed., 1991, pp.61–72) has also observed the influence of local surrealist writers and the general 'tango atmosphere' of erotic, rebellious irony common in anti-Perón artistic circles. Kagel's disillusionment with the communists in the Spanish Civil War (whom, he felt, in choosing to fight the anarchists became easy prey for the fascists) also left its mark. From that time on he sympathized with anarchists, both political and artistic.

Kagel's first famous works, the String Sextet (1953, rev. 1957), Anagrama (1957–8) and Transición II (1958–9), exhibit a quasi-serial technique that is internally subverted by perversely uncontrollable elements and exaggerated demands for precision, implying a subtle critique of formal control. The sophisticated counterpoint of techniques featured in the sextet attracted much attention at its première, as did the wide range of timbres and vocalizations of Anagrama, which influenced Stockhausen's Momente and later works by Berio when it was first performed. The first work to show clearly clearly Kagel's inclination for radical theatre and his interest in the deconstruction of aesthetic systems was Sur scène (1958–60), in which a sonically and logically distorted lecture on the goals of contemporary music is accompanied by disconnected fragments of instrumental sound, vocalization and mime. Works such as Exotica (1971–2) and Mare nostrum (1973–5) exhibit similarly unexpected musical or theatrical situations that attack political or cultural preconceptions, often with reference to European cultural imperialism.

With Sonant (1960/ ...) Kagel established an 'instrumental theatre' idiom that became central to many of his later works. Instrumental theatre acknowledges the physical presence of the performers and requires them to perform sound with a presentational dramatic meaning. Performers comment (either verbally or in mime) on their playing and that of others, or create sounds in dramatic contexts, pointing to various aspects of difficulty, mockery or confusion. Works such as Match (1964), a contest between two cellos arbitrated by a percussionist, create theatre out of sound, while works such as Pas de cinq (1965), in which clacking noises result from choreography, create sound out of theatre. Other works, beginning with Tremens (1963–5), present dramatic situations (based on texts or scenarios by the composer) in which music plays an accompanying role; this approach became particularly important in the later Hörspiele.

Another large category of works, to which Die Himmelsmechanik (1965) belongs, are essentially visual. These compositions, with or without sound, lead towards Kagel's numerous films, the first two of which, Solo (1966–7) and Duo (1967–8), are based on pieces by Schnebel (who was at the time working on a book about Kagel). Kagel's films on his own works, such as Hallelujah (1967–8) and Ludwig van (1969–70), include music that functions as only one of a number of symbolic elements, competing for primacy with visual and textual domains. Many are scored in a purely visual manner that owes almost nothing to conventional notation. Like the visual/dramatic Kommentar + Extempore (1966–7), Hallelujah is a collection of possible actions, composed separately on cards and put together in a relatively formal or informal manner to create the whole.

The most important and extended example of this compositional technique is Staatstheater (1967–70), Kagel's first opera and one of his most sharply anti-institutional works. He has described the work as 'not just the negation of opera, but of the whole tradition of music theatre'. Each of its nine sections involves performers – soloists, chorus members, dancers and players – in a set of actions that subverts the normal performance hierarchy: members of the chorus sing overlapping solos; soloists sing in ensemble; and non-dancers perform a ballet. The first section, Repertoire, consists of fragmentary scenes of instrumental theatre symbolizing disturbing existential states; this section also employs more than 20 minutes of 'anti-musical' sound, a feature that likely contributed to the tumultuous reaction at the opera's first performance. The sensual, overwhelming 'mass scenes' at the end of the work reverse the anarchistic chaos of earlier sections, creating a threatening finale that suggests institutional conformity.

Der Schall (1968), for small ensemble, demonstrates Kagel's approach to old, unusual or invented instruments, including household appliances, cash registers and sirens. Notable for its focussed formal structure, the work has been described by Schnebel (1970) as '... debilitated or run-down and worn-out sounds, the notes of strange instruments and the noises of non-instruments ... employed in musical progress that radiates the aura of great classical music; a symphony, composed ... from the wreckage of the old symphonic school'. This resonates with Kagel's own remark that, 'An essential aspect of my work is strict composition with elements which are not themselves pure'.

Kagel's strong respect for the canon, qualified by his restless desire to deconstruct it, is apparent in Ludwig van (1969–70), a recreation of Beethoven scores as furniture, Variationen ohne Fuge (1971–2), an onstage confrontation between the characters of Brahms and Handel, and Aus Deutschland (1977–80), an opera regenerating the world of lieder through Schubert. Aus Deutschland, possibly because of its hallucinatory reflection of German ideas, legends and history, established Kagel as a fully European artist, a status that has been strongly supported by his numerous texted works and essays embarking upon sophisticated explorations of levels of meaning in German and other European languages.

Although few of Kagel's numerous works resemble one another, as they vary widely in material and construction, his compositions of the 1970s and early 1980s share a common reflection of the issues discussed above. In the 1980s, however, around the time of the composition of the Sankt-Bach-Passion (1981–5), he began to increase his use of conventional notation, traditional instrumentation and tonal harmony; his deconstructive ideas shifted to the level of narrative or concept, leaving the musical elements in a state of relative 'normalcy'. The Sankt-Bach-Passion, a lucid and dramatic narrative that treats its subject with respect, signals Kagel's increasing interest in relating to, rather than rebelling against history and culture. His neo-tonal works include many wide-ranging pastiches such as Rrrrrrr ... (1981–2), Les idées fixes (1988–9), ..., den 24.xii.1931 (1988–91) and the Windrose (1988–94) pieces. The last of these examples, named for the eight compass directions, brings stylistic references to the foreground; Westen represents Europeans in Africa and African music in America as Kagel plays with the changing implications of musical gestures in different geographical locations.

Almost all of Kagel's works of the late 1980s and after follow a tonal path, leading some critics to label them as postmodern. His obsession with deconstruction and subversion, however, makes it possible to interpret even his very early works in this way; his surgical investigation of existing systems and institutions, whether musical or not, has remained consistent throughout his career.

WORKS

STAGE AND MULTIMEDIA

Música para la torre, tape, lighting, 1952
Sur scène (Kammermusikalisches Theaterstück), 1958–60, Bremen, 6 May 1962
Journal de théâtre (situations for insts, actors, etc), 1960
Antithèse, elec and environmental sounds, 1962, Munich, 20 March 1963; rev. for actor, elec and environmental sounds, 1962, Cologne, 23 June 1963; film version, 1965, NDR TV, 1 April 1966
Diaphonie (I), SATB, orch, 2 slide projectors, 1962–4, Buffalo, NY, 2 March 1965; Diaphonie (II), orch, 2 slide projectors, 1962–4; Diaphonie (III), chorus, 2 or more slide projectors, 1962–4; Musik aus Diaphonie, 6–10 pfmrs, 2 slide projectors, 1962–4
Prima vista, 2 ens, 2 slide projectors, 1962–4, Cologne, 14 Oct 1969
Die Frauen, 1962–4, unfinished
Phonophonie (4 melodramas), 1963–4, Munich, 1 Dec 1965
Tremens (szenische Montage eines Tests), 1963–5, Bremen, 6 May 1966; Variaktionen über Tremens, 1963–5; Musik aus Tremens, 1963–5; Schlag auf Schlag, 1963–4 [from Tremens]
Camera oscura (chromatisches Spiel), 1965, Cologne, 1976
Die Himmelsmechanik (Komposition mit Bühnenbildern), 1965, Venice, 14 Sept 1969
Pas de cinq (Wandelszene), 1965, Munich, 14 June, 1966
Kommentar + Extempore (Selbstgespräche mit Gesten), 1966–7, Frankfurt, 5 June 1967
Solo (film, Schnebel: visible music II), 1966–7, collab. Feussner, NDR TV, 15 Dec 1967
Duo (film, Schnebel: visible music I), 1967–8, collab. A. Feussner, NDR TV, 29 March 1969
Staatstheater (szenische Komposition), 1967–70, Hamburg, 25 April 1971: Repertoire (szenisches Konzertstück); Einspielungen; Ensemble; Debüt; Saison (Sing-Spiel); Spielplan (Instrumentalmusik in Aktion); Kontra → Danse (Ballett für Nicht-Tänzer); Freifahrt (gleitende Kammermusik); Parkett (konzertante Massenszenen)
Variaktionen, 1966–7, Frankfurt, 5 June 1967; Musik aus Variaktionen, 1966–7
Hallelujah (film), 1967–8
Synchronstudie, actor, 1v, film, 1–3 tape recs, 1968–9, Basle, 5 May 1969
Ein Aufnahmezustand (radio play), 1969, rev. 1971, WDR, 4 Dec 1969
Klangwehr (I), military band in motion, 1969–70, Bremen, 30 May 1970; Klangwehr (II), military band, chorus, closed-circuit TV, 1969–70
Ludwig van (film), 1969–70 [based on music by Beethoven]
Guten Morgen (Hörspiel), 1971, WDR, 11 Nov 1971
Probe (Versuch für ein improvisiertes Kollektiv), 1971
Zwei-Mann-Orchester, 1971–3
Con voce, 1972, Berlin, 23 Jan 1973
Kantrimiusik (Pastorale für Stimmen und Instrumente), 1973–5, Donaueschingen, 18 Oct 1975
Mare nostrum (Entdeckung, Befriedung und Conversion des Mittelmeerraumes durch einen Stamm aus Amazonien), 1973–5, Berlin, 15 Sept 1975
Bestiarium (Klangfabeln auf zwei Bühnen), 1974–5, Cologne, 6 March 1976
Ex-Positionen, 1975–8, Oslo 14 Sept 1978, film version 1978: Chorbuch; Die Rhythmusmaschinen (Aktion für Gymnasten)
Soundtrack (film-radio play), 1975
Die Umkehrung Amerikas (Hörspiel), 1975–6, WDR, 27 Dec 1976
Die Erschöpfung der Welt (szenische Illusion, 1), 1976–8, Stuttgart, 9 Feb 1980; concert version, 1982
Quatre degrés, 1976–7, Metz, 18 Nov 1977: Dressur (Schlagzeugtrio für Holzinstrumente), [film version, 1987]; Présentation für zwei, 1976–7; Umzug [Déménagement] (stummes Schauspiel für Bühnenarbeiter); Variété (Concert-Spectacle für Artisten und Musiker, 1976–7, arr. as suite
Zählen und Erzählen (Musiktheater für Unerwachsene), 1976
Aus Deutschland (Lieder-Oper, 27 scenes), 1977–80, Berlin, 9 May 1981
Blue's Blue (ethnomusicological reconstruction), 1978–9, film version, 1981
MM51 (film score), 1977; film version, 1983
Der Tribun (Hörspiel), 1978–9, Aix-en-Provence, 1 Aug 1981
Rrrrrrr ..., (radio fantasy), 1981–2, Donaueschingen, 15 Oct 1982; arr. as Hörspiel, 1982; arr. as Er (TV play), 1984
La trahison orale (Der mündliche Verrat) (Musikepos über den Teufel), 1981–3, Paris, 27 Oct, 1983; arr. as Hörspiel, 31 March 1987
... nach einer Lektüre von Orwell (Hörspiel), 1983–4, 1 May 1984>
Ein Besuch bei der Heiligen (Hörspiel), 1985, 17 Dec 1985
Tanz-Schul (Ballet d'action), 1985–7, Saarbrücken, 18 Nov 1988
Zwei Akte, Grand Duo, 1988–9

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: 2 piezas, 1950–52; Heterophonie, 42 solo insts, 1959–61; Variationen ohne Fuge, 1971–2; 10 Märsche, um den Sieg zu verfehlen, wind, perc, 1978–9 [from Der Tribun]; Finale, chbr orch, 1980–81; Musik, kbds, orch, 1987–8; Les idées fixes, rondo, chbr orch, 1988–9; Die Stücke der Windrose, small orch, 1988–94: Osten; Süden; Nordosten; Nordwesten; Südosten; Südwesten; Norden; Westen; Konzertstück, timp, orch, 1990–92; Opus 1991, 1990; Etude no.1, 1992; Interview avec D, nar, orch, 1993–4; Etude no.2, 1995–6; Orchestrion-Straat, chbr orch, 1995–6; Etude no.3, 1996
Chbr and solo inst: Variaciones, fl/vn, cl/vn, vn, vc, 1952; Str Sextet 1953, rev. 1957; Pandorasbox, bandoneon, 1960; Sonant (1960/ ...), gui, hp, db, drums, 1960–; Match, 2 vc, perc, 1964 [film, 1966]; Mirum, tuba, 1965; Musik für Renaissance-Instrumente, 2–22 insts, 1965–6; Str Qt I/II, 1965–7; Der Schall, 5 pfmrs, 1968; Charakterstück, zither qt, 1971; Exotica: soli, non-European insts, 1971–2 [arr. as Exotica, non-European insts, tape]; General Bass, insts, 1971–2; Musi, 12 mand, 6 mandola, 12 gui, vc, 2 db, 1971; Siegfriedp', vc, 1971; Aus Zungen Stimmen, accdn qnt, 1972; Unguis incarnatus est, pf, inst, 1972; Klangwölfe, vn, pf, 1978–9; Aus dem Nachlass, 16 pieces, va, vc, db, 1981–6; Pf Trio, 1984–5; Pan, pic, str qt, 1985; Old/New, tpt, 1986; Str Qt no.3, 1986–7; For us: Happy birthday to you!, 4 vc, 1987 [arr. pic/a fl, cl, va, db, mand, gui, hp, perc, 1990]; Phantasiestück, (fl, pf)/(fl, cl, b cl, pf qt), 1987–8; Episoden, Figuren, accdn, 1993; Fanfanfaren, 4 tpt, 1993; Str Qt no.4, 1993; L'art bruit, 2 perc, 1994–5; Serenade, pic/fl/b fl, ukulele/gui/t banjo/mand, perc, 1994–5; Schattenklänge, b cl, 1995; Auftakte, pf, 2 perc, 1996
Kbd: 4 piezas, pf, 1954; Improvisation ajoutée, org, 2 assistants, 1961–2; Metapiece (Mimetics), kbd, 1961; Mimetics (Metapieces), kbd, 1961; An Tasten, étude, pf, 1977; Der Eid des Hippokrates, pf 3 hands, 1984; Passé composé (KlavieRhapsodie), pf, 1992–3; Melodien, carillon, 1993; A deux mains 'Impromptu', pf, 1995–6
With tape/elecs: Transición II, pf, perc, 2 tapes, 1958–9; Phantasie, org, assistants, 2 tape recs, 1967; Morceau de concours, 5 tpt [1–2 pfmrs], tape rec, 1971; Unter Strom, gui ens, props, elecs, 1969 [film, 1970]; Atem, 1 wind, tape rec, 1970; Tactil, pf, 2 gui, harmonica, experimental sound generators, 1970 [film, 1971]; Szenario, str, tape, 1981–2 [film score for Buñuel: Le chien andalou, 1983]; De-A-Ge-E, pf, harmonizer, 1987

VOCAL

Choral: Palimsestos, SATB, 1950; Anagrama, S, A, Bar, B, speaking chorus, fl, cl, b cl, 3 perc, cel, 2 pf, 2 hp, 1957–8; Die Mutation, 30 male/children's vv, pf/hpd, 1971; Vom hören sagen, 18 girls' vv, hmn/org, 1971–2; 1898, children's vv, insts, 1972 [rev. female chorus, 1996]; Gegenstimmen, SATB, hpd, 1972; Vox humana? (cant.), solo loudspkr, SA, orch, 1978–9; Mitternachtsstük (R.

Schumann), spkr, S, A, T, chorus, insts, 1980–86 [film, 1987]; Sankt-Bach-Passion (orat), spkr, Mez, T, B, boys' chorus, 2 SATB, orch, 1981–5; Intermezzo, spkr, SATB, insts, 1983; Fragende Ode, double chorus, brass, db ens, perc, 1988–9; Liturgien, T, Bar, B, SATB, orch, 1989–90

Other vocal: 5 Cantos de génesis, 1v, pf, 1954; De ruina mundis (cant.), 1v, insts, 1955; Recitativarie, hpd + 1v, 1971–2; Abend, 2S, 2A, 2T, 2B, 5 trbn, pf, elec org, 1972; Tango alemán, 1v, vn, bandoneon/accdn, pf, 1977–8; Fürst Igor Stravinsky, B, eng hn, hn, tuba, va, 2 perc, 1982; 2 Balladen, male v/SATB, ens, 1983 [arr. of G. de Machaut]; Ein Brief, concert scene, Mez, orch, 1985–6; Quodlibet (15th-century French lyric), S/A, orch, 1986–8; … , den 24.xii.1931 (Verstümmelte Nachrichten), Bar, vn, va, vc, db, pf 4 hands, 2 perc, 1988–91

OTHER WORKS

Transición I, tape, 1958–60; Le bruit, invecticon, various sound sources, 1960; Composition and Decompositions, Lesestück, 1963–4; Montage à titre de spectacle, 3 or more pfmrs, 1967 [based on other Kagel works]; Acustica I–III, 1968–70: I, tape; II, 2–5 players, tape; III, 2–5 players; Ornithologica multiplicata, 2 cages of birds, 2 mic, 1968; Privat, 1 solitary listener, 1968; Mio caro Luciano, tape collage, 1985; Eine Brise, flüchtige Aktion, 111 cyclists, 1996

MSS in CH-Bps

Principal publishers: Peters, Universal

Principal recording company: Auvidis

WRITINGS

'Ton-Cluster, Anschläge, Übergänge', Die Reihe, v (1959), 23; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, v (1961), 40–55
'Translation-Rotation', Die Reihe, vii (1960), 31–61; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, vii (1965), 32–60
'Komposition + Dekomposition', 'Notation heute', 'Analyse der analysirens', Collage, no.3 (1964)
'Komposition – Notation – Interpretation', Notation neuer Musik, DBNM, ix (1965), 55–63
'Fünf Antworten auf fünf Fragen', Melos, xxxiii (1966), 305–10
'Über Form', Form in der Neuen Musik, DBNM, x (1966), 51–6
'Musikalische Form', Collage, no.7 (1967)
'Sobre Match', Sonda (1968)
'A proposito di Ludwig van', Spettatore musicale, v/2 (1970) Tamtam: Monologe und Dialoge zur Musik, ed. F. Schmidt (Munich, 1975) with W. Herzogenrath and K.-H. Zarius: Theatrum Instrumentorum: Instrumente, experimentelle Klangerzeuger, akustische Requisiten, stumme Objekte (Cologne, 1975)
Das Buch der Hörspiele (Frankfurt, 1982)
'Kritik der unreinen Vernunft', Musica, xxxvi (1982), 241–5
'Cäcilia ausgeplündert', Musiktheorie, ii/3 (1987), 267–74
'Post gleich Prä?', Positionen, no.9 (1991), 40–44, 50–52
Worte über Musik: Gespräche, Aufsätze, Reden, Hörspiele (Munich, 1991)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 (J. Häusler) [incl. further bibliography]; GroveO (D. Sawer) [incl. further bibliography]; KdG (A. Dümling)
D. Schnebel: Mauricio Kagel: Musik, Theater, Film (Cologne, 1970)
G. Koch: 'Mauricio Kagels Staatstheater', Musica, xxv (1971), 367–70
J.-Y. Bosseur: 'Dossier Kagel', Musique en jeu, no.7 (1972), 88–126
M. Tibbe: 'Analyse – Match von Mauricio Kagel', Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie, iii/2 (1972), 18–21
M. Chanan: 'Kagel's Films', Tempo, no.110 (1974), 45–6
R. Karger: 'Mauricio Kagels Repertoire', Melos/NZM, ii/5 (1976), 375–80
Y. Knockaert: 'An Analysis of Kagel's Anagrama', Interface, v (1976), 173–88
K.-H. Zarius: 'Staatstheater' von Mauricio Kagel: Grenze und Übergang (Vienna, 1977)
R. Fanselau: 'Mauricio Kagels akustische Theologie', Musik und Bildung, xiii/12 (1981), 744–9
P. Griffiths: 'Unnecessary Music: Kagel at 50', MT, cxxii (1981), 811–12
W. Klüppelholz: Mauricio Kagel (1970–1980) (Cologne, 1981)
A. Porter: 'Mauricio Kagel's … ', New Yorker (26 Sept 1983)
F. Decarsin: 'Liszt's Nuages gris and Kagel's Unguis incarnatus est: a Model and its Issue', MA, iv/3 (1985), 259–63
W. Klüppelholz and L. Prox, eds.: Mauricio Kagel: das filmische Werk 1, 1965–1985 (Amsterdam and Cologne, 1985)
P.W. Schatt: 'Probleme der Rezeption und Repräsentation aussereuropäischer Musik: Mauricio Kagels Exotica', Exotik in der Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts (Munich, 1986), 11–15
J. Warnaby: 'Bach according to Kagel: St Bach Passion', Tempo, no.156 (1986), 38–9
W. Klüppelholz, ed.: Kagel …/1991 (Cologne, 1991)
W. Klüppelholz, ed.: Kagel, Skizzen – Korrekturen – Partituren (Cologne, 1991)

PAUL ATTINELLO

Kagen, Sergius (b St Petersburg, 9/22 Aug 1909; d New York, 1 March 1964). American teacher, composer and pianist. In 1921 he went to Berlin, where he studied with Leonid Kreutzer and Paul Juon at the Hochschule für Musik. After emigrating in 1925 to the USA, he attended the Juilliard School, studying with Carl Friedberg, Rubin Goldmark and Marcella Sembrich (diploma 1934). He taught singing and vocal literature at the Juilliard from 1940 to 1964 and at the Union Theological Seminary from 1957 also until his death. Through his teaching, writings and editions of a wide variety of vocal works he was an influential vocal pedagogue. As a pianist, he specialized in accompanying singers. His compositions include more than 50 songs written in a chromatic idiom with careful attention to text declamation. His three-act opera Hamlet, in a lyrical style ranging from tonal to 12-note, was first performed in Baltimore on 9 November 1962. A second opera, The Suitor (based on Molière's Monsieur de Pourceaugnac), was never completed. He became an American citizen in 1930.

WRITINGS

Music for the Voice (New York, 1949, 2/1968)
On Studying Singing (New York, 1950/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Starer: 'A Tribute to Sergius Kagen', Juilliard Review Annual 1963–1964 , 52–3
J. Collins: 'Quotations from a Great Teacher', Juilliard Review Annual 1967–1968, 30–4
B.J. Woods: Sergius Kagen: his Life and Works (diss., George Peabody College for Teachers, 1969)
B.J. Woods: 'The Songs of Sergius Kagen', NATS Bulletin, xxvii/3 (1970–71), 24–5, 51 [incl. complete list of songs]
R.C. Friedberg: American Art Song and American Poetry, ii (Metuchen, NJ, 1984), 167–81

R. ALLEN LOTT

Kahl, Willi (b Zabern, Alsace, 18 July 1893; d Cologne, 3 Oct 1962). German musicologist. He studied philology, philosophy, German and musicology at Freiburg, Munich (under Schiedermair and Kroyer) and, after World War I, at Bonn, where he took the doctorate in 1919 with a dissertation on the history of lyrical keyboard pieces to 1830. He then settled in Cologne as a freelance writer and was appointed music critic to the Kölnische Zeitung in 1922. He completed the Habilitation at Cologne University in 1923 with a history of 18th-century piano music and became Bibliotheksrat of the Cologne university and city library (1928–58). He was appointed reader at Cologne University in 1928; from 1949 he was a lecturer at the Bibliothekar-Lehr institute, Cologne.

His wide-ranging musicological research took four main directions: the history of piano music to the mid-19th century (he also edited piano music by Benda, Müthel, J.A.P. Schultz, and Schubert's duet works); Schubert studies; the history of music in the Rhineland; and musical bibliography. Although he wrote prolifically in each of these fields, his most important publications were probably his bibliographical works, particularly his Schubert bibliography (1938).

WRITINGS

Das lyrische Klavierstück zu Beginn des 19. Jahrhunderts (1800 bis 1830) und sein Vorgeschichte im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Bonn, 1919); extracts in AMw, iii (1921), 54–82, 99–122, and ZMw, iii (1920–21), 459–69

Studien zur Geschichte der Klaviermusik des 18. Jahrhunderts (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Cologne, 1923)

'Musik und Musikleben im Rheinland', Rheinische Literatur- und Buchwoche II: Cologne 1923 (Cologne, 1923)

Herbart als Musiker (Langensalza, 1926)

'Geschichte, Kritik und Aufgaben der K.Ph.E. Bach-Forschung', Beethoven-Zentenarfeier: Vienna 1927, 211–16

'Schuberts Lieder in Frankreich bis 1840', Die Musik, xxi (1928–9), 22–31

'Zu Beethovens Naturauffassung', Beethoven und die Gegenwart: Festschrift ... Ludwig Schiedermair, ed. A. Schmitz (Berlin, 1937), 220–65

Verzeichnis des Schrifttums über Franz Schubert, 1828–1928 (Regensburg, 1938)

'Soziologisches zur neueren rheinischen Musikgeschichte', ZfM, Jg.106 (1939), 246–52

Selbstbiographien deutscher Musiker des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Cologne, 1948/R)

'Pergolesi und sein "Stabat Mater": zum Problem des frühvollendeten Musikers', KJb, xxxv (1951), 84–97

'Frühe Lehrwerke für das Hammerklavier', AMw, ix (1952), 231–45 with W.M. Luther: Repertorium der Musikwissenschaft: Schrifttum, Denkmäler und Gesamtausgaben in Auswahl (1800–1950) (Kassel, 1953)

Studien zur Kölner Musikgeschichte des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (Cologne, 1953)

Das Charakterstück, Mw, viii (1955; Eng. trans., 1961) [history and music anthology]

ed., with H. Lemacher and J. Schmidt-Görg: Studien zur Musikgeschichte des Rheinlandes: Festschrift zum 80. Geburtstag von Ludwig Schiedermair (Cologne, 1956)

'Zur musikalischen Renaissancebewegung in Frankreich während der 1. Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts', Festschrift Joseph Schmidt-Görg zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. D. Weise (Bonn, 1957), 156–74

Katalog der in der Universitäts- und Stadtbibliothek Köln vorhandenen Musikdrucke des 16., 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts (Cologne, 1958)

'Musikhandschriften aus dem Nachlass Ernst Bückens in der Universitäts- und Stadtbibliothek Köln', Aus der Welt des Bibliothekars: Festschrift für Rudolf Juchoff, ed. K. Ohly and W. Krieg (Cologne, 1959), 159–71

'Zur Entstehung und Bonner Uraufführung von Max Bruchs "Achilleus" 1885', Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Köln: zum 70. Geburtstag von Paul Mies, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1959), 26–54

'Das Geschichtsbewusstseins in der Musikanschauung der italienischen Renaissance und des deutschen Humanismus', Hans Albrecht in memoriam, ed. W. Brennecke and H. Haase (Kassel, 1962), 39–47

Bilder und Gestalten aus der Musikgeschichte des Rheinlandes (Cologne, 1964)

'Ludwig Scheibler als Schubertforscher', Musa – mens – musici: im Gedenken an Walther Vetter (Leipzig, 1969), 315–320

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Willi Kahl', Rheinische Musiker, i, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1960), 131 [incl. list of pubns]

H. Hüschen: 'Willi Kahl', Mf, xvi (1963), 1–3

HUGH COBBE

Kahn, Erich Itor (b Rimbach, Germany, 23 July 1905; d New York, 5 March 1956). American pianist and composer. He studied at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt and was co-director of the state radio there from 1928 to 1933. Touring extensively both as a soloist and in ensemble, he was influential in introducing contemporary music. After moving to Paris in 1933, he became active mostly in chamber music and was one of the founders of the Schubert Society. He toured Europe and North Africa with Pablo Casals in 1938–9 and settled in New York in 1941, performing thereafter with such artists as Tourel, Francescatti, Dushkin, Garbousova and Roland Hayes. With Alexander Schneider and Benar Heifetz he formed the Albeneri Trio in 1944 (the name was derived from the first names of the members). In 1948 he was awarded the Coolidge Medal for eminent service to chamber music. Three years later he joined the Bach Aria Group as a pianist. As a composer he inventively used both traditional and serial techniques. He employed the latter freely, with clear tonal implications, as in the Ciaccona (1943), and strictly, as in the String Quartet (1954).

WORKS

(selective list)

Präludien zur Nacht, suite, chbr orch, 1927; Suite, va, pf, 1937, rev. as Suite concertante, vn, orch, 1937, orchestration completed by R. Leibowitz, 1964; 3 chansons populaires (J. Leibowitz), Mez, pf, 1938; Les symphonies bretonnes, orch, 1940; 3 caprices de Paganini, vn, pf, 1942; Ciaccona dei tempi di guerra, pf, 1943; Actus tragicus, 9 insts, 1946; 4 Nocturnes (T. Corbière, J.P. Worlet, V. Hugo, P.B. Shelley), S, pf, 1954; Str Qt, 1954

MSS in US-NYp

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituaries: Herald Tribune (6 March 1956); New York Times (6 March 1956)

D. Newlin: 'In memoriam: Erich Itor Kahn, Retrospect and Prospect', American Composers Alliance Bulletin, vi/3 (1957), 16–18

R. Leibowitz and K. Wolff: Erich Itor Kahn: un grand représentant de la musique contemporaine (Paris, 1958)

F. Kahn: Generation in Turmoil (Great Neck, NY, 1960)

J. Allende-Blin: Erich Itor Kahn, Musik-Konzepte, no.85 (1994) [incl. complete list of works]

PHILIP L. MILLER/MICHAEL MECKNA

Kahn, Robert (b Mannheim, 21 July 1865; d Biddenden, Kent, 29 May 1951). German composer and teacher. He received his early musical training at the Berlin Musikhochschule (1882–5) and at the Munich Akademie der Tonkunst (1885–6). A short visit to Vienna (1887) brought him into regular contact with Brahms, whose acquaintance he had made earlier in Mannheim. Brahms reputedly invited the young composer to study with him but the offer was declined out of diffidence. After a period of military service, Kahn settled in Berlin. His String Quartet op.8 was dedicated to and performed by the Joachim Quartet, and the orchestral Serenade was given its première by the Berlin PO under von Bülow. From 1890 to 1893 Kahn served as rehearsal conductor at the Leipzig Stadttheater. In 1894 he was appointed to the Berlin Musikhochschule where he taught the piano and music theory until 1930. In 1916 he was elected to the Berlin Akademie der Künste, but the Nazis forced his resignation in 1934. He emigrated to England in 1937, but appears to have played little part in musical life and died in relative obscurity in Kent.

Kahn began his compositional career in the tradition of Schumann, Mendelssohn and Brahms, the latter exerting the most telling influence. He was also an admirer of Reger's works. Kahn's music is sober and solidly contrapuntal. He avoided for the most part the large forms of late Romanticism: the main exceptions are the Konzertstücke for piano and orchestra and the Serenade. His greatest contribution was in chamber music and lieder. Among the chamber pieces the Violin Sonata op.50, the Piano Quartets opp.30 and 41 and the String Quartet op.60 are noteworthy. Kahn also composed a number of distinguished choral works, Mahomets Gesang op.24, the Sturmlied op.53 and the Festgesang op.64 being the most successful in this genre.

WORKS
(selective list)
for fuller list see KdG

Orch: Serenade (Aus der Jugendzeit), chbr orch, *c*1890; Konzertstücke, op.74, pf, orch, 1920

Chbr: 2 Violinstücke mit Klavier, op.4, 1887; Sonata, g, op.5, vn, pf, 1886; Str Qt, A, op.8, 1890; Pf Qt, b, op.14, 1891; Pf Trio, E, op.19, 1893; 3 Stücke, op.25, vc, pf, 1897; Sonata, a, op.26, vn, pf, 1897; Pf Qt, a, op.30, 1899; Pf Trio, E♭, op.33, 1900; Pf Trio, c, op.35, 1902; 5 Tonbilder, op.36, vn, pf, 1902; Sonata, F, op.37, vc, pf, 1903; Pf Qt, c, op.41, 1904; Trio, g, op.45, cl, vc, pf, 1906; Sonata, E, op.50, vn, pf, 1907; Qnt, c, op.54, cl, hn, vn, vc, pf, 1910; Sonata, d, op.56, vc, pf, 1911; Str Qt, a, op.60, 1914; Suite, d, op.69, vn, pf, 1920; Pf Trio, e, op.72, 1922; Serenade, f, op.73, ob, hn, pf, 1922 Variationen über ein altes Lied, vn, pf, 1925; Pf Qnt, D, 1926

Choral: Mahomets Gesang (J.W. von Goethe), op.24, chorus, orch, 1896; Sommerabend (C. Morgenstern), op.28, solo vv, chorus, pf, 1897; Sturmlied (A. Ritter), op.53, chorus, orch, org, 1910; Festgesang (Pss), op.64, S, chorus, orch, org, 1917; 4 feierliche Gesänge (after H. Thürnau), op.76, unison chorus, pf, 1924; 14 sets of lieder; 70 canons, 2vv

Songs: 180 lieder, 13 duets

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Breitkopf & Härtel, Dreililienverlag, Leuckart, Simrock, Soler, Willcocks

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (S. Fahl); MGG1 (R. Schaal)
E. Radecke: Robert Kahn (Leipzig, 1894)
W. Altmann: 'Robert Kahn', Die Musik, ix/4 (1909–10), 352–63
A. Diesterweg: 'Zu Robert Kahns 60. Geburtstag', AMz, lii (1925), 671–2
B. Laugwitz: 'Robert Kahn and Brahms', MQ, lxxiv (1990), 595–609
R. Kahn: 'Erinnerungen an Brahms', Brahms-Studien, x (1994), 43–51
S. Fahl: Tradition der Natürlichkeit: zu Biographie, Lyrikvertonung und Kammermusik des spätromantischen Klassizisten Robert Kahn (Sinzig, 1998)

CHARLOTTE ERWIN/ERIK LEVI

Kahnt, Christian Friedrich (b Leipzig, 10 May 1823; d Leipzig, 5 June 1897). German music publisher. He founded a firm in Leipzig in 1851 that brought out good contemporary music (e.g. by Liszt, Draeseke, Grabner, Busoni, Nielsen and Mahler) and a great deal of salon music. It also published careful editions of major works and various works by unfamiliar composers of the 16th and 17th centuries such as Frescobaldi, Georg Muffat and Praetorius. Kahnt also sponsored the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik after 1857, and published Peter Cornelius's Der Barbier von Bagdad in 1886. The firm passed in that year to Oskar Schwalm, in 1889 to Paul Simon and subsequently to the banker Alfred Hoffmann (1903), who enhanced its reputation by publishing musicological works (by Sandberger, Schering and Grabner) and reprinting earlier music. As C.F. Kahnt Musikalien- und Verlagsbuchhandlung the firm remained in the family's possession after Hoffmann's death (1926), moving to Bonn in 1951 and then to Wasserburg on Lake Constance in 1958.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.-M. Plesske: Das Leipziger Musikverlagswesen und seine Beziehungen zu einigen namhaften Komponisten (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1974)
H.-M. Plesske: '"Wenn mich die Höhe der Honorarforderung auch überrascht hat": Leipziger Musikverlage und ihr Anteil an den Erstausgaben von Gustav Mahler, Richard Strauss und Hans Pfitzner', Jb der deutschen Bücherei, xiv (1978), 75–102
J. Deaville: 'The C.F. Kahnt Archive in Leipzig: a Preliminary Report', Notes, xlii (1985–6), 502–17
H.-M. Plesske: 'Leipzigs Musikverlage im 19. Jahrhundert', Leipzig: aus Vergangenheit und Gegenwart (Leipzig, 1988), 69–83

HANS-MARTIN PLESSKE/JAMES DEAVILLE

Kahowez, Günter (b Vöcklabruck, 4 Dec 1940). Austrian composer. He studied at the Bruckner Conservatory, Linz, with Helmut Eder, among others, and at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik (graduated 1966), where his teachers included Karl Schiske, Hanns Jelinek and Helmut Gottwald. Between 1961 and 1969 he attended seminars given by Stockhausen, Messiaen, Kagel, Ligeti and Tudor at the Darmstadt summer courses. Active as a percussionist, he performed with the ensemble die reihe and the Neues Ensemble Linz (1966–9). From 1969 to 1982 he worked for Universal Edition, where he became head of the music editorial department. He was appointed to a post at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik in 1988 (professor 1994).

Kahowez's early works retain links with tonality. In 1958, however, he turned to serial techniques (Plejaden, 1961; Kyrie I, 1962). After 1962 his style became more relaxed, exhibiting a freer atonal language, though one still bound by such organizational procedures as rhythmic sequences (Prolationen I, 1962). He also turned his attention to tone colour and sound planes (Schichtungen, 1962–3). Between 1965 and 1970 he experimented with aleatory composition (Duale II a/b), mobile multimedia works (Palle – Palle, 1968) and graphic notation, including notation in colour (El sol ha venido, 1970). The influence of Asian thinking and transcendental ideas is clear in his works after 1972 (Bardo I – Das unbegrenzte Licht, 1976–7; Tempel-Musik, 1976–8).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Klitsch (Kurconcert), op.35, 4 pfmrs, children's insts, radio, 1968; Palle – Palle (sportives Bewegungsspiel), op.36, 3–5 pfmrs, 1968; Spektakel im Debakel (after Bible: Apocalypse), op.41a, 4 pfmrs, tape, 1971

Vocal: Wintertod, motet, op.48a, SATB, 1957–77; 2 Lieder (G. Trakl, J. Guillén), op.8, A, vn, pf, 1958; Mondromanze (F. García Lorca), op.3, Bar, pf, 1958; Vexilla regis, motet, op.11, SATB, 1958–64; Kyrie I, op.16, 8vv, 1962; 4 Chöre (J. Ringelnatz), op.22, SATB, 1964; Sommerpoesie – Winterpoesie (W. Seidlhofer), op.27, S, ob, cl, va, trbn, pf, 1965; Mitologo (Ovid: Metamorphoses), op.46, spkr, cl/b cl, 1967–77, rev. 1993; Ps liii, op.42, 2 boys' voices, children's chorus, 3 men's vv, SATB, 1971; Bardo I – Das unbegrenzte Licht (Tibetan Book of the Dead), op.63, spkr, SATB, wind qnt, tpt, str, perc, 1976–7, rev. 1994; Weihnachtslieder & Quodlibets, op.53, SATB, insts, 1980; Auferstehung, motet, op.56, SATB, brass, 1987

Orch: Prolationen I, op.18, 1962; Schichtungen, op.20, 1962–3; Serenade, op.24a, chbr orch, 1965–79; Plejaden II, op.32, 1966; Prolationen II, op.54, 1981

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, op.55, pf, 1952, rev. 1982; 3 Inventionen, op.1, cl, bn, 1958; Polychromatische Passacaglia, op.33, org, 1958–67; Wind Qnt no.1, op.7, 1959; Klangrhythmen I–V, op.13, pf, 1960–69; Str Qt no.1, op.12, 1960; Plejaden, op.14a, pf, 1961 [rev. as op.14b, 1966]; Flächengitter, op.17, fl, 1962; Duale Ia, Ib, IIa, IIb, op.3, cl, gui, 1963–7; Structures, op.25, wind qnt, pf, 1965 [arr. as op.46, orch, 1966]; Als wäre eine Sonate, op.31, hpd, 1966; Orgel, op.37, org, 1968; Bardo – Puls, op.45, 11 insts, 1973–4 [from the Tibetan Book of the Dead]; Elementalchemie, op.44, vc, perc, 1975; Tempel-Musik, op.47, 12 insts, 1976–8; Tripelpartita, op.51, org, 1980–81; Wind Qnt no.2, op.52, 1982; Chiron – Charon, op.57, vc, pf, 1988–9; Mandala, op.58, pf, 1990–96; Feuerrose, op.59, str qt, 1991; Strophen des Dzyan, op.60, 21 insts, 1994

Other works: Megalyse, op.19, tape, 1962; El sol ha venido, multimedia, op.40, 1970; 2 graphische Blätter, op.39, 1970

Principal publishers: Doblinger, Edition Modern, DAP-Edition, Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LZMÖ [incl. further bibliography]

A. Peschek: 'Mitologo: ein Ballett von Günter Kahowez nach Texten von Ovids Metamorphosen', Alfred Peschek: musica incognita (Linz, 1993), 30–32 [programme notes]

H. Goertz: 'Kahowez, Günter', Österreichische Komponisten unserer Zeit (Kassel, 1994)

LOTHAR KNESSL

Kahrer, Laura. German pianist. See RAPPOLDI family, (2).

Kaifeng Jews, music of the. See JEWISH MUSIC, §III, 8(vi).

Kail, Josef (b Bozí Dar [Gottesgab], Bohemia, 11 March 1795; d Prague, 29 Jan 1871). Czech horn player, teacher and inventor. He graduated from the Prague Conservatory in 1817, and played the horn in the theatre orchestra of Pest from 1819 to 1822 and in the Vienna Hofoper (Kärntnertortheater) from 1822 to 1 December 1824. He then returned to Prague to become principal horn in the Estates Theatre. In June 1826 he was summoned by B.D. Weber, the director of the Prague Conservatory (whose variations 'for the newly invented keyed horn' Kail had performed in 1819), to be its first professor for trumpet and trombone (both with valves). From 1852 he also taught the flugelhorn; he retired in 1867.

On 1 November 1823 Kail obtained a privilege, together with the Vienna maker Joseph Riedl, for a trumpet with two Vienna valves; on 11 September 1835 the two received a privilege for a rotary valve; and from 1855 the Prague maker A.H. Rott built instruments with a fine-tuning mechanism for the valve slides developed by Kail.

Not only did Kail write an early method for low F and E♭ trumpet and flugelhorn, but he also composed the first work in history for the newly developed valved trumpet, a set of variations for trumpet in F, which was first performed on 23 March 1827 by his pupil Karl Chlum. To add to the new instrument's repertory Kail made transcriptions of works by Donizetti and Mozart as well as duets, terzets and quartets, and commissioned works by Lindpaintner (performed in 1829), Kalliwoda (1832), Conradin Kreutzer, Höfner, Grimm, Smita and B.D. Weber.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Heyde: Das Ventilblasinstrument (Leipzig, 1987)

B. Čížek: 'Josef Kail (1795–1871): Forgotten Brass Instrument Innovator', Brass Bulletin, no.73 (1991), 64–75; no.74 (1991), 24–9

E. Tarr: 'The Romantic Trumpet', HBSJ, v (1993), 213–61; vi (1994), 110–215

T. Albrecht: 'Elias (Edward Constantin) Lewy and the First Performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony', Horn Call (1999) [forthcoming]

EDWARD H. TARR

Kaioni, Ioan [Joan, Joannes, Johannes]. See CĂIANU, IOAN.

Kaipainen, Jouni (Ilari) (b Helsinki, 24 Nov 1956). Finnish composer. He is also an enthusiastic writer on music, both for the written media and the radio; his mother, Anu Kaipainen, is a writer and lyric poet well known in Finland. At the age of 13 Kaipainen resolved to be a composer after a chance hearing of Beethoven's 'Eroica' Symphony. He studied composition at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki with Sallinen (1973–6) and Heininen (1976–80). During his studies in the 1970s he was an active member of the Ears Open Society which, founded by young composers and players, held performances of not only its members' music but also introduced that of modern composers from abroad. It was not a homogeneous group or school, and the music of its most conspicuous members – Hämeenniemi, Lindberg, Saariaho and Kaipainen himself – covered a wide range of styles.

From the outset of his composing career Kaipainen has been stylistically eclectic: his output includes all traditional types and forms of music, with the exception of purely electronic music. In his early work the stylistic tendency was already towards the protean, and the influence of his teachers is evident: a richness of detail and sometimes a clearly post-serial musical language are both legacies from Heininen; a certain down-to-earth quality and a pluralist musicianship point back to Sallinen. Despite harmony anchored in free dodecaphony, melody is among the basic elements of Kaipainen's music. His style has continually moved towards greater melodiousness and accessibility. His earliest works were lyrical, for example the piano piece Je chante la chaleur désespérée (1981) or Cinq poèmes de René Char (1980) for soprano and orchestra. His breakthrough came with Trois morceaux de l'aube (1981) for cello and piano, which won a UNESCO prize for composers under the age of 30. In the early 1980s he concentrated on solo works and chamber music (Quartetto III for strings, 1984). An exception was the First Symphony (1980–85), composed over five years: this one-movement work is full of energy, with the emphasis more on harmonic colours than on motivic development. Since the mid-1980s he has written an abundance of vocal music, at first solo songs and, especially in the 1990s, choral works. The two-movement Second Symphony (1994) is more traditional in nature than most of his earlier works. It opens with a quotation from Sibelius, but otherwise approaches the orchestral sound of Lutosławski: significantly, it is also more classical in structure than its predecessor or most other contemporary Finnish symphonies.

In the 1990s Kaipainen composed a number of concertos. The series began with the clarinet concerto Carpe diem! (1990), which is light and playful in character. It was written in close consultation with the clarinettist Kari Kriikku, who has developed novel ways of playing and is particularly concerned with multiphonic technique. In a similar manner a musician provides inspiration in the Oboe Concerto (1994), a collaboration with the Swedish oboist Helén Jahren. Accende lumen sensibus (1996), a concerto for small orchestra, is a solid and concentrated work. A more highly coloured composition is the Vernal Concerto (1996) for saxophone quartet, the structure of which approaches the sinfonia concertante with the classical division of solo group and orchestral ripieno. Over a few months in 1997 Kaipainen composed a concerto each for the piano and for the viola. The former is a large-scale, robust work based directly on the cornerstone works of the Classical and Romantic piano concerto repertory, whereas the latter is an intimate, warm composition. In 1987 Kaipainen began work on Konstanzin ihme ('The Miracle of Constance'), an opera to a libretto by Juha Siltanen commissioned by Finnish National Opera. Arias from this work in progress have been performed separately.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Konstanzin ihme [The Miracle of Constance] (2, J. Siltanen), op.30/60, 1987–

Orch: Sym. no.1, op.20, 1980–85; Carpe diem!, cl conc., op.38, 1990; Ob Conc., 1994; Sisyfoksen uni [The Dream of Sisyphus], op.47, 1994; Sym. no.2, op.44, 1994; Accende lumen sensibus, op.52, 1996; Vernal Conc., from Equinox to Solstice, conc. for sax qt and orch, op.53, 1996; Pf Conc., op.55, 1997; Va Conc., op.56, 1997

Chbr: Ladders to Fire, conc. for 2 pf, op.14, 1979; Far from Home, op.17, fl, a sax, gui, perc, 1981; Trois morceaux de l'aube, op.15, vc, pf, 1981; Far from Home, op.17, fl, a sax, gui, perc, 1981; Trio I, op.21, cl, vc, pf, 1983; Piping down the Valleys Wile, op.26, b cl, pf, 1984; Quartetto III, op.25, str, 1984; Trio III, op.29, vn, vc, pf, 1987; Quartetto IV, op.45, str, 1994; Time Flies, op.48, fl, vn, vc, pf, 1995; Sestetto, op.57, fl, a sax, hn, vn, vc, pf, 1997

Solo inst: Je chante la chaleur désespérée, op.16, pf, 1981; Altaforte, op.18, tpt, live elec, tape, 1982; Conte, op.27, pf, 1985; Gena, op.31, accdn, 1987; L'anello di Aurora, op.34, vn, 1988; Tenebrae, op.39, gui, 1991

Vocal: Yölauluja [Nocturnal Songs] (B. Juyi, trans. P. Nieminen), op.11, S, orch, 1978; Cinq poèmes de René Char, op.12, S, orch, 1980; Pitkän kesän pokki iltaan [A Long Summer's Journey into Evening] (O.-M. Ronimus), S, fl, hn, vc, perc, 1979; 3 arias from Konstanzin ihme, op.30d, S, chbr orch, 1993; Stjärnenatten [The Starry Night] (E. Södergran), op.35, S, chbr ens, 1989; Antiphone SATB super 'Alta Trinità beata', op.40, children's and male chorus unacc., 1992; Jauchzet!, op.41, SS (boys), SATB unacc., 1993; Matkalla [On the Road] (Nieminen), op.49, 1995; Runopolku [Rune Walk] (L. Otonkoski), op.50, 1995

Principal publishers: Fazer, Hansen

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CC1 (S. Maarten)
J. Kaipainen: 'Thoughts on Being a Composer', Finnish Music Quarterly (1986), no.4, pp.34–5
L. Otonkoski: 'Ordering a World of Opposites – Carpe diem!', Finnish Music Quarterly (1992), no.1, pp.42–7
[R. Nieminen]: Jouni Kaipainen (Copenhagen, *c*1992)
A. Häyrynen: Jouni Kaipainen (Helsinki, 1997)

OSMO TAPIO RÄIHÄLÄ

Kaiser, Joachim (b Milken, East Prussia, 18 Dec 1928). German music and theatre critic, and writer on music. He studied the piano and cello, and musicology (from 1948) at the universities of Göttingen, Frankfurt and Tübingen, where his most influential teachers were Adorno, Rudolf Gerber and Helmuth Osthoff; he took the doctorate at Tübingen in 1957 with a dissertation on Grillparzer's dramatic style. In 1951 he began writing for the Frankfurter Hefte, and subsequently held posts as producer for Hessischer Rundfunk in Frankfurt (1954) and music and theatre critic of the Munich Süddeutsche Zeitung (1959), where he became co-editor of the Feuilleton section. His critiques of Wieland Wagner's new Bayreuth style established his reputation; he then became known for his studies of contemporary styles of piano playing, producing television and radio portraits of several pianists and the book Grosse Pianisten in unserer Zeit. His later writings are concerned with music appreciation, particularly in opera. He won the Theodor Wolff Prize (1966), the Johann Heinrich Merck Prize (1970) and the Salzburg Critics' Prize.

WRITINGS

'Musik und Katastrophe', Frankfurter Hefte, vi (1951), 435–40 [on T.W. Adorno: Zur Philosophie der neuen Musik]
'Jüdische Komponisten: Tradition und Vorurteil', Porträts deutsch-jüdischer Geistesgeschichte, ed. T. Koch (Cologne, 1961), 127–53
Grosse Pianisten in unserer Zeit (Munich, 1965, 5/1982; Eng. trans., 1971)
'Konzertkultur und Schallplatte', Frankfurter Hefte, xx (1965), 706–19
'Zur Praxis der Musikkritik', Symposion für Musikkritik: Graz 1967, 22–38
Beethovens 32 Klaviersonaten und ihre Interpreten (Frankfurt, 1975)
Erlebte Musik: von Bach bis Strawinsky (Hamburg, 1977, 3/1994 as Erlebte Musik: eine persönliche Musikgeschichte vom 18. Jahrhundert bis zur Gegenwart)
Mein Name ist Sarastro: die Gestalten in Mozarts Meisteropern von Alfonso bis Zerlina (Munich, 1984, 2/1991; Eng. trans., 1986, as Who's Who in Mozart's Operas, from Alfonso to Zerlina)
Leben mit Wagner (Munich, 1990)
'Tendenzen der Opernregie in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland', Musikkultur in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland: Leningrad 1990, 367–79
'Vieles ist auf Erden zu thun': Imaginäre Gespräche mit Ingeborg Bachmann, Ludwig van Beethoven, Franz Kafka, Johann Nestroy, Friedrich Nietzsche, Clara Schumann, Kurt Tucholsky und anderen (Munich, 2/1991)
ed., with W. Schels: Musikerporträts (Munich, 1997)
Klassik: da capo (Munich, 1999)
Von Wagner bis Walser: Neues zu Literatur und Musik (Zürich, 1999)

HANSPETER KRELLMANN/R

Kaithros. Ancient Jewish instrument, possibly a kithara, mentioned in Daniel. See JEWISH MUSIC, §I, 4(iv).

Kajanus, Robert (b Helsinki, 2 Dec 1856; d Helsinki, 6 July 1933). Finnish conductor and composer. His reputation rests on his pioneering work on behalf of Sibelius and as the founder of the first permanent orchestra in Helsinki. He was a pupil of Richard Faltin and Gustav Niemann in Helsinki, and he continued his studies with Schradieck, Reinecke, Jadassohn and E.F. Richter in Leipzig (1877–82); he also spent a period studying in Paris with Svendsen. In 1882 he founded the Helsinki Orchestral Society, in 1885 an orchestral school (incorporated in the Helsinki College of Music in 1914) and in 1888 the choir Sinfoniakuoro. In 1897 Kajanus successfully competed with Sibelius for the post of director of music at Helsinki University; he held this post until 1926, and was appointed professor in 1908. The survival of the Orchestral Society (from 1914 the Helsinki PO) was largely due to Kajanus's energy and resource, and he conducted it for the rest of his life. Sibelius gave the first performances of most of his works with this orchestra, and his music became, along with Beethoven, the cornerstone of Kajanus's repertory. In 1892 Sibelius composed En Saga for the orchestra. In 1900 Kajanus conducted the orchestra on a tour of northern Europe, Germany and the Netherlands, ending at the Paris Exposition Universelle; for this tour Sibelius revised his First Symphony and Finlandia.

In 1930 and 1932 Kajanus made a series of Sibelius recordings with the LSO, including Tapiola, Pohjola's Daughter (of which he was the dedicatee), the suite from Belshazzar's Feast and the first, second, third and fifth symphonies. These performances have the ring of authenticity and show a rare poetic insight allied with strong classical instincts.

In the 1880s Kajanus was one of the leading Finnish composers: his works from this period include The Death of Kullervo (1880), two Finnish Rhapsodies (1881, 1886) inspired by the example of Svendsen, and a symphonic poem with a final chorus, Aino (1885). After the successful première of Sibelius's Kullervo in 1892 Kajanus virtually retired as a composer. His works are nationalist in flavour but not sufficiently personal to hold a place in the repertory.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: The Death of Kullervo, 1880; 2 Finnish Rhapsodies, 1881, 1886; Aino, sym. poem, with final chorus, 1885; Air élégiaque, vn, orch, 1887; Sommarminnen [Summer Memories], 1896;

Adagietto, str. orch, 1913; Sinfonietta, str. orch, 1915; Overtura sinfonica, 1926; Intermezzo, 1926; Suite ancienne, str. orch, 1931
Inst: Impromptu, pf, 1875; Fantasie (Nocturne), pf, 1875; Sonata, vn, pf, 1876; Albumblätter, pf, 1877; Lyrische Stücke, pf, 1879; 2 Miniatures, pf, 1912; Konzertetüde, harp, 1914; other pieces
Choral, orch: Cantata (Lidner), 1874; Nouskaa aatteet (K. Leino), 1898; Kalevala-Hymm (K. Leino), 1910
Other vocal: Sotamarssi (A. Oksanen), male vv, 1889; Ylioppilaskunnan marssi (Koskimies), male vv; other songs
Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Kistner, Westerlund (Warner)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N.-E. Rinbom: Helsingfors orkesterföretag 1882–1932 [Orchestral activity in Helsinki 1882–1932] (Helsinki, 1932)
S. Kajanus: Självbiografiska anteckningar [Autobiographical notes] (Helsinki, 1936)
Y. Suomalainen: Robert Kajanus: hänen elämänsä ja toimintansa [Kajanus: his life and work] (Helsinki, 1952)
M. Vainio: 'Father of the Finnish Orchestra', Finnish Music Quarterly (March 1989)
L. Madetoja: 'Robert Kajanujsesta säveltäjänä' [About Robert Kajanus as a composer], Kirjoituksia musiikista (Helsinki, 1989)

ROBERT LAYTON/FABIAN DAHLSTRÖM

Kajoni, Ioan [Joan, Joannes, Johannes, János]. See CĂIANU, IOAN.

Kakaki. The most common name for the exceptionally long metal trumpet found in West Africa (see HAUSA MUSIC, fig. 1). It is used in the ceremonial music of certain traditional states in the east and south of the Republic of Niger, the central and northern zones of Nigeria, central Cameroon and parts of Chad and the Central African Republic. It is normally associated with Islam.

The earliest known reference to the instrument is by the 16th-century historian Mahmoud Kâti in an account of the conquest of Aïr (now in Niger) by the army of the Songhai emperor Askia Mohammed I. During the 15th and 16th-centuries the expansion of the Songhai empire (with its capital at Gao on the Niger) led to the spread of the instrument eastwards via the Hausa states and Borno to beyond Lake Chad and south-eastwards down the Niger valley via the former Nupe state to beyond the river's confluence with the Benue. Its adoption by the Hausa states of the 17th and 18th centuries as part of the regalia of kingship established it as a royal instrument throughout the areas of their influence. After the jihad of Usuman Dan Fodiyo (early 19th century), Fulani (or FulBe) emirs who had control of the Hausa kingdoms adopted not only the traditional Hausa administrative organization but also the associated regalia including the kakaki. It either replaced or was used in conjunction with long trumpets of wood or cane, such as those seen in the 1820s by the explorers Denham and Clapperton at the courts of Kukawa, Mandara and Logone.

The status of the instrument was reinforced in the following period and its use spread in neighbouring areas, including those which in many respects remained hostile to the growing cultural and political influence of the Hausa emirates. The exclusive association of the kakaki with kingship (or an equivalent degree of authority) is reflected in two traditional Hausa kirari, identifying praise epithets: kakaki busan mutum 'daya ('kakaki, blown for one man alone'); and barawon kakaki ba shi da iko ya busa shi ('he who steals a kakaki nonetheless has no authority to blow it').

In both form and usage the Hausa kakaki has become a model for practices over a considerable area of West Africa. In Nigeria the Nupe people refer to the instrument as kakati and Edo-speakers as kaki, while to peoples around Lake Chad (including the Kanuri of Nigeria, the Mului of Chad and the sedentary Fulani of northern Cameroon), it is known variously as kashi, gashi, gachi, gatshi or gatci. Although the etymology of kakaki remains a mystery, gashi etc. would appear to be connected with the Hausa praise-words 'ga shi' meaning 'see him', which are frequently 'blown' on the instrument to announce the appearance of a high official; this usage was first recorded of the Sultan of Borno in the 1850s by the German traveller Heinrich Barth (1857).

The kakaki is usually made from kerosene tins, more rarely from large brass measuring pans. Gold and silver trumpets are mentioned in legends which should, perhaps, not be taken too literally. Normally made in two detachable sections of approximately equal length, the whole instrument is between 2 and 4 metres long. A typical example from the emirate of Katsina in Nigeria consists of a mouthpiece section formed from three tubes soldered together (total length about 1·25 metres) with a fairly uniform bore of about 2·5 cm; and a bell section formed from two tubes (total length about 1·25 metres) and a bore which increases from 2·5 cm at the junction with the mouthpiece section to 7 cm at the start of the actual bell and 10 cm at the end of the instrument. An unusual instrument from Niger has two bells branching from the narrow stem. The trumpet's 2nd and 3rd partials, forming an interval of between a perfect and an augmented 5th (approximately 750 cents), are the two principal notes blown. The 2nd partial of a kakaki such as that described is around c, with a frequency of about 130 Hz. A third note, rarely used, is produced from the 2nd partial but is pitched about a semitone below it.

Kakaki (trumpet), algaita (oboes) and ganga (drum) of the Fulani people, Tungo, Cameroon, 1963

In performance the player is either standing or on horseback, with the trumpet held to his mouth in a near horizontal position by one hand and supported part way down the stem by the extended other hand. The kakaki may at times be blown as a solo instrument (e.g. for the Emir of Zaria, Nigeria, or at Kano Airport to herald the arrival or departure of high officials) but is normally used in groups of four or more with matching groups of the double-headed cylindrical GANGA drums. Their performance is based on the linguistic tones and syllabic quantities of an unverbalized text, the take, in praise of an official patron. This is frequently divided into a solo statement and a chorus response; the solo trumpet is pitched about a semitone below the chorus trumpets, as in ex.1. This take was formerly performed for the installation of the head of Kusada District in Katsina Emirate, Nigeria. Acute and grave accents mark high- and low-tone syllables in the text, the sequence of long and short syllables is shown in the scansion and the small note heads on the top staff represent secondary strokes used either to fill in long syllables or to complete a phrase before its repetition.

Often included with the kakaki and ganga is the algaita (oboe, see illustration). Other instruments in the ensemble vary according to locality and may include the kuge (clapperless bell), farai (wooden trumpet) and kaho (side-blown trumpet). As the kakaki itself is generally associated with kingship and its blaring timbre and deep tone are immediately recognized as symbolic of status, it is blown only on ceremonial occasions, such as the Thursday evening salutation to the ruler, the procession to the mosque the following day and the great parades accompanying the major Islamic festivals. Former uses include signalling in warfare; for example, among the Nupe of Nigeria it would signal the order to charge. Although today the kakaki is almost entirely associated with Islamic functions, this has not always been so: at the end of the 19th century the Chief of Illo at Girris (now on the Nigeria-Benin border) ordered a blast from 12 trumpeters to drive away evil spirits.

The instrument itself is probably much older and considerably more widespread in distribution than its documented history would indicate. A depiction of a Roman tuba on Trajan's Column, Rome (113 CE; for illustration see TUBA (ii)) bears a remarkable resemblance to the kakaki, as do trumpets shown in an Egyptian military band of the 14th century, in China in the later Middle Ages and in the mouths of Giotto's angels in the painting The Coronation of the Virgin (*c*1317). It can be assumed that the long metal trumpet, if not its name, reached West Africa from the north.

There may be a relationship between the West African kakaki and the Maghribi nafīr, which Chottin (1927) suggested was devised by the Moors in Spain and introduced in the mid-14th century into Fez, from where it spread throughout the Maghrib. He also suggested that it was initially used as a military instrument but later acquired a religious role, being blown from the tops of minarets during the nights of Ramadan. However, he described the nafīr as producing only a single note, unlike the kakaki, whether blown singly or in pairs.

Ex.1 Drum and trumpet take for the head of Kusada District, Katsina Emirate

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Barth: Travels and Discoveries in North and Central Africa (London, 1857/R)
O. Houdas and M. Delafosse, eds.: Mahmoud Kâti: Tarikh el-fettach (Paris, 1913), 135–6
A. Chottin: Note sur le 'Nfîr' (trompette du Ramadan) (Paris, 1927)
P.G. Harris: 'Notes on Drums and Musical Instruments Seen in Sokoto Province, Nigeria', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxii (1932), 105–25
S.F. Nadel: A Black Byzantium (London, 1942)
A. Schaeffner: 'Timbales et longues trompettes', Bulletin de l'Institut français d'Afrique noire, xiv (1952), 1466–89
C. Duvelle and M. Vuylstèke: disc notes, Anthologie de la musique du Tchad, OCR 36–8 (1966)
K. Krieger: 'Musikinstrumente der Hausa', Baessler-Archiv, new ser., xvi (1968), 373–430
D.W. Ames and A.V. King: Glossary of Hausa Music and its Social Contexts (Evanston, IL, 1971)
F.E. Besmer: Kidan Daran Salla: Music for the Eve of the Muslim Festivals of Id-al-Fitr and Id-al-Kabir in Kano, Nigeria (Bloomington, IN, 1974)

ANTHONY KING/R

Kalabis, Viktor (b Červený Kostelec, nr Náchod, 27 Feb 1923). Czech composer. He studied with Hlobil at the Prague Conservatory (1945–8) and with Řídký at the Academy of Musical Arts (1952). During this period he also studied philosophy and musicology at Prague University, taking the doctorate there in 1991. Between 1953 and 1972 he was editor and music producer at Czechoslovak Radio. In 1972 he abandoned other commitments to devote his time to composition.

Kalabis's rapid rise to prominence as a composer is an accurate reflection of his intellectual and creative abilities. After an initial period characterized by his admiration for music of the late Romantic period his own music acquired a neo-classical sense of form and expressive means, as evidenced by the First Piano Concerto (1954). This new development reached full maturity and poise in the First Symphony (1957). His compositional values and philosophical perspective have made him one of the leading figures in Czech music during the second half of the 20th century. Of his generation of composers he was the first whose music became known abroad. Many of his works have been composed to commission, including the Concerto for Orchestra for the Czech PO, the Fourth Symphony for the Dresden Staatskapelle, Canticum canticorum for the Gächinger Kantorei, the Second Violin Concerto for Josef Suk and Dialogy for János Starker; the First Piano Concerto and Harpsichord Concerto were commissioned for his wife Zuzana Růžičková. Kalabis's output – modest in size on account of his methodical and careful approach – contains music that is perfectly formed, displaying a feel for structure and proportion. Rather than goals in themselves, these technical considerations represent an expressive means of conveying content. Kalabis has a talent for producing striking sonorities and using timbre and large instrumental forces effectively (e.g. Concerto for Orchestra). His music enjoys wide recognition: the Sinfonia pacis is one of the most frequently performed contemporary Czech works worldwide and performances of the Harpsichord Concerto have been given at major international concert halls. He has received many awards from his homeland, including the State Prize (1969) and the honorary title Artist of Merit (1983).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Dva světy [Two Worlds] (ballet, after L. Carroll: Alice in Wonderland), op.54, 1980

Orch: Conc. for Chbr Orch 'Hommage à Stravinski', op.3, 1948; Vc Conc., op.8, 1951; Pf Conc. no.1, op.12, 1954; Sym. no.1, op.14, 1957; Vn Conc. no.1, op.17, 1959; Sym. no.2 'Sinfonia pacis', op.18, 1961; Komorní hudba pro smyčce [Chbr Music for Str], op.21, 1963; Sym. variace, op.24, 1964; Conc. for Orch, op.25, 1966; Sym. no.3, op.33, 1971; Sym. no.4, op.34, 1972; Tpt Conc., op.36, 1973; Hpd Conc., str, op.42, 1975; Sym. no.5, op.43, 1976; Vn Conc. no.2, op.49, 1978; Tristium, concertant fantasie, va, str, op.56, 1981; Bn Concertino, wind, op.61, 1983; Bajka [Fable], chbr orch, op.59, 1983; Pf Conc. no.2, wind, op.64, 1985; Diptych, str, op.66, 1987

Choral: Vojna [The War] (chbr cant., folk poetry), op.45, SATB, cimb, fl, 1977; Canticum canticorum (cant., Vulgate), op.65, A, T, SATB, chbr orch, 1986

Str Qts: no.1, op.6, 1949; no.2, op.19, 1962; no.3, op.48, 1977; no.4 (Ad honorem J.S.B.), op.62, 1984; no.5, op.63, 1984; no.6, op.68, 1987; no.7, op.76, 1993

Other chbr: Divertimento, wind qnt, op.10, 1952; Suite 'Dudácka' ['Bagpiper'], op.11, ob, pf, 1953; Malá komorní hudba [Small Chbr Music], wind qnt, op.27, 1967; Sonata, op.28, vn, hpd, 1967; Sonata, op.29, vc, pf, 1968; Sonata, op.30, cl, pf, 1969; Variace, op.31, hn, pf, 1969; Sonata, op.32, trbn, pf, 1970; Pf Trio, op.39, 1974; Nonet no.2 'Pocta přírodě' [Homage to Nature], op.44, 1975; Jarní píšťalky [Spring Whistles], wind octet, op.50, 1979; Suite, op.55, cl, pf, 1981; Sonata, op.58, vn, pf, 1982; Inkantace [Incantation], 13 wind, op.69, 1988; Podivní pištci [Strange Pipers], op.72, 2 ob, 2 bn, 2 eng hn, dbn, 1990; 4 obrazy [4 Images], op.73, fl, hpd, 1991; Hallelujah, op.74, vn, pf, 1991; Dialogy, op.77, vc, hpd, 1994; Ludus per 4, op.82, pf qt, 1996

Solo inst: Sonata no.1, op.2, pf, 1947; Sonata no.2, op.4, pf, 1948; 6 dvouhlasých kánonických invencí [Six 2-Part Canonic Inventions], op.20, hpd, 1962; Symfonická freska [Sym. Fresco], op.22, org, 1963; Akcenty, cyklus, klavírních výrazových studií [Accents, cycle of études of interpretation], op.26, pf, 1967; 3 Pieces, op.35, fl, 1973; Entrata, Aria e Toccata, op.41, pf, 1975; Akvarely [Aquarelles], op.53, hpd, 1979; Reminiscences, op.46, gui, 1977; 3 Polkas, op.52, pf, 1979; Sonata no.3, op.57, pf, 1982; 4 Enigmas for Graham, op.71, pf, 1989; Preludio Aria e Toccata 'I casi di Sisyphos', op.75, hpd, 1992

Solo vocal: Ptačí svatby [Bird's Weddings] (folk poetry), song cycle, op.5, T, pf, 1949; 5 romantických písní o lásce [5 Romantic Love Songs] (R.M. Rilke), op.38, high v, str, 1973; Kolotoč života [Carousel of Life] (Rilke), song cycle, op.70, low v, pf, 1989

Principal publishers: ČHF, Panton, Schott, Supraphon, Zimmermann

Principal recording companies: Panton, Supraphon

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Macek: 'Nad klavírním koncertem Viktora Kalabise' [On Kalabis's piano concerto], HRo, x (1957), 407–9

J. Pilka: 'Violoncellový koncert Viktora Kalabise', HRo, xi (1958), 785–9

J. Pilka: Viktor Kalabis: Život a dílo (Prague, 1999)

JIŘÍ MACEK

Kalachevs'ky, Mykhailo Mykolayovych (b Popivtsi, Kirovohrad Province, nr Poltava, 2 October 1851; d nr Poltava, between 1910 and 1912). Ukrainian composer. He received degrees in both jurisprudence and music (composition and theory at the Leipzig Conservatory, graduating in 1876) before he settled in Kremenchytsi where he practised law and continued his musical activities. Unfortunately, by 1905, he had developed a serious debilitating disease that left him more or less paralyzed. An enigmatic figure, who lived in relative obscurity, he wrote a small number of works. Most of them are presumed to be lost (they include a Requiem, a String Quartet, a Piano Trio and a number of works for chorus). What have survived are the 'Ukrainian' Symphony (written as a diploma work in Leipzig), a collection of 19 songs on texts by various Russian poets, and four piano pieces. The piano pieces reveal a debt to Tchaikovsky, while the influence of Glinka and Dargomïzhsky is evident in his vocal settings. His artistic individuality infused all his work with a distinctive Ukrainian lyricism. Kalachevs'ky's major surviving work is his 'Ukrainian' Symphony, composed in 1876. The symphony is written in the traditional four movements and scored for a typical mid-19th-century orchestra. Although unquestionably influenced by the aesthetic tendencies of Robert Schumann's followers, it transforms such traditions by use of certain characteristics of Ukrainian national style: a clever use of folk romance, song and dance forms (such as the kozachok) in place of the usual ABA form, scherzo or rondo. For example, the theme of the introduction, a tranquil and lyrical melody in 4/4 which is based on the popular song Viyut vitry, viyut buyni ('Winds are blowing, violent winds'), is transformed into the turbulent and dance-like principal theme in 6/8 of the first movement. Kalachevs'ky's symphony belongs to that class of early symphonies by youthful composers, such as Bizet's Symphony in C, which, although lacking the maturity of the recognized masters of the genre, are nevertheless fully formed, with a subtle individuality that deserves repeated hearing. Due to the peculiar political circumstances of 19th-century Ukraine, it represents, along with Volodymyr Sokals'ky's Symphony in G minor (1892), one of only two symphonies of importance written by Ukrainian composers during the second half of the 1800s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ukraïns'ka symfoniya [Ukrainian Symphony], orch, 1876; Barcarolle, pf (1955); Nocturne, pf (1955); Romance, pf (1955); Valse-Caprice, pf (1955); 19 songs (Russ. poems) (1966); Pf Trio, lost; Requiem, solo vv, chorus, str, org, lost; Str Qt, lost

Principal publishers: Muzychna Ukraïna, Mysteztvo

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Hrinchenko: 'Pervaya ukrainskaya simfoniya M. Kalachevskogo' [The first Ukrainian symphony by Kalachevs'ky], SovM (1946), no.11, pp.66–73

M. Hordyuchuk: M.M. Kalachevs'ky (Kiev, 1954)

VIRKO BALEY

Kalafati, Vasily Pavlovich (b Yevpatoriya, Crimea, 29 Jan/10 Feb 1869; d Leningrad, March 1942). Russian composer and teacher. In 1899 he graduated from the St Petersburg Conservatory where he studied composition with Rimsky-Korsakov. He later taught composition and polyphony there (1906–29, from 1913 as professor). Kalafati's pupils include Asaf′yev, Heino Eller, Kushnaryov, V. Shcherbachyov, A. Stepanian, Stravinsky, A. Ter-Gevondyan, M. Yudina and others. His symphonic poem Legenda ('A Legend'), written in memory of Schubert, was awarded a prize at the International Schubert Competition (Vienna, 1928). Kalafati published the dictionary Sputnik muzïkanta ('The musician's companion', St Petersburg, 1911); he also made four-hand piano arrangements of Skryabin's Second Symphony, various symphonic works by Lyadov (The Enchanted Lake, Kikimora, Baba-Yaga), and also for the vocal score of Spendiaryan's opera Almast. Kalafati's musical style comes close to the scholasticism of Rimsky-Korsakov and the Belyayev circle.

WORKS

Op: Tsïgani [The Gypsies] (after A.S. Pushkin), 1941
Choral: Reve ta stogne [Howling and Groaning] (Ukr. text), mus. picture, chorus, orch, after 1917
Orch: Fantasy-Ov.; Polonaise; Sym., a; Zvyozdï Kremlya [The Stars of the Kremlin], march, wind band (1942), awarded a prize at a competition during the siege of Leningrad
Chbr inst: Octet, ww, pf, str; Pf Qt; 2 pf sonatas; 2 str qts
Songs, choruses, folksong arrs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Leningradskaya konservatoriya v vospominaniyakh [The Leningrad Conservatory in reminiscences], ii (Leningrad, 1988)
I. Musin: Uroki zhizni [The lessons of life] (St Petersburg, 1995)

MIKHAIL MISHCHENKO

Kalamos (Gk.; Lat. calamus). A term used in antiquity for various wind instruments, including the AULOS. For the use of the plural kalamoi to describe the syrinx or its separate pipes see THEOCRITUS, and VIRGIL; see also ISIS.

Kalangu [kalanggual, kalungu, danko]. Double-headed hourglass drum of West Africa (see DRUM, §I, 2(ii)(c)), known principally among the Hausa people of Nigeria, who call the drum kalangu or kalungu (see HAUSA MUSIC, §§1, 4). It is a variable tension drum, held under the arm and beaten with a hooked stick. The drum is of medium size for an hourglass drum, being about 35 cm long, 17 cm in diameter at each end and 8 cm in diameter at the waist. The past and present patrons of Hausa kalangu drumming are butchers. Originally the drum was associated exclusively with them, but today it is used for drumming not only their praise epithets but also those of boxers and of young people. It is also used to accompany young girls' dancing and by popular freelance professional musicians such as Alhaji Muhamman Shata. The main additional occasions of performance are at name and marriage ceremonies and during co-operative farm work; in the Sokoto and Zamfara areas the drum is used with single-string GOGE bowed lutes (fiddles) and calabash or metal percussion vessels in music and dance of the bori spirit possession cult.

In the performance of praise epithets, the Hausa drum may be used solo but is more often played with a fixed-pitch hourglass drum, dan karbi, and the small kuntuku kettledrum. The dan karbi is strapped to the thigh of the kalangu player, who beats both drums. A smaller version of the kalangu, the karamar kalangu, is played in the market both by amateur freelance musicians, sometimes to promote trade for butchers, and by professional satirists (yan gambara).

Many Nigerian peoples use such hourglass drums to accompany dancing, including the Bole (or Bolewa), Bariba (or Baatonun), Cishingini (or Kambari) and Gbari (who refer to the drum as kalanggual). The Busa and Tyenga (or Kenga) peoples employ the drum for bori dancing at the conclusion of a lengthy funeral feast. The Lela kalangu is used traditionally for drumming on the death of noted warriors and their immediate kin, and the Nupe version of the instrument, the danko, is used together with a very small kalangu-type drum, the munugi, by royal musicians on Muslim festivals, Fridays and other important occasions.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ames–KingGHM
E.C. Duff and W. Hamilton-Browne: Gazetteer of the Kontagora Province (London, 1920)
P.G. Harris: 'Notes on Drums and Musical Instruments Seen in Sokoto Province, Nigeria', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxii (1932), 105–25, esp. 108
D.W. Ames: 'Hausa Drums of Zaria', Ibadan, xxi (1965), 62–80
K. Krieger: 'Musikinstrumente der Hausa', Baessler-Archiv, new ser., xvi (1968), 373–430
P. Harper: 'A Festival of Nigerian Dances', African Arts, iii/2 (1970), 48–53
P. Newman and E.H. Davidson: 'Music from the Villages of Northeastern Nigeria', Asch Records AHM 4532 (1971) [disc notes]

K.A. GOURLAY/ROGER BLENCH

Kalaniemi, Maria (b Espoo, 27 May 1964). Finnish accordionist and composer. She started playing a five-row button accordion at the age of eight, then received a classical training for 11 years while developing an interest in traditional music. In 1983 she won the Golden Accordion award which resulted in her first recording. She then studied with Heikki Laitinen at the folk music department of the Sibelius Academy, forming the pioneering ensemble Niekku, which set out to reinvent Finnish folk music by modernizing through arrangement, texture and style. In 1989 Kalaniemi went to Paris to study with the accordionist Marcel Azzola. The next year she began to investigate the use of left-hand free bass melodies, used previously only in art music. She has become a master player, composing and performing her own music on the instrument. Kalaniemi has led her own group since the early 1990s, officially named Aldargaz in 1995 and including Timo Alakotila (piano), Olli Varis (guitars), Tapani Varis (double bass), Petri Hakala (mandolin) and Arto Järvelä (violin). They have reworked traditional Swedish and Finnish tunes, polskas and tangos, as well as interpreting Kalaniemi and Alokotila's original compositional work. Kalaniemi's work is distinguished by brooding melodies, striking dexterity of playing imbued with intensity, and a muted passion. In 1996 Kalaniemi and Aldargaz won the Finland Prize awarded by the Ministry of Education for artistic excellence, the first folk musicians in Finland to receive this award. In 1997 she was awarded a three-year artist's grant from the Finnish state to pursue her own compositional work. Kalaniemi has taught accordion at the Sibelius Academy since 1985.

RECORDINGS

Maria Kalaniemi, Olarin Musiikki OMCD 40 (1992)
Iho, perf. M. Kalaniemi and Aldargaz, Olarin Musiikki OMCD 57 (1995); reissued as Rykodisc HNCD 1396 (1997)

Ahma, perf. M. Kalaniemi and Aldargaz, Rockadillo ZENCD 2059 (1999)

JAN FAIRLEY

Kalaš, Julius [Kassal, Luis] (b Prague, 18 Aug 1902; d Prague, 12 May 1967). Czech composer. He studied composition with Foerster and Křička at the Prague Conservatory (1921–4) and in Suk's masterclasses there (1924–8). From 1925 until 1953 he was the pianist and artistic director of the popular male sextet 'The Teachers of Gotham', who satirized, parodied and caricatured social and artistic conditions, famous personalities, compositions and critics. They made more than 1300 live and broadcast appearances in Czechoslovakia, were in six films and made a successful visit to London on the occasion of the Czech Film Festival (1947). For the group Kalaš wrote 125 satirical ballads and songs, most of them to texts by Karel Hrnčíř. From 1948 he was also a professor at the film department of the Prague Academy of Musical Arts, where he also served as dean (1949–50) and vice-dean (1955–7). In addition, he held official positions in the Authors' Protection Union, the Theatre and Literary Agency and the Czech Music Foundation, of which he was first president (1954–60).

Kalaš wrote both light and serious music. In the former category he composed six operettas (of which the most successful was Mlynářka z Granady, 'The Miller's Wife of Granada'), 40 film scores, music for the stage and radio, music for the sports exercises at the Sokol Festival etc. Of his serious compositions, the most important are those for chamber forces or orchestra. His style is lucid and texturally straightforward though capable of humorous and grotesque moods. In his chamber and orchestral pieces the influence of Suk is discernible, particularly in the lyrical passages and in the use of instrumental colour, while the humorous atmosphere of his other works owes more to Křička.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Mlynářka z Granady [The Miller's Wife of Granada] (operetta, K. Konstantin, K. Hrnčíř), op.78, 1954, Prague, 1954; Slavnost v Coqueville [Fête in Coqueville] (ballet, after E. Zola), op.80, 1955, Rostock, 24 Nov 1956; Nepokoření [The Proud Ones] (M.V. Kratochvil), 1960, Prague, National, 1961

Orch: Vzkříšení [Resurrection], op.51, sym. poem, 1945; Vc Conc., 1949; Va Conc., 1950; Slavík a růže [The Nightingale and the Rose], sym. poem, 1956; Bubny míru [Drums of Peace], sym. picture, 1960; Bohatýrská fantasie [Heroic Fantasy], op.73, vc, orch

Cants.: Ve jménem Páně [In the name of the Lord] (J. Týml), op.33, 1939; Kejklíř [Juggler] (O. Fischer), op.37, 1939; Jen dál [Still Further] (J. Neruda), op.70, 1951

Chbr: Str Qt, A, op.1, 1924; Quartettino, G, op.8, 1928; Str Qt, f, 1942

Film scores: Obrácení Ferdyše Pištory [The Conversion of Ferdyš Pištora], 1931; U nás v Kocourkově [At our House in Kocourkov], 1934; Jízdní hlídka [The Mounted Guard], 1936; Katakomby [Catacombs], 1940; Císařův pekař a pekařův císař [The Emperor's Baker and the Baker's Emperor], 1953

Principal publishers: Český Hudební Fond, Mojmír Urbánek

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

Kocourkovští učitelé aneb Chudí hoši, kteří se proslavili [The Teachers of Gotham, or the poor lads who became famous] (Prague, 1939)

A.M. Brousil: Hudba v našem filmu [Music in our films] (Prague, 1948), 33, 97

J. Kalaš: 'Jak jsem psal svůj violoncellový koncert' [How I wrote my Cello Concerto], HRo, iii/10–12 (1950–51), 72 only

OLDŘICH PUKL

Kalbeck, Max (b Breslau, 4 Jan 1850; d Vienna, 4 May 1921). German author, music critic and editor. He studied at the University of Breslau, first law, later philosophy. From 1872 to 1874 he was a private tutor in Munich, where he also wrote poetry and studied at the music school. In 1875 he returned to Breslau to become a music critic and columnist for the Schlesische Zeitung and an assistant director of the Schlesisches Museum; subsequently he worked as a music critic for the Breslauer Zeitung. He moved to Vienna in 1880 and, on the recommendation of Hanslick, joined the staff of the Wiener allgemeine Zeitung. He became the music critic of the Neue freie Presse in 1883, the Neues Wiener Tageblatt in 1886 and the Wiener Montags-Revue in 1890.

Kalbeck was an influential music critic in Vienna and, like Hanslick, a partisan of Brahms. While his earliest published critical studies are devoted to Wagner's music dramas, his main work of musical scholarship is the very large-scale biography of Brahms. He was a close friend of Brahms in the composer's latter years and his biography has been the basis of most subsequent Brahms scholarship; it will not be superseded (Kalbeck's Brahms is somewhat akin to Boswell's Johnson), though it will be supplemented (as Alfred Ehrmann has already done in his biography of 1933). Brahms set some of Kalbeck's poetry: the song Nachtwandler op.86 no.3 and the partsong Letztes Glück op.104 no.3. Kalbeck also edited seven of the 16 volumes in the collected correspondence of Brahms issued by the Deutsche Brahms Gesellschaft in Berlin. Besides his activity as a critic and scholar, he wrote new librettos for Mozart's Bastien und Bastienne and La finta giardiniera, made new translations of librettos (e.g. Don Giovanni and Gluck's Orfeo) and wrote librettos for contemporary opera and operetta composers. Some of his literary works appeared under the pseudonym Jeremias Deutlich.

WRITINGS

LIBRETTOS

Jakuba (1894): operetta by Johann Strauss (ii), Vienna, 1894

Das stille Dorf (1897): opera by A. von Fielitz, Hamburg, 1900

Nubia (1898): opera by G. Henschel, Dresden, 1899

Decius der Flötenspieler (1899): opera by E. Poldini

Die Hochzeit zu Ulfosa: opera by P. Caro, unperf., unpubd

BIOGRAPHY AND CRITICISM

Richard Wagner's Nibelungen (Breslau, ?1876, 2/1883)

Das Bühnenfestspiel zu Bayreuth (Breslau, 2/1877)

Richard Wagner's Parsifal (Breslau, 1883)

Gereimtes und Ungereimtes (Berlin, 1885)

Wiener Opernabende (Vienna, 1885)

Humoresken und Phantasien (Vienna, 1896)

Opern-Abende, i–ii (Berlin, 1898)

Johannes Brahms, i (Vienna, 1904, 4/1921/R); ii (Berlin, 1908–9, 3/1921/R); iii/1 (Berlin, 1910, 3/1922/R); iii/2 (Berlin, 1912, 2/1931/R); iv (Berlin, 1914, 2/1915/R) ed.: Johannes Brahms: Briefwechsel, i–ii (Berlin, 3/1912) [correspondence with H. and E. von Herzogenberg]; viii (1915) [correspondence with J.V. Widman, E. and F. Vetter and A. Schubring]; ix–xii (1917–19) [correspondence with P.J. and F. Simrock]

J. Brahms: Preface to Johannes Brahms: Drei Lieder (Vienna, 1921) [facs. of MSS of Die Mainacht, Sapphische Ode, Nachtwandler]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Wurz: 'Max Kalbeck', ZfM, Jg.111 (1950), 95–6

W. Kosch: 'Kalbeck, Max', Deutsches Literatur-Lexikon (Berne, 2/1947–58), rev. 3/1966–98 by B. Berger and H. Rupp)

A. Bettelheim: 'Kalbeck, Max', Österreichisches biographisches Lexikon 1815–1950, ed. E. Obermeyer-Marnach (Vienna, 1957–)

M.G. Musgrave: 'Brahms und Kalbeck: eine missverstandene Beziehung?', Brahms Congress: Vienna 1983, 397–404

ROBERT PASCALL

Kalcher [Kalchner], Johann Nepomuk (b Freising, Bavaria, 15 May 1764; d Munich, 2 Feb 1827). German organist and composer. He studied in Freising with the court organist J.G. Berger, and in Munich with Joseph Grätz (1790), who recommended him as Bavarian court organist in 1801. Weber studied with him at Munich between 1798 and 1800 and under his guidance began the so-called Jugendmesse, and wrote his first opera, Der Macht der Liebe und des Weins, which was possibly destroyed in a fire in Kalcher's house. However, the Six Variations on an Original Theme op.2 were printed in June 1800, with a dedication to Kalcher as 'famous Munich piano teacher and composer'. Shortly before his death Kalcher was appointed court organist of the Lutheran parish at Munich. Contemporary accounts describe Kalcher's organ playing as academically sound, powerful and solid, not that of a virtuoso. Although his compositions include keyboard concertos, symphonies, songs and church music which, according to Lipowsky, were all performed with great success, his only published works seem to be 15 songs printed by Falter in 1800.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; GerberNL; LipowskyB
M.M. von Weber: Carl Maria von Weber (Leipzig, 1864–6, abridged 2/1912 by R. Pechel; Eng. trans., 1865/R)
F.W. Jähns: Carl Maria von Weber in seinen Werken (Berlin, 1871/R)
J. Veit: Der junge Carl Maria von Weber: Untersuchungen zum Einfluss Franz Danzis und Abbé Georg Joseph Voglers (Mainz, 1990)

JOHN WARRACK/JOACHIM VEIT

Kaldenbach [Caldenbach], Christoph (b Schwiebus, Silesia [now Siebodzin, Poland], 11 Aug 1613; d Tübingen, 16 July 1698). German composer, poet, writer, teacher and educationist. His earliest musical training included singing in the local church choir and probably instruction from an uncle, Georg Lindner, a composer with a local reputation. While he was still a boy his family was forced by war to move to Frankfurt an der Oder. Here he attended the Pädagogium and in 1629 entered the university. In 1631 he went to the University of Königsberg but soon left and became a music tutor at the estate of Georg Reimer at Schtejki, north-east of Memel (now Klaipėda). In 1633 he returned to Königsberg, where he resumed his university studies and tutored the sons of patrician families. He received a broad education and was skilled in several languages, including Latin, Greek, Hebrew and Polish. He thus was qualified to be appointed, in 1639, Konrektor and, in 1645, Prorektor of the Lateinschule in the Old Town of Königsberg. After receiving the master's degree in philosophy in 1647, he was made professor of Greek at the university. In 1655 he was called to Tübingen University as professor of eloquence, poetry and history. He was also 'Paedagogarcha' for the schools of Württemberg 'ob der Staig', i.e. for the territory south of Stuttgart. He wrote a number of vocal works for various local occasions such as weddings, funerals and political ceremonies. His influence in Tübingen was long felt, for he continued to teach there until he was 83. An anonymous portrait of him dated 1660 (reproduced in MGG1) is at Tübingen University.

Kaldenbach wrote a large amount of poetry, and dramas, academic orations, speeches for various private and public occasions, a manual for teaching rhetoric, and commentaries on various Latin authors. Among these works is a disputation, Dissertatio musica, exhibens analysin harmoniae Orlandi di Lasso, which he wrote in his capacity as chairman for the examination of a student, Elias Walther, who was the respondent. Much of his text is taken from the well-known analysis by Joachim Burmeister in Musica autoschediastikē (Rostock, 1601) describing the musical-rhetorical structure and figures in Lassus's motet In me transierunt. His music is very little known and cannot yet be evaluated. His various secular and sacred vocal compositions are much in the style of the arias of Heinrich Albert; the latter set some of his poems to music, and he himself included works by Albert in his Deutsche Sappho of 1651.

WORKS

OCCASIONAL

Der 23. Psalm, wedding anthem, 5vv, bc (Königsberg, 1645)
Omnia possideat . . . oder die Selige Ewigkeit (Selig Ewigkeit, Lohn), funeral ode, 5vv (Königsberg, 1656); extract ed. in EDM, 2nd ser., Ostpreussen und Danzig, i (1939)
Christliches Begräbnuss-Lied (Meiner Hoffnung grund steht fest), 5vv (Tübingen, 1657)
Ode (Tuque pulcher, tristiorem lachrymarum), 1v, vn, bc, suppl. to Panegyricus memoriae ac honori Thomae Lansii (Tübingen, 1658)
Ode germanica (Herr, ich lige gantz darnieder), 2vv, bc, suppl. to Joachimus Wibelius, aeternum convalescens, seu laudatio ejus posthuma (Tübingen, 1661)
Klag- und Trauer-Lieder (Die Zeit und ihre Macht vergeht; Also fleucht der Zeiten Drang), 9 March 1668, 2, 5vv, bc (n.p., n.d.)
Glückwündschungs-Lied (Der verwaisten Tugend Stul), 2vv, bc (Tübingen, 1672)
Werther Stul, gelehrte Zimmer, unsterblicher Nachruhm des . . . Herren Georg Fridrichs, 3 May 1686, 1v, vn, bc, suppl. to Virtutum heroicarum idea (Tübingen, 1689) [music as for Tuque pulcher, 1658]
Christliches Lied (In einem finstern Thale), 5vv (?Königsberg, 1646); Christliche Sterbens-Lust (Bis zur Grabes-Kammer), 5vv (?Königsberg, 1654); Preiss der Hülffe Gottes (Der Herr ist meine Macht), 8vv (Königsberg, 1654); Braut-Tantz (Die Jugend sucht einmal), 5vv (Königsberg, 1654), extract ed. in EDM, 2nd ser., Ostpreussen und Danzig, i (1939); Geistliches Sühn-Opfer (Herr kehre dich doch wieder zu uns), 10vv (Königsberg, 1654); Hymnus (Judica me Deus), 9vv (Königsberg, 1656): all lost, cited in EitnerQ

OTHER VOCAL

Deutsche Sappho, oder Musicalische Getichte, 23 secular, 7 sacred works, 1651[4]
Deutsche Sappho, oder Dreystimmige musicalische Getichte, 3vv (Stuttgart, 1687) [incl. 7 pieces from 1651 edn; many of the texts by Kaldenbach, previously pubd without music, 1668]

WRITINGS ON MUSIC

Dissertatio musica, exhibens analysin harmoniae Orlandi di Lasso, 5 voc. cui textus est: 'In me transierunt', juxta leges & regulas musicae poeticae institutam, praeside Christophoro Caldenbacchio, El. Prof. Respondente Elia Walthero (Tübingen, 1664)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (G. Reichert); WaltherML
G. Reichert: 'Martin Crusius und die Musik in Tübingen um 1590', AMw, x (1953), 185–212

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Kalevala. Finnish epic songs in trochaic tetrameters. See FINLAND, §II, 2.

Kalichstein, Joseph (b Tel-Aviv, 15 Jan 1946). Israeli pianist. He moved to the USA in 1962 to study at the Juilliard School of Music with Edward Steuermann and Ilona Kabos. In 1967 he made his New York recital début and won the Young Concert Artists Award; the following year he performed Beethoven's Piano Concerto no.4 in a nationally televised concert with Bernstein and the New York PO. After winning first prize in the Leventritt Competition (1969), he made his European début with Previn and the LSO in 1970. Since then he has maintained an active career as a recitalist and soloist, appearing with the Cleveland Orchestra, Chicago SO, Boston SO, Berlin PO, LSO and LPO and the Israel PO, and in Japan, Australia and Latin America. He has performed regularly with the violinist Jaime Laredo and the cellist Sharon Robinson since 1976, and in 1981 the three officially formed the Kalichstein-Laredo-Robinson Trio; together with the Guarneri Quartet they presented Brahms's complete works for piano and strings in New York in 1983 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. In 1992 the group gave the première of Pärt's Adagio for piano trio. Kalichstein specializes in the standard repertory of the 19th century, bringing to it creative interpretations that are sometimes lacking in fidelity to the score but are powerfully communicative and dazzling in their display of virtuoso technique.

JAMES WIERZBICKI/R

Kálik, Václav (b Opava, Silesia, 18 Oct 1891; d Prague, 18 Nov 1951). Czech composer and conductor. He studied history and art history at Prague University (1909–14) and composition with Vitězslav Novák (1911–13) and Suk (1924–6); in addition, he privately studied conducting. His studies took him to Germany and Italy, a bursary enabling him to stay in Rome (1926–7); some of his music, particularly that for orchestra, was based on his Italian experiences. In Czechoslovakia he devoted much energy to work with choirs: between 1911 and 1923 he directed the university choirs in Prague, the Prague Hlahol, the mixed choir of the Workers' Academy and the Southern Bohemian Teachers' Chorus, the last of which he toured with abroad. An honorary member of many other choirs, he became a member of the Czech Academy of Sciences and Art in 1946. His richly lyrical and expressive music found wide popularity, and his choral pieces were particularly well received. Technically, his style betrays the influences of Bach and the Italian Renaissance masters.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Jarní jitro [Spring Morning] (1, Kálik), 1933; Lásky div [The Miracle of Love] (1, J. Zeyer), 1943; Posvěcení mládí [The Consecration of Youth] (3, J. Mahen), 1946

Choral: Můj kraj [My Countryside], male vv, 1916; Návrat [Return], female vv, 1916; Její kraj [Her Countryside], female vv, 1917; Návrat do vlasti [Return to the Fatherland], male vv, 1917; Letní den [Summer Day], male vv, 1919; Zimní den [Winter Day], female vv, 1919; Jarní den [Spring Day], 1935; Z domoviny [From the Homeland], male vv, 1936; 3 české tance [3 Czech Dances], 1940; 6 českých tanců, 1940; Malé rekviem [Little Requiem], female vv, 1946; Zpěv noci osvobození [The Song of Liberation Night], 1946; Pražské obrazy [Prague Scenes], male vv, 1943–50; Srdce [The Heart], male vv, 1951

Inst: Pf Suite, 1914–15; Fantasy, orch, 1915; Sonata, vn, pf, 1919; Moře [The Sea], sym. poem, 1924; Preludium, orch, 1931; Venezia, orch, 1932; Sym. no.2, 1943

Solo vocal: Zlá láska [Evil Love], S, vn, pf, 1919; Mírová symfonie [A Sym. of Peace], S, orch, 1926–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS

J. Vratislavský: Václav Kálik (Ostrava, 1961)

JAN VRATISLAVSKÝ

Kalimantan. The part of Borneo belonging to the Republic of Indonesia. See INDONESIA, §VII, 1.

Kalina z Chotěřiny, Matouš. See COLLINUS, MATTHAEUS.

Kalindula. Musical genre named after a one-string chordophone and derived from the traditional heptatonic Bemba rhythms of the Luapula province of north-eastern Zambia; it first came to national prominence in the late 1970s. The conscious return to traditional idioms arose in part from the highly influential, 1972 visit to Zambia by Osibisa, but perhaps more in response to President Kaunda's plea for more indigenous music to challenge the pre-eminence of imported Zairean rumba and Western popular music.

The challenge was picked up by record companies (Teal, DB Studios and Zambia Music Parlour), producers (Khuswayo, Skinner, Musingilo and Mulenga), as well as individual musicians who produced a uniquely Zambian dance style noted for its up-tempo rhythm, brash guitar work and rapid-fire bass lines. By the early 1980s a number of tight four- to six-piece guitar bands such as Amayenge, Shalawambe, Julizya, Serenje and Masasu had refined the style and attracted the attention of the growing World Music market. By the mid-1980s, kalindula was widely regarded as the national dance style of Zambia.

Inspired by the global, but short-lived, appeal of kalindula, a second wave of Luapula stylists turned their attention to the new idiom and, in a curious process of re-indigenization, produced a new wave of robust, rural roots style of kalindula. Now often featuring dance ensembles and drawing more on original Bemba rhythms, the new stars (who quickly rose to national prominence) included Mashabe, Makishi, Majoza and the Bwaluka Founders. By the early 1990s, the kalindula craze had passed, as Zambia entered deep economic recession and reverted to external and most often pirated musical entertainment. Yet, along with the pioneering work of Alick Nkhata 40 years earlier, the kalindula of the 1980s remains the most authentic expression of Zambian musical identity.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Tsukada: 'Kalindula in Mukada: the Incorporation of Westernized Music into the Boys' Initiation Rites of the Luvale of Zambia', Tradition and its Future, ed., Y. Tokumaru and others (Osaka, 1991), 547–51

RONNIE GRAHAM

Kaliningrad (Ger. Königsberg). City in Russia. Until April 1945, as Königsberg, it was the main city of the German province of East Prussia; after World War II it was named Kaliningrad, becoming part of the USSR in 1946 and of Russia since 1991. The name Königsberg originally designated a monastic castle (1255) on the river Pregel, and from 1286 also the settlement that grew up under its protection, which developed as three towns (Altstadt, Löbenicht and Kneiphof), unified in 1724. In 1525 the monastic settlement became the site of a princely court, that of the margraves and subsequently (from 1603) electors of Brandenburg, until 1701, when Berlin became their capital.

Königsberg's remote geographical position did not prevent close cultural contact with the German Empire and other parts of Europe; the influences of the Netherlandish style of Lassus and Sweelinck, of the English lute song, of Italian monody and of the French air de cour are more apparent than in many less remote German towns and residences. Close musical connections naturally existed with Poland too. In the 18th century secular music flourished in Königsberg, and C.P.E. Bach and his contemporaries found an enlightened audience there. The philosophical revolution of the later 18th century was led by men born, educated or working in Königsberg: Kant, Hamann, Herder, and the writers on music J.F. Reichardt and E.T.A. Hoffmann.

Among the musical institutions of the city the three churches were the most consistently important. The cathedral already had a fine organ in the mid-15th century, and in 1587 a very large new one was installed; Heinrich Albert was organist from 1631 to 1651. The office of Kantor at the cathedral school was an esteemed position, held by such men as Johann Stobaeus and Günter Schwenkenbecher (1682–1714), as was that of the Altstadt church, held by Jonas Zornicht, Johann Weichmann, Conrad Matthaei and Georg Riedel.

The growth of the Königsberg Hofkapelle is closely connected with that of the large and skilled trumpet ensemble which was a prominent feature of the town's musical life around 1525. From about 1540 the office of Hofkapellmeister was permanently established; eminent among its holders were Johannes Eccard (1586–1608), Stobaeus (1627–46) and Johann Sebastiani (1661–83). Together with Albert, these figures constituted the 'Preussische Tonschule', devoting themselves chiefly to the lied, of which they composed numerous examples, generally in a serious vein. Among the resident princes, the 16th-century Margrave Albrecht was renowned as a patron and friend of musicians; this is demonstrated by his correspondence with Senfl and others, his collection of music and the Lutheran hymns he wrote. His successors Margrave Georg Friedrich (1578–86) and Elector Johann Sigismund (1611–19) had particularly magnificent court music at their disposal; the former brought his own orchestra from Ansbach, and the latter employed additional musicians from England.

Other important musicians employed by the Hofkapelle in the 16th century were Adrianus Petit Coclico (1547) and the trumpeters and composers Johann and Paul Kugelmann. In the 17th century the Kantors of the Altstadt church, Christoph Kaldenbach (from 1639) and Weichmann (1647–52), were important for the development of German song. Among musicians who visited Königsberg in the 16th century were the lutenists Valentin Bakfark and Matthäus Waissel, and, around 1600, the versatile Valentin Haussmann.

The Hofkapelle was disbanded in 1707, but in the course of the 17th century musical activity had become largely confined to such civic occasions as weddings, funerals and academic festivals; performances of dramatic allegories with words by Simon Dach and music by Albert – Cleomedes (1635) and Sorbuisa, oder Prussiarchus (1645) – are recorded. In the 18th century the musical life of the city was characterized by amateur concerts; in 1755 a theatre was built, although it did not have its own orchestra until 1793. Important figures of this period were the cathedral Kantor Schwenkenbecher and the Altstadt Kantor Riedel, who set to music the entire Gospel according to St Matthew, the Psalms of David and the book of Revelation.

In the 19th century Königsberg continued to maintain wide musical connections: the Kapellmeister F.E. Sobolewski corresponded with Schumann; Wagner worked at the theatre for a brief period in 1836–7; the university conferred an honorary doctorate on Liszt on 14 April 1842 (probably, however, recognizing him more as a virtuoso than as a composer); and Brahms visited the town in April 1880. Other visiting musicians were Zelter (1810), Joachim (1872), von Bülow (1890) and Busoni (1896). Otto Nicolai was born in the city in 1810. Musical societies flourished, including the Singverein (1818), the Liedertafel (1824) and the Philharmonische Gesellschaft (1838). A champion of 'New Music' in Königsberg was the writer, critic and teacher Louis Köhler (1849–86), whose pupils included Adolf Jensen and Hermann Goetz. Leading conductors of the opera were Dorn (1828–9), Sobolewski (1847–53) and Max Stägemann (1875–9).

In the 20th century the critic Erwin Kroll was active in Königsberg (1924–34) and attempted to 'convert the Brahms city . . . into a Pfitzner city' (see Kroll, p.221); the Band für Neue Tonkunst, founded on 10 February 1919 and later associated with Hermann Scherchen, also encouraged contemporary composers. Prominent conductors of the early part of the century were Max Brode (d 1917), Ernst Wendel and Paul Scheinpflug.

Königsberg University, founded by Albrecht in 1544 and later known as the Albertina, played an important part in the musical history of the city through its teaching of music and its use of music for academic ceremonies. In 1546 Thomas Horner edited a work on composition, De ratione componendi, for use in academic instruction, and at the beginning of the 19th century C.H. Saemann gave lectures on the history and theory of music. From 1922 musicology was taught.

Polyphonic music was first printed in Königsberg by Johann Daubmann in the mid-16th century; a century later Paschen Mense and Johann Reussner were the leading music printers. The most important library in the city was the Königliche und Universitätsbibliothek zu Königsberg in Preussen, which had the large music collection of F.A. Gotthold (d 1858), of which only a small portion remains.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Engel)

A. Mayer-Reinach: 'Zur Geschichte der Königsberger Hofkapelle in den Jahren 1578–1720', SIMG, vi (1904–5), 32–79

G. Küsel: Beiträge zur Geschichte der Stadt Königsberg (Königsberg, 1923)

H. Güttler: Königsbergs Musikkultur im 18. Jahrhundert (Königsberg, 1925)

R. Fuehrer: Die Gesangbücher der Stadt Königsberg (diss., U. of Königsberg, 1927)

E. Loge: Eine Messen- und Motettenhandschrift des Kantors Matthias Krüger aus der Musikbibliothek Herzog Albrechts von Preussen (Kassel, 1931)

M. Federmann: Musik und Musikpflege zur Zeit Herzog Albrechts: zur Geschichte der Königsberger Hofkapelle in den Jahren 1525–1578 (Kassel, 1932)

H.-P. Kosack: Geschichte der Laute und Lautenmusik in Preussen (Kassel, 1935)

L. Finscher: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte der Königsberger Hofkapelle', Musik des Ostens, i (1962), 165–89

M. Ruhnke: Beiträge zu einer Geschichte der deutschen Hofmusikkollegien im 16. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1963), 138–47

W. Schwarz: 'Von Musik und Musikern im deutschen Osten: nach unveröffentlichten Briefen an R. Schumann aus den Jahren 1834 bis 1854', Norddeutsche und nordeuropäische Musik: Kiel 1963, 120

F. Gause: Die Geschichte der Stadt Königsberg in Preussen (Cologne, 1965–71)

E. Kroll: Musikstadt Königsberg: Geschichte und Erinnerung (Freiburg, 1966)

M. Geck: Die Wiederentdeckung der Matthäuspassion im 19. Jahrhundert (Regensburg, 1967), 107–8
W. Braun: 'Mitteldeutsche Quellen der Musiksammlung Gotthold in Königsberg', Musik des Ostens, v (1969), 84–96
O. Besch: 'Erinnerung an das Königsberger Musikleben von 1900–1940', Jb des Albertus-Universität zu Königsberg, xxi (1971), 435–50
A. Schöne: 'Kürbishütte und Königsberg', Stadt – Schule – Universität – Buchwesen und deutsche Literatur im 17. Jahrhundert: Wolfenbüttel 1974 (Munich, 1976), 601–60
K. Garber: 'Auf den Spuren verschollener Königsberger Handschriften und Bücher', Altpreussische Geschlechterkunde (1993), 1–22
W. Braun: 'Plädoyer für eine Königsberger Kapellmusik (1623)', Kulturgeschichte Ostpreussens in der Frühen Neuzeit (forthcoming)

WERNER BRAUN

Kalinnikov, Vasily Sergeyevich (b Voina, Oryol district, 1/13 Jan 1866; d Yalta, 29 Dec/11 Jan 1901). Russian composer. The son of a police official, he belonged to an ecclesiastical family, and was therefore eligible to attend the seminary when the family moved to Oryol in 1879. His father, who played the guitar and sang in a local choir, encouraged his musical interests. He had taken violin lessons at Voina, and became director of the seminary choir at the age of 14. In 1884 he went to Moscow to enrol in the elementary classes at the conservatory, but he was unable to pay the fees and had to withdraw after only a few months. He then won a scholarship as a bassoon player at the Moscow Philharmonic Society Music School, where he studied with Il'yinsky and Blaramberg until 1892. During these years he lived in dire poverty, playing the violin, the bassoon and occasionally the timpani in theatre orchestras and finding employment as a copyist to eke out a meagre existence. He was much helped at this time, and later, by his sympathetic teacher and devoted friend S.N. Kruglikov. Tchaikovsky also thought highly of Kalinnikov and recommended him for the conductorship at the Malïy Theatre in 1892; in the following year he was appointed assistant conductor at the Italian Theatre. He also gave private lessons in music theory. In autumn 1893 his health, never robust and perhaps undermined by his privations as a student, broke down completely; he spent the rest of his life in the Crimea, depending mainly on his friends for financial support. In spite of his illness he composed regularly, and at the time of his death he had a small but enthusiastic following.

Kalinnikov made his name with his First Symphony. He sent the score to Kruglikov, the dedicatee, who was sufficiently impressed to submit it to leading Russian conductors. Rimsky-Korsakov, while admitting to finding in it evidence of real talent, maintained that it contained too many technical mistakes to make a performance worthwhile (it has been suggested that these 'mistakes' were in fact copyist's slips). However, Vinogradsky undertook to conduct the work at a Russian Musical Society concert in Kiev. It was a great success, and the second and third movements received an encore. Performances in Moscow, Vienna, Berlin and Paris followed, and it remains in the Russian repertory.

An admirer of Turgenev (also born in Oryol), Kalinnikov expressed a wish to emulate in musical terms the literary achievements of his fellow countryman, including the evocation of Russian country life and scenery. However, he was firmly opposed to descriptive music which follows a complex programme in every detail, and sought rather to conjure up the atmosphere of his native land with themes whose melodic contours and rhythmic patterns are characteristic of folksong, and by carefully planned textural effects and colourful orchestration. This attitude to composition finds its fullest expression in his First Symphony. This work, as in the more extended but less successful Second Symphony, shows a mature handling of the polyphonic techniques that were laboriously practised in a series of fugues written in the late 1880s. The skilful and lengthy development section of the first movement, mostly based on contrapuntally conceived melodic variation, includes a strictly ordered fugato passage. The influence of Borodin, apparent in the shape of the themes, is further suggested by several unexpected modulations and unusual key relationships. Another instance of Borodin's influence is seen in the string tremolandos and chromatically inflected melody at the beginning of Kedr i pal'ma ('The Cedar and the Palm'), which recalls In the Steppes of Central Asia. The drooping melodic lines are at times also strongly reminiscent of Tchaikovsky. However, in his best works – the two symphonies, The Cedar and the Palm, the incidental music to Tsar Boris – the handling of thematic material is entirely individual and results in an unmistakably personal style. Although several of his pieces would repay a hearing, it is on his symphonies alone (particularly the first) that Kalinnikov's slender reputation rests. In his own country his place in musical history is secure. Indeed, Asaf'yev considered that, had he lived out a normal life span, he might have been numbered in the first rank of Russian composers.

Kalinnikov's brother Viktor (1870–1927) was a composer, chiefly of choral music, and a professor at the Philharmonic School of Moscow.

WORKS

Edition Vasily Sergeyevich Kalinnikov: Sobraniye sochineniy [Collected works], ed. I. Iordan and G. Kirkor (Moscow 1972–80), 8 vols.

printed works published in Moscow

STAGE

Operetta, 1887, lost
Knyazhna Mara, ili Smert' Kashcheya [Princess Mara, or Kashchey's Death] (projected op, K.M. Fofanov), *c*1894, lib and sketch of 89 bars, RUS-Mcm
Tsar Boris (incid music, A.K. Tolstoy), 1898, Moscow, Bol'shoy, 1 Feb 1899, score, ov., 4 entr'actes, arr. pf 4 hands (1901)
V 1812 godu [In 1812] (op, S.I. Mamontov), 1899–1900, inc., Mcm, excerpts (1901)

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Fugue, d, ?1889, Mcm; Fugue, d, ?1889, orch pts Mcm; Nimfï [The Nymphs], sym. picture after I.S. Turgenev, ed. (1954); Serenade, str, 1891, ed. (1950), arr. pf 4 hands (1952); Suite, 1891–2, score and arr. pf 4 hands (1901); Bïlina [Epic Poem], ov., ?1892, ed. (1951), arr. pf 4 hands (1952); Ov., d, 1894, arr. pf 4 hands, Mcm; Sym. no.1, g, 1894–5 (1900); Sym. no.2, A, 1895–7 (1901); Intermezzo no.1, f♯, 1896 (1901): Intermezzo no.2, G, 1897 (1901); Kedr i pal'ma [The Cedar and the Palm], sym. picture after H. Heine, trans. Maykov, 1897–8 (1901)
Pf: Grust' [Sadness], begun 1884, lost; Scherzo, F, 1888–9, Mcm; Grustnaya pesenka [Chanson triste], g, ?1892–3 (1901) [?rev. of Grust']; Russkoye intermetstso, f, 1894, ed. V. Kiselyov in V. Kalinnikov: p'yesï dlya fortepiano (Moscow, 1950); Minuet, E, ?1894 (1901); Waltz, A, 1894, MS in private Gnesin collection; Nocturne, f♯, 1894 (1901); Elegy, b♭, 1894 (1901); Moderato, e♭, ed. V. Kiselyov in V. Kalinnikov: p'yesï dlya fortepiano (Moscow, 1950); Polonaise, B♭, pf 4 hands, Mcm [on a theme from Sym. no.1]; pieces for str qt, lost

VOCAL

For 1v, pf: Kogda zhizn' gnetut i stradan'ya, i muki [When Life is Weighed Down with Suffering and Torment] (Polivanov), 1887 (1901); Na chudnoye plechiko miloy [On your Lovely Little Shoulder Dear] (Heine, trans. V.A. Fyodorov), 1887 (1901); Na starom kurgane [On the Old Burial Mound] (I.S. Nikitin), 1887 (1901); Nam zvyozdï krotkiye siyali [The Gentle Stars Shone Down on Us] (A.N. Pleshcheyev), 1894 (1900); Zvyozdï yasnïye [Bright Stars] (K.M. Fofanov), 1894 (1901); Bïl starïy korol' [There Was an Old King] (Heine, trans. Pleshcheyev), 1894 (1901); Molitva [Prayer] (Pleshcheyev), 1900 (1900); Kolokola [Bells], 1900 (1901); Ne sprashivay, zachem unïloy dumoy [Do not Ask why I Smile in Thought] (Pushkin) (1901); Ya li tebya, moya radost' [I am Yours, my Darling] (Heine, trans. Fyodorov), Mcm; Ya zhelal bï svoi pesni sdelat' chudnïmi tsvetami [I would Like to Make my Songs into Wonderful Flowers] (Heine, trans. Fyodorov), Mcm; Prezent na l-oye yanvarya 1900 goda [A Present for 1 January 1900], Mcm; 16 musical letters, 1892–9, Mcm

Other: Kheruvimskaya [Cherubic Hymn] nos.1–2, chorus, 1885–6, lost; Malen'kiy khorik [Little Chorus], chorus, 1887, lost; Gornïye vershinï [The Mountain Tops] (M.Yu. Lermontov), chorus, 1887, lost; Gospodi, Gospodi nash' [Lord, our Lord], 4vv, ?1889, Mcm; Christe eleison, 4vv, ?1889, Mcm; Ioann Damaskin (cant., Tolstoy), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1890, lost, pf arr. in Mcm; Nad morem krasavitsa deva sidit [A Beautiful Girl Sits on the Sea] (Lermontov), female vv, orch, 1894 (1901); Pridi ko mne [Come to Me] (A.V. Kol'tsov), S, A, B, pf, Mcm; Torzhestvo Lilliputa [The Triumph of Lilliput], chorus, pf, Mcm

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (G. Waldmann)

N.D. Kashkin: 'Romansï Kalinnikova' [Kalinnikov's songs], Moskovskiye vedomosti (16/29 Sept 1900)

N.D. Kashkin: 'Iz vospominaniy o V.S. Kalinnikove' [From reminiscences of Kalinnikov], RMG, viii/51–2 (1901), 1325–6

N. Kochetov: Obituary, Moskovskiy listok (1/14 Jan 1901)

Yu.V. Kurdyumov: 'Tematicheskiy analiz pervoy simfonii (g-moll) V. Kalinnikova' [Thematic analysis of Kalinnikov's First Symphony], RMG, viii/5 (1901), 135–43

I. Lipayev: 'Pamyati V.S. Kalinnikova' [In memory of Kalinnikov], RMG, viii/1 (1901), 5–8

I. Lipayev: 'Pamyati Kalinnikova', RMG, viii/3 (1901), 81–2

N.D. Kashkin: Ocherk istorii russkoy muzïki [A study of Russian music history] (Moscow, 1908), 189–90

B. Asaf'yev: Russkaya muzïka ot nachala XIX stoletiya [Russian music from the beginning of the 19th century] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1930, rev. 2/1968 by E.M. Orlova as Russkaya muzïka: XIX i nachala XX veka [Russian music: the 19th and early 20th centuries]; Eng. trans., 1953)

V. Paskhalov: Vasiliy Sergeyevich Kalinnikov: zhizn' i tvorchestvo [Life and works] (Moscow, 1938, 2/1951)

V. Paskhalov: 'O tvorchestve V.S. Kalinnikova' [The work of Kalinnikov], SovM (1941), no.1, pp.66–70

I.I. Martïnov: Pervaya simfoniya Kalinnikova: poyasneniya [Kalinnikov's First Symphony: an explanation] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950, 2/1952)

I. Bėlza: 'Novïye izdaniya proizvedeniy V.S. Kalinnikova' [New editions of Kalinnikov's works], SovM (1951), no.1, pp.95–6

M. Gnesin: 'Rukopis' Vasiliya Sergeyevicha Kalinnikova' [A Kalinnikov manuscript], SovM (1951), no.10, pp.84–5

A. Grigor'yev: 'V.S. Kalinnikov: k 50-letiyu so dnya smerti' [On the 50th anniversary of his death], SovM (1951), no.1, pp.65–9

Yu. Keldïsh: Istoriya russkoy muzïki [History of Russian music], iii (Moscow, 1954), 213–26

V. Fradkin: 'Kak sozdavalas' pervaya simfoniya Kalinnikova' [How Kalinnikov's First Symphony was composed], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1958), no.13, p.19 only

V.A. Kiselyov, ed.: Vasiliy Kalinnikov: pis'ma, dokumentï, materialï [Letters, documents, materials] (Moscow, 1959) [incl. list of works and bibliography]

V. Shevelyova: Vasiliy Sergeyevich Kalinnikov: k 60-letiyu so dnya smerti russkogo kompozitora: kratkiy rekomendatel'nïy ukazatel' [On the 60th anniversary of the death of a Russian composer: a short recommendatory index] (Oryol, 1960)

A.V. Nyurnberg: Vasiliy Sergeyevich Kalinnikov: kratkiy ocherk zhizni i tvorchestva [Kalinnikov: a short essay on his life and works] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1964)

G. Seaman: 'V.S. Kalinnikov (1866–1900)', MR, xxviii (1967), 289–99

G.A. Pozhidayev: 'Vasiliy Kalinnikov: novïye materialï k biografii russkogo muzykanta' [Kalinnikov: new biographical material], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1982), no.3, pp.16–17

G.A. Pozhidayev: Vasiliy Kalinnikov: simfoniya zhizni v 4-kh chastyakh [Kalinnikov: the symphony of his life in four movements] (Moscow, 1993)

JENNIFER SPENCER

Kalinnikov, Viktor Sergeyevich (b Voinï, Mtsensk district, 1870; d Saltïkovka, Moscow province, 23 Feb 1927). Russian composer and conductor. The brother of Vasily Sergeyevich Kalinnikov. In 1896 he completed his studies at the College for Music and Drama at the Moscow Philharmonic Society in the composition and theory class (under Pavel Blaramberg, Aleksandr Il'yinsky and Semyon Kruglikov and the oboe class (under Ye. Gurevich). On graduation from the college he ran the orchestral class there, becoming a teacher and later a professor of music theory; he ran the oboe class for a year from 1897. From 1899 to 1901 he was head of the music department and conductor at the Moscow Arts Theatre. He was also a teacher at the Moscow Synodal School (1897–1923, from 1917 known as the Choral Academy), and from 1922 until the end of his life he was a professor at the Moscow Conservatory. He was involved in the work of the ethnographic commission attached to the conservatory, conducted choral concerts, directed the student orchestra, and ran classes in choral singing at the junior teaching institutions of Moscow. He was one of the founders of the People's Conservatory of Moscow (1906). In Kalinnikov's small output choral works occupy a key place: they comprise 15 a cappella choruses set to the words of Russian poets, choral arrangements of Russian folksongs for two- and four-part choir, and children's songs with piano accompaniment and church music. He also made choral transcriptions of romances by Russian composers (Glinka, Borodin, Musorgsky, Arensky and others) and arrangements for choir of revolutionary songs (including the Marseillaise and the Internationale). Kalinnikov's works entered the repertories of Russia's leading choruses.

WORKS
(selective list)

Kontsertnaya uvertyura [Concert Ov.], orch, 1894, unpubd; 2 Miniatures, str qt, 1895, unpubd; Detskiye pesni [Children's Songs], 1v, pf; many choral arrs. of Russian folksongs incl.: Tï vzoydi, solntse krasnoye [Rise Up, Rise Up, Fair Sun]; U vorot, vorot batyushkinïkh [At the Gate, the Priest's Gate]; Zaigray, moya volïnka [Start up, My Bagpipes]; Vniz po matushke, po Volge [Downstream Along Mother Volga]; Ėy ukhnem! [The Song of the Volga Boatmen]; 15 a cappella choruses (Russ. poets)

Principal publishers: Jürgenson, Gosizdat (MuzSektor), Muzgiz, Muzïka

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Kalinnikov: 'O khorovom penii' [On choral singing], Vestnik iskusstv (1922), no.2

S.V. Yevseyev: 'V.S. Kalinnikov: nekrolog', Muzïkal'noye obrazovaniye (1927), no.3, pp.126–8

A. Sergeyev: 'Master khorovoy kul'turï' [A master of the choral tradition], SovM (1950), no.5, p.95 only

M. Ivakin: 'Obrabotki V.S. Kalinnikova (1870–1927)' [The arrangements of V.S. Kalinnikov], in Russkaya khorovaya literatura [Russian choral literature] (Moscow, 1965), 132–8

K. Dmitrevskaya: 'Viktor Kalinnikov: k 100-letiyu so dnya rozhdeniya' [Kalinnikov: for the 100th anniversary of his birth], Khorovoye iskusstvo, ed. K. Ol'khov, ii (Leningrad, 1971), 53–67

IOSIF GENRIKHOVICH RAYSKIN

Kalisch, Paul (b Berlin, 6 Nov 1855; d St Lorenz am Modensee, 27 Jan 1946). German tenor. He studied in Italy with Leoni and the younger Lamperti, and in 1879 made his début in Rome (under the name of Paolo Alberti) as Edgardo. As Alberti he created Sandro in Giulio Litta's Il violino di Cremona at La Scala (1882), then (under his own name) sang Raoul and the Duke of Mantua at Munich (1883). He was engaged at the Berlin Hofoper from 1884 to 1887, and made his Metropolitan début in the first New York performance of the Paris version of Tannhäuser (1889). At the Metropolitan he appeared frequently with his wife, the soprano Lilli Lehmann. With her he sang Die Walküre, Fidelio, La Juive, Norma and Il trovatore, but his lyric voice and refined style were perhaps better suited to Don Ottavio or to Nureddin, which he sang at the American première of Cornelius's Der Barbier von Bagdad (1890).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.E. Krehbiel: Chapters of Opera (New York, 1908)
I. Kolodin: The Story of the Metropolitan Opera 1883–1950 (New York, 1951)

ELIZABETH FORBES

Kalish, Gilbert (b Brooklyn, NY, 2 July 1935). American pianist and teacher. A graduate from Columbia University (1956–8), he studied with Leonard Shure, Julius Hereford and Isabella Vengerova. In 1962 he gave his New York début (Carnegie Recital Hall, programming Bach and Schoenberg), and appeared for the first time in Europe (Wigmore Hall, London, playing Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin). A founder-member of the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble (active in New York during the 1960s and 70s), he was appointed pianist of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players in 1969, which position he still held in 2000. Artist-in-residence at Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey (1965–7), and Swarthmore College, Pennsylvania (1966–72), Kalish was for many years an influential faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood (1968–97, chairman 1985–97). He has also appeared at the Banff Center and Steans Institute, Ravinia. In 1970 he was appointed professor at SUNY, Stony Brook, where he later become head of performing studies. With a discography of around 100 recordings (ranging from landmark Haydn sonatas to reference versions of Ives, Bartók, Carter and Crumb), Kalish is an admired modernist. His 30-year partnership with the mezzo-soprano Jan DeGaetani (with whom he recorded Ives songs), and his more recent collaboration with the soprano Dawn Upshaw both drew particular critical acclaim. In 1995 the University of Chicago presented him with the Paul Fromm Award for distinguished service to the music of our time.

ATEŞ ORGA

Kalistratov, Valery Yur'yevich (b Beloretsk, Bashkir ASSR [now Bashkortostan], 7 June 1942). Bashkir composer. He completed his studies at the Central School of Music in Moscow, and graduated from the choral conducting class of Boris Tevlin (1970) and the composition class of Vladimir Fere and Al'bert Leman (1974) at the Moscow Conservatory. He gained recognition comparatively early on owing to his unique, rhythmic and harmonically colourful choral arrangements of Russian folk music, in particular Tanya-Tanyusha (1970) and the wedding lament Ya ne znala, ne vedala ('I did not know, I did not understand'). He directed the chorus of the Central House of Art Workers (1967–82), the Pyatnitsky Russian Folk Choir (1991–2) and became conductor of the Moscow Male-Voice Chamber Choir in 1994.

The dual role, that of composer and performer, has concentrated Kalistratov's compositional activities; principally, his work ranges from song to oratorio, and from choral concertos to arrangements of traditional romances. A number of his works display a Russian characteristic: a combination of juxtaposing choral timbres and unusual means of execution (Sibirskie pesni ('Siberian songs'), for example, includes a part for a solo folksinger).

Certain works by Kalistratov are notable for their monumental and fresco-like writing, such as the oratorios Sten'ka Razin and Zolotïye vorota ('Golden Gates'), which have both been recorded. Here the choral writing is amplified by percussive and sonorous effects. However, the composer is at his most successful in miniature forms, in short lyrical pieces rather than in large-scale compositions demanding symphonic development. As part of the composer's widening interests in spiritual music, Kalistratov wrote a number of chants on Eastern Orthodox canonical texts during the 1990s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orat: Sten'ka Razin (1, A.S. Pushkin, V.M. Shukshin, folklore), 1v, nar, chorus, 1977; Zolotïye vorota [Golden Gates] (2, Kalistratov, after Laurentian Chronicle, folklore), vv, B-nar, chorus, 1978; Yaroslavna (5, A. Prokof'yev, S. Ostrovoy, The Lay of Igor's Campaign (Russ. 12th century), folklore), female v, nar, chorus, orch, 1980; Kulikovskaya bitva [The Battle of Kulikovo Field] (8, B. Dubrovin), vv, nar, mixed chorus, children's chorus, 1981; Plach zemli [Lament of the Earth] (7, Russ. spiritual verses), vv, nar, chorus, 1994; Svyatoy Stepan [St Stephen] (3, Bible), vv, male chorus, vc, org, 1996

Vocal conc.: Lebyodushka [The Swan] (3, trad.), chorus, fl, ob, bn, vc, db, 1975; Russkiy kontsert [Russian Conc.] (6, folklore), chorus, 1977; Sibirskiye pesni [Siberian Songs], 1v, chorus, ob, 1981–4 [from folksongs]; Preobrazheniye [Transfiguration] (7, folklore, Bible: New Testament, historical chronicles and Russian Orthodox prayers), Tr, folksinger, male chorus, 1990; Dnes' musikiya [Music this Day], vv, chorus, 1992 [transcr. of 17th- and 18th-century Russ. chants]; Sentimental'nïy salon [Sentimental Salon] (Old Russ. romances), vv, chorus, vn, vc, pf, 1995

Other vocal: 3 svadebnïye pesni [3 Wedding Songs], chorus, 1972 [from folksongs]; Vokal'nïy triptikh [Vocal Triptych] (M. Tsvetayeva), 1v, pf, 1972; Ya ne znala, ne vedala [I did not know, I did not understand], chorus, 1975 [version of folksong]; Prelyudiya i Passakal'ya [Prelude and Passacaglia], girls' chorus, org, 1976

Inst: Conc., va, orch, 1974; 3 p'yesï [3 Pieces], vc, pf, 1978 [based on motifs from Russ. folk melodies]; Kartinï russkikh skazok [Pictures of Russ. Fairy Tales], pf, 1982

Principal publishers: Muzïka, Sovetskiy kompozitor (Moscow)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Sinetskaya: 'Yaroslavnïy golos slïshitsya' [The voice of Yaroslavna is heard], Sovetskaya kul'tura (17 July 1984) [review of the oratorio Yaroslavna]
A. Tevosian: 'Valeriy Kalistratov', Kompozitorï Moskvï, iii (Moscow, 1988), 83–104
A. Tevosian: 'Vziray s prilezhaniem . . .' [Gaze with application . . .], MAk, no.4 (1994), 16–22 [interview]

YURY IVANOVICH PAISOV

Kalitzke, Johannes (b Cologne, 12 Feb 1959). German composer and conductor. He studied at the Cologne Musikhochschule (1978–95), where his teachers included Aloys Kontarsky (piano), Wolfgang von der Nahmer (conducting) and York Höller (composition), with Globokar (1982–4) at IRCAM and with Hans Ulrich Humpert. He has served as Kapellmeister at the theatre in Gelsenkirchen (from 1984), chief conductor and director of the Forum für Neue Musik (from 1986) and artistic director of the ensemble Musikfabrik NRW (Nord-Rhein Westphalen, 1990–97). He has also appeared as guest conductor with European radio orchestras and contemporary music ensembles. His honours include first prize at the Ensemblia competition, Mönchengladbach (1981), the Johann Wenzel Stamitz prize (1986), the Bernd Alois Zimmermann prize (1990) and commissions from the Donaueschinger Musiktage and opera houses in Wiesbaden and Kiel.

Kalitzke's music, frequently inspired by words and pictures, has been strongly influenced by electronic sound manipulation. His self-imposed limitations on material (some works are based on only a few notes) creates a high degree of coherence in his compositions. Explosive force generating from a single focal point often serves to integrate diverse facets of sound, causing both compression and extension to occur within each structural layer. Many of his compositions address questions arising from contemporary experience or tragedies stemming from what he has described as the 'universal condition of dualism in mankind'. The paradox of coexisting contradictions is continually revisited and reformulated in his music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Bericht über den Tod des Musikers Jack Tiergarten (music theatre, T. Brasch), 1990–91, Wiesbaden, 1992; Molière (Die Henker der Komödianten) (op, M. Bulgakow), 1995

Inst: Szenische Verwandlung, vc, pf, 1978–94; Spiegelbild, 2 pf, 1979; De profundis, chbr ens, 1980–86; Berceuse intégrale pour Hieronymus Bosch, orch, tape, 1982–3; Macchina d'autunno, pf, tape, 1982; Rotations-Etüde, 3 perc, tape, 1985–6; Trio infernal, va, vc, db, 1985; Salto-Trapez-Ikarus, 13 insts, 1990; Hände im Spiegel, pf conc., 1992–3; Chasse royale, orch 1995; Crucifications, 4 orch, 1997–8

Vocal: Die Hundertjahrfeier der Nacht (H. Heine, G. Trakl and others), 1v, pf, 1986; Jardins paradoxaux (various authors), A, T, 5 inst ens, tape, 1986; Das Labyrinth der Lieder (various authors), vocal qt, orch, cptr, 1987; Tübingen, Jänner (P. Celan), spkr, b fl, vc, 1988; Nachtschleife (J.L. Borges and others), vocal sextet, 1989; Die Rückseite der Tage (various authors), S, orch, tape, 1994; Circus Frenzy (various authors), S, B-Bar, orch, 1995

Principal publisher: Edition Gravis

Principal recording companies: Wergo, CPO, col legno, Koch, Sony

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Mauró: Interview, Oper und Konzert, xxxii/1 (1994), 55

J. Häusler: 'Musik der Integration: Johannes Kalitzke', Spiegel der Neuen Musik, Donaueschingen (Kassel, 1996), 402–4

FRIEDRICH SPANGEMACHER

Kalivoda, Jan Křtitel Václav. See KALLIWODA, JOHANN WENZEL.

Kalkant (Ger.; Fr. souffleur). An accessory ORGAN STOP used for communicating with the bellows-blower.

Kalkbrenner, Frédéric [Friedrich Wilhelm Michael] (b early Nov 1785; d Enghien-les-Bains, 10 June 1849). French pianist, teacher and composer of German extraction. He was born while his parents were en route from Kassel to Berlin. He presumably received his early musical education from his father, Christian Kalkbrenner, but the most important part of his training took place at the Paris Conservatoire, which he attended from 1799 to 1801, studying the piano with Nicodami and Louis Adam and harmony with Catel. In 1801 he won premiers prix in both piano and harmony. From 1803 to 1804 he visited Vienna, where he received guidance from Haydn and had the opportunity of hearing and making the acquaintance of Clementi. He met Clementi's pupil A. Klengel, with whom he performed his Concerto for two pianos, a work he revived (according to Fétis) for a performance in Paris with Hiller in 1831. On his journey home, he gave public performances at Munich, Stuttgart and Frankfurt, making an excellent impression with his playing. Yet on returning to Paris he does not seem to have been initially very active as a pianist, as his name hardly ever appeared on concert programmes between 1805 and 1814; however, his first works were published in Paris by Sieber. One of his piano concertos, although played in a public concert by pupils of the Paris Conservatoire on 1 June 1806, was not among his published works.

At the end of 1814 he decided to move to England, where he remained for ten years; there he won the reputation which placed him in the front rank of European pianists. He stayed first for a few weeks in Bath, where in January 1815 he gave four successful concerts. He then took up residence in London, where his rise to fame was rapid. Camille Pleyel, in a letter to his parents from London on 3 April 1815, wrote: 'Kalkbrenner is in great favour here, even eclipsing Cramer'. Kalkbrenner now became extremely active as a pianist, teacher and composer, and amassed a considerable fortune.

The year 1823 marked the starting-point of his great international career. On 5 May he performed his First Piano Concerto op.61 in the Argyll Rooms; he also went to Germany with the harpist Dizi, and the two artists enjoyed spectacular successes in Berlin and Vienna. Shortly after his return to London in the spring of 1824, Kalkbrenner embarked on a tour of Ireland and Scotland; he played at a festival in Edinburgh before an audience of more than 800. At the end of 1824 he finally settled in Paris. On his return there he joined the piano manufacturing firm of Pleyel in a largely financial capacity which proved lasting and rewarding: he was an excellent businessman as well as artist. Shortly afterwards he married Marie d'Estaing, a general's daughter. They had a son, Arthur (1828–69), who also became a pianist and composer but without attaining his father's celebrity.

The decade from 1825 to 1835 was the highpoint in Kalkbrenner's career. As a performer, he was then at the peak of his ability and popularity (see illustration). He not only reigned supreme in Paris, which had become a great centre for piano playing, but had won renown all over Europe. Official recognition came in the form of several honours and awards including the Légion d'Honneur (1828), the Order of the Red Eagle of Prussia (1833) and the Order of Leopold of Belgium (1836). In 1831 Kalkbrenner published his Méthode pour apprendre le piano-forte à l'aide du guide-mains op.108. In the same year he started a further training course for 'young teachers'. When Chopin came to him after his arrival in Paris in November 1831, Kalkbrenner proposed that he should join this course which had just begun. Chopin, who had a high regard for Kalkbrenner but was already aware of the measure of his own talent, hesitated and finally declined; but the two artists remained on good terms, and Chopin dedicated his Concerto in E minor op.11 to him. Kalkbrenner played an active part in arranging Chopin's first concert in Paris, which took place in the Salons Pleyel on 26 February 1832.

Frédéric Kalkbrenner: lithograph by Pierre Roch Vigneron

The years 1835 to 1836 marked the beginning of Kalkbrenner's decline as a performer. A new generation of great pianists – Chopin, Liszt and Thalberg among them – was transforming the public's taste and demands. Moreover, Kalkbrenner's health was failing: he suffered from gout and nervous disorders. After 1839 he virtually ceased to perform in public although he remained active as a teacher and composer, continuing right up to his death (during a cholera epidemic).

Kalkbrenner undoubtedly had an overweening fondness for honours and a well-developed sense of his own superiority; he also had a mercenary streak to his nature. On the other hand, he was cultured, sociable and amiable. He was one of the first performers to achieve an independent international career and, for at least a decade, enjoyed unprecedented success. His playing was outstanding for its masterly clarity and beauty of tone. He embodied a classical ideal, despite his attraction to brilliance and his pandering to contemporary taste. His public performances were confined almost exclusively to his own works, as was customary at that time.

As a teacher he left a lasting influence. The hand-guide he invented consisted of an adjustable horizontal rail, parallel to the keyboard, on which the forearm rested. Its purpose was to rid the playing of any arm action and develop the independence of the fingers, the basic principle of Kalkbrenner's technique. The hand-guide is not essential to the use of his Méthode op.108 which contains a vast amount of good advice and excellent exercises, some of which are still included in modern teaching manuals. Kalkbrenner's most notable pupils were Mme Pleyel, George Osborne and Camille Stamaty. The latter two did a great deal to publicize his Méthode; Stamaty used it, hand-guide included, in teaching the young Saint-Saëns.

A prolific and varied composer, Kalkbrenner concentrated mainly on the piano. He always made concessions to virtuosity, even in his most 'serious' works (sonatas, chamber music). His style, which at first was similar to that of Clementi, Cramer and Dussek, developed rapidly after 1820 along lines that brought him closer to Hummel and Field; but he went further than these two from a technical point of view, especially in the use of the whole range of the keyboard and of octaves, particularly in the left hand. His work sometimes foreshadows Chopin, who later influenced him somewhat, but it shows less lyricism and a greater propensity for outward, dramatic effects. Although not remarkable for its originality, his musical thinking is always carefully and clearly developed and, especially after 1820, concise. His pianistic writing prefigures that of Saint-Saëns in its paucity of counterpoint, its abundance of traditional rhetorical formulae and its use of ornamentation and virtuoso figuration in an easily recognizable melodic framework.

WORKS

published in Paris, London and Leipzig unless otherwise stated

ORCHESTRAL

Concerto, C, 2 pf, orch, op.125 (Paris and Leipzig, 1835)

4 concs., pf, orch: d, op.61 (Paris, London and Bonn, 1823), e, op.80 [86] (1826), a, op.107 (1829), A♭, op.125 [127] (1835)

Other works, pf, orch: Grand rondeau 'Gage d'amitié', op.66 (Paris, London and Berlin, 1823); Grand rondeau brillant 'Les charmes de Berlin', op.70 (Berlin, 1824); Fantasia and Grand Variations, on 'My lodging is on the cold ground', op.70 [72] (1824); Variations brillantes, on Rossini's 'Di tanti palpiti', op.83 (1826); Variations, on 'God Save the King', op.99 (1828); Adagio e allegro di bravura, op.100 [102] (1828); Introduction et rondeau brillant, on 'Frère Jacques', op.101 (1828); Fantaisie 'Le rêve', op.113 (1833); Grand rondeau brillant 'Les charmes de Carlsbad', op.174 (1845)

CHAMBER

Septet, E♭, pf, 2 hn, str qt, op.15 (Paris and Bonn, 1814); Septet, A, pf, ob, cl, hn, bn, vc, db, op.132 (1835); Sextet, G, pf, str qt, db, op.58 (Paris, London and Bonn, 1821); Sextet, f, pf, 2 hn, bn, vc, db, op.135 (Paris and Leipzig, 1838)

Pf Qnt, C, op.30 (1817); Qnt, a, pf, cl, hn, vc, db, op.81 (1826); 2 pf qts: D, op.2 (Paris, 1808), e, op.176 (Paris, London and Berlin, 1845); 5 pf trios: e, op.7 (Paris and Bonn, 1810), A♭, op.14 (Paris and Bonn, 1814), B♭, op.26 (1817), D, op.84 [85] (1827), A♭, op.149 (Paris and Leipzig, 1841)

Vn, pf: Sonata, E♭, op.22 [27] (1816); Duo, b, op.44 [49] (Paris, London and Vienna, 1821); Grand duo, B♭, op.97 (Paris and Leipzig, 1828), collab. C.P. Lafont; Duo, on an Algerian theme, D, op.134 (Paris and Leipzig, 1835), collab. A.J. Artôt; various duos based on opera themes

Fl, pf: Sonata, B♭, op.39 (1818), vc ad lib; Grande valse, A, op.63 (1823); Nocturne, G, op.84 [86] (1827)

Other: Duo, d, vc, pf, op.11 (Paris, 1812); Grand duo, F, hp, pf, op.82 (Paris, 1827), collab. F.J. Dizi; Nocturne, f, hn, pf, op.93 [95] (1828); various shorter pieces

PIANO DUETS

For 2 pf: Grand duo, D, op.128 (1835)

For pf 4 hands: Sonata, C, op.3 (Paris, 1809); Grand Sonata, F, op.76 [79] (1826); variations, marches, waltzes etc

PIANO SOLO

13 Sonatas: f, C, G, op.1 (Paris, 1807); g, C, a, op.4 (Paris, 1809); g, op.13 (Paris, 1813); F, op.28 (1816); A, op.35 (1817); A♭, op.42 (1818); a, op.48 (1820); F, op.56 (1821); A♭, op.177 (1845)

Essais sur différents caractères [6 rondeaux], op.34 (1817); Elégie harmonique 'Les regrets', op.36 (1817); Grande fantaisie 'Effusio musica', op.68 (1823); Caprice, b, op.104 (1830); Scène dramatique 'Le fou', op.136 (1837)

*c*80 fantasias, variation sets and rondeaux on popular songs, romances, opera themes etc

Airs variés, romances, pensées fugitives, rondeaux, waltzes, other fantasias etc

Didactic: 24 études dans tous les tons, ded. Clementi, op.20 (Paris and London, 1816); 24 préludes dans tous les tons, op.88 (1827); Méthode pour apprendre le piano-forte à l'aide du guide-mains, op.108 (1831); 12 études préparatoires, op.126 (1835); 25 grandes études de style et de perfectionnement, op.143 (1839); 12 études progressives, op.161 (Paris, London and Mainz, 1843); Ecole du pianiste: 20 études faciles et progressives, op.169 (1843); 3 études en forme de toccata, op.182 (1847); Traité d'harmonie du pianiste, op.185 [190] (Paris and Leipzig, 1849); various individual études

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Memoir of Mr. Frederick Kalkbrenner', Quarterly Musical Magazine and Review, vi (1824), 499–513

L. Boivin: 'Kalkbrenner', Le biographe universel, ii/4 (1842), 254–75

F.J. Fétis: 'Notice biographique sur Kalkbrenner: analyse de son style', Oeuvres choisies de F. Kalkbrenner, Bibliothèque classique des pianistes, xv (Paris, *c*1860), 3–5

Countess of Bassanville [Anaïs Lebrun]: 'Le salon de Kalkbrenner', Les salons d'autrefois, iii (Paris, 1866), 216–99

A.F. Marmontel: Les pianistes célèbres: silhouettes et médallions (Paris,1878, 2/1887), 97–115
F. Hiller: Erinnerungsblätter (Cologne, 1884), 110–19
C.E. and M. Hallé, eds.: Life and Letters of Sir Charles Hallé (London, 1896; abridged 1972 by M. Kennedy as The Autobiography of Charles Hallé), 212–14
S. Heller: 'Une visite à Kalkbrenner (1838)', BSIM, vi (1910), 690–95
H. Engel: Die Entwicklung des deutschen Klavierkonzertes von Mozart bis Liszt (Leipzig, 1927/R), 197–202
B.E. Sydow, ed.: Correspondance de Frédéric Chopin (Paris, 1953–60/R), i, 14, 37, ii, 71, 20ff, 158, iii, 124, 190, 230; Pol. edn (Warsaw, 1955); Eng. trans. (London, 1962)
R. Benton: 'London Music in 1815, as seen by Camille Pleyel', ML, xlvii (1966), 34–47
H. Nautsch: Friederich Kalkbrenner: Wirkung und Werk (Hamburg, 1983)

PAUL DEKEYSER

Kallberg, Jeffrey (b Glencoe, MN, 17 Oct 1954). American musicologist. He took the AB at UCLA (1975) and the MA at the University of Chicago (1978); he took the doctorate under Philip Gossett in Chicago (1982) with a dissertation on Chopin sources. He joined the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania in 1982, and was named associate professor there in 1987. He has also held visiting appointments at SUNY, and Harvard and Princeton Universities. His main areas of study include Chopin, Verdi, critical theory, the history of sexuality, gender studies, and editorial theory. His theoretical interests have been particularly brought to bear on a number of articles on Chopin discussing style, formal structure, publication history and gender and ideological issues. He also prepared and wrote commentaries for the ten-volume facsimile series Piano Music of the Parisian Virtuosos, 1810–60 (New York, 1993). With Anthony Newcomb he is founder and general editor of the monograph series New Perspectives in Music History and Criticism.

WRITINGS

'Marketing Rossini: sei lettere di Troupenas ad Artaria', Bollettino del Centro rossiniano di studi, i–iii (1980), 41–63
The Chopin Sources: Variants and Versions in Later Manuscripts and Printed Editions (diss., U. of Chicago, 1982)
'Chopin in the Marketplace: Aspects of the International Music Publishing Industry in the First Half of the Nineteenth Century', Notes, xxxix (1982–3), 535–69, 795–824
'Compatibility in Chopin's Multipartite Publications', JM, ii (1983), 391–417
'Chopin's Last Style', JAMS, xxxviii (1985), 264–315
'O klasyfikacji rękopisów Chopin' [On the classification of Chopin's manuscripts], Rocznik chopinowski, xvii (1985), 63–96
'The Rhetoric of Genre: Chopin's Nocturne in G minor', 19CM, xi (1987–8), 238–61
'The Problem of Repetition and Return in Chopin's Mazurkas', Chopin Studies, ed. J. Samson (Cambridge, 1988), 1–24
'Are Variants a Problem? "Composer's Intentions" in Editing Chopin', Chopin Studies, iii (1990), 257–67
'Hearing Poland: Chopin and Nationalism', Nineteenth-Century Piano Music, ed. R.L. Todd (New York, 1990), 221–57
'The Harmony of the Tea Table: Gender and Ideology in the Piano Nocturne', Representations, xxxiv (1992), 102–33
'Small "Forms": in Defence of the Prelude', The Cambridge Companion to Chopin, ed. J. Samson (Cambridge, 1992), 124–44, 310–14
'Small Fairy Voices: Sex, History, and Meaning in Chopin', Chopin Studies 2, ed. J. Rink and J. Samson (Cambridge, 1994), 50–71
Chopin at the Boundaries: Sex, History, and Musical Genre (Cambridge, MA, 1996)

EDITIONS

G. Verdi: Luisa Miller, The Works of Giuseppe Verdi, i/18 (Milan, 1991)

PAULA MORGAN

Kallimulin, Rashid (Fagimovich) (b Zelenodol'sk, Tatar Republic, 6 May 1957). Tatar composer. He graduated from B.N. Trubin's class at the Kazan' State Academy of Music in 1985, and completed postgraduate composition studies with A.B. Luppov in 1987 when he also joined the Composers' Union. He returned to the Kazan' Academy in 1988 to teach and was appointed head of the composition department in 1992. He has received various awards, including first prize at the Weber chamber music competition in Dresden in 1987 with his Third String Quartet 'In Memory of Gabdulla Tukay', and has served on several juries and committees. He is an Honoured Artist of the Republic of Tatarstan (1990) and an Honoured Artist of the RSFSR (1996). He first gained recognition in the mid-1980s with works such as the Third Quartet which combines the inner world of the national poet Gabdulla Tukay with a depiction of the epoch of the beginning of the 20th century. Organic fusion of different styles has become a characteristic principle of many of Kallimulin's important works; the rock-opera Cry of the Cuckoo juxtaposes 20th-century dynamism with the ancient roots of the Tatar people in the Volga Bulgariya epoch of the 10th to the 13th centuries. In this innovatory work, elements of the Romantic tradition are synthesized with the folk genre bait and elements of rock and jazz; the national tradition, rather than being destroyed, is enriched with new colour. In works written in the 1990s he has attempted to renew the harmonic language of Tatar music and has experimented with unusual combinations of timbre.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ww Qt, 1981; About Quiet (poem, N. Arslanov), Bar, pf, 1985; Cl Conc., 1985; Pf Sonata no.1, 1985; Bulgar, sym. poem, 1986; Sonata, fl, pf, 1986; Sonata, vc, 1986; About Happiness (poem, R. Mingalim), T, fl, 1987; Pf Sonata no.2, 1987; Quiet and Calm (sym. poem), vv, orch, 1987; Tukay (incid music), 1987; Cry of the Cuckoo (rock-op., I. Uzeyev), 1989; 3 str qts; songs and solo inst pieces with M. Samsutdinov: 'Vozvrashcheniye' [The return], SovM (1991), no.6, pp.3–36 with others: 'Muzïka druz' ya: materialï kruglogo stola' [Music of friends: materials from a round table], MAk (1995), no.3, pp.79–84

WRITINGS

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Gubaidullina: Rashid Kaleimulin (Kazan, 1988)
M. Faizulaeva: 'You'll forget the past – the roots will dry up', SovM (1990)

MARGARITA PAVLOVNA FAYZULAYEVA

Kalliope [Kalliopeia, Calliope, Calliopea]. The Muse of heroic poetry and of playing on string instruments. See MUSES.

Kalliwoda, Johann Wenzel [Kalivoda, Jan Křtitel Václav] (b Prague, 21 Feb 1801; d Karlsruhe, 3 Dec 1866). Bohemian composer and violinist, active mainly in Germany. He entered the newly founded Prague Conservatory in 1811, studying violin with Friedrich Wilhelm Pixis (ii) and theory and composition with Bedřich Diviš Weber. After graduating with honours, he joined the Prague Theatre Orchestra in 1816, just as C.M. von Weber, its director, was about to move to Dresden. In 1821 he left Prague to embark on a career as touring virtuoso that took him to Germany, Switzerland and the Netherlands. Impressed by Kalliwoda's musicianship, Prince Karl Egon II von Fürstenberg invited the young artist to become Kapellmeister at his court at Donaueschingen; following a brief visit to Prague, where he married the singer Therese Brunetti, Kalliwoda accepted the prince's offer and took up residence in Donaueschingen in December 1822. He conducted the court orchestra, appeared often as violin soloist, coordinated musical activities at the local cathedral, directed the court opera (including performances of Mozart's Don Giovanni, La clemenza di Tito and Die Zauberflöte, and Cherubini's Les deux journées), and gave musical instruction to the prince's children. He further enriched the town's cultural life by engaging such artists as Clara and Robert Schumann, Liszt, Thalberg and Dreyschock for appearances at court. He was also able to maintain his career as a violinist, performing in Germany, Switzerland, the Netherlands and his native Bohemia on the Stradivarius given him by Prince Karl Egon. At its height his playing was described as agile and spirited, but already in 1846 K.F. Brendel suggested that he was no longer in his prime (NZM, xxiv, 118–19).

During almost 40 years of service in Donaueschingen, Kalliwoda was also highly active as a composer, his reputation having been established as early as 1826 by performances of his Symphony no.1 op.7 in Leipzig and Prague. The esteem in which Kalliwoda was held is demonstrated by the offers he received from such musical centres as Cologne, Mannheim, Leipzig, Dessau and Prague, and by his election to honorary membership of musical societies in Germany, Sweden, the Netherlands and Bohemia. The revolutions of 1848 led to the disbanding of Karl Egon's Hofkapelle and to Kalliwoda's move to Karlsruhe, where his son Wilhelm (1827–93), a talented pianist, composer and conductor in his own right, was director of the court theatre. The destruction by fire in 1850 of the theatre in Donaueschingen dealt the court a blow from which it was unable to recover even after Kalliwoda's reinstatement at the behest of Karl Egon III in 1857. In July of the following year he appeared for the last time in Prague, conducting his Overture no.15 in E op.226 for festivities held to commemorate the founding of the conservatory. He retired to Karlsruhe in 1866 and died there later that year.

Kalliwoda composed over 450 works (243 published with opus numbers, 44 without and 170 in manuscript), ranging from opera, concerted Mass, symphony, overture and concerto, to Lieder, choral partsongs, instrumental chamber music, salon and character pieces, as well as instructional works for violin. Of the seven symphonies (composed 1825–43), the first three formed a regular part of the repertory of orchestras until the mid-19th century and received considerable attention from contemporary critics. The symphonies also provide an interesting case study in the problems faced by a composer whose allegiance to late 18th-century ideals was tinged by an incipient Romantic spirit. Several writers, G.W. Fink (SchillingE, iv, 36; AMZ, xxxiv, cols.223–4) among them, praised their clarity of form, graceful, at times italianate melodies, skilful developments, finely wrought contrapuntal textures and deft orchestration. Schumann, who maintained cordial relations with Kalliwoda and in 1833 accorded him the dedication of his Intermezzos op.4, took a more critical stance in a series of reviews published in the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik between 1834 and 1841 and predicted that only his earlier symphonies would endure, dimissing his overtures, solo works with orchestra and salon pieces as charming but ultimately shallow compositions. Although Kalliwoda's two operas also received favourable notices from contemporary journalists, neither work established itself in the repertory.

History has proven even less generous to Kalliwoda. The only one of his works to endure in 20th-century concert life was the Deutsches Lied for male chorus, which until the 1930s served as an unofficial national anthem for Germans in Bohemia.

WORKS

(selective list)

printed works published in Leipzig unless otherwise stated

MSS in D-KA

OPERAS

Prinzessin Christine von Wolfenburg (3, Keller, after H. Zschokke), Donaueschingen, 1827, vs (1840)

Blanda, die silberne Birke (3, J.F. Kind), Prague, 29 Nov 1847

ORCHESTRAL

7 syms.: no.1, f, op.7 (1825–6); no.2, E♭, op.17 (1829); no.3, d, op.32 (1830); no.4, C, op.60 (1835); no.5, b, op.106 (1840); no.6, g (1841); no.7, F (1843)

18 ovs., incl. no.1, d, op.38 (1838); no.2, F, op.44 (1834); no.6, E♭, op.85 (1838); no.8 'Ouverture pastorale', A, op.108 (1843); no.9 'Ouverture solennelle', C, op.126 (n.d.); no.10, F, op.142 (1846); no.11, B♭, op.143 (1846); no.15, E, op.226, 1858; no.18, ov. to Blanda (1847)

With solo insts: 18 works, incl. Concerto, vn, op.9 (1821); Variations brillantes, 2 vn, op.14 (1829); Concertino no.1, E, vn, pf, op.15 (1830); Grosses Rondo, pf, op.16 (1830); Concertante, 2 vn, op.20 (1832); Introduction et Rondo, F, hn, op.51 (1834); Grand Divertissement, G, fl, op.52 (1834), Concertino, F, ob, op.110 (1844); Concertino no.6, vn, op.151 (1848); Variations et rondo, bn, op.57 (1856)

OTHER WORKS

Chbr: 3 pf trios, no.1, op.61 (1835), no.2, op.130 (1845), no.3, op.200 (1854); Duet, A, vn, pf, op.111 (1842); 3 str qts; vn duets

Pf 2 hands: Rondo, A, op.11 (1828); Rondo passionata, g, op.49 (1834); Variationen über ein eigenes Thema, F, op.53 (1834); Scherzo, op.141 (1845); Sonata, E♭, op.176 (Magdeburg, 1851); 6 Phantasiestücke, op.10 (1859)

Pf 4 hands: Divertissement, G, op.47 (1835); Grosse Sonate, op.135 (1846); Konzertouverture, f, op.142 (1846); Introduction et rondo, op.168 (1850); Allegro, op.162 (1852); Grosses Divertissement, G, op.203 (1854)

Vocal: choruses, incl. Wenn sich der Geist auf Andachtsschwingen (Das deutsche Lied); songs; 10 masses

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Kramolisch); SchillingE

J.W. von Wasielewski: Die Violine und ihre Meister (Leipzig, 1869; enlarged 8/1927/R by W. von Wasielewski), 352

K. Strunz: Johann Wenzel Kalliwoda (Vienna, 1910)

J. Bušek: Leopold Jansa, Jan Václav Kalivoda, Jan Vaňhal (Prague, 1926), 13–42 [with list of works]

H. Kaller: 'Johann Wenzel Kalliwoda zu seinem 150. Geburtstag', Musica, v (1951), 160–61

R.L. Todd: 'On Quotation in Schumann's Music', Schumann and his World (Princeton, NJ, 1994), 102–3

JOHN DAVERIO (text), ALENA NĚMCOVÁ (work-list)

Kallman, Chester (b Brooklyn, NY, 7 Jan 1921; d Athens, 18 Jan 1975). American poet, librettist and translator. Auden said he 'was the person responsible for arousing my interest in opera, about which previously … I knew little or nothing'. Their collaborative works are discussed under W.H. AUDEN. Independently, Kallman – a witty, resourceful and most 'musical' poet, and an operatic erudite – wrote a libretto for Carlos Chávez, The Tuscan Players, and made singing translations of, among other operas, Monteverdi's L'incoronazione di Poppea, Verdi's Falstaff and Bartók's Bluebeard's Castle.

ANDREW PORTER

Kallmann, Helmut (b Berlin, 7 Aug 1922). Canadian musicologist and librarian of German birth. He studied the piano, first with his father then privately in London (1940) and Toronto (1944–8), where he also took the BMus in 1949 under Arnold Walter. After working at the CBC music library in Toronto as a clerk (1950), librarian (1951), senior librarian (1961) and supervisor (1962), he was appointed chief librarian of the music division of the National Library of Canada in 1970. He was made an adjunct research professor at Carleton University in 1975 and he retired in 1987.

Kallmann was one of the founders (1956) and chairman (1957–8, 1967–8) of the Canadian Music Library Association, and was a member of the Canadian Music Council (vice-president, 1971–6); he also co-founded the Canadian Musical Heritage Society (1982) and served as chair from its inception. His major interests are Canadian music history and bibliography; his publications include a book on music in Canada and articles on Canadian music in the 18th and 19th centuries. He received an honorary doctorate from the University of Toronto in 1971 and was made a Member of the Order of Canada in 1986.

WRITINGS

ed.: Catalogue of Canadian Composers (Toronto, rev., enlarged 2/1952/R)

'A Century of Musical Periodicals in Canada', Canadian Music Journal, i (1956–7), no.1, pp.37–43; no.2, pp.25–36

'Organs and Organ Players in Canada', Canadian Music Journal, iii/3 (1958–9), 41–7

A History of Music in Canada 1534–1914 (Toronto, 1960/R 1987 with corrections)

'The Montreal Gazette on Music from 1786 to 1797', Canadian Music Journal, vi/3 (1961–2), 3–11

'History of Opera in Canada', Opera Canada, v/3 (1964), 10–12, 78 only

'Joseph Quesnel: Pioneer Canadian Composer/Ancêtre des compositeurs canadiens', Canadian Composer/Compositeur Canadien, no.3 (1965), 22–3, 36, 44 with L. Murray and G. Pincoe: Musical Canadiana: a Subject Index (Ottawa, 1967) [list of pieces pubd in Canada up to 1921; compiled by the Canadian Library Association]

'Historical Background', Aspects of Music in Canada, ed. A. Walter (Toronto, 1969), 26–61

'James Paton Clarke, Canada's First Mus. Bac.', Cahiers canadiens de musique/Canada Music Book, no.1 (1970), 41–53

'Beethoven and Canada: a Miscellany', Cahiers canadiens de musique/Canada Music Book, no.2 (1971), 107–17

'Toward a Bibliography of Canadian Folk Music', EthM, xvi (1972), 499–503

'The Mysteries of "O Canada"/Les mystères d'"O Canada"', Musicanada, no.43 (1980), 18 only

ed., with G. Potvin and K. Winters: Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, 1981, 2/1992; Fr. edn 1983, 2/1993) [2/1990 with G. Potvin only]

'The Canadian League of Composers in the 1950's: the Heroic Years', Célébration, ed. G. Ridout and T. Kenins (Toronto, 1984), 99–107

'Music in Upper Canada', SMC, ix (1984), 37–53; repr. in The Shaping of Ontario from Exploration to Confederation, ed. N. and H. Mika (Belleville, ON, 1985), 220–27

'Canada and the Music of the Grand Siècle', Musicanada, no.58 (1986), 3–4

'The Music Collection of the National Library of Canada', FAM, xxxiv (1987), 174–84

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMC2

F.A. Hall and J. Beckwith, eds.: Musical Canada: Words and Music Honouring Helmut Kallmann (Toronto, 1988) [incl. R. Johnston: 'Homage to Helmut', 134–42 and list of writings, 315–24]

□

Kallmeyer. German firm of music publishers. In 1821 C.P.H. Hartmann founded a book and music shop in Wolfenbüttel, and this was extended by Ludwig Holle from 1837 to 1874. Julius Zwisler, who had founded a publishing firm in Brunswick in 1872, took over Holle's firm and moved to Wolfenbüttel, but sold Holle's business in 1894 to C.F. Siegel of Leipzig. In 1913 Georg Kallmeyer became a partner and in 1916 sole owner of the Zwisler publishing house, which he renamed Georg Kallmeyer Verlag in 1925. After Kallmeyer's death, Karl Heinrich Möseler (b Hildesheim, 11 Jan 1912) bought the firm in 1947 and gave it his own name. In 1951 Georg Kallmeyer (b Brunswick, 29 June 1924), a son of the previous owner, retrieved the rights of his father's book and art publishing house from Möseler.

Although the Holle music publishing business had made a name for itself for its numerous editions of the classics, within Zwisler's publishing programme music retired into the background. It was only through Kallmeyer's initiative that music publishing was re-established after World War I. Scholars such as Friedrich Blume (Praetorius complete edition, Das Chorwerk, Kieler Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft), Fritz Jöde (Der Musikant, Das Chorbuch, Der Kanon) and Adolf Hoffmann (Deutsche Instrumentalmusik) have determined the publishing programme, which Möseler extended after World War II and which now encompasses all areas of secular music-making, contemporary choral music, musicological editions and music journals.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Vinz and G. Olzog, eds.: Dokumentation deutschsprachiger Verlage (Munich and Vienna, 1962, 12/1995)

Musikverlage in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland und in West-Berlin (Bonn, 1965), 132

THEODOR WOHNHAAS

Kallos, Sandor (Aleksandr Ernestovich) (b Chemortsï, Ukraine, 23 Oct 1935). Ukrainian composer, violinist and lutenist. He graduated in 1961 from L'viv Conservatory where he studied composition and theory with Adam Soltis; he then undertook postgraduate studies at the Moscow Conservatory with Yury Shaporin (composition) and Sergey Skrebkov (theory) which he completed in 1964. He appears regularly as a performer: as a violinist in symphony and opera orchestras (1954–63), as a lutenist (since 1971) and from 1975 as a conductor. Since 1975 he has also been a soloist of the Moscow PO. He is a member of the Association of Contemporary Music, and a member of the Moscow Union of Composers.

The many years which Kallos devoted to the lute were no accident: the basic trend in his work is a latter-day interpretation of the philosophy and the musical style of the Middle Ages. This has given rise to his predilection for instrumental monodic writing (the orchestral Ėlegiya, Posidelki ('Village Gatherings') for ensemble) and his preference for writing multi-movement Baroque-style sonatas for solo istruments (trio sonatas and the sonata for horn, viola, double bass and harpsichord). This interest also lies at the root of his interpretations of ancient Greek and mediaeval texts in his cantatas and has equally influenced settings of Villon, Ronsard and other Renaissance poets in which period instruments are employed.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Milaya Dzhakomina [Darling Jacomina] (op), 1980; Makbet [Macbeth] (ballet), 1984; Deystvo o Fauste [A Play about Faust], 1985, rev. 1991; Deystvo o Tristan i Izol'de [A Play about Tristan and Isolde], 1985; Mono (op), 1990

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1957; Sym. no.2, 1960; Elegiya, 1961; Sym. no.3, 1961, Vn Conc. no.1, 1964; Vn Conc. no.2, 1969; Posidelki [Village Gatherings], suite no.1, 1971, suite no.2, 1972; Sym. no.4, 1976; Conc., va, db, orch, 1977
Chbr and solo inst: 3 sonatas, vn, pf, 1960, 1962, 1963; Richerkar no.1 [Ricecar no.1], va, 1969; Sonata-improvizatsiya, va, pf, 1969; Richekar no.2, va, 1972; Richekar no.3, va, 1974; Sonata, vn, pf, 1974; 2 trio sonatas, va, db, hpd/hp, 1974, 1975; Sonata, fl, 1976; Richekar no.4, va, 1977; Sonata, hn, va, db, hpd, 1977; sonatas for solo inst, tape; lute music, organ works, 1986–91
Settings of ancient Greek and Latin texts, chorus, ensemble Songs (for 1v, old insts) to texts by F. Villon, P. de Ronsard, other Rennaisance poets
Incid music

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kallstenius, Edvin (b Filipstad, 29 Aug 1881; d Danderyd, 22 Nov 1967). Swedish composer. He studied natural sciences at Lund University (1898–1903) and music at the Leipzig Conservatory (1904–7). From 1928 to 1946 he was music librarian to Swedish radio, and he was a committee member of the Society of Swedish Composers (1932–61) and of its international music bureau (STIM, 1932–57). A pioneer of novel techniques in Sweden, he developed a pungent harmony, organized in later works by an adapted 12-note method. This harmonic style, demanding a constantly flexible tempo, caused difficulties in performance: not until the mid-1960s was he able to hear his music played to his satisfaction.

WORKS
(selective list)

Syms.: op.16, 1926; op.20, 1935; op.36, 1948; op.43, 1954; Sinfonia su temi 12-tonici, op.52, 1960
Other orch: Sista striden [The Last Battle], ov./tone poem, op.5, 1908; En serenad i sommarnatten, tone poem, op.10, 1918; Pf Conc., op.12, 1922; Sinfonietta, 1923; Dalarapsodi, op.18, 1931; Lustspelsuvertyr, op.19, 1934; Dalslandsrapsodi, op.22, 1936; Romantico, ov., op.24, 1938; Musica gioconda, op.27, str, 1942; Sinfonietta, op.34, 1946; Sinfonietta 'dodicitonica', op.46, 1956; Sinfonietta 'semi-seriale', op.50, 1958
Choral: När vi dö [When we are dying], requiem, op.11, 1919; Hymen, o Hymenaios, cant., op.45, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1955
Chbr: 8 str qts incl. no.3, c, op.8, 1914; Vc Sonata, op.6, 1908; Vn Sonata, op.7, 1909; Cl Qnt, op.17, 1930
Solo vocal music

Principal publishers: Gehrmans, Hansen, Nordiska musikförlaget, Suecia, Universal

WRITINGS

'Edvin Kallstenius om sig själv', Musikvärlden, iv/3 (1948), 66–70 [incl. list of works]
'Edvin Kallstenius' "Min första symfoni", Modern nordisk musik, ed. I. Bengtsson (Stockholm, 1957), 29–45 [incl. list of works, 27–8]
'En riktningslös tonsättares testamente', På begäran (1968), no.1, 15

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SBL (N. Castegren)
N.L. Wallin: 'Edvin Kallstenius: en första introduktion', Nordisk musikkultur, i (1952), 176–81; also in Musikrevy, vii (1952), 296–301; also in DMt, xxvii (1952), 344–9
F. Lindberg: 'Sveriges radios musikbibliotek', STMf, xliii (1961), 227–37
B. Wallner: 'Edvin Kallstenius: en Profilteckning', Musikrevy, xxxvi (1981), 6–9

ROLF HAGLUND

Kálmán, Emmerich [Imre] (b Siófok, 24 Oct 1882; d Paris, 30 Oct 1953). Hungarian composer. At an early age he showed musical talent and an interest in the theatre, being a frequent visitor to the summer theatre in Siófok. He had high hopes of becoming a concert pianist, but he had to abandon these studies due to the onset of chronic neuritis. In 1900 he joined Koessler's composition class at the National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music, where for a time he was a fellow student of Bartók, Kodály and Leó Weiner, as well as the future operetta composers Albert Szirmai and Viktor Jacobi. He also pursued law studies for a time. From 1904 to 1908 he was music critic for the daily Pesti napló, meanwhile presenting himself as composer of 'serious' works such as the symphonic poems Saturnalia (1904) and Endre és Johanna (1905). In 1907 he received the Franz Josef Prize of Budapest for his compositions, and was thereby enabled to visit Bayreuth. That same year the popularity of some humorous cabaret songs led him towards the composition of his first operetta, Tatárjárás ('The Gay Hussars', 1908). This achieved enormous success throughout Europe and the USA, and its reception in Vienna led to his settling there.

In Vienna, Kálmán began a sequence of successful works that in due course ranked him with Lehár as the leading exponent of the Viennese operetta genre in the period after World War I. Die Csárdásfürstin (1915) and Gräfin Mariza (1924) were the most successful, being produced around the world and remaining today among the best-loved examples of that time. Kálmán also created new works for Budapest, London, New York and Zürich, being forced to leave Vienna after the Anschluss. He then moved to Paris in 1939 and, on the German occupation of that city, to the USA, where he worked unsuccessfully with Lorenz Hart on a musical. He retained his Hungarian nationality until 1942, becoming an American citizen only when the Hungarian government aligned itself definitely with Hitler. He returned to Europe in 1949, finally settling in Paris. His posthumously performed operetta, Arizona Lady (1954), was given its final form by his son Charles Emmerich Kálmán (b Vienna, 17 Nov 1929), himself the composer of various light pieces and musicals.

Kálmán's librettos were always carefully chosen – sometimes after years of searching – and were equally carefully set. Yet he managed to produce a rich vein of seemingly natural melody. In Die Herzogin von Chicago (1928) he experimented with jazz-flavoured American popular music, and in Kaiserin Josephine (1936) he attempted a more ambitious work, of which a projected production at the Vienna Staatsoper with Richard Tauber and Jarmila Novotná had to be abandoned for political reasons. However, Kálmán's most successful and typical works are those in which the Viennese waltz is mixed with the Hungarian popular style. His major international operetta successes all had Hungarian settings, while other works had sub-plots with opportunities for music in the Hungarian manner. Even in his last work, set on a ranch in Arizona, the heroine is a Hungarian. Thus he was able to add to his fund of melody an almost obsessive taste for Hungarian popular rhythms, set off by a penchant for opulent orchestral colouring and instrumental counterpoint. His orchestrators used a full orchestra, incorporating such distinctive instruments as glockenspiel, harp, celesta, tam-tam, cimbalom, banjo, guitar and (in Die Bajadere and Der Teufelsreiter) the native Hungarian tárogató. He provided some particularly rewarding solos for tenor and soprano, especially in Gräfin Mariza and Die Zirkusprinzessin (1926). His works also give important opportunities for the chorus, while his finales, often recapitulating themes heard earlier, are particularly well constructed and crafted to achieve maximum dramatic effect in the theatre.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC – ALL OPERETTAS

WW – Vienna, Theater an der Wien

Tatárjárás [The Gay Hussars] (3, K. von Bakonyi and A. Gábor), Budapest, Vig, 22 Feb 1908; rev. as Ein Herbstmanöver (3, Bakonyi and R. Bodanzky), WW, 22 Jan 1909
Az obsitos [The Soldier on Leave] (3, Bakonyi), Budapest, Vig, 1910; rev. as Der gute Kamerad (2, V. Léon, after Bakonyi), Vienna, Bürger, 27 Oct 1911; rev. as Gold gab ich für Eisen [Her Soldier Boy] (Léon, after Bakonyi), WW, 16 Oct 1914
Der Zigeunerprimas [Sari] (3, F. Grünbaum and J. Wilhelm), Vienna, Johann Strauss, 11 Oct 1912
The Blue House (1, A. Hurgon), London, Hippodrome, 28 Oct 1912
Der kleine König (3, Bodanzky, after Bakonyi and F. Martos), WW, 27 Nov 1912
Kivándorlók [The Emigrants] (1, Gábor), Budapest, Modern, 1913
Zsuzsi kisasszony [Miss Springtime] (3, Martos and M. Bródy), Budapest, Vig, 23 Feb 1915
Die Csárdásfürstin [The Riviera Girl; The Gipsy Princess] (3, L. Stein and B. Jenbach), Vienna, Johann Strauss, 17 Nov 1915
Die Faschingsfee (3, A.M. Willner and R. Oesterreicher), Vienna, Johann Strauss, 21 Sept 1917 [partial musical reworking of Zsuzsi kisasszony]
Das Hollandweibchen [A Little Dutch Girl] (3, Stein and Jenbach), Vienna, Johann Strauss, 30 Jan 1920
Die Bajadere [The Yankee Princess] (3, J. Brammer and A. Grünwald), Vienna, Car, 23 Dec 1921
Gräfin Mariza (3, Brammer and Grünwald), WW, 28 Feb 1924
Die Zirkusprinzessin (3, Brammer and Grünwald), WW, 26 March 1926
Golden Dawn (2, O. Harbach and O. Hammerstein II), Wilmington, Oct 1927, New York, Hammerstein's, 30 Nov 1927; collab. H. Stothart
Die Herzogin von Chicago (2, Brammer and Grünwald), WW, 5 April 1928
Das Veilchen vom Montmartre [Paris in Spring] (3, Brammer and Grünwald), Vienna, Johann Strauss, 21 March 1930; rev., WW, 25 July 1930
Ronny (film operetta, R. Schünzel, E. Pressburger, R. Schanzer and E. Welisch), Berlin, Gloria-Palast, 22 Dec 1931
Der Teufelsreiter (3, Schanzer and Welisch), WW, 10 March 1932
Kaiserin Josephine (8 scenes, P. Knepler and G. Herczeg), Zürich, Stadt, 18 Jan 1936
Miss Underground, 1943 (P. Gallico and L. Hart), inc.
Marinka (K. Farkas and G. Marion), New Haven, 1945, New York, Winter Garden, 18 July 1945
Arizona Lady (2, Grünwald and G. Beer), broadcast, Munich, Bayerische Rundfunk, 1 Jan 1954; stage, Berne, Stadt, 14 Feb 1954; completed C. Kálmán

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Scherzando, str, 1903; Saturnalia, scherzo, 1904; Endre és Johanna, sym. poem, 1905
Large-scale vocal: Mikes bucsuja [Mikes's farewell] (Mezey), sym. melodrama, chorus, orch, 1907
Other works: pf pieces, 1903; art songs, 1902–7; cabaret songs 1907
Principal publisher: Weinberger

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GänzlEMT
R. Oesterreicher: Emmerich Kálmán: der Weg eines Komponisten (Vienna, 1954, 2/1988 as Emmerich Kálmán: Das Leben eines Operettenfürsten)
V. Kálmán: Grüss' mir die süssen, die reizenden Frauen: mein Leben mit Emmerich Kálmán (Bayreuth, 1966)
A. Lamb: 'Emmerich Kálmán – a Centenary Tribute', Opera, xxxiii (1982), 1009–15
R. Traubner: Operetta: a Theatrical History (New York, 1983)
V. Klotz: 'Nach-Kakanische Operette um '33 und '38 am Beispiel von Emmerich Kálmán und Ralf Benatzky', Österreichische Musiker im Exil: Vienna 1988, 66–72
V. Klotz: Operette: Porträt und Handbuch einer unerhörten Kunst (Munich, 1991)

ANDREW LAMB

Kalmár, László (b Budapest, 19 Oct 1931; d Budapest, 27 May 1995). Hungarian composer. He began composition studies with Ervin Major at the Budapest Conservatory and was then a private pupil of Ferenc Farkas (1958–60). He worked as an editor for Editio Musica of Budapest, as head of music at this publishers (1987–91) and as vice-president of the Association of Hungarian Composers. His Senecae sententiae won first prize in a competition organized by Boosey & Hawkes in association with the Kodály Foundation, and his Trio was performed at the 1969 ISCM Festival. He was awarded the Erkel and Bartók-Pásztory prizes in 1985 and 1991 respectively.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Cicli, str, 1971; Horae, 1982; Olvasmányok [Lectures], chbr orch, 1982; Hermes, 1983–4; Ballet des fleurs blanches, str, 1984–5; Ballet des amphores, 1985–6; Chbr Conc., 1986; 3 szimfonikus kép [3 Sym. Pictures], 1986–7; Hommage à Johannes Brahms, variations, chbr orch, 1988; Janus kapujában [At Janus's Gate], 1988; Sym. for Str, 1995
Choral: Senecae sententiae, chorus, 1959–65; Memoriale, chorus, str orch, perc, 1969–71; Cantus, 2A, cl, vc, hp, 1969–72; Szivárvány havasán [On Rainbow Mountains], chorus, 1982–3; O vos omnes, chorus, 1983; A tölgyek alatt [Under the Oak Trees], chorus, 1985; Ecce servus meus, chorus, 1988–9
Chbr and solo inst: 4 Kánon, pf, 1966; Monologo, gui, 1968; Trio, mar, fl, gui, 1968; Sonata, fl, pf, 1970–71; Triangoli, pf, hp, perc, 1970–71; Distichon, pf, hp, perc, 1970–71; Qt, eng hn, viol, vib, hp, 1972; 2 duett, 2 tpt, 1972; Str Trio, 1972; Combo, gui, conga, db, 1971–3; Sotto voce, hmnm, vib, hp, 1973; Sereno, vc, hp, 1974–5; Trio Sonata, cl, hn, vc, 1981; Ad blasium, brass qnt, 1982
Principal publisher: Editio Musica Budapest

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Szigeti: 'Az írott zene számomra többet jelent, mint a hallható' [The written music means more to me than the audible], Muzsika, xxxv/4 (1992), 15–18 [interview with Kalmár]

F. ANDRÁS WILHEIM/ANNA DALOS

Kalmus, Alfred (August Uhlrich) (b Vienna, 16 May 1889; d London, 25 Sept 1972). British music publisher of Austrian birth. He graduated in law at Vienna University, gaining the doctorate of letters in 1913. In addition he studied music under Guido Adler. His career in music publishing started in 1909 when he joined the young and enterprising Viennese firm Universal Edition, where he became associated with some of the seminal figures of the earlier part of the 20th century, Schoenberg, Berg, Webern, Bartók and Janáček. In April 1923 he founded the WIENER PHILHARMONISCHER VERLAG, an independent company in which Universal Edition was a shareholder. It was purchased by Universal in 1925 and Kalmus returned to his old firm. Driven by political events to leave Austria, he went to London in 1936 and inaugurated the London branch of Universal Edition. He was actively concerned in running this branch up to his death, his publishing career thus spanning well over 60 years.

With the outbreak of World War II Universal Edition, London, operated under the aegis of Boosey & Hawkes, where Kalmus added a new concern, the Anglo-Soviet Press, to propagate the music of leading Soviet composers including Prokofiev and Shostakovich. By 1949 Universal Edition, London, was again independent and there Kalmus was able to carry on the enterprise shown earlier by the parent company, with particular attention to younger and more radical composers. Of those from abroad, he was particularly associated with Berio, Boulez and Stockhausen, while in his English catalogue he fostered notably Richard Rodney Bennett, Harrison Birtwistle, David Bedford and Hugh Wood. A remarkable tribute was paid to Kalmus on his 80th birthday when 11 composers, including all of the foregoing, wrote works dedicated to him which were performed at a London concert under the title 'A Garland for Dr. K'. No publisher in the 20th century could have pursued more assiduously the task of gaining recognition and financial reward for composers of new music.

ALAN FRANK/NIGEL SIMEONE

Kalmus, Edwin F. (b Vienna, 15 Dec 1893; d New York, 30 April 1989). American music publisher. He founded his firm in New York in 1926. With his son-in-law, Lawrence Galison, who became the vice-president and manager in 1961 and later chairman of the board, the firm began printing its own music, established an art and camera department, and later added a complete bindery; it is one of the largest self-contained publishing houses in the USA. Kalmus publishes orchestral music, as well as music for piano, organ and solo instruments, and reprints of standard classics. With the exception of its orchestral department, Kalmus was purchased by Belwin-Mills in 1976. The company's headquarters in Boca Raton, Florida, continues to handle orchestral music and offers a rental service.

W. THOMAS MARROCCO, MARK JACOBS/R

Kalniņš, Alfrēds (b Cēsis, 23 Aug 1879; d Riga, 23 Dec 1951). Latvian composer and organist. He studied the organ with Louis Homilius and music theory with Lyadov at the St Petersburg Conservatory (1897–1901) before working as an organist, teacher and conductor in various Estonian and Latvian cities. In 1919 he settled in Riga, where he continued to perform and conduct and became a member of the directorate of the Latvian National Opera and head of the ministry of education's music section. During the period 1927–33 he held an appointment at New York, where he staged concerts and played an active role in American music societies; his works set to American poetry date from this period. Following an invitation to become organist at the Dome cathedral, Riga, he returned to Latvia in 1933 and in the following year began giving a series of organ recitals on Latvian Radio; he continued to give Radio performances until 1945. In 1944 he became professor at the Latvian State Conservatory and was rector there between 1944 and 1948.

Kalniņš was a pre-eminent composer of vocal music and the founder of Latvian opera. He completed a large number of works in all genres, including folksong arrangements and over 250 songs. His compositional style ranges from the idyllic Romanticism favoured by Grieg to the Expressionism and Constructivism of the 1930s. Although Kalniņš generally refrained from using folk tunes (except for arranging), the melodiousness of his work is imbued with a specifically Latvian spirit. In its reflection of Latvian landscapes, folklore and literature, and of the national Romantic trend, his music has become as important for Latvian culture as the contributions made by Grieg and Dvořák in their respective countries. He completed an autobiography in 1950 and wrote approximately 350 articles for Latvian and Estonian journals.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Baņuta (op, 4, A. Krūmiņš), 1918–9, Riga, 29 May 1920; Salinieki [The Islanders] (op, 4, Krūmiņš), 1922–5, rev. 1933, Riga, 10 Feb 1926; Staburags [The Rock] (ballet, E. Leščevskis), 1939–43, Riga, 24 Nov 1943

Orch: Mana dzimtene [My Motherland], sym. idyll, 1906; Dziesma par dzimteni [Song of the Motherland], suite, 1915; Latvija, sym. poem, 1919; In memoriam, 1949; Desmit latviešu tautas dziesmas [10 Latvian Folksongs, suite], 1951; other works, incl. 9 suites from stage works

Choral: Mūzikai [To Music] (cant.), 1913; Pastardiena [Judgment Day], 1917; Darbs un dziesma [Work and Song] (cant.), 1924; The Sea (cant.), 1929; *c*100 choral songs incl. Šurp, brāļi!, [Come, brothers!], 1907; Brīvība [Freedom], 1924; Karogs [The Flag], 1943; Ziedoņa rits [Spring Morining], 1946, Ave Sol, 1947, *c*100 folksong arrs.

Chbr and solo inst: Elegy, vn, pf, 1904; Suite, vc, pf, 1912; *c*30 org pieces; *c*130 pf pieces

Other, incl. *c*250 songs incl. Bernības rīti [Mornings of Childhood], 1903; List klnsi [It is raining quietly], 1904; Pļāvēja diendusa [The Midday Rest of the Mower], 1913; Indu serenāde [The Indian Serenade], 1930; Ūdens lilija [A Water-lily], 1943, *c*100 folksong arrs. (1v, pf), incid music

Principal publishers: Latvijas valsts izdevniecība, Liesma, Muzyka

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Dārziņš: 'Alfrēds Kalniņš', Zalktis, ii (1907), 127–45
J. Vītoliņš: Alfrēds Kalniņš (Riga, 1968)
A. Klotiņš: Alfrēda Kalniņa klaviermūzika (Riga, 1970)
V. Briede-Bulavinova: Latviešu opera [Latvian opera] (Riga, 1975), 53–106
V. Briede-Bulavinova: Opernoye tvorchestvo latïshskikh kompozitorovy [Operas of Latvian composers] (Leningrad, 1979), 14–25
A. Klotiņš: Alfrēds Kalniņš (Riga, 1979)
A. Klotiņš: Alfrēds Kalniņš: komponista dzīve un darbs [The composer's life and work] (Riga, 1979)
J. Vitolin: Alfreds Kalnin (Leningrad, 1980)

ARNOLD KLOTIŅŠ

Kalniņš, Imants (b Riga, 26 May 1941). Latvian composer. He graduated from Skulte's composition class at the Latvian State Conservatory, Riga, in 1964. Until 1973 he worked as music director for the State Theatre in Liepāja. Thereafter he was leader of a rock group in Riga. He taught at the conservatory (1986–7) and became an elected member of the Latvian parliament in 1991.

Kalniņš has cultivated an individual style that combines innovation with classical tradition, sometimes incorporating elements of rock music, as in the Fourth and Fifth Symphonies and the dramatic vocal works. In his music he has radically and successfully brought closer the 'high' and popular genres, using diatonic melodicism, consonance and simple harmonic progressions. Kalniņš is also author of many popular songs.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Princis un ubaga zēns [The Prince and the Pauper] (musical, after M. Twain), Liepāja, 1968; Ei, jūstur [Hello, Out There] (rock-op, 1, after W. Suroyan), Liepāja, 1971; No saldenās pudeles [From the Sweet Bottle] (operetta, after R. Blaumanis), 1975; Quo vadis, my Guitar (operetta, M. Tetere), 1976; Spēlēju, dancoju [I Play, I Dance] (op, 3, after J. Rainis), Riga, 1977; Ifiğēnija Aulda [Ifigenie in Aulis] (op, 2, after Euripides), Riga, 1982

Choral: Oktobra oratorija (Ye. Yevtushenko and others), 1967; Dzejnieks un nāra [The Poet and the Water Nymph] (I. Ziedonis) (orat), 1973; Rīta cēliens [Morning Hours] (orat, after A. Upītis), 1977

Orch: Vc Conc., 1963; Sym. no.1, 1964; Sym. no.2, 1965; Conc. for Orch, 1966; Sym. no.3, 1968; Sym. no.4 'Rock-Symphony', 1973; Sym. no.5, 1979

Rock music, choral songs, incid music, film scores

Principal publishers: Liesma, Muzyka

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Briede-Bulavinova: Opernoye tvorchestvo latïshskikh kompozitorov [Operas of Latvian composers] (Leningrad, 1977), 140–48
L. Mūrniece, ed.: Muzïka sovetskoy Latvii [Music of Soviet Latvia] (Riga, 1988), 87–94

ARNOLDS KLOTIŅŠ

Kalniņš, Jānis (b Pärnu, Estonia, 3 Nov 1904). Canadian composer and conductor of Latvian parentage. He received initial instruction in the piano and organ from his father, Alfrēds Kalniņš, and studied composition with Vītols at the Latvian Conservatory (1920–24). In 1923 he began working at the National Theatre in Riga as music adviser and conductor, and in 1933–4 was conductor at the National Opera. His works from the 1930s include three operas, two ballets and music for some 20 plays, as well as orchestral and chamber music. Kalniņš achieved recognition as a composer both at home and abroad, his style retaining Latvian national characteristics while following contemporary trends as represented by Hindemith, Stravinsky and Prokofiev. He fled from the advancing Soviets in 1944 and later settled in Canada, where he took appointments as professor at the Fredericton College of Music, New Brunswick (1949–68), and conductor of the Fredericton SO (1952–68); in 1981 he received an honorary doctorate from Mount Allison University. During his émigré years he has concentrated on orchestral and chamber music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Lolitas brīnumputns [Lolita's Wonderbird] (1, after A. Brigadere), 1930–34, Riga, 6 Dec 1934; Hamlets (3, after W. Shakespeare), 1934–5, Riga, 17 Feb 1936; Ugunī [In the Fire] (3, after R. Baumanis), 1936, Riga, 20 March 1937

Ballets: Lakstīgala un roze [The Nightingale and the Rose] (1, after O. Wilde), Riga, 1938; Rudens [Autumn] (1, O. Lēmanis), Riga, 1938

Orch: Brāļu kapi [Soldiers' Graves], 1931; Latvian Rhapsodie, 1934; Sym. no.1, 1943; Vn Conc., 1946; Sym. no.2, 1950; Sym. of the Beatitudes, B, chorus, orch, 1953; Music for Strings, 1965; New Brunswick Rhapsody, 1966; Sym. no.3, 1973; Sym. no.4, 1978

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1947; Sonata, ob, pf, 1962; Pf Trio, 1966; Org Sonata no.1, 1971; Sonata, vn, pf, 1975; Str Trio, 1978; 2 pf sonatas, 1978, 1980; Org Sonata no.2, 1982

Other vocal works, incl. *c*10 cantatas, *c*80 songs, *c*20 choral pieces; incid music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Sakss: 'Jānis Kalniņš', Latvju mūzika, iii (1970), 210–31

JOACHIM BRAUN/ARNOLDS KLOTIŅŠ

Kalomiris, Manolis (b Smyrna, 14 Dec 1883; d Athens, 3 April 1962). Greek composer, teacher and administrator. As a composer he was the most imposing figure of what he managed to create as his own conception of the Greek national school, and as an administrator highly influential, if also controversial. His strong predilection for music was evident during his school years in Athens (1894–9) and Constantinople (1899–1900); he studied the piano with Timotheos Xanthopoulos in the former city, and with Sophia Spanoudi in the latter. Also in Constantinople he came into contact with two of the earliest scholars of Greek folk music: Pachtikos and Aramis. He spent the years 1901–6 in Vienna, studying at the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde with Wilhelm Rauch and August Sturm (piano), Hermann Grädener (theory and composition) and Eusebius Mandyczewski (history).

His first appointment was to teach the piano at the Obolensky Lyceum in Kharkov, Russia (1906–10). He returned to Athens for the first concert of his works at the Athens Conservatory in June 1908, and he settled there permanently in 1910. From 1911 to 1919 he was professor of piano and a teacher of advanced harmony and counterpoint at the Athens Conservatory. He was inspector general of military music (1918–20, 1922–36), and in 1919, after a clash with Georgios Nazos, the head of the Athens Conservatory, he resigned in order to found the Hellenic Conservatory in Athens, directing it until 1926 when he founded the National Conservatory, which he directed until 1948. Kalomiris was president of the Union of Greek Composers (1936–45, 1947–57), becoming its honorary president in 1958. He was also general director (1944–5) and later chairman (1950–52) of the administrative board of the National State Opera in Athens. He was a prolific writer on music, publishing a number of textbooks and acting as critic for the Athens daily Ethnos (*c*1926–58). He received the National Award for Arts and Letters in 1919 and was elected a member of the Academy of Athens in 1946.

Anoyanakis suggested that Kalomiris's creative personality was shaped by four factors: his native environment and the folksong he heard there; his Viennese studies and his acquaintance with German music, particularly that of Wagner; his stay in Kharkov, when he heard the works of the Russian nationalists; and his participation in the struggle in favour of demotic Greek, as opposed to Katharevousa, which was associated with the cultural establishment. This struggle united the leading Greek creative artists; Kalomiris formed a close association with the nationalist poet Palamas, whose work he often set, and he was also drawn to the poetry of Kazantzakis and Sikelianos. Considering ancient Greek civilization to be too distant from the consciousness of his audience, Kalomiris based most of his work on the folklore, spirit and mythology of late Byzantine and, more particularly, post-Byzantine Greece. His veneration of folk music enriched his profound melodic feeling, evident principally in his operas and his numerous songs. The operas, which make use of Wagnerian leitmotivic techniques, exploit well-known folksongs in a dramatically effective manner, while the songs (and the song-cycles especially) are among the most beautiful in the 20th-century Greek musical literature. His style, instantly recognizable, has had an effect on several younger Greek composers. Kalomiris's music often exhibits a rich (sometimes over-rich) polyphonic texture which is brilliantly orchestrated and driven forward exuberantly, frequently with a powerful sense of dramatic impact. A melodic pathos is achieved through the skilful expansion of folksong modality into chromaticism. The flamboyant and epic scale of his work forms a counterpart to similar tendencies in contemporary Greek literature.

As an administrator, Kalomiris was associated with turning private conservatories, previously marginal, if not impoverished institutions, into financially thriving enterprises. However, he has been accused of having channelled more of his energy into polemics against 19th-century Ionian composers (whom he deprecated as 'italianate'), and into promoting his own music and his own conception of the national school, than into raising the general standards and conditions of music-making in Greece.

WORKS

STAGE

Ops: O Mavrianos ki o vassilias [Mavrianos and the King] (comic-op, 2, Kalomiris, after a Gk. folksong), 1907–8, inc.; O Protomastoras [The Master Builder] (music drama, 2 and int, Myrtiotissa [T. Drakopoulou], N. Poriotis and Y. Stefopoulos, after N. Kazantzakis), 1915, Athens, Municipal, 11 March 1916; To dakhtylidi tis manas [The Mother's Ring] (music drama, 3, A. Orfikos [Y. Stefopoulos], after Y. Kambyssis), 1917, Athens, Municipal, 8 Dec 1917, rev. Berlin, Volksoper, 10 Feb 1940; Anatoli [Sunrise] (musical fairy-tale, 2, Kalomiris, after Kambyssis), 1945, Athens, Olympia, 18 Dec 1945, rev. 1948; Ta xotika nera [The Shadowy Waters] (musical dramatic poem, prol, 1, Kalomiris, after W.B. Yeats, trans. V. Pezopoulou), 1950, Athens, Olympia, 4 Jan 1951; Konstantinos o Palaeologos, i Piran tin Poli (Constantin Palaeoglogue, or They Took the City] (musical tragedy-legend, 3, after Kazantzakis), 1961, Athens, Herod of Atticus Theatre, 12 Aug 1962

Other stage: O thanatos tis andriomenis [The Death of the Valiant Woman], ballet, 1943–5; incid music

VOCAL

Choral: I elia [The Olive Tree] (Palamas), female chorus, orch, 1907–9, rev. 1944; Sym. 'Levendiá' [Valour], chorus, orch, 1920, rev. 1937, 1952; I eleftheroi poliorkimenoi [The Free Besieged] (D. Solomos), 1v, chorus, orch, 1926; I symphonia ton anidheon ke ton kalon anthropon [Sym. of Simple and Kind-Hearted People] (J. Richepin, trans. Z. Papantoniou), chorus, orch, 1931; To traghoudi tis irinis [The Song of Peace] (S. Myrivilis), S, female chorus, orch, 1940; Embrós [Forward] (Sikelianos), male chorus, orch, 1940; 69 choruses a cappella or with pf

Solo vocal: Iamvoi ke anapaestoi II: Mayovotana [Magic Herbs] (Palamas), 1v, orch, 1912; O pramateftis [The Pedlar] (I. Gryparis), 1v, orch, 1920, rev. 1924; Iamvoi ke anapaestoi I (Palamas), 1v, orch, 1918–25, rev. 1943; From Sikelianos's Lyric Poems, 1v, orch, 1936, rev. 1937; Vassiliki prostazei [Vassiliki Commands] (after folksong), 1v, orch, c1937; St' Hossiou Louka to monastiri [At St Luke's Monastery] (Sikelianos), nar, orch, 1937; Astrapsen i anatoli [The East is Glowing] (trad.), 1v/unison chorus, orch, 1940

Apo ti zoi ke tous kaimous tou Kapetan Lyra [From the Life and Longings of Captain Lyras] (Kalomiris), nar, S, S/Mez, T, Bar, orch, 1941–3, rev. 1946, 1956–7; Stis traghoudhistras technis ta palatia [To the Palaces of the Art of Song] (Palamas), nar, fl, str, 1943, rev. 1946; I katastrofi ton Psaron (Solomos), nar, orch, ?1949; Sym. no.3 'Palamiki' (Palamas), nar, orch, 1955

Songs (1v, pf unless otherwise stated): 3 Songs (Kalomiris), 1902; Apo hores ke horia [From Countries and Villages] (Kalomiris), 1904–9; Ores [Hours] (M. Malakassis), 1906; Tambouras ke kopanos [Lute and Stick] (A. Pallis), 1908; I katara [The Curse] (trad.), 1909; Qnt with voice (L. Mavilis, trad.), female v, pf qnt, 1912; 3 kopelles lygheres [3 Young Maidens] (Palamas), 1913, rev. 1943; 2 adherfadhes [2 Sisters] (I. Damverghis), 1914/1915; To thama [The Miracle] (N. Papagheorghiou), 1915; Venizelos (A. Doxas), 1917

Vradhynoi thryloi [Evening Legends] (K. Hatzopoulos), 1940–41; Sotto voce (Carthaeos), 1943; To palio dhendro [The Old Tree] (Carthaeos), 1943; Pentasyllavoi (Palamas), 1943; Kýklos tón tetrástichon [Cycle of Quatrains] (Palamas), 1v, va, 1943; Kapoia loghakia [Some Tender Words] (Palamas), 1v, cl, hp, 1943; 5 Songs (Palamas), 1944; Pérases [You Passed By] (Hatzopoulos), 1944; 23 folksong arrs.

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Romeiki, suite, 1907, rev. 1910, 1936; Rhapsody, pf, orch, 1925, orchd Pierné; Nissiotikes zografies [Island Pictures], vn, orch, 1928, rev. 1939; 3 Greek Dances, 1934; Sym. Conc., pf, orch, 1935, arr. 2 pf; Triptych, 1937, rev. 1940; Minas o rebelos, sym. poem, after K. Bastias, 1940; Concertino, vn, small orch, 1955, arr. vn, pf; To dachtylidi tis manas, suite [from op]

Chbr: Anatoliki zografia [Oriental Picture], pf, 1902; Ya ta hellinopoula [For Greek Children], 3 vols., pf, 1905–49; Ballades, pf: no.1, e, 1905, rev. 1933, no.2, A♭, 1905, no.3, e♭, 1906, rev. 1958; Nocturne, pf, 1906, rev. 1908; Patinadha, pf, 1907; Prelude and Fugue, 2 pf, 1908; 2 rhapsodies, pf, 1921; Pf Trio, 1921; Fantasy Qt, fl, eng hn, va, hp, 1921, rev. 1954; 5 Preludes, pf, 1939; Sonata, vn, pf, 1948

MSS and parts in Manolis Kalomiris Society Archives, Athens

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Gaitanos, Kalomiris, Senart

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (M. Dounias)

M. Kalomiris: Apo tin historia tis Ellinikis Moussikis [From the history of Greek music] (Athens, 1919)

M. Kalomiris: 'I zoi mou ke i téchni mou' [My life and my art], Nea hestia, xxxv–xxxvii (1944–5), passim; incl. posth. frags. (Athens, 1988)

C.S. Solomonidis: 'Kalomiris', Smyrnéoi akadimaïki [Academicians from Smyrna] (Athens, 1966), 51–101

G.S. Zack: The Music Dramas of Manolis Kalomiris (diss., Florida State U., 1972)

F. Anoyanakis: Katalogos ergon Manoli Kalomiri (1883–1962) [Catalogue of the works of Kalomiris] (Athens, 1964; Eng. trans. 1986)

T. Bourlos: Me to Manoli Kalomiri [With Manolis Kalomiris]; incl. G. Leotsakos, Manolis Kalomiris: a Short Biographical Essay (Athens, 1983)

G. Leotsakos: 'O Manolis Kalomiris se ellinikous diskous 78 strofon: aformi ya mia proti érevna sta mavra hronia tis zois tou' [Manolis Kalomiris on Greek 78 r.p.m. records: an opportunity for research into the 'black' years of his life], Moussikologhia, iv (1989), 169–90

G. Leotsakos: 'About a bitter musical feud which began in 1908', Lychnos ypo ton modion [Light under a bushel], Crete University Press CUP 11 (1999) [disc notes], 8–24, 56–7

P. Tsalahouris: Manoli Kalomiri: érga [Manolis Kalomiris: works] (forthcoming)

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Kalophonic chant (from Gk.: 'beautiful sound'). A genre of ornate liturgical chant found in post-14th-century Byzantine AKOLOUTHIAI and other musical manuscripts. The kalophonic technique of embellishment was applied to traditional melodies, which from the 14th century onwards were regarded as 'ancient', and in newly composed florid settings. Kalophonic chants gradually replaced the more limited centonate asmatikon chants of the 13th century.

Two types of text are generally interwoven within a kalophonic chant: one or more lines from a Greek liturgical text combined with teretismata (passages of meaningless syllables). In those chants with texts drawn from the psalms, composers would often juxtapose lines and edit verses to suit their own purposes (anagrammatismoi). The chant melodies are melismatically embellished and frequently amplified by kratēmata (independent melodic units made up of teretismata), resulting in a rhapsodic assemblage of melodic fragments linked sequentially. A characteristic of the kalophonic style, occurring particularly in the highly prolix kratēmata, is the use of series of repeated pitches – a repercussive vocal effect often accompanied by rapid changes of pitch at the interval of a 4th or 5th. The performance of the kalophonic repertory would have required not only a professional cathedral or monastic choir but also highly trained soloists; that singers existed who possessed the necessary vocal abilities is evidence of the flowering of Byzantine chant during the late empire.

The tendency towards virtuoso decoration and expansion was confined first of all to those musical items in the Byzantine rite that gradually acquired new and prominent positions, such as the doxastika, kontakia, allēlouïaria and processional chants; but in time the new style came to dominate all categories. More specifically, the Palaeologan composers understood this idiom in terms of the kratēmata, which they believed improved and enhanced the older hymns and psalms. A special kind of kalophonic chant in the akolouthiai is the 'composite' setting, in which a short texted prologos precedes a kratēma; the latter functions as an effusive coda and can be described as a single, long teretisma. Although most kalophonic chants are by a single composer, 'composite' chants may combine the work of two; for example, the prologos may be by one composer and its appended kratēma by another.

Since kalophony enabled composers to express their own creative preferences, the technique eventually became a medium for free composition, independent of traditional models. Nevertheless, the innovation was not without a theoretical foundation: the melismatic flourishes operated within a system of standardized ornaments known as theseis, which indicated the nature and extent of the embellishment. Below the diastematic neumes Byzantine composers added a subsidiary line of notation for the theseis, enabling singers to supply the required dynamic refinement and melodic extension to the chants.

See also BYZANTINE CHANT, §12.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.V. Williams: 'The Treatment of Text in the Kalophonic Chanting of Psalm 2', Studies in Eastern Chant, ii, ed. M. Velimirović (London, 1971), 173–93

D.E. Conomos: Byzantine Trisagia and Cheroubika of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries (Thessaloniki, 1974), 43–7

D.E. Conomos: The Late Byzantine and Slavonic Communion Cycle (Washington DC, 1985), 67–146

DIMITRI CONOMOS

Kalous, Václav (bap. Solnice, nr Rychnov nad Kněžnou, 27 Jan 1715; d Rychnov nad Kněžnou, 22 July 1786). Czech composer. He is best known under his monastic name, Simon à Scto Bartholomaeo (or simply Simon). After studying at the Piarist Gymnasium in Rychnov nad Kněžnou, he began serving his novitiate in Lipník nad Bečvou (17 October 1736), where with special dispensation he was able to take his vows after a year, on 23 October 1737. Thereafter he worked in colleges and schools of his order as priest, teacher, organist and choirmaster. His best-known pupils were F.X. Brixi and Antonín Brosmann. He taught in Strážnice (1737–8, 1761–9), Vienna (1738–9, 1741–2), Horn (1739–41, 1742–4), Mikulov (1745–6), Kosmonosy (1746–8, 1756–7), Lipník nad Bečvou (1748–50), Benešov (1750–52), Prague (1752–6), Slaný (1757–9) and Kroměříž (1759–61). In 1769 he began working in Rychnov nad Kněžnou, where he remained until his death, even though the local Piarist Gymnasium was closed in 1783.

Kalous is one of the prolific Czech composers of the 18th century who mastered the technique of church music but had little individuality. The mingling of Baroque elements (mainly from the works of Caldara and J.J. Fux) with incipient Classical traits (simplification of the harmony and the preponderance of homophonic writing) is typical of Kalous's work. His melody is vocal, rich in Baroque sequences and coloratura, but almost without chromaticism and dotted rhythms. He composed mostly for one or four voices accompanied by two violins, viola, bass and organ, occasionally with added oboes, horns and trumpets. He introduced into Czech church music the type of three-sectional Italian offertory made up of a homophonic vocal tutti, solo arias and a concluding vocal fugue prefaced by a short homophonic introduction. Kalous's works were popular in Bohemia and Moravia up to the first two decades of the 19th century. A thematic catalogue compiled by Straka lists 103 items, but does not include (for instance) the music for school plays which Kalous presumably wrote but which has not been found.

WORKS

MSS, mostly in CZ-Bm, KRa, Pnm, SK-BRnm

27 masses; Requiem

2 Vespers; 8 litanies; 11 Regina coeli; 5 Salve regina; 4 Stationes theophoricae; Sepolcro Affectus erga Christum in sepulcro (on parts of the Stabat mater text)

44 offertories, graduals and other smaller church compositions

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Horányi: Scriptores piarum scholarum, ii (Buda, 1809)

A. Breitenbacher: Hudební archiv kolegiátního kostela Sv. Mořice v Kroměříži [The music archives of the collegiate church of St Mořic in Kroměříž] (Kroměříž, 1928), 194ff

A. Breitenbacher: Hudební archiv z bývalé piaristické koleje v Kroměříži [The music archives of the former Piarist College in Kroměříž] (Kroměříž, 1937), 48ff

V. Straka: Život a dílo P. Simona à Scto Bartholomaeo [The life and work of Fr Simon à Scto Bartholomaeo] (diss., U. of Brno, 1946) [with thematic catalogue]

V. Straka: 'Melodika offertorií Václava Kalouse' [The melodic structure of Václav Kalous's offertories], Musikologie, v (1958), 49–70

JIŘÍ SEHNAL

Kalsons, Romualds (b Riga, 7 Sept 1936). Latvian composer and conductor. He graduated from Skulte's composition class (1960) and from Lindberg's orchestral conducting class (1971) at the Latvian State Conservatory. From 1957 to 1973 he was a producer for Latvian radio and television; he then joined the teaching staff at the conservatory, becoming a professor in 1987 and head of the composition department in 1992. A versatile, individual and searching composer, he has concentrated on symphonic and vocal genres. His early symphonic pieces, neo-romantic in character, also bear the marks of Expressionism. During the 1970s he was greatly influenced by the neo-classical tradition, while folk music features prominently in his music of the 1980s. His orchestral works are characterized by intense emotional expression and rich, pointed orchestration. His perception, especially in the song cycles, is highly romantic and incorporates elements of irony, satire and the grotesque.

WORKS

(selective list)

Op: Pazudušais dēls [The Prodigal Son] (after R. Blaumanis), 1995

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1965; Pirms aiziešanas [Before the Departure], sym. episode, 1966; Sym. no.2 'In modo classico', 1968; Romantiska poēma, 1969; Vc Conc., 1970; Sym. no.3, 1972; Sym. no.4 'Jauni sapņi no vecām pasakām' [New Dreams from Old Tales], after O. Vācietis, orch, nar, 1974; Poem-fantasia, 1975; Conc. grosso, 1977; Variations, pf, 1978; Vn Conc., 1978; Kāzu dziesmas [Wedding Songs], suite, 1979; Retrospection [Retrospekcija], sym. poem, 1980; Chbr Sym., 1981; Conc., cl, chbr orch, 1982; Variations, 1982; Gadskārtu ieražu dziesmas [Calendar Songs], suite, 1985; Mosaic, suite, 1991; Chbr Sym. no.2 'Finnish' ['Somn'], 1992; Concertino 'Serio ê buffo', 2 pic tpt, chbr orch, 1993

Choral: Atvadvārdi [Parting Words] (cant.), 1971; Halleluja, 1989; Petrus (orat), 1993

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1973; 12 Latvian Folksongs [12 latviešu tautasdziesmas], pf, 1980; Mosaic, pf 4 hands, 1982; Trio Piccolo, vn, vc, pf, 1985; Dialoghi quasi sonata, cl, vc, 1987; 5 movimenti, pf, 1987; Ostinato Variations [Harmoniskas ostinato variācijas], hpd, 1991

Song cycles: early works (Omar Khayyām, J. Prévert, F. García Lorca, Ye. Yevtushenko, M. Carème), 1958–69; Daži prātīgi dialogi [Some Sensible Dialogues] (I. Ziedonis, I. Auziņš, U. Leinerts, V. Lirzemnieks), 1967; Ķēžu dziesmas [Chain Songs] (M. Čaklais), 1974; Vienkāršās dziesmas [Simple Songs] (L. Briduka, D. Avotiņa, M. Losberga, A. Bergmanis, M. Bārbale, M. Kerliņa), 1976; Mīlestība [Love] (Vācietis), 1977; Mātei [To Mother] (Ā. Elksne), 1981; 8 Latvian Folksongs [8 latviešu tautasdziesmas], 1983; Tēma ar variācijām, 1987; Visa mūža garumā [All Life Long] (K. Skujenieks), 1987; Triptych '1941. . .1949. . .1989', 1990

Solo and choral songs, org music, incid music, film scores

Principal publishers: Leduc, Liesma, Muzika, Sovetskiy kompozitor

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (L. Lesle)

L. Murniece, ed.: Muzïka sovetskoy Latvii [Music of Soviet Latvia] (Riga, 1988), 73–9

JĒKABS VĪTOLIŅŠ/ARNOLDS KLOTIŅŠ

Kalter [Aufrichtig], Sabine (b Jarosław, 28 March 1890; d London, 1 Sept 1957). Polish mezzo-soprano. She studied in Vienna and made her début at the Volksoper in 1911.

From 1915 to 1935 she was engaged at Hamburg, and was especially successful in Verdi and Wagner, and as Delilah, Gluck's Orpheus, Fidès (Le prophète) and Marina (Boris Godunov). Being Jewish, she had to leave Germany in 1935; she settled in London, where she sang with much success at Covent Garden, 1935–9, as Ortrud (the role of her début there), Fricka, Waltraute, Brangäne, Herodias (Salome) and Háta (The Bartered Bride). From 1939 she sang in concert and recital and taught in London. She had a warm, beautiful voice and strong dramatic ability. She made few recordings, among them Brangäne in a complete 1936 Tristan with Melchior and Flagstad.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Wulf: 'Sabine Kalter: eine jüdische Altistin, bis 1935 auf einer deutschen Staatsoperbühne', Folgen des Nazismus für die internationale Musikkultur (Frankfurt, 1993), 147–58

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/R

Kalthum, Ibrahim Um. See UMM KULTHŪM.

Kalwitz, Seth. See CALVISIUS, SETHUS.

Kamal, Trisutji (Djuliati) (b Jakarta, 1936). Indonesian composer. She grew up in the Sultanate of Langkat in Binjai, Sumatra, which was renowned for its appreciation of Western classical music. Unusually for an Indonesian woman, Kamal trained in Europe, studying the piano and composition with Badings at the Amsterdam Conservatory, then attending the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris and the Rome Conservatory. Returning to Indonesia in 1967, she joined Frans Haryadi and Jaya Suprana at the forefront of Indonesian contemporary music during the Suharto regime. In 1969 she was commissioned to write the work for percussion ensemble Dari Celah-celah Kehidupan ('From the Spaces of Life'). Pentatonic gamelan music began to influence Kamal's works in the 1950s and 60s, as in the ballet suite Gunung Agung (''Mount Agung', 1963–70). Inspired by the call to prayer, she began to incorporate elements of Islamic culture into her music in 1974. These dual influences have caused her to move away from tonal music. Her religious experiences in Mecca are reflected in the piano piece Menara Mesjid Nabawi ('The Minaret of the Nabawi Mosque'), in which she transcends her preoccupation with sophisticated playing technique, attempting instead to find a musical language appropriate to her expressive needs. While echoes and silences attest to her economy of material, the soft, long-flowing unaccompanied melodies recall the Islamic call to prayer. One of the most prolific of Indonesian composers, she has written music for opera, ballet and film as well as orchestral, chamber and choral works. Performances of her works in Europe and Asia have often involved the ensemble of two pianos and traditional percussion instruments that she founded to perform her works.

FRANKI RADEN

Kamāncheh [k'aman, kamancha, kamanche, kamanja, k'emanch'a, kemanche, kemence] (Pers.: 'little bow'). Term applied to various types of fiddle found mainly in Iran, the Caucasus and Turkey. The word kamāncheh is documented from the 10th century, and the instrument probably reached Byzantium in the 11th or 12th century via Anatolia. Related instruments are found in Arab countries (kamanja, but alternative terms are more common) and in the Balkans.

1. Spike fiddles. 2. Short-necked fiddles.

1. SPIKE FIDDLES. The kamāncheh is the spike fiddle of Iran, Armenia (k'emanch'a), Azerbaijan (also kamancha) and Georgia (kemanche). This instrument has a spherical body built of tapering wooden sections or carved in one piece; the type used in popular music may have a cone-shaped body open at the back, or be made of a spherical gourd. It is often decorated with mother-of-pearl and bone. The bridge rests on a circular sound-table which is made of animal membrane or fish-skin. The rounded neck is fixed to a spike which passes through the body and acts as a support for the instrument; the total length is usually 65 to 90 cm. Formerly the kamāncheh had three silk strings, while the modern classical instrument has four metal strings attached to wooden pegs. Originally in Armenia they were tuned in 4ths; contemporary tuning is in 4ths and 5ths: a–e′–a′–e″. This tuning was standardized in Armenia by the virtuoso k'emanch'a player Sasha Oganezashvili (Aleksandr Oganyan) at the beginning of the 20th century. During performance the player rests the instrument vertically on the knee, and turns the instrument to meet the bow rather than guiding the bow across the strings, as in Western practice. The bow hair is tightened by inserting the fingers between the horsehair and the wood.

The classical kamāncheh in Iran dates from the 15th century or earlier (see illustration), and was mentioned in Azerbaijan by Nezāi Ganjavi (1141–1203). It is used for light music (motrebi), and is the only bowed string instrument in the classical tradition of Iran. The Turkmen regard it as their principal instrument alongside the dotār, as do the Lors in south-west Iran, and it is also found among the Kurds in the north, and in Khorāssān. The 18th-century Armenian ashugh-poet Sayat'-Nova celebrated the instrument in a poem called K'amancha.

Because of its soft, beautiful timbre and technical possibilities, the kamāncheh is used equally as a solo or an ensemble instrument. At the end of the 1920s, the Armenian master Vardan Buni (Buniatyan) created a k'emanch'a family (soprano, alto, bass and double bass) which he used in the Yerevan Oriental Symphony Orchestra.

The four-string spike fiddle of Iraq, currently called joza (Arab.: 'coconut'), is also known as al kamāna-l-baghdādiyya. It consists of a small resonator made from a hollowed-out coconut cut off at both ends. One opening is covered by the skin of a still-born lamb or a fish; the other remains open. The shape and size of the instrument, which is usually between 60 and 70 cm long, are dictated by those of the coconut; on average the diameter of the membrane is from 5 to 7 cm and that of the opposite opening is between 10 and 13 cm. The neck, between 50 and 60 cm long, is of apricot or bitter orange wood; there are four pegs (mafātīḥ), two on each side. A metal spike at the other end passes through the coconut. Steel strings of different gauges are attached to the spike and pass over a grooved wooden bridge (ghazāla) on the membrane. The bow is made of pliable wood – bitter orange, oak or white beech – and is slightly curved; lengths of horsehair are attached to each end and drawn tight.

The joza is traditionally tuned in perfect 4ths, usually a–d′–g′– c″, but sometimes the alternative tuning g–d′–g′–c″ is used. A tuning in 5ths is also found, akin to that of the Western violin family. The exact pitch is chosen to suit the voice it accompanies, and transposition is often effected by a capo tasto made of thread. The compass is about two octaves. It is possible to increase the instrument's range by using Western tuning, but as a result the traditional sonority associated with the instrument is sacrificed. The instrument rests at an angle on the knee of the player, who grasps the neck in his left hand. To reach certain positions, the player must swivel the neck while playing.

Kamāncheh played by a fettered demon: Persian painting, Turkmen or Timurid period, 15th century (Freer Gallery of Art, Washington, DC)

The joza is used to accompany urban classical music (al maqām al 'iraqi) as part of the local traditional ensemble, al chālghī al baghdādī. Recently the instrument has been played solo. Its technique is transmitted orally; more recently it has also been taught in music institutes where Western methods have had increasing influence.

2. Short-necked fiddles. In Turkey the kemençe has a box resonator carved in the shape of a trough with rounded ends and covered with a coniferous wooden sound-table. The short neck, with or without fingerboard, tapers to a flat pear-shaped pegbox. There are three strings of gut or metal which are tuned in 4ths and played underhand with a short horsehair bow. The kemençe is played either sitting, with the lower part of the body resting on the knee, or standing. Sometimes the player leads a dance while playing. The instrument is used solo and to accompany song as well as dance.

The kemençe of the eastern Black Sea coastal region is sometimes called the karadeniz kemençesi ('Black Sea fiddle'); in western Turkey the kemençe is similar to the Greek lira of the eastern Aegean type, and is sometimes called the fasıl kemençesi ('classical kemençe) or kemençe rumi ('Greek kemençe'). It has a pear-shaped body and three metal or gut strings which are stopped from the side with the fingernails. It is rested on the player's knee or held against the chest and played with underhand bowing. This type of kemençe is used mainly in classical fasıl (Turkish art music) and is becoming rarer as the keman (European violin) gains in popularity.

The short-necked fiddle of Armenia, the k'aman or k'amani, was one of the favourite instruments of the Armenian ashugh, but has now become rare. It has a narrow rectangular body with a wooden belly and fingerboard, and is played held vertically on the knee. The three (sometimes four) metal strings do not have a fixed tuning, but are often tuned in 4ths. A special characteristic of the k'aman is the presence of sympathetic strings under the fingerboard, which are tuned either in unison with the main strings or an octave above them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Vertkov, G. Blagodatov and E. Yazovitskaya, eds.: Atlas muzïkal'nïkh instrumentov naradov SSSR (Moscow, 1963, 2/1975 with 4 discs)

N. Caron and D. Safvate: Iran: les traditions musicales (Paris, 1966)

J. Spector: 'Musical Tradition and Innovation', Central Asia: a Century of Russian Rule, ed. E. Allworth (New York, 1967), 434–84

L. Picken: Folk Musical Instruments of Turkey (London, 1975)

S.Q. Hassan: Les instruments de musique en Irak et leur rôle dans la société traditionelle (Paris, 1980)

J. During: La musique iranienne: tradition et évolution (Paris, 1984)

J. During: La musique traditionelle de l'Azerbayjan et la science des muqams (Baden-Baden, 1988)

JEAN DURING, ROBERT AT'AYAN, JOHANNA SPECTOR, SCHEHERAZADE QASSIM HASSAN, R. CONWAY MORRIS

Kamburov, Ivan (b Lyaskovets, 26 Sept 1883; d Sofia, 23 Jan 1955). Bulgarian musicologist. After schooling in Ruse he studied with Reger, Krehl and Schering at the Leipzig Conservatory (1905–9, with interruptions), and on returning to Bulgaria taught music and trained choirs in Plovdiv and (from 1918) in Sofia, where he began his career as a critic and popularizer of music. He worked with the ethnomusicologist Vasil Stoin (1926–8) as editor of the journal Muzikalen zhivot (1928, 1930–31) and as director of the music section of the chamber of folk culture (1945–7). His publications are mainly about Bulgarian music and include about 800 articles.

WRITINGS

Balgarska muzika: minalo i savremennost [Bulgarian music: past and present] (Varna, 1926)
Operno izkustvo i nashi operni deytsi [The art of opera and our opera singers] (Sofia, 1926)
Muzika i narod [Music and folk] (Sofia, 1932)
Ilyustrovan muzikalen rechnik [Illustrated music dictionary] (Sofia, 1933)
Emanuil Manolov (Sofia, 1934)
Angel Bukoreshtliev (Plovdiv, 1946)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Kamel, Antonín. See KAMMEL, ANTONÍN.

Kamieński [Kamięski, Kamenický, Kamenský], Maciej (b Slovakia, 13 Oct 1734; d Warsaw, 25 Jan 1821). Polish composer of Slovak origin. He studied music in Sopron under the patronage of Count Henckl von Donnersmarck, after whose death in 1760 he continued his studies in Vienna; there, in 1762, he heard the young Mozart play. His first visit to Warsaw appears to have been in 1773, when the publishing house of J. Engel issued a number of his works for harpsichord (no longer extant). He supported himself by giving piano and singing lessons. For many years he was the proprietor of a Warsaw inn (on Świętojerska street) and he organized public concerts at the so-called Dulfowski manor house.

Kamieński composed eight operas, two to German texts. His place in the history of Polish music is assured primarily on account of his opera Nędza uszczęśliwiona ('Poverty made Happy') (1778), the first Polish opera performed in a public theatre. This was a reworking and extension of his earlier two-act cantata of the same title. The opera made a considerable impact in Warsaw and opened a new, golden era for Polish musical theatre. Kamieński referred to his operas as operettas. His musical language comprised a mixture of styles, including elements of Baroque opera, galant and Classical styles, together with some characteristics of opera buffa; each of these is well represented in Nędza uszczęśliwiona.

In his subsequent operas, particularly in Zośka, czyli Wiejskie zaloty ('Sophia, or Country Courtship') (1780), which was received with even greater acclaim (76 performances in Warsaw up to 1820), Kamieński turned more and more towards folklore, adapting structures drawn from authentic Polish folk music. In addition to extended coloratura arias, and arias of the expressivo type, there now appeared typical village songs and various Polish dances, above all the polonaise. Kamieński's overall creative achievement in his operas is defined by his good understanding of the stage, by his melodic ingenuity and by his skilful choice of musical techniques. His Krótki rys o egzystencji najpierwszej oryginalnej opery polskiej ('A Short Outline of the Original Polish Opera') was edited in Biblioteka Warszawska, iv (Warsaw, 1878). Kamieński also composed instrumental music. Early Romantic tendencies are present in his piano piece Duma na kształt ronda ('Duma in the form of a rondo'), which opened the way for a new Polish lyric instrumental style.

WORKS

first performed in Warsaw unless otherwise stated

Nędza uszczęśliwiona [Poverty made Happy] (operetta, 2, W. Bogusławski, after F. Bohomolec), 11 July 1778, PL-Kj, frag., pf, *Wtm; ed. in Opery polskie, ii (Kraków, 1978)
Zośka, czyli Wiejskie zaloty [Sophia, or Country Courtship] (operetta, 1, S. Szymański), 17 Oct 1780, lost
Prostota cnotliwa [Virtuous Simplicity] (operetta, 3, Bohomolec), 8 Feb 1781, lost
Balik gospodarski [The Burgher's Ball] (comic op, 3, F. Zabłocki, after C.-S. Favart), 14 Sept 1783, lost
Anton und Antoinette, 1785 (1, A. Słowaczyński, after J. Desboulmiers), unperf., lost
Tradycia dowcipem załatwiona [Tradition Resolved by Humour] (operetta, 1, Zabłocki), 27 May 1789 [ov. by Antoni Wejnert, Kamieński's brother-in-law], *Wtm; ed. J. Prosnak, Kultura muzyczna Warszawy XVIII wieku [Music in Warsaw in the 18th Century] (Kraków, 1955)
Słowik czyli Kasia z Hanką na wydaniu [The Nightingale, or Kasia and Hanka, Two Marriageable Girls] (operetta, 2, M. Witkowski), 19 Jan 1790 [ov. by Wejnert], *Wtm
Sultan Wampum, oder Die Wünsche, 1794 (op, 3, A. Kotzebue), unperf., lost

OTHER WORKS

Kantata w dzień inauguracji statui króla Jana III Sobieskiego [cant. on the Unveiling of the Statue of Jan III Sobieski] (A. Naruszewicz), 3 S, T, chorus, orch, 14 Sept 1788, *Wtm; ov. frag. ed. J. Prosnak, Kultura muzyczna Warszawy XVIII wieku (Kraków, 1955)
Pieśń na dzień 3 maia na parafie [Song on the Anniversary of the Constitution of 3 May 1792] (J. Lubański), 1v, pf (Warsaw, 1792)
Duma na kształt ronda [Ballad in the Form of a Rondo], pf; Andante, pf; Czy to nie jest udręczenie [Isn't it Anguish?], 1v, pf: all in Wybór pięknych dzieł muzycznych i pieśni polskich [Collection of the Finest Musical Works and Polish Songs], ix–xii (Warsaw, 1805), Duma na kształt ronda also ed. H. Feicht, Muzyka staropolska [Old Polish Music] (Kraków, 1966)
Masses, Passion, offs, other religious works, patriotic and lyric songs, other pf pieces and polonaises: all lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (W. Poźniak); SMP
[J. Elsner:] 'Die Oper der Polen', AMZ, no.20 (1812), 323–4
H. Opieński: 'Stopięćdziesięciolecie opery polskiej' [150 years of Polish opera], Muzyka, v/12 (1928), 557–69
S. Zetowski: 'Prawda o muzyce najpierwszej opery polskiej Nędzy uszczęśliwionej M. Kamieńskiego' [The truth about the music of the very first Polish opera], Śpiewak, xviii (1937), no.5, pp.66–7; no.6, pp.80–81
A. Nowak-Romanowicz: 'Znaczenie historyczne fortepianowej Dumy Macieja Kamieńskiego' [The historical significance of Duma], Z dziejów muzyki polskiej [From the history of Polish music], ix (1965), 44–52
A. Żórawska-Witkowska: 'Maciej Kamieński (1734–1821): twórca polskiej opery narodowej' [Kamieński: creator of Polish national opera], Wiek Oświecenia [The Age of Enlightenment], i (1978), 107–36
A. Żórawska-Witkowska: Muzyka na dworze i w teatrze Stanisława Augusta [Music at the court and theatre of Stanisław August] (Warsaw, 1995)
A. Nowak-Romanowicz: 'Kamieński Maciej', Encyclopedia muzyczna PWM, ed. E. Dziębowska, v (Kraków, 1997)

BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Kaminski, Heinrich (b Tiengen, nr Waldshut, 4 July 1886; d Ried, nr Benediktbeuren, 21 June 1946). German composer of Polish descent. Kaminski's musical talent emerged relatively late. In 1909 he went to Berlin where he took composition lessons with Juon, H. Kaun and W. Klatte, but he was otherwise largely self-taught. In 1914 he retired to Ried near Lake Kochel, where he remained, taking private pupils (including Carl Orff), until 1930, when he was given charge of a masterclass in composition at the Prussian Academy of the Arts in Berlin, in succession to Pfitzner. In 1933 he resigned his appointments. An invitation to return to Berlin in 1938 foundered because Kaminski's origins were not 'pure Aryan', and for the same reason, performances of his music in Germany were made difficult, or even forbidden. His last major work was an opera, Das Spiel vom König Aphelius, which had its first performance in Göttingen five years after his death.

For Kaminski, music was not a 'craft', but a revelation of the fundamental laws of the universe and of life. This standpoint resulted in insularity, and Kaminski's esoteric art has not had wide appeal, except for a few successes in the 1920s. Among his first works was the Clarinet Quartet (1912), a piece that is close to Brahms and shows little sign of Kaminski's later austerity, and a setting of Psalm cxxx (1912), a late-Romantic view of Bach. However by the beginning of the 1920s these traits, together with a connection with late Beethoven evident in the String Quintet in F♯ minor (1916), were left behind. While titles such as that of his most successful orchestral work, the Concerto grosso, suggest contemporary neo-classical trends, Kaminski was far from adopting old forms, although he had a deep affinity with the counterpoint of the Baroque. His organ toccata Wie schön leucht' uns der Morgenstern takes Reger as its point of departure, but goes beyond him in the intricacy of the counterpoint and the decidedly non-orchestral handling of the instrument (for example, the swell and crescendo pedals are not used). Other organ pieces – the Choralsonate and the Toccata and Fugue – show his struggle to achieve organic development without dependence on formal schemes. The songs, which are richly melismatic and have freely polyphonic accompaniments, have been described as solo motets. Of the choral works, the Magnificat suggests a return to the spirit of the Gothic period. Kaminski was essentially an untheatrical composer; his first opera, Jürg Jenatsch, characterized by a mixture of spoken and sung dialogue, was first staged in Dresden in 1929; the second, Das Spiel vom König Aphelius, is a drama of ideas rather than action.

WORKS

VOCAL

Passion (incid music, Old Fr., trans. W. Schmittbonn), perf. 1920
Jürg Jenatsch (op, Kaminski, after C.F. Meyer), perf. 1929
Das Spiel vom König Aphelius (op, Kaminski), ?–1946
Choral: Ps cxxx, 1912; Ps lxix, chorus, orch, 1914; 6 Chorales, 4vv, 1915; O Herre Gott, 8vv, 1918; Introitus und Hymnus, chorus, orch, 1919; 3 Poems (J. von Eichendorff), male chorus 6vv, 1924; Mag, S, chorus, va, orch, 1925; Der Mensch, A, 6vv, 1926; Prelude and Prologue: Der Mensch, chorus, orch, 1926; Die Erde, 6vv, 1928; Die Messe deutsch (1947), inc.; Sylvesterchoral, 4vv (1949); other motets, folksong arrs.
Songs incl. Brautlied, S, org, 1911; Cantiques bretons, 1v, pf, 1923; 3 geistliche Lieder, S, cl, vn, 1924; Triptychon, A, org, 1926–9; Lied eines Gefangenen, 1v, pf, 1936; Weihnachtsspruch, 1v, pf, 1938; Hochzeitsspruch, 2A, org, 1940; In memoriam, A, vn, orch, 1940; Dem Gedächtnis eines verwundeten Soldaten, 2S, pf, 1941

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Concerto grosso, double orch, 1922; Werk für Streichorchester [version of Str Qnt], 1927; Dorische Musik, 1933; Orchesterkonzert mit Klavier, 1936; Tanzdrama, 1942
Chbr: Qt, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1912; Str Qt, F, 1913; Str Qnt, f♯, 1916, rev. 1927, orchd 1927; Qnt, cl, hn, vn, va, vc, 1924; Prelude and Fugue on 'Abegg', str qt, 1927; Musik, 2 vn, hpd, 1931; Prelude and Fugue, va, 1934; Musik, vc, pf, 1938; Hauskonzert, vn, pf, 1941; Ballade, hn, pf, 1943
Organ: Wie schön leucht' uns der Morgenstern, 1923; Choralsonate, 1926; 3 Chorale Preludes, 1928; Toccata and Fugue, 1939; Andante, 1939; Chorale Prelude 'Mein' Seel' iststille', 1940; small pieces for vn, org
Pf: Klavierbuch, 3 vols., 1934; 10 kleine Übungen für das polyphone Klavierspiel, 1935; Klavierbüchlein (1948)

Principal publisher: Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (I. Samson)
S. Günter: 'Heinrich Kaminski', Die Musik, xxii/7 (1929–30), 489–94
H.J. Moser: 'Heinrich Kaminski', ZfM, Jg.96 (1929), 601–7
H. Mersmann: 'Heinrich Kaminski', Die Kammermusik, iv (Leipzig, 1930), 138–42
E. Krieger: 'Heinrich Kaminski's Drama "Jürg Jenatsch"', ZfM, Jg.100 (1933), 992–5
K. Schleifer: 'Heinrich Kaminski, Leben und Werk', Musica, i (1947), 70–81
R. Schwarz-Schilling and K. Schleifer: Heinrich Kaminski: Werkverzeichnis (Kassel, 1947)
H.F. Redlich: 'In memoriam Heinrich Kaminski', MMR, lxxvii (1947), 185–8
W. Abegg and others: Heinrich Kaminski (Tutzing, 1986)
H. Hartog: Heinrich Kaminski: Leben und Werk (Tutzing, 1987)

KLAUS KIRCHBERG

Kaminski, Joseph (b Odessa, 17 Nov 1903; d Tel-Aviv, 14 Oct 1972). Israeli composer and violinist. The son of the Jewish actress Esther Rachel Kaminska, he grew up in Warsaw. After working as a violinist he studied composition in Berlin with Friedrich Koch (1922) and in Vienna with Gál. On his return to Warsaw he was made leader of the Polish RO and he founded the Warsaw String Quartet, which won the Marshal Pilsudski Competition in 1934. In 1937 Kaminski was invited by Bronislav Huberman to become one of the leaders of the Palestine Orchestra (later the Israel PO), then in its second year. He settled in Tel-Aviv and stayed with the orchestra until his retirement in 1969. His creative work was influenced by a range of sources from Gregorian chant to the music of Richard Strauss, and including the oriental elements of Israeli folk music.

The best of Kaminski's work is found in the progressive Triptych for piano and two concertante pieces: the witty Trumpet Concertino and the Violin Concerto, a more powerful and dramatic work although its last movement is lighter, with a Jewish theme and Sephardi dance rhythms. Kaminski played the solo part at the work's première in 1954, and in the same year was awarded the Engel Prize of the Tel-Aviv municipality.

WORKS
(selective list)

Tpt Concertino, 1941; Ballad, hp, orch, 1944; Str Qt, 1945; A Comedy Ov., 1946; Vn Conc., 1947–8; Israeli Sketches, orch, 1955; Triptych, pf, 1959; Sym. Ov., 1960

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Israel Music Institute, Israeli Music Publications

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Gradenwitz: Die Musikgeschichte Israels (Kassel, 1961), 203
Y.W. Cohen: Werden und Entwicklung der Musik in Israel (Kassel, 1976, pt. ii of rev. edn of M. Brod: Die Musik Israels)
P. Gradenwitz: Music and Musicians in Israel (Tel-Aviv, 3/1978), 31–2
Z. Keren: Contemporary Israeli Music (Ramat-Gan, 1980), 35–6, 61–2
Y.W. Cohen: Neimej smiroth Israel [The heirs of the psalmist: Israel's New Music] (Tel-Aviv, 1990), 92–3

URI TOEPLITZ

Kamisangō, Yūkō (b Otaru, 1 April 1935). Japanese musicologist. After graduating from the department of French studies at the University of Tokyo (BA 1959), he entered the department of Japanese language and literature to study Japanese music, which he had practised since childhood. After receiving a second BA in 1963, he continued to carry out research on Japanese music while working as a part-time Japanese language lecturer and a general assistant at various universities. In 1969 he joined the faculty of Tōhō Gakuen College of Music as lecturer in Japanese music, and was promoted to the rank of associate professor in 1971. After helping to form a department of musicology at the Musashino Academia

Musicae (1975–84), he moved to the Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music in 1984 as associate professor; he was promoted to full professor in 1990. His administrative abilities have been a great asset to all these universities as well as to scholarly societies such as the Musicological Society of Japan and the Society for Research in Asiatic Music.

Reflecting his training in Japanese philology, his research methodology is based upon the close examination of written sources (both manuscript and printed sources) and detailed interpretations of song texts. As a result of this research tendency, he has co-edited facsimile editions of Edo-period music books with critical commentaries (1978). At the same time, profiting from his unusual skills in Western languages, he has contributed significantly to the introduction of Japanese musics to foreign countries and has published several important works in English.

WRITINGS

with others: 'Kyōdō tyōsa: Tayasu-Tokugawa ke zō gakusyo mokuroku-sono siryôuteki igi' [A catalogue of books on Gagaku and Ch'in in the Tokugawa Collection], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, nos.41–2 (1977), 57–138 with K. Hirano: 'Kaisetu', Nihon kayō kenkyū syūsei 3, ed. K. Asano and others (Tokyo, 1978), 323–48 [critical commentaries on Sitikusyosinsyū, Sitikudaizen and Sitikukokinsyū]

ed., with E. Kikkawa: Miyagi Mitio sakuhin kaisetu zensyo [Complete book on Miyagi Mitio's works] (Tokyo, 1979)

'Traditional Elements in the Compositions of Miyagu Michio', Preservation and Development of the Traditional Performing Arts: Tokyo 1980, 143–7

'Xīnjiāpō de huárén defānbxì yīnyuè' [Local Chinese performing arts in Singapore], Guānyú Dōngnányǎ huárén chuántǒng xìjù: qǔyì zōnghé diàochá: yánjiù, ed. K. Onoe (Tokyo, 1984), 17–92

'Oral and Literate Aspects of Tradition Transmission in Japanese Music with Emphasis on syōga and hakase', The Oral and the Literate in Music: Tokyo 1985, 288–99 with C.Y. Blasdel: The Shakuhachi: a Manual for Learning (Tokyo, 1988)

'Kinsei kigaku no gassō no yōsiki' [Styles of ensemble in ziuta and sōkyoku], Iwanami kōza: Nihon no ongaku, Azia no ongaku, ed. S. Gamo and others, v (Tokyo, 1989), 289–311

ed.: Heike biwa: katari to ongaku [Heike biwa: its narratives and music] (Urawa, 1993)

Sitikuron zyosetu [Introduction to the musics of silk and bamboo] (Tokyo, 1995) [collection of essays, with short biography and complete list of writings up to 1995]

YOSIHIKO TOKUMARU

Kamkars. Iranian ensemble formed by a Kurdish family of seven brothers, one sister and her son. The Kamkars were all born in Sanandaj [Sina], Iran, and were introduced to music by their father, Hasan Kamkar, who was in charge of the music division of the Iranian army in Sanandaj. The sister, Qashang Kamkar (b 1953), studied the violin and the setār and taught the latter instrument in Tehran. Houshang Kamkar (b 1947) is a composer, violinist and kamānche player. Bizhan Kamkar (b 1949) plays the tār, the rubāb, the tombak and the def and sings in Kurdish and Persian. Early in his career he played in the children's programme broadcast by Radio Sanandaj and in the Culture and Art Orchestra of his home town; he later moved to Tehran to study music and was one of the founders of the Shaida and 'Arif ensembles. Pashang Kamkar (b 1951) is a composer and santur player and broadcast on Radio Sanandaj for five years before moving to Tehran to continue his musical career. Arzhang Kamkar (b 1956) is a painter as well as a tombak player; Arsalan Kamkar (b 1960) plays the violin and the 'ūd in the Tehran SO and is a composer of Kurdish and Persian melodies. Ardeshir Kamkar (b 1962) plays the kamānche and Ardawan Kamkar (b 1968) the santur. Omid Lotfi (b 1977), the son of Qashang Kamtar and Mohammad Reza Lotfi, frequently performs with his mother and uncles.

The work of the Kamkars has flourished in an environment of official hostility towards music. This is due partly to the ensemble's interest in both Persian and Kurdish music and partly to the tolerance shown by the state for folk-based Iranian music as an alternative to the allegedly corrupting influence of Western music. Although some Kurdish nationalists have criticized the Persian influence on the ensemble's Kurdish music, their work is very popular among Kurds both within and beyond Iran. Their concerts and recordings often include compositions associated with earlier Kurdish musicians.

RECORDINGS

Barane, Shahram SITC–161 (1993)

Kurdish Music by the Kamkars Ensemble, Shahram SITC–173 (1993)

The Kâmkârs: the Living Fire, Long-Distance 122 157 (1995)

Nightingale with a Broken Wing, Womad WSCD 009 (1997)

Kani Spei/Kanî spî [The white spring], Kereshmeh CD–110 (1999)

The Kamkars: Chant of Dreams, Quarter Tone QTCD–1004 (1999)

AMIR HASSANPOUR, STEPHEN BLUM

Kammel [Kamel, Kammell, Kamml, Khaml, Cammell], Antonín (b Běleč, bap. 21 April 1730; d ?London, 5 Oct 1784). Bohemian violinist and composer. His father was a forester on the Wallenstein estate. He studied at the Patres Piares College, Slaný (1746–51), where he received a thorough musical education. From 1751 to 1753 he probably studied philosophy at Prague University; in 1753–4 he was enrolled in the faculty of law. Kammel's marked musical talent, however, determined his career. At an unknown date Count Vincent of Waldstein sent him to Italy, where he was a pupil of Tartini in Padua. After returning to Prague Kammel excelled, according to contemporary witnesses, in the playing of adagios. By early 1765 (not 1774, as has often been maintained) he was in London; he is mentioned among London musical personalities in Leopold Mozart's travel notes from that year. In 1766 he published his first compositions in London, at his own expense. He made his first known public appearance that year and his second on 6 May 1768, at a concert arranged by J.C. Bach and C.F. Abel in Almack's Assembly Rooms. Kammel obviously had close ties with these musicians, as is indicated by the programmes of their concerts in the following years and the joint publication of quartets by Bach, Abel and Kammel. Apparently Kammel was not a member of the royal orchestra, but he was probably a royal chamber musician, as a number of his contemporaries (e.g. Forkel) mentioned. He appeared at court in chamber ensembles as a violinist and viola player, and gave annual benefit concerts in London up to 1782. He also played in Stamford, Lincs, in Bath in 1768 and 1769, and made many appearances at Blandford as well as the Salisbury and Winchester festivals in the 1770s. He may have also played in Newbury *c*1775 (he wrote a composition 'for the Assembly in Newberry'). Traditional stories about his marriage to a rich woman do not seem to be based on fact. On 20 January 1768 he was married by special licence to Ann Edicatt, who was not of age and could not write; they had six children. From 1771 they lived in the parish of St George, Half Moon Street. Kammel's will, made on 18 March 1784 in favour of his wife, their daughter and three of their sons, was taken up on 15 October the same year by two of the three executors. (The third, Charles [Carl] Christian Besser, who was in Germany at the time, was the husband of Ann Kammel's sister Lydia, mentioned in Kammel's letters as an outstanding singer.)

Kammel composed exclusively instrumental works (reports of masses by him have not been confirmed), mostly for strings: violin sonatas, duos, string trios, quartets and violin concertos, as well as sinfonias and divertimentos, where he also used wind instruments. In style these works belong to the final stages of early Classicism. They have many features in common with Haydn's early works, and in particular with the works of J.C. Bach. Kammel's simply-phrased melodies flow smoothly and have a charm bordering on oversweetness in places, with a variable degree of individuality. In many of his works, particularly in the minuets and the second themes of the sonata movements, melodic patterns reminiscent of elements of Czech folk music can be found.

From the technical point of view, Kammel's works vary in their degree of difficulty, from compositions obviously meant for amateurs or for teaching purposes to works containing exacting concertante parts (especially in the violin concertos and certain of the duets). A number of works, mainly those with higher opus numbers, have elaborate dynamic markings for all the instruments, and his inventive scoring in his music for strings also suggests a striving for originality in the use of sonorities. The works using keyboard and wind instruments show considerably less self-assurance in style.

In his time Kammel was a very successful composer, as is indicated by the number of works he published and their numerous re-editions. Most of his works were published between 1770 and 1777 in London, Paris, Amsterdam, The Hague and Berlin; only rarely were they published after 1786. A number of copied manuscripts of his works dating from the second half of the 18th century are to be found in castle and monastery collections in Bohemia; they include both copies of compositions in print as well as other, unpublished works.

WORKS

op.

1 Sei trii, 2 vn, b (London, 1766)
2 Six Duets, 2 vn (London, 1770)
3 A Second Sett of 6 Sonatas, 2 vn, b (London, *c*1770)
4 Six Quartettos, 2 vn, va, vc (London, *c*1770)
5 Six Duets, 2 vn (London, *c*1768)
6 Six Notturnos, 2 vn, b (London, *c*1770)
7 Six Quartettos, 2 vn, va, vc (London, *c*1775)
7 Concert de violon, acc. 2 vn, va, vc (Paris, *c*1770)
7 Six sonates, 2 vn (The Hague, *c*1770)
8 Six Solos, vn, hpd (London, *c*1775)
9 Six Sonatas, pf/hpd/harp, vn, vc (London, *c*1776)
9 Six sonates, vn, bc (The Hague, *c*1775); 1 ed. in MVH, xviii (1967)
10 Six Ouvertures, 2 vn, 2 ob/fl, 2 hn, hpd (London, 1775); 1 ed. in The Symphony, 1720–1840, ser. B, xiii (New York, 1984)
10 Six sonates, vn, b (Paris, *c*1772); ed. S. Gerlach and Z. Pilková, Böhmische Violinsonaten, i (Munich, 1982)
11 Concerto violons (Paris, *c*1772)
11 Six duos, 2 vn (Paris, *c*1780)
12 Six Divertimentos, a 4 (London, *c*1790)
13 Six sonates, vn, b (Paris, *c*1774)
14 Six Divertimentos: 3, 2 vn, va, vc; 3, ob/fl, va, vc (London, *c*1780)
14 Six quatuors, 2 vn, va, b (Paris, *c*1774)
15 Six Duetts: 4, 2 vn; 2, vn, va (London, *c*1785)
16 Six Sonatas, 2 vn, vc (London, *c*1785)
16 Six sonates, hpd/pf, vn, vc (Paris, *c*1776)
17 Six Divertimentos, vn, vn/va (London, *c*1781)
18 Six Duettos, 2 vn (London, *c*1785)
18 Six simphonies, 2 vn, va, b, 2 ob, 2 hn ad lib (Paris, 1782)
19 Six Notturnos, 2 vn, vc (London, *c*1785)
19 Six duos, 2 vn (Paris, n.d.)
20 Six duos, 2 vn (Paris, *c*1777)
21 Six divertimentos, a 4 (Paris, 1777)
22 Six duos, 2 vn (Paris, 1782)
23 Six trios, 2 vn, b (Paris, 1782)
25 Six notturnos, 2 vn, b (Paris, 1786)
26 Six duos, 2 vn (Paris, 1786)

Further duplication of op. nos. between London, Paris and Amsterdam cannot be ruled out. Op.24 is missing.
6 Sonatas, 2 vn, b, arr. C. Roeser (Paris, *c*1770)
A Third Sett of Trios or Ballo, consisting of 2 acts, with a short introductory ov. to each act and a collection of airs (London, *c*1770)
6 Dancing Minuets, 2 vn, b (London, *c*1775)
6 quatuors concertants … de vari autori (Paris, *c*1778)
6 duetti notturni, 2 vn (Paris, *c*1780)
6 sonates, hpd, vn, b (Paris, *c*1780)
6 duos concertants, 2 vn (Paris, n.d.)
4 sonates, in 6 Sonatas, 2 vn, vc, bc, by Bach, Abel, Kammel (London, *c*1780)
Other works (some copied from prints) in MS A-Wgm, B-Bc, CZ-Pnm, D-Dl, F-Pn, GB-Lbl; 1 sym. ed. in The Symphony, 1720–1840, ser. B, xiii (New York, 1984)
Edns: 6 ouvertures, a 8 [by composers incl. J. Stamitz, Vanhal, Haydn] (London, 1773)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS; EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; MGG1 (C.L. Cudworth); SainsburyD
J.N. Forkel: Musikalischer Almanach … 1783 (Leipzig, 1782/R), 89ff
Portefeuille für Musikliebhaber: Charakteristik von 20 Componisten und Abhandlung über die Tonkunst (Leipzig, 1792)
G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler-Lexikon (Prague, 1815/R), ii, 38ff
C.F. Pohl: Mozart und Haydn in London (Vienna, 1867/R)
M. Poštolka: Joseph Haydn a naše hudba 18. století [Haydn and Czech music of the 18th century] (Prague, 1961), 106ff
C.S. Terry: John Christian Bach (London, rev. 2/1967/R by H.C.R. Landon)
Z. Pilková and S. Šimsová: 'Nález závěti Antonína Kammela' [The discovery of Kammel's last will], HV, xxx (1993), 382–8
M. Freemanová: 'Antonín Kammel v Londýně' [Kammel in London], HV, xxxi (1994), 399–402

ZDEŇKA PILKOVÁ

Kammermusik (Ger.). See CHAMBER MUSIC.

Kammermusikaufführungen zur Förderung Zeitgenössischer Tonkunst. Festival of modern chamber music held in DONAUESCHINGEN from 1921 to 1926.

Kammerorgel (Ger.). See CHAMBER ORGAN.

Kammersymphonie (Ger.). See CHAMBER SYMPHONY.

Kammerton (Ger.: 'chamber pitch'). The modern spelling of CAMMERTON, a term used today to denote a pitch of a′ = 440. See also PITCH §I, 3.

Kamml, Antonín. See KAMMEL, ANTONÍN.

Kampa, Johannes de. See ŁODZIA Z KĘPY, JAN.

Kampanus, Jan. See CAMPANUS, JAN.

Kämper, Dietrich (b Melle, Lower Saxony, 29 June 1936). German musicologist. After piano, organ and music theory lessons with Karl Schäfer in Osnabrück he studied music at the Cologne Staatliche Hochschule für Musik and musicology at Cologne University under K.G. Fellerer (from 1956); he also studied under Kurt von Fischer in Zürich. He took the doctorate at Cologne in 1963 with a dissertation on Franz Wüllner. From 1965 he was director of the department of Rhenish music history and of the Max-Bruch-Archiv at Cologne University, where he completed his Habilitation (1967) with a work on 16th-century instrumental ensemble music. He was appointed lecturer (1970) and subsequently professor (1995) at Cologne University; he was also made professor of musicology at the Cologne Musikhochschule in 1986. Kämper's main areas of research are 16th-century Italian music, 20th-century music (particularly Futurist composers) and the music history of the Rhineland. He edited the sixth and seventh volumes of the music dictionary Rheinische Musiker (Cologne, 1969–81). A Festschrift was published in honour of his sixtieth birthday (Musik, Kultur, Gesellschaft: interdisziplinäre Aspekte aus der Musikgeschichte des Rheinlandes: Dietrich Kämper zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. N. Jers, Kassel, 1996).

WRITINGS

Franz Wüllner: Leben, Wirken und kompositorisches Schaffen (diss., U. of Cologne, 1963; Cologne, 1963)

ed.: Richard Strauss und Franz Wüllner im Briefwechsel (Cologne, 1963)

'Zur Frage der Metronombezeichnungen Robert Schumanns', AMW, xxi (1964), 141–55

Studien zur instrumentalen Ensemblemusik des 16. Jahrhunderts (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Cologne, 1967; AnMc, no.10 (1970); It. trans., 1976, as La musica strumentale nel rinascimento)

ed.: Max Bruch-Studien: zum 50. Todestag des Komponisten (Cologne, 1970) [incl. 'Verzeichnis des Kölner Max-Bruch-Archivs'], 142–7

'Fortunae rota volvitur: das Symbol des Schicksalrades in der spätmittelalterlichen Musik', Der Begriff der Repraesentatio im Mittelalter, ed. A. Zimmerman (Berlin, 1971), 357–71

'Über die Uraufführung von Rheingold und Walküre', Richard Wagner: Werk und Wirkung, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Regensburg, 1971), 65–74

'Das deutsche Verdi-Schrifttum: Hauptlinien der Interpretation', Verdi–Wagner: Rome 1969 [AnMc, no.11 (1972)], 185–99

'Kriterien der Identifizierung instrumentaler Sätze in italienischen Chansonniers des frühen 16. Jahrhunderts', Formen und Probleme der Überlieferung mehrstimmiger Musik im Zeitalter Josquins Desprez: Wolfenbüttel 1976, 143–63

'Uno sguardo nell'officina: gli schizzi e gli abbozzi del Prigioniero di Luigi Dallapiccola', NRMI, xiv (1980), 227–39

'Die Kanzone in der norddeutschen Orgelmusik des 17. Jahrhunderts', Gattung und Werk in der Musikgeschichte Norddeutschlands, ed. F. Krummacher (Kassel, 1982), 62–78

Gefangenschaft und Freiheit: Leben und Werk des Komponisten Luigi Dallapiccola (Cologne, 1984; It. trans., 1985)

'Die 114 Songs von Charles E. Ives', Amerikanische Musik seit Charles Ives: Interpretationen, Quellentexte, Komponistenmonographien, ed. H. Danuser, D. Kämper and P. Terse (Laaber, 1987), 135–48

Die Klaviersonate nach Beethoven: von Schubert bis Skrjabin (Darmstadt, 1987)

'Vincenzo Ruffos Capricci und die Vorgeschichte des Musikalischen Kunstbuchs', Zeichen und Struktur in der Musik der Renaissance, ed. K. Hortschansky (Kassel, 1989), 107–20

ed.: Frank Martin: Das kompositorische Werk (Mainz, 1993) [incl. 'Entwicklungs linien in Frühwerk Frank Martins', 11–20]

'Alfredo Casella und Gustav Mahler', Mf, xlvii (1994), 118–27

'Klaviersonate B-Dur "Hammerklaviersonate" op.106', Beethoven: Interpretationen seiner Werke, ed. A. Riethmüller, C. Dahlhaus and A. Ringer, ii (Laaber, 1994), 136–49

'L'opera per pianoforte di Alfredo Casella negli anni di apprendistato', Alfredo Casella negli anni di apprendistato a Parigi, ed. G. Morelli (Florence, 1994), 257–66

'Alfredo Casellas Nove pezzi op.24 für Klavier und die Idee einer Erneuerung der italienischen Musik', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 708–17

'La distruzione della quadratura": Richard Wagners Kunstschriften und die Musikästhetik des Futurismus', Festschrift Klaus Hortschansky, ed. A. Beer and L. Lutteken (Tutzing, 1995), 449–62

ed.: Der musikalische Futurismus (Laaber, 1999)

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/WOLFRAM STEINBECK

Kämpfer, Joseph (b Pressburg [now Bratislava], 1735; d after February 1796). Austro-Hungarian double bass player. While serving in the Austrian army he taught himself the double bass with the help of a violin method, and developed an amazing technical quality and a beautiful tone hitherto unknown on this instrument. After resigning his commission he moved to Vienna in the 1760s; Gerber and others place him in the Esterházy orchestra around 1765, but there is no proof of this. He was, however, a member of the Salzburg court orchestra (1774) and later served with Cardinal Batthyány's orchestra in Pressburg (1777–81). With the support of Joseph von Mannl, an amateur violone player, Kämpfer began a career as a soloist during which he played throughout Europe, notably in Germany in 1777 and in Germany, St Petersburg, Copenhagen and London in 1781–4. In 1784 he joined the Hofkapelle at Burgsteinfurt, and in 1787 made a public appearance in Paris; despite critical acclaim for his artistry in the Mercure de France, however, the double bass did not gain favour in France. His last two officially recorded public concerts took place in March 1796 in Stockholm. The whereabouts of his final years are unknown. In general, Kämpfer made an important contribution to the popularization of the double bass as a solo instrument. His works, now lost, included concerted pieces with double bass and chamber music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL

C.F. Cramer, ed.: Magazin der Musik (Hamburg, 1783–6/R)

P. Vretblad: Konsertlivet i Stockholm under 1700-talet (Stockholm, 1918)

M. Térey-Smith: 'Joseph Kämpfer, a Contrabass Virtuoso from Pozsony (Bratislava)', SM, xxv (1983), 183–9; repr. in International Society of Bassists: Newsletter, xi/3 (1985) [incl. further bibliography]

MARY TÉREY-SMITH

Kamphuysen, Dirk Rafaelszoon. See CAMPHUYSEN, DIRK RAFAELSZOON.

Kamu, Okko (Tapani) (b Helsinki, 7 March 1946). Finnish conductor and violinist. The son of a double bass player in the Helsinki PO, he was given violin lessons and entered the Sibelius Academy at the age of six as a pupil of Onni Suhonen. He became a violinist in the Helsinki Youth Orchestra, and at 18 the leader of the Suhonen Quartet. A year later he joined the Helsinki PO as associate principal second violin, and became leader of the Finnish National Opera Orchestra (1966–8), where he also gained experience as third conductor with the opera company. Self-taught as a conductor, he won the first Herbert von Karajan International Competition at Berlin (1969), which led to engagements with major orchestras in Europe, the USA, Israel and Japan, and to recordings; these brought him a reputation for youthful spontaneity tempered by sensitivity and disciplined feeling. His British début was with the NPO at the Festival Hall in 1970. Kamu was chief conductor of the Finnish RO from 1971 to 1977, and conductor and artistic director of the Oslo PO from 1975 to 1979, musical director of the Helsinki PO, 1981–8, and principal conductor of the Netherlands RSO, 1983–6. In 1988 he was appointed permanent conductor of the Zealand SO, Copenhagen. Kamu conducted the premières of Sallinen's operas The Red Line (1978, Helsinki) and The King Goes Forth to France (1984, Savonlinna), the latter a joint commission with Covent Garden, where he conducted the work's British première in 1987. He also gave the first performances of Sallinen's second and third symphonies (1973, 1975), and has made authoritative recordings of many of the composer's major orchestral works. His other recordings, mainly of Scandinavian music, include works by Tor Aulin, Berwald, Larsson and Adolf Lindblad.

NOËL GOODWIN

Kamu-purui [gammu burui]. PANPIPES of the Cuna Indians of the San Blas Islands of Panama.

Kanai [née Kawahira], Kikuko (b Okinawa, 13 March 1911; d Tokyo, 17 Feb 1986). Japanese composer. She studied singing at the Nihon Music School and composition with Shimofusa and Hirao at the Tokyo Music School, graduating in 1938, and became one of the first Japanese women composers. In 1954 she studied 12-note techniques with Koellreutter in Brazil while participating in the International Ethnomusicological Conference in São Paulo. Her musical style involves the extensive use of melodic material from Okinawa and Ryūkyū Islands. Her collection of folksongs, published as Ryūkyū no min'yō ('Folksongs of Ryūkyū') (Tokyo, 1954), won a Mainichi Prize of Cultural Publication (1955); her opera Okinawa monogatari was awarded a prize by the Okinawan government (1968).

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Miyako-jima engi [Legend of Miyako Island] (ballet), 1949; Ryūkyū hiwa [A Hidden Story of Ryūkyū] (jazz ballet), 1951; Hiren Karafune [Love Tragedy on Tang Boat] (op, 4, Kanai and K. Yano), 1960, rev. as Okinawa monogatari [Tale of Okinawa], Tokyo, Metropolitan Hall, 1 June 1997

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1938; Okinawa buyō kumikyoku [Okinawan Dance Suite]: no.1, 1940, no.2, 1946; Ryūkyū kyōsōkyoku [Ryūkyū Rhapsody] no.1, 1946; Sym. no.2, 1946; Uruma no shi [Poem on Uruma], 1952; Festival Ov. 'Hishō', 1972

Chbr and solo inst: Ryūkyū kyōsōkyoku no.2, pf octet, 1950; Ryūkyū Ballade, pf, 1951; Sonata, vn, pf, 1952; Brazil Rhapsody, pf, 1955; Hamachidori hensōkyoku [Variations on Hamachidori], koto, Electone, perc, 1970

Vocal: Okinawa min'yō niyoru gasshōkyoku-shū [Choral Pieces on Okinawan Folksongs], 1953–60; Haha to ko no Okinawa no uta [Okinawan Songs for a Mother and Children], 1965

MASAKATA KANAZAWA

Kanawa, Kiri Te. See TE KANAWA, KIRI.

Kanazawa, Masakata (b Tokyo, 6 Jan 1934). Japanese musicologist. Raised in an environment that emphasized both Japanese and Western music, he began piano lessons at the age of 13 and his interest in music led him to study musicology. He took the BA at the International Christian University, Tokyo (1953–7) with Charles Burkhart and continued his studies at Harvard University (MA 1961, PhD 1966 with a dissertation on polyphonic music), influenced by John M. Ward and Nino Pirrotta. He began his teaching career at Harvard University (1963–6) before returning to Japan and joining the International Christian University in 1966, where he was appointed professor of musicology and director of Sacred Music Centre in 1982. His area of interest in early music; his research on Anthony Holborne and the Montecassino manuscript are highly regarded and he was able to further his research on Italian Renaissance music during a research fellowship at the Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies, Florence (1970–71). He has taught Medieval and Renaissance music at various universities in Japan, increasing awareness of these styles by organizing concerts and lecture-concerts for the general public. His interest in early keyboard music, particularly the organ, led him to encourage churches and music halls to install the instrument and promote organ music. His chief efforts were centred on the International Christian University church, where a Rieger organ was installed in 1970. Kanazawa has been active in promoting Japanese musicology and building bridges between Japanese and foreign musicologists. Since the 1970s he has been involved in supervising and editing encyclopedias, notably the Japanese versions of The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians and Larousse de la musique.

WRITINGS

with I. Pope: 'Musical Manuscript Montecassino N879' [recte 871], AnM, xix (1966), 123–53

Polyphonic Music for Vespers in the Fifteenth Century (diss., Harvard University, 1966)

'Antonius Janue and Revision of his Music', Quadrivium, xii (1971), 177–94

'Two Vesper Repertories from Verona ca. 1500', RIM, x (1975), 155–79

'The Musical Style of Polyphonic Hymns in the Fifteenth Century', IMSCR XII: Berkeley 1977, 634–9

'Tasei sanka ni mirareru Renaissance yōsiki no seiritu' [Beginning of Renaissance style as seen in polyphonic hymns], On'gaku-gaku [special issue] (1977), 26–39

'Martini and Brebis at the Estense Chapel', Essays Presented to Myron P. Gilmore, ed. S. Bertelli and G. Ramakus, ii (Florence, 1978), 421–32

'A Comparative Study of Versions for Lute, Cittern, Bandora and Instrumental Ensemble of Compositions by Anthony Holborne', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 123–38

ed., with others: Larousse sekai ongaku ziten [The Japanese edition of Larousse de la musique] (Okayama, 1989)

'Franchino Gafori and Polyphonic Hymns', Tradition and its Future in Music: Osaka 1990, 95–101

ed., with others: Tradition and its Future in Music: Osaka 1990 (Osaka, 1991)

ed., with others: New Grove sekai ongaku daiziten [Japanese edition of The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians] (Tokyo, 1993–5)

Kogaku no susume [Invitation to early music] (Tokyo, 1998)

Tyūsei ongaku no seisin-si [A spiritual history of medieval music] (Tokyo, 1998)

EDITIONS

The Complete Works of Anthony Holborne (Cambridge, MA, 1967–73)

Antonii Janue opera omnia, CMM, lxx (1974)

with I. Pope: The Musical Manuscript Montecassino 871: a Neapolitan Repertory of Sacred and Secular Music of the Late Fifteenth Century (Oxford, 1978)

YOSIHIKO TOKUMARU

Kancheli, Giya [Gia] (b Tbilisi, 10 Aug 1935). Georgian composer. He performed as a popular musician before studying composition at Tbilisi Conservatory under Iona Tuskiya, graduating in 1963, and later teaching orchestration there (1971–8). He has served as musical director at the Rustaveli Theatre in Tbilisi (1971–90) and General Secretary of the Georgian Union of Composers. In 1991 he was invited to Berlin through DAAD for a year, where he lived until 1995 when he went to Antwerp as guest composer of its SO. Kancheli has been awarded the USSR State Prize (1977), the Rustaveli State Prize of the Georgian SSR (1981), the Nika Prize for film music (1987) and the National Order of Merit (1995). He became a National Artist of the Georgian SSR in 1980.

Kancheli has breathed new life into Georgian music. Among the composers of the former Soviet Union he is one of the few who, thanks to the originality of his musical thought, has been able to find his own place in late 20th-century music and to become known worldwide.

Although he has never lost contact with his roots in Georgian culture, he has grasped stylistic innovations of 20th-century Western music. His music has been influenced, both subconsciously and organically, by Eastern Christian spirituality. While absorbing the widest range of new influences, no originality has been lost. Kancheli's work displays stylistic coherence while embracing almost every genre; he is also recognized as a leading composer of film and theatre music.

His only opera, Da ars musika ('Music for the Living'), represents an important stage in his fusing of abstract and applied forms; written in the form of a mystery play, a moment of life reflects eternity, the music – itself like a kind of mysterious matter – both flows out of life and its history, and in towards it. The conflicting drama and extreme emotional states prevalent in his symphonies, which form the core of his output, are also a feature of his chamber works and the opera. Form is organized through sound and silence: silence is almost omnipresent, with sounds growing from it, building over it, but not suppressing it. Arising out of the silence, the music is mostly slow, static and mysterious, with mystical and ritual overtones. Placing slow sections along the framework of the structure makes for a predominance of meditative elements. Borrowing Stravinsky's principle of dynamic statics Kancheli fuses this with his own type of collision between episodes of quiet music and sudden aggressive intrusions of orchestral tutti. Precise quasi-geometrical calculation in combination with free development of episodes brings a concentration and deepening of ideas and emotional content, in the context of an extremely transparent Webernesque style and the acoustically ethereal effect of the sounds.

The fragmentary, discrete developmental logic – ontologically related to cinematography – gives rise to separate and independent episodes or groups which are quite short, highly concentrated and, as a rule, incomplete in themselves. Once the genre prototype is established, Kancheli simply marks it with some of its stylistic features, so that one is reminded of the whole: in consequence, episodes freely confronting each other are necessarily highly cohesive.

A distinctive quality of Kancheli's music is its controlled lyricism, with the composer reflecting not on himself but on music itself and its sound, born out of silence. His world view conforms to the aesthetic norms of his epoch; however, it contains information about the history of the culture of past times. The collision of styles of past and present gives rise to a conception of a 'lost' harmony, whose basis serves as a motif of nostaliga and memories, with tonal reminiscences acquiring particular shades of meaning. It is as though, in aspiring to interpret history and antiquity for oneself in music, and having transformed them within, the themes of wandering, so characteristic of the Western intellectual heritage, emerge in an original interpretation. The eras of human history, as embodied in music, and the time scale of psychologically perceived reality become absolutely conditioned: now they are compressed into 'instant', now stretched into 'eternity'.

The spiritual and ethical essence of Kancheli's instrumental music is removed from the social or cultural nuances typical of Western symphonism. At their basis lies a religious-philosophical idea of the integrity of the world and of a man within it, in the poetic idea of eternity, expressed in contemplation of ancient epic strata of national cultures that are also consonant with the present. A particular instance of this can be found in the appearance of a Georgian canticle, used in his work as part of a general sound-picture of the world, growing out of silence like a symbol of higher spirituality. Such supertemporal ideas are characteristic of Kancheli from his ealiest works; he constantly returns to universal ideas and tries to penetrate the mysteries of the eternal and of beauty through the exposing of new possibilities of sound.

Kancheli's world of sound, with its inspired simplicity, its metaphorical nature and deep, multi-faceted cultural links, did not come to him at once. He had found a model, of a one-movement rondo-like form based on the dynamic statics principle and on open, associative activity, by the time of his Third Symphony. In each subsequent work the conception appears a little different, more multi-layered under the influence of the principles that were taking root in it such as the sonoristic organization of sounds and techniques of the Western avant garde. An important influence on Kancheli in the 1990s was also the improvisatory Caucasian instrumental folk music, whose unfamiliar sounds were used by the composer in a new context to increase the possibilities of the normative instruments. The complex simplicity inherent in Kancheli's musical and spiritual world has gradually become largely characteristic of much 20th-century Western music. Though several analogies could be made with minimalist composers, the course chosen by Kancheli is still at the beginning of its creative path.

WORKS

Op: Da ars musika [Music for the Living] (2, R. Sturu), 1982–4

7 syms.: 1967; 'Sagaloblebi' [Canticles], 1970, 1973; 'In memoria de Michelangelo' 1975; 1977; 1980; 'Epilog', 1986

Other orch: Sevda nateli; [Light Sorrow] (J.W. von Goethe, A.S. Pushkin, W. Shakespeare, G. Tabidze), 2 solo vv, children's chorus, orch, 1985; Karit datirebuli [Mourned by the Wind], A, orch, 1989; Noch einen Schritt [One More Step], tape, orch, 1992; Bez kril'yev [Wingless], 1993; Trauerfarbenes Land [Land of the Colour of Sorrow], 1994; Lament, funeral music in memory of Luigi Nono, S, vn, orch, 1994; Simi [Chord], vc, orch, 1995; ... à la Duduki, brass ens, orch, 1995; Valse Boston, pf, str, 1996; Diplipito, vc, Ct, chbr orch, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Ww Qt, 1961; Sitsotskhle Shobisgareshe [Life Without Christmas]: Dilis lotsvebi [Morning Prayers], tape, chbr orch, 1990, Dg is lotsvebi [Midday Prayers], cl, S, chbr ens, 1991, Sagamos lotsvebi [Evening Prayers], fl, chbr ens, 1992, Gamis lotsvebi [Night Prayers], str qt, tape, 1992, arr. s sax, str, tape, 1994; Abii ne viderem, fl/A, chbr orch, 1992–3; Exil, S, ens, tape, 1994; Caris mere, S, va, 1994; Magnum ignotum, ww, tape, 1994; Nach dem Weinen, vc, 1994; V & V, vn, recorded v, str, 1994; Rag-Gidon-Time, vn, pf, 1995; Instead of a Tango, vn, bandoneon, pf, db, 1996; Time ... and Again, vn, pf, 1997, Pf Qt, 1998

Incid music

Principal publishers: Belaieff, Peters (Leipzig), Schirmer, Sikorsky, Sovetskiy kompozitor

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Yu. Yevdokimova: 'Vtoraya simfoniya G. Kancheli' [Kancheli's Second Symphony], SovM (1972), no.3, pp.15–21

A. Terterian: Giya Kancheli: muzïka respublik Zakavkaz'ya [Giya Kancheli: Music of the Republic of Transcaucasia] (Tbilisi, 1975), 333–4

I. Barsova: 'Muzïkal'naya dramaturgiya chetvyortoy simfonii Gii Kancheli' [Musical drama in the Fourth Symphony of Giya Kancheli], Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik (Moscow, 1984), 108–34

T. Kurïsheva: Teatral'nost' i muzïka [Theatricality and music] (Moscow, 1984)

G. Orjonikidze: 'O simfoniyakh G. Kancheli' [The symphonies of G. Kancheli], Sbornik nauchnikh trudov Konservatorii im. V. Saradzhishvili (Tbilisi, 1985), 188–91

A. Schnittke: 'Real'nost' kotoruyu zhdal vsyu zhizn'' [Reality I have waited for all my life], SovM (1988), no.10, pp.17–28
L. Nono: 'Nayti svoyu zvyozdu' [To find your star], SovM (1989), no.2, pp.109–14
N. Zeyfas: Pesnopeniya: o muzïke Gii Kancheli [Canticles: the music of Giya Kancheli] (Moscow, 1991)

LEAH DOLIDZE

Kancionál (Cz.). See CANTIONAL, §1.

Kandela, Philipp. See CAUDELLA, PHILIPP.

Kander, John (Harrold) (b Kansas City, MO, 18 March 1927). American composer. He studied music at Oberlin College, where he composed songs with James Goldman (a childhood friend) and at Columbia University, where he studied with composers Jack Beeson, Otto Luening and Douglas Moore, while working as a vocal accompanist. After serving as the dance music arranger for Gypsy (1959) and Irma La Douce (1960), Kander was given the opportunity to compose A Family Affair (1962) for Broadway with James Goldman and his brother William. Publisher Tommy Valando introduced him to Fred Ebb (b New York, 8 April 1932) in 1962, and the new team immediately produced two hit songs, My Coloring Book and I Don't Care Much, both recorded by Barbra Streisand. From 1965 to 1997 Kander and Ebb produced ten musicals on Broadway, including the Tony Award-winning Cabaret (1966; revived 1987 and 1998) and Kiss of the Spider Woman (1993), and at least two other major successes, Zorba (1968; revived 1983) and Chicago (1975; revived 1996). They have had numerous song hits in films, 'Maybe this Time', 'Money, Money', and 'Mein Herr' (Cabaret, 1972), 'How lucky can you get?' (Funny Lady, 1975), 'And the World Goes Round' and 'New York, New York' (New York, New York, 1977).

The careers of several major female stars were greatly aided by Kander and Ebb's special material and star turns, in particular Liza Minnelli, who received a Tony Award in her début at the age of 19 in the title role of their first Broadway show, Flora, the Red Menace (1965), an Emmy for her one-woman television broadcast, Liza with a Z (1972), and an Oscar for her portrayal of Sally Bowles in the film version of Cabaret (1972). She played the starring roles in their shows Chicago (in the role originally created for Gwen Verdon), The Act (1977) and The Rink (1984). Other featured female stars cultivated by Kander and Ebb included Chita Rivera (Chicago, The Rink, The Kiss of the Spider Woman), Lauren Bacall (Woman of the Year) and, in film, Streisand (Funny Lady). Despite several commercial failures (Flora, 70, Girls, 70 and The Rink).

Kander is almost invariably praised for his tuneful scores, his professionalism, and his ability to compose music that serves the show at hand. His impressive mastery of styles range from Weill pastiches (Cabaret), Greek bouzouki music (Zorba) and popular styles of the 1920s and 30s (Flora, Chicago and Steel Pier), to the glittery musical spectacles of Las Vegas floor shows (The Act). In 1991 about 30 Kander and Ebb songs formed the centrepiece of a popular Broadway revue, And the World Goes 'Round; the following year another revue anthology of Kander and Ebb songs appeared in London, Sing Happy. Kander's singular collaboration with one partner – they work almost every day and compose together in the same room – is as constant as Richard Rodgers's 40-year creative serial monogamy with Lorenz Hart and Oscar Hammerstein II.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

unless otherwise stated, all are musicals, and dates are those of first New York performances; librettists and lyricists are listed in that order in parentheses

A Family Affair (J. and W. Goldman), orchd R. Ginzler, Billy Rose, 27 Jan 1962
Never Too Late (incid. music, play by S.A. Long), 27 Nov 1962
Flora, the Red Menace (G. Abbott and R. Russell, F. Ebb, after L. Atwell:Love is Just Around the Corner), orchd D. Walker, Alvin, 11 May 1965 [incl. A Quiet Thing; Sing happy]
Cabaret (J. Masteroff, Ebb, after J. van Druten: I Am a Camera and C. Isherwood), orchd Walker, Broadhurst, 20 Nov 1966 [incl. Wilkommen, Meeskite, Cabaret]; film 1972 [incl. Maybe this Time, Money, Money, Mein Herr]
The Happy Time (N.R. Nash, Ebb, after R.L. Fontaine), orchd Walker, Broadway Theatre, 18 Jan 1968 [incl. The Happy Time, I don't remember you]
Zorba (J. Stein, Ebb, after N. Kazantzakis: Zorba the Greek), orchd Walker, Imperial, 17 Nov 1968 [incl. Life Is]
70, Girls, 70 (Ebb and N.L. Martin, Ebb, after J. Masteroff: Make Mine Mink), orchd Walker, Broadhurst, 15 April 1971 [incl. Yes]
Chicago (Ebb and B. Fosse, Ebb, after M.D. Watkins), orchd R. Burns, 46th Street, 1 June 1975 [incl. And All That Jazz, Roxie]
The Act (G. Furth, Ebb), orchd Burns, Majestic, 29 Oct 1977 [incl. City Lights]
Madwoman of Central Park West (P. Newman and A. Laurents), 22 Steps, 13 June 1979; [one song with Ebb]
Woman of the Year (P. Stone, Ebb, after R. Lardner and M. Kanin), orchd M. Gibson, Palace, 29 March 1981 [incl. The grass is always greener]
The Rink (T. McNally, Ebb), orchd Gibson, Martin Beck, 9 Feb 1984 [incl. Colored Lights]
Kiss of the Spider Woman (McNally, Ebb, after M. Puig), orchd Gibson, London, Shaftesbury, 20 Oct 1992; [incl. I do miracles, Kiss of the Spider Woman]
Steel Pier (D. Thompson, Ebb), orchd Gibson, Richard Rodgers Theatre, 24 April 1997
Over and over (J. Stein, Ebb, after T. Wilder: The Skin of our Teeth), orchd M. Gibson, Arlington, VA, Signature, 6 Jan 1999

FILM AND TELEVISION

Film: Cabaret, 1972 [collab. Ebb]; Funny Lady, 1975 [collab. Ebb]; Lucky Lady, 1975 [collab. Ebb]; French Postcards, 1979; Kramer Vs. Kramer, 1980; The Still of the Night, 1982; Blue Skies Again, 1983; Places in the Heart, 1984; Stepping Out, 1991; Norman Rockwell: a Short Subject Television: Liza with a Z, 1972 [collab. Ebb]; An Early Frost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Green: The World of Musical Comedy (New York, 1960, rev. and enlarged 4/1980)
A. Kasha and J. Hirschhorn: Notes on Broadway: Conversations with the Great Songwriters (Chicago, 1985)
S. Suskin: Show Tunes . . .: the Songs, Shows, and Careers of Broadway's Major Composers (New York, 1986, enlarged 3/2000), 331–41
K. Mandelbaum: Not Since 'Carrie': 40 Years of Broadway Musical Flops (New York, 1991)

GEOFFREY BLOCK

Kandinsky, Aleksey Ivanovich (b Moscow, 24 Feb 1918). Russian musicologist. He was born into an artistic family (his grandfather was the artist Wassily Kandinsky). He studied with V.N. Argamakov at the Ippolitov-Ivanov College of Music, Moscow (1935–9), but his postgradute study was interrupted by war service (1941–5). He took the MA in 1948 at the Moscow Conservatory, where he studied with Yury Keldïsh. He became a lecturer at the Moscow Conservatory in 1948 and took the doctorate there in 1956 with a dissertation on problems of national roots in the operas of Rimsky-Korsakov; he rose to the rank of professor (1958) and head of the Russian music history department (1959–92). His main areas of study are Russian music of the 19th and early 20th centuries, and the works of Dargomïzhsky, Balakirev and Rachmaninoff. His publications include an important book on Rimsky-Korsakov (1984); he has also written numerous critical articles on Russian musical life. He was made a Merited Artist of Russia in 1969.

WRITINGS

Simfonicheskiye proizvedeniya Balakireva [The symphonic works of Balakirev] (Moscow, 1950)
'O muzïkal'nïkh kharakteristikakh v tvorchestve Rimskogo-Korsakova vtoroy polovinï 1890-kh godov' [On musical characteristization in Rimsky-Korsakov's work of the 1890s], Rimsky-Korsakov: muzïkal'noye naslediye, ed. M.O. Yankovsky, i (Moscow, 1953), 79–144
Operï S.V. Rakhmaninova (Moscow, 1956, 2/1979)
Problema narodnosti v opernom tvorchestve Rimskogo-Korsakova 1860–70-kh godov [Problems of national roots in Rimsky-Korsakov in the 1860s and 70s] (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1956)
N.I. Peyko i yego balet 'Zhanna d'Ark' [Peyko and his ballet Zhanna d'Ark] (Moscow, 1958)
'Rimskiy-Korsakov', Russkaya muzïkal'naya literatura, iii, ed. E.L. Frid (Leningrad, 1959), 3–179
'S.V. Rakhmaninov', Russkaya muzïkal'naya literatura, iv, ed. M.K. Mikhaylova and E.L. Frid (Leningrad, 1960), 192–255
ed., with others: Istoriya Moskovskoy konservatorii (1866–1966) (Moscow, 1966)
'Simfonicheskiye skazki Rimskogo-Korsakova 1860-kh godov' [Symphonic fairy tales by Rimsky-Korsakov in the 1860s], Ot Lyulli do nashikh dney, ed. V.D. Konen and I. Slepnev (Moscow, 1967), 105–44
'Rozhdeniye "vesenney skazki"' [The birth of a 'spring fairy tale'], SovM (1969), no.3, pp.52–63 [on the first sketches of The Snow Maiden]
ed.: Iz istorii russkoy i sovetskoy muzïki [From the history of Russian and Soviet music] (Moscow, 1971–6) [incl. 'Iz istorii russkogo simfonizma kontsa XIX – nachala XX veka' [From the history of Russian symphonism of the late 19th and early 20th centuries], i, 3–28]
'Glinka i yego "Ruslan"' [Glinka and his Ruslan], SovM (1972), no.12, pp.102–21 with O. Levasheva and Yu. Keldïsh: Istoriya russkoy muzïki [History of Russian music] (Moscow, 1972, 3/1983–97)
'Simfonizm Rakhmaninova i yego poèma "Kolokola"' [Rachmaninoff's symphonism and his poem The Bells], SovM (1973), no.4, pp.83–93; no.6, pp.88–98; no.7, pp.86–98
'O muzïkal'nïkh kharakteristikakh v tvorchestve Rimskogo-Korsakova 90-kh godov' [On musical characterization in Rimsky-Korsakov's work of the 1890s], Muzïka XX veka: ocherki, ed. B.M. Yarustovsky (Moscow, 1977), 79–144
'Opït rekonstruktsii' [An experiment in reconstruction], SovM (1977), no.3, pp.63–70 [on the new edn of Prince Igor by Levashov, Fortunatov and Pokrovsky]
'Rimsky-Korsakov (1890–1900 godï)', Muzïka XX veka: ocherki, ed. B.M. Yarustovsky (Moscow, 1977), 5–44; pubd separately, enlarged (Moscow, 1984) with Ye.N. Rudakova: A.N. Skryabin (Moscow, 1979; Eng. trans., 1984)
ed., with N.P. Savkina: Voprosï dramaturgii i stilya v russkoy i sovetskoy muzïke (Moscow, 1980)
ed.: Voprosï metodologii sovetskogo muzïkoznaniya [Problems of methodology in Soviet musicology] (Moscow, 1981) [incl. 'O realizme i romantizme v russkoy muzïke vtoroy polovinï XIX veka' [On realism and romanticism in Russian music in the second half of the 19th century], 19–43]
'"Simfonicheskiye tantsï" Rakhmaninova: k probleme istorizma' [Rachmaninoff's Symphonic Dances: the problem of historicism], SovM (1989), 76–84, 92–100
'Musorgsky i russkaya muzïka nachala XX veka' [Musorgsky and Russian music of the early 20th century], Sovremennïye problemï interpretatsii tvorchestva Musorgskogo, ed. T.A. Gaydamovich (Moscow, 1990), 5–27
'Tsena podlinnika' [The value of the original], SovM (1990), no.8, pp.42–8 [on Boris Godunov]
'"Vsenoshchnoye bdeniye" Rakhmaninova i russkoye iskusstvo rubezha vekov' [Rachmaninoff's All-Night Vigil and Russian art at the turn of the century], SovM (1991), no.5, pp.4–9; no.7, pp.91–7
'O russko-serbskikh muzïkal'nïkh svyazyakh v XIX veke' [Russian-Serbian musical relations in the 19th century], Zbornik matica srpska za scenske umetnosti i muziku, nos.10–11 (1992), 57–74
ed.: O kompozitorskom i ispolnitel'skom tvorchestve russkikh muzïkantov [On the composition and performance of Russian musicians] (Moscow, 1993) [incl. 'O tragicheskom v "Borise Godunove" Musorgskogo', 88–106]
ed.: S.V. Rakhmaninov: Moscow 1993

YELENA SOROKINA

Kandler, Franz Sales (b Klosterneuburg, 23 Aug 1792; d ?Baden, 26 Sept 1831). Austrian writer on music. He was the son of Franz Kandler, a schoolteacher, who gave him his first singing lessons. In 1801 he became a member of the Hofkapelle of Emperor Franz II in Vienna; as a pupil at the choir school there, he studied harmony with Albrechtsberger and composition with Salieri and Adalbert Gyrowetz. He also studied at the Gymnasium from 1804, and after his voice broke he began to study philosophy (1808) and law (1810) at the University of Vienna, though he never earned a degree. After a short time as a teacher Kandler entered the service of the imperial war office (1815) and in 1817 was appointed an official at the imperial naval office in Venice (then an Austrian possession) because of his knowledge of Italian. His official duties there afforded him ample opportunity for musical activity and research. He ascertained the places of burial of Zarlino, Marcello, Antonio Lotti and Galuppi, and erected a marble monument to Hasse in the church of S Marcuola. After passing an examination in conducting in 1820, he became an honorary member of the Accademia Filarmonica in Bologna. The following year he was appointed a military official in Naples, and he undertook a journey to Rome to visit Fortunato Santini, who furthered his interest in music history. The German version of Giuseppe Baini's monograph on Palestrina, published posthumously by Kiesewetter, dates from this period, as do many of Kandler's writings on Italian music and the state of music in Italy, which appeared in various periodicals. In 1826 he returned to the war office in Vienna in a subordinate position.

Kandler, who was in correspondence with Mayr and Schubert, among others, and who was a friend of Meyerbeer and Mercadante, is, together with Joseph Sonnleithner, Ignaz Franz von Mosel, Kiesewetter and Anton Schmid, regarded as one of the founders of Austrian musicology. He was Hasse's first biographer, and his German version of Baini's monograph on Palestrina contributed significantly to the composer's revival in the 19th century. He also gained a reputation as a critic through his sharp and objective assessment of the contemporary musical scene in Italy, and translated a number of German, English and French opera and oratorio librettos into Italian. His compositions are comparatively insignificant.

WRITINGS

Cenni storico-critici intorno alla vita ed alle opere del celebre compositore di musica Giovanni Adolfo Hasse detto il Sassone (Venice, 1820)
ed. R.G. Kiesewetter: Über das Leben und die Werke des G. Pierluigi da Palestrina … nach den Memoire storico-critiche des Abbate G. Baini verfasst (Leipzig, 1834)
Cenni storico-critici sulle vicende e lo stato attuale della musica in Italia (Venice, 1836)
Articles and reviews in AMZ; Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung mit besonderer Rücksicht auf den österreichischen Kaiserstaat (Vienna); Wiener Zeitschrift für Kunst, Literatur, Theater und Musik; Caecilia; Revue musicale [complete list in MGG1]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, AMZ, xxxiii (1831), 700
L. Schiedermair: 'Venezianer Briefe F.S. Kandlers aus den Jahren 1818–20', Riemann-Festschrift (Leipzig, 1909/R), 485–95
R. Schaal: 'Unveröffentlichte Briefe von Georg Nikolaus Nissen', MJb 1965–6, 195 [incl. letters to Kandler]
G. Brosche: 'Ein Opernstreit auf Wiener Boden', OMz, xxviii (1973), 500–03

OTHMAR WESSELY

Kandov, Aleksandar (b Sofia, 2 June 1949). Bulgarian composer. At the Bulgarian State Music Academy in Sofia he studied composition with Tapkov and the piano with Lyuba Obretenova. Appointments followed as music editor at Bulgarian Radio and at the publishers Muzika, and as lecturer in counterpoint at the Sofia Academy. In 1990 he moved to Spain, where he has since taught and secured work as a composer. He began composing in the late 1960s, and by the end of the 70s he had become one of the most original Bulgarian composers of his generation. Between 1982 and 1990 he was head of the Association of Young Composers and one of the founders of the Bulgarian Society of New Music. His works are regularly performed at the New Bulgarian Music festival, and he has thrice received the prize of the composers' union. His Muzika za orkestar (1985), Oda ('Ode', 1987) and Zodiak na kristalite (1989) have acquired permanent places in the repertory of Bulgarian ensembles.

His work is marked by a tendency to stylization and to eclectic experimentation over a broad range of styles. Several of his works have been recorded by Bulgarian Radio and by Balkanton.

WORKS
(selective list)

Varianti, pf cycle, 1975; Mladezhka simfoniya [Youth Sym.], 1976; Sonata, org, 1976; Primireniye [Endurance] (E. Dickinson), 2vv, fl, va, pf, 1979; Sonata, orch, 1979; Kheterotempi, elecs, 1981; Yepitafios (T. Trayanov), 1v, orch, org, 1981; Conc., 2 pf, 1983; Monodrama (R. Akutagava), 1983; Muzika za orkestar, 1985; Oda [Ode], S, A, Bar, org, orch, 1987; Apoteoz [Apotheosis], T, orch, 1988; Zodiak na kristalite, mar, pf, tape, 1989; Noshtni peperudi [Night Butterflies], pf, 1993; Fablio, after the drawings of N. Maystorov, 5 pfmrs, 1994; Protsesia [Procession], fl, va, hp, hpd, 1995; Igra s kubcheta [A Cube Game], children's musical; Tragnal kos [A Blackbird Embarked on a Journey], ballet; Malki gramofonni prikazki [Short Gramophone Tales], ballet
Incid music; other chbr and solo inst works; songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Neicheva: 'Aleksandar Kandov', Balgarska muzika, xxxiv/10 (1983), 42–3
A. Palieva: Sovetskaya kultura (27 Sept 1986)

ANDA PALIEVA

Kandrusevich, Wladzimir Pyatrovich (b Grodno, 29 Sept 1949). Belarusian composer. He attended the National Conservatory in Minsk where he studied composition with Ye.A. Hlebaw and the piano with L.P. Yushkevich, graduating in 1979 and 1973 respectively. His works combine a mastery of classical instrumentalism with a leaning towards programmaticism and a closeness to the written word. He attempts to convey the ethical and philosophical concerns of the Belarusian nation not only in large, poster-like orchestral pieces – such as the Symphony Plach perepyolki ('The Lament of Mother Quail') – but also in oratorios, cantatas – most notably Oblachko Chernobïlya ('The Chernobïl' Cloud') – and in his works for the stage. Although fascinated by the Anglo-American musical in particular, his own involvement with the stage has been broad and has encompassed work with ballet, theatre, musicals, puppetry, film and spectacle in the widest sense. Essentially a composer with a straightforward style, his interest in the motoric rhythms inherent in dance is pronounced; he is also captivated by the timbres associated with popular electronic music in addition to endeavouring to interpret both ancient and contemporary Belarusian folk music in a psychological and not ethnical manner.

WORKS

Stage: Dzhuliya [Julia] (musical, Kandrusevich, Ya. Svirsky, after W.S. Maugham), 1982, Minsk, 1991; Krïl'ya pamyati [The Wings of Memory] (ballet, B. Yelizar'yeva), 1983, Minsk, 1985; Nevesta dlya Martina [A Bride for Martin] (musical, A. Vol'sky), 1987; Intriga [A Love Affair] (musical, V. Konstantinov and B. Ratser), 1993; Stakan vodï [A Glass of Water] (musical, Kandrusevich, after E. Scribe) 1994, Minsk, 1995; Tayna starogo zamka [The Secret of the Old Castle] (children's op, Kandrusevich, after O. Wilde), 1995; Mefistofel' (ballet, V. Butrimovich), 1996
Orch: Trubï trubyats' garodzyanskiya [The Trumpets of Grodno Resound], sym. poem, 1979; Divertisment, clvd, str, 1981; Hipotesis, sym. poem, 1981; Pf Conc., 1981; Gimn solntsu [Hymn to the Sun], sym. poem, 1982; Suite, str, 1982; Devochka i medved' [The Girl and the Bear], 1992
Choral: Pevitsa [The Singer], cant., chorus, orch, 1978; Padaniye [Falling] (orat., Ya. Kupala), 1979; 3 khora [3 Choruses] (I. Martïnovich, A. Matveyev, M. Yasnov), 1986; Oblachko Chernobïlya [The Chernobïl' Cloud] (cant., G. Buravkin, A. Ryazanov), 1989; Sym. 'Plach perepyolki' [The Lament of Mother Quail], chorus, orch, 1992; 3 monologa [3 monologues] (old church slavonic texts)
Other: incid music for over 60 theatrical productions, romances, inst pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Antonova: 'Uvertyura k konsertu: zametki o molodom kompozitore Vladimire Kondruseviche' [The overture to a concert: Notes on the young composer Wladzimir Kandrusevich], Golas Radzimï (26 Oct 1981)
A. Varlamov: 'Na krïl'yakh pamyati narodnoy' [On the wings of the people's memory], Mastatstva Belarusi (1987), no.1, pp.63–5
T. Mdivani: 'Nablyudeniya nad tvorcheskim stilem Vl. Kondrusevicha' [Observations on the creative style of Kandrusevich], Voprosï kul'turï i iskusstva Belarusi [Questions of culture and art of Belarussia], x (Minsk, 1991), 40–44

TAISIYA SHCHERBAKOVA

Kanerstein [Kanershteyn], Oleksandr (Mikhaylovich) (b Kiev, 13 July 1933). Ukrainian composer. The son of the conductor M.M. Kanerstein (1902–88), he graduated from Lyatoshyns'ky's composition class at the Kiev Conservatory, where he also studied the piano with K.N. Mikhaylov. He then worked with the Philharmonia in L'viv as a solo pianist and accompanist (1956–7) after which he moved back to Kiev where he ran classes in piano and chamber ensemble work at the R. Glier Music School. He has been a member of the management of the Ukrainian Union of Composers, and is an Honoured Representative of the Arts of Ukraine (1993) and a Laureate of the B. Lyatoshyns'ky Prize (1996). His frequently large-scale works reflect his interest in three main subject areas: the epoch of Kievan Rus' is portrayed in the ballet Yevpraksiya ('Eupraxia') and in the symphonic fresco Kiyevskaya Rus' (Kievan Rus'), while he reacted to the events of World War II in the symphonic epitaph Babiy Yar and to more recent times – especially the first years after the break up of the Soviet Union – in Mal'chish-Kibal'chish ('Mudlark') and Neulovimïye v gorode ('The Elusive Ones in the Town').

WORKS

STAGE

Ops: Ne sklonivskiye golovï [Those Who Did not Bow their Heads] (I. Komarova, G. Kon'kova, after S. Cramer), 1967, rev. 1983

as Skovanniye odnoy tsep'yu [Bound Together by One Chain]; Vstrecha s proshlim [An Encounter with the Past] A. Stel'mashenko), 1985; Otel' lyubvi [Hotel of Love] (Stel'mashenko, after A. Maurois), 1993
Ballets: Mal'chish-Kibal'chish [The Mudlark] (after A. Gaydar), 1974–7; Neulovimiye v gorode [The Elusive Ones in the Town], 1986; Yevpraksiya [Eupraxia] (A. Asaturian, Stel'mashenko, after A. Zagrebel'niy), 1982, rev. 1993

OTHER

Syms.: no.1, 1955; no.2, 1959; no.3, 1976; no.4 (I. Drach), S, hpd, pf, str 1978; no.5 (I. Dudin), synth, rock singer, orch, 1989; no.6 'Amerikanskaya' [American], 1994, from Skovanniye odnoy tsep'yu, see STAGE (Ops.)
Other orch: Pf Conc., 1967; Vn Conc., 1971; Kiyevskaya Rus' [Kievan Rus'], sym. fresco, 1983; Conc., ob, bn, chbr orch, 1984; Vc Conc., 1992; Babiy Yar, epitaph, 1991;
Chbr and solo inst works, romances, music for cartoons

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Timofeyev: Ukraïns'kyy radyans'kyy fortepianyy kontsert [The Ukrainian Soviet piano concerto] (Kiev, 1972)
L. Raaben: Sovetskiy instrumental'niy kontsert [The Soviet instrumental concerto] (Moscow, 1976)
Borovik: Ukrainskiy kamerno-instrumental'niy ansambl' [The Ukrainian chamber and instrumental ensemble] (Kiev, 1996)

YELENA ZIN'KEVICH

Kang, Dong-Suk (b Seoul, 28 April 1954). Korean violinist. He began playing the violin at six and made his first solo appearances in 1967 with the Seoul PO and Korean National SO. He studied with Galamian at the Juilliard School, 1966–71, and the Curtis Institute with Zino Francescatti and Leonid Kogan. In 1971 he won competitions in San Francisco and Washington, on the strength of which he made his début at the Kennedy Center. He took second prize in the Carl Flesch Competition in 1974 and won first prize in the Queen Elisabeth Competition in Brussels in 1976. He made his London recital début in 1975 and in New York in 1976; he played in his first Proms in 1987, and appeared subsequently from 1990 to 1993. He has since achieved an international reputation playing with leading orchestras and conductors throughout the world. His regular recital partners are the pianists Pascal Devoyon and Gordon Back. Kang has also made numerous recordings, for which he has won many awards. His playing is elegant, with flawless intonation, and his bowing has been described as 'seamless'; he plays a violin by Omobono Stradivarius (the 'Freicher'), dated 1740.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Collins: 'A Profile', The Strad, lxxxviii (1977), 585–93
B. Sand: 'Discreet Forcefulness', The Strad, xcix (1988), 110–13

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kangro, Raimo (b Tallinn, 21 Sept 1949). Estonian composer. He studied at the Tallinn Conservatory (graduated 1973), where his composition teachers were Rääts and Tamberg. In 1989 he was appointed to teach composition at the Estonian Academy of Music and in 1994 he became director of the Estonian Music Foundation. His temperamental, often ironic music presents bold and unexpected contrasts, and features powerful rhythmic energy, marked pulsations and polyrhythmic textures; his harmonies are often formed from tone clusters. Many scores call for percussion instruments or feature percussive writing for the piano. Early works, such as the Piano Suite (1968), show the influence of Baroque rhythmic models.

Kangro's most important compositions are his operas and concertos. Beginning with the successful Imelugu ('A Miraculous Story', 1972), he borrowed rhythmic formulas from rock music and Latin-American dances. Põhjaneitsi ('The Nordic Maiden', 1980), the first Estonian rock opera, was written in collaboration with popular song composer Andres Valkonen. Ohver ('The Victim', 1981), based on Aleksey Tolstoy's The Snake, gives a psychological portrayal of its characters, while the chamber opera Reetur ('The Traitor', 1995) concentrates on the grotesque. Kangro's vocal writing is characterized by abundant melodic leaps and prolongations of single syllables of text over extensive segments of angular melody.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Ops: Imelugu [A Miraculous Story] (K. Süvalep, after G. Boccaccio), 1972, Tartu, 1974; Ooperimäng [Playing Opera] (children's op, L. Tungal), Estonian TV, 1977; Põhjaneitsi [The Nordic Maiden] (rock op, A. Jaaksoo and Tungal, after K. Skalbe), 1980, Tartu, 1980, collab. A. Valkonen; Ohver [The Victim] (Süvalep and Tungal, after A. Tolstoy), 1981, Tallinn, 1981; Sensatsioon (Tungal, after K. Čapek), Estonian TV, 1986; Reetur [The Traitor] (Tungal), 1995, Tallinn, 1995; Süda [The Heart] (K. Kangr., M. Kangro), 1999, Tallinn 1999
Children's musicals: Saabastega kass [Puss in Boots] (puppet op, after C. Perrault), Tallinn, 1980; Seakarjus [The Swineherd] (after H.C. Andersen), 1988; Hunt ja seitse kitsetalle [The Billy Goats Gruff] (puppet op, after J.L.C. and W.C. Grimm), Tallinn, 1991

OTHER WORKS

Orch (for chbr orch, unless otherwise stated): Vn Conc. no.1, 1971; Fl Conc., 1973, rev. 1984; Lihtne sümfoonia [Simple Sym.], 1976; Pf Conc. no.1, 1976; Vn Conc. no.2, 1976; Conc. no.1, 2 pf, orch, 1978; Bn Conc., 1981; Sinfonia sincera, op.31, 1986; Conc. no.2, 2 pf, orch, 1988; Conc., gui, vc, chbr orch, 1992; Conc. no.3, 2 pf, orch 1992; Circulus quadratus, 1994; Phoenix und Tschatschatatut, 2 pf, chbr orch, 1995; Arcus, orch, 1998; Conc. no.2, pf, orch, 1999
Vocal: Leelolaulud [Songs for Leelo] (L. Tungal), vocal qnt, bn, str qt, timp, 1975; Uksed lahti! [Open the Doors!] (P.-E. Rummo), chorus, chbr ens, 1977; Mannile [For Mann] (H. Runnel, trad. Estonian, arr Tungal), chorus, chbr ens, 1981; Gaudeo (A. Tamm), chorus, chbr ens, 1987; Mass (Tungal), chorus, orch, 1989; Saalomoni õpetussõnad [Solomon's Proverbs] (Bible), chorus, 1990
Chbr and solo inst: Suite, pf, 1968; 6 Pieces, 2 pf, 1976–90; Str Qt, 1976; Sonata, 2 pf, 1981; Geomeetriline Süit [Geometric Suite], vn, pf, 1984; Tandem con gioconda, vn, vc, 1985; Display I–X, various ens, 1991–8; Idioomid [Idioms], fl, vn, gui, 1992; Variatio delectat, gui, pf, 1993; Cordis, cl, b cl, 1994; 4 pf sonatas, 1969–78; pf pieces for children

Principal publishers: Sikorski, edition 49

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Daragan: 'Raimo Kangro', Eesti tänase muusika loojaid [Composers of contemporary Estonian music] (Tallinn, 1992), 60–96

MERIKE VAITMAA

Kang Sukhi [Kang Sŏkhŭi] (b Seoul, 22 Oct 1934). Korean composer. He studied music at Seoul National University (1955–60), then, after informal study with Isang Yun, who was in a Seoul hospital recuperating after his imprisonment, moved to Berlin to study at the Hochschule für Musik with Boris Blacher (1970–1) and at the Technische Universität (1971–5). He helped to organize the first concerts in Korea of the music of Messiaen and Cage, and composed the first Korean electronic music, The Feast of Id (1966); the Technische Universität has provided the studio for many subsequent pieces. A notable electronic piece is Prometheus Kommt (1988), commissioned for the lighting of the stadium torch at the Seoul Olympiad. In 1970 he began to divide his time between Korea and Germany.

The structural and rational techniques which Kang learnt in Germany are evident in Catena (1975), while Mosaico (1981), for tape, is architectural in form.

Reasserting his Korean identity while in Germany, he began to take titles of works from traditional music: in Nong (1973) he adopted a term for ornamentation. Buru, commissioned for the Berlin Meta Musik Festival in 1976, presents a more literal grafting of Korea to the West by evoking Korean Buddhist philosophy and shamanism through an expansive melody in the tritonic kyemyŏnjo mode from southwest Korea. A solo alto flute is set against a chorus of flutes in Manpa (1982), which retells a legend of the invention of the Korean flute. The flutes are overlaid to create chord clusters reminiscent of the East Asian mouth organ, while the soloist adopts contemporary Western techniques such as flutter-tonguing and multiphonics. As evinced by his eclectic output, Kang refuses to be cast in a single stylistic mould, though his Korean identity has assumed greater importance as he has matured as a composer. The cantata Peace on the Brilliant Green Earth (1992) celebrates Korean independence from Japan, while the opera Transcendence (1995) describes the 19th-century persecution of Korean Christian converts. In Korea, Kang has been influential in the ISCM as a board member and vice-president, and in the contemporary art scene through association with the journal Konggan.

WORKS

Orch: Generation '69, 1969; Reflexionen, 1975; Catena, 1975; Dalha, 1978; Mega-Melos, 1980; Mutatio perpetua, 24 insts, tape, 1982; Symphonic Requiem, 1983; Successions, 1985; Ch'wit'ahyang, Korean trad. orch, 1987; Prelude 'Gala', 1989; The Feast of Autumn, 1991; Danse et masques, str, 1995; Fantasies, vn, str, 1995; Pf Conc., 1996

Chbr: Nirmanakaya, vc, pf, perc, 1969; Roundtone, fl, ob, cl, va, vc, vib, perc, 1969; Kleines Stück, ob, vc, hp, 1973; Strukturen, 4 vc, 1973; Banya, fl, ob, cl, tuba, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1974; Metamorphosen, fl, str qt, 1974; Myung, 4 hun [vessel fl], taegŭm, kayagŭm, tam-tam, 1976; Dala (Parodie Waltz), cl, trbn, vc, pf, tape, 1980; Manpa, solo fl, 16 fl, 1982; Str Qt no.1, 1986; Nori A, 6 vc, 1990; Moulin d'ande, vn, va, vc, 1995; Legend, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1997

1–2 insts: Pf Sketch no.2, 1966; Ape, pf, 1972; Parodie, fl, org, 1972; Nong, fl, pf, 1973; Dialog, va, pf, 1976; Bronzenzeit, perc, tape, 1980; Aniri I, gui, 1981; Thal, cb fl, 1983; Inventio, pf, tape, 1984; Sonatebach, pf, 1986; Aniri IV, hp, 1987; Passacaglia, vn, pf, 1991; Impromptu, fl, b cl, 1993

Vocal: Lyebul, Bar, male chorus, 30 perc, 1969; Buru, S, fl, cl, pf, 2 perc, 1976; Yong-bi (cant.), 3 solo vv, double chorus, orch, 1978; Vision, S, gui, tape, 1978; Aniri II, S, tape, 1983; Aniri III, S, 1984; The Rite of Sun (cant.), solo vv, SATB, orch, 1985; Peace on the Brilliant Green Earth (cant.), S, Mez, Bar, SATB, orch, 1992; Transcendence (op), 1995

Tape: The Feast of Id, 1966; Mosaico, 1981; Klangspuren, 1981; Odysse, musique concrète, 1984; Penthesilea (music for theatre), 1986; Lung [Dragon] (soundtrack), 1986; Feng-hwang [Phoenix] (soundtrack), cptr, 1988; Prometheus Kommt, 1988; Stone Lion, 1990

Principal publishers: Modern, Breitkopf & Härtel, Sonoton, Gravis, Max Eschig

WRITINGS

In Search of the Music of the World (Seoul, 1979)

'The Circumstance of Asian Electronic and Computer Music', Asian Music Festival (Sendai, 1993)

Das 20 Jahrhundert von Heute betrachtet (Berlin, 1994)

Contemporary Music for Analysis I (Seoul, 1994)

'In Search of the Lost Sound', International Composers Symposium (Taiwan, 1997)

From Bronze Age to Piano Concerto (Seoul, 1998)

'Aesthetics and Influences on Creative Process', Rubin Academy Symposium (Jerusalem, 1998)

Many articles in periodicals

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CC1 (K. Howard)

'Pan Music Leader: Sukhi Kang', Koreana (Feb 1988)

'Composer's Portrait: Sukhi Kang', Perspective Composer's Group (Seoul, 1990)

KEITH HOWARD

Kania, Emanuel (b Uszyce, Opole, 26 March 1827; d Warsaw, 16 March 1887). Polish pianist and composer. He studied the piano under K. Schnabel in Wrocław, and from 1850 to 1853 stayed in Berlin where he taught music, gave concerts and published his first works. He then settled in Warsaw. From 1869 to 1873 he was professor of the piano at the Music Institute in Warsaw, and afterwards at the Aleksandryjski Institute, where he worked until his death. He gave concerts in Poland, Germany, Russia and Paris, and composed about 150 works, largely of a salon type. His songs, dances, Zadumki wieczorne ('Evening Meditation') for piano, and his comic opera Werbel domowy ('The Family Drum'), brought him much success; his most interesting works are his Piano Trio in G minor and his Cello Sonata in A minor, one of the few Polish Sonatas for this combination from the period. Some of his works were published in Germany and Poland. Most of them are preserved in manuscript in PL-Kj. Kania also wrote a piano tutor, which remains in manuscript, as well as numerous articles on music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (P. Świerc); SMP [incl. work-list]

Z. Kościów: Emanuel Kania (Kraków, 1995)

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Kanitz, Ernest [Ernst] (b Vienna, 9 April 1894; d Menlo Park, CA, 7 April 1978). American composer of Austrian birth. He studied law at the University of Vienna (doctorate 1918) and was a composition pupil of Schreker (1914–20). He became a lecturer at the Neues Konservatorium (1922–38) and in 1930 founded the Vienna Women's Chamber Choir. After emigrating to the USA in 1938, he was appointed professor at Winthrop College, Rockhill (1938–41); he later served as director of the music department at Erskine College (1941–4) and professor at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles (1945–59), and Marymount College (1960–63). After early works reflecting the colourful chromaticism of the Schreker school, his style assumed a neo-classical simplicity. From the 1950s he also employed 12-note techniques within his principally free-tonal compositions. His honours included the Austrian State Prize for composition (1936). He is the author of A Counterpoint Manual (Boston, 1948).

WORKS

Ops: Der Wunder-Wilan (prol, 3, Kanitz), 1923-9, rev. 1930; Room #12 (1, R. Thompson), 1956; Royal Auction (1, S. Shrager and A. Chorney), 1957; The Lucky Dollar (chbr op, 2 scenes, A. Stanford), 1959; Perpetual (chbr op, 1, E. Terry), 1960, rev. 1963, 1971

Vocal: Das Hohelied (Bible), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1920; 4 Gesänge (R. Tagore, P. Louÿs), S, orch, 1922; Abendfeier, S, orch, 1930; Zeitmusik (Kanitz), solo female vv, Bar, chorus, chbr orch, 1932; Gotthelf Schlicht (Das Lebenslied eines einfachen Menschen) (W. Alt), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1936; songs, other choral works

Orch: Heitere Ov., 1916-18; Intermezzo, chbr orch, 1917; Ballett-Musik, female vv, chbr orch, 1929; Bläserspiel (Serenade), wind, pf, perc, 1930; Concertino, theremin, orch, 1938; Motion Picture, 1944; Concerto grosso, 1945; Intermezzo concertante, a sax, sym. band, 1948; Concert Piece, tpt, orch, 1950; Conc., chbr orch, 1955; Bn Conc., 1962; Sinfonia seria (Sym. no.1), 1963; Moods, chbr orch, 1965; Sym. no.2, 1965; Sinfonia concertante (Sym. no.3), vn, vc, orch, 1967

Chbr music and solo inst works

MSS in US-LAusc

Principal publishers: Schlesingersche, Universal, Artisan, Associated, C.C. Birchard, Carl Fischer, Hall & McCreary, Mills, Theodore Presser, Valley Music

REINHARD KAPP

Kañjīrā [kanjeera]. A frame drum of South India. It consists of a skin (usually iguana) stretched and pasted on a circular wooden frame. There are three or four slots in the side of the frame, in which bell-metal jingle-discs are suspended from metal cross-bars. The width of the drum is from 21 to 25 cm and the depth from 7 to 10 cm. The name kañjīrā probably relates to the khañjari and khañjani of North and East India. The kañjīrā is tuned to various pitches by wetting the skin. It is held at the bottom of the frame by the left hand, which also varies the tension of the skin, and is beaten with the fingers of the right hand.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Sambamoorthy: Catalogue of Musical Instruments Exhibited in the Government Museum, Madras (Madras, 3/1962)

B.C. Wade: Music in India: the Classical Traditions (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979/R)

For further bibliography see INDIA, §III

ALASTAIR DICK

Kaňka, Jan (Nepomuk) [Kanka, Johann Nepomuk] (b Prague, 10 Nov 1772; d Prague, 15 April 1863). Czech composer and pianist. After graduating in philosophy and law at Prague University in 1794, he had a distinguished career as a lawyer and academic. Among the posts he held were dean of the law faculty at the university (1829) and university rector (1829). His wealthy family maintained a strong tradition of amateur music-making, their house being an important venue in Prague for concerts and musical soirées during the 18th and early 19th centuries. His father, Jan Kaňka (b Prague, 1744; d Prague, 1798), also a lawyer, was an accomplished amateur cellist, two of whose compositions survive in the National Museum in Prague (12 Balli tedeschi on themes from Mozart's Figaro, and an Aria pastorale on a Czech text).

Kaňka was an excellent pianist and composer, and was active as performer, composer and musical organizer in Prague musical culture throughout the first half of the 19th century. He was co-founder of the Cecilia Society (1840) and a member of the committee of the Prague Conservatory, and a member of the Society for the Promotion of Church Music in Bohemia (1826). His works, initially rooted in classicism, are always polished, effective and imaginative. After the gradual demise of the city's Mozart cult during the 1830s his style began to absorb Romantic characteristics, perceptible in an increasing breadth of harmonic language, and more fluid and expressive melodic writing. Although he expressed some Czech patriotic sentiment, which surfaced artistically in a handful of Czech songs, he had little active connection with the revivalist movement.

He is perhaps best known for his close friendship with Beethoven, whom he first met in 1796; in 1814–15 he acted as intermediary in negotiations over the German composer's overdue honorarium from the Kinsky family.

WORKS

(selective list)

many MSS in CZ-Pu

Inst: 2 pf concs., E♭ (Leipzig, *c*1804), D (Leipzig, 1804); Sym., E♭, 1808, finale with ad lib Turkish music; Sextet, E♭, pf, str; 3 qnts, pf, str, c, E♭, D, the last also with 1v; 4 qnts, pf, wind, C, E♭, E♭, F; 2 pf sonatas, G, b; many single works for pf

Vocal: Ger. cants and choruses on Austrian patriotic hymns, incl. O Freundschaft, S, vv, orch, Lieblichste der Huldgöttingen, vv, orch; many Ger. songs, inc. Lieder der Österreichischen Wehrmänner (Prague, 1809); 5 Cz. songs; 1 Fr. song

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Nettl: Mozart in Böhmen (Prague, 1938)

M. Očadlík: Svět orchestru [The world of the orchestra], ii (Prague, 1946, enlarged 3/1961)

J. Klapková: Jan Nepomuk Kaňka (diss., Prague U., 1954)

E. Anderson, ed.: The Letters of Beethoven (London, 1961/R)

E. Forbes, ed.: Thayer's Life of Beethoven (Princeton, NJ, 1964, 2/1967)

KARL STAPLETON

Kanne, Friedrich August (b Delitzsch, 8 March 1778; d Vienna, 16 Dec 1833). Austrian composer of German birth. After studying medicine at Leipzig and theology at Wittenberg he devoted himself to music, studying with C.E. Weinlig. His cantata An die Tonkunst was performed with success at Leipzig in 1801; the next years saw the performance and publication of some songs and ballads. In 1808 he moved to Vienna, where he spent the rest of his life. Befriended by Prince Joseph Lobkowitz and working as music teacher, poet and journalist, he nevertheless failed to establish himself to the extent that his considerable talents promised. He turned down various permanent posts apart from a briefly held Kapellmeister appointment at Pressburg (Bratislava) in 1809, preferring to maintain a tenuous independence. Some of his contributions to the Wiener allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (on the troubadours, 1817, and early German song, 1819) show a thorough and scholarly mind; others (on musical tone-painting, 1818, and the relationship between music and the visual arts, 1821) reveal the breadth of his sympathies, even if they have little to add to the by then well-established Romantic aesthetic. He briefly edited the Wiener allgemeine musikalische Zeitung, and he reviewed musical events for several newspapers, showing a balanced judgment, and most notably a then uncommon awareness of the achievements of Beethoven's late works.

As a composer, Kanne enjoyed a few major successes. His opera Orpheus (to his own libretto) was performed 15 times in the Kärntnertortheater and Burgtheater in 1807–8; Miranda was staged at the Theater an der Wien in 1811; in 1814 he was represented (along with Mozart, Beethoven, Hummel, Gyrowetz and Weigl) in Treitschke's pasticcio Die gute Nachricht at the court theatres. His greatest popular success was achieved with his music for Bäuerle's Lindane, oder Die Fee und der Haarbeutelschneider, given 68 times at the Theater in der Leopoldstadt between 27 March 1824 and 1841. This parody of the Vestris ballet Die Fee und der Ritter (music by Rossini) was revived in the Theater in der Josefstadt as late as 1852. Although Kanne wrote other fairly successful scores for the Leopoldstadt, and a melodrama and incidental music for several plays in the Theater an der Wien, he lacked the application to develop his potential fully; his last years were clouded by penury and alcohol. In addition to a dozen operas and a similar number of other theatre scores, some of which were briefly successful outside Vienna, he composed songs and duets, a mass, a cantata, a symphony and some instrumental works. He also wrote a number of plays and poems.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (P. Branscombe) [incl. list of stage works]; WurzbachL

J.N. Vogl: 'Von einem Verschollenen: ein Stück aus Altwien', Österreichischer Volkskalender, xviii (1862), 163

I. Fellinger: 'Friedrich August Kanne als Kritiker Beethovens', GfMKB: Bonn 1970, 383–6
H. Ullrich: 'Beethovens Freund Friedrich August Kanne', ÖMz, xxix (1974), 75–80
H. Ullrich: 'Friedrich August Kanne (1779–1833): das Schaffen: Musikkritiker und Schriftsteller in Wien', SMw, xxx (1979), 155–262
A. Ziffer: Kleinmeister zur Zeit der Wiener Klassik, Publikationen des Instituts für österreichische Musikdokumentation, x (Tutzing, 1984)
R. Wallace: Beethoven's Critics: Aesthetic Dilemmas and Resolutions during the Composer's Lifetime (Cambridge, 1986)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kanon (Ger.). See CANON (ii).

Kanōn (Gk.: 'rule'). A liturgical poem chanted at ORTHROS in the Byzantine rite, in the position once occupied by the biblical canticles. It is one of the two most important poetic forms in medieval Byzantine religious poetry, the other being the kontakion.

1. Form. 2. History.

1. FORM. The codification of a series of nine ōdai (odes, or biblical canticles) consisting of the 'Psalms outside the Psalter' gave rise to the poetic form of the kanōn. In its complete form the kanōn consists of a series of nine odes, each paraphrasing one of the biblical canticles. Within a kanōn each ode is assigned a number that refers to the canticle being paraphrased; the theme of an ode is taken from the subject of the corresponding canticle. Each ode consists of a model stanza (heirmos) and three, four or sometimes more further stanzas called troparia (see TROPARION. The first stanza of an ode, its heirmos, establishes the basic rhythmic and accentual pattern followed in the troparia. The last troparion in an ode usually praises the Virgin Mary (Theotokos) and is called a theotokion. In some kanōnes, the initial letters of each stanza form an acrostic.

Each ode of a kanōn has a different melody; a kanōn thus contains eight (if Ōdē 2 is omitted) or nine melodies, which are each sung for the first time to the first heirmos of an ode. The additional troparia of an ode are also chanted to the same melody as the heirmos; but in the past full musical performances of the kanōn appear to have been reserved for the most important feasts in the church year and to have been undertaken primarily in monastic communities and cathedrals. In present-day practice (which may serve as a guide for past centuries) only the heirmos is sung, and the accompanying troparia are recited.

The kanōn is not performed continuously but divided into three parts analogous to the division of the kathismata of the Psalter into three staseis (see PSALM, §III, 1). The first part consists of Ōdai 1 and 3 (Ōdē 2 being omitted from most kanōnes except during Lent). It is followed by a different type of hymn, the hypakoē (which may originally have been chanted by the congregation instead of one chanter as at present), and a short collect. The second segment of the kanōn follows with Ōdai 4 to 6; it is followed in turn by another interpolation, consisting of one stanza of the now drastically reduced kontakion, a reading from the synaxarion (brief biographical notes about the saint of the day) and another collect. The third part of the kanōn begins with Ōdē 7. After Ōdai 8 and 9 it is usual for the semichoruses to leave their places at the sides of the nave and assemble in the middle of the church to sing together the katabasia hymn (in practice this usually means the heirmos for Ōdē 1 of the kanōn, or the heirmos for that particular ode, sung more slowly and probably with additional melodic embellishments).

The kanōn is followed by the chanting of the exaposteilarion hymn, which is replaced during Lent by the phōtagōgikon (of which there are eight, one for each mode). According to the church calendar more than one festival may occur on a single day, each with its own separate kanōn. In such instances the 1st ode of each kanōn is performed in succession, followed by the 2nd odes, and so on, rather than having one kanōn stated in full before moving to the next.

The full texts of the kanōnes are in the mēnaion, a liturgical book containing the full text of the Proper for each day (equivalent to the Latin Proper of the Saints). Since for practical purposes, in order to perform a kanōn, the singers need only the melodies of the heirmoi, another type of liturgical book, the HEIRMOLOGION, had come into existence by the 9th century.

2. HISTORY. The pattern of a model stanza (the heirmos) followed by additional stanzas emulating its rhythmic, accentual and probably melodic patterns was fairly well known in Byzantium as early as the 6th century. The origin of this poetical practice seems to be Syrian. The term heirmos, however, seems to have been used for the first time only in the 7th century in Byzantium.

It has been customary to refer to Andrew of Crete (*c*660–*c*740), the author of the 'Great Kanōn' of 250 stanzas (at present performed on Thursday of the fifth week in Lent), as the first author of kanōn poetry. Some poetry of this type may, however, have been in use in Constantinople shortly before Andrew arrived there in the mid-680s, and Germanus (*c*634–*c*733), Patriarch of Constantinople from 715 to 730, may have written some kanōnes before Andrew began writing poetry. This hypothesis is supported by the fact that all nine odes appear in most of the kanōnes generally attributed to Germanus. The omission of Ōdē 2 may already have begun in about 700 CE, and in Andrew's kanōnes there is a much smaller proportion containing the heirmos for Ōdē 2 than in those of Germanus.

In the first half of the 8th century the greatest poets of kanōnes were in Jerusalem: John Damascene and Kosmas of Jerusalem (also 'of Mayuma'). John is especially remembered for his iambic kanōnes. Many kanōnes are attributed to 'John the Monk', who has often been identified with John Damascene, although this attribution is not always certain. Of other poets writing and composing kanōnes, the most prominent were Theodore of Stoudios (759–826), his brother Joseph of Thessaloniki, and the brothers Theophanes and Theodore surnamed hoi graptoi ('the branded ones'). Kanōnes have been written ever since the 8th century, but their golden age was from the 8th century to the 10th.

See also BYZANTINE CHANT, §10(iii) and ex.10.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Wellesz: A History of Byzantine Music and Hymnography (Oxford, 2/1961)
M. Velimirović: 'The Byzantine Heirmos and Heirmologion', Gattungen der Musik in Einzeldarstellungen: Gedenkschrift Leo Schrade, ed. W. Arlt and others (Berne, 1973), 192–244
H. Schmidt: Zum formelhaften Aufbau byzantinischer Kanones (Wiesbaden, 1979)

C. Hannick: 'The Performance of the Kanon in Thessaloniki in the 14th Century', Studies in Eastern Chant, v, ed. D. Conomos (Crestwood, NY, 1990), 137–52

MILOŠ VELIMIROVIĆ

Kansas City. American city. Although in Missouri, about half of its metropolitan area lies across the state line in Kansas. The city was incorporated in 1850 and there are records of musical activity from that time onwards. With the opening of the Coates Opera House in 1870, touring opera companies began visiting; operas, plays and concerts were presented there until it burnt down in 1901. Other early venues were the Butler Standard Theater (from 1900), the Gillis Opera House (1902–17), the Shubert Theatre (1906–35) and Convention Hall (1899–1935), rebuilt after a fire in 1900 to seat 15,000.

During the first half of the 20th century the city's position as a communication centre for the south-western and mid-western states, combined with four decades of lenient government under the political machine of the Pendergast brothers, gave it an extraordinarily active night life, providing ideal conditions for the development of ragtime and jazz. Among important ragtime figures were Euday L. Bowman (12th Street Rag, 1914), James Scott and Charles L. Johnson (Dill Pickles, 1906). In the 1920s and 30s Kansas City had as many as 500 nightclubs, ranging from small bars featuring blues musicians to large dance halls such as the Sunset, Subway and Reno clubs, all noted for their highly competitive after-hours jam sessions. Of the many jazz bands based in the city, those led by Bennie Moten (1918–35), Andy Kirk (1929–48), Harlan Leonard (1931–46) and especially Count Basie (founded 1935) developed national followings and contributed to the style known as Kansas City or South-west Jazz. The city also had a strong tradition of blues shouters (Big Joe Turner, Jimmy Rushing and Walter Brown) and a notable concentration of jazz saxophonists, culminating in Lester Young, Ben Webster and Charlie Parker. Between 1936 and 1940 the most important bands moved to Chicago and New York; the collapse of the Pendergast machine and with it the city's night life meant the eclipse of the local jazz tradition. In 1964 Kansas City Jazz, Inc., was formed to preserve and re-create that tradition through research, concerts and festivals. From 1976 some of the former jazz venues were restored, and a Women's Jazz Festival was held from 1977 to 1985.

The conductor, composer and teacher Carl Busch, a Dane who arrived in 1887, founded the Kansas City SO (active 1911–18). Its successor, the Kansas City PO, was founded in 1934 by Karl Krueger, who conducted it until 1943, followed by Efrem Kurtz (1943–8), Hans Schwieger (1948–71), Jorge Mester (1971–4) and Maurice Peress (1974–80). It was dissolved in 1982; a new Kansas City SO was formed under the aegis of the Lyric Opera of Kansas City, whose director Russell Patterson conducted the orchestra until 1986, followed by William McGlaughlin. The Kansas City Chamber Orchestra (founded 1987) and the Kansas City Camerata (1991) are both professional orchestras.

Lyric Opera of Kansas City was founded in 1958 to present opera in English. Along with the standard repertory, the company has given early performances of many American operas including works by Samuel Barber, Carlisle Floyd and Lee Hoiby. Both the Lyric Opera and the SO perform at the Lyric Theatre, a Masonic temple of the 1920s reconfigured as a theatre seating 1600. Since 1951 Starlight Theatre has produced Broadway musicals in its outdoor amphitheatre in Swope Park. The Performing Arts Foundation sponsored performances of operas by Handel and Purcell in 1965–6.

In 1897 W.H. Leib organized the Oratorio Society, which continued until 1917 under Carl Busch; at its peak it had about 1000 members. Other choral groups have included the Apollo Club (founded 1899), the Schubert Club (1912), the Haydn Male Chorus (1925), Choral Arts (1982), the Fine Arts Chorale (1972), the Kansas City Chorale (1981) and the Kansas City Symphony Chorus (the last three still active).

Grace and Holy Trinity Cathedral (established 1868) has long had an active music programme. The world headquarters of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in nearby Independence, has two large and outstanding organs, by Aeolian-Skinner (1959, in the auditorium) and Casavant (1993, in the temple). Handel's Messiah has been performed in its auditorium annually since 1916.

Other musical organizations include the Kansas City Athenaeum (established 1894), the Kansas City Musical Club (1899) and the Kansas City Chapter of Young Audiences (1962). The William Jewell College Fine Arts Program (begun 1965) and the Friends of Chamber Music (1975) bring soloists and ensembles to the 1100-seat Folly Theater (originally the Butler, restored 1981) and the 2400-seat Music Hall. Concert series are also given nearby at Johnson County Community College in Overland Park, and at the University of Kansas in Lawrence. The Kansas City Conservatory of Music was founded in 1906 and the Horner Institute of Fine Arts in 1914; the two were joined in 1926, and in 1959 they merged with the music department of the University of Kansas City. The latter became a unit of the University of Missouri in 1963.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.W. Whitney: Kansas City, Missouri: its History and its People 1808–1908 (Chicago, 1908)
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya (New York, 1955/R), 284ff
F. Driggs: 'Kansas City and the Southwest', Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A.J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/R), 189–230
M. Crabb: A History of Music in Kansas City, 1900–1965 (diss., U. of Missouri, Kansas City, 1967)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968/R), 279–319
C.W. Scherrer: 'Jazz in Kansas City', Music Journal, xxviii/5 (1970), 28–9, 60–61, 64–5
E.C. Krohn: Missouri Music (New York, 1971)
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, 1971/R)
L. Ostransky: 'Kansas City: the Development of its Spirit', 'Kansas City: the Jazz Development', Jazz City: the Impact of our Cities on the Development of Jazz (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978), 123–72
'Kansas City Revives Jazz Landmark', New York Times (2 May 1985)
M. Williams: 'Jazz: what Happened in Kansas City?', American Music, iii/2 (1985), 171–9
N.W. Pearson: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, 1987)

JACK L. RALSTON/SCOTT CANTRELL, J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Kantate (Ger.). See CANTATA.

Kantele. The Finnish version of a psaltery played throughout the eastern Baltic Sea region, collectively known as 'Baltic psalteries'. The various names of the instruments are etymologically related. In Finnish they are called kantele or kannel, in Estonian kannel, in Karelian kandele, in Latvian kokle or kuokle and in Lithuanian kankles (see illustration).Similar names are also known among Livonians, Vepsians and Setus. The 'wing-shaped' GUSLI of north-western Russia is also related.

The oldest forms of Baltic psalteries were carved from a single piece of wood, usually alder, spruce or birch, to form an irregular triangle- or trapezoid-shaped body with the narrow end cut off. The body might be carved from the top, side or bottom. If carved from the top, separate soundboards were added; if carved from the bottom or side, they were usually left open. Soundboards may feature one or more soundholes in a variety of shapes, the most common being a round hole, cross or flower. Examples in Finnish museums range from 45 to 100 cm long, 10 to 32 cm wide and 3 to 11 cm thick.

The carved Baltic psalteries had between five and 15 strings, typically made of copper or steel. The strings were attached to a single rod, which was most frequently held in place between the sides of a wide notch carved in the top of the narrow end. The strings were usually not parallel, fanning out from the rod to the tuning pegs at the wide end. The tuning peg side usually formed an oblique angle with the rod, thus giving the strings graduated lengths. The Finnish five-string kantele was tuned in a major, minor or neutral pentachord. Those with greater numbers of strings were generally tuned diatonically, although the lowest strings could be tuned lower to produce a drone.

The top was extended on the wide end in order to allow space to insert the tuning pegs from below. On some instruments this extension was quite large, and was called laba (Estonian: 'blade' or 'paddle'). Virtually none of the Finnish carved kanteles had this extension, rather they had a downward curving extension at the narrow end called ponsi. The variations in structure between those instruments featuring a laba or a ponsi is believed to derive from different playing positions. The instrument could be played horizontally, laid across the player's lap or on a table, or vertically with the long side of the instrument on the lap and the short side propped against the body. In both cases, the shortest string was closest to the player. According to Finnish folklore the ponsi was placed on the knee, so it may have served the function of securing the instrument in the horizontal playing position. The laba was believed to function as a place to rest the left arm in the vertical position.

'Baltic psalteries': (a) Latvian kokle; (b) Estonian kannel; (c) Finnish kantele

There were two basic playing techniques. The Finnish carved kantele was played by plucking the strings with the fingers of both hands. Strings were always plucked by the same fingers with interlocking finger patterns which Väisänen and subsequent Finnish scholars call the 'together position'. The playing style could be fast since it alternated between hands. In the second technique the fingers of the left hand covered or depressed the strings not needed to produce a chord, while the right hand strummed a rhythm with a finger or plectrum. This 'covering technique' made it particularly suitable for dance music. Some players combined both techniques. The earliest repertory described by Väisänen and others included improvisations, rune melodies, songs and dances.

During the 19th century Baltic psalteries began to be built in larger versions with bodies constructed of individual pieces of wood that formed enclosed boxes (thus the Finnish versions have been called 'box kanteles'). The strings were strung parallel and were attached between hitch pins and tuning pins. The number of strings on these diatonic instruments increased to 36 or more with a five-octave range, though the majority of museum specimens have 24–32 strings. They were played using the 'apart position', where one hand played a melody and harmony in 3rds, while the other hand played a chordal accompaniment and bass. The repertory included the same styles of folk music, songs, marches and dances as played on other Western folk instruments.

Modern varieties of Baltic psalteries have been developed with tuning mechanisms or chromatic strings in various arrangements that make the instrument more suited for Western art music. Contemporary composers, especially in Finland, have written pieces that exploit the instrument's wide range of sound qualities. Conservatories throughout the eastern Baltic Sea region teach the more advanced forms of the instrument. However, there has been a strong revival in playing the older style instruments throughout the region, and among North American immigrants.

Due to its prominent position in folklore, the Baltic psaltery has become a national symbol in every country in which it is played. According to the Finno-Karelian rune songs which formed the basis of the Kalevala epic, the first kantele was fashioned by the eternal sage Väinämöinen from the jawbone of a pike and the hair of a maiden. Like Orpheus, Väinämöinen's kantele playing enchanted all those who listened. In addition to mythology, folk runes also gave accurate descriptions of the carved kantele and playing styles. Similar folklore survives throughout the region.

In spite of more than a century of research, the early history, diffusion and etymology of the names of the Baltic psalteries remain obscure. The debate centres around whether the instrument originated among the Finns, Balts or Slavs, and the direction of its dissemination. Some scholars attribute great antiquity to the Baltic psaltery, believing it to be the same age as its folklore. Recent scholarship has postulated connections with other ancient string instruments. The earliest artefacts have been reconstructed with fragments dating from the 11th century to the 15th found in archaeological excavations in Novgorod, Pskov, Opole and Gdańsk. These instruments all have the same basic shape as the oldest Baltic psalteries, but some feature a large opening in the body that suggests they were a kind of lyre. During the 1990s there were three international conferences devoted to Baltic psaltery research.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.S. Famintsïn: Skomorokhi na Rusi [Skomorokhi in Russia] (St Petersburg, 1889/R)
A.S. Famintsïn: Gusli: russkiy narodnïy muzïkal'nïy instrument [The gusli: a Russian national musical instrument] (St Petersburg, 1890)
M. Petukhov: 'Kantele, finskiy narodnïy muzykal'nïy instrument', Vsemirnaya illyustratsya, no.1209 (1892), 244–6
N.I. Privalov: 'Zvonchatïe gusli na Rusi', Musïka i peniye (1908), no.7, pp.8–10; no.8, pp.1–3; no.9, pp.2–4
A.O. Väisänen, ed.: Kantele-ja jouhikkosävelmiä [Music for the kantele and jouhikko] (Helsinki, 1928) [with Ger. summary]
E. Arro: 'Zum Problem der Kannel', Sitzungsberichte der Gelehrten Estnischen Gesellschaft (1929), 158–90
J. Žilevičius: 'Native Lithuanian Musical Instruments', MQ, xxi (1935), 99–106
Z. Slaviūnas: 'Lietuviu kanklės', Tautosakos darbai, iii (1937), 244–318 [with Eng. summary]
A.O. Väisänen: 'Wirklichkeitsgrund der finnisch-estnischen Kantelerunen', Acta ethnologica, iii (1938), 31–57
P. Stepulis: Kankles (Vilnius, 1955)
A. Simon: 'An Early Medieval Slav Gesle', GSJ, x (1957), 63–5
F.V. Sokolov: Gusli zvonchatïye [The ringing gusli] (Moscow, 1959)
E. Nieminen: 'Finnisch kantele und die damit verbundenen Namen baltischer Musikinstrumente', Studia fennica, x/2 (1963), 1–43
E. Emsheimer: 'Die Streichleier von Danczk', Studia ethnomusicologica eurasiatica (Stockholm, 1964), 99–107
K. Jażdżewski: 'Über das Problem der polnischen Saiteninstrumente des frühen Mittelalters', Travaux et matériaux du Musée archéologique et ethnographique de Łódź, xii (1966), 25ff
K. Vertkov: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte der russischen Guslitypen', Studia instrumentorum musicae popularis I: Brno 1967, 134–41
I. Tõnurist: 'Vadjalaste ja isurite kandlest', Aastaraamat etnograafiamuuseumi, xxiv (Tallinn, 1969), 335–46
J. Braun: 'Die Anfänge des Musikinstrumentenspiels in Lettland', Musik des Ostens, vi (1971), 88–125
F. Crane: Extant Medieval Musical Instruments: a Provisional Catalogue by Types (Iowa City, 1972)
S. Reynolds: 'The Baltic Psaltery: Bibliographical Problems and Desiderata', Papers Presented at the Second Conference on Baltic Studies: Stockholm 1973, ii (Stockholm, 1973), 7ff
T. Leisiö: 'Kanteleen historiaa', Kansanmusiikki, iii (1975), 29–35
H. Tampere: Eesti rahvapillid ja rahvatantsud [Estonian folk instrument and folk dance] (Tallinn, 1975) [with Russ. and Ger. summary]
T. Leisiö: 'Kantele', Otavan iso musiikkitietosanakirja (Helsinki, 1976–9)
I. Tõnurist: 'Kannel vepsamaast setumaani', Soome-ugri rahvaste muusikapärandist (Tallinn, 1977), 149–82 [with Ger. and Russ. summary]
C.J. Niles: 'The Revival of the Latvian Kokle in America', Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, iii (1978), 211–51
C.J. Niles: The Baltic Folk Zithers: an Ethnological and Structural Analysis (thesis, UCLA, 1980)
J. Tall: 'Kannel', Folk Harp Journal, no.30 (1980), 25–9
I. Tõnurist: 'Kantele i narodnaya kultura pribaltiyskikh Finnov, baltov i russkikh', Congressus quartus internationalis fenno-ugristarum: Budapest 1975, ed. G. Ortutay and J. Gulya, iv (Budapest, 1981), 84–6
A. Asplund: Kantele (Helsinki, 1983)
S. Reynolds: 'The Baltic Psaltery and Musical Instruments of Gods and Devils', Journal of Baltic Studies, xiv (1983), 5–23
H. Saha: 'Kantele: New Life for Finland's National Instrument', Finnish Music Quarterly, iv/1 (1988), 20–29
C. Rahkonen: The Kantele Traditions of Finland (diss., Indiana U., 1989)
R. Apanavičius: The Origin of the Musical Instruments of the Ancient Balts (diss., Vytautas Magnus University, Kaunas, 1994)
H. Saha: Kansanmusiikin tyyli ja muuntelu [Style and variability in folk music] (diss., Tampere U., 1996)
I. Tõnurist: Pillid ja pillimäng eesti külaelus (Tallinn, 1996)
R. Apanavičius and others: Senosios kankles ir kankliavimas [Ancient kankles: history, repertory and playing traditions] (Vilnius, 2/1997) [with Eng., Finn. and Russ. summary]
J. Hakala: Memento of Finland [The kantele in North America] (St Paul, MN, 1997)
T. Leisiö and J. Hakala, eds.: Kankogus-Bal: Essays on the Baltic Psaltery in Honor of Martti Pokela (Tampere, 1999)

CARL RAHKONEN

Kantional (Ger.). See CANTIONAL, §2.

Kantor (i) (Ger.). The principal or solo singer in liturgical music (see CANTOR).

Kantor (ii) (Ger.). In Germany, the director of music in a Lutheran church and usually also the musical head of a Gymnasium, Lateinschule or other educational establishment connected with the church. From the Reformation until the mid-18th century the post of Kantor at a large city such as Hamburg or Leipzig (where Bach was Kantor of the Thomasschule from 1723 until his death) was one of the most highly esteemed in Germany; in addition to composing and directing sacred music the duties often included training the choir, teaching practical and theoretical music and other subjects, and taking part in civic secular music.

See also GERMANY, §I, 2–4, and KANTORAT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Blankenburg); RiemannL12
H. Nuechterlein: 'Sixteenth-Century Kantorei and its Predecessors', Church Musician, i/1 (1971), 3–8

□

Kantorat (Ger.). Term describing the office of a Kantor or cantor, who directed the performance of predominantly liturgical sacred music; the position is generally connected with a secondary school (a cathedral school or Lateinschule) and in its strict sense does not describe a singer or, as with the Jewish Kantor, the function of a principal singer. The Kantorat is particularly widespread in Lutheran Germany, but is also found in the Baltic states, Scandinavia and Slovakia.

The pre-Reformation Kantorat developed from the function of the principal singer into the office of a director, and after the 11th century it became a highly respected administrative post. The musical duties of the position passed to a succentor, while the cantor undertook its more formal functions; these posts, still described by the term 'Kantorat', survived the Reformation, sharing the fate of the monastic or cathedral chapters to which they were attached, and as the educational system was restructured the Lutheran Kantorat was established in many cities. Its duties were divided equally between sacred and municipal functions (providing music for divine service, in schools and for ceremonial occasions), and the post thus came within the jurisdiction of both the ecclesiastical and the municipal administrative bodies; the Lutheran Kantor occupied a social position somewhere between the clergy and the laity.

The performance of sacred music and the training of singers were important responsibilities for municipal Kantorats; as a cantor eruditus and a university-trained teacher the Kantor would often also teach academic subjects such as Latin. In small towns and in the country the Kantorat often covered non-musical activities as well, such as the duties of sacristan. From the 17th century the activities of municipal Kantors often extended to include the prestigious musical performances commissioned by the public authorities or by private individuals. With these occasional performances and the growing opportunities for composing, Kantors increasingly became music specialists, combining their traditional function as director of musical performances (director musices) with the new role of participating in the town's rapidly developing concert life. The functions and structures of the post became less rigid after the 17th century, and debate about the traditional role of the Kantor can be traced in the writings of Kuhnau, Bendeler, Mattheson and Mizler. Yet even in the 18th century many theorists, citing Luther in support of their view, still insisted that singing was the essence of the Kantorat. At great churches such as the Marienkirche in Danzig and the Barfüsserkirche in Frankfurt, the Kantorat entailed duties similar to those of a Kapellmeister. The constant adaptations and changing specializations of the post, such as when Kantors stopped teaching non-musical subjects or extended their publishing activities, are important factors in its history. This tendency is seen in J.S. Bach and G.P. Telemann's disinclination to take on the post's traditional duties of teaching music and Latin. Such developments led ultimately to the loss of the Kantorat's original educational function, a change that came about very early in some places: in about 1630–40 in Hamburg, and, according to Rüetz, affecting the Leipzig Thomaskantor in 1753.

Cathedral Kantors, for instance in Bremen, Magdeburg and Breslau, seem to have had more freedom than their colleagues who held civic appointments to participate in public music-making and concert life (no thorough studies have been made of the relationship between cathedral and civic Kantorats). On the other hand, not only did such city Kantorats as those of Dresden and Leipzig survive, so also did many Kantorats in small communities; Mendelssohn considered them the principal seat of the traditional practice of contrapuntal music. Around 1800 the decline of liturgical forms and of sacred song led to the abolition of the Kantorat or its amalgamation with the office of organist.

Attempts were made to re-establish Kantorats in the 19th century. Although little research has been done on this area, it seems that the intention was not to revive the earlier, municipal office but to establish an ecclesiastical position. In the 20th century the reintroduction of the post in churches united areas of church music for which the earlier Lutheran posts of organist and Kantor used to be separately responsible.

The history of the Kantorat is closely connected with the history of schools and education, as well as with aspects of institutional, regional, ecclesiastical and social history. As a result, its sources and literature are to be found in the fields of educational, liturgical and ecclesiastical history, in the history of music teaching and in studies of regional history.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SOURCES

G. Durand: Rationale divinorum officiorum (Mainz, 1459)
J. Kuhnau: Jura circa musicos ecclesiasticos (Leipzig, 1688)
J.P. Bendeler: Directorium musicum (Quedlinburg, 1706)
G.A. Pauli: Dissertatio theologica de choris prophetarum symphonicis in ecclesia dei, von der Prophetischen Cantorey (Rostock, 1720)
G.E. Scheibel: Zufällige Gedancken von der Kirchenmusic wie sie heutiges Tages beschaffen ist (Frankfurt, 1721)
J. Mattheson: M.H.J. Sivers Gelehrter Cantor (Hamburg, 1730)
C. Ruetz: Widerlegte Vorurtheile von der Wirkung der Kirchenmusic und von den dazu erforderten Unkosten (Rostock, 1753)
G.M. Telemann: Nachrichten das Kantorat betreffend (MS, 1775, D-Bsb)
J.N. Forkel: Allgemeine Geschichte der Musik (Leipzig, 1788–1801/R)
G.C.F. Schlimbach: 'Ideen und Vorschläge zur Verbesserung des Kirchenmusikwesens', Berlinische Musikalische Zeitung, i (1805), 59ff

STUDIES

MGG1 ('Kantor', W. Blankenburg); MGG2 ('Kirchenmusiker', W. Herbot)
J. Foss: Organist- og Kantor-Embederne (Copenhagen, 3/1927)
G. Pietzsch: 'Bildung und Aufgabe des Kantors im Mittelalter und Frühprotestantismus', Die Musikpflege, iv (1933–4), 221
A. Werner: Vier Jahrhunderte im Dienste der Kirchenmusik: Geschichte des Amtes und Standes der evangelischen Kantoren, Organisten und Stadtpfeifer seit der Reformation (Leipzig, 1933)
W.M. Luther: 'Die gesellschaftliche und wirtschaftliche Stellung des protestantischen Kantors', Musik und Kirche, xix (1949), 33–40
E. Schieche: Die Anfänge der Deutschen St. Gertruds-Gemeinde zu Stockholm im 16. Jahrhundert (Münster and Cologne, 1952)
K.F. Müller: Der Kantor: sein Amt und seine Dienste (Gütersloh, 1964)
D. Krickeberg: Das protestantische Kantorat im 17. Jahrhundert: Studien zum Amt des deutschen Kantors (Berlin, 1965)
M. Schuler: 'Zur Geschichte des Kantors im Mittelalter', GfMKB; Leipzig 1966, 169–73
K.W. Niemöller: Untersuchungen zu Musikpflege und Musikunterricht an den deutschen Lateinschulen vom ausgehenden Mittelalter bis um 1600 (Regensburg, 1969)
E. Reimer: 'Musicus-Cantor' (1972), HMT
N. Grinde: 'Latinskolen og dens kor i Christiania ca. 1720–1740', SMN, iii (1977), 15–32 [with Eng. summary]
K. Jalkanen: Lukkarin-ja urkurinvirka, Suomessa [Precentor and organist posts, Suomessa], i: 1721–1809 (Helsinki, 1986); ii: 1809–1870 (Helsinki, 1976); iii: 1870–1918 (Helsinki, 1978) [all with Eng. summary]
Struktur, Funktion und Bedeutung des deutschen protestantischen Kantorats im 16. bis 18. Jahrhundert: Magdeburg 1991
J. Kremer: 'Schulische Musikpflege im Zeichen pädagogischer Neuorientierung: zur Musik an der Gelehrtenschule Hamburgs im 18. Jahrhundert', AMw, xlviii (1991), 126–52
J. Kremer: 'Kantorat und Musikunterricht zwischen 1766 und 1815', IRASM, xxii, (1991), 29–46
J. Butt: Music Education and the Art of Performance in the German Baroque (New York, 1994)
J. Kremer: Das norddeutsche Kantorat im 18. Jahrhundert: Untersuchungen am Beispiel Hamburgs (Kassel, 1995)
J. Kremer: 'Das Kantorat als Gegenstand der Professionalismusforschung: Überlegungen zu einer Typologie', Professionalismus in der Musik, ed. C. Kaden and V. Kalish (Essen, 1999), 172–8

JOACHIM KREMER

Kantorow, Jean-Jacques (b Cannes, 3 Oct 1945). French violinist and conductor. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with René Benedetti (1959–60) and was awarded a premier prix (1960). He made his solo début at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées in 1959. He re-entered the Conservatoire in 1963 to study chamber music with Joseph Calvet and won a premier prix in 1964. He was leader of the Orchestre de Paris (1977–8) and the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra (1978–84). He was principal conductor of the Auvergne Chamber Orchestra (1985–94) and of the Helsinki Chamber Orchestra (1992–3), and in 1993 became principal conductor of the Ensemble Orchestral de Paris and the Tapiola Sinfonietta in Finland. He has played in several chamber music groups, including the Paganini Ensemble, and formed a duo with the guitarist Anthea Gifford in 1984. Kantorow has made numerous recordings, of which those of the Ravel and Debussy sonatas and of works by Liszt have won major awards. He has won many international competitions and has held a number of teaching posts: in 1985 he was appointed professor of the violin at the Rotterdam Conservatory and in 1995 professor of the violin at the Paris Conservatoire. He also holds masterclasses at the Salzburg Mozarteum and the Nice Summer Academy. Kantorow has an infallible technique and a beauty of tone which combines the best features of the French and Russian schools. He plays a Stradivarius dated 1699, the 'ex-Leopold Auer'. (H. Kurzbauer: 'Diverse Interests', The Strad, xcix (1988), 776–9)

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kapell, William (b New York, 20 Sept 1922; d King's Mountain, CA, 29 Oct 1953). American pianist. He studied with Dorothea Anderson La Follette in New York, then with Olga Samaroff in Philadelphia and at the Juilliard School. In 1941 he won the Philadelphia Orchestra's youth competition and the Naumberg Award; the Naumberg Foundation then sponsored his New York début on 28 October the same year, which brought him the Town Hall Award for the year's outstanding concert by a musician under 30. He achieved fame in the next few years not least by his championship of the Piano Concerto of Khachaturian, at that time a name new to the USA, and proceeded to an international career which was cut short by his death in a plane crash on the way back from Australia.

There was some tendency to typecast Kapell as a performer of flashy repertory; his technique was exceptional, but he was a versatile pianist and could also give memorably graceful performances of Mozart and Chopin, as well as championing the works of contemporary composers such as Copland, sometimes against the advice of managers and promoters. Copland wrote of him: 'I cannot conceive of his ever having given a dull performance – an erratic one, perhaps, a misguided or stylistically incongruous one maybe, but invariably one that was electric and alive.' During the 1990s Kapell's recordings of works by Chopin, Rachmaninoff, Khachaturian and others were reissued and achieved something of a cult following.

MICHAEL STEINBERG/R

Kapelle (Ger.). See CHAPEL.

Kapellmeister (Ger.). The musician in charge of a Kapelle or CHAPEL. See also BANDMASTER.

Kapelye (Yid.). In the Ashkenazi Jewish tradition, an ensemble of klezmer musicians. See JEWISH MUSIC, §IV, 3(ii).

Kaper, Bronislaw [Bronislau] (b Warsaw, 5 Feb 1902; d Los Angeles, 26 April 1983). American composer of Polish birth. He was educated at the Warsaw Conservatory and was active as composer and pianist in Warsaw, Berlin, Vienna, London and Paris before settling in Hollywood and joining the staff of MGM in 1940. He was one of a number of versatile musicians of European origin and orientation who helped to create Hollywood music. He composed a number of popular songs besides his articulate and closely-knit film scores. His best work dates from the 1960s: Mutiny on the Bounty (1962) and Lord Jim (1965) reveal a pronounced flair for musical depiction of the sea and tropical landscapes. Kaper's theme from Green Dolphin Street (1947) became popularized when recorded in a jazz idiom by Miles Davis; his theme for Invitation (1952) was also widely recorded. Kaper's dramatic score for the science fiction film Them! (1954) is largely regarded as one of the classics of horror movie music of the period; regrettably, a 'Fugue for Ants' that Kaper wrote for the film was ultimately deleted from the final soundtrack. After 28 years and more than 100 scores for MGM, Kaper, like many Hollywood composers in the mid-1960s, found film work declining as pop music became more prevalent. As a result he turned to composing for television.

Kaper's style, which was securely rooted in late European Romanticism, has fluency, melodic charm and fine, elegant craftsmanship; like many Hollywood composers he established a useful rapport between popular and symphonic music (for example, from his Oscar-winning score, the song 'Hi-lili, hi-lo' in Lili, 1953, and the use of extended ballet in The Glass Slipper, 1955). While his music is warm, colourful and melodically appealing, it is rarely meretricious and, within the confines of its idiom, achieves a certain individuality of voice. Other notable scores of his include Gaslight (1944), The Naked Spur (1952), The FBI (television theme, 1965), Tobruk (1967) and The Way West (1967).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Thomas: Music for the Movies (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1973)

W.F. Krasnoborski: 'Interview with B. Kaper', Soundtrack Collector's Newsletter, no.2 (1975), 13; no.3 (1976), 3; repr. in Motion Picture Music, ed. L. Van de Ven (Mechelen, NJ, 1980), 122

T. Thomas: Film Score: the View from the Podium (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1979), 115–25

V.J. Francillon, ed.: Film Composers Guide (Los Angeles, 1990, 3/1996), 223–4

CHRISTOPHER PALMER/RANDALL D. LARSON

Kapp. Estonian family of composers.

(1) Artur Kapp (b Suure-Jaani, 16 Feb 1878; d Suure-Jaani, 14 Jan 1952). His father and first teacher, Joosep Kapp, was an organist and choral conductor. Artur, one of the first Estonian musicians to receive academic training, studied at the St Petersburg Conservatory, graduating from the organ class in 1898 and from the composition class of Rimsky-Korsakov and Lyadov in 1900. He settled in Astrakhan where he directed the music school from 1903 to 1920. Like many Baltic musicians he returned to his homeland after the revolution. In Tallinn he was professor of composition at the conservatory (1924–43) and conductor at the Estonia Theatre (1920–24). Kapp taught a number of leading Estonian composers and founded the 'Tallinn School', a circle notable for its attention to vocal-instrumental genres. In 1945 he was given the title Honoured Art Worker. The first composer to use Estonian folk material (in the suite of 1906), he was the originator of Estonian art music. His work is rich and sonorous, epic and monumental in form. Among his most successful pieces is the oratorio Hiob; the Fourth Symphony won him the Stalin Prize in 1950.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Don Carlos, sym. poem, 1900; Suite no.1, 1906; 5 syms., 1924–49; Suite no.2, 1930; 5 concs., 1934–46; Suite no.3, 1936; Suite no.4, 1947

Chbr: Sonata, vn, pf, 1897; Str Qnt, 1918; Trio, vn, vc, org, 1936; Str Sextet, 1951

Vocal: Hiob (orat), 1929; 4 cants., *c*130 songs, choral pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Anton, ed.: Artur Kapp sõnas ja pildis [Artur Kapp in memoirs and pictures] (Tallinn, 1968)

(2) Eugen Kapp (b Astrakhan, 13 May 1908). Son of (1) Artur Kapp. After graduating from his father's composition class at the Tallinn Conservatory in 1931, he joined the Conservatory staff, teaching music theory (from 1935) and composition (from 1941). In 1947 he was appointed professor at the Conservatory, acting as rector from 1952 to 1964. He also served as chair of the Estonian Composers' Union (1948–65). His many awards included Stalin Prizes for the operas Tasuleegid ('Fire of Revenge') and Vabaduse laulik ('Bard of Freedom') in 1946 and 1950 respectively, and for the ballet Kalevipoeg in 1952. His music, characterized by simple harmonies, march rhythms and an appealing melodic style, found particular favour in the 1940s and 50s, conforming as it did to then current political demands for art.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Tasuleegid [Fire of Revenge] (op, 3, P. Rummo), Tallinn, 21 July 1945; Kalevipoeg (ballet), 1947; Vabaduse laulik [Bard of Freedom] (op, 4, Rummo), Tallinn, 22 July 1950; Kullaketrajad [Goldspinners] (ballet), 1956; Talvemuinasjutt [Winter Fairytale] (op, 3, I. Nasalevich), Tartu, 28 Oct 1958; Tabamatu [Elusive Marta] (op, 3, J. Galitski), 19 March 1961; Assol (operetta, I. Vsevolozhski), 1965; 2 other operettas

Orch: 6 suites, 1933–57; 3 Syms., 1942, 1954, 1964; Pf Conc., 1969

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1935; Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1936; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1942; Tallinna pildid [Pictures of Tallinn], pf, 1949; Str Qt no.2, 1960; other chbr and pf music

Vocal: an oratorio, 9 cantatas, many songs and choruses

Principal publisher: Muzgiz, Musfond

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Polyanovsky: Eugen Kapp (Moscow, 1951)

H. Kõrvits: Eugen Kapp (Moscow, 1959; Estonian trans., 1964)

J. Jürisson, ed.: Heliloojad Kapid ja Eesti muusika [The composers Kapp and Estonian music] (Tallinn, 1978)

(3) Villem Kapp (b Suure-Jaani, 25 Aug 1913; d Tallinn, 24 March 1964). Nephew of (1) Artur Kapp. His uncle was his first teacher. He studied at the Tallinn Conservatory where he graduated from August Topman's organ class in 1938 and Heino Eller's composition class in 1944. From 1944 until his death he taught composition at the Conservatory, also remaining active as a choral conductor and organist. His primary contribution as a composer was to the genres of solo and choral song. Among his most popular works is the choral poem Põhjarannik ('The Northern Coast', 1958). His talent for writing melody is also clear in his instrumental music. Although quotations from folk sources are rare in his oeuvre, a popular mood prevails throughout.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Lembitu (A. Pirn), 1961

Vocal: Tervitus [Salutation] (choral cant.), 1949; Meie kodu [Our Homeland] (choral cant.), 1956; Põhjarannik [The Northern Coast], 1v, male chorus, orch/pf/org, 1958; Kevadele [For the Spring] (choral cant.), 1963; several hundred songs

Inst: Sonata, pf, 1940; Pf Trio, 1946; Sym. no.1, a, 1947; Sym. no.2, c, 1955; Wind Qnt, 1957

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Tõnson: Villem Kapp (Tallinn, 1967; Russian trans., 1969)

J. Jürisson, ed.: Heliloojad Kapid ja Eesti muusika [The composers Kapp and Estonian music] (Tallinn, 1978)

JOACHIM BRAUN (1), URVE LIPPUS (2 and 3)

Kapp, Julius (b Steinbach, Baden, 1 Oct 1883; d Sonthofen, 18 March 1962). German writer on music. He studied chemistry and music and worked as a freelance writer in Berlin, where he co-founded and edited the Literarischer Anzeiger (1904–7). He was adviser on productions to the Berlin Staatsoper and edited the Blätter der Staatsoper, 1921–45; he then held the same position with the Berlin Städtische Oper, 1948–54.

Kapp was a prolific writer, centring his work largely on the study of opera composers, Wagner in particular. His monumental biography of Wagner (1910) was followed by editions of his writings (1914) and the first two volumes of his collected letters (1914, 1933). These and his earlier work on Liszt (biography 1909, editions of the writings 1910) are his most important works, although his studies of Berlioz, Meyerbeer, Paganini and Weber were also influential. While directing productions at the Berlin Staatsoper he edited several operatic texts for use there.

WRITINGS

Richard Wagner und Franz Liszt: eine Freundschaft (Berlin, 1908)

Franz Liszt (Berlin, 1909/R)

Franz Liszt: gesammelte Schriften (allgemeine Inhaltsübersicht) (Leipzig, 1910)

Franz Liszt und die Frauen (Leipzig, 1911)

Liszt-Brevier (Leipzig, 1910)

Richard Wagner (Berlin, 1910/R; Eng., Fr., Dutch, Russ. and Swed. transs.)

ed.: Der junge Wagner: Dichtungen, Aufsätze, Entwürfe, 1832–1849 (Berlin, 1910)

ed.: Franz Liszt: gesammelte Schriften (Leipzig, 1910)

Richard Wagner und die Frauen: eine erotische Biographie (Berlin, 1912/R; Eng. trans., 1951)

Niccolò Paganini (Berlin and Leipzig, 1913/R) ed.: Richard Wagner: gesammelte Schriften, i–xiv (Leipzig, 1914)

ed.: Richard Wagners gesammelte Briefe, i–ii (Leipzig, 1914–33)

ed.: Richard Wagner an Mathilde und Otto Wesendonk (Leipzig, 1915, 2/1936)

Berlioz (Berlin, 1917, 4–7/1922)

Das Dreigestirn: Berlioz, Liszt, Wagner (Berlin, 1920)

Meyerbeer (Berlin, 1920/R)

Franz Schreker: der Mann und sein Werk (Munich, 1921)

Das Opernbuch (Leipzig, 1922, rev. 1941; rev. (1991) by R. Reher and F.D. Geck as Lexikon der Oper)

Die Oper der Gegenwart (Berlin, 1922)

Weber (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1922, 5/1931 as Carl Maria von Weber, 15/1944)

ed.: Ludwig van Beethovens sämtliche Briefe (Leipzig, 2/1923) [rev. of edn by E. Kastner]

ed. with H. Jachmann: Richard Wagner und seine erste 'Elisabeth', Johanna Jachmann-Wagner (Berlin, 1927)

185 Jahre Staatsoper: Festschrift zur Wiedereröffnung des Opernhauses (Berlin, 1928)

Giacomo Meyerbeer (Berlin, 1932)

Richard Wagner: sein Leben, sein Werk, sein Welt, in 260 Bildern (Berlin, 1933)

ed.: Richard Strauss und die Berliner Oper, i–ii (Berlin, 1934–9)

Geschichte der Staatsoper Berlin (Berlin, 1937)

ed.: 200 Jahre Staatsoper im Bild (Berlin, 1942)

HUGH COBBE

Kappel, Gertrude (b Halle, 1 Sept 1884; d Pullach, 3 April 1971). German soprano. She studied in Leipzig, making her début in 1903 as Leonore at Hanover, where she was engaged until 1924. At Covent Garden she sang Brünnhilde (1912–14) and also Isolde, Sieglinde, Senta, the Marschallin and Electra (1924–6). She appeared at the Vienna Staatsoper (1921–7), at Salzburg, where she sang Donna Anna (1922), and at the Staatsoper in Munich (1927–31). She made her Metropolitan début in 1928 as Isolde, later singing Ortrud, Fricka, Brünnhilde, the Marschallin and Electra (the first Metropolitan performance, 1932). She sang Isolde at San Francisco in 1933 and retired in 1937. Her 1924 recordings of 'Pace, pace, mio Dio' (La forza del destino) and the closing scene of Götterdämmerung reveal the wide range of her voice and the richness and security of her singing.

ALAN BLYTH

Kapr, Jan (b Prague, 12 March 1914; d Prague, 29 April 1988). Czech composer. He turned to music as the result of a serious accident at the age of 16 that left him an invalid for the rest of his life. He studied composition with Jaroslav Řídký at the Prague Conservatory (graduating in 1938) and at the conservatory's master school with Jaroslav Křička, completing his studies in 1940. He was a music producer for Czech Radio (1939–46) and editor-in-chief of the music publisher Orbis (1950–53). From 1953 to 1960 he dedicated himself exclusively to composition. After the communists came to power in 1948, Kapr became one of their leading musical figureheads, receiving several prizes and honours from the regime. The highest of these was the Stalin Prize awarded to him in 1951 for the music for the documentary film Nové Československo ('The New Czechoslovakia'). He did not play a prominent role for long, however. During the years of the Stalinist terrors, he ceased to believe in the communist ideology and in 1953 he began to distance himself from it. This change of view is also reflected in his creative output. From beginnings rooted in late Romanticism, Kapr had moved to those genres required in the context of 'realist' music (including more than 60 songs for massed voices). In the later 1950s, however, he began to consider issues in contemporary music (which led to his book Constants) and his musical language changed from the intuitive to the rational. He taught composition at the Janáček Academy in Brno (1961–9). His teaching career was interrupted, however, when he protested publicly against the occupation of Czechoslovakia by Warsaw Pact troops in 1968. With the reimposition of a communist regime, he spent the next 20 years as an isolated figure, without the hope of hearing his best works which were banned from performance. Illness confined him to bed for two years and he died after the recurrence of a stroke.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Muzikantská pohádka [Musical Fairytale] (op, 2, L. Tomášková), 1961

ORCHESTRAL

Syms: no.1, 1942; no.2, 1946; no.3, 1956; no.4, 1956; no.5 'Olympijská' [The Olympian], 1959; no.6, 1960; No.7 'Krajina dětství' [The Land of Childhood], children's chorus, orch, 1968; no.8 'Campanae Pragenses', S, B, chorus, orch, 1977; no.9 'K poctě Josefa Mánesa' [In Honour of Josef Mánes], 1982; No.10 'Lanžhotská' [The Lanžhot], T, orch, 1985

Other orch: 3 tance [3 Dances], 1937; Pf Conc. no.1, 1938; Fantasie, 1939; Marathon, sym. scherzo, 1939; Symfonietta no.1, small orch, 1949; Pf Conc. no.2, 1953; Zítra ['Tomorrow'], sym. poem, 1953; Suite, 1955; Vn Conc., 1955; Concert Vars, fl, str, 1958; Omaggio alla tromba, 2 tpt, chbr orch, 1967; Anachron, chbr orch, 1974; Conc., accdn, str, 1981; Brněnské allegro [Brno Allegro], brass ens, 1983; Symfonietta no.2, 1984; Conc. E-G, pf, orch, 1986

CHAMBER

Str Qts: no.1, 1937; no.2, 1942; no.3, 1955; no.4, 1958; no.5, 1963; no.6 with Bar, 1963: no.7, 1965; no.8, 1978;

Other chbr: Fantazie, va, pf, 1937; Suite, wind qnt, 1940; Divertimento, fl, cl, bn, 1943; Nonet, 1943; Sonatina, vn, pf, 1948; Fantazie, vn, pf, 1956; 4 nálady [4 Moods], nonet, 1959; Preludium, 3pf, tpt, hn, org, 1964; Dialogy, fl, hp, 1965; Šifry [Numbers], pf, perc, tape, 1965; Oscilace, vn, ens, 1966; Rotace 9, pf qt, 1967; Cimb Sonata, 1968; Testimonianze, b cl, vn, pf, vc, lighting; Šachová sonáta [Chess-Game Sonata], 2pf, 1973; Woodcuts, 8 wind, 1974; Barvy ticha [The Colours of Silence], fl, ob, bn, vn, va, vc, db, hpd; Circuli, vn, accdn, 1974; Concertino, cl, vc, pf, perc, 1975; Signály, tpt, pf, 1976, Sonata, fl, hn, pf, 1976; Sonatina, vn, va, vc, accdn, 1976; Claricello, cl, vc, 1981; Duetti, vn, gui, 1981; Miniatury, cl, ob, vc, 1984

PIANO

Sonatas: no.1, 1944; no.2, 1947; no.3, 1963; no.4, 1980

Other pf: Domov [Home], 2 sets, 1955; Variations on a Theme by Křička, 1963; Opportunities, 1976; Monology, 1983

VOCAL

Solo: Ztracené písně [Lost Songs], S, pf (S. Hanuš), 1943; Krystal, T, pf (Hanuš), 1944; Milostné písně [Love Songs] (J. Pilař, L. Tomášková, S. Shchipachev, Chin. trad.), Bar, pf, 1954; Dítě [Child] (Kapr), Mez, pf, 1963; Contraria romana (ancient poets), Bar, pf, 1965; Cvičení pro Gydli [Exercises for Gydli] (Kapr), S, fl, hp, 1967; The Dream-Book (Kapr), S, fl, hp, 1971; Flauti magichi (Kapr), S, fl, 1972; Vendanges (P. Verlaine), S, Bar, pf, 1975

Choral: Sny a plány [Dreams and Plans] (L. Tomášková, J. Seifert, N. Vaptsarov), T, mixed vv, 1960; Guten Morgen, Stern (C. Morgenstern), mixed vv, 1973; Mánesův orloj [Mánes's Atronomical Clock] (F. Hrubín), mixed vv, 1982

Other works: cants., songs for massed vv, film scores

Principal publishers: Hudební matice, Umělecké besedy, Melantrich, Orbis, Panton, SNKLU, Supraphon

WRITINGS

'O sobě' [About myself], Rytmus, viii (1942), 106

Konstanty: nástin metody osobního výběru zvláštních znaků skladby [The Constants: outline of a method of personal choice of the criteria for a composition] (Prague, 1967)

'O přátelství' [On friendship], HRo, xxii (1969), 42 only

'O své VII symfonii "Krajina dětství"' [About my symphony no.7 The Land of Childhood], HRo, xxii (1969), 652 only

'Teória naznačovánia a vychyl'ovania prvkov' [Theory of the indication and variation of elements in new music], SH, xv (1971), 179–85, 234–42

O některých problémech hudební notace [On some problems of musical notation], MS (1988)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Kuna: 'Masová píseň Jana Kapra' [Kapr's songs for massed voices], HRo, viii (1955), 737–54

M. Kuna: 'Nové uzrávání tvůrčích sil Jana Kapra' [New fruits of Kapr's creative art], HRo, xvii (1964), 182–5

J. Bártová: 'Konstanty, šifry a Jan Kapr' [Constants, numbers and Kapr], HRo, xxi (1968), 84–7

A. Němcová: 'Musik und Wort in der Komposition "Übungen für Gydli" von Jan Kapr', Music and Word: Brno IV 1969, 205–6

E. Zámečník: 'Jan Kapr pedagog aneb Vzpomínání' [Kapr: teacher; or A reminiscence], OM xx (1988), 278 only

J. Bártová: 'Dvanáct let mlčení' [Kapr's 12 years of silence], HRo, xliii (1990), 162–5

J. Bártová: Jan Kapr: nástin života a díla [Kapr: an outline of his life and work] (Brno, 1994)

JINDŘIŠKA BÁRTOVÁ

Kaprál, Václav (b Určice u Prostějova, 26 March 1889; d Brno, 6 April 1947). Czech composer and teacher. He studied under Janáček at the Brno Organ School (1908–10) and under Novák in Prague (1919–20), later following Cortot's interpretation course in Paris (1923–4). In 1911 he founded his own music school in Brno, and in 1927 he was appointed reader in music at the university; from 1936 he was professor of theory at the Brno Conservatory. His pupils included M. Barvík and Milan Harašta. One of the leaders of progressive musical life in Brno, he made foreign tours and was vice-president of the Czech section of the ISCM from 1936. His Fourth Piano Sonata was written as a protest at the invasion of Czechoslovakia, and his left-wing political views caused him to be interned in a concentration camp during the German occupation. When he was released his health had broken. His main interest as a composer was in piano and chamber music, and his miniatures were most successful.

Originally influenced by Chopin, he assimilated contemporary developments to achieve the balanced style of his last years. This combined an evocative variety of harmony with transparent structural clarity and a considerable lyrical talent. Kaprál also wrote reviews and articles on piano instruction in the Brno music press of the 1920s and 30s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Vocal: Ukolébavka [Lullaby] (Bal'mont), female chorus, 1921; Pro ni [For her], 1v, pf qt, 1927; Str Qt no.2, Bar, str qt, 1927; Píseň podzimu [Song of autumn], 1v, str qt, 1929; Uspávanky [Lullabies] (Slovak trad.), 1v, chamber orch, 1932; Milodějné kvítí [Flowers of Love], 2 solo female vv, pf, 1942; Svatobořické lidové písně [Folksongs from Svatobořice], 1944

Inst: 4 pf sonatas, 1912, 1921, 1924, 1939; Miniatury, pf, 1922; Str Qt no.1, 1925; Con duolo, pf left hand, 1926; Lyrica, pf, 1927; Fantasie, E♭, pf, 1934

Principal publishers: Hudební Matice, Pazdírek
MSS in CZ-Bm

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Racek: Leoš Janáček a současní moravští skladatelé (Brno, 1940)
L. Kundera: V. Kaprál (Brno, n.d.)

JAN TROJAN

Kaprálová, Vítězslava (b Brno, 24 Jan 1915; d Montpellier, 16 June 1940). Czech composer. Encouraged by her father, the composer Václav Kaprál, she started to compose at the age of nine. At the Brno Conservatory (1930–35) she studied composition with Vilém Petrželka and conducting with Zdenek Chalabala; her graduation work was a piano concerto, which she conducted herself. For the next two years she participated in the masterclasses of Vítězslav Novák (composition) and Václav Talich (conducting) at the Prague Conservatory, after which a French government scholarship enabled her to move to Paris in 1937. There she studied conducting with Charles Münch and composition with Martinů. For Martinů she became more than a compatriot and talented pupil: they influenced each other when working on similar compositions (Martinů's Madrigaly, Kaprálová's Koleda milostná, 'Love Carol'), and their correspondence regarding Martinů's Tre ricercari and Kaprálová's Partita op.20 confirms their close cooperation.

The music Kaprálová wrote in Paris reveals a mature mastery of contemporary musical language as she mingles a concise polytonality with her own melancholy melodic expression. The outstanding works of this period are the Variations on the peal of St Etienne-du-Mont for piano, the Deux ritournelles for cello and piano, the Partita for piano and strings, the unfinished Concertino and the orchestral Suita rustica – the last and perhaps her best work.

In 1938, to great acclaim, she conducted the BBC SO in her Vojenská symfonietta ('Military Sinfonietta') at the ISCM Festival in London. At the end of that year she briefly visited her homeland, Moravia, but under the threat of war she returned to Paris in January 1939. There she married the writer Jiří Mucha, son of the painter Alfons Mucha; but she died of miliary tuberculosis during the evacuation of Paris.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Vojenská symfonietta [Military Sinfonietta], op.11; Suita rustica, op.19; Partita, op.20, pf, str orch; Concertino, op.21, vn, cl, orch, inc.

Chbr and solo inst: Dubnová preludia [April Preludes], op.13, pf; Variace na zvonkovu hru kostela St Etienne du Mont v Paříži [Variations on the Peal of the Church of St Etienne-du-Mont in Paris], op.16, pf; Deux ritournelles, op.25, vc, pf; Groteskní passacaglia [Grotesque Passacaglia], pf (from op.9)

Vocal: Jablko s klína [The Apple from the Lap] (J. Seifert), op.10, 1v, pf; Navždy [Forever] (J. Čarek, Seifert), op.12, high v, pf; Sbohem a šáteček [Waving Farewell] (V. Nezval), op.14, S, orch/pf; Zpíváno do dálky [A Faraway Song], op.22, 1v, pf; Koleda milostná [Love Carol] Vteřiny [Seconds] (8 songs), op.18, incl.

Some material in CZ-Bm

Principal publishers: Český hudebný fond, Hudební matice Umělecké besedy, La sirène musicale, Supraphon

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS
J. Macek: Vítězslava Kaprálová (Prague, 1958)
J. Mucha: Podivné lásky [Strange loves] (Prague, 1988)

JIŘÍ MACEK, ANNA ŠERÝCH

Kapsperger, Giovanni Girolamo [Giovanni Geronimo; Kapsberger, Johann Hieronymus; 'Il Tedesco della tiorba'] (b ?Venice, *c*1580; d Rome, Jan 1651). Italian composer, lutenist, theorbist and guitarist of German descent. (He seems to have used the spelling 'Kapsperger' rather than the 'Kapsberger' favoured by German scholars.) His father, Colonel Guglielmo Kapsperger, was a noble military official with the Imperial House of Austria and may have settled in Venice. Kapsperger was in Rome soon after 1605, where through his reputation as a virtuoso and his status as a nobile alemano he moved in the circles of powerful families such as the Bentivoglio and the Barberini. Other supporters in Rome included the Orders of S Stefano and S Giovanni and the academies of the Umoristi and the Imperfetti whose members arranged for the publication of his works; the academies Kapsperger organized in his house were described as among the 'wonders of Rome'. Around 1609 he married the Neapolitan Gerolima di Rossi, by whom he had at least three children. In 1612 his Maggio Cantata, dedicated to the Grand duchess Maria Maddalena, was performed in Florence at the Palazzo Pitti.

In 1622 his Apotheosis, on Jesuit themes, was performed at the Collegio Romano on the canonizations of the first two Jesuit saints, Ignatius Loyola and Francis Xavier; the most elaborate musical production in Rome before the Barberini operas, it marked the period of Kapsperger's deepening relationship with the papal circle. In 1624 his settings of verses by the newly-elected Pope Urban VIII Barberini were published as Poematia et carmina, which G.B. Doni forwarded enthusiastically to Mersenne. In the same year Kapsperger entered the service of Urban's nephew, Cardinal Francesco Barberini, where for 30 years he worked alongside Frescobaldi, Luigi Rossi, Domenico Mazzocchi, Stefano Landi and Doni, and collaborated with the poets Ottavio Tronsarelli, Giovanni Ciampoli and Giulio Rospigliosi (the future Pope Clement IX). His son Filippo Bonifacio also joined Francesco's household.

Doni wrote that Kapsperger's music was often sung 'in the chamber of His Holiness' and in 1626 and 1627 his masses were performed in the Cappella Sistina at Urban's request. Later, Doni denounced Kapsperger for attempting to replace Palestrina's music with his own at the Sistine Chapel, an allegation uncritically accepted by Hawkins and Ambros (and effectively contaminating Kapsperger's later reputation); Baini, however, remained sceptical of Doni's story and no such incident is documented, although other contemporary accounts describe him as an extraordinary talent but opportunistic, unco-operative and vainglorious. Kapsperger continued as a salaried member of Francesco's household until the death of Urban in 1644 and the dissolution of Francesco's establishment in 1646. Curiously, only two of his works were printed after 1633, when Allacci published an inventory of Kapsperger's music that included the titles of many additional collections that he was preparing for publication. Kapsperger died in 1651 and was buried in the church of St Blaise outside Rome.

Kapsperger was a prolific, highly original and often extraordinary composer and was seminal in the development of the theorbo as a solo instrument. The theorbo collections contain virtuoso toccatas, variations and dances (some for a 19-course instrument) that combine arpeggiated sections, unusual rhythmic groupings, broken-style figuration and slurred passages within an ornamented and highly syncopated context that has many parallels with the keyboard works of Frescobaldi. The 1640 book also contains an important preface regarding performance.

The 1611 lute book includes eight toccatas – described by Gilbert as 'possibly the finest set of its kind in the Italian repertoire' – that employ more fluid textures proceeding almost spontaneously from suspended harmonies over long pedals to recitative-style passages, motivic sequences, short ricercare sections and dramatic bursts of scales. Among his other instrumental works are one of the few collections of instrumental ensemble dances of this period (1615) and the more canzona-like Sinfonie a quattro of the same year, which feature solo-tutti contrasts, echo effects and multiple continuo parts.

In his vocal music, Kapsperger explored the limits of both Baroque opulence and Counter-Reformation austerity. The Mottetti passeggiati and Arie passeggiate contain monodies (1612) and duets (1623) with extensive (and sometimes exaggerated) written-out ornamentation. The larger Petrarch and Guarini settings stand out among the 1612 Arie (which are actually solo madrigals); the 1623 collection is less ornate, but more satisfying musically. The Mottetti suffer from lengthy and predictable florid passages but reflect aspects of current Roman taste and were influential in Germany. The Thomaskirche Kantor Tobias Michael acknowledged in his Musicalischer Seelen-Lust (1637) that 'the art of Herr Kapsberger is very attractive to me, and I have followed him as much as I was able'. The madrigals of 1609 rely mainly on homorhythmic textures and reveal Kapsperger's awareness of current literary trends through his setting of Marino. But Kapsperger's most engaging and popular secular works (as testified by concordant versions) are found among his seven books of villanellas, which use simple poetry, set mostly syllabically in contrasting sections of duple and triple metre, often with attractive dance rhythms.

In the finely crafted Poematia et carmina (1624), Kapsperger's intense setting of Urban VIII's poetry was lauded by Doni for its absence of affectations and its 'pure and simple' melody. Similarly, the lavishly staged Apotheosis (1622) sets a monological Latin text to a remarkably restrained declamatory style, occasionally relieved by triple-time choruses. This stylistic template is maintained in the Christmas cantata I pastori di Bettelemme and the Litaniae Deiparae Virginis.

The three Missae Urbanae, dedicated to Urban VIII, and the Cantiones sacrae (1628) feature homorhythmic textures as well, and in the case of the masses polychoral technique. Similar to the 1612 passeggiate collections but displaying greater sensitivity to textual-musical relationships are the motets of Modulatus sacri diminutis (1630) which employ lavish embellishment and challenging rhythmic figures (e.g. 'Beata Dei genitrix'). Kapsperger's stage works, which include La vittoria del principe Vladislao in Valacchia (1625), an opera about the Polish-Turkish war of 1621, are all lost, apart from the Apotheosis.

In a time of intense musical polemics, Kapsperger was praised by moderns and conservatives, from the art collector Vincenzo Giustiniani and the world-traveller Pietro della Valle, to the neo-classic theorist G.B. Doni and the Jesuit polymath Athanasius Kircher, who anointed him as the successor to Monteverdi. The collective applause offered from individuals of such diverse backgrounds testifies to the wide stylistic breadth and uncommon invention of a composer whose works are representative of early 17th-century Roman music.

WORKS

published in Rome unless otherwise stated

INSTRUMENTAL

Libro I d'intavolatura di chitar[r]one (Venice, 1604/*R*1982); ed. D. Benkö (Budapest, 1983)
Libro I d'intavolatura di lauto (1611/*R*1970, 1982); ed. K. Gilbert (Bologna, 1997)
Libro I de [8] balli, [6] gagliarde et [6] correnti, a 4 (1615); ed. in IIM, xxv (1993)
Libro I di [18] sinfonie a 4, bc (1615); ed. in IIM, xxv (1993)
Libro II d'intavolatura di chitarrone (1616), lost
Libro II d'intavolatura di lauto (1619), lost
Libro III d'intavolatura di chitarrone (1626), lost
Libro IV d'intavolatura di chitarrone (1640/*R*1982); 12 toccatas, ed. M. Lubenow (Germersheim, 1994)

3 gagliarde, I-Bc
Other pieces, F-Pn, I-MOs

Intavolatura di chitarrone, bks V–VI; Intavolatura di lauto, bks III–IV; Balli, bks II–III; Sinfonie, bks II–III: listed by Allacci, pubn doubtful
Intavolatura di chitarra; Intavolatura di chitarra spagnola spizzicata: listed in Franzini catalogue, 1672, see Wessely

SACRED

Libro I di [20] mottetti passeggiati, 1v, bc (1612/*R*1980)
[21] Cantiones sacrae, 3–6vv, bc (1628)
Modulatus sacri diminutis voculis concinnati, 1v, bc (1630)
I pastori di Bettelemme . . . dialogo recitativo (G. Rospigliosi), 6vv, bc (1630)
[3] Missae urbanae, 4, 5, 8vv, bc (1631)
[4] Litaniae deiparae virginis, 4, 6, 8vv, bc (1631)
Mottetti passeggiati, bks III–IV; Salmi per vesperi, bks I–III; Concetti spirituali: listed by Allacci, pubn doubtful
Motets, 2–4vv, listed in Franzini catalogue, 1672, see Wessely

SECULAR VOCAL

Libro I de madrigali, 5vv, bc (1609)
Libro I di [20] villanelle, 1–3vv, bc, theorbo [tablature], gui [alfabeto system] (1610/*R*1979)
Libro I di [22] arie passeggiate, 1v, bc, theorbo (1612/*R*1980); 1 ed. C. MacClintock, The Solo Song 1580–1730: a Norton Music Anthology (New York, 1973), 32ff
Maggio Cantata nel Real Palazzo de Pitti (Florence, 1612), lost, lib in I-Fn
Libro II di [21] villanelle, 1–3vv, bc, gui (1619/*R*1979); 2 in 1618[15]
Libro III di [20] villanelle, 1–3vv, bc, gui (1619/*R*1979)
Libro IV di [23] villanelle, 1–3vv, bc, gui (1623/*R*1979)
Libro II d'[30] arie [passeggiate], 1–2vv, bc (1623/*R*1980)
[10] Poematia et carmina . . . liber I, 1v, bc (1624)
Coro musicale, wedding cant, 1–5vv, insts, bc (1627)
Epitalamio . . . recitativo a più voci (1628), lost

Libro V di villanelle, 1–4vv, bc, gui (1630)
Libro III d'arie passeggiate a una e più voci (1630), lost
Li fiori, Libro VI di villanelle, 1–4vv, bc, gui (1632)
Poematia et carmina . . . liber II (1633), lost
Libro VII di villanelle, 1–3vv, bc, gui (1640)
Arie, bks IV–VI; Carmina Cardinalis Barberini, bk III; Dialoghi latini diversi; Dialoghi volgari diversi: listed by Allacci, pubn doubtful

STAGE

Apotheosis sive Consecratio SS Ignatii et Francisci Xaverii (prol, 5, O. Grassi), Collegio Romano, Rome, 1622, A-Wn, *F-Pn
La vittoria del principe Vladislao in Valacchia (op, 3, G. Ciampoli), Rome, 1625, lost; lib in Rime scelte di Monsignor Ciampoli (1666)
Fetonte (dramma recitato a più voci, 5, O. Tronsarelli), Rome, 1630, lost; lib in Drammi musicali di Ottavio Tronsarelli (1632)
Drammi diversi, listed by Allacci, pubn doubtful

Doubtful: Il contrasto di Apollo con Marsia (Tronsarelli), palace in via Quattro Fontane, Rome, Aug 1628, lost; lib in Drammi musicali di Ottavio Tronsarelli (1632)

THEORITICAL WORKS

Il Kapsperger della musica, treatise, mentioned in Libro IV d'intavolatura di chitarrone (1640) as forthcoming, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AmbrosGM, iv; Grove6 (W. Witzenmann); GroveO (V. Coelho)
L. Allacci: Apes urbanae, sive De viris illustribus (Rome, 1633), 159–60
G.B. Doni: De praestantia musicae veteris libri tres (Florence, 1647/R), 4, 32
G. Baini: Memorie storico-critiche della vita e delle opere di Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina (Rome, 1828/R), 353–9
P. Kast: 'Biographische Notizen über Johann Hieronymus Kapsberger aus den Vorreden zu seinen Werken', Quellen und Forschungen aus italienischen Archiven und Bibliotheken, xl (1960), 200–11
P. Kast: 'Biographische Notizen zu römischen Musikern des 17. Jahrhunderts', AnMc, no.1 (1963), 38–69, esp.47–8
P. Kast: 'Tracce monteverdiane e influssi romani nella musica sacra del Kapsberger', RIM, ii (1967), 287–93
O. Wessely: 'Der Indice der Firma Franzini in Rom: Versuch einer Rekonstruktion', Beiträge zur Musikdokumentation: Franz Grasberger zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. G. Brosche (Tutzing, 1975), 439–92
J. Forbes: The Non-Liturgical Vocal Music of Johannes Hieronymous Kapsberger (diss., U. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, 1977)
V. Coelho: 'Frescobaldi and the Lute and Chitarrone Toccatas of "Il Tedesco della tiorba"', Frescobaldi Studies: Madison, WI, 1983, 137–56
V. Coelho: 'G.G. Kapsberger in Rome, 1604–1645: New Biographical Data', JLSA, xvi (1983), 103–133
V. Coelho: "Giovanni Girolamo Kapsberger 'della tiorba' e l'influenza liutistica sulle Toccate di Frescobaldi", Girolamo Frescobaldi: Ferrara 1983, 341–57
O.C. Henriksen: 'Libro Primo di Sinfonie . . . del Signor Giovanni Girolamo Kapsperger: the Music and Application Possibilities of Lute Family Instruments (thesis, Schola Cantorum Basiliensis, Basle, 1985)
A. and Z. Szweykowski: 'Un'opera ignota di G.G. Kapsperger in onore del Principe Vladislao Waza', Studi in onore di Giuseppe Vecchi, ed. I. Cavallini (Modena, 1989), 221–32
F. Hammond: Music and Spectacle in Baroque Rome: Barberini Patronage under Urban VIII (New Haven, 1994)
E. Sala and F. Marincola: 'La musica nei drammi Geuisitici: il caso dell' Apotheosis sive Consecratio Sanctorum Ignatii et Francisci Xaverii (1622)', I Gesuiti e i primordi del teatro barocco in Europa, ed. M. Chiabò and F. Doglio (Viterbo, 1995), 389–440
V. Coelho: 'Kapsberger's Apotheosis ... of Francis Xavier (1622) and the Conquering of India', The Work of Opera: Genre, Nationhood, and Sexual Difference, ed. R. Dellamora and D. Fischlin (New York, 1997), 27–47
Z.M. Szweykowski: 'Kapsperger: Successor to Monteverdi?', Claudio Monteverdi und die Folgen, ed. L. Silke and J. Steinheuer (Kassel, 1998), 311–25

VICTOR ANAND COELHO

Kapustin, Nikolay Girshevich (b Gorlovka, Donetsk province, 22 Nov 1937). Ukrainian light music and jazz composer. He graduated in 1961 from the Moscow Conservatory where he studied the piano with Goldenweiser. At various points in his career he has been the pianist in Oleg Lundstrem's Symphony Orchestra of Light Music (1961–72), the Television and Radio Light Orchestra of Vadim Lyudvikovsky (1972–7), the State Cinematography SO (1977–84), and he has appeared in ensembles with jazz musicians such as the saxophonists G. Garanyan and A. Zubov and the guitarist A. Kuznetsov. Primarily the composer of instrumental music, he made his début as composer and pianist at the Sixth International Festival of Youth and Students in Moscow (1957) with his Concerto for piano and jazz orchestra with the TsDRI (the youth light orchestra of the Central House for Employees in the Arts) under the direction of Yu. Saul'sky.

Kapustin's work largely belongs to the 'third stream', a stylistic trend associated with experiments to synthesize jazz and more formal music. In the works he wrote during the 1960s there was a perceptible attempt to interpret the traditions of George Gershwin, Duke Ellington and A. Tsfasman, on the one hand, and Russian piano music, on the other (First Piano Concerto and various piano pieces). In the 1970s the composer focussed his investigations on the fusion style based on an amalgamation of elements of jazz and rock, European formal music and non-European folklore. In his sonatas, symphonies and concertos, he supplements these genres with the ideas and the specifics of jazz performance. The large-scale works are lent the rhythmic drive and inner energy of big band writing, with all the accompanying garishness and vitality (the concertos for piano, for saxophone, for double bass, the Sinfonietta and the Chamber Symphony). In chamber music the classical structures are radically transformed by principles which are specific to jazz thinking, namely improvisation and refinement in the development of rhythm and modal harmony (the instrumental sonatas and the Syuita v starinnom stile ('Suite in the Old Style'). His music forms a part of the repertory of musicians such as the celebrated pianist Nikolay Petrov who has performed the Second Piano Concerto and three of the Vosem' kontsertnïkh ètyudov ('Eight Concert Studies').

WORKS

Concs.: 6 Pf, 1961, 1973, 1987, 1990, 1993, 1993
Other orch: rhapsodiya, pf, orch, 1976; Conc., 1979; Sinfonietta, 1986; Sax Conc., 1989; Chbr Sym., 1990; Db Conc., 1994
Chbr: Sonata, vc, pf, 1991; Sonata, va, pf, 1992; Sonata, vn, pf, 1992; Prazdnichnïy final [Festive Finale], sextet, 1995
9 Pf sonatas: 'quasi fantasia', 1984; 1989; 1990; 1991; 1991; 1991; 1991; 1995; 1995
Other pf: Syuita v starinnom stile [Suite in the Old Style], 1977; 8 kontsertnïkh ètyudov [Eight Concert Studies], 1984; Variations, 1984; 24 prelyudii, 1989; 10 bagateley, 1991; 3 èksprompta [3 Impromptus], 1991; 3 ètyuda, 1992; 5 ètyudov v razlichnïkh intervalakh [5 Studies in Various Intervals], 1992; Kaprichchio, 1992; 10 inventsiy [10 Inventions], 1993; numerous individual pieces

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kapyrin, Dmitry Yur'yevich (b Moscow, 28 Feb 1960). Russian composer. He studied at the L'viv Conservatory under Leshek Mazepa. He later studied with Denisov and Ruders. His first acknowledged works date from 1986, when he had finished his military service and when Soviet culture embarked on a distinct liberalization. He lives in Moscow and works as a freelance composer.

One of the most prominent composers of the younger generation of Russians, Kapyrin uses various modes of limited transposition in combination with free 12-tone writing; these harmonic tendencies are incorporated into textures which, while relying on microthematic constructional techniques, can often be described as minimalist in the broadest sense. Works such as Snï ('Dreams'; 1990) for orchestra possess a self-supporting musical fabric in which horizontal and vertical planes – some tonal, others 12-tone – are constantly changing and replacing each other. In the chamber work Zvuki i golosa ('Sounds and Voices'; 1990) he manages to unify a considerable amount of thematic material; as always, the tone colours are skilfully and originally handled. Kapyrin's works have featured at international festivals such as the Moscow Autumn, the Music Biennial Zagreb, Resources g3 (Paris) and the Almeida (London). In 1994 he won second prize in the ICONS competition in Turin, and in 1995 received a scholarship from the Berlin Akademie der Künste and spent time in Germany writing his stage work Voploshcheniye tstveta ('The Incarnation of colour'; 1995).

WORKS

Stage: Voploshcheniye tstveta [The Incarnation of Colour], 3 painters, 3 dancers, fl, cl, perc, pf, vn, vc, tape, 1995
Orch: Sym., op.3, 1984; Muzïka, hp, bells, str, 1986; Snï [Dreams], 1990; K poezii [To Poetry], 1991; Muzïka dozhdya [Rain Music], 1993
Vocal: Chose de soir (V. Hugo, G. Richepin, P. Reverdy), song cycle, S, fl, cl, 2 perc, pf+cel, str qt, 1994
Chbr: Priblizheniye k yupiteru [An Approach to Jupiter], vn, va, vc, pf, 1987; Sostoyaniya [Conditions], pf, 1987; Vechernaya muzïka [Evening Music], gui, 1987; Sonata, cl, pf, 1988; I svet skvoz' listu [And a Light through the Foliage] fl, vc, pf, 1989; Zvuki i golosa [Sounds and Voices], fl, cl, hp, vib, pf, vn, 1990; Sotto voce, pf, 1991; Muzïka tishinï [Music from Silence], fl, ob, 2 cl, tpt, trbn, perc, pf, vn, va, vc, db, 1992; Pastorale, (6 rec, vib, cel, pf)/(fl, ob, cl, vib, cel, pf, 2 vn, vc), 1992; Tikhaya pesnya dereva [Quiet Song of a Tree], mar, 1992; Po techenyu [With the Stream], s sax, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, perc, hp, pf, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 1994; Kartochnïy domik [House of Cards] cl, vn, vc, pf, 1995; Muzïka dlya dvoikh [Music for Two], s sax/cl, pf, 1995; Iz vozdukha [From Air], cl, vn, 2 va, db, accdn, 1996
Incid music

Principal publisher: Chant du Monde

GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA

Karabyts, Ivan Fyodorovych (b Yalta, Donets region, 17 Jan 1945). Ukrainian composer. Along with Hrabovs'ky, Sil'vestrov, Stankovych and others, he established the major trends in post-1960s Ukrainian music. In 1971 he graduated from Kiev Conservatory, where he was a student of Lyatoshyns'ky and Skoryk. While still a student, Karabyts wrote a series of works including the oft-performed Sonata no.1 for cello and piano (1968), dedicated to Lyatoshyns'ky, and the First Piano Concerto (written after Lyatoshyns'ky's death in 1968), for which he received a prize at the all-Union Competition for Young Composers. He is the winner of the important Ostrovsky Prize and, more recently, the National Artist of Ukraine prize. He is one of the founders and present director of the International Kiev Music Fest and is Music Director of Kiev Camerata.

The music of Karabyts is multi-faceted and spans almost all genres. He first attained success with his Concerto for chorus, soloists and orchestra, Sad bozhestvennïkh pisen ('The Garden of Heavenly Songs') of 1971, on poems of the 18th-century philosopher, poet and musician, Hryhory Skovoroda, in which he tried to rejuvenate the choral concert genre of 17th- and 18th-century Russian and Ukrainian music, as exemplified in the works of Berezovs'ky and Bortnyans'ky. With his second and third symphonies (1977 and 1978), he established his mature style, which, despite the presence of a cross-section of tendencies, is rooted in, and protected by, tonality, no matter how extended and elusive it may at times seem. The influence of neo-romanticism has expanded his tonal system which borrows freely from chromatic, freely atonal and modal orientations; he shapes these into various subsystems governed by a predominantly classical or Appolonian outlook. As a composer centred in the 20th-century renaissance of polyphony, Karabyts conceives harmonic movement in polyphonic terms. In his works, every musical idea fits into a musical tapestry in which the interplay of melodies is woven by use of contrapuntal devices, some of them fleeting. For Karabyts, the components of such a tapestry always have thematic significance: even the pedal tones have melodic properties. He does not challenge himself with seeking new technical methods, preferring instead, in works such as the Third Concerto for Orchestra, the Third Symphony and the Concert-Triptych (1996), to filter his artistic preferences through his individual world-view.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Heroic Sym. (ballet, D. Kisin, A. Zaytsev), 1982; Frescoes of Kiev (op-orat, B. Oliynyk), 1983
Choral: Sad bozhestvennïkh pisen [The Garden of Heavenly Songs] (H. Skovoroda), conc. for chorus, soloists and orch, 1971; Molytva Kateryny [Prayer for Kateryna], narr, children's chorus, orch, 1992
3 syms.: no.1 'Five Songs about the Ukraine', 1974; no.2, 1977; no.3, 1978
2 pf concs: 1968, 1972
3 concs for orch: no.1 'Muzychnyi darunok Kuyevu' [A Musical Gift to Kiev], 1981; no.2, 1986; no.3 'Holosinnya' [Lamentations], 1987
Vocal: Pastels (P. Tychyna), S, pf, 1970; Z pisen' Khiroshima [From the Songs of Hiroshima], S, fl, 1973
Chbr and solo inst: Sonata no.1, vc, pf, 1968; Lyric Scenes, vn, pf, 1970; Sonata no.2, vc, pf, 1972; Str Qt, 1973; Divertimento concertante, 6 insts, 1975; 24 Preludes, pf, 1976; Disko-Khorovod, cl, pf, 1981; Concertino, 9 insts, 1983; Music from the Waterside, 5 insts, 1994; vio-serenade, str, 2000

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.O. Yermakova: Ivan Karabyts (Kiev, 1983)
V. Baley: 'Orpheus unleashed: I & II', Soviet Ukrainian Affairs, ii (1988), no.3, pp.5–10; no.4, pp.13–20
L. Arkhymovych, ed.: Istoriya Ukrains'koy radyans'koy muzyky [A history of Ukrainian Soviet music] (Kiev, 1990)

VIRKO BALEY

Karaca, Cem (b Bakırköy, Istanbul, 1945). Turkish popular singer and lyricist. His parents ran a theatre in Beyoğlu, Istanbul's main theatre district, providing him with an early experience of the stage which continues to mark his distinctive and theatrical vocal style. Educated at Robert College, Istanbul, he was involved with the efforts of the Turkish left to provide an alternative to European popular culture in the late 1960s and was conspicuously associated with the Anatolian Rock movement. In 1967 he joined Apaşlar, winning a national music competition run by Hürriyet (the main Turkish daily newspaper) with Emrah, whose lyrics were drawn from the Turkish aşık repertory (see TURKEY, §2) and whose music owed much to the French chanson. Success in the competition provided opportunities to travel, buy equipment and record outside Turkey; Karaca worked extensively with the Werner Müller orchestra in Germany in the late 1960s. With Kardaşlar in 1969 he employed more politically radical texts based on Anatolian models, but also attempted to reconcile the use of rural instruments with the demands of rock style. In 1972 he joined Moğollar, participating in some of the most extensive experiments in connecting rural Turkish music with European counter-culture. In 1974 Karaca joined Dervişan; their music, including the rock opera Safinaz (telling of the plight of a girl from a poor family) and 1 Mayıs (celebrating the international labour movement), attracted unwelcome attention from the Turkish right in a period of turbulent radicalism. In 1979 Karaca left the country to self-imposed exile in Germany, returning only in 1987.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

Cemaz-ül-Evvel, perf. C. Karaca, Kalan KB94.34.V.852.059 (1994)
A. Ok: 68 Çığlıkları: Anadolu Rock, Anadolu Protest, Anadolu Pop (Istanbul, 1994)
N. Hasgül: 'Türkiye Popüler Müzik Tarihinde Anadolu Pop Akımın Yeri', Folklora doğru, lxii (1996), 51–74

MARTIN STOKES

Karaite Jews, music of the. See JEWISH MUSIC, §III, 10.

Karajan, Herbert von (b Salzburg, 5 April 1908; d Anif, 16 July 1989). Austrian conductor. He appeared in public at the age of five as a pianist, and studied the piano at the Salzburg Mozarteum while still a schoolboy, but changed his intentions and took further studies in conducting with Franz Schalk at the Vienna Music Academy. His spectacular career was launched when he conducted Le nozze di Figaro on 2 March 1929 at Ulm, where he worked for five years at the Städtisches Theater. Here the limited resources of orchestra and stage apparently influenced his almost obsessive concern with technical perfection in his later approach to conducting and producing. In 1934, at the age of 26, he was appointed Generalmusikdirektor at Aachen (holding that position unitl 1942), and in 1937 a now legendary performance of Tristan und Isolde at the Berlin Staatsoper marked the turning-point in his career. In 1938 he made his débuts with the Berlin PO, the Berlin Staatsoper and at La Scala. Reviews hailed him widely as 'Das Wunder Karajan'. From 1941 he based himself in Berlin, where his reputation soon rivalled Furtwängler's.

During the war he was active as Staatskapellmeister at the Berlin Staatsoper and as occasional conductor in occupied territories. After the war the question of Karajan's political affiliations pursued him. He never denied membership of the Nazi party; rather, he insisted it was mere pragmatism, essential to his career, and compared it to joining an Alpine Club. Vaughan and others have documented that he joined the party on 8 April 1933 at Aachen, and again on 1 May 1933 at Ulm, contrary to the 1935 date he long asserted. He spent the last six months of the war in Italy and the next two years appealing for denazification. It was granted in time for concerts with the Vienna SO and Philharmonia Orchestra in London in 1947, and resumption of his role at the Salzburg Festival in 1948. From the 1948–9 season he was active at La Scala as producer as well as conductor, and from 1950 he was engaged in extensive recording activities with Walter Legge in London and Vienna. His role as conductor of the Philharmonia (1948–54) saw the re-establishment of his continental reputation.

Herbert von Karajan

He conducted the Ring and Die Meistersinger in 1951 at Bayreuth (where he dared to change Wagner's orchestral seating plan); took the Philharmonia Orchestra on its first European tour in 1952; and made his American début in Washington DC, on a tour with the Berlin PO in 1955, the year in which he succeeded Furtwängler as the orchestra's principal conductor. He became artistic director of the Salzburg Festival (1956–60), and on 1 January 1957 succeeded Böhm as director of the Vienna Staatsoper, thereby acquiring a musical 'empire' which gave currency to the comment that he was becoming 'the Generalmusikdirektor of Europe'. He sought to keep a link with Milan by mixing the stagione principle of La Scala with the Vienna repertory system, and took increasing responsibility for production in the Ring and other operas, including Fidelio, Die Frau ohne Schatten, Otello and Pelléas et Mélisande. After artistic and administrative disagreements, and believing that traditional methods of opera presentation held little hope for the future, he resigned his Vienna post in 1964.

On 15 October 1963 he gave the inaugural concert at Berlin's new Philharmonie, a hall built to his specifications. In 1964 he rejoined the directorate of the Salzburg Festival, and in 1967 founded the Salzburg Easter Festival. Using the Berlin PO, he planned to record each year's productions after the festival performances, film them for television and cinema, and take them to New York (where he made his Metropolitan Opera début in 1967 with his Salzburg production of Die Walküre). His artistic results in this venture brought controversial reactions, and he failed to secure a financially independent basis for it. In 1973 he called on major European opera managements to coordinate their productions to maintain standards, and to halt what he considered to be a decline in operatic presentation. He returned to the Vienna Staatsoper in 1977.

Karajan served as music advisor to the Orchestre de Paris (1969–71), but concentrated his principal work in Berlin and Salzburg and enormously strengthened his influence through tours, and in recordings using the most advanced audio and video technologies. In his lifetime he sold more than 100 million copies of some 800 recordings in concert and opera. The establishment of the Karajan Foundation (1968) led to major conferences and a biennial international competition for young conductors. Although named conductor for life of the Berlin PO in 1967, his last years there were not happy. Increasing alienation from players, his struggle in 1982 to appoint the clarinettist Sabine Meyer and growing ill-health (constant back pain, near-paralysis in the legs, numerous operations) combined with managerial and artistic conflicts to cause his retirement from Berlin in April 1989. He died of a heart attack three months later.

An adherent of Zen Buddhism, Karajan possessed an astounding magnetism, sense of rhythm, acuity of ear, memory for a score's minutest details and control of his work in all its facets. His finest performances combined, as he once declared, 'Toscanini's precision with Furtwängler's fantasy'. Even so, some critics insisted that Karajan's commitment to aural perfection came at a cost of spiritual values and intellectual rigour. He favoured a flowing, rounded legato line, elasticity of accompaniment and transparency of sonority, with a flair for exactness and love of effect. Numerous singers testify to his subtlety and consideration as a conductor of opera, although he sometimes persuaded sopranos to undertake roles that were too heavy for them. His large, if fundamentally conservative repertory, much of which he recorded several times, ranged from Bach (which he conducted from the keyboard) through the Viennese Classical composers, the Austro-German Romantics (many regarded him as at his greatest in Bruckner, Mahler and Richard Strauss) and the Second Viennese School to Stravinsky, Henze and Penderecki. For the last three decades of his life no conductor had a greater influence in concepts of sound and texture.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Gavoty: Herbert von Karajan (Geneva, 1956)
F. Herzfeld: Herbert von Karajan (Berlin, 1959)
K. Löbl: Das Wunder Karajan (Bayreuth, 1965, 2/1978)
P. de Raedt: Herbert von Karajan (Ghent, 1965)
E. Haeusserman: Herbert von Karajan: Biographie (Gütersloh, 1968, 2/1978)
P. Robinson: The Art of the Conductor – Karajan (London, 1975)
R. Chesterman: Conversations with Conductors (London and New York, 1976)
J. Lorcey: Herbert von Karajan (Paris, 1978)
R. Bachmann: Karajan: Anmerkungen zu einer Karriere (Düsseldorf, 1983)
R. Vaughan: Herbert von Karajan: a Biographical Portrait (London, 1986)
P. Csobadi: Karajan oder die kontrollierte Ekstase (Vienna, 1988)
W. Tharichen: Paukenschläge: Furtwängler oder Karajan? (Zürich, 1988)
F. Endler: Herbert von Karajan: my Biography as told to Franz Endler (London, 1989)
R. Osborne: Conversations with Karajan (Oxford, 1989)
R. Bachmann: Karajan: Notes on a Career (London, 1990)
F. Endler: Karajan (Hamburg, 1992)
K. Lang: The Karajan Dossier (London, 1992)
R. Osborne: Herbert von Karajan: a Life in Music (London, 1998)

GERHARD BRUNNER/CHARLES BARBER, JOSÉ BOWEN

Karalayev, Sayakbai (b Zheti-Oguz, near Katakol [now in the Issyk-Kul province], 1894; d Frunze, 1971). Kyrgyz Manas bard. He belonged to the Kyrgyz bugu clan. His family was poor, and Karalayev took part in rebellions during 1916; he later joined the Red Army as a volunteer, and until 1922 he fought with the White Guards in Central Asia. He was also a collective farm activist. He learnt to perform Manas from his fellow countryman Choyuke Omurov (1863–1925), a famous bard whose biography was the subject of many later poems. Karalayev became a Manas bard in 1924, and from 1935 he worked as an actor for the Kyrgyz Philharmonic Society. Between 1935 and 1947 he produced a full version of Manas (250,000 verses), including two chapters entitled Semetei and Seitek, about the son and grandson of Manas, and a fairy-tale in verse, Er Tyoshtyuk, connected with the Manas cycle.

Following the traditional principles of genealogical cycles, Karalayev also created a new chapter about the descendants of Manas, namely the hero Kenen (the son of Seitek), a grandson and his sons Alymsaryk and Kulansaryk. The version performed by him, a solo recitation without instrumental accompaniment, was recorded on eight LPs and afterwards partially transcribed by V.S. Vinogradov. On the basis of this version, the composers Abdïlas Maldïbayev, Vladimir Vlasov and Vladimir Fere together wrote two operas, Aychurek (1939) and Manas (1946). A large part of Manas was published in English in 1977, and since 1986 all three parts of Karalayev's version of Manas have been published in five volumes in Kyrgyz. Karalayev was acclaimed for his skill in poetic improvisation and became known as a representative of the Issyk-Kul tradition of epic performance.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.T. Hatto, ed.: The Memorial Feast for Kökötöy-khan: a Kirghiz Epic Poem (Oxford, 1977)
V.S. Vinogradov: 'Napevï "Manasa"' [Tunes of Manas], Manas: kirgizskiyi geroicheskiy ėpos [Kyrgyz heroic epic], i (Moscow, 1984), 492–509
V. Krivonosov: 'O napevakh kirgizskogo ėposa "Manas"' [On singing the Kyrgyz epic Manas], SovM (1939), no.6, pp.31–5

ALMA KUNANBAYEVA

Karamanov, Alemdar Sabitovych (b Simferopol′, 10 September 1934). Ukrainian composer. His mother was a Russian singer while his father was Turkish and – as a Crimean – was imprisoned and exiled by the Soviet authorities. Karamanov considers himself a Crimean /Ukrainian/Russian composer. He began studying music at the age of five and started composing almost immediately; he wrote an opera at the age of nine. He entered the Moscow Conservatory in 1953 where he studied with Semyon Bogatïryov and Natanson, and later took a postgraduate course with Kabalevsky and Khrennikov, graduating in 1963. After initial public successes, which prompted Shostakovich to call him '. . . one of the most original and unique composers of our time', his subsequent adoption of an avant-garde style destroyed a promising career. He left Moscow in 1964 and returned to the Crimea, where he continued to live as a recluse, creating a wealth of works, including 15 more symphonies (he had already written ten). In the late 1960s and early 70s Karamanov invented a type of photosensitive machine that notated piano improvisations on a film negative. His decision, from 1965, to express his beliefs by writing works on prohibited Christian themes, and even writing a symphony titled 'America' at the height of the cold war, further isolated him and placed him in potential danger. Official and international recognition came his way after 1990 – this trend culminated in 1995 with major performances in Berlin and London. Ukraine has honoured him with the titles Merited Artist of Ukraine (1990) and National Artist of Ukraine (1994), and awarded him the Lyatoshyns′ky State Prize, the State Prize of the Autonomous Republic of Crimea (1996), and the Shevchenko State Prize (2000).

Although Karamanov's creative development went through an intensely avant-garde period, he began in his maturity to create music linked with the reawakening of spiritual and religious beliefs. First and foremost a symphonist, he began to look for appropriate musical metaphors to express his essentially apocalyptic vision. The central cycle of his output to date is Byst′ ('Let It Be', 1976–80), a collective title for symphonies 18 to 23, based on themes from the apocalypse. Although each symphony has an individual title (for example, no.18 is entitled He Who Loves Us and no.22 Let It Be), but since such religious subject matter was simply forbidden at the time of the works' composition, the Nineteenth Symphony was renamed Born For Victory for the purposes of its première in Kiev in 1977. Likewise, for a Moscow performance in 1982 the Twenty-third Symphony, in fact named I Am Jesus, became Risen from the Ashes and the whole cycle renamed Poem of Victory. The music of the symphony is driven by stark, often biblical, symbols which are then translated into images. The composer said that the 'symphony depicts St John, then Christ, then the fate of John and his radiance after death as a saint'. In his Third Piano Concerto 'Ave Maria' (revised in 1996), he was attempting to express allegorically God's mercy as spring rain. Karamanov is comparable to Messiaen in attempting to express Christian mystical beliefs through music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ballet: Sil'neye lyubvi [Stronger Than Love] (after I. Lavrenev: Sorok perviy [The Forty-first]), 1961; Fontan lyubvi [The Fountain of Love] (after A.S. Pushkin: Bakchisaray Fountain), 1982; Brilliant World (after A. Grin), 1985

Choral orch: Lenin zhiv [Lenin is Alive] (cant., V. Mayakovsky), 1963; Pesnya zhenatogo soldata [Song of a Married Soldier], cant., 1963; Stabat Mater, 1967; Requiem, 1971, rev. 1991; Mass, 1972, rev. 1992; Khersones, cant., 1995

Syms: no.1, 1954; no.2, 1955; no.3, 1956; no.4 'Mayskaya', 1956; no.5 'Lenin' (cant., Mayakovsky, narr, solo vv, chorus, orch), 1956–7; no.6 'Sinfonietta', 1957; no.7 'Lunnoye Mose', 1958–9; no.8 'Klassicheskaya', 1960; no.9 'Liberation', 1962; no.10 'Molodost' Mira', 1963; nos.11–14 'Sovershishasya' (after The Bible: Four Gospels, Psalm 117), 1965–6; nos.15 and 16 'Et in amorem vivificantem', 1974; no.17 'America', 1975; nos.18–23, 'Liubyashchu Nu', 1980, 'Krovin Agncheiu', 1976, 'Blazhenni Mertvii', 1977–8, 'Grad Velikiy', 1978–9, 'Byst'', 1980, 'Az Lisus', 1980; no.24 'Adzhimushkay', solo vv, chorus, orch, 1983; no.25, 'Nebesnyi Iyerusalim', 1985

Other orch: Fairy Tale, sym. poem, 1954; Forest Pictures, suite 1956; Pf Conc. no.1, 1958; Oriental Cappricio, vn, orch, 1961; Pf Conc. no. 2 1961; Vn Conc. no.1, 1961; Festival Ov., 1964; Heroic Ov., 1964; Vn Conc. no.2, 1964; Conc., tpt, jazz orch, 1965; Pf Conc. no.3 'Ave Maria', 1968, rev. 1996; Heroic Dances, sym. poem, 1979; Crimean Ov., 1980; Spring Ov., 1984

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1953; 4 Pieces, ob, pf, 1954; 5 Pieces, 2 ob, pf, 1954; Str Qt no.2, 1954; Variations, ob, pf, 1954; Suite, jazz band, 1960; Music, vn, pf, 1962; Str Qt no.3, 1962; Music, vn, pf, 1963; Scherzo, cl, pf, 1963; 4 Pieces, trbn, pf, 1964;

Pf: Five Preludes, 1953; Eight Pieces/Variations, 1954; Vremeni goda [The Seasons], 12 pieces, 1954; 4 sonatas, 1954–61; Music no.1, 1962; 5 Children's Pieces, 1956; Variations, 1961; 6 Etudes, 1962; Music no.2, 1963; Prologue-Thought-Epilogue, 1963; Window Into Music, 16 pieces, 1963; Three Preludes, 1963; 19 Concert Fugues, 1964

Other works: choruses; songs and romances after F. García Lorca, Karamanov-Sampurova, A.S. Pushkin, A. Tolstoy, African poets; film scores; National Anthem of the Crimea, 1992

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Balasanian: 'Muzïka masshtabnya, yarkaya' [Bright and masterful music], SovM (1979), no.6

M. Rakhmanova: 'Muzïka – providnik zvuchshchego mira' [Music, the prophet of a sonic world], SovM (1985), no.8

Ye. Pol'dayeva: 'Apokrif ili poslaniye? O tvorchestve Alemdara Karamanova' [Apocryphal story or a message? About Karamanov's work], MAk (1996), no.2

VIRKO BALEY

Karamanuk, Sirvart (b Constantinople [now Istanbul], 1 Dec 1912). Armenian composer. She studied at the Istanbul Conservatory with Ferdi Statzer (piano) and later took masterclasses with Lazare Lévy and Jean Roger-Ducasse but was mainly self-taught as a composer. In 1942 she joined the faculty of the Istanbul Conservatory as an assistant professor. Her compositions have been heard in cities including New York, Los Angeles, Paris and Buenos Aires. She is the recipient of the St Mesrop and St Sahak Medal from Catholicos Vazken I of Armenia. She possesses a facile melodic gift that is imbued with the spirit of traditional Armenian music. Often her work is vivid, opulent in colour and buoyant in texture; a bravura style informs much of her piano works.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Vałvan arvestagetnerě [Tomorrow's Artists] (children's op, after A. Dadryan), 1949

Vocal: Ałt'amar (sym. poem), 1v, SATB, orch, 1969; Džar tari [Hard Year], SATB, orch, 1969; Garnan aravot [Spring Morn], SATB, orch, 1969; Erg Petros Duryani [Song of Petros Duryan] (cantata), 2vv, SATB, chbr orch, 1972

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Suite, 1936; Caprice orientale, pf, 1944; Parerg [Dance Song], pf, 1944; Pastoral, pf, 1944; Admiration, pf, 1958; Histoire bizarre, pf, 1959; Kuysi hogi [Maiden's Soul], after M. Zarifian, str qt, 1973

Over 100 songs, vocal works for children, arrs. of liturgical chants

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Muradian: 'Haskc'an, havatac 'in u sirec 'in' [They understood it, believed in it and loved it], Payk'ar [Istanbul] (19 March 1970)

R. Haddejian: 'Eražštaget-horinoł tikin Sirvart Karamanukiani masin' [About the musicologist and composer Karamanuk], Marmara [Istanbul] (28 Dec 1992)

L. Kasbarian: 'Music for the Bards', Armenian International Magazine, v/2 (1994), 46 only

ŞAHAN ARZRUNI

Karaoke [Jap.: 'empty orchestra']. A form of popular social singing from the late 20th century, using pre-recorded backing tracks. It originated in Kobe in the late 1970s and spread rapidly through Japan and around the world; credit for its invention was claimed by Hisayoshi Hiya. In karaoke the backing tracks of well-known recordings by popular and pop singers are played, over which singers emulate the original vocal tracks. Words are provided on television screens to prompt the singers. Although originally an amateur form of social entertainment in such public recreational areas as cafés and bars, karaoke has evolved a worldwide circuit of clubs and competitions that have brought elements of the professional into what remains essentially an amateur form of musical recreation. Developments in technology have aided the accessibility of the form: the tapes of original karaoke have been sucessively replaced by CD, video and laser disc, allowing for the selection of songs from a huge available range and providing additional sophistications, such as the immediate transposition of any backing arrangements as needed.

The links of karaoke with fast-developing technology for its production and the reliance on the staples of US popular and pop music for its repertory ensured fast global dissemination: within some 20 years it spread from Japan, through South-east Asia to the USA and Europe and has been the subject of detailed studies in such diverse places as Australia, Germany, Finland and Brazil.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Keil: 'Music Mediated and Live in Japan', EthM, xxviii (1984), 91–6

H. Hiya: Takaga karaoke saredo karaoke [Karaoke: sometimes nothing, sometimes everything] (Tokyo, 1991) [autobiograpy]

S. Wienker-Piepho: 'Karaoke: Singing Beyond National Boundaries', Ballads and Boundaries: Narrative Singing in an Intercultural Context, ed. J. Porter and E. Sinatra (Los Angeles, 1995), 307–12

C.R. Yano: 'The Floating World of Karaoke in Japan', Popular Music and Society, xx/2 (1996), 1–17

□

Karas, Simon (b Strovitsion, nr Olympia, 21 May 1905). Greek musicologist and folk music scholar. He devoted his early youth to the study of folk music and neo-Byzantine chant, receiving his first lessons in ecclesiastical music from the priest Efstathios Lambrinopoulos. Later he studied Western music at Athens Conservatory and law at Athens University (1922–6). In 1926 he founded the School for National Music in Athens, where he lectured in neo-Byzantine chant, traditional Greek folk music and dances, and national instruments, and he was director of the folk music division of Greek radio, 1937–70. He aimed to build up archives of traditional ballads and songs recorded in remote villages and to study in particular their possible relationship to Byzantine monophony. Karas was also involved with the study of Byzantine neumatic notation and the intervallic structure of the neo-Byzantine modes.

WRITINGS

I byzantini mousiki simiografia [Notation in Greek music] (Athens, 1935)

'I ordi ermenia ke metagrafi ton byzantinon mousikon chirografon' [The true interpretation and transcription of Byzantine musical manuscripts], Pepragmena tou Th' diethnous byzantinologikou synedrion: Thessaloniki 1953, ed. S. Kyriakides, A. Xyngopoulos and P. Zepos (Athens, 1955–8), 140–49

Eni ke diastimata is tin byzantinin mousikin [Types and intervals in Byzantine music] (Athens, 1970)

DIMITRI CONOMOS

Karasowski, Maurycy (b Warsaw, 22 Sept 1823; d Dresden, 20 April 1892). Polish writer on music and cellist. He studied in Warsaw under Walenty Kratzer and August Freyer, and later in Berlin, Vienna and Paris. From 1852 he was the leader of the Warsaw Opera orchestra. He travelled in Germany and France from 1858 to 1860; in 1864 he settled in Dresden, where he played in the opera orchestra and from 1868 was a court musician. He composed several cello pieces and songs, but was most important as a prolific writer on music. He published reviews and articles in many Polish music periodicals, as well as the first history of Polish opera (1859) and the first important study of Chopin (in German; 1877).

WRITINGS

Rys historyczny opery polskiej [Historical outline of Polish opera] (Warsaw, 1859)

Zycie Mozarta [Life of Mozart] (Warsaw, 1868)

Młodość Fryderyka Szopena [Chopin's youth] (Warsaw, 1869) [orig. in Biblioteka Warszawska (1862), vol.iv, pp.1–40; suppl. (1869), vol.i, pp.161, 383–418]

Friedrich Chopin: sein Leben, seine Werke und Briefe (Dresden, 1877/R, rev., enlarged 3/1881; Eng. trans., 1879, 3/1938/R with additional letters; Pol. edn, 1882)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Michałowski: Bibliografia Chopinowska 1849–1969 (Kraków, 1970) [with Eng. summary]

W. Kordaczuk: 'Korespondencja Maurycego Karasowskiego z siostrą Chopina w sprawie wydania biografii kompozytora' [Karasowski's correspondence with Chopin's sister regarding the publication of the composer's biography], Muzyka, xvi/2 (1971), 106–20

K. Kobylańska, ed.: Korespondencja Fryderyka Chopina z rodziną [Chopin's correspondence with his family] (Warsaw, 1972)

ELŻBIETA DZIĘBOWSKA

Karastoyanov, Asen (b Samokov, 3 June 1893; d Sofia, 8 Sept 1976). Bulgarian composer. After attending the Sofia Music Gymnasium (1914–18), he studied the flute and harmony with Juon at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik (1921–2). Later he was a composition pupil of Dukas at the Ecole Normale (1930) and of Raphael at the Leipzig Conservatory from which he graduated in 1932. During the period 1923–30 he directed Bulgarian provincial amateur orchestras. In 1933 he was appointed to teach theory at the Sofia State Academy of Music, and was professor there from 1944 until 1958. His compositions have their basis in folksong.

WORKS

(selective list)

3 syms.; 5 operettas incl. Balgari ot staro vreme [Bulgarians from the Old Times], 1958; Fl Conc., 1965; Vc Conc., 1969; 200 mass songs, chorus/chorus, orch; cants., pieces for wind orch, chbr music, songs, entertainment music

Principal publisher: Nauka i izkustvo

WRITINGS

Melodichni i kharmonichni osnovi na balgarskata narodna pesen [Melodic and harmonic foundations of Bulgarian folksong] (Sofia, 1950)

Slozhen kontrapunkt, imitatsiya i kanon (Sofia, 1957)

Polifonichna kharmoniya (Sofia, 1959; Russ. trans., enlarged, 1960)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Karatïgin, Vyacheslav Gavrilovich (b Pavlovsk, 5/17 Sept 1875; d Leningrad, 23 Dec 1925). Russian music critic, historian and composer. He graduated from the department of physics and mathematics at St Petersburg University in 1897, and then worked as a chemist for the naval department. However, his interest in music (which he had formed in early childhood) and his close friendship with the members of the Belyayev circle encouraged him to abandon this career in 1907 and to take up music criticism. From 1897 until 1902 he had studied composition with Nikolay Sokolov at the St Petersburg Conservatory, and by 1906 he was already publishing articles on music in various periodicals. He was one of the organizers of the Vechera Sovremennoy Muzïki (Evenings of Contemporary Music, 1910–12) and one of the founders (in 1923) of the Assotsiatsiya Sovremennoy Muzïki (Association for Contemporary Music). From 1916 until his death he lectured on music history and aesthetics at the Petrograd Conservatory, and also conducted courses in art criticism at the Institute for the History of the Arts. From 1919 he was professor of music at the conservatory; he also lectured on various topics in music at institutes throughout Petrograd, gave talks at the Philharmonia and taught natural science.

During his 19 years as a music critic Karatïgin produced over 1000 articles which were published in a variety of journals, including Zolotoye runo (1906–7), Rech' (1908–17), Apollon (1909–14), Sovremennoye slovo (1911–15), Severnïye zapiski (1913–16), Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik (1915–17) and Nash vek (1918), Zhizn' iskusstva (1923–4). He wrote articles on many Russian and foreign composers and performers, and he is particularly noted for his critical essays on Musorgsky and for his work on the unfinished manuscripts of Sorochintsy Fair and Salammbô; shortly before World War I he prepared carefully collated texts of both operas for publication. His versatility as a critic and teacher enabled him to make an important contribution to the development of Russian musical culture. In his musical compositions, Karatïgin adhered to the tradition cultivated by the heirs of the 'Mighty Handful', whilst absorbing later influences and giving them his own interpretation. Some of his works (piano compositions, romances, folksong arrangements, incidental music and the stage work The Russian Wedding Ceremony) were published.

WRITINGS

'Maskarad: po povodu ėtyudov g. Vol'finga o novoy muzïke' [Masquerade: a propos Mr. Vol'fing's studies on new music], Zolotoye runo (1907), nos.7–9, pp.116–21; no.10, pp.58–65
'Salambo Musorgskogo' [Musorgsky's Salammbô], Apollon (1909), no.2, p.30 only
'M.A. Balakirev', Apollon (1910), no.10, p.48 only
'Noveyshiye techeniya v zapadno-yeropeyskoy muzïke' [The latest trends in Western European music], Severnïye zapiski (1913), no.12, pp.31–44
'Rikhard Shtraus i yego Elektra' [Strauss and his Elektra], Rech' (19 Feb/4 March 1913)
Parsifal': torzhestvennaya stsenicheskaya misteriya Rikarda Vagnera: tematicheskiy razbor (s notnïmi primerami) [Parsifal: Wagner's solemn stage play: thematic analysis (with music examples)] (St Petersburg, 1914)
'Noveyshiye techeniya v russkoy muzïke' [The latest trends in Russian music], Severnïye zapiski (1915), no.2, pp.99–109
Skryabin: ocherk [Skryabin: a study] (Petrograd, 1915)
'Ėlement formï u Skryabina' [The element of form in Skryabin], Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik (1915–16), nos.4–5, pp.176–97
'Neizdannïya simfonii S.I. Taneyeva' [The unpublished symphonies of Taneyev], Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik (1916–17), no.2, pp.104–16
'O Sorochinskoy yarmarkye' [On Sorochinsky Fair], 'Khovanshchina i yego avtorï' [Khovanshchina and its creators], Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik (1916–17), nos.5–6, pp.168–91, 192–218
I Musorgsky, II Shalyapin: ocherki tvorchestva [Studies of their work] (Petrograd, 1922)
Rikhard Shtraus: ot romantizma k realizmu [Strauss: from romanticism to realism] (Petrograd, 1922)
Shubert (1797–1828) (Petrograd, 1922)
'Yubiley Kruzhka Druzey Kamernoy Muzïki' [The jubilee of the Circle for the Friends of Chamber Music], Zhizn' iskusstva (1924), no.3, pp.14–16
'Ts. Frank' [César Franck], Muzïkal'naya letopis', iii (1926), 86–100
ed. Yu. Kremlyov: V.G. Karatïgin: izbrannïye stat'i [Selected articles] (Moscow, 1965) [incl. 'V. Karatïgin: muzïkal'nïy kritik', 3–20]
'O slushanii muzïki' [On listening to music], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1966), nos.11–12, pp.33–8
'Ė.A. Kuper kak dirizhyor teatral'nïy' [Kuper as a theatre conductor], in E. Kuper: stat'i, vospominaniya (Moscow, 1988), 42–4

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Ossovsky: 'V.G. Karatïgin: svetloy pamyati druga' [In respectful memory of a friend], Muzïkal'naya letopis', iii (Leningrad, 1926), 161–4
A.N. Rimsky-Korsakov and others, eds.: V.G. Karatïgin: zhizn', deyatel'nost', stat'i i materialï [Life, work, articles and materials] (Leningrad, 1927)
G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974) [incl. list of writings, 20–23]

YELENA ORLOVA/IOSEF GENRIKHOVICH RAYSKIN

Karayev, Faraj (b Baku, 19 Dec 1943). Azerbaijani composer. He graduated in 1966 from the Azerbaijan State Conservatory where he studied composition with his father, Kara Karayev. He then undertook postgraduate work and served as a teaching assistant, receiving a doctorate in 1971. He began to compose early: Music for Chamber Orchestra, Percussion and Organ dates from 1966 but his first acknowledged work, the Sonata for Two Players, was written ten years later. Many of his compositions are influenced by 19th- and 20th-century poetry; Char, Hikmet, Prévert, Ungaretti and Williams are among his favourite writers. The work of these poets forms the basis of the monodrama Journey to Love (1978) in which the texts are all employed in their original languages. The music of this work incorporates elements of mugam and jazz as well as sonoristic and aleatory techniques; it is scored for singer and an unusual ensemble including three pianos. His tragi-comedy Waiting for Godot is also hard to classify along conventional lines: part comedy, part happening, this concerto for four performers was written for the 1983 Zagreb Biennale. The death of his father in 1982 instigated the composition of I Bade Farewell to Mozart on Charles Bridge; a year later he made a version of this work for chamber orchestra called 1791, referring to the year of Mozart's death. Since 1980 he has composed many works for various chamber ensembles. His style incorporates extra-musical noises and elements of ethnic music for dramatic and structural purposes. In 1994 he became professor of composition at Baku City Conservatory and in 1998 he was appointed professor of composition at the Moscow Conservatory. In 1986 he founded the Baku Festival of 20th-Century Music in memory of his father; in 1991 he helped Denisov set up the Association for Contemporary Music in Moscow.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: The Shadows of Kobïstan (ballet, 1, M. Mamedov, V. Yesman), 1969; Kaleidoscope (ballet, 1, R. Akhundova, I. Dadashidze), 1971 [on themes from sonatas by D. Scarlatti]; Journey to Love (monodrama, 20th-century poets), S, chbr orch, 1978; Waiting for Godot (music for performance, S. Beckett), 4 solo vv, chbr ens, 1983
Orch: Music for Chamber Orchestra, Percussion and Organ, 1966; Concerto grosso, 1967 [in memory of Webern]; Conc., pf, chbr orch, 1974; Tristessa II, orch, chbr orch, 1980, I Bade Farewell to Mozart on Charles Bridge, serenade, 1982; Tristessa I 'Parting Sym.', chbr orch, 1982; 1791, small orch, 1983; 4 Postludes, 1990; The (Moz)art of Elite, chbr orch, 1990
Chbr and solo inst: Piano Sonata no.2, 1967; Sonata for Two Players, 2 pf, prep pf, perc, 1976; In memoriam, suite, str qt, 1984; A Crumb of Music for George Crumb, chbr ens, 1985; Terminus, vc, 1987; Chbr Conc., ww qnt, 1988; Alla Nostalgia, chbr conc., 8 insts, 1989; Klänge einer traurigen Nacht, chbr ens, 1989; Aus . . ., basset-horn/b cl, vib/mar, 1990; Postlude I, pf, 1990; Postlude II, pf, db, str qt, 1990; Der Stand der Dinge, ens, tape, 1991; Musik für die Stadt Forst, 2 pf, 1992; Postlude III, 2 pf, 8 hands, 1992; Ist es genug?, ens, tape, 1993; Khutba, Mugam and Surah, ens, tape, 1997; . . . Monsieur Bee Line, pf, 1997; (K)ein kleines Schauspiel, 2 gui, b fl, 1998; Postludes IV–VII, ens, 1998; 5 Stück mit Kanons von A. Schoenberg, chbr ens, 1998

TAT'YANA REXROTH

Karayev, Kara (Abul'faz-oglï) (b Baku, 5 Feb 1918; d Baku, 25 May 1982). Azerbaijani composer and teacher. The leading figure in Azerbaijani music after World War II, he studied the piano under Sharoyev at the Baku Music Technical School (1930–35) and then entered the Azerbaijan State Conservatory, where he was a pupil of Rudol'f (composition) and Hajibeyov (foundations of Azerbaijani folk music). While at the conservatory he wrote his earliest surviving compositions, made an intensive study of Azerbaijani folk art, led an expedition in 1937 to study the folklore of some regions of the republic and transcribed ashug songs, dances and mugam. In 1938 he began studies with A.N. Aleksandrov (composition) and Vasilenko (instrumentation) at the Moscow Conservatory, after which he became a composition pupil of Shostakovich (1942–6). During the war, together with Hajiyev, he also wrote the heroic-patriotic opera Veten ('Fatherland'), which won a State Prize in 1946. His diploma composition was the Second Symphony (1946), which, though to a certain extent revealing Shostakovich's influence, marked the emergence of the composer's individuality.

Simultaneously with his compositional work Karayev took an active part in the musical life of Azerbaijan. He was artistic director of the Baku PO (1941–2), director of the music section of the Institute of Azerbaijani Art (1949–50), a teacher (from 1946), rector (1949–52) and professor (from 1959) at the State Conservatory, a board member (from 1948) and secretary (from 1962) of the Composers' Union of the USSR, and president (from 1953) and first secretary (from 1956) of the board of the Azerbaijani Composers' Union. A member of the central committee of the Communist party of Azerbaijan, he was also honoured with the title National Artist of the USSR and with membership of the Azerbaijani Academy of Sciences (both 1959).

Karayev's works of around 1950 show the influence of the poet Nizami, notably in the choral piece Osen' ('Autumn'), the symphonic poem Leyli i Mejnun, the symphonic suite Sem' krasavits ('Seven Beauties') and finally in the ballet of the same title as the suite, this last marking the first peak in his career. The symphonic poem, proclaiming with rare expressive qualities the tragic doom but unvanquished love of Leyli and Mejnun, achieved immediate recognition with the award of a State Prize (1948). But the picturesque clarity of Karayev's thought and his profound feeling for music drama are most clearly displayed in the ballet Seven Beauties. The work's dramatic principles approach those of Tchaikovsky and Prokofiev, a congruence particularly striking in the truly symphonic development. All the thematic material is organized in a patently structural manner and the ballet combines through-composition with number form: the fantastic, lyrical and psychological images are fused and intermingled with folkdance scenes in an impetuous and colourful movement. Furthermore, the free use of rhythmic formulae from national dances and the melodic and harmonic support given by folk modality reveal the composer's integral aesthetic involvement with folklore.

Karayev's second ballet, Tropoyu groma ('In the Path of Thunder'), written in 1957 and winning the Lenin Prize in 1967, was a new achievement in Soviet musical theatre. In this work the composer's social engagement, already strongly evident in Seven Beauties, becomes still more important: the deaths of the black man and the white girl, guilty only of love for each other (the plot is based on a novel by the South African writer Peter Abrahams), constitute not only a personal but also a social tragedy. In the score Karayev used black folk music, but altered according to his own creative ideas; he continued to 'symphonize' the ballet form, proving, in his own words, that 'the contemporary music of blacks and coloured people contains the principles of symphonic development in the same way that the music of other nations contains them'. The grandiose basso ostinato on the folk march 'In the Path of Thunder' forms a true apotheosis to the ballet.

Among Karayev's non-dramatic compositions, the 24 Preludes for piano are outstanding for their expression of concise and concentrated ideas. The cycle, which is based on polyphonic forms, describes a single line of development, from the simple pieces of the first notebook to the more complex and delicate, psychologically and stylistically, of the other three. To some extent the evolution within this work, composed between 1951 and 1963, reflects the evolution of Karayev's style in general. His unremitting interest in the musics of different peoples, and his enthusiastic development of the expressive means of contemporary music, led to a degree of universalization in his work. Significant in this respect are the 'symphonic prints' Don Kikhot (1960), which are permeated by the spirit of Spanish art, though it is only in certain numbers that the themes and developmental methods can be traced directly to Spanish folk music.

Besides his expressive, at times romantically emotional, local colour, powerful tendencies towards neo-classicism are detectable in Karayev's music, notably in his form and contrapuntal development. His later works show a more rational technique and a wider stock of expressive methods. He made much use of the established semantics of Azerbaijani modal formulae and, though his works do not conform exactly with the national pattern, he remained a national composer: his works are modelled on the very principles of folk-musical thought, even in the 12-note Third Symphony and Violin Concerto. Karayev's markedly individual style gave him scope to assimilate seemingly incompatible traditions, so that his creative synthesis of Prokofievian chromaticism with Azerbaijani folk modality led to the establishment of a new modal harmonic system on which he was able to base his works of the 1940s and 50s. His subsequent quests in the realm of sound organization proved similarly successful.

WORKS

(selective list)

for full list see Karagicheva and Kyazimov (1969)

DRAMATIC AND VOCAL

Ops: Veten [Fatherland] (I. Idayat-zade, M. Ragim), 1945, Baku, 1945, collab. D. Hajiyev; Nezhnost' [Tenderness] (monodrama, Karayev, after A. Barbyus), female v, chamber orch, 1972

Ballets: Sem' krasavits [Seven Beauties] (Idayat-zade, S. Rakhman, Yu. Slonimsky, after Nizami), 1952, Baku, 1952; Tropoyu groma [In the Path of Thunder] (Slonimsky, after P. Abrahams), 1957, Leningrad, Kirov, 1958

Musical comedy: Cirano de Berzherak (after Rostand), 1973

Other dramatic works: 20 incidental scores, 20 film scores

Vocal orch: Pesnya serdtsa [Song of the Heart] (cant., P. Rza), 1938; 3 tesnifa (Nizami), 1v, orch, 1939; Pesnya schast'ya [Song of Happiness] (cant., Ragim), 1947; 3 noktyurna (L. Kh'yuz), 1v, jazz orch, 1958, orchd O. Lundstrem; Partiya nasha [Our Party] (S. Vurgun, cant.), 1959; Gimn druzhbe [Hymn to Friendship], 1972

Choral: Kolïbel'naya [Lullaby], unacc., 1939; Osen' [Autumn] (Nizami), unacc., 1947; Pesnya neftyanikov morya [Song of the Oil Workers of the Sea] (M. Svetlov), 1v/vv, pf, 1954

Songs: 6 rubayi (O. Khayyam), 1v, pf, 1946; Na kholmakh Gruzii [On the Hills of Georgia], Ya vas lyubil [I Loved You] (A.S. Pushkin), 1v, pf, 1949

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Azerbaydzhanskaya syuita, 1939; Sym. no.1, b, 1943; Sym. no.2, C, 1946; Leyli i Mejnun, sym. poem, 1947; Sem' krasavits [Seven Beauties], suite, 1949; Albanskaya rapsodiya, 1952; Don Kikhot, sym. prints, 1960; Sym. no.3, chamber orch, 1965; Klassicheskaya syuita, 1966; Vn Conc., 1967; suites from ballets and film scores

Chamber: Quartettino, 1942; Str Qt no.1, f, 1942; Str Qt no.2, a, 1946; Sonata, d, vn, pf, 1960

Pf: Sonatina, 1940; Sonatina, a, 1943; 24 Preludes, 1951–63

Other works for orch, band, light orch, folk orch etc.

WRITINGS

for full list see Karagicheva and Kyazimov (1969)

'Uzeir Hadzhibeyov – osnovopolozhnik azerbaydzhanskogo opernogo iskusstva' [Hajibeyov, founder of Azerbaijani operatic art], Izvestiya Akademii nauk azerbaydzhanskoy SSR (1948), no.12, p.39

'Neskol'ko mïsley o tragicheskom v muzïke' [Some thoughts on the tragic in music], SovM (1957), no.4, pp.62–5

Nauchno-publitsisticheskoye naslediye (Scientific-publicistic heritage), ed. A. Sagarova (Baku, 1988)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Farkhadova: Balet 'Sem' krasavits' K. Karayeva (Baku, 1957)

Karayeva [On certain features of Karayev's harmonic language] (Baku, 1959)

N. Mekhtiyeva: Kinomuzïka K. Karayeva (Baku, 1966)
Yu. Slonimsky: Sem' baletnïkh istoriy (Leningrad, 1967)
M. Tarakanov: 'Novoye svidetel'stvo talanta' [New evidence of talent], SovM (1968), no.10, pp.31–7 [on the Vn Conc.]
L. Karagicheva and R. Kyazimov, eds.: K. Karayev: bibliografiya (Baku, 1969)
Ye. Frangulova: Sonata dlya skripki i fortepiano K. Karayeva [Sonata for violin and piano by K. Karayev] (Baku, 1977)
Kara Karayev: stat'i, pis'ma, skazïvaniya [Articles, letters, reflections] (Moscow, 1978) [60th anniversary collection]
I. Yefendiyeva: Muzïka Kara Karayeva k shèkspirovskim spektaklyam [Incidental music by Kara Karayev for Shakespearean pieces] (Baku, 1986)
Ye. Abasova and L. Karagicheva, eds.: Slovo o Karayeve [A word about Karayev] (Baku, 1988)
L. Karagicheva: Kara Karayev: lichnos', suzhdeniya ob iskusstve [Personality, reflections on art] (Moscow, 1994)

YURY GABAY

Karbusicky, Vladimir [Karbusický, Vladimír] (b Velim, nr Prague, 9 April 1925). Czech musicologist, active also in Germany. He studied engineering at the Prague Technical College (1945–8) and then aesthetics (with the structuralist Jan Mukařovský) and musicology at Prague University (1948–53), taking the doctorate in 1953 with a dissertation on the history of workers' songs in Bohemia. This topic, typical of its time, resulted in a two-volume collection, Dělnická píseň (Prague, 1959; with V. Pletka), and an extensive source list (Soupis dělnických písní, 1964), part of his CSc degree. Appointed to the Czechoslovak Academy's Institute for Ethnography and Folk Studies (1954–66) and then the Academy's Musicology Institute (1966–8), Karbusicky broadened his interests into popular music and folksong, in particular their origins, the boundaries between them, and their sociological implications. At first such research went in tandem with the increasingly tolerant ideological atmosphere in Prague, but the change of regime after Russian invasion led in 1969 to the confiscation of the edition of Podstata umění ('The basis of art', which took a hostile stance towards Marxist aesthetics) and to his permanent removal to West Germany, where he taught at the Hochschulen in Neuss, Cologne, Wuppertal, Kassel and Aachen and where in 1973 he became a naturalized citizen.

In Germany Karbusicky quickly established himself in a new working language and environment. His first major publication there, drawing together much of his previous work, was his Empirische Musiksoziologie (1975), a work which soon acquired classic status. A year later he was appointed to a new chair of systematic musicology at Hamburg University and his book Systematische Musikwissenschaft (1979) quickly established itself as a widely used university textbook. His interests expanded in other fields such as musical semiotics, in which he published a survey, Grundriss der musikalischen Semantik (1986) and a historical anthology, Sinn und Bedeutung in der Musik (1990), but also cultural and historical musicology. For instance his study Gustav Mahler und seine Umwelt (1978) examined both the Czech influences on Mahler's early life and, conversely, the reception of Mahler in Czechoslovakia. In exile Karbusicky showed increasing sympathy with Czech music. His Empirische Musiksoziologie included analyses of a wide range of Czech music; his later studies feature composers such as Janáček, Ostrčil, Suk, Ullmann, Martinů and, in particular, Foerster, and has provided a valuable bridge between Czech and German cultures. From this position he has been well placed to formulate criticisms of the limiting effects of Hegelian German-centredness.

With the fall of the communist government in 1989, Karbusicky was welcomed back by Czech musicology. After retiring from Hamburg as professor emeritus in 1990, he served as guest professor in Prague, Brno and Bratislava, joined the editorial board of Hudební věda and has published an increasing proportion of his writings in Czech. The Czech Academy of Sciences awarded him the Golden Plaque of František Palacký (1992) for services to social sciences.

WRITINGS

Přehledné dějiny naší dělnické písně do let devadesátých [A short history of our workers' songs up to the 1890s] (diss., U. of Prague, 1953; rev. Prague, 1953 as Naše dělnické píseň)
'Datování lidových písní vojenských: příspěvek k dějinám naší lidové písně' [The dating of military folksongs: a contribution to the history of Czech folksongs], Český lid, xlv (1958), 193–9
Dělnická píseň v národní kultuře [Workers' songs in national culture] (CSc diss., U. of Prague, 1959; extracts in Soupis dělnických písní [A catalogue of workers' songs], Brno, 1964, with V. Pletka)
'Zur Entwicklung des tschechischen und slowakischen Bergmannsliedes seit dem 16. Jahrhundert', Deutsches Jb für Volkskunde, v (1959), 361–77
'Vývojové rysy novodobé zpěvnosti' [Development traits in contemporary tunefulness], HV (1962), no.1, pp.7–52
'Středověká epika a počátky české hudby' [The medieval epic and the beginning of Czech music], HV, i (1964), 367–449 with J. Kasan: Výzkum současné hudebnosti: hudebního vkusu a zajmu v roce 1963 a jeho výsledky [Research into present-day musicality: of musical taste and interest in 1963 and its results] (Prague, 1964)
'Über die Beziehungen zwischen der älteren tschechischen und der germanischen Epik', Beiträge zur Sprachwissenschaft, Volkskunde und Literaturforschung (Berlin, 1965), 197–213
'Melodický typ balady Osiřelo dítě' [The melodic type of the ballad 'The Motherless Child'], HV, iii (1966), 576–96 [with Eng. summary]
ed.:Otázky hudební sociologie [Questions of musical sociology] (Prague, 1967)
'L'interaction "réalité – oeuvre d'art – société"', Revue internationale des sciences sociales XX, iv (Paris, 1968), 698–711; Eng. trans., 644–55
Mezi lidovou písní a šlágrem [Between folksong and hit song] (Prague, 1968)
Beethovenův list 'An die unsterbliche Geliebte' a jeho hudební dílo [Beethoven's letter 'To the Immortal Beloved' and his musical work] (Prague, 1969; Ger. trans., 1977)
'K technologii pamfletů o hudbě z let 1948–1952' [The technology of musical pamphlet literature 1948–52], HV, vi (1969), 281–311; Ger. trans., abridged, in Über Musik und Politik, ed. R. Stephan (Mainz, 1971), 67–85; It. trans. in Musica e politica, ed. M. Messinis and P. Scarnecchia (Venice, 1977), 229–46
Podstata umění: sociologický příspěvek do diskuse o gnoseologismu v estetice a teorii umění [The basis of art: a sociological contribution to the discussion of gnoseology in the aesthetics and theory of music] (Prague, 1969; enlarged Ger. trans., 1973, as Widerspielungstheorie und Strukturalismus)
'Vokální symfonie Dmitrije Šostakoviče', HRo, xxiii (1970), 467–73
'Die Instrumentalisierung des Menschen im Soldatenlied', Zeitschrift für Volkskunde, lxvii (1971), 203–27
Ideologie im Lied – Lied in der Ideologie: kulturanthropologische Strukturanalysen (Cologne, 1973)
'Ein Ende der System-Ästhetiken? Zum Widerspiegelungsmodell der Musik in Lukács' "Ästhetik"', Kölner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, Sonderheft, xvii (1974), 68–92
Empirische Musiksoziologie: Erscheinungsformen, Theorie und Philosophie des Bezugs 'Musik-Gesellschaft' (Wiesbaden, 1975)
'Zur empirisch-soziologischen Musikforschung', Musikhören, ed. B. Dopheide (Darmstadt, 1975), 280–330
'Hörerziehung als musiksoziologisches Experiment', Hörerziehung, ed. B. Dopheide (Darmstadt, 1977), 385–449
Musikwerk und Gesellschaft (Vienna, 1977)
Gustav Mahler und seine Umwelt (Darmstadt, 1978, enlarged 2/1998 as Gustav Mahler: Heimatklänge eines Heimatlosen)
Systematische Musikwissenschaft: eine Einführung in Grundbegriffe, Methode und Techniken (Munich, 1979)

Anfänge der historischen Überlieferung in Böhmen: ein Beitrag zum vergleichenden Studium der mittelalterlichen Sängerepochen (Cologne, 1980; Cz. orig., Prague, 1995, as Báje, mýty, dějiny: nejstarší české pověsti v kontextu evropské kultury [Legends, myth, history: the oldest Czech tales in the context of European literature)
'"Der Kreuzweg" Otakar Ostrčils: ein soziologischer Beleg zur Wozzeck-Rezeption!', HJbMw, iv (1980), 225–58
'The Experience of the Indexical Sign: Jakobson and the Semiotic Phonology of Leoš Janáček', American Journal of Semiotics, ii (1983), 35–58
"Sinfonizm", "Tematizm" und "vokal'nost'" als ästhetische Kategorien im Schaffen Šostakovičs', Dmitry Shostakovich: Cologne 1985, 164–79
'Gegenwartsprobleme der Musiksoziologie: eine Bestandsaufnahme', AcM, lviii (1986), 35–91
Grundriss der musikalischen Semantik (Darmstadt, 1986)
'Zeichen und Musik', Zeitschrift für Semiotik, ix (1987), 227–49
'Konnotationen eines Komponisten-Porträts (K. Sabina und K. Čapeks "Leben und Werk des Komponisten Foltýn")', Canadian-American Slavic Studies, xxii (1988), 231–61
'Josef Suk und Gustav Mahler', Gustav Mahler: Hamburg 1989, 313–31
'Musikalische Urformen und Gestaltungskräfte', Musikalische Gestaltung im Spannungsfeld von Chaos und Ordnung: Graz 1989, 28–89
'Verbalisierung musikalischer Sinngehalte: zwischen "schlechter Poesie" und dem "Gemachten am Werk"?', Verbalisierung und Sinngehalt, ed. O. Kolleritsch (Vienna, 1989)
'Zum "Wagnerianismus" in der tschechischen Musikkultur (1984)', Musik des Ostens, xi (1989), 241–50
Kosmos – Mensch – Musik: strukturalistische Anthropologie des Musikalischen (Hamburg, 1990)
ed.: Sinn und Bedeutung in der Musik: Texte zur Entwicklung des musiksemiotischen Denkens (Darmstadt, 1990, 2/1994)
'Gestalt und Bedeutung in der Musik', Jb (Bayerische Akademie der Schönen Künste), vi (1992), 275–304
'Kulturwandel als Kodewandel: zur Evolution musikalischer Gattungen', Kulturrevolution: Fallstudien und Synthese, ed. M. Landsch and I. Bystrina (Frankfurt, 1992), 98–116
'Der "neue Mensch" im Liedgut totalitärer Systeme', Musikalische Volkskultur und die politische Macht: Weimar 1992, 124–52
'Utopie a sarastrovský syndrom v hudbě' [Utopia and the Sarastro syndrome in music], HV, xxix (1992), 187–222 [with Ger. summary]
'Zitat und Zitieren in der Musik', Zeitschrift für Semiotik, xiv (1992), 61–77
ed.: Ludwig van Beethoven: Briefe über Kunst, Liebe und Freundschaft (Freiburg, 1992) [selected letters; Cz. edn pubd under a foreign name, 1971]
ed., with J. Braun and H.T. Hoffmann: Verfemte Musik: Dresden 1993 [incl. 'Werte und Wertung in der politischen Tonalität', 45–58]
'Engelmusik und teuflische Schreie: Imaginationen des Matthias Grünewald in Paul Hindemiths musikalischen Bildern', HJbMw, xii (1994), 183–92
'Smysl a význam v hudbě' [Sense and meaning in music], HV, xxxi (1994), 25–84 [with Ger. summary]
'Der erträumte und nacherlebte Surrealismus: Martinůs Oper "Juliette, ou La clé des songes"', HJbMw, xiii (1995), 70–140
'On the Genesis of the Musical Sign (1988)', Musical Signification, ed. E. Tarasti (Berlin, 1995), 229–66
'Die Welt der Technik in der Musik: Faszination und Schreckensbilder', Glasba v tehničnem svetu: Ljubljana 1994 (Ljubljana, 1995), 13–24
Wie deutsch ist das Abendland? Geschichtliches Sendungsbewusstsein im Spiegel der Musik (Hamburg, 1995)
'Zur Philosophie der komischen und irdischen Harmonie in der Musik', 'Lass singen, Gesell, lass rauschen . . .': zur Ästhetik und Anästhetik in der Musik: Graz 1995, 1–36
Mahler in Hamburg: Chronik einer Freundschaft (Hamburg, 1996)
'Salomon Mosenthals und J.B. Foersters "Deborah" und Gustav Mahlers Auferstehungssymphonie', Kritische Musikästhetik und Wertungsforschung: Otto Kolleritsch zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. D. Leitinger (Vienna, 1996), 73–95
'Skutečný život v Janáčkově "Broučkovi"' [Real life in Janáček's Brouček], HV, xxxiii (1996), 103–38 [with Ger. summary]
Besuch bei Cosima: eine Begegnung mit dem alten Bayreuth (Hamburg, 1997) [incl. collection of Cosima Wagner's letters]
'Die missverstandene Eigenart der Operndramatik Janáčeks', Leoš Janáček: Konzeption und Rezeption seines musikdramatischen Schaffens, ed. W. Bernhart (Anif-Salzburg, 1997), 19–53
'Co jsme dlužni Josefu Bohuslavu Foerstrovi' [What we owe to Foerster], HV, xxxv (1998), 1–45 [with Ger. summary]
'Der Exotismus der Absurdität: Lieder auf Worte der chinesischen Poesie von Pavel Haas', HJbMw, xiv (1998)
'Gorenjski slavček: der Zwist zwischen Heim und Fremde in der ersten slowenischen Oper', Festschrift für Primož Kuret (Ljubljana, forthcoming)
'Die Verführungskraft und die Wahrheit des Mythos', Musik und Mythos, ed. H.W. Henze (Frankfurt, forthcoming)
'Von fremden Ufern, fern im Exil . . .: Bohuslav Martinůs "Feldmesse"', Musik im Exil (Hamburg, forthcoming)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Festschrift für Vladimír Karbusicky zum 60. Geburtstag: Studien zur Systematischen Musikwissenschaft (Laaber, 1986) [incl. bibliography 1952–86, pp.247–54]
P. Zapletal: 'Za všechno se musí platit' [Everything must be paid for], HRo, lxiv (1990), 166–70 [interview]
E. Krekovičová: 'Rozhovor s prof. Vladimírom Karbusickým' [Interview with Prof. Vladimír Karbusicky], Slovenský národopis, lx (1992), 56–65
'Vladimíru Karbusickému k 70. narozeninám', HV, xxxii (1995), 212–23 [incl. appreciation by A. Schneider and selected list of writings]

JOHN TYRRELL

Karchin, Louis (Samuel) (b Philadelphia, 8 Sept 1951). American composer and conductor. He attended the Eastman School of Music (BM 1973) and Harvard University (MA 1975, PhD 1978), where he studied with Samuel Adler, Joseph Schwantner, Fred Lerdahl and Earl Kim. He co-founded the Harvard Group for New Music and later studied conducting with Barzin in Paris (1978–9). In 1979 he joined the composition department at New York University. He has served as president and chair of the US section of ISCM (1981–5) and co-founded the ISCM chamber players. Among his honours are the Koussevitsky Tanglewood Award, the Bearns Prize and grants from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the ACA, the New Music Consort and the Fromm Foundation.

An advocate of the American modernist tradition, Karchin follows in the tradition of Stefan Wolpe, Dallapiccola and late Stravinsky. His music is characterized by intense, angular, rhythmically active surfaces, as in the Capriccio (1977), but is also distinguished by a lyricism and formal clarity that suggests a Classical influence. The Songs of John Keats (1984) and Songs of Distance and Light (1987) feature consonant, even overtly tonal gestures. The first movement of the Cello Sonata (1989) articulates a sonata form through long-range tonal centres and the Sonata da camera (1995), crafted around widely voiced motifs, suggests a Beethovenian rhetoric. His work is discussed in R. Carl: 'Three Points on the Spectrum: the Music of Louis Karchin, Lois V. Vierk and Paul Dresher', CMR, x/1 (1994), 11–31.

WORKS

Op: Romulus (A. Dumas, trans. B. Shaw), S, T, Bar, B, fl, cl, hn, pf, perc, str, 1990

Vocal: Songs of John Keats, S, fl, cl, perc, pf, vn, vc, 1984 [arr. chbr orch]; 5 Songs (S. Standing), S, orch, 1985 [arr. S, pf, 1985]; Songs of Distance and Light (E. Bishop, J. Rose), S, fl, ob, cl, perc, vn, va, vc, 1987; A Way Separate ... (R. Whitman, H. Senesh), S, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1992; 2 Songs (Y. Yevtushenko), Bar, fl, cl, perc, pf, vn, vc, 1997

Inst ens: Capriccio, solo vn, fl, ob, b cl, perc, pf, va, db, 1977; Duo, vn, vc, 1981; Viola Variations, va, pf, 1981; Orch Variations, 1982; Canonic Mosaics II, fl, cl, bn, perc, pf, vn, va, vc, 1986; Sonata, vc, pf, 1989; Str Qt, 1991; Galactic Folds, fl + pic, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1992; Str Qt no.2, 1994; Rustic Dances, vn, cl, mar, 1995; Sonata da camera, vn, pf, 1995; Rhapsody, orch, 1996

Solo inst: Attuned to the Times, vn, 1978; Soliloquy, fl, 1983; Caprice, pf, 1984; 3 Miniatures, pf, 1984; Canzona and Elegy, vn, 1988; Pf Sonata, 1988; Soliloquy II 'Chimerical Images', fl, 1989; Ricercare, vn, 1992; Summer Songs, cl, 1994; Cascades, pf, 1997
Principal publisher: Peters

ROBERT CARL

Kardoš, Dezider (b Nadlice, central Slovakia, 23 Dec 1914; d 18 March 1991). Slovak composer. He studied composition with Alexander Moyzes at the Bratislava Academy (1933–7), read musicology at Comenius University, Bratislava (1934–7), and attended Novák's composition masterclasses at the Prague Conservatory (1937–9). Appointments followed as head of music at the radio stations of Prešov (1939–45) and Košice (1945–51), director of the Slovak PO (1952–4) and as chairman of the Slovak Composers' Union (1955–63). He was lecturer (1961–8) and professor of composition (1968–84) at the Bratislava Academy of Music and Dramatic Art. A recipient of numerous awards, he was awarded the title National Artist in 1975.

Kardoš's early compositions were influenced by Alexander Moyzes; a good example of this is the Piesne o láske ('Songs of Love') of 1935. Under Moyzes's guidance, he mastered the use of modal chromaticism. However, it was the music of Bartók that had a decisive effect on the composer's later bearings, the beginnings of which can be heard in the grotesque march from Kardoš's Piano Suite no.2, and the Bagatelles, which were modelled on Bartók's For Children. Kardoš accepted Bartók's innovations without compromise and found here motivating stimuli for works that were to follow. Bartók's ideas – including his analytical approach to modes used in folk music – were developed by Kardoš in a most original way: coupled with the development of his interest in contrapuntal part-writing, they represented the door to atonality and timbral concerns (as in Lutosławski, though less radical in manner). The typical features of Kardoš's music are ferocious vitality; Honegger-like motoric sections (where sharply rhythmical motifs play an important role in thematic work) in combination with meditative passages; and frequent use of the concertante style. With a few exceptions from the 1950s, his works largely avoided the demands of socialist realism; even in ostensibly programmatic pieces such as the Hrdinská balada ('Heroic Ballad') an autonomous, purely musical form predominates. His masterpieces – the fourth and fifth symphonies and the Partita for 12 string instruments – are increasingly characterized by polyphonic textures and a tightly controlled formal structure. In his extensive work as a folklorist he adapted numerous folksongs from eastern Slovakia.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Allegro simfonico (Finale), op.4, 1937; Sym. no.1, op.10, 1942; Moja rodná [My Native Land], ov., op.14, 1946 (rev. 1985); Východoslovenská predohra [East Slovakian Ov.], op.22, 1951; Sym. no.2 'O rodnej zemi' [O Native Land], op.28, 1955; Conc. for Orch, op.30, 1957; Hrdinská balada [Heroic Ballad], op.32, str 1959; Sym. no.3, op.33, 1961; Sym. no.4 'Piccola', op.34, 1962; Conc. for Str, op.35, 1963; Sym. no.5, op.37, 1964; Pf Conc., op.40, 1969; Res philharmonica, ov., op.41, 1971; Sym. no.6, op.45, 1974; Slovakofónia, op.46, 1976; Sinfonietta domestica, op.50, 1979; Vn Conc., op.51, 1980; Bratislavská predohra [Bratislava Ov.], op.52, 1981; Symfonietta, op.55, str, 1987: see Vocal [Sym. no.7]

Vocal: Piesne o láske [Songs of Love] (V. Beniak, M. Haľamová), op.2, S/T, pf, 1935, arr. S, orch, 1966; 4 slovenské ľudové piesne [4 Slovakian Folksongs], S, T, orch, op.7, 1938; Východoslovenské ľudové spevy [East Slovakian Folksongs], op.8, Mez/Bar, pf, 1939; V Zemplíne spievajú [They Sing in Zemplín], folksong arrs., op.9, S, T, B, orch, 1940; Valalské spevy [Village Songs], op.12, S, T, female chorus, orch, 1944; Východoslovenské koledy [East Slovakian Carols], op.13b, S, Bar, female chorus, orch, 1945; Východoslovenské spevy, op.17, Mez/Bar, pf, 1948; Zem moja rodná [My Native Land] (cant., M. Rázusová-Martáková), op.19, chorus, 1949; Pozdrav veľkej zemi [Greetings to the Great Land] (cant., J. Brezina), op.25, S, chorus, orch, 1953; Spevy o živote [Songs about Life] (4 microdramas, M. Válek, Haľamová), op.44, S, T, orch, 1973; Októbrové poémy [October Poems] (A. Plávka, Brezina, P. Koyš), op.48, chorus, 1977; Sym. no.7 'Balada o sne' [Ballad of a Dream] (P. Horov), op.53, Bar, chorus, orch, 1984
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, op.3, 1936; Pf Suite no.2, op.5, 1937; Wind Qnt, op.6, 1938, rev., 1978; 3 Skladby [3 Pieces], vn, pf, 1947; Bagatelles, op.18, pf, 1948; Str Qt no.2, op.38, 1966; Elevazioni, op.39, org, 1968; Partita, op.43, 12 str, 1972; Conc. for Wind Qnt, op.47, 1977; Str Qt no.3, op.49, 1978; Str Qt no.4, op.54, 1985; Partita, op.56, va, 1988
Principal publishers: Opus, Slovenské hudobné vydavateľstvo, Slovenské vydavateľstvo krásnej literatúry, Slovenský hudobný fond, Supraphon, Štátne hudobné vydavateľstvo

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Z. Nováček: Dezider Kardoš: počiatky a rast [Kardoš: beginnings and growth] (Bratislava, 1955)
I. Hrušovský: Slovenská hudba v profiloch a rozboroch [Slovak music in profiles and analyses] (Bratislava, 1964), 254–74
L. Burlas: Slovenská hudobná moderna [Slovak musical modernism] (Bratislava, 1983), 151–6

VLADIMÍR ZVARA

Karel, Rudolf (b Plzeň, 9 Nov 1880; d Terezín, 6 March 1945). Czech composer. He studied law at Prague University and music at the Prague Conservatory, where his teachers included Karel Hoffmeister (piano), Josef Klička (organ) and Knittl (theory). In 1903 he became Dvořák's last composition student. From 1906, after a period of military service, he worked as a freelance composer in Prague. He made his name in professional circles with the opera Ilseino srdce ('Ilsea's heart', 1906–9) and the symphonic poem Ideály ('Ideals', 1906–9), works inspired by the bohemian circles in which he lived. In 1911 he received an author's contract from Simrock. His fame as a composer grew with the increasingly wide distribution of his works, and his increased income allowed him to undertake extensive study tours of Scandinavia, Dalmatia and Bulgaria.

When World War I broke out in 1914, Karel was on holiday in Russia. Unable to return to his native land, he taught music in various Russian cities, finally becoming director of the Irkutsk music school in Siberia. Although he first placed himself at the disposal of the local Bolshevik administration and joined the recently founded Communist artists' union, he soon joined the troops of the Czech Legion, an interventionist force of Czechs living abroad who were initially successful in fighting the Bolsheviks. He founded a military symphony orchestra, which gave concerts in the zones where the Legion was fighting and in cities through which they travelled. These activities brought him into contact with leading intellectuals and artists of the Legionary movement, including the writers Rudolf Medek and Josef Kopta.

After returning to Prague in 1920, Karel concentrated on the composition of vocal music. In 1923 he was appointed to a professorship at the Prague Conservatory and in 1926 he received the Czechoslovakian State Prize (1926) for Capriccio for violin. He wrote comparatively few new compositions at this time, working for five years (1923–7) on the cantata Vzkříšení ('Resurrection', 1923–7), which takes the liberation of Bohemia from Habsburg rule as its subject. The successful première of Smrt kmotříčka ('Godmother's Death', 1928–32, Brno, 1933), a work which had received a prize from the Smetana Jubilee Foundation, marked the beginning of a new creative period. He subsequently composed in rapid succession further song cycles, the symphonic vocal work Vlajka ('The Flag', 1935), a third string quartet (1935–6) and the Jarní symfonie ('Spring Symphony', 1935–8).

Now distanced from the Czech Legion, Karel became a member of a leftist political movement. Revoluční predehra ('Revolutionary Overture', 1938–41), written for the anniversary of the foundation of the Czechoslovakian Republic, uses the St Wenceslas chorale as a symbol of Czech resistance to Nazi occupation. Despite his change of allegiance, he was dismissed from his post in 1940 because of his former activities in the Legion. On 19 March 1943 he was arrested as a member of the Koširsk resistance group and interned in the Gestapo prison of Prague-Pankrác. Despite illness and inhumane conditions he composed songs and piano works later published as Skladby vězeni ('Works from Prison', 1944–5) and began writing the libretto for the opera Tři vlasy děda Vševěda ('Three Hairs of an Old Wise Man', 1944–5). On 7 February 1945, already seriously ill, he was deported to Theresienstadt. With the last of his strength he began to compose the Nonet op.43. On 6 March 1945, before he could finish the composition, he died of dysentery. Shortly before his death, he was portrayed by a fellow prisoner, the painter Antonín Bares.

As a composer, Karel began by experimenting with sound and form, a process resulting in consistent linearity and a reserved musical language. His first stylistic change came during the 1920s. While in Ilseino srdce he used expressionistic miniature building blocks of music (including leitmotifs) to create a kaleidoscopic effect, in Smrt kmotříčka he merged elements of folk music with imaginative fairy tale images, replacing leitmotifs with dramatically motivated melodic reminiscences. This tendency towards simplification, with an inclination to write in a plain, folk-inspired style, remained characteristic of his later works.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Ilseino srdce [Ilsea's Heart] (op, Kropácek and Hillar), op.10, 1906–9, Prague, 1924; Smrt kmotříčka [Godmother's Death] (op, S. Lom), op.30, 1928–32, Brno, 1933; Zkrocení zlé ženy (op, after W. Shakespeare) [The Taming of the Shrew], 1942–4, inc.; Tři vlasy děda Vševěda [Three Hairs of an Old Wise Man] (Karel), 1944–5 [completed Z. Vostrák]

Orch: Suite, op.4, 1903–4; Scherzo capriccio, op.6, ?1904; Fantasie, op.8, 1905; Ideály [Ideals], sym. poem, op.11, 1906–9; Renesanční symfonie, op.15, 1910–11; 4 slovanské taneční nálady [4 Slavic Dance Tunes], op.16, 1912; Adagio, vn, orch, 1914–24; Capriccio, op.21, vn, orch, 1914–24; Sym., op.20, vn, orch, 1914–24; Démon, sym. poem, op.23, 1918–20; Jarní symfonie [Spring Sym.], D, op.38, 1935–8; Revoluční predehra [Revolutionary Ov.], op.39, 1938–41

Vocal: V září helenského slunce [In the Beams of Light of the Hellenic Sun], op.24, 1v, pf/orch, 1921; Zborov [Ruins] (R. Medek), op.25, male vv, 1922; Vzkříšení [Resurrection] (cant., J. Kopta, Medek), sym., op.27, solo vv, mixed chorus, orch, 1923–7; Sladká balada dětská [Sweet Ballad for Children] (Medek), op.29, S, mixed chorus, orch, 1928–30; Samá láska [Love only] (Seifert), op.33, 1v, pf, 1933; Černoch (exoticka alada) [The Negro], op.34, 1v, pf, 1933–4; Láska [Love] (Neumann), op.36, 1v, pf, 1934; Vlajka [The Flag] (Dyk), op.35, 1v, orch, 1935; Píseň svobody [Song of Liberty] (Falta), op.42, 1v, pf, 1944; see also CHBR [Skadby z vězení, 1944–5]

Chbr and solo inst: Klavirní skladby [6 pf works], op.2, 1902–3; Str Qt no.1, d, op.3, 1902–3; Notturno, op.9, pf, 1906–7; Str Qt no.2, E♭, op.12, 1907–10; Sonata, op.14, pf, 1910; Theme and Variations, op.13, pf, 1910; Sonata, op.17, vn, pf, 1912; 3 Waltzes, op.18, pf, 1913; Burleska, op.19, pf, 1913–14; Pf Qt, op.22, 1915; Str Qt no.3, op.37, 1935–6; Skladby z vězení [Works from Prison], op.42, 1944–5 [incl. works for solo pf; 1v, pf; vn, pf]; Nonet, 1945 [orchd F. Hertl]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

RiemannL12
O. Sourek: Rudolf Karel (Prague, 1947)
J. Bajer: 'Rudolf Karel (9·11·1880 – 6·3·1945)', HV, iv (1967), 299–303
Vyberovy katalog ukoncené tvorby ceskych skladetelu 20.stoleti [Exhibition catalogue of the last works of Czechoslovakian composers of the 20th century] (Prague, 1976)
J. Karas: Music in Terezín 1941–1945 (New York, 1990)

BEATE SCHRÖDER-NAUENBURG

Karest, Joes [Joos Careest, Joost Kareest, Kerrest etc.] (b Cologne, *c*1495; d Antwerp, 1559–60). German harpsichord and clavichord maker, active in the southern Netherlands. Both his place of birth and the existence of a document stating that his father was called Jan have led to speculation that he was the son of the noted organ builder Hans Suys (see SUISSE), although this fails to explain why he was always known by the surname Karest (however spelt). He became a citizen of Antwerp in 1516–17 and in 1523 was admitted to the Guild of St Luke as a 'clavecordmaker', sculptor and painter.

Karest was the founder of the Antwerp school of harpsichord making and its most prominent member before the rise of the Ruckers family. His name headed the list of ten harpsichord makers who in 1557 successfully petitioned to form a separate section of the Guild for their own craft. Karest's extant work, two beautifully made and decorated polygonal virginals dated 1548 and 1550 (in the Brussels Conservatory and the Museo nazionale degli strumenti musicali, Rome) are important specimens of the early northern European style of harpsichord making (see HARPSICHORD, §2(ii)).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BoalchM
J.A. Stellfeld: 'Bronnen tot de geschiedenis der Antwerpsche clavecimbel- en orgelbouwers in de XVIe en XVIIe eeuwen', Vlaamsch jb voor muziekgeschiedenis, iv (1942), 3–110
E.M. Ripin: 'On Joes Karest's Virginal and the Origins of the Flemish Tradition', Keyboard Instruments: Studies in Keyboard Organology 1500–1800 (Edinburgh, 1971, 2/1977), 67–73
J. Koster: 'The Origins of Hans Ruckers' Craft', Hans Ruckers (d 1598): Stichter van een klavecimbelatelier van wereldformaat in Antwerpen, ed. J. Lambrechts-Douillez (Peer, 1998), 53–64

JOHN KOSTER

Karetnikov, Nikolay Nikolayevich (b Moscow, 28 June 1930; d 10 Oct 1994). Russian composer. His family was highly cultured – his grandmother was star of the Imperial Opera and had appeared alongside Chaliapin – and nurtured in him a distrust of many of the values of the Soviet regime. He studied with Shebalin and Nikolayeva at the Moscow Central Music School and then continued his training under Shebalin at the Moscow Conservatory, graduating in 1953. In 1957 he became instantly fascinated by the music of Schoenberg, Berg and Webern; the comparative freedom of the Krushchyov thaw had allowed this to filter into Russian musical circles through a visit by Glenn Gould. He soon developed a language that combined the formal rigour of the Second Viennese

School with the colour, directness of emotion and vitality that characterize the Russian traditions. His earliest works, which include several ballets for the Bol'shoy Theatre, earned him some official approval, so his increased interest in developing a language based on European modernism made him a target for menacing pressure from the Composers' Union. His String Quartet, Fourth Symphony (both of 1963) and Chamber Symphony (1969) show him handling serial techniques most effectively whilst articulating powerful and dramatic emotions. After writing these works, none of which were performed in public, he embarked on the opera Til' Ulenshpigel' ('Til Eulenspiegel') which he completed only in 1985. During this period he survived, like many other unofficial or underground composers, writing film music. With its thinly veiled strain of political satire and allegory, performance of Til Eulenspiegel was unthinkable during the 20 or so years he worked on it. He managed, eventually, to persuade musicians, singers and technicians to work on the project without pay in order to record the opera, which has subsequently been referred to as the 'first samizdat opera'. In addition to this project, the opera-oratorio Misteriya apostola Pavla ('The Mystery of the Apostle Paul'), also unperformable for obvious reasons, occupied him during the period 1972–87. During the eras of Gorbachev and Yeltsin, these works inevitably and justly brought him some measure of respect and attention, both at home and abroad: Til Eulenspiegel was staged in Germany in 1993 while his Fourth Symphony was played in Britain in early 1994. During the last years of his life he turned again to writing abstract instrumental works, leaving a second chamber symphony incomplete at the time of his death. His memoirs, Tema s variatsiyami ('Theme and Variations') caused a scandal at the time of their publication in 1990 by their open discussion of the manner in which certain composers had pursued their careers through the patronage of not only the Composers' Union but also the KGB. Along with Denisov, Gubaydulina and Schnittke, Kartenikov was the most important Russian composer of his generation and like them made through his music profoundly impressive statements despite almost intolerable pressure to do otherwise.

WORKS

Stage: The Geologists, 1956; Vanina Vanini (ballet, 1, after Stendhal), 1961; Til' Ulenshpigel' [Til Eulenspiegel] (singspiel, after C. de Coster), ?1964–85; Kroshka Tsakhes po prozvnaiyu Tsinnober [Little Tsakhes alias Tsinnober] (ballet, 3, after E.T.A. Hoffmann), 1967; Misteriya apostola Pavla [The Mystery of the Apostle Paul] (op-orat), 1972–87; Volshebniy Kamzol [The Fairy Kamzol] (ballet, after Hoffmann)

Choral: Yulius Fuchik, orat, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1953; 5 dukhovnïkh pesnopenii [5 Sacred Melodies], chorus, brass, 1969

4 syms.: 1951, 1956, 1959, 1963

Other orch: Dramaticheskaya poėma, 1958; Conc., ww, 1965; Chbr Sym., 19 insts, 1969; Conc., str, 1991

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, vn, pf, 1960; Lento variazione, pf, 1961; Str Qt, 1963; Kontsertnaya p'yesa [Concert Piece], pf, 1969; 4 p'yesï, fl, cl, b cl, pf, 1969; 2 p'yesï, pf, 1973; Pf Qnt, 1993

Numerous film scores

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Karetnikov: Tema s variatsiyami [Theme and Variations] (Moscow and Paris, 1990)

M. Tarakanov: 'Apologiya nepriznaniya' [Vindication for non-recognition], SovM (1990), no.7, pp.6–13

N. Karetnikov: 'Misteriya apostola Pavla: psovyashchayetsya protoiyereyu Aleksandru Menyu' [The Mystery of the Apostle Paul: dedicated to the archpriest Aleksandr Mene], MAk (1994), no.5, pp.7–12

A. Selitsky: Nikolay Karetnikov: vïbor sud'bï [Chosen by Fate] (Rostov-na-Donu, 1997)

L. Raaben: 'N. Karetnikov', O dukhovnom renessanse v russkoy muzïke (St Petersburg, 1998), 208–15

GERARD MCBURNEY

Kargel [Kärgel, Kargl, Kärgl], Sixt [Sixtus] (*b c*1540; d ?Zabern [now Saverne], after 1593). German lutenist and composer. His first recorded publication, a lost print of 1569, appeared at Mainz, which suggests that he may have been identical with the lutenist Sixt who was living there in 1568. From 1574 Kargel was an editor for the printer Bernhard Jobin at Strasbourg and quickly became one of the best-known lutenists in Alsace. According to the dedications of his prints of 1574 and 1586 he was a lutenist in the service at Strasbourg of Prince-Bishop Johann of Manderscheid-Blankenheim, Landgrave of Alsace, and also of Cardinal Charles of Lorraine. In 1593 he was lutenist to the prince-bishop at Zabern. He became a member of the St Michael brotherhood at Zabern in 1594.

In German lute music Kargel occupies a place similar to that of Melchior Neusidler, whose works appear with Kargel's first published pieces in Theatrum musicum, longe amplissimum (RISM 1571[16]); both composers strove to imitate the north Italian lute style with its rich figuration. This collection has been attributed to Kargel, but it is now known that he did not edit it; it contains four fantasias by him, one of which was reprinted in his 1574 publication. Two of Kargel's anthologies, those of 1574 and 1586, contain portraits of him. The print of 1574, which is in Italian tablature, affords important evidence of the later development of the lute passamezzo. In his last collection (1586), a late example of German tablature containing 52 pieces, Kargel intabulated pieces by Crecquillon, Lassus and Rore, as well as some by eight other composers, including major figures such as Arcadelt and Jacob Handl. The six fantasias by Kargel himself are more homophonic than his earlier examples.

Kargel's collections of 1575 and 1578 are important in the limited repertory of music for cittern. The first is based on the tuning bb–Gg–dd'–gg–d'd'–e'. The four-course cittern in Renovatha cythara is tuned aa'a'–gg'g'–d'd'–e'e'. As in Luys Milán's Spanish vihuela tablature, the lowest line of the system corresponds to the lowest string of the instrument, while his figures follow Italian tablature. Unlike the collections of Fredericus Viaera (1564), Le Roy & Ballard (1565), Sebastian Vredeman (1568, 1569) and Phalèse (1570, 1582), his volume includes rapid Italianate diminutions.

Hans Kaspar Kärgel, a lutenist at the Württemberg court between 1606 and 1610, was probably Sixt Kargel's son.

EDITIONS

all published in Strasbourg

Novae, elegantissimae, gallicae, item et italicae cantilenae, mutetae & passomezo, adjunctis suis saltarellis, mira dulcedinae in testudine canendae, lute (1574[11]; Nova & elegantissima italica & gallica carmina, 1569, lost, see Göhler, probably earlier edn of 1574 pubn) [incl. fantasia by Kargel previously pubd 1571[16]]

Toppel Cythar: nova eaque artificiosa et valde commoda ratio ludendae cytharae ... aliquot elegantissimis, italicis, germanicis, & gallicis cantionibus & saltationibus, exempli vice ornata, cittern (1575[18]) [collab. J.D. Lais]; 1 ed. in Wolf

Renovatha cythara, hoc est Novi et commodissimi exercendae cytharae modi: constantes cantionibus musicis, passomezo, padoanis, gaillardis ... ad tabulaturam communem redactis, cittern (1575, lost; 1578[25], dedication dated 1575); 3 ed. in Wolf

Lautenbuch viler newerlessner fleissiger, schöner Lautenstück von artlichen Fantaseien, künstlichen Music artlichen lateinischen Muteten … in die teutsch Tabulatur, lute (1586[23]); fantasia ed. in Engel

4 fantasias, lute, 1571[16] [1 repr. in 1574 pubn]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI; EitnerQ; GöhlerV; WolfH

G. Bossert: 'Die Hofkapelle unter Herzog Friedrich', Württembergische Vierteljahrshefte für Landesgeschichte, new ser., xix (1910), 349

G. Bossert: 'Die Hofkapelle unter Johann Friedrich', Württembergische Vierteljahrshefte für Landesgeschichte, new ser, xx (1911), 162, 168, 193

M. Vogeleis: Quellen und Bausteine zu einer Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters im Elsass 500–1800 (Strasbourg, 1911/R), 326–7

E. Engel: Die Instrumentalformen in der Lautenmusik des 16. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Berlin, 1915), 16–17, 31–2

J. Dieckmann: Die in deutscher Lautentabulatur überlieferten Tänze des 16. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1931)

W. Boetticher: Studien zur solistischen Lautenpraxis des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1943), 329–30

L.H. Moe: Dance Music in Printed Italian Lute Tablatures from 1507 to 1611 (diss., Harvard U., 1956)

A. Gottron: Mainzer Musikgeschichte von 1500 bis 1800 (Mainz, 1959), 36

WOLFGANG BOETTICHER, HANS RADKE

Karg-Elert [Karg], Sigfrid (Theodor) (b Oberndorf am Neckar, 21 Nov 1877; d Leipzig, 9 April 1933). German composer and keyboard player. A devoted advocate of harmonium music, he is best known for his compositions for that instrument and for his organ works.

1. LIFE. Son of a newspaper editor and publisher and the youngest of 12 children, Karg-Elert moved with his family to Leipzig at the age of five. He began his musical studies as a member of the Johanniskirche choir, composing under the guidance of the cantor, Bruno Röthig, who conducted several of his early choral works. Although his father's death in 1889 meant there was no money to spend on music lessons, a Leipzig family provided him with a piano; he continued to depend on the patronage and support of others throughout his life.

In 1891 the church director decided that Karg-Elert should train in Grimma to become a teacher. After two years in which he learned to play the flute, oboe and clarinet, he discontinued the course and moved to Markranstädt where he supported himself as a freelance musician while studying philosophy and music theory. He returned to Leipzig about 1896 to study at the Conservatory, where his teachers included Emil Nikolaus von Rezniček, Carl Reinecke, Salomon Jadassohn, Paul Homeyer and Karl Wendling. In 1900 a performance of his First Piano Concerto with himself as soloist so impressed Reisenauer that his scholarship was extended and he contemplated a career as a performer. After a successful tour of Germany, he returned to Leipzig where he engaged in further composition study with Teichmüller, a decision that caused a breach in his relationship with Reisenauer. He added his mother's maiden name [Ehlert] to his original surname [Karg] when his first published composition, a song, appeared in Musikwoche.

In 1902 Karg-Elert was appointed head of the piano masterclass at the Magdeburg Conservatory. The following year he met Grieg, who advised him to study the contrapuntal forms and dance idioms of the 17th and 18th centuries. He took this advice so seriously that he cancelled a proposed tour of the USA in order to concentrate on composition. Extremely grateful to Grieg for recommending him to several publishers, he later described the elder composer as 'my unforgettable patron'. Grieg also became an important influence on his musical style. During the same period he fell in love with the keyboard player Maria Oelze. When her father insisted that their relationship end, he returned to Leipzig in a state of mental collapse. In 1904 an illegitimate son was born to him by Henriete Kretzschmar, whose daughter, Minna, he married in 1910.

By 1903, most likely influenced by August Reinhard, Karg-Elert had begun to compose for the harmonium. August Robert Forberg's publication of Sechs Skizzen (1903), numbered as op.10 so that the pieces would not appear to be the work of an immature composer, unwittingly launched a tradition of unreliable opus numbers for Karg-Elert's works. Unprepared to publish any further harmonium compositions, Forberg recommended Karg-Elert to Carl Simon, who accepted additional pieces on the condition that the composer become familiar with the Kunstharmonium. This contingency was to alter the course of Karg-Elert's subsequent career: 'the Kunstharmonium, with its capacity for expressiveness, its wealth of differentiation of tone and its technical perfection became the instrument which met my highly strung artistic demands'. For the next ten years the instrument dominated his musical life, both as a composer and a performer. He gave his first Kunstharmonium concert in March 1906 and his first compositions for the organ were arrangements of harmonium works; these led him to write original works for the organ, bringing him to the attention of figures such as Max Reger and Karl Straube.

Virtually all of Karg-Elert's harmonium music and much of the rest of his output was written before World War I. In 1915 he enlisted in the 107th Infantry Regiment, but because of his musical reputation was not allowed to see active service. After failing to gain the position of organist at Berlin Cathedral in 1917, he underwent an artistic crisis. From 1912 he had been strongly influenced by contemporaries such as Debussy, Schoenberg and Skryabin. His study of orchestral repertory during the war, however, led him to regard the styles of these composers as 'fruitless artistic self-indulgence'. Embracing 'the purity of classical and romantic art' he destroyed about 20 works; as he later told Paul Schenk, he 'began again in C major, and prayed to the muse of melody'. After the war he succeeded Reger at the Leipzig Conservatory, but never gained a permanent post as organist.

From 1924 Karg-Elert gave weekly radio recitals on the harmonium from his home, not allowing the instrument to be moved to another location. His 50th birthday in 1927 was celebrated with concerts and radio broadcasts, including his own performance of the Second Harmonium Sonata (1909–12). His growing reputation in England culminated in the Karg-Elert Festival at the church of St Lawrence Jewry, London, in 1930. English support, however, caused a decline in his popularity in Germany, particularly as his modernist image collided with the developing political situation there. In 1926 he wrote to his English friend Godfrey Sceats, 'Because some of my works have French or English titles I am automatically an "Ungermann", someone to be boycotted … one is immediately dismissed as a Jew, traitor or Bolshevik'. Personal and financial circumstances led him to undertake a recital tour in the USA in 1932, but already in poor health the result was a musical disaster, variously described as 'utterly impossible' and 'total chaos'. He declined a post in Pittsburgh a year before his death.

2. WORKS. Karg-Elert was most successful as a composer when he was working within clear limitations. He tended to avoid sonata form and fugue in favour of an emphasis on timbre, and his large-scale structures have a tendency to sprawl, as in the first piano (1904) and Kunstharmonium (1905) sonatas. He was particularly successful in extended variation forms such as the passacaglia and chaconne. Though he experimented with atonality, a warmly chromatic musical language featuring lush harmonies and complex key relationships is more characteristic of his output.

Karg-Elert's most substantial body of works are his pieces for the harmonium and the organ. The harmonium offered a range of colours, the possibility for kaleidoscopic changes of registration, and 'expression' (see HARMONIUM) achieved by subtle variations in the amount of pressure applied to the instrument's pedals, qualities that appealed to his musical sensibility. Unlike French theorists such as René Vierne who believed that 'expression' should be used selectively, Karg-Elert identified the device as the 'soul' of the instrument. His earliest harmonium works, written for the four-rank instrument used by French composers, include the Passacaglia (1903–5), one of his most successful musical structures, the Partita (1905) and the Phantasie and Fugue (1905).

The Kunstharmonium provided Karg-Elert with a much greater range of colours and mechanical devices, and he exploited these to an extent not attempted by any other composer. Between 1905 and 1914 he produced numerous extended works as well as sets of shorter pieces. The Second Sonata (1909–12) is on an immense scale and can be considered his masterpiece for the instrument. The Third Sonatina (1906) and the second of the Orchestrale Konzertstudien (1907) are also notable. Of the shorter pieces, the eight Konzertstücke (1905–6) deploy all the possibilities of the instrument: the central section of no.6 'Capricietto' features 17 changes of registration in 29 bars. The seven Idyllen (*c*1914) contain some of his most daring experiments with Expressionism and atonality.

Though he continued to play the harmonium and to advocate its use, Karg-Elert only published two sets of short pieces and a second book of Portraits for the instrument after World War I. With the exception of those pieces arranged for the organ, his music for the harmonium fell into obscurity until the revival of interest in the instrument as part of the performing practice movement in the late 20th century. In contrast, his organ music – which can be divided into three main periods: up to 1914, 1921–4, and from 1930 onwards – continued to hold a prominent place in the repertory.

Although encouraged and influenced by Reger, Karg-Elert's earliest works for the organ reflect the inspiration of J.S. Bach. He was proud to assert that each piece of op.65 (66 Choral-Improvisationen) had 'its own appropriate type of form – Trio, Sarabande, Ciacona, Canon ... etc'. The best-known, Nun danket alle Gott, is a triumphal march and trio, while O Lamm Gottes, unschuldig is a strict canon at the 7th. Pastels from the Lake of Constance and Cathedral Windows, Impressionistic works based on Gregorian chant melodies, were composed in the 1920s. Later he became interested in 'Werkprinzip' organs and his music became more abstract. The most significant pieces from his last compositional phase are the Symphony (1930) and the Music for Organ (1931). His final completed work, the Passacaglia and Fugue on BACH (1931), is based largely on the first movement of the Second Harmonium Sonata.

Although he began his career as a pianist, Karg-Elert's piano music has not established a place in the repertory. Much of it is technically demanding, although the Sonatinas (1909) and Mosaik (1933) are in a lighter, more accessible style. The Third Sonata (1914–20) is a single movement that generates its momentum through repeated rhythmic figures. Unlike anything else in his output, it echoes the sonatas of Skryabin. His transcriptions of Elgar and Dvořák (1908–14) are impressive in transferring a great deal of orchestral detail to the piano, but their tremendous technical difficulty places them out of the reach of most performers.

Unfortunately, much of the remainder of Karg-Elert's output, particularly his chamber music has been neglected. The works for wind instruments largely date from his years of military service. His interest in Schoenberg is apparent in the Suite pointillistique (1919), in which the second movement is entitled 'Der kranke Mond', one of the poems set in Pierrot lunaire. During the 1920s he apparently worked on a number of chamber works, but they were not published and may be lost. His songs owe much to the style of Robert Schumann and Robert Franz.

WORKS

(selective list)

see Gerlach and Kaupenjohann (1984) for more complete list works without opus numbers reflect Gerlach's numbering system

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Sinfonia brevis, F, op.1, 1897, unpubd; Pf Conc. no.1, d, op.6, 1900, unpubd; Suite, op.21, 1902 [after Bizet: Jeux d'enfants]; Pf Conc. no.2, D♭, WOO 21, 1913, unpubd; Deutsche Helden, sym. march, WOO 29, wind, 1915; Kammersinfonietta, A, chbr orch, WOO 44, 1918–19, unpubd

Chbr: Trio, d, op.49, ob, eng hn, cl, 1902; Qnt, c, op.30, ob, 2 cl, hn, bn, 1904; Sonata, A, op.71, vc, pf, 1907–8; 10 Leichte Charakterstudien, op.90, 2 vn, 1911–12, nos.1, 3, 4, 7, 8, arr. 2 vn, pf as Divertimento, op.90b, 1920; Little Sonata, C, op.68, vn, pf, 1914; Sinfonische Kanzone, E♭, op.114, fl, pf, 1917; Sonata, B♭, op.121, fl, pf, 1918, rev. as Trio Buccolico, op.121b, fl, vn, pf, 1918–25; Impressions exotiques, op.134, fl + pic, pf, 1919; Suite pointillistique, op.135, fl, pf, 1919; Jugend, op.139, fl, cl, hn, pf, 1919, arr. cl/va, pf as Sonata no.2, op.139b; 8 Pieces, op.112, vn, pf, 1922

Solo: Etüden-schule, op.41, ob/eng hn, 1905; Partita, D, op.89, vn, 1910; Sonata no.1, e, op.88, vn, 1910; Sonata appassionata, f♯, op.140, fl, 1917; 30 Capricien 'Gradus ad Parnassum', op.107, fl, 1918–19; Sonata c♯, op.110, cl, 1924; 25 Capricien und Sonate, op.153, sax, 1929

VOCAL

Acc. choral: Pfingst-Motette, op.60, solo vv, 8vv, org, 1909, unpubd; Bs, op.82/1, chorus, vn, hp, org, 1912; Vom Himmel hoch, chorale canzone, op.82/2, chorus, vn, org, 1912; Nearer, my God to Thee, canzone, op.81, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1913; Die Grablegung Christi, passion canzone, op.84, S, chorus, ob, eng hn, org, 1913; 2 Hymns (R. Tagore), WOO 47, A/B, chorus, orch/(a fl, hmn, pf), 1920, unpubd; Ps i, WOO 63, 1v, chorus, org/orch, 1922, unpubd; Mass, b, WOO 64, solo vv, chorus, orch, org, 1923–7, unfinished, unpubd

Unacc. choral: 4 Männerchöre, op.55, 1907; 15 geistliche Frauenchöre, op.44, 3–4vv, 1908; Das christliche Kirchenjahr, WOO 11, 1909; Triumph, op.79, 1912; Requiem aeternam, op.109, 8–12vv, 1913; Die Verhüllten (R. Dehmel), WOO 24, 4–8 male vv, 1914, unpubd; 2 Männerchöre, WOO 30, 1915; 6 Frauenchöre, op.59, 1920

Lieder: 8 Lieder (J. Uhland, T. Storm, F. v. Bodenstedt, A. Trager, A. Christen), op.11, 1898–1900; Stimmen und Betrachtungen (J. Mosen, K. Müller, H. Heine), op.53, 1905; An mein Weib (R.

Dehmel, F. Rückert, T. Schäfer, M. Itzerott, K. Müller, E. Rittershaus), op.54, 1906; 10 Epigramme (G. Lessing), op.54, 1907; 10 Impressionen und Gedichte (A. v. Wegerer), bk 1: 3 Rosenlieder, bk 2: 5 Gedichte, bk 3: 2 Madrigale, 1907–8; 6 Lieder im Volkston (Dehmel), op.111, 1914; other Lieder on texts by Dehmel, Lessing, Ritter, Rückert, Schuler and Uhland and others, 1900–22

HARMONIUM

Hmn: Passacaglia, e♭, op.25, 4-rank hmn, 1903–5, arr. org, 1905–7; 6 Skizzen, op.10, 4-rank hmn, 1903; Improvisation (Ostinato und kleine Fuge), E, op.34, 4-rank hmn, 1905, arr. org; 5 Monologe, op.33, 4-rank hmn, 1905, no.4 arr. org; Partita, D, op.37, 4-rank hmn, 1905, movts 1, 3, 4, arr. org, 1906–11; Phantasie and Fugue, D, op.39, 4-rank hmn, 1905, arr. org

Kunsthmn: 5 Aquarellen, op.27, 1905, arr. org; 8 Konzertstucke, op.26, 1905–6, nos.1, 4, 6, 7 arr. hmn, pf; Sonata no.1, b, op.36, 1905, 2nd movt arr. org; 3 Sonatinas, G, e, a, op.14, 1906; Scènes Pittoresques, op.31, 1906, nos.1 and 6 arr. hmn/pf; Silhoutten, op.29, hmn/pf, 1906; Leichte Duos (T. v. Obendorff), c, WOO 7, hmn/pf, 1906; Madrigale, op.42, 1906; 2 Orchestrale Konzertstudien, op.70, 1907; Poesien, op.35, hmn/pf, 1907; Renaissance, op.57, 1907, rev. 1917; 5 Miniaturen, op.9, 1908, rev. 1918; Sonata no.2, b♭, op.46, 1909–12, 2 movt arr. org, 1911; Intarsien, op.76, 1911; Funerale, WOO 18, 1912; Die hohe Schule des Ligatospiels, op.94, hmn/pf, 1912; Ersten grundlegende Studien, op.93, 1913; Gradus ad Parnassum, op.95, 138 arrs., 1913–14; Portraits 'von Palestrina bis Schoenberg', 33 pieces, op.101, 1913–23; 12 Impressionen, op.102, 1914; 6 Romantische Stücke (Impressionen aus dem Reisengebirge), op.103, suction hmn, 1914; Schule für Hmn, op.99, 1915; Tröstungen Innere Stimmen, op.58, 1918–19; Tröstungen (8 religiöse Stimmungsbilder), op.47, 1918; Innere Stimmen, op.58, 1918–19; arrs of works by other composers, incl. 3 vols. of works by Wagner (1914)

ORGAN

Solo: Sequenz no.1, a, WOO 8, 1908; 66 Choral-Improvisationen, op.65, 1908–10; 3 Impressions, op.72, 1909; Sonatina, a, op.74, 1909; Sequenz no.2, c, WOO 12, 1910; 4 Diverse pieces, op.75/1, 1910–11; 10 charakteristische Tonstücke, op.86, 1911; 17 kleine Charakterstücke, WOO 13, 1911; 3 Pastels, op.92, 1911; 4 Chorale Improvisations, WOO 16, 1912; 20 Prae- und Postludien, op.78, 1912; [22] Pedalstudien, op.83, 1913; Homage to Handel, op.75/2, 1914; 7 Pastels from the Lake of Constance, op.96, 1921; Cathedral Windows, op.106, 1923; 3 Impressions, op.108, 1923; Partita no.1, E, op.100, 1924; Kaleidoscope, e/E, op.144, 1930; 3 Pieces (3 New Impressions), op.142/2, 1930; Sym., f♯, op.143, 1930; Triptych, op.141, 1930; Music for Org, op.145, 1931; Partita retrospettiva III, op.151, 1931–2; Passacaglia and Fugue on BACH, op.150, 1931 [based on op.46/1]; Sempre semplice, op.142/2, 1931 [arr. of hmn pieces]; Rondo alla campanella, a, op.156, 1932; arrs. of works by other composers, arrs. of hmn works

With vv or insts: Chaconne and Fugue Trilogy, op.73, B, org, perc, 1908; 3 sinfonische Kanzone: op.85/1, org, opt. brass, op.85/3, 1v, female chorus, vn, org, 1910; 3 sinfonische Chorale: op.87/3, 1v obbl, vn, org, 1911

PIANO

Reisebilder, op.7, 1895–1911; Arabeske no.1 'Filigran', G♭, op.5, 1900; 3 Caprices, op.16, 4 hands, 1900; Variations on a Theme of Brahms 'Verrat', op.8, 1902, unpubd; 5 Bagatelles, op.17, 1902; 2 Konzertetüden, op.22, 1902; Walzerszenen 'Carneval', op.45, 1902; Aus dem Norden, op.18, 1903; 4 Pieces, op.23, 1903; Skandinavische Weisen, op.28, 1903; 7 charakteristische Stücke, op.43, 1903; Sonata no.1, f♯, op.50, 1904, rev. as op.50b, 1920, unpubd; Dekameron, op.69, 10 teaching pieces, 1904; Aphorismen, op.51, 1905; Aus meiner Schwabenheimat, op.38, 1906; Sonata no.2, b♭, op.80, 1907, lost; 3 Sonatinas, G, a, e, op.67, 1909; 9 poetische Bagatellen, op.77, 1911; Nächtlicher Regen, WOO 19, 1912; Zwielicht-Impressionen, WOO 20, 3 pieces, 1913; Sonata no.3 'Patetica', c♯, op.105, 1914–20; Romantische Studien, WOO 35, 1916, unpubd; Hohburgiana, WOO 36, 1916, unpubd; Exotische Rhapsodie (Dschungel Impressionen), op.118, 1917; Hexameron, op.97/1, 1920; Heidebilder, op.127, 1920; Schwere Düfte, WOO 48, 1920; Partita, g, op.113, 1922; Patina, op.64/1, 1923; Mosaik, op.146, 29 teaching pieces, 1933; arrs. of works by other composers incl. Dvořák: Sym., G, op.88, 1908; Elgar: Sym. no.1, 1909; Sym. no.2, 1912; Falstaff, 1914, unpubd; Duos with hmn

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Kistner, Leuckart, Novello, OUP, Pantheon, Peters, Schmidt, Simon, Zimmermann

WRITINGS

'Das Harmonium und die Hausmusik', Rheinische Musik- und Theaterzeitung, vii/40 (1906); repr. in ZI, xxvii (1906–7), 929–31

Die Kunst des Registrierens, op.91 (Berlin, 1911–14) [harmonium treatise]

Das Problem der künstlerischen Transmission der Orgel (MS, 1911–13)

Vergleichende Orgel-Dispositionen (MS, 1913–14)

Die Grundlagen der Musiktheorie (Leipzig, 1922)

Akustische Ton-, Klang-, und Funktionsbestimmung (Leipzig, 1930)

Polaristische Klang- und Tonalitätslehre (Leipzig, 1931)

Numerous brochures on harmonium models, registration etc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Rupp: 'Sigfrid Karg-Elert und das Harmonium', Rheinische Musik- und Theaterzeitung, ix (1908)

A. Hull: 'Sigfrid Karg-Elert', MT, liv (1913), 89, 161

K. Beringer: 'Karg-Elert als Orgel-Komponist', Neue Musik-Zeitung, xxxviii (1917), 103–6

P. Schenk: Sigfrid Karg-Elert: eine monographische Skizze mit vollständigem Werkverzeichnis (Leipzig, 1927)

G. Sceats: The Organ Works of Karg-Elert (London, 1948, 2/1950)

P. Schenk: 'Karg-Elerts polaristische Harmonielehre', Beiträge zur Musiktheorie des 19. Jahrhunderts (Regensburg, 1966), 133–62

W. Stockmeier: 'Sigfrid Karg-Elert und wir', Musica sacra [Regensburg], lxxxvii (1967), 319–20

S. Young: The Organ Works of Sigfrid Karg-Elert (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1968)

W. Kwasnick: Sigfrid Karg-Elert: sein Leben und Werk in heutiger Sicht (Westerwald, 1971)

S. Gerlach and R. Kaupenjohann: Sigfrid Karg-Elert: Werkverzeichnis sämtlicher Werke (Frankfurt, 1984)

G. Hartmann: Die Orgelwerke von Sigfrid Karg-Elert (diss., U. of Berlin, 1985)

A. Hayden: 'Karg-Elert and the Art of Registration', MT, cxxviii (1987) 649, 651, 653

F. Conley: The Harmonium and its Music, with Special Reference to the Music of Sigfrid Karg-Elert (diss., U. of Sheffield, 1995)

H. Fabrikant, ed.: The Harmony of the Soul: Sigfrid Karg-Elert's Letters 'to his Australian Friends' (Lenswood, 1996)

FRANK CONLEY

Karges [Carges], Wilhelm (b ?Berlin, 1613 or 1614; d Berlin, 27 Nov 1699). German composer and organist. Through visits to Hamburg and Lübeck he came into contact with the Sweelinck-influenced north German school of organists. For a time he was assistant to Andreas Düben (i) at the German Church (St Gertrud), Stockholm. In 1645 he was in Königsberg to attend the marriage of the daughter of the Elector Georg Wilhelm to Duke Jakob of Courland. On 28 January 1646 he was appointed chamber musician and composer at the court of the Elector Friedrich Wilhelm of Brandenburg in Berlin, and it may have been at about this time that he took up the post of cathedral organist there. Owing to poor eyesight he was relieved of some of his court duties in 1668, and in the 1670s and 1680s he had several assistants in his cathedral duties. He was by this time an organist of great repute in Berlin and in 1683 his salary was nearly doubled.

Few of Karges's compositions survive; those that do are all short pieces for a small organ, and one or two are doubtful. Three pieces in one source (ed. in Organum, 4th ser., xxi) include a Fantasia in D minor dated 13 July 1664 (D-Bsb). The other three surviving pieces are variations on chorale melodies after the manner of Sweelinck (Bsb; edns in 20 Choralvariationen der deutschen Sweelinckschule, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke, i, Kassel, 1953, and Choralbearbeitungen und freie Orgelstücke der deutschen Sweelinck-Schule, ed. idem, i, Kassel, 1954–5). Two of these pieces are attributed to 'M.W.C.B.M.', which has been interpreted as 'Magister Wilhelmus Carges Berolinensis Marchicus'; one is dated 1628. The third piece was copied about 1630 and is attributed to 'W. Karges'. These are therefore either very early pieces by Karges or by an older composer of the same name, the first two being adapted by Karges – hence the distinguishing added initials 'B.M.'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ApelG
C. Sachs: Musik und Oper am kurbrandenburgischen Hof (Berlin, 1910/R), 164ff
M. Reimann: 'Pasticcios und Parodien in norddeutschen Klaviertabulaturen', Mf, viii (1955), 265–71
M. Reimann: 'Wilhelm Karges und die Tabulatur des Grafen Lynar', Mf, xi (1958), 195–8
L. Schierning: Die Überlieferung der deutschen Orgel- und Klaviermusik aus der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1961)
D. Teepe: Die Entwicklung der Fantasie für Tasteninstrumente im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert (Kassel, 1990)

GWILYM BEECHEY

Kargl [Kärgl], Sixt. See KARGEL, SIXT.

Karkoff, Ingvar (Rolf Mikael) (b Stockholm, 14 Sept 1958). Swedish composer. He is the son of the composer Maurice Karkoff. Following private studies in orchestration and counterpoint aged 16, and playing in different genres on various instruments, he studied composition with Bucht and electro-acoustic music with Lindgren at the Royal Danish Conservatory in Copenhagen from 1978 to 1982. He also took lessons with Ferneyhough. He gave instruction in ear training at the Edsbergs Musikinstitut from 1985 to 1987 and in orchestration and theory, first at the Stockholms Musikpedagogiska Institut and then, from 1986 to 1992, at the Royal College of Music in Stockholm. Since 1992 he has also been programme host on Swedish Radio and a writer on music for the newspaper Dagens nyheter. His music is sharp in detail and finely polished in the manner of chamber music (his orchestral music included), but many works appear fragmentary, with emphasis on the moment and allusions to earlier music (especially that of the Romantic period) and to non-European music. Of his piece Svävan he has said, 'Notes sing themselves in and out of each other, melody is created via harmonic intersections between the instruments, like the meshes in a net' – an observation applicable to many of his works. His rhythms tend to be equally flexible and rhapsodic. Fenix (1992–3) was written for the 75th anniversary of the Royal Stockholm PO. Symphony no.1 (1994–5) recalls the ardent, concentrated music of Allan Pettersson.

WORKS

Stage: Enhörningen [The Unicorn], ballet, 1985; Ola och handklaveret [Ola and the Accordion] (L. Forssell), 1987
Orch: Texture, 1977–8; Process, wind orch, 1979–80; Pf Conc. 'Den himmelska fågeln' [The Celestial Bird], str orch, 1986; Ora, 1986–7; Nostalgia, 1988–9; Fl Conc., fl/a fl, str orch, 1989; Cirkusdanser, jazz big band, 1989; 5 Easy Pieces, small orch, 1989–90; 3 Orch Movts, 1989–91; Double Conc., fl/a fl, vn, 1989, rev. 1994; Molnet [The Cloud] (after E.J. Stagnelius), brass band, 1990; Intermezzo: 'Stjärnskuggor' [Star Shadows], str orch, 1991; Oregon, 1992; Fenix, 1992–3; Sym. no.1, 1994–5; Carnavalito, chbr orch, 1995; Mand Conc., chbr orch, 1996; Tpt Conc., 1998
Chbr: Con intensita, 2 vn, 1978; As the Wind Blows, ob, 1978; Tomorrow No One Knows, fl/pic, a fl, s sax, bn, 2 gui, pf, db, 4 perc, tape, 1978–9; Rytmer, drum set, tape, 1982–3; Repriser, wind qnt, live elec, 1984; 4 stycken, lute, gui, 1985; 4 stycken, fl, vc, 1985; Canon à 8 voci, 2 pf, 2 vn, 2 vc, 1986; Str Qt no.1, 1987; Ricercare, sax qt, 1988; Conc., a sax, perc, 1988; Svävan [The Hover], fl/a fl, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, perc, 1988–9; 3 Pf Pieces, 1989; Nattstycken, a fl, hp, 1989; Suite, a sax, gui, 1989, rev. 1993; Suite, fl/a fl, gui, 1989, rev. 1990; [3] Meditationer, fl, hpd, 1989–92, arr. a sax/cl/a fl/va, pf; 2 danses exotiques, wind, 1990; Madrigale, sax, pf, 1990; Chant, lek och epilog, wind qnt, str qnt, 1990–91; Corde illuminate, pf, 1991; Epitaf, eng hn/ob, hp, 1993; Parad, 8 wind, perc, 1993; A Siberian Tune, fl, 1994; A Siberian Tune II, vc, pf, 1994, rev. 1996; Drömspel, vc, pf, 1994; Drömspel II, vn, pf, 1994, rev. 1995; Ceremonia angelica, 13 brass, timp, perc, 1995; Fantasia, vc, va, 1996; Canzona, pf trio, 1997; Pf Trio, 1997; Tango Ginestra, str qt, 1997; Str Qt no.2 'Fiddle Music', 1997
Choral: Super flumina Babylonis (Bible: Pss), 8-pt SATB, 1977; Molnet [The Cloud] (Stagnelius), SATB, 1990; Ödet och slumpen [Destiny and Chance] (Stagnelius), solo v, male choir/SATB, 1990; Vid havet [At the Seaside] (P. Lagerkvist), large SATB chorus, large wind orch, 1996
Other vocal: Jag lyssnar till vinden [I listen to the wind] (Lagerkvist), S, fl, 1977, rev. 1990; 2 sånger (Lagerkvist, anon. Jap. song), A, va, 1977, rev. 1979; Canon in 8 Pts (syllabic), A, a fl, va, vc, pf, 1986; Sömn och tomhet [Sleep and Emptiness] (G. Ekelöf), Mez, a fl, elec gui, perc, 1994; Quechua-sånger (trad., trans. S. Cedering), S, fl, vc, pf, 1995; Elden jag tände [The Fire I Lit] (trad., trans. Cedering), S, pf trio, 1996; Insekterna [The Insects] (D. Alonzo), S, pf trio, 1996
El-ac: Kill Him, 1980; Hundarna [The Dogs], 1981; The Bells, 1981

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Kristersson: 'Musik måste vara självutlämnande', Nutida musik, xxxi/6 (1987–8), 32–5 [on Ora]
J. Jeverud: 'Med omsorg om dealjen', Nutida musik, xxxii/2 (1988–9), 14–15 [on Sax Conc. and Variations on Gujarati]
H.-G. Peterson: '... kan det smärtorna fördela', Nutida musik, xl/3 (1997), 38–48 [on Sym. no.1]
I. Karkoff: Elektronisk resurs (Stockholm, 1998)

ROLF HAGLUND

Karkoff, Maurice (Ingvar) (b Stockholm, 17 March 1927). Swedish composer and teacher. He studied at the Stockholm Musikhögskolan (1945, 1948–53); his teachers included Larsson, Blomdahl, Erland von Koch, Holmboe, Jolivet and Vogel. Assistant music critic of the Stockholms-tidningen (1962–6), he was appointed in 1965 to teach theory and composition at the Stockholm training college for music teachers. He became a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1977 and received Litteris et Artibus in 1993. In his music he broke away in the 1950s from his Swedish contemporaries, enthusiastically experimenting with a wide range of new forms and techniques. However, his work is essentially Romantic, lightly orchestrated and with an expressive melodic style. After the turning-point of the Variations for orchestra (1961), he found a new sense of freedom in the ensuing decade with his discovery of oriental rhythms and harmonies. Many works show his involvement with contemporary social and political issues: Epitafium (1968), for example, was the result of visits to the Czech cemeteries for Jewish victims of the Nazis. Other pieces, notably the solo songs, have a sophisticated lyrical concentration. Karkoff has also written a good deal of valued educational music for the piano and for chorus.

WORKS
(selective list)

Chbr op: Gränskibbutzen [The Border Kibbutz], op.115, 1972–3
12 Syms., incl. no.3 (Sinfonia breve), op.38, 1958–9, no.6, op.117, 1972–3, rev. 1975, no.7 (Sinfonia da camera), op.128, 1974–5; no.8, op.145, 1980, no.9 (Dolorous Sym.), op.149, 1982, no.10, op.158, 1984–5, no.11 (Sinfonia della vita), op.202, 1993–4, no.12 (Sinfonia semplice), op.206, 1994–8
Other orch: Vc Conc., op.31, 1957–60; Variations, op.58, 1961; 7 pezzi, op.63, 1962; Suite, op.67, str, hpd, 1962; Vision, op.79, 1965–6; Sym. reflexioner, op.110, 1971; Concertino, op.125, ob, perc, str orch, 1974–5; Tre colori, op.142, str orch, 1978; Musica

seria, op.146, fl, cl, str; A Short Sym., op.147, sym. band, 1981; Liten symfoni [Small Sym.], op.162, 1987; Fantasia (Poema), op.166, 1988; Bn Conc., op.175, str, 1990; Tuba Conc., op.184, str, 1991; Concertino lirico, op.197, fl, grande, str, 1992

Choral: Sju rosor senare [7 Roses Later] (cant., after P. Celan), op.73, spkr, chorus, orch, 1964–5; Stark är Herren (Pss), op.163, SATB, 1988; Ljus och mörker [Light and Darkness] (cant., T. Tranströmer), op.189, SATB, fl, perc, 1991; Evig morgon [Eternal Morning] (P. Lagerkvist, B. Setterlind), op.194, SATB, 1992–3; other cants., *c*200 pieces for amateurs

Chbr and solo inst: Kärlekens vandring [Love's Wandering] (R. Tagore), T, pf, op.64, 1962; Epitafium, op.93, 9 insts/small orch, 1968; Quattro parti, op.94, 13 wind, perc, 1968; 4 momenti, op.106, vn, pf, 1970; Karaktärer, op.118, wind, perc, 1973–4; 3 nokturner, op.122, pf, 1974; Kammarkonsert 2 från 803, op.120, 17 wind insts, 2 perc, 1974; Quasi una marcia, op.123, double wind qnt, perc, 1974; Miniatyrsvit, vn, op.126, 1975; Svit, bn, op.127, 1975; Riflessioni, org, op.130, 1975; Ballata, intermezzo e leggenda, op.152, pf, 1983; Musica solenne, op.153, vc, 1983; Ernst und Spass, op.156, sax qt, 1984; Poem, op.165, a sax, pf, 1988; Poem, op.166, va/vc, pf, 1988; Kleine Musik, op.187, eng hn, t sax, 1991; Fantasia, op.193, pf left hand, 1992; The Lord is my Shepherd, op.196c, fl/s sax, 1992; Musica rituale, op.201, a fl, va, eng hn, a sax, 1993; September 1994, op.205, pf left hand, 1994; Dreamvisions (Fantasy on a Fantasy), op.207, pf, 1996; Contemplations, op.210, a sax, pf, 1996; Divertimento, op.211, a sax, bar sax, 1997

Solo vocal: 10 japanska årstidsbilder, op.62, Bar, pf, 1961–9; 6 kinesiska impressioner, op.116, 1v, ens, 1973; Varsel och aningar, op.129, T, 7 wind insts, perc, 1975; 4 indiska kärlekssånger, op.133, S, 3 fl, perc, 1976; [8] Luce e dolore (various authors), op.140, A, pf, 1978; [7] Voices from the Past (Korean poems), op.148, A/Bar, str orch, 1981; [9] Skuggspel, klara vatten [Shadow-Plays, Limpid Waters] (Chin. poems), op.173, 1v, pf, 1990; [5] Glühende Rätsel (N. Sachs), op.177, A/Mez, pf, 1990; Jag vill gärna [I Will] (K. Boye), op.174b, high v, pf, 1990, rev. 1992; [5] Early Summer (Chin. poems), op.179, Mez/Bar, pf, 1991; [5] Flykt och förvandling [Escape and Transformation] (Boye, E. Grave, Sachs), op.212, high S, pf, 1997; Jag såg dina fotspår [I saw your footsteps] (G. Ekelöf), op.213, 1v, recit, a cl, 1997; over 200 songs with pf, orch songs

Principal publisher: Da Capo, Gehrman, Suecia, Swedish Music Information Centre

WRITINGS

with others: 'Fyra unga om sin musikuppfattning' [4 young people on their appreciation of music], Nutida musik, ii/1 (1958–9), 8–13, esp. 10–11

'Synpunkter på körmusik' [Views on choral music], Musiklivet – Vår sång, xxxv/2 (1962), 26

'Vändpunkten i mitt musikaliska skapande' [The turning-point in my composition], Vintergatan (1965), 39

'Okuvlig instinkt driver mig att berätta i toner' [Irrepressible instinct drives me to speak in music], Konsertnytt, i/1 (1965–6), 17

'Den svenske tonsättarens situation', Nutida musik, xiv/2 (1970–71)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Reimers: 'Maurice Karkoffs Symfoni nr 4', Nutida musik, vii/5 (1963–4), 61–2

H. Connor: Samtal med tonsättare [Conversation with composers] (Stockholm, 1971)

L. Fischbach: 'Maurice Karkoffs opus', Musikrevy, xxx (1975), 192–6 [list of works with commentary]

L. Hedwall: 'Maurice Karkoffs 80-tal', Musikrevy, xlvi (1991), 143–8

ROLF HAGLUND

Karkoschka, Erhard (b Mährisch Ostrau [now Ostrava, Czech Republic], 6 March 1923). German composer and musicologist. He studied at the Stuttgart Musikhochschule (1947–53) under Karl Marx (composition) and Gustav Koslik (conducting), and at the University of Tübingen (1956–9), where his teachers included Georg Reichert (musicology) and Walter Gerstenburg (philosophy, comparative religion). He graduated from the latter in 1959 with a dissertation on Webern's early compositional techniques. In 1958 he returned to the Stuttgart Musikhochschule as a lecturer in music theory and composition. He became professor there in 1964, a post he held until 1996. He founded the Ensemble Neue Musik at the Musikhochschule in 1963 and the Studio für Elektronische Musik in 1973, remaining its director until 1989. He also served as a council member of the Institut für Neue Musik und Musikerziehung, Darmstadt (1962–70) and was president of the Gesellschaft für Neue Musik, the Federal German section of ISCM (1974–80). He became a member of the Akademie der Freien Künste Mannheim in 1987.

The primary concern of Karkoschka's music is to present musical time as a structural phenomenon. He attempts to realize this principle in almost every work and to expound upon it in his writings. While these are primarily addressed to academic readers, his 'audio-scores' (Hörpartituren) such as that of Vierstufen (1965), present many of the same ideas visually to less musically knowledgeable audiences.

Karkoscha never fully accepted the serial techniques of the 1950s, although serial thinking has infiltrated some of his compositions. His abiding insistence on clearly comprehensible and assimilable forms is evidence of his belief in direct musical communication.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Orpheus? Oder Hadeshöhe (chbr op), 1993

Orch: Kleines Konzert, vn, chbr orch, 1955; Polyphone Studie in 2 Stufen, 1957; 4 Stufen, 1965; Teleologies, 1978; Entfalten, 4 soloists, orch, 1982; Kammermusik, 1983; Unterwegs 'Zwischen 2 Schubert-Ländlern', 1994

Vocal: Versuch für alle (Karkoschka), 2 vocal qts, orch, audience, 1969; Nach Paul Celan, spkr, 6 insts, 1988; Variationen mit Celan Gedichten: I, Bar, pf, 1996; II, children's chorus, 1996; III, unacc. chorus, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Bewegungsstrukturen, 2 pf, 1960; Quattrologe, str qt, 1964; Triptychon über B–A–C–H, org, 1966–7; Antinomie, wind qnt, 1968–9; Szene im Schlagzeug, perc, 1970; Tempora mutantur, str qt, 1971; Desideratio mortis, org, 1985; Aramizdaki köprü, gui, 1987; Bläsergedichte, wind qnt, 1988; Zeitvariation, vc, 1993; In quarto 'Papafrebe', rec qt, perc, 1995

El-ac: LSD, elec, 1973; Allklang 'Musik-Himmels-Theater für ein Planetarium', tape, 1978; Dialog, bn, elec, 1982; Zeitmosaik, elec, 1985; Klangzeitspektakel, str qt, cptr, slides, 1988, collab. T. Arns [from Skiptogramm by K. Leonhard]

Other works: Komponiere selbst! 'Ein Baukasten aus Klang-, Zeit-, Raum- und Bewegungselementen,' 1972

Principal publishers: Ahn & Simrock, Ariadne, Bärenreiter, Gravis, Moeck, Tonos, Universal

WRITINGS

'Zum Terminus "strukturell"', Terminologie der neue Musik (Berlin, 1965), 70–82

Das Schriftbild der neuen Musik (Celle, Lower Saxony, 1966)

'Zur musikalischen Form und Formanalyse', Probleme des musiktheoretischen Unterrichts (Berlin, 1967), 40–63

'Einige Aspekte, musikalische Zeit zu komponieren', Musik als Schöpfung und Geschichte (Laaber, Bavaria, 1989), 151–85

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Dahlhaus: 'Erhard Karkoschka und die Dialektik der musikalischen Form', Melos, xl/2 (1973), 78–81

STEFAN FRICKE

Karłowicz, Jan. See under KARŁOWICZ, MIECZYSŁAW.

Karłowicz, Mieczysław (b Wiszniew, Święcany district, Lithuania, 11 Dec 1876; d nr Zakopane, Tatra Mountains, 8 Feb 1909). Polish composer. He was the son of the philologist and ethnographer Jan Karłowicz (b Subortowicze, Troki district, Lithuania, 28 May 1836; d Warsaw, 14 June 1903), who translated works of music theory, wrote (in English) Project of a New Way of Writing Musical Notes (Warsaw, 1876) and articles on Polish folk music, and composed songs, piano music and pieces for cello.

Mieczysław's nomadic childhood, the result of his father's ambition to study in various European cities, meant that he received academic and musical education in Heidelberg (1882), Prague (1885) and Dresden (1886) before the family settled in Warsaw in 1887. There he received violin lessons with Stanisław Barcewicz (1858–1929) and composition lessons with Gustaw Roguski (1839–1921) before going to Berlin, where he studied composition with Heinrich Urban (1837–1901) from 1895 to 1901. During this period he composed about 25 songs (17 of which were published as opp.1, 3 and 4). His instrumental works of this time are the Serenade for string orchestra (1897); Bianca da Molena ('Bianca from Molena', 1900), a symphonic prologue and intermezzo to the drama Biała Gołąbka ('The White Dove') by Jozafat Nowiński; the programmatic Symfonie odrodzenie ('Rebirth Symphony', begun ?1900 and completed in 1902); and the Violin Concerto in A major (1902).

On his return to Warsaw he became actively involved in musical life through his membership of the Warsaw Music Society, which organized concerts and published music and musicological literature. In 1904 the Society published Karłowicz's Nie wydane dotychczas pamiątki po Chopinie ('Previously Unpublished Memorabilia of Chopin'). Throughout his short career he published his own works and conducted them in Berlin, Vienna and Warsaw. However, his relationship with the Polish musical establishment was strained as is evident from his correspondence and polemics in the Warsaw press.

Karłowicz's reputation as a significant composer in Polish music history rests on the six programmatic orchestral works: Powracające fale ('Returning Waves', 1903–4), the triptych Odwieczne pieśni ('Eternal Songs', 1904–6), Rapsodia litewska ('Lithuanian Rhapsody', 1906), Stanisław i Anna Oświecimowie ('Stanisław and Anna of Oświęcim', 1907), Smutna opowieść ('A Sorrowful Tale', 1908) and the sketch Epizod na maskaradzie ('Episode at the Masquerade', 1908–9), which was completed in 1913 by Grzegorz Fitelberg (a recording was made with Fitelberg conducting).

In both technique and aesthetics Karłowicz was a neoromantic epigone. His symphonic poems, apart from Lithuanian Rhapsody, which quotes Lithuanian and Belarusian folktunes, are heavily indebted to Wagner and Richard Strauss in respect of orchestral polyphony, harmonic and melodic language, and orchestration. His earlier instrumental works show frequent Tchaikovskian gestures. Stanisław and Anna of Oświęcim is undoubtedly the best orchestral work of the Młoda Polska ('Young Poland') period (*c*1898–1914). The philosophical pessimism of Nietzsche and Schopenhauer which informed the literature and artistic culture of the Polish fin-de-siècle is to be found in the programmes of Karłowicz's orchestral works and in many of his songs, ten of which are settings of words by Kazimierz Tetmajer (1865–1940), an eminent Young Poland poet.

Karłowicz's name is frequently associated with the group of composers known as Młoda Polska w muzyce ('Young Poland in Music'): Fitelberg, Ludomir Różycki, Karol Szymanowski and Apolinary Szeluto. In 1905, at the instigation of Fitelberg and Różycki in Berlin, they formed themselves into Spółka Nakładowa Młodych Kompozytorów Polskich ('The Young Polish Composers' Publishing Company'). Karłowicz operated independently of this group. However, in ideological and practical terms, Karłowicz and Young Poland in Music embraced the modernism of late 19th-century European music and thus challenged the prevailing conservative nationalism of their forebears.

WORKS

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Serenade, C, str, op.2, 1897 (Berlin, 1897); Bianca da Molena [Bianca from Molena] (incid music to J. Nowiński: Biała Gołąbka [The White Dove]), sym. prol and int, op.6, 1899–1900, ed. (Kraków, 1953); Symfonie odrodzenie [Rebirth Symphony], e, op.7, ?1900–02, ed. (Kraków, 1993); Vn Conc., A, op.8, 1902 (Berlin, 1906); Powracające fale [Returning Waves], sym. poem, op.9, 1903–4 (Berlin, 1907); Odwieczne pieśni: Pieśn o wiekuistej tęsknocie, Pieśn o miłości i o śmierci, Pieśń o wszechbycie [Eternal Songs: Song of Eternal Longing, Song of Love and Death, Song of Eternity], sym. poem, 3 movts, op.10, 1904–6 (Kraków, 1908); Rapsodia litewska [Lithuanian Rhapsody], op.11, 1906 (Warsaw, 1909); Stanisław i Anna Oświecimowie [Stanisław and Anna of Oświęcim], sym. poem, op.12, 1907 (Warsaw, 1912); Smutna opowieść (Preludia do wieczności) [A Sorrowful Tale (Preludes to Eternity)], sym. poem, op.13, 1908 (Warsaw, 1912); Epizod na maskaradzie [Episode at a Masquerade], sym. poem, op.14, 1908–9, frag., completed by Fitelberg, 1913 (Warsaw, 1931)

Chbr and pf: Prelude and Double Fugue, pf, op.5, 1897–8 (Warsaw, 1899); other pf works and pieces for str qt and for vn, pf and vc, pf

SONGS

6 pieśni [6 Songs], op.1, 1895–6 (Warsaw, 1897): Zasmuconej [Saddened] (K. Gliński), Skąd pierwsze gwiazdy [Whence the First Stars] (J. Słowacki), Na śniegu [In the Snow] (M. Konopnicka), Zawód [Disillusion] (K. Tetmajer), Pamiętam ciche, jasne, złote dnie [I Remember Quiet, Clear Golden Days] (Tetmajer), Smutną jest dusza moja [My Soul is Sad] (Tetmajer)

Drugi śpiewnik [2nd Songbook], op.3, 1896 (Warsaw, 1898): Mów do mnie jeszcze [Speak to me Still] (Tetmajer), Z erotyków [From Erotica] (J. Waśniewski), Idzie no pola [It Goes Over the Fields] (Tetmajer), Na spokojem, ciemnem morzu [On the Calm Dark Sea] (Tetmajer), Śpi w blaskach nocy [Asleep in the Splendours of the Night] (H. Heine), Przed nocą wieczną [Before the Eternal Night] (Z. Krasiński), Nie płacz nade mnie [Weep not Over Me] (J. Iwański), W Wiecznorną ciszę [In the Calm of the Evening] (Tetmajer), Po szerokiem morzu [Over the Wide Sea] (Tetmajer), Zaczarowana królewna [The Enchanted Princess] (A. Asnyk)

Najpiękniejsze piosnki [The Most Beautiful Songs] (Asnyk), op.4, 1898 (Warsaw, 1899)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 (E. Dzięboswka) [incl. earlier bibliography]

Muzyka, iii (1926), 96–109 [incl. W. Zahorowski: 'Życie Mieczysława Karłowicza' [The life of Karłowicz], 97–9; A. Chybiński: 'Mieczysław Karłowicz', 100–05; S. Barcewicz: 'Wspomnienia o Karłowiczu' [Memories of Karłowicz], 106–7; G. Fitelberg: 'Dzieje Epizodu na maskaradzie' [The history of Episode at a Masquerade], 108–9]

A. Chybiński: Mieczysław Karłowicz (1876–1909): Kronika życia artysty i taternika [Chronicle of the life of an artist and a Tatra mountaineer] (Kraków, enlarged 2/1949)

I. Bełza: Mieczysław Karłowicz (Moscow, 1951)

T. Marek: Poematy symfoniczne Mieczysława Karłowicza [The symphonic poems of Karłowicz] (Kraków, 1959)

H. Anders, ed.: Mieczysław Karłowicz w listach i wspomnieniach [Karłowicz in letters and remembrances] (Kraków, 1960)

E. Dzięboswka, ed.: Z życia i twórczości Mieczysława Karłowicza [On the life and works of Karłowicz] (Kraków, 1970)

B. Chmara-Żaczkiewicz: 'Mieczysław Karłowicz w opinii krytyków wiedeńskich' [Karłowicz in the opinion of the Viennese critics], Muzyka, xxiv/1 (1979), 87–104 [with Eng. summary]

B. Chmara-Żaczkiewicz, A. Spóz and K. Michałowski: Mieczysław Karłowicz: Katalog tematyczny dzieł i bibliografia [Thematic catalogue of works and bibliography] (Kraków, 1986)

L. Polony: Poetyka muzyczna Mieczysława Karłowicza [Poetics of the music of Karłowicz] (Kraków, 1986)

J. Mechanisz: Mieczysław Karłowicz i jego muzyka [Karłowicz and his music] (Warsaw, 1990)

M. Murphy: An Aesthetical and Analytical Evaluation of the Music of Mieczysław Karłowicz (1876–1909) (diss., U. College, Cork, 1994)
M. Murphy: 'Karłowicz's Lithuanian Rhapsody: an Expression of Polish Romantic Nationalism or a Skeleton in the Closet?', International Musicological Conference: Maynooth 1995, ii, 205–13
A. Wightman: Karłowicz, Young Poland and the Musical fin-de-siècle (Aldershot, 1996)

MICHAEL MURPHY, JIM SAMSON

Karlsen, Kjell Mørk (b Oslo, 31 March 1947). Norwegian composer. He was educated as an organist at the Oslo Conservatory (1965–9) and later studied with Viderø in Copenhagen. Later, during the 1980s, he took private composition tuition from Kokkonen in Helsinki. For some years he earned his living as an oboist in orchestras in Sweden and Norway. He also led an early music group, playing the recorder, and he served for several years as organist and choral conductor at the cathedrals of Tønsberg and Stavanger.

He composed from an early age, his youthful works rooted in German neo-classicism with an emphasis on liturgical compositions and Lutheran church music. His organ music, motets and oratorios are widely performed. His instrumental music is also in demand and he has received many commissions. In his secular works he adopts a freer style, and his chamber music – for example his sonatas for violin 'Mesto' and viola 'Nuova', with piano – is noted for its expression and musicianship, while his works for brass or symphonic band (and also those with solo instruments) are vigorously rhythmic and brightly coloured.

WORKS

Orch: Conc., op.28b, org, sym. band/brass, 1973, rev. 1986; Viking Hymn, op.59a, orch, 1982, arr. sym. band as op.59b; Chbr Conc., op.60, fl, str, timp, 1982; Julepartita for lite orkester, op.64, 1983; Sinfonia facile, op.68, chorus, orch, 1984; Sinfonia piccola, op.69, small orch, 1984; Sym., op.70, large orch, 1984; Festival intrata, brass ens/wind orch, 1985; Sym. no.2 'Sinfonia da requiem', op.73, SATB, orch, 1985, rev. 1995; Salmesymfoni, op.73b, SATB, org, sym. band, 1985; Conc., op.76, tpt/euphonium, brass band, 1986; Sym. no.3 'Is-slottet' [Ice Palace], op.78, 1986; Conc., op.83, trbn, str, 1987; Sym. no.4 'Liturgical Sym.', op.87b, 1989; Conc., op.90, pf, str, 1988; Concerto Furvus, op.97, tuba, orch/sym. band, 1990; Renaissance Variations for Brass Band (Hommage à Tielman Susato), op.98 no.1, 1990; Cantilena for Baltikum, str, 1991; Conc. grosso, op.98 no.2, cl, E♭-hn, euphonium, tuba, brass band, 1991; Conc. grosso, op.98 no.2b, brass, 1991; Sym. no.5 'Sinfonia romantica', op.99b, 1991; Nor. Suite, str, 1992; Serenata, op.113, bn, str, 1995; Sinfonia simplex (Sym. no.6), op.118, 1996; Conc. da camera, op.123, ob, str, 1998

Chbr: Trio, op.12, fl, ob, bn, 1969, rev. 1991; Short Chorale, partita, op.7, no.2, tr rec/fl, hpd/pf/org, 1975; 3 Chorale Intradas, op.36, org, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1975; Kors og lilje (S. Tidemann Andersen), op.34, S, fl, pf, 1976; Sonata, op.40, tpt, pf, 1976; Sonatina, ob, pf, 1977, rev. 1983; 12 barnerim fra Jaeren, op.50, S, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, 1979; Messe over norske folketoner, op.51 no.2, org/(org, 2 tpt, hn, 3 trbn), 1979; 6 barnerim fra Gudbrandsdalen, op.54, S, pf, 1981; Partita on a Folk Tune from Lom, op.7 no.3, fl, pf/org/hpd, 1983; Sonata, op.74, tuba, pf, 1985; Om kjaerlighet [About Love], op.77, 5 songs, S, pf, 1986; Divertimento, op.79, va, vc, db, 1986; Musica decima, op.85, 7 ww, 2 hn, db, 1987; Bruheim-songar, op.86, Bar, pf, 1988; Missa da tromba, op.87, tpt, org, 1988; Sonata da chiesa, op.94, tpt, org, 1989; Nuncdimittis, op.63 no.2, (S/A)/(SS, AA), fl, tambourine, org, 1990; Sonata 'Mesto', op.96, vn, pf, 1990; Sonatina on a Folk Tune from Etne, op.7 no.4, fl, pf/org, 1991; Nor. Suite, brass qt, 1992; Sonata 'Nuova', op.101, va, pf, 1992; Str Qt no.1, 1986, rev. 1993; Sonata da requiem, op.102, tpt, brass band, 1993; Partita brevis 2 on a Nor. Folk Tune, rec/fl, va/vc, 1994; Sonata dolorosa, op.108, vc, pf, 1994; Blessings, op.114 no.1, S, ob, org, 1996; Str Qt no.2 'Stabat mater dolorosa', op.117b, 1996; Antiphonae, op.119, fl, 2 vn, va, vc, 1997; Str Qt no.3, op.121, 1998

Solo org: Little Organ Book, op.18 no.1, 1970; Little Organ Book from Greverud, op.18 no.2, 1970; 6 Chorale Partitas on Nor. Folktunes, op.20 nos.1–6, 1968–71; TeD, op.33, 1975; 12 improvisasjoner over gregorianske melodier, op.47, 1972–80; Org Mass on Gregorian Melodies, op.51 no.1, 1977–82; Sinfonia arctandriae (Org Sym. no.2), op.105, 1992, rev. 1993; Org Sym. no.3 'Sinfonia antiqua', op.116, 1996; Kristusmeditasjoner, op.120, 1997

Other solo inst: Microdrops, op.75, pf, 1983, rev. 1985; Variations for Hp, op.29, 1973, rev. 1986; Meditatio, op.109 no.1, ob, 1996; Sonata brevis, op.109 no.4, fl, 1996

Choral: Kom Hellig Ånd med skapermakt (Veni Creator Spirito), cant., op.6, SATB, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, org, 1968; Mag noni toni, op.14, org ad lib, SATB, tpt, trbn, 1969; Krist lå i dødens lenker, cant., op.21 no.1, SATB, fl, ob, bn, org, 1970; De ni lesninger [The Nine Lessons], op.22, SATB, children's chorus, S, celebrant, nar, org, Orff insts, congregation, 1971; Jeremias klagesanger, op.25, S, chorus, ob, Orff insts, hpd, 1973; Fantasi over julesalmer [Fantasia on Christmas Carols], op.32 no.1, S, SATB, hpd/org, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 1975; Ps xxii, op.41 no.1, mixed chorus, recitation, 1975, rev. 1992; Kall oss på ny (Pinsekantate) (A. Borch Sandsdalen), op.38, SSAATTBB, org, timp, perc, nar, 1976; Missa brevis, op.46 no.1, SATB, 1977; Jeg vil alltid synge om Herrens gjerninger [I shall always sing of the deeds of the Lord], op.49, SSA/SAB, 1979; Missa brevis III, op.52, SSA, ob/vn/fl, org, 1980; Juleoratorium, op.57, S, Bar, SATB, children's chorus, orch, 1981; Completorium, op.48 no.3, SSA, org, 1982; Mag 2, op.63, S, female chorus, vc, hpd, org, 1983; Advent (Bible), op.71, SATB, children's chorus, S, fl, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, org, 1984; Cor mundum crea in me deus, op.41 no.3, SATB, org, 1984; Kvitsunn, op.72, S, SATB, rec, hpd, vn, 1984; Requiem, op.32 no.2, SSA, str orch/org, 1985; Blix-kantate, op.80, Bar, SATB, ob, org, str orch, 1986; Dominus pascit me, op.41 no.4, SATB, org, str orch, 1987; Lilja, sym. orat, op.82, mixed chorus, T, recitation, chbr orch, 1987; 7 korsanger (J.M. Bruheim), op.91, SATB, 1988; Ps ciii, op.65 no.2, mixed chorus, brass band, 1989; Hymner til kyrkja, op.92, chbr chorus, chorus, 3 tpt, 3 trbn, tuba, 3 perc, hp, org, 1989; Petter Dass-serenade, op.93, SATB, fl, ob, hn, bn, 3 vn, va, vc, db, 1989; TeD laudamus, op.95, mixed chorus, male vv/B, 4 tpt, org, 1990; Passio Domini Nostri Jesu Christi Secundum Joannem, op.100, SATB, T, Bar, B, 2 ob, 2 vc, org, 1991; Shakespeare-suite, op.76 no.3, mixed chorus, pf, 1992; Milska, chbr orat, op.103, mixed chorus, A, str qt, recitation, org, 1993; Missa nova, op.104, SATB, 1993; Spelet om Heilag Olav og Dale-Gudbrand [The Play on St Olav and Dale-Gudbrand], op.106, SATB, org, nar, fiddlers, 1993; Olav Aukrust-suite, op.106b, chorus, org, 1993; Folketonmesse, op.46 no.3, SATB, 1994; Missa antiqua, op.46 no.4, S, A, T, B/SATB, 1994; Påske, op.107, SSA, S, 2 tpt, 2 hn, timp, org, 1994; Babel (Bible), op.111, SATB, nar, org, 1995; Sankt Johannes-vesper, SATB, descant chorus, children's chorus, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 2 vn, va, vc, org, 1995; Stabat mater dolorosa, op.117, SATB, 2 vn, va, vc, 1996; 5 gregorianske antifoner, op.119b, SATB, 1997

Other vocal: Missa brevis, op.10 no.1, A/Mez, fl, hpd, 1969; Jesu syv ord på korset [Jesus' Seven Last Words on the Cross), op.11, S, A, nar, org, 1969; 3 Julesekvenser [3 Christmas Sequences from the Middle Ages], op.53, S, fl, org, 1980; Resurrexi, op.10 no.3, Bar, tpt, org, 1988; Missa simplex, op.52 no.2, S, A, org/SA, org/str orch ad lib, 1994; How Long, o Lord, op.114 no.2, S, vn, org, 1998

Principal publishers: NMIC, Norsk musikforlag

ARVID O. VOLLSNES

Karlsons, Juris (b Riga, 19 Aug 1948). Latvian composer. He graduated from Jānis Ivanovs's composition class at the Latvian State Conservatory in 1972, then worked as sound director of Latvian Radio (1968–75) and of the State Art Theatre (1975–82). From 1977 Karlsons has been teaching at the Latvian State Conservatory; from 1990 he has been its rector. From 1989 to 1993 he was chairman of the Latvian Composers' Union. Karlsons has written works in all the main musical genres. He uses simple ideas in a logical way, with a concrete emotional effect. He also completed and scored Ivanovs's unfinished Symphony no.21.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Ugunī [In the Fire] (ballet, 1, after R. Blaumanis), Riga, State Opera and Ballet, 14 May 1977; Ole Lukoije (children's musical, after H.C. Andersen), 1987, Riga, Operetta, 11 March 1988

Orch: Per i giovani, 1974; Conc. solenne, chorus, org, orch, 1974; Vasaras mūsika [Summer Music], 1978; Sym., 1980; Pf Conc., 1983; 1945, 1985; Ceļš [The Way], 1993

Vocal-orch: Atvadu vakars [Farewell Party] (A. Akhmatova), Mez, orch, 1981

Chbr and solo inst.: Org Sonata, 1976; Dedication, org, 1984; Pf Qt, 1985; Pf Sonata no.2, 1985; Smilšu laiks [Sand Time], fl, vn, pf, 1988; Variations-Reminiscence, fl, vn, pf, 1989

Choral: Raganas dziesmas [Witch's Songs], (O. Vācichs), spkr, mixed chorus, inst ens, 1981; Neslēgtais gredzens [Open Ring] (J. Rainis), mixed choir, 1982; Magna opera Domini (cant., Ps cx), boy's chorus, org, 1989; Deus conversus (cant., Ps lxii), insts ens, S, SATB, 1990; Ziemas-svētku kantāte [Christmas Cant.] (K. Skalbe, A. Dāle, E. Kezberc, Mez, SATB, 1991

Song cycles: Zemes dēls [Earth's Son] (F. Bārda), Mez, pf, 1980; No ilgu slāpēm [Exhausted by Yearning] (J. Rainis), 1982; Rudens stars [Autumn Beam] (Aspazija), 1989

Film scores, incid music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Mūrniece, ed.: Muzïyka sovetskoy Latvii [Music of Soviet Latvia] (Riga, 1988), 105–7

ARNOLDS KLOTIŅŠ

Karlsruhe. City in south-west Germany, capital of Baden. Before it was founded, music was cultivated by the margraves of Baden-Durlach at the court of Durlach. Its opera dates from 1712, the Kapelle numbering 38 musicians in 1715. In the same year Margrave Karl Wilhelm founded the city of 'Carolsruhe', and in 1719 he took his Hofkapelle, dancers and actors to the new capital, where a court theatre had been built. Early German opera was at the centre of activity; only one work survives, Casimir Schweizelsperg's Die romanische Lucretia. In 1717 J.P. Käfer became Hofkapellmeister, followed in 1722 by J.M. Molter. Molter left Karlsruhe in 1733, when political events curtailed musical life at court; the court theatre was dissolved in 1738 after the death of Margrave Karl Wilhelm. Molter returned in 1743 to restore the Kapelle. He cultivated the late Baroque and pre-Classical style; many manuscripts of his works are in the Badische Landesbibliothek.

After Carl Friedrich inherited the margravate of Baden-Baden in 1771, the musicians there moved to Karlsruhe. At the end of the 18th century the Kapelle (under J.A. Schmittbaur) once more had 38 members, but the town had no opera; touring companies dominated the scene until the beginning of the 19th century. In 1806 Napoleon and Tsar Aleksandr I created the Grand Duchy of Baden, which gave new impetus to musical life. Two years later Grand Duke Carl Friedrich commissioned 'a proper theatre' in the Schlossplatz; it opened in 1810 with Paer's Achille. The Kapellmeister at that time were Johann Brandl and Franz Danzi (who was among the last representatives of the Mannheim School), succeeded by Joseph Strauss (1824–63). In 1847 the theatre was destroyed by fire. A temporary theatre was opened the same year, and by 1853 the handsome theatre designed by Heinrich Hübsch stood on the site of the old building. Eduard Devrient's period as Intendant there, 1852–70, was a brilliant one. As early as 1853 Lizst conducted Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and Wagner appeared as a conductor in 1863. The Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikverein organized music festivals in Karlsruhe in 1853 (with Joseph Strauss and Liszt as conductors), 1864 and 1885. Clara Schumann gave several concerts, as did Brahms, who repeatedly visited the town. The first performance of his Symphony no.1 was conducted in Karlsruhe in 1876 by Otto Dessoff, Generalmusikdirektor of the theatre from 1875 to 1880. The tradition of public symphony concerts was initiated by Joseph Strauss in 1856 (now given by the Badische Staatskapelle).

In this period the opera had two musical directors of major importance: Hermann Levi (1864–72), the first conductor of Parsifal, and Felix Mottl (1880–1903), during whose tenure Karlsruhe was regarded as a 'Little Bayreuth'. At that time Cosima Wagner worked at the court theatre as a producer. Under Mottl, Karlsruhe saw the première of the whole of Berlioz's Les Troyens (1890), the first performance of Schubert's Fierrabras (1897) and premières of works by Emmanuel Chabrier. In the early 20th century the theatre had close contacts with Richard Strauss and Siegfried Wagner, whose own Banadietrich, Schwarzschwanenreich and Der Friedensengel were first given there. The opera company (from 1919 called the Badische Landesbühne and since 1933 Badisches Staatstheater) has maintained its high standing to this day. The theatre was destroyed by bombing in 1944, and opera performances then took place in the Konzerthaus until a new theatre opened in 1975. Since that year the company has shared its repertory with the Opéra du Rhin of Strasbourg.

Church music in Karlsruhe depended during the 19th century mainly on the court and its musicians. Concerts have been given in the Stadtkirche, St Stephan and the Lutherkirche. The leading choirs are the Oratorienchor and the Bach Chor. Since 1948 Süddeutscher Rundfunk (Stuttgart) has maintained the Studio Karlsruhe, which organizes recitals and orchestral concerts in the castles of Schwetzingen, Bruchsal and Ettlingen, and also promotes contemporary music.

A Musikbildungsanstalt was established in 1837. In 1884 Heinrich Ordenstein founded the Grand Ducal conservatory (from 1920 called Badisches Konservatorium für Musik), which was amalgamated with the Badische Hochschule für Musik in 1949. The two later separated, the conservatory now belonging to the town and the Hochschule (since 1971 the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik) to the state of Baden-Württemberg. Directors of the Hochschule have included Wilhelm Rumpf, Walter Rehberg, Gerhard Nestler, Walter Kolneder, Eugen Werner Velte and Fanny Solter. Karlsruhe University (formerly the Technische Hochschule) has a chair in musicology.

The annual Handel Days began in Karlsruhe in 1978 (renamed the Handel Festival in 1985), and the European Days of Culture began in 1983. The Karlsruher Musiktage (established 1982) during May and June includes symphonic, church and chamber music, vocal recitals and musicological meetings. Contemporary music is performed at the recitals of the Wintermusik in February and the Musik auf dem 49ten in autumn, both managed by Ensemble 13 (conducted by Manfred Reichert). In 1989 the Zentrum für Kunst und Medientechnologie was established with a studio for experimental music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (B. Freudenberger)

L. Schiedermair: 'Die Oper an den badischen Höfen des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts', SIMG, xiv (1912–13), 191–209, 369–449, 510–50

H. Ordenstein: Musikgeschichte der Haupt-und Residenzstadt Karlsruhe bis zum Jahre 1914 (Karlsruhe, 1915)
F. Baser: Musikheimat Baden-Württemberg (Freiburg , 1963)
W. Schulz: 'Richard Wagner in Karlsruhe', Zeitschrift für die Geschichte des Oberrheins, cxxix (1981), 399-444
G. Haass and others: Karlsruher Theatergeschichte: vom Hoftheater zum Staatstheater (Karlsruhe, 1982)
C. Canisius, ed.: 100 Jahre Badisches Konservatorium Karlsruhe (Karlsruhe, 1984)
J. Draheim, S. Hoy and C. Scherwitz, eds.: Musik in Karlsruhe 1715-1990 (Karlsruhe, 1990) [Karlsruher Musiktage; programme book]

WERNER STEGER/GÁBOR HALÁSZ

Karlsruhe Anonymous. See DIETRICUS.

Karmins'ky, Mark Veniaminovych (b Kharkiv, 30 Jan 1930; d Kharkiv, 19 Dec 1995). Ukrainian composer. He initially studied philology at the University Khar'kiv, but then entered the conservatory and graduated in 1953 from the composition class of Klebanov. In 1980 he was made an Honoured Arts Worker of the Ukrainian SSR. Although he left a work in almost every genre, his main contribution was in the field of opera. In this he experimented by attempting to present a communist world-view without relying on stock responses. The most notable opera is Desyat' dniv , shcho potryasly svit ('Ten Days that Shook the World'), where he rejected the notion of creating a socialist-realist opera; rather he mixed various genres and methods (including epic choral sections) and constructed a collage of styles that reflected the tumultuous events described in the opera. This revival of agitprop theatre (which gave rise to an opera-spectacle) paralleled similar experiments being carried out in the West in the 1970s by left-orientated film makers and playwrights such as Jean-Luc Godard and Richard Foreman. Karmins'ky's musical style was broadly influenced by the Soviet style made universally known by Shostakovich.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Bukovyntsi [People of Bukovyna] (4, epilogue, I. Muratov), 1957, Khar'kiv, Lysenko Academic, 1957, rev. as Karpats'ka bil' [Carpathian Pain], 1960, concert perf., Moscow, 1960; Desyat'dniv, shcho potryasly svit [Ten Days that Shook the World] (prol, 10 scenes, V. Dubrovsky, after J. Reed), 1970; Donets'k, 1970; Irkutskaya istoriya (3, Dubrovsky, after A. Arbuzov), 1977; Rembrandt (ballet), 1984; Vsego odin den' [One Day Left] (prol, 2, Dubrovsky), 1987, L'viv, Ivan Franko, and Odessa, Academic, 1987
Inst: Trio, 1950; Molodyizhnaya uvertyura [Youth Overture], orch, 1952; Ukrainian Suite, orch, 1952; Sym., orch, 1966; Pieces, pf, 1982; 5 Partitas, pf, 1983-94; Concertino, fl, orch; Concertino, vn, orch; 5 Suites, str
Vocal: Ya rozgovarivayu s Rodinoy [I Speak with my Homeland] (R. Rozhdestvensky), Bar, orch, 1965; Khorovi tetrady [Choral Trilogy] (15 settings), chorus, 1982; Doroha do khramu [The Road to the Cathedral] (27 settings), children's chorus, women's chorus, 1984; many solo vocal works (H. Heine and others), 1982-94
Film and TV scores, incid music for over 100 plays

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Heyvandova: M. Karmins'ky (Kiev, 1981)
L. Arkhymovych, ed.: Istoriya Ukraïns' koï radyans' koi muzyky [History of Soviet Ukrainian music] (Kiev, 1990)

VIRKO BALEY

Karn. Canadian firm of reed organ, piano and organ manufacturers. Dennis W. Karn (b North Oxford Co., Canada West, 6 Feb 1843; d Toronto, 19 Sept 1916), an amateur musician, joined the reed organ firm of John M. Miller around 1867, buying out his employer in 1870 and continuing under the name of Karn & Miller in Woodstock, Ontario. The firm was also known at various times as the Woodstock Organ Factory and the Woodstock Church Organ Co. In the late 1880s the firm began making pianos, and after a merger in 1896 with the firm of WARREN continued the latter's pipe organ business in Toronto under the name of Karn & Warren. The first Karn player piano was made in 1901, and by the first decade of the 20th century the firm had branches in several major Canadian cities as well as London and Hamburg. Karn retired in 1909, and the business was merged with the Morris piano firm as Karn Morris Piano & Organ Co. Ltd; both companies retained their original factories and produced their own lines of instruments. This partnership was dissolved in 1920, and the piano operation was purchased by John E. Hoare (Cecilian Piano Co.) and A.A. Barthelmes (Sterling Action & Keys). The firm was again sold in 1924 to Sherlock-Manning, which continued to make the Karn piano until 1957.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMC2 (F. Hayes)
H. Kallman: A History of Music in Canada 1534-1914 (Toronto, 1960/R)
R.F. Gellerman: Gellerman's International Reed Organ Atlas (Vestal, NY 1985)

BARBARA OWEN

Karnavičius, Jurgis (b Kaunas, 5 May 1884; d 22 Dec 1941). Lithuanian composer. He studied law at the University of St Petersburg, graduating in 1908. He then attended the conservatory there, graduating as a singer in 1910, and as a composer in 1912. Karnavičius was a pupil of Steinberg at the conservatory, and the influence of 19th-century Russian music looms large in his output. He later taught at the St Petersburg and the Kaunas conservatories. His works include the operas Gražina (1932) and Radvila Perkunas (1936), four ballets, symphonic poems, several chamber works and songs.

□

Károlyi, Pál (b Budapest, 9 June 1934). Hungarian composer. He studied the piano and then composition with Szelényi (1953-6) at the Budapest Conservatory, transferring in 1956 to the Liszt Academy of Music for composition studies with Viski and Farkas. He graduated in 1962, and in that year was appointed to teach theory, composition and the piano at the State Music School in Budapest. In 1990 he became professor of music theory at Szombathely University. In 1965 he was awarded the prize commemorating the 200th anniversary of the Bergen PO's 'Musikelsklabet Harmonien' (for Introduzione e allegro).

At the beginning of his career he followed mainly the trends of 20th-century French music, particularly that of Honegger, and concentrated on vocal genres. A notable work of this period is the oratorio Aucasin et Nicolete (1961–4). Influenced by his musical experiences in Stockholm, from 1966 Károlyi came to represent the aspirations of the avant garde in Hungary. During the 1980s he introduced the use of computers into his music, though abandoned them in favour of 20th-century instruments and a simpler, more traditional approach to melody and harmony during the following decade.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Introduzione e allegro, 1964; Sym. Fragment, 1966; Consolatio, 1974; Epilog, 1974; Pásztorjáték [Pastoral], suite, 1976

Choral orch: Aucasin et Nicolete, orat, 1961–4; Szerelmes párbeszéd [Lovers' dialogue] (cant., Theocritus), 1969–72

Unacc. choral: Kamarazene [Chbr music] (J. Joyce), 1962; Töredékek [Fragments] (A. Tóth), 1963; Ad Lydiam, in memoriam Jean de Ockeghem (Horace), 1967; Missa brevis, 2 female choruses, 1969–70; Incanto, 1973; Notturno, 4 female choruses, 1974; Synaesthesia a 22, female vv, 1978; Nisi Dominus, 1993; Lukas Passion, S, T, 2 Bar, 1994–5

Solo vocal: 3 Songs (Lorca), T, 3 hn, hp, 1963; 2 Songs (J. Keats), S, pf, 1964; A lomb ragyog [The Leaves are Shining], S, pf, 1980; Mehmeh virágok [Mehmeh Flowers] (ancient Egyptian texts), S, str, 1995

Chbr: Str qt no.1, 1965; Meditazione, cl, pf, 1967; Campane, 12 insts, 1967–9; Serenata notturna, vn, va, hp, 1970; Contorni, bn, pf, 1970; Triphtongus 3 no.1 'Conclusio', hn, org, 1975; Triphtongus 3 no.2 'Constellatio', vn, org, 1975; Formations, vib, perc, 1976; Epitaxia, 12 accdns, 1977; Conc., 5 str trios, 1979–80; Fern von ku'Damm, perc (10 players), org, 1985; Marionetten, 2 cl, 3 hn, 1994; Besser singen als fluchen, va, org, 1995; AN KIG, pf trio, 1996; Lontano, fl, pf, 1996

Solo inst: 5 zongoradarab [5 Pf Pieces], 1963; 24 zongoradarab gyermekeknek [24 Pf Pieces for Children], 1964; Toccata furiosa, pf, 1966; 4 Pieces, dulcimer, 1966; Triphtongus 1–2, org, 1968, 1970; Accenti, pf, 1969; 4 Etudes, pf, 1972; Motivo, va, 1973; 6 Bagatelles, pf, 1972–4; Equazione, prep pf, 1976; Aperto, pf, 1977; Marmor, org, 1985; Reminiscenzen, pf, 1991; Silhouetten, pf, 1991; Jugendalbum, pf, 1992; Modelle, pf, 1992; Zueignung, pf, 1992; Versteckte Worte, org, 1993; Passacaglia, org, 1993; Canzonetta, org, 1994; Preludium, org, 1994

Principal publishers: Editio Musica Budapest, Christophorus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Kerényi: 'Fiatal zeneszerzőink nemzetközi sikere' [International success of young composers], Muzsika (1967), no.2

E. Juhász: 'Károlyi: Aucasin és Nicolete', Muzsika (1969), no.11

G. Kroó: Amagyar zeneszerzés 30 éve [30 years of Hungarian composition] (Budapest, 1975)

G. Kroó: La musique hongroise contemporaine (Budapest, 1981)

G. Köteles: '"Eszmélet": Károly Pál-bemutató Szombathelyen' ["Consciousness": a Pál Károlyi Première at Szombathely], Muzsika (1994), no.4, 43 only

M. Hollós: 'Károlyi Pál útja a szabadsághoz' [Károlyi's path to freedom], Muzsika (1996), no.9, 45 only

MELINDA BERLÁSZ

Karp, Theodore C(yrus) (b New York, 17 July 1926). American musicologist. He attended Queens College of the City University of New York (BA 1947) and the Juilliard School of Music. From 1949 to 1950 he was enrolled at the Catholic University of Leuven. Returning to the USA he obtained the PhD in 1960 at New York University, where he studied with Sachs and Reese. In 1963 he became a member of the faculty of the University of California at Davis and in 1971 was appointed professor of music. From 1973 until his retirement in 1996 he was professor of music at Northwestern University; he chaired the department from 1973 to 1988. Karp has contributed to the study of medieval secular monophony, particularly trouvère music. In his articles on the polyphony of St Martial, Santiago de Compostela and the Notre Dame school he proposed methods of transcription which emphasize the importance of consonance at points of rhythmic stress and cadence; the structure is clarified by transcribing recurring melodic motifs in similar rhythmic configurations. Karp is also interested in the application of computer techniques to the analysis of medieval music.

WRITINGS

with G. Reese: 'Monophony in a Group of Renaissance Chansonniers', JAMS, v (1952), 4–15

'Borrowed Material in Trouvère Music', AcM, xxxiv (1962), 87–101

'A Lost Medieval Chansonnier', MQ, xlviii (1962), 50–67

'The Trouvère Manuscript Tradition', The Department of Music, Queens College of the City of New York: Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Festschrift, ed. A. Mell (New York, 1964), 25–52

'Modal Variants in Medieval Secular Monophony', The Commonwealth of Music, in Honor of Curt Sachs, ed. G. Reese and R. Brandel (New York, 1965), 118–29

'The Secular Works of Johannes Martini', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966), 455–73

'Towards a Critical Edition of Notre Dame Organa Dupla', MQ, lii (1966), 350–67

'St. Martial and Santiago de Compostela: an Analytical Speculation', AcM, xxxix (1967), 144–60

'Rhythmic Architecture in the Music of the High Middle Ages', Medievalia et humanistica, new ser., i (1970), 67–80

Dictionary of Music (New York, 1973, 2/1983)

'Medieval Music in Perspective', Medieval Studies, ed. J.M. Powell (Syracuse, NY, 1976, 2/1992), 401–31

'Interrelationships between Poetic and Music Form in Trouvère Song', A Musical Offering: Essays in Honor of Martin Bernstein, ed. E.H. Clinkscale and C. Brook (New York, 1977), 137–61

'Music', The Seven Liberal Arts in the Middle Ages, ed. D.L. Wagner (Bloomington, IN, 1983), 169–95

'The Trouvère Chansons in Mensural Notation', Gordon Athol Anderson (1929–1981) in Memoriam (Henryville, PA, 1984), 474–94

'The Cataloguing of Chant Manuscripts as an Aid to Critical Editions and Chant History', Foundations in Music Bibliography: Evanston, IL, 1986, 241–69

'Compositional Process in Machaut's Ballades', Music from the Middle Ages through the Twentieth Century: Essays in Honor of Gwynn S. McPeek, ed. C.P. Comberiati and M.C. Steel (New York, 1988), 64–78

'Interrelationships among Gregorian Chants: an Alternative View of Creativity in Early Chant', Studies in Musical Sources and Style: Essays in Honor of Jan LaRue, ed. E.K. Wolf and E.H. Roesner (Madison, WI, 1990), 1–40

'Interrelationships between Old Roman and Gregorian Chant: some New Perspectives', Cantus Planus IV: Pécs 1990, 187–203

'Mensural Irregularities in La Rue's Missa de Sancto Antonio', Israel Studies in Musicology, v (1990), 81–95

'Some Chant Models for Isaac's Choralis Constantinus', Beyond the Moon: Festschrift Luther Dittmer, ed. B. Gillingham and P. Merkley (Ottawa, 1990), 322–49

The Polyphony of Saint Martial and Santiago de Compostela (Berkeley and Oxford, 1992)

'Editing the Cortona Laudario', JM, xi (1993), 73–105

'The Offertory in die solemnitatis', Laborare fratres in unum: Festschrift Laszlo Dobszay zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. J. Szendrei and D. Hiley (Hildesheim, 1995), 151–65

Aspects of Orality and Formularity in Gregorian Chant (Evanston, IL, 1998)

'Some Tropes in Provins, Bibl. mun. MS 12', John Ohl Festschrift (Evanston, IL, forthcoming)

PAULA MORGAN

Kárpáti, János (b Budapest, 11 July 1932). Hungarian musicologist. He studied musicology at the Liszt Academy of Music under Kodály, Szabolcsi and Bartha, gaining the MA in 1956 with a dissertation on Bartók's style in the period 1908–23. He was editor at the music department of Hungarian radio (1957–9), then music producer at the Hungaroton Record Company, Budapest (1959–61), and in 1961 became chief librarian at the Liszt Academy, where he was also a guest lecturer in music history, musicology and bibliography, and later professor. Kárpáti took the CSc in 1968, the PhD in 1969 with a dissertation on Bartók's string quartets, and the DSc in 1996. He won the Erkel Prize in 1971 and has been awarded the Grand Prize of the National Association of Hungarian Artists. He was chairman of the Hungarian IAML committee from 1977 to 1999 and of the Hungarian Musicological Society from 1997. His main musicological interests are Bartók and 20th-century music and Asian music cultures, especially Japanese traditional music.

WRITINGS

Domenico Scarlatti (Budapest, 1959)
'Mélodie, vers et structure strophique dans la musique berbère (imazighen) du Maroc central', SMH, i (1961), 451–73
'Béla Bartók et la musique arabe', Musique hongroise, ed. M. Fleuret (Paris, 1962), 92ff
Arnold Schönberg (Budapest, 1963)
'Béla Bartók and the East', SMH, vi (1964), 179–94; repr. in Music East and West: New Delhi 1964, 90–96
Muzsikáló zenetörténet [History of music], ii, iv (Budapest, 1965, 1973) [incl. discs]
Bartók vonósnégyesei [Bartók's string quartets] (diss., U. of Budapest, 1968–9; Budapest, 1967; Eng. trans., 1975, as Bartók's String Quartets)
'Les gammes populaires et le système chromatique dans l'oeuvre de Béla Bartók', SMH, xi (1969), 227–40
'L'arte pianistica di Béla Bartók e il suo Microcosmos', Accademia nazionale di Santa Cecilia: annuario (1971)
'Rivoluzione, independenza, resistenza nell'attività di Liszt e Bartók', Quaderno del Teatro comunale di Firenze, no.3 (1972), 69ff
'Szőllősy, András: Trasfigurazioni per orchestra', Magyar zene, xiv (1973), 309–21
'Kurtág, György: Bornemisza Péter mondásai' [The sayings of Péter Bornemisza], Magyar zene, xv (1974), 115–33
Bartók kamarazenéje (Budapest, 1976; Eng. trans., 1994 as Bartók's Chamber Music)
Kelet zenéje [Music of the orient] (Budapest, 1981, 2/1998)
'Tonality in Japanese Court Music', SMH, xxv (1983), 171–82
'Mitoszkutatás és zenetudomány' [The study of myth and musicology], Magyar zene, xxvi (1985), 29–35
'Wandelt sich das ungarische Liszt-Verständnis? Schwerpunkte der ungarischen Liszt-Forschung seit 1945', Liszt heute: Eisenstadt 1986, 127–40
'Cromatismo polimodale e politonalità nei quartetti di Bartók', Ethnomusicologica, ed. D. Carpitella (Siena, 1989), 107–26
'Myths as Organological Facts', SMH, xxxi (1989), 5–38; Hung. orig. in Magyar zene, xxx (1989), 3–24
'The Vocal Works of András Szőllősy', Hungarian Music Quarterly, i/3–4 (1989), 11–18
'A pukcsong oroszlántánc zenei struktúrája: jegyzetek egy koreai álarcos játékról' [The musical structure of the Pukchong lion dance: notes on a Korean masked play], Magyar zene, xxxiii (1992), 48–55
'Amaterasu and Demeter: about a Japanese-Greek Mythological Analogy', International Journal of Musicology, ii (1993), 9–21
'Piano Works of the War Years', 'Early String Quartets', 'The First Two Piano Concertos', The Bartók Companion, ed. M. Gillies (London, 1993), 146–61, 226–42, 498–514
'Perfect and Mistuned Structures in Bartók's Music', SMH, xxxvi (1995), 365–80
'Dallam- és ritmusmodellek a rituális japán színjátékban (Edo sato kagura)' [Melody and rhythm patterns in the Japanese ritual play Edo sato kagura], Zenetudományi dolgozatok 1995–1996, 321–34
Zenészeti Közlöny 1882, Zenevilág 1890–1891, Zeneirodalmi Szemle - Művészeti Lapok 1894–1896, Répertoire internationale de la presse musicale (Ann Arbor, 1996)
'From the Ungaresca to the Allegro barbaro: Responses to Hungarian Music Abroad', Hungarian Quarterly, xxxviii (1997), 124–32
'Monológ, dialóg és drámai ütközés Bartók hangszeres műveiben' [Monologue, dialogue and dramatic turn in Bartók's instrumental works], Magyar zene, xxxvii (1998), 55–68
Tánc a mennyei barlang előtt: zene és mítosz a japán rituális hagyományban (a kagura) [Dance in front of the heavenly cave: music and myth in the Japanese ritual tradition (the kagura)] (Budapest, 1998)
'The Living Tradition of Bartók's Sources (the Bartók Album by the Muzsika's Ensemble', Hungarian Quarterly, xl (1999), 148–54
Szőllősy András (Budapest, 1999)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Somfai: 'Egy jelentős uj Bartók-könyvről' [On a significant new book on Bartók], Magyar zene, viii (1967), 592–8 [on Bartók vonósnégyesei]; see also L. Somfai: 'A Classic on Bartók Revisited', Hungarian Quarterly, no.137 (1995), 141–3 [on Bartók's Chamber Music]
L. Vikár: 'Ex oriente lux: Kárpáti János, Kelet zenéje', Muzsika, xxv/8 (1982), 36–8
T. Tallián: 'János Kárpáti', Hungarian Music Quarterly, iv/1 (1993), 4 only

ISTVÁN KECSKEMÉTI/AGNES GÁDOR

Karpeles, Maud Pauline (b London, 12 Nov 1885; d London, 1 Oct 1976). English authority on folksong and folk dance and folksong collector. In 1909, intending to acquire teaching materials for her social work with children, she attended Morris dance competitions adjudicated by Cecil Sharp at the Shakespeare Festival, Stratford-on-Avon. Fascinated, she joined his first school of Morris dancing at South Western Polytechnic, London, and began a career devoted to promoting his vision of an English folk revival. With Sharpe's encouragement, she recruited friends and in 1910 formed the Folk Dance Club; its membership became the nucleus of the English Folk Dance Society, founded by Sharp in 1911. Karpeles was a committee member of the new society and a key figure in the group which provided demonstrations for Sharp's lectures and trained folk dancers (her dancing was particularly admired). Following Sharp's illness in 1913, she also assisted increasingly with his duties as the director. Sharp transferred his acitivites to North America at the outbreak of World War I, and Karpeles joined him in 1916. As well as lecturing and teaching, they spent 46 weeks in remote settlements of the Appalachian Mountains in the southern United States collecting 1,612 variants of 'folksongs of English origin'.

Following Sharp's death in 1924 Karpeles' brother-in-law, Douglas Kennedy, became director of the English Folk Dance Society, although Karpeles herself was better qualified for this position. Together with Kennedy and Vaughan Williams, she was a member of the artistic board, but her adherence to Sharp's educational approach to folk dance provoked growing opposition from her male colleagues (including Kennedy), who regarded folk dance as a fertility ritual – a view that the international folk dance festival she organized in London in 1935 paradoxically strengthened. As Sharp's literary executor, her control of the copyright to his works was also seen as too inflexible and after a prolonged battle, 1937–8, the national executive of the soceity broke the Sharp trustees' monopoly. Karpeles resigned and thereafter concentrated mainly on work in folksong: she took a leading role in founding the International Folk Music Council in 1947, ensuring it adopted Sharp's theories and serving as its secretary for 15 years and as its honorary president in 1963. She also worked extensively on editions of Sharp's material, publishing two volumes of the songs from Appalachia (1932) and revising The Country Dance Book (vols.i, v, 1934–46) and English Folk Songs: some Conclusions (3/1954). From 1929 to 1930 she carried out Sharp's unrealized plan to collect folksongs from Newfoundland, compiling 191 songs of which 30 were selected for publication with arrangements by contemporary composers (1934). She collaborated with Fox Strangways on Sharp's biography (1933) and produced an expanded, but less reliable, highly partisan version in her name alone in 1967. As scholarship progressed, her editions of both Sharp's works and the Newfoundland folksongs as well as her Introduction to English Folk Song were increasingly criticized. She received honorary doctorates from Laval University, Canada (1961) and the Memorial University of Newfoundland (1970) and an OBE in 1961.

WRITINGS

with A.H. Fox Strangways: Cecil Sharp (London, 1933/R, 2/1955, 3/1967, as Cecil Sharp: his Life and Work) with A. Baké: Manual for Folk Music Collectors (London, 1951, 2/1958 as The Collecting of Folk Music and other Ethnomusicological Material: a Manual for Field Workers)
ed.: C.J. Sharp: English Folk Songs: some Conclusions (London, 3/1954, 4/1965/R) [orig. pubd 1907]
An Introduction to English Folk Song (London, 1973)

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

with C.J. Sharp: The Country Dance Book, i: Description of Eighteen Traditional Dances Collected in Country Villages (London, 2/1934/R); v: The Running Set, Collected in Kentucky (1918, 2/1946/R)
The Lancashire Morris Dance Tunes (London, 1930) [pf arr. by A. Foster]
English Folk Songs from the Southern Appalachians (London, 2/1932/R, 3/1960/R) [rev. of C.J. Sharp's edn, London, 1917]
Folk Songs from Newfoundland (London, 1934, enlarged 2/1971) [with pf acc. by R. Vaughan Williams, C. Carey, H. Foss and M. Mullinar]
Folk Songs of Europe (London, 1956)
Folk Songs of Europe (New York, 1964) with C.J. Sharp: Eighty English Folk Songs from the Southern Appalachians Collected by Cecil J. Sharp and Maud Karpeles (London, 1968)
Cecil Sharp's Collection of English Folk Songs (London, 1973)
The Crystal Spring: English Folk Songs collected by Cecil Sharp (Oxford, 1975/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Haywood: 'Ralph Vaughan Williams and Maud Karpeles', YIFMC, iv (1972), 5–8
C.H. Carpenter: 'Forty Years Later: Maud Karpeles in Newfoundland', Folklore Studies in Honour of Herbert Halpert: a Festschrift, ed. K.S. Goldstein and N.V. Rosenberg (St John's, NF, 1980), 111–24
G. Boyes: The Imagined Village: Culture, Ideology and the English Folk Revival (Manchester, 1993)

GEORGINA BOYES

Karr, Gary (Michael) (b Los Angeles, 20 Nov 1941). American double bass player. Born into a family of double bass players he studied with Herman Reinshagen, Warren Benfield and Stuart Sankey. In 1962 he appeared as a soloist with the New York PO under Bernstein and gave his recital début at Town Hall, New York. He toured Europe in 1964, making his London début at the Wigmore Hall. In 1967 he founded the International Institute for the String Bass (later the International Society of Bassists), which published 17 issues of the Bass Sound Post, at the time the only journal devoted to the instrument.

One of the most influential players of his generation, Karr has enjoyed a successful international solo career, has recorded extensively and has pioneered new and individual playing techniques. His repertory of concertos, several commissioned by him or written specially for him, includes works by Henze (1967), Gunther Schuller (1968), Wilfred Josephs (1980), John Downey (1985) and Lalo Schifrin (1988). In 1971 he formed a duo with the pianist Harmon Lewis, with whom he has given over 50 premières. He has held teaching posts at Yale University, the Juilliard School and other American and Canadian universities, and has written double bass methods. His often humorous approach to the instrument has made him a popular figure at summer schools and double bass gatherings, as well as with television audiences worldwide. He plays a 1611 Amati, formerly owned by Koussevitzky.

RODNEY SLATFORD

Karrer, Paul. See CARRER, PAVLOS.

Kartāl [karatāla, kartāḷa, kartār]. A South Asian term denoting pairs of wooden clappers, but in East India small cymbals.

Generally the term denotes wooden clappers, with or without jingles (either inserted bronze discs, or pellet bells, or both). Wooden or bamboo clappers, held two in each hand, are described in medieval Sanskrit works as kamrā. In Tamil Nadu kartāḷa denotes flat, round or oblong, wooden bats, with handles held between the fingers of one hand, which are struck together; these are called cekkai (Tamil) for the oblong type or cekkalu (Telugu) for the circular type with handles found in Andhra. Other wooden clappers include the catkulā of Madhya Pradesh, the kāṭhi of Orissa, the rāigiḍgiḍī of Rajasthan and the ḍaṇḍā of Bihar; the çimṭā of South Asia and the ṭokā of Assam are analogous, sprung clappers (tongs).

In northern and central areas kartāl denotes pairs of thick wooden clappers, about 15 to 30 cm long, with flat inner surfaces; attached to the outer sides, which may be convex or concave, are metal rings, leather straps or incised wooden handles by which the clappers are held with thumb and fingers. They are clashed together in performance. Some have no jingles but most have thin bronze discs held vertically in slits at each end by metal pins; sometimes also bronze pellet bells are attached to the ends. These are used primarily in religious music. In the South this type is known as cipḷā, in Maharashtra cipḷyā and in Sind capṛun.

For the kartāl of Bengal and Orissa see TĀL.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.R. Day: The Music and Musical Instruments of Southern India and the Deccan (Delhi, 1891/R)
C. Sachs: Die Musikinstrumente Indiens und Indonesiens (Berlin and Leipzig, 1914, 2/1923/R)
P. Sambamoorthy: A Dictionary of South Indian Music and Musicians (Madras, 1952–71)
P. Sambamoorthy: Catalogue of the Musical Instruments Exhibited in the Government Museum, Madras (Madras, 3/1962)
N.A. Baloch: Musical Instruments of the Lower Indus Valley of Sind (Hyderabad, 1966, 2/1975)
K.S. Kothari: Indian Folk Musical Instruments (New Delhi, 1968)
B.C. Deva: Musical Instruments of India (Calcutta, 1978)

ALASTAIR DICK

Kartomi, Margaret J(oy) (b Adelaide, 24 Nov 1940). Australian musicologist and ethnomusicologist. She studied piano (diploma, 1961), music (BA, 1963) and composition (BM, 1964) at the University of Adelaide and took the doctorate in 1968 at Humboldt University, where she studied with Doris Stockmann and Usmann Effendi; she also took lessons in composition from Günther Kochan (1964–7) and performed her works in Berlin. She returned to Australia to teach at Monash University, Melbourne, where she was appointed research fellow (1969), lecturer (1970), reader (1974), director of the Institute for Contemporary Asian Studies (1989), and professor and chair of the music department (1989). She also served as president of the Musicological Society of Australia (1984–6), member of the editorial board of Musicology (1978–84) and Acta musicologica (1982–95), editor of the series Australian Studies in the History, Philosophy, and Social Studies of Music, and was elected director-at-large of the council of the IMS in 1992 and representative of the International Society for Traditional Music in 1997. Her interests as a scholar are wide-ranging and include organology, historiography, ethnology of Indonesian and South-east Asian musics, and children's music of the Australian Aborigines. She has conducted important research on the musics of Sumatra and the outer Islands of Indonesia and her work on organology, summed up in the book On Concepts and Classifications of Musical Instruments (1990), is considered seminal; she also actively promotes the performance of South-east Asian instruments at Monash University. She was made a member of the Order of Australia in 1991.

WRITINGS

Matjapat Songs in Central and West Java (diss., Humboldt U., 1968; Canberra, 1973)
'Conflict in Javanese Music', SMA, iv (1970), 62–80
'Music and Trance in Central Java', EthM, xxxvii (1973), 163–208
'Performance, Music and Meaning of Reyog Ponorogo', Indonesia, xxii (1976), 85–130
ed.: Studies in Indonesian Music (Melbourne, 1978)
'Minangkabau Musical Culture: the Contemporary Scene and Recent Attempts at its Modernisation', What is Modern Indonesian Culture?, ed. G. Davis (Ohio, 1979), 19–36
'Childlikeness in Play Songs: a Case Study among the Pitjantjara at Yalata, South Australia', MMA, xi (1980), 172–214
'Dualism in Unity: the Ceremonial Music of the Mandailing Raja Tradition', AsM, xii/2 (1980), 74–108
ed.: Five Essays on the Indonesian Arts (Melbourne, 1981) [incl. 'Lovely when Heard from Afar: Mandailing Ideas of Musical Beauty', 1–14]
'The Processes and Results of Musical Culture Contact: a Discussion of Terminology and Concepts', EthM, xxv (1981), 227–50; repr. in Music as Culture, iii, ed. K.F. Shelemay (New York, 1990), 275–98
'Randai Theatre in West Sumatra; Components, Origins, Music and Recent Change', Review of Indonesian and Malaysian Affairs, xv (1981), 1–44
'Delineation of Lullaby Style in Three Areas of Aboriginal Australia', Problems and Solutions, Essays in Musicology Presented to Alice Moyle, ed. J. Kassler and J. Stubington (Sydney, 1984), 59–93
'Musicological Research in Australia 1979–1984', AcM, lvii (1984), 109–45
Musical Instruments of Indonesia (Melbourne, 1985)
'Muslim Music in West Sumatran Culture', The World of Music, xxviii/3 (1986), 12–32
'Tabut: a Shi'a Ritual Transplanted from India to Sumatra', Nineteenth and Twentieth Century Indonesia: Essays in Honour of Professor J.D. Legge, ed. D.P. Chandler and M.C. Ricklefs (Melbourne, 1986), 141–62
'Kapri: a Synthesis of Malay and Portuguese Music on the West Coast of North Sumatra', Cultures and Societies of North Sumatra, ed. R. Carle (Berlin, 1987), 351–94
'Forty Thousand Years: Koori Music and Australian Music Education', Australian Journal of Music Education, i (1988), 11–28
'Ritual Music and Dance: Contact and Change in the Lowlands of South Sulawesi', Ti shih erh-chieh Ya-chou i shu chieh/The Twelfth Festival of Asian Arts: Hong Kong 1988 (Hong Kong, 1988), 26–35
'Music in Nineteenth Century Java: a Precursor to the Twentieth Century', Journal of Southeast Asian Studies, xxi (1990), 1–34
On Concepts and Classifications of Musical Instruments (Chicago, 1990)
'Problems of Intercultural Reception and Methods of Describing and Analysing Musical Rhythm', Tradition and its Future in Music: Osaka 1990, 529–38
'Experience-Near and Experience-Distant Perceptions of the Daboih Ritual in Aceh, Sumatra', Von der Viefalt musikalischer Kultur: Festschrift für Josef Kuckertz, ed. R. Schumacher (Salzburg, 1992), 247–60
'Musical Improvisations by Children at Play', World of Music, xxxiii/3 (1992), 53–65
'Comparative Musicology and Music Aesthetics: What has Become of those Subdivisions of Adler's "Systematic Musicology" and "Historical Musicology" of 1885?', Systematische Musikwissenschaft/Systematic Musicology, i (1993), 257–82
'Revival of Feudal Music Dance and Ritual in the Former Spice Islands of Ternate and Tidore', Culture and Society in New Order Indonesia, ed. V. Hooker (Singapore, 1993), 183–210
ed., with S. Blum: Music Cultures in Contact: Convergences and Collisions (Sydney, 1994)
'Traditional Music Weeps and other Themes in the Discourse on Music, Dance and Theatre of Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand', Journal of Southeast Asian Studies, xxvi (1995), 366–400
'The Royal Nobat Ensemble of Indragiri in Riau, Sumatra, in Colonial and Post-Colonial Times', GSJ, l (1997), 3–15
'"Virgin Territory" Music History Writing', Ethnomusicology and Historical Musicology: Common Goals, Shared Methodologies?, ed. C.H. Mahling and S. Münch (Tutzing, 1997), 217–25
The Music of Sumatra (forthcoming)
Syncretic Musical Responses to Social Changes in Manggarai, Flores (forthcoming)

TERRY E. MILLER

Karyotakis, Theodore (b Argos, 21 July 1903; d Athens, 14 June 1978). Greek composer. He went to Athens Conservatory and then was a pupil of Mitropoulos for composition (*c*1925–32) and Varvoglis for counterpoint and orchestration (*c*1933–6). In 1957 he was appointed general secretary of the Union of Greek Composers. Setting out from a nationalist style, often drawing on folksong modes and rhythms, in the 1960s he explored atonality and 12-note writing in search of a more austere expression. His Ballade, Rhapsody, Petite Symphonie and Epic Song rank among the most noteworthy achievements of the late national school.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Ion (incid music, Euripides), 1937; Tou fengariou louloudi [Flower of the Moon] (op, prol, 3, Sperantzas), 1953–5
Orch: Sym. Study on 2 Greek Folksongs, 1939; Ballade, pf, str, perc, 1939; Rhapsody, vn, orch, 1940; Petite symphonie, str, 1942; Epic Song, 1944; Little Suite, 1946; Divertimento, 1948; Serenade, small orch, 1955; 3 Pieces, 1965; Conc. for Orch, 1968; Sym., 1972
Vocal: Ta erotika [The Love-Songs] (K. Ouranis), Mez, fl, hp, 1948; Ta theia dhora [The Divine Gifts] (Z. Papantoniou), S, pf, 1950; 3 Songs (G. Seferis), Bar, pf, 1954; 4 Songs (S. Myrivilis), S, pf, 1955; 8 Solos and Duos (K. Palamas), S, Mez, hp, 1955; Asma asmaton [The Song of Songs], reciter, S, T, Bar, female chorus, orch, 1956; 10 Songs (Ouranis), Mez, cl, str, 1962; Aethries [Cloudless Skies] (O. Elytis), S, cl, str, perc, 1962; 6 Songs (Seferis), S, pf, 1963; Str Qt (Elytis), S, str qt, 1963; Adagio (Elytis), S, str, 1968
Chbr: Variations on a Greek Folksong, pf, 1944; 4 Preludes, pf, 1945; 2 sonatas, vn, pf, 1945, 1955; Suite, fl, pf, 1946; Str Trio, 1952; Partita in modo antico, vc, vn ad lib, 1959; Sonatina, vc, 1963; Rhapsody, vc, pf, 1963; Duo, fl, va, 1963; 9 Inventions, vn, pf, 1966; 12 Impromptus, pf, 1968; Orion (Elytis), S, vn, 1968; Duo, fl, cl, 1969; Sonatina, va, pf, 1969; Trio, cl, va, pf, 1969; 7 Nocturnal Heptastichs (Elytis), S, fl, va, gui, xyl, perc, 1969; Music, fl, cl, hn, bn, 1973

Principal publishers: Greek Ministry of Education, Karyotakis, Union of Greek Composers

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Kasanda, Nicolas [Kasanda wa Mikalay; 'Docteur Nico'] (b Mikalay, Belgian Congo, 7 July 1939; d Brussels, 22 Sept 1985). Congolese guitarist. In 1953 he formed his first group, African Jazz, in which he played acoustic guitar with Joseph Kabasele, 'le Grand Kallé'. The Cameroonian saxophonist Manu Dibango and the singer Tabu Ley Rochereau joined the band in 1961 after a pre-Independence concert tour to Brussels. Several changes in the name of Kasanda's band and its personnel led to the formation of Orchestre African Fiesta, which developed a productive competitive relationship with the band led by the guitarist FRANCO Luambo. For ten years Kasanda and African Fiesta enjoyed great success in the newly named Zaire. His guitar playing technique transformed Central African popular music, defining the Congolese music sound of the 1960s and 70s. He introduced the Hawaiian steel guitar to the band as well as a dance style, kiri kiri, that became an extremely popular alternative to soukous. He lost his recording contract in the 1970s but launched a comeback in the 1980s, producing the albums Dieu de la guitare (no.1), Aux USA and Adieu.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

G. Stewart: 'God of the Guitar: Docteur Nico', Breakout: Portraits in African Rhythm (Chicago, 1992)

RECORDINGS

Docteur Nico, Sonafric SAF 50007 (1975)
Dieu de la guitare (no.1), Africa New Sound ANS8404 (1984)
Eternal Docteur Nico, Sonodisc CD 36516 (1992)

GREGORY F. BARZ

Kasarova, Vesselina (b Stara Zagora, 18 July 1965). Bulgarian mezzo-soprano. She studied with Ressa Koleva at the conservatory in Sofia, where she made her first appearances with the Sofia National Opera in such roles as Rosina (her stage début), Dorabella, Preziosilla and Fenena (Nabucco). She joined the Zürich Opera in 1989, making her début as Second Norn, followed by Olga and Anna (Les Troyens). In 1998 she returned to the house, scoring a particular success in the title part of Offenbach's La Périchole with Harnoncourt. She was briefly engaged at the Vienna Staatsoper in 1991, the year she made her début at the Salzburg Festival as Annius (La clemenza di Tito). But it was a concert performance of Tancredi at Salzburg the following year which really established her credentials as a dedicated artist with a strong, vibrant mezzo and great fluency in her runs. Kasarova made her Covent Garden début as Rosina in 1993 and returned as Sextus in La clemenza di Tito in 2000. In 1998 she appeared at the Munich Festival as Jane Seymour (Anna Bolena) and made her début at the Rossini Festival at Pesaro in the title part of La Cenerentola. In 1999 she sang the role of Ruggero (Alcina) at Barcelona and Sextus and Isabella (L'italiana in Algeri) at the Staatsoper in Munich. Among other roles in Kasarova's repertory are Zerlina, Charlotte and Bellini's Romeo, which she has recorded to considerable acclaim. A recital of Mozart arias with Colin Davis likewise testifies to her vivid powers of communication and consummate technique. She is also an accomplished exponent of French and Russian song. (A. Blyth: 'Vesselina Kasarova: The Voice of Romeo', Gramophone, lxxvi/Sept (1998), 10–12).

ALAN BLYTH

Kasatschok. See KAZACHOK.

Kaschau (Ger.). See KOŠICE.

Kaschendorf [Caschindorf, Castendorfer, Kastendörfer], Stephan (b Breslau, *c*1425; d ?Schweidnitz, Silesia, after 4 Feb 1499). German organ builder. He was initially apprenticed to a carpenter called Nickel; it is not known who taught him organ building. By 1460 he was considered an 'egregius magister in ista arte'. He was active in a wide geographical area extending from Silesia to Saxony, Thuringia, Franconia and Swabia far into southern Germany. Like many leading organ builders of the second half of the 15th century (such as Heinrich Traxdorf, Leonhard Mertz, Burkhart Dinstlinger, Friedrich Krebs and Hans Tugi) he was well-travelled. His organs are characterized by the use of independent divisions and stops (Hauptwerk and Rückpositiv or Brustwerk); no specifications have survived. He built organs for St Maria Magdalena, Breslau (1455), the St Egidien, Nuremberg (1460), St Elisabeth, Breslau (1460–64), the Georgskirche, Nördlingen (1464–6), the Frauenkirche, Nuremberg (1464–6), Grossenhain, Saxony (1469), Erfurt Cathedral (1480–83), St Ulrich und Afra, Augsburg (chancel organ; 1490), and Schweidnitz (1495–9). In 1467 he offered his services in Rothenburg ob der Tauber, but was turned down. As an organ builder he also had the task of laying and repairing lead roofing (e.g. St Sebaldus, Nuremberg, 1483). His three sons Caspar, Melchior and Michael were also active in the organ-building profession, and assisted him in Erfurt. He owned houses in Dresden and Schweidnitz, but seems to have died penniless and alone. Two organ contracts and a teaching contract with his pupil Lorenz Gisse remain.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 suppl. (F. Krautwerst)
H. Fischer and T. Wohnhaas, eds.: Lexikon süddeutscher Orgelbauer (Wilhelmshaven, 1994)

HERMANN FISCHER

Kaschmann [Kašman], Giuseppe (b Lussimpiccolo [now Mali Lošinj], Istria, 14 July 1847; d Rome, 7 Feb 1925). Italian baritone. After studying in Rome, he made his début in 1869 at Zagreb. He first sang in Italy in 1876 at Turin as Alphonse (La favorite) then appeared at Venice, Rome, Trieste and La Scala, where he made his début in 1878 as Posa. In the inaugural season of the Metropolitan (1883–4), he sang Enrico Ashton, Don Giovanni and Thomas' Hamlet, a role he also sang at Lisbon and Madrid, and at the S Carlo, the Colón and La Fenice. He sang Wolfram and Amfortas at Bayreuth (1892, 1894) and returned to the Metropolitan (1895–6) as Kurwenal, Wotan and Telramund. His repertory also included Valentine, Escamillo, William Tell, Riccardo (I puritani), Severo (Poliuto), Rigoletto, Macbeth, Amonasro, Don Carlo (Ernani and La forza del destino), Iago, Tonio and Scarpia. In his 60s he turned to buffo roles such as Rossini's Dr Bartolo and Don Pasquale; his last performance was in Rome in Cimarosa's Astuzie femminili (1921). His few records reveal a velvety voice of great beauty, employed with style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV (R. Celletti; R. Vegeto)

ALAN BLYTH

Kasemets, Udo (b Tallinn, 16 Nov 1919). Canadian composer and conductor of Estonian origin. He studied at the Tallinn Conservatory and the Stuttgart Musikhochschule, and attended the Darmstadt summer courses before moving to Canada in 1951. As a freelance musician he has pursued an extraordinary variety of activities: teaching the piano and theory, accompanying and working as a vocal coach, conducting and organizing concerts, serving as a church organist and choirmaster, writing newspaper criticism (for the Toronto Daily Star), editing and lecturing. In addition to his compositional activities, which include writing pieces for students and amateurs, he founded and conducted the Toronto Bach Society, and served as editor of the notable Canavangard series of new scores. From 1970 to 1987 he taught music and mixed media at the Ontario College of Art, Toronto. In 1991 he received an honorary LLD from York University and a grant from the Memorial Foundation of Adele, Adolf and Axel Toom for his contribution to Estonian-Canadian cultural life.

Kasemets's early scores show two consistent stylistic features: an appeal to folklike expression and the use of highly schematic developmental processes. In the many works of the 1950s that incorporate elements of Schoenbergian dodecaphony, basic sets often emphasize perfect intervals or scale patterns, generating lines and textures that recall folk music. Sometimes genuine folk materials are quoted: those of both his native and his adopted country attracted his interest at this time. During the same period numerous fugues, double fugues and passacaglias appear in his music: the double fugue in the Sonata da camera for solo cello (1955) marks a climax of this type of writing.

In 1960–61 Kasemets renounced much of his earlier creative thinking and withdrew a large number of scores. He made contact with the leaders of some of the avant-garde movements in music, visual art and literature in the USA and brought them to Canada to perform in various concert series. The works inspired by this exploration of new ideas were at first of two types: those in which charts and graphic notation (sometimes combined with staff notation) were used to explore new sound possibilities; and those in which sound was only one of a number of elements not necessarily predominant, in a composition emphasizing an open framework for variable realization. The first category recalls the chart pieces of Feldman, Brown and others; the second relates to American artists associated with 'happenings' (Young, Allan Kaprow). Examples of the former group include Timepiece (1964), in which 36 events can be interpreted in any medium, and Fifth Root of Five (1962–3), in which two pianists determine the order of succession of five-second segments. Characteristic of the second category is Kasemets's most performed composition, Trigon (1963), realizable in three purely musical media or in as many as 81 mixed media, including instruments, spoken voices, electronics, live actions, films and slides and visual art.

By the late 1960s Kasemets prioritized the process of bringing a realization into being over the more static notion of the 'work'. Later pieces, therefore, often take the form of 'lecturessays' (on such issues as the cultivation of sensitivity, pollution, aboriginal rights or other topics) or 'combination scores', in which several basic schemes are employed simultaneously. Kasemets's influence and models range wide. Prominent among them are Satie, Duchamp, Cage, Fuller, Joyce, Beckett, the Canadian poet bp Nichol and the Canadian visual artist and jazz performer Michael Snow. In Time/Place Interface (1970–71) readings from randomly located pages in a reference work are controlled by lighting, recorded and combined (in the largest of various possible realizations) with other readings in various languages exchanged electronically across great distances and superimposed in continuous performance.

Comparable manifestations include Wor(l)dmusic (1974), 'a globally realized collective speechsoundsong, ... a radio event circling the earth'; Thunderword (1978), based on the 'ten 100-lettered thunderwords' in Finnegans Wake ('the ideal performance ... should take place during a thunderstorm'); and Whole Earth Music (1979), 'an everongoing & everchanging replay-cum-mix of recordings of sounds/musics of varied origins'.

In a programme note in 1995, Kasemets said that his newest productions, musical and literary, 'attempted to establish correspondences' between various 'systems ... devised to bring order' to the consideration of broad universal questions and 'systems ordering sounds in time and space'. The former included patterns and procedures from the I Ching and from traditional Japanese haiku and renga poetics, the Mayan calendar, the structure of the DNA helix, findings of Fuller, Reeves and Hawking, and the fractals of Mandelbrot. Eighty Flowers (1994–5) is a series of 80 short piano solos whose pitches, durations and dynamic shapes exactly parallel the phonemic structures of a cycle by the American poet Louis Zukofsky. Requiem Renga (1992), 'memorial music for victims of human cruelty', is based on the classical Japanese genre of chain-poetry, but introduces a familiar Western-music phrase, from the sequence for the Mass for the Dead ['Dies irae']. TimeTrip to Big Bang and Back (1990–93) is an extravagantly imagined 'universe symphony' based on Stephen Hawking's A Brief History of Time. The score of one section, 'Messiermusics', consists of photos of star clusters and nebulae to be interpreted musically by a performer on glass instruments.

WORKS
(selective list)

CONVENTIONAL MEDIA

Orch: Recit and Rondino, op.36, str, 1954; Vn Conc., op.41, 1955–6; Passacaglia, fl, vn, orch, 1959; Sinfonietta, small orch, 1959

Vocal: Choreola gaudiae, op.32 (old Christmas carols), S, A, T, pf, 1952; Poetic Suite, op.37 (K. Raine), S, pf, str orch, 1954; The Thousand Nights and One Night, op.39, S/T, pf, 1956; Canciones, op.42 (F. García Lorca), S, fl, gui, 1955–6; 2 Sym. Songs, op.43 (D. Thomas), Mez/Bar, pf/orch, 1956, orch version withdrawn; 3 Miniatures, op.46 (P.B. Shelley), S/T, pf, 1956; 2 Songs, op.49 (J. Donne, anon.), TTBB, 1957; Songs from the Atlantic Provinces, S/T, pf, 1959; Hano (Indian dirge), 1v, pf, 1960; 19NooN61 (W. Hickling), 1v, pf, 1961; Haiku, S, fl, vc, pf, 1961; Communications (e.e. cummings), vv, insts, 1963; 5 Songs for Children, 1v, pf, 1964; Variations (on Variations [on Variations]) (E. Olson), 1v, inst, tape/tape rec, 1967; And M.D. Said (M. Duchamp), 1v, 1969

Inst: Sonata, op.24/1, pf, 1951; 6 Preludes, op.30, pf, 1952; Str Trio, op.33, 1953; Recit Fugue, op.40a, 2 vc, 1955; Sonata da camera, op.40, vc, 1955; Sonata concertante, op.50, pf qt, 1957; Wind Qnt, op.48, 1957; Logos, fl, pf, 1960; Squares, pf duet, 1962; Fifth Root of Five, 2 pf, 1962–3

*c*30 works withdrawn before 1960; educational music, arrs.

MULTI-PURPOSE SCORES, COMBINATION SCORES, THEATRE AND PARTICIPATION PIECES, 'LECTURESSAYS'

Cumulus, solo/ens, 2 tape recs, 1963–4; Trigon, 1/3/9/27 pfmrs, 1963; Timepiece, solo/ens, 1964; Cascando (S. Beckett), 1–128 pfmrs, 1965; Calceolaria, tape, any no. of pfmrs, 1966;

Contactics, 1966; 5 PP (5 Perf. Pieces), 1966; Octagonal Octet and/or Ode, 1/2/4/6/8 pfmrs, 1967; T (Tribute to Buckminster Fuller, Marshall McLuhan, John Cage), readers, synths, slides, audience-controlled elecs, 1968; DDD (Deadly Deafening Decibels), 4 spkrs, insts, 1970; Time/Place Interface, 1970–71; Bookmusic, 8 readers, audience-controlled elec, 1971; S (The Subject is S), spkr, tape, incense, 1971; Elaborations on Musical Erratum of Marcel Duchamp, 1971–2; Qt of Qts, 1971–2; Time/Space Interface, 1971–3; Colo(u)r is . . . , spkr, slides, 16mm sound film, 1972; Guitarmusic for John Cage, any no. of guis, slides, 1972

J.C. (Without Saying Anything about John Cage that hasn't been said by John Cage himself), reader, tape rec, gramophone, doors, 1972; Quadrophony, 1972–3; Son of Vexations, tape loop, abacus, 1972; La Crasse du Tympan, 1973; Wordmusic/Interface, readers, tape recs, mixers, 1973–4; Silencesong: Litany for Lily, 1974; Wor(l)dmusic, 1974; In Memoriam Nelson Small Legs Jr. (Rites of Rights no.1), 1–10 readers, any no. of drums, opt. visuals, 1976; In Support of Justice Thomas Berger (Rites of Rights no.2), any no. of perc, public address system, 1976; Kanadanak, 1976–7; Watearthundair, 1976; Biographics, 1977; David & David & Larry & James, elecs, 1977; Thunderword, 1978; M (on) ART: c'est la vie, 1979; Whole Earth Music, 92-track tape, 1979

Celestial Timescapes, elecs, 1980; Onemanshow, 1980; Ragtime: an Intercultural Timescape, Asian ens, European ens, Zodiacanons, 1–12 insts and/or vv, 1981; Earthspin, pf, elecs, 1982; Counterbomb Renga, 1983; 4-D I Ching, tape, 1984; Yi Jing Jitterbug, 1/8 ww/str, tape, 1984; Geo(sono)scope, 1986; Duchampera (M. Duchamp), vv, spkrs, actors, pf, perc, tape, lighting effects, 1987; Vertical Music in Memory of Morton Feldman, any 7 insts/2 pf, 1987, rev. 1995; Portrait: Music for the 12 Moons of the I Ching, 1988; Calendar Round, 1989; Lun(h)armonics: Music of the Chinese Calendar, elecs, 1990; The Eight Houses of the I Ching, str qt, 1990; TimeTrip to Big Bang and Back, (spoken and chanted vv, perc, dancers, pre-rec sounds, slides)/elecs, 1990–93

Fractal Epitaph for John Cage, (1v, pf)/(1v, str qt), 1992, rev. 1995; Koch Curves, ww qnt, 1992; Requiem Renga, (str, 2 perc)/(3 spkrs, 2 perc), 1992; Kuradi Kiik (Satan's Swing), accdn, 1993; Mikesnowflakes, (v, 2 pf, [4 pfmrs], mar)/(v, 2 pf [4 pfmrs], mar, 3 spkrs, visuals), 1993; Palestrina on Devil's Staircase, 2vv, 3 vn, 3 vc, 1993; The Eight Houses of the I Ching, 12 str, 1993; 80 Flowers of Louis Zukofsky, pf, 1994–5; Mandelbrot Music, (cl/b cl, tpt, vn/b vn, db/mand, 3 perc, pf)/(3 pf [or any insts]/pf/1v, str qt, ww qnt, inst sextet, inst octet), 1994; MOnoLLOYgue (Beckett), actor, bn, 1994; Music of the First Eleven Primes, pf, 1994; Peacewordchant, Bar, vc, 1994; Perpetual Tango +, pf, 1994 [after J. Cage and E. Satie]; Pythagoras Tree, pf, 1994; Reading John Cage (O. Paz), 1v, pf, 1994; Sappersong (D. Hartford), Bar, vc, 1994; 3/7 d'un Morceau en forme de poire, pf, 1995 [after E. Satie]; Feigenbaum Cascades, pf, 1995; SoUNdFLOWER, 5 hp/5 mar/5 kbd, 1995; fraCtal fibONaCciERTO, pf, 2 perc, brass trio, ww qnt, str octet, 1996; 16 Stills of bpNichol, pf, 1996

OPazERA, 'a trans(form)l(iter)ation of poetry by Octavio Paz into music', various media, 1996–7; 777, '777 pulses in 70 parts on 7 times 7 harmonics', chbr orch, 1998; AQM (Anarchart Quantumandala), musicians, readers, 1998

MSS in CDN-Tu

Principal publishers: Berandol, Musicworks

WRITINGS

'John Weinzweig', Canadian Music Journal, iv/4 (1960), 4–18

ed., with J. Beckwith: The Modern Composer and his World (Toronto, 1961)

'Current Chronicle: Ann Arbor', MQ, i (1964), 515–19

ed.: Canavangard: Music of the Nineteen-Sixties and After Series (Toronto, 1968) [catalogue]

'Eight Edicts on Education, with Eighteen Elaborations', Source, iv (1968), 37–43

'Nine Notes on Notation', Artscanada, xxv/2 (1968), 24–8

ed.: Focus on Musicecology (Toronto, 1970)

'Prologue to an Interlogue and an Epilogue (Introduction to Intermedia)', Canada Music Book, v (1972), 13–18

ProsePoems (Toronto, 1980)

'Tuning of Systems to Systems of Tuning', Musicworks, lvii (1994), 24–9

Mandelbrot Music (Toronto, 1994)

'Systems', Musicworks, lxii (1995), 7–21

Z for Zuk for Zukofsky (Toronto, 1995)

SoUNdFLOWERS (Toronto, 1996)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMC2 (A. Gilmor)

J. Beckwith: 'Composers in Toronto and Montreal', U. of Toronto Quarterly, xxvi/l (1956), 47–69

'Udo Kasemets: a Portrait', Musicanada, xxii (1969), 8–9

J. Beckwith: 'Kasemets: Torrents of Reaction', Music Scene, no.251 (1970), 4–5

Udo Kasemets (Toronto, 1972) [BMI Canada publication]

JOHN BECKWITH

Käser, Mischa (b Zürich, 1 Jan 1959). Swiss composer. After obtaining the guitar diploma at the Winterthur Conservatory, he studied composition with Hans Ulrich Lehmann at the Zürich Conservatory from 1983 to 1985, and Roland Moser at the Basle Music Academy from 1985–9, as well as studying the medieval lute with Crawford Young at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis, also from 1985–9. He gained the Working Year of the city of Zürich award for his compositions in 1992, and in 1998 was awarded the Queen Marie-José composition prize for Ordoble. A feature of Käser's composition is its musical approach to language and the linguistic aspects of music. His song cycles are central to his work, and although they are mainly settings of 20th-century texts they display an intense and often startling involvement with the classic models of Romanticism. Here, as in his instrumental works, the use of musical elements approaches that of linguistic elements: through quotations of style – they are seldom actual musical quotations – historically conditioned idioms are set in unusual contexts to convey meaning, generally with an effect of alienation or fragmentation. The composer's great sensitivity to sound and his sureness of touch allow him to employ a broad range of expression between irony and derivative naivety, humour and profound gravity. He has felt increasingly drawn to the possibilities of expression offered by the theatre and music drama.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Ausgedörrtes Schilf ..., 1988; Von der unendlichen Schneefläche ..., 1988; Unmerklich reiht sich Tag an Tag ..., 1988; Im jungen Grase ..., 1988; Napoleonskurve, 1994–5; Ordouble, vn, vc, orch, 1996–7; Untitled I, str orch, 1997

Song cycles: Kafka-Zyklus, spkr, S, 3 perc, 1987–8; 7 Lieder zu Volkstexten, S, fl, cl, str trio, 1990; Einspruch (T. Huonker, P. Zahl, newspaper texts), spkr, Bar, accdn, db, sax, perc, 1990–91; 15 Liedl nach Jandl, S, chbr ens, 1991; The Hard Core of Beauty (W.C. Williams), S, chbr ens, 1992–7; Musik zu Alexander (E. Herbeck), S, chbr ens, 1993–4; Vom Grundriss der Brötchen (F. Grasshoff), v, ob, pf, vc, 1994; Mirliton (S. Beckett), v, 1996; Neue Liebeslieder (F. Daumer), vocal qt, pf (4 hands), 1998

Scenic works: 17 moments musicaux, 3 performers, 1991; Vier Jahreszeiten für eine Stahlwand, 4 performers, tape, 1992; Nettchen (R. Walser), mikrodramatisches Singspiel, 3 actors, S, Bar, chorus, inst ens, 1995–6

Other works: Er-schöpfung, str qt, 1983–4; Schattenflüstern, 10 rec, 8 gui, 1985; Musik zu Dufay, A, rec, gamba, lute, hpd, 1989; 3 Chorstücke (A.X. Gwerder), S, 2 choruses, 1990; Zwischen den Schiene ..., wind octet, 1990; Dupuy tren, 3–6 rec, 1991; Abenteuer in Sachen Haut, fl, 10 str, 1993; Nachklang, vn, pf, 1995; Hommage à Wolfgang Borchert, 3 vv, 3 rec, 1997; solo works for pf, hpd, gui, vn, fl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Brotbeck: 'Bequeme Schräglagen: "17 moments musicaux für drei Spieler" von Mischa Käser', Dissonanz, no.40 (1994), 26–7

P. Müller: 'Bewusst naive Blicke: Uraufführung von Mischa Käsers Liederzyklus "The Hard Core of Beauty"', Dissonanz, no.56 (1998), 27–8

PATRICK MÜLLER

Kashin, Daniil Nikitich (b Moscow, 1769; d Moscow, Dec 1841). Russian folksong collector and composer. Son of one of General Bibikov's serfs, he was a pupil of Sarti in Bessarabia (1788), and in 1790 performed two of his own pieces (including a piano concerto) at a public concert given in Moscow by Bibikov's serf orchestra, of which Kashin was director in the 1790s. It is possible that he also visited Italy during this period. Freed from serfdom in 1798, he established himself as an important figure in Moscow's musical life from 1799, and, in addition to his activities as a composer, pianist, singer, opera conductor, teacher and folksong collector, he organized and conducted mammoth concerts sometimes involving a choir of 300 and an orchestra of 200. In 1800 (or perhaps 1805) he appeared as an opera composer with Natal'ya, boyarskaya doch' ('Natal'ya, the Boyar's Daughter'), which enjoyed great success, holding the stage until 1817; the libretto, by S.N. Glinka, was based on a novel by Karamzin. His two other operas were Sel'skiy prazdnik ('The Village Holiday', 1807) and Ol'ga prekrasnaya ('Beautiful Olga', 1809, libretto also by S.N. Glinka).

Kashin's zeal for Russian folk music prompted him to inaugurate the Zhurnal otechestvennoy muzïki ('Journal of national music'), which first appeared in 1806 and ran for 12 issues before ceasing publication in 1809. During the campaign against the French in 1812, Kashin composed a number of patriotic choruses, one of which, Zashchitniki Petrova grada ('The Defenders of Petrov Town'), achieved great popularity. Makar'yevskaya yarmarka ('The Fair at Makar'yev'), a stage piece by M.N. Zagoskin for which Kashin provided music in 1817, reflects the increased national colouring in Russian culture after 1812. Kashin was also attached to Moscow University, and a year before his death founded a music school. In 1833 and 1834 he published his three-volume collection of Russian folksongs, Russkiye narodnïye pesni, which contains arrangements of 108 tunes, some of which had appeared in his earlier Journal of National Music.

It is difficult to judge Kashin as an opera composer, since the music of all except Natal'ya, the Boyar's Daughter is lost, like much of his other music. In what has survived he shows himself to have been a typical Russian composer of the early 19th century, depending on foreign styles and writing in a characterless manner; his compositions are of purely historical interest. As an arranger of folksongs he belonged to the period before Russian musicians had become scrupulous about preserving the integrity of the tunes or had developed the ability to furnish them with distinctive accompaniments. Nevertheless, within their limitations, Kashin's straightforward arrangements are workmanlike and among the best of the period. In addition, he wrote original pieces in imitation of a folk idiom and frequently used folksongs as the basis of instrumental variations.

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Russkiye narodnïye pesni [Russian folksongs] (Moscow, 1833–4); ed. V. Belyayev (Moscow, 1959)

WORKS

lost unless otherwise stated

Stage: Natal'ya, boyarskaya doch' [Natal'ya, the Boyar's Daughter] (op, S.N. Glinka, after Karamzin), 1800 or 1805, MS in library of the Malïy Theatre, Moscow; Sel'skiy prazdnik [The Village Holiday] (op), 1807; Ol'ga prekrasnaya [Beautiful Olga] (op, S.N. Glinka), 1809; Makar'yevskaya yarmarka [The Fair at Makar'yev] (incid music, M.N. Zagoskin), 1817

Vocal: Festive choruses, incl. Zashchitniki Petrova grada [The Defenders of Petrov Town], 1812 (St Petersburg, 1813); 15 folksong arrs., chorus; songs

Inst: Pf Conc., by 1790; Pf Trio; pf variations; other pf pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.N. Glinka: Zapiski [Memoirs] (St Petersburg, 1895)

N. Findeyzen: Ocherki po istorii muzïki v Rossii s drevneyshikh vremyon do kontsa XVIII veka [Essays on the history of music in Russia from ancient times to the end of the 18th century], ii (Moscow and Leningrad, 1929)

B.V. Asaf'yev: Russkaya muzïka ot nachala XIX stoletiya [Russian music from the beginning of the 19th century] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1930, rev. 2/1968 by Ye.M. Orlova as Russkaya muzïka: XIX i nachala XX veka [Russian music: the 19th and early 20th centuries]; Eng. trans., 1953)

M.S. Druskin and Yu.V. Keldïsh, eds.: Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki 1790–1825 [Essays on the history of Russian music, 1790–1825] (Leningrad, 1956)

G.R. Seaman: History of Russian Music (Oxford, 1967)

DAVID BROWN

Kashkashian, Kim (b Detroit, 31 Aug 1952). American viola player and teacher of Armenian descent. She studied at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore with Walter Trampler (1969–70) and Karen Tuttle (1970–75), and won both the Lionel Tertis and the ARD (Munich) competitions. Her career developed rapidly both as a soloist and chamber music player, and also as a teacher. She was a faculty member at the New School of Music in Philadelphia (1981–6), the Mannes College in New York (1983–6) and the University of Indiana School of Music in Bloomington (1985–7), and teaches regularly at the Lausanne Conservatoire. She has also taught at the Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg since 1989 and teaches regularly at festivals such as Marlboro, Spoleto and Lockenhaus. A fine chamber music player, she has played with the Beaux Arts Trio and the Guarneri, Galimir and Tokyo string quartets. In 1984 she discovered two unpublished sonatas for viola by Hindemith which she subsequently recorded. Kashkashian has collaborated with many contemporary composers who have written works for her; these include Sofiya Gubaydulina, Schnittke, Betsy Jolas, Alvin Brehm and Meyer Kupferman. She also took part in the first performances of Kolb's Related Characters (1982) and Penderecki's Quartet for clarinet and strings (1993).

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kashkin, Nikolay Dmitriyevich (b Voronezh, 27 Nov/9 Dec 1839; d Kazan', 3/15 March 1920). Russian critic and music teacher. Kashkin received his initial music education from his father, a bookseller who was a self-taught musician. By the age of 13 Kashkin was himself giving music lessons. In 1860 he moved to Moscow, where he studied the piano with Dubuque. His first critical writings appeared in the Moskovskiye vedomosti in 1862, and the following year Nikolay Rubinstein offered him a post as teacher of piano and theory in the music classes of the Moscow branch of the Russian Musical Society. When these developed into the Moscow Conservatory in 1866, Kashkin became a professor of theory, music history and piano, holding the appointment until 1896. In 1866 he also began a close friendship with Tchaikovsky. In addition to his personal teaching activities Kashkin published in 1875 a textbook on elementary music theory. This was one of the earliest books on the subject in Russian and remained a fundamental work in Russian music education for over half a century.

As well as contributing to the Moskovskiye vedomosti, Kashkin was critic for the Russkiye vedomosti (1877–8, 1886–97); his last article was written in 1918. Kashkin's period of critical activity therefore spanned more than half a century, during which time he distinguished himself by impartiality and discrimination of judgment, as well as by a direct and lucid prose style. Thus, while writing appreciatively of Balakirev and his nationalist circle, Kashkin could also give credit to Anton Rubinstein, and in the 1890s he wrote sympathetically of the new musical trends revealed in the music of Skryabin. His recollections of Borodin, Balakirev, Rimsky-Korsakov and, above all, Tchaikovsky form the most durable part of his work. Some of Kashkin's writings appeared under the pseudonym N. Dmitriyev.

WRITINGS

Uchebnik ėlementarnoy teorii muzïki [Textbook of elementary music theory] (Moscow, 1875/R)
Pervoye dvadtsatipyatiletiye Moskovskoy Konservatorii: istoricheskiy ocherk [The first 25 years of the Moscow Conservatory: historical study] (Moscow, 1891) with H.A. Laroche: Na pamyat' o P.I. Chaykovskom [In memory of Tchaikovsky] (Moscow, 1894)
Vospominaniya o P.I. Chaykovskom [Reminiscences of Tchaikovsky] (Moscow, 1896, 2/1954)
Opernaya stsena Moskovskogo imperatorskogo teatra [The opera stage of the Moscow Imperial Theatre] (Moscow, 1897)
Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka: po povodu stoletiyaego rozhdeniya [Glinka: on the centenary of his birth] (St Petersburg, 1906)
Russkiye konservatorii i sovremennïye trebovaniya iskusstva [Russian conservatories and the requirements of art today] (Moscow, 1906)
Ocherk istorii russkoy muzïki [A study of Russian music history] (Moscow, 1908)
Nachal'nïy uchebnik khorovogo peniya v svyazi s ėlementarnoy teoriey muzïki, izlozhennoy v prakticheskikh primerakh [An elementary textbook of choral singing in relation to elementary music theory, illustrated by practical examples], i (Moscow, 1908); ii, with A.V. Nikol'sky (Moscow, 1909)
Moskovskoye otdeleniye imperatorskogo Russkogo muzïkal'nogo obshchestva: ocherk deyatel'nosti za pyatidesyatiletiye 1860–1910 [The Moscow branch of the Imperial Russian Musical Society: a study of its 50 years' activity, 1860–1910] (Moscow, 1910)
Stat'i o russkoy muzïke i muzïkantakh [Articles on Russian music and musicians] (Moscow, 1953)
Izbrannïye stat'i o P.I. Chaykovskom [Selected articles on Tchaikovsky] (Moscow, 1954)
Izbrannïye stat'i o M.I. Glinke [Selected articles on Glinka] (Moscow, 1958)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Yakovlev: N.D. Kashkin (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950)
Yu. Keldïsh: Istoriya russkoy muzïki, iii (Moscow, 1954)
G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974) [incl. complete list of writings]
G. Glushchenko: N.D. Kashkin (Moscow, 1974) [incl. list of writings]
G. Glushkenko: Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïkal'noy kritiki kontsa XIX– nachala XX veka [Studies in the history of Russian music criticism from the end of the 19th century to the beginning of the 20th] (Minsk, 1983)

DAVID BROWN

Kashmir. An area of the western Himalayas which includes parts of India, Pakistan and China. The political control and borders of Kashmir are in dispute. The valley of Kashmir, in the upper regions of the Jhelum river, is the most densely populated area and is part of Jammu and Kashmir, the northernmost state of India. This entry covers the principal musical genres of the valley.

1. HISTORY. Culturally Kashmir is a meeting point between Persian-dominated Central Asia and India. The cultural history of Kashmir can be divided into two periods; Hindu (3rd century BCE to the 14th century CE) and Muslim (14th century to the present day).

During the Hindu period Kashmir was an important centre of Buddhism and Saivism, and the area from which Buddhism radiated further east. It was also a centre of Sanskrit learning and the Kashmiris produced important works on grammar (Mahābhāṣya by Patañjali), history (Rājataraṅginī by Kalhaṇa) and music (Saṅgīta-ratnākara by Śarṅgadeva). The Rājataraṅginī reports that during the Hindu period professional female dancers associated with the temples enjoyed a high social status and often became the wives of rulers. However, the musicians, especially instrumentalists, were seen in unfavourable terms, together with meat-eaters and drunkards. Musics from outside Kashmir were performed in the courts and some rulers were well versed in Sanskrit works such as Bharata's Nāṭyaśāstra.

Islam entered Kashmir peacefully through the activities of Sufi mystics (the Suhravardīs, Kubravīs, Naqshbandīs and Qādirīs) from either Iran or the Islamized areas of Central Asia. It became the state religion in 1320 with the conversion of Rinchin, the first sultan. In spite of fundamental philosophical and social differences Islam was easily accepted; impregnated with elements of Sufism it had much in common with the mysticism of Saivism and Buddhism. The conversion of the population was especially large among the lower castes and it eventually resulted in the division of the society into a Muslim majority and a Hindu minority, the Pandits. Gradually the paramount position of the Pandits was challenged and Persian replaced Sanskrit as the language of administration and learning.

Sufism had a major impact on all aspects of Kashmiri culture, especially on poetry and music. Kashmiri poets such as Shaikh Yaqūb Sarfī (d 1594), Ghālib (1797–1869) and Ghulām Aḥmad Mahjūr (?1885–1952) produced a body of literature based on Persian models using forms such as ghazal, rubā'ī and dōbeytī. Most poems written in either Persian or Kashmiri were heavily imbued with Sufi philosophy, symbolism and imagery of wine, love and intoxication.

Information on music during the early Islamic period is fragmentary and comes from the 'Ain-i akbarī by Abul Fazl and the continuation of Kalhaṇa's Rājataraṅginī by Śrivāra, Jonarāja and Sūka. From these we learn that musicians from India and Central Asia met at the court of Sultan Zainu'l 'Ābidīn (1420–70), whose reign was a 'golden age' of Kashmiri culture. Zainu'l 'Ābidīn's son, Haydar Shāh, studied the lute with Khwaja 'ABD'AL-QĀDIR.

2. TREATISES. In the 18th century, towards the end of the Mughal period, works specifically concerned with music were produced in Kashmir. Among them are theoretical treatises, the anonymous Karāmat-e-majrā ('The Marvel of Courses') and the Tarāna-e-sorūr ('The Song of Joy') by Daya Ram 'Khushdil', as well as anthologies of poetry, majmū'as, containing poems to be sung in specific suites in specific modes or melody-types (maqāms) to specific rhythmic cycles (tālas).

These theoretical treatises are primarily concerned with listing and classifying the modes. The maqāms are organized in a system of one reng, six āvāzs, 12 maqāms, 24 *shu'ba*s and 48 *gushe*s, thus following the duodecimal system found in many Arabic and Persian treatises from the Middle East and Central Asia from the 13th century onwards (see ARAB MUSIC, §I, 4(I)). The modes are associated with the zodiac, the four elements, utterances of the prophets, sounds of animals, inanimate objects and have assigned therapeutic properties, as well as having an appropriate time for their performance.

The material in the treatises is heterogeneous, containing elements drawn from Arabic, Persian and Central Asian sources as well as India. This heterogeneous character, combined with a few specifically Kashmiri elements such as the identification of one of the *maqām*s as Rāst-e-kashmīrī, provides a strong argument that these treatises were actually produced in Kashmir. The Karāmat-e-majrā and the Tarāna-e-sorūr are speculative in character and do not provide much information about the musical practices of the time. However, many of the *maqām*s mentioned in them are presently in the repertory of the Kashmiri ṣūfyāna mūsīqī and ṣūrnāy ensembles.

The anthologies, majmū'as, provide a closer link with the performing practice of the time. Many of the poems sung today in ṣūfyāna mūsīqī are sung in the same modes using the same rhythmic cycles as prescribed in the majmū'as. It is thus highly probable that both the treatises and the anthologies refer to this genre of Kashmiri music.

3. GENRES. Of the many musics performed in Kashmir, the majority are traditional Kashmiri genres, performed in both villages and urban centres. There are also genres recently imported, primarily from elsewhere in India, such as Indian film and popular musics, Hindustani music and Western popular styles. The majority of traditional genres are a part of the culture of the Muslim majority; relatively few belong to the heritage of the Hindu Pandits.

Often, however, the distinction between these genres is more in function and text than in musical style. The most prominent genres of the Kashmiri Muslims are: ṣūfyāna mūsīqī, considered by the Kashmiris as their classical tradition; the music of the instrumental ṣūrnāy ensembles, performed during the bande pather traditional theatre; and the traditional genres of chakri, nande baeth, nande chakri, rūf, wanawun and the music performed in the mosques. Hindu genres include the Hindu chakri and Kashmiri devotional *bhajan*s.

(i) Ṣūfyāna mūsīqī. Also known as ṣūfyāna kalām, ṣūfyāna mūsīqī is primarily the music of the Muslim urban élite. It is associated with Sufi circles but, at least in the recent past, it was also patronized by Hindu intellectuals who considered it a common Kashmiri heritage. It functions as both a ritual music performed at Sufi *meḥfil*s (meetings), especially of the Qādirī order, and as a secular music performed during secular *meḥfil*s and on the radio.

Ṣūfyāna mūsīqī is a vocal style performed by an ensemble of four to twelve musicians accompanying themselves on instruments (fig.1). The present-day composed repertory consists of 47 maqām-suites, each in a specific mode also named maqām. The performance of a maqām-suite opens with a short instrumental prelude in free rhythm, shakl, followed by a selection of metred songs. Each song, or group of songs, is performed in sequence according to the tāla, the longest and more complex tālas being performed before the shorter and simpler ones. Occasionally, after the shakl, the leader of the ensemble sings a nather, a solo vocal piece in free rhythm set to a poem of the same name. A radio performance of a maqām-suite typically consists of a shakl followed by two or three songs, each in a different tāla, lasting for 10–15 minutes. In the context of a meḥfil a performance would include a shakl, nather and several songs in three or four tālas lasting up to an hour and a half.

1. Ṣūfyāna ensemble from Radio Kashmiri Srinagar (from left to right): two setāris, santūr (played by the leader, Sheikh Abdul Aziz), sāz-e-kashmīrī and dokra

Of the elaborate extra-musical associations of the *maqām*s described in the theoretical treatises of the past, only the concept of an appropriate time of the day for the performance of individual *maqām*s remains. In the traditional setting of an all-night Sufi meḥfil, held during major Islamic holidays such as mi'rāj, the night-time *maqām*s are performed in the correct two-hour periods. For a radio broadcast only those *maqām*s appropriate for the time of broadcast are performed.

All the pieces in a maqām-suite are in the same mode, or maqām. Some of the names of individual *maqām*s come from Arabic and Persian terminology (e.g. Nawā, Arā'q, Segāh), some from Indian traditions (e.g. Asāvarī, Dhanāsrī) and some carry alternative names from both Indian and Arabic/Persian traditions (Bahār or 'Ushshāq, Tilang or Mahūr). The tonal system of the instrumental parts may be different from that of the vocal parts. The instrumental *maqām*s use an untempered heptatonic scale with the third and seventh degrees either 'natural' (shudd) or 'flat' (kōmal). The vocal parts of some *maqām*s use microtonal variations of pitch, especially on the third and seventh degrees. This use of microtonal intervals is not articulated by the musicians but in performance the use of the altered pitches is consistent. The altered pitches are either sung together with those of the instrumental line or they are omitted in the instrumental parts. The range of the vocal parts is up to a 12th and the intervallic pattern of the main octave does not have to be the same as that in the upper register.

*Maqām*s are identified not only on the basis of a hierarchy of modal degrees (the note of primary importance being the vādī, that of secondary importance the samavādī) and the microtonal variations but also by melodic formulae. All pieces in a single maqām are built from a limited number of arhythmic melodic modules, recognizable by the musicians, used in different pieces with varying rhythms and in a different order.

Rhythmically the music is arranged in 14 cycles, tālas, which range from four to 32 *mātra*s ('beats'). Within a tāla the *mātra*s are organized in groups which start with either a strong beat (tālī), or an 'empty' beat (khālī). In performance the tālas are realized on a set of dokra; Hindustani TABLĀ.

In a song a two- or three-line fragment of a poem is set to two musical ideas; the āstā'ī, usually in the lower register, and the antara, or bait, in the upper register. Between these sections an instrumental repeat, jawāb, is often played. Although in the anthologies of the 18th century about 85% of the poems are in Persian, in present practice about 60% are in Kashmiri.

Besides the dokra, the instruments used in ṣūfyāna mūsīqī are: the santūr, a relative of the Iranian instrument of the same name (see SANTUR; the SETĀR, again a relative of the Iranian instrument; and the sāz-e-kashmīrī, a bowed spike fiddle, related to the KAMĀNCHEH, with three playing and 14 sympathetic strings. Now played very rarely, the sāz-e-kashmīrī is the only ṣūfyāna instrument capable of microtonal intonation. In an ensemble the leader usually plays the santūr and the other musicians the setār. There is only one dokra player in the ensemble. In some ensembles, with the exception of the dokra, all the musicians play the setār.

Ṣūfyāna musicians have traditionally belonged to a single caste; however, by the second half of the 20th century some master musicians had come from outside that caste. The musicians are concentrated in three main localities in the valley. The largest group lives in Srinagar, with the others living in Watora and Bij Bihara. These localities have developed distinct styles of performance and repertory. Until the 1950s ṣūfyāna mūsīqī was associated with the dance of female entertainers known as ḥāfiẓas. There is little information on this art as it has now completely died out.

Presently ṣūfyāna mūsīqī is in a state of severe decline and, in view of the political instability of the area, its future is uncertain. The number of master musicians, often associated with Radio Kashmiri Srinagar, has rapidly diminished. Because of the low social and economic status of the musicians few young people are now pursuing it as a career.

Ṣūfyāna mūsīqī shares many features with the musics of the surrounding areas. Some of the maqāms show a melodic affinity with the Hindustani rāgas (e.g. Asāvarlī and Suhānī), Middle Eastern maqāms (e.g. Segāh) and Bukharan shu'bas (e.g. Sabā) of the same name. However, the principal architecture of the suite is shared with several traditions of the Islamic Middle East, and Central Asia places ṣūfyāna mūsīqī firmly within that cultural area.

(ii) The ṣurnāy ensemble. Instrumental ṣūfyāna maqāms are also played by the traditional ṣurnāy ensemble. This consists of several ṣurnāy (oboes, see ŚAHNĀĪ), one of them providing a drone, accompanied by a naqqāra (a single kettledrum also named dulas or duśra, see NAQQĀRA), a wosūl or a dhol (see ḌHOL) and occasionally a pair of hand-cymbals. Although the names of the maqāms do not always correspond to those used by the urban ṣūfyāna musicians, the heavily ornamented melodies of the suites are the same as those of ṣūfyāna mūsīqī. After the shakl one or two pieces from the ṣūfyāna repertory are played, followed by traditional local songs.

The ensembles are active in the villages and small towns of the valley and provide music for a variety of festive family occasions. The ensemble also accompanies the traditional theatre bande pather (fig.2). The shows, usually sponsored by a family to celebrate some special occasion, take place in the middle of the village. All the parts, including the female roles, are played by men. The plays are performed in a comic manner and may include social and political comments on current events. The ṣurnāy ensemble provides the processional music for the arrival of the troupe, music for the opening and closing of the play and music for the interludes between the songs and dances performed at the conclusion of the drama. Occasionally the ṣurnāy musicians are called upon to perform the vocal ṣūfyāna repertory for local Sufi gatherings in smaller towns. In this context they accompany themselves on setārs and dokra.

2. Bande pather ensemble from Kupwara, including (right) wosūl and ṣurnāy

(iii) Chakri. By far the most popular genre in Kashmir is chakri. This is a responsorial vocal genre for a solo leader and ensemble. Chakri is performed all over the valley, in villages as well as urban centres. In the past this was an exclusively male genre, but in recent decades a few female soloists have become leaders of the ensemble.

There are two types of chakri. The most common is a Muslim ensemble consisting of four to six musicians playing: a rebāb, a relative of the Afghan RABĀB; a sārang (see SĀRINDĀ); a nūt, a clay pot played with the hands (see GHAṬA); a tumbaknārī, a large goblet drum usually made of clay; and, increasingly, a harmonium played by the leader of the ensemble. The now rarely heard Hindu ensemble also contains: chumta, a set of small cymbals attached to a flexible forked rod; a geger, a brass vessel similar to a nūt; and various teacups played with sticks.

The Muslim chakri ensemble performs at family festive occasions such as weddings, circumcisions and also during religious holidays. In family contexts it often accompanies the bacha naghma, a dance-drama performed by cross-dressed male dancers. The chakri ensemble also provides music for Sufi meḥfils, especially of the Qādirīs. In this context it is always performed by men. The texts are Kashmiri Sufi poems, similar to those used in ṣūfyāna mūsīqī. The chakri music is very dynamic, with sudden changes in tempo.

The chakri ensemble also performs rūf, a vocal dance genre similar to chakri but characterized by a steady tempo. In recent decades the practice of following a chakri piece with a rūf piece has become common.

Nande baeth and nande chakri are two genres of rice-planting songs. The former is unaccompanied, performed while planting rice or cleaning the fields. A leader sings the elaborate melody and is answered by a group in short responses. The texts are mystical Sufi poems, often written by famous Kashmiri poets. The nande chakri style is similar, except it is performed while sitting, either inside or outside, to the accompaniment of a tumbaknārī and one or two nūts.

(iv) Women's song. During the month of Ramadan women from the neighbourhood gather in the evening and perform rūf. The genre is unrelated to the rūf performed by the chakri ensemble. The women line up in two rows facing each other, and holding each other's shoulders, move rhythmically backwards and forwards. They sing a largely improvised religious text which often has Sufi overtones. The singing is antiphonal and loud, using traditional stock melodies. The group that is ready first initiates the line and the other answers with a refrain, the leadership changing every few lines.

A similar style of antiphonal singing, called wanawun, can be heard at weddings, circumcisions, boys' hair-cutting ceremonies as well as engagements. Wanawun is also sung at the funerals of young girls, since it could not be sung at their marriage. The largely improvised text reflects the specific occasion and the singing is similar to that in rūf. The first group sings a line which is answered by a preset text, not always related, from the second group. During a short pause each group tries to provide the text for the next line; whichever group is ready first sings the next line.

(v) Religious musics. The Friday noon services in the major mosques in Srinagar are tri-lingual and musically elaborate. Besides the recitation of the Qu'ran and the adhān (call to prayer), always given in Arabic and sometimes performed by muezzins trained in other states of India, they include na'ts and munājāts (see INDIA, §VI, 2), both in Persian. They are explained and commented on in Kashmiri. In some mosques the leaders are trained ṣūfyāna musicians. The music is stylistically heterogeneous, drawing on elements of North Indian Islamic religious music.

Two kinds of bhajans are sung in the Hindu temples. One follows the styles of bhajan singing found in other states of North India, drawing on North Indian popular melodies; the other is Kashmiri. In these the texts, always in Kashmiri, are poems set to music that closely resembles the Muslim chakri, with the leader singing elaborate solos in free rhythm, followed by metred responsorial sections. The instrumental accompaniment varies from ensemble to ensemble, but it usually includes the tumbaknārī and the nūt.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

Grove6 (H.S. Powers)
Abul Fazl: 'Ain-i akbarī (1597); Eng. trans., H. Blochmann and H.S. Jarrett (Calcutta, 1873, rev. 2/1927–49/R)
J.C. Dutt: Kings of Kashmira (Calcutta, 1879–98) [Eng. trans. of Sanskrit works by various authors]
M. Aima: 'Folk Music of Kashmir', Marg, viii/2 (1955), 154–8
L. Picken: 'Kashmiri Musiqi (sa, ri, ga, ma): Part 1', JIFMC, viii (1955), 62–4
D.R.K. Kachroo: Tarāna-e-sorūr [The song of joy] (Srinagar, 1962)
S.A. Aziz: Kōshur sargam [Kashmiri do-re-mi] (Srinagar, 1963–5)
S.K. Kaul: Rajatarangini of Srivara and Suka (Hoshiarpur, 1966)
R.S. Pandit, ed.: Kalhana's Rājataraṅginī: the Saga of the Kings of Kashmir (New Delhi, 2/1968)
M. Aima: 'Music of Kashmir', Sangeet Natak, xi (1969), 67–73
A.Q. Rafiqi: Sufism in Kashmir: from the Fourteenth Century to the Sixteenth Century (Varanasi,1972)
P.N.K. Bamzai: A History of Kashmir (New Delhi, 1973)
S.K. Kaul: Rajatarangini of Jonaraja (Hoshiarpur, 1976)
Q. Qalandar: 'Music in Kashmir: an Introduction', Journal of the Indian Musicological Society, vii/4 (1976), 15–22
J.M. Pacholczyk: 'Sufyana Kalam: the Classical Music of Kashmir', AsM, x/1 (1978), 1–16
J.M. Pacholczyk: 'Traditional Music of Kashmir', World of Music, xxi/3 (1979), 50–61
A.S. Stein, ed.: Kalhana's Rajatarangini: a Chronicle of the Kings of Kashmir (Delhi, 1979)
S.A. Aziz: Ramūz-e-mūsīqī: ṣūfyāna mūsīqī ka tawārīkhī pas manẓar [Secrets of music: ṣūfyāna music, its historical background] (Srinagar, 1983)
J.M. Pacholczyk: 'The Status of Sufiana Kalam in Kashmir', Maqām: Music of the Islamic World and its Influences (New York, 1984), 28–9
J.M. Pacholczyk: 'Musical Determinants of the Maqam in Sufyana Kalam', Maqam, Raga, Zeilenmelodik: Berlin 1988, 248–58
J.M. Pacholczyk: 'Towards a Comparative Study of a Suite Tradition in the Islamic Near East and Central Asia: Kashmir and Morocco', Regionale maqam-Traditionen: Gosen, nr Berlin 1992, 429–63
J.M. Pacholczyk: 'Melodic Affinity of Kashmiri and Bukharan Suite Traditions', The Structure and Idea of Maqām: Tampere 1995, 115–24
J.M. Pacholczyk: Ṣūfyāna Mūsīqī: the Classical Music of Kashmir (Berlin, 1996) [incl. CD]
N.M. Buṭ: Ṣūfyāna mūsīqī: wādan sangit [Sufyāna mūsīqī: instrumental music] (Srinagar, n.d.)
S.N. Sopori: Kashmirī mūsīqī (sargam) (Srinagar, n.d.)

RECORDINGS

Anthology of Music of the Kashmir Valley, Ethnodisc of the journal Recorded Sound, xvi: Sufyana Kalam; xvii: Chakri; xviii: Surnay Ensemble; xix: Nande bath; xx: Ruf, wanawun and bande pather; xxi: Religious Music: Islam; xxii: Religious Music: Hindu (1982)

JÓZEF PACHOLCZYK

Kashperov, Vladimir Nikitich (b Chufarovo, Simbirsk province, 25 Aug/6 Sept 1826; d Romantsevo, Podol'sk region, nr Moscow, 26 June/8 July 1894). Russian composer. Trained as a youth for a military career, he left the service on receiving his commission and devoted himself to music. After piano studies with Henselt in St Petersburg, he went to Berlin on Glinka's advice to study counterpoint and composition with Siegfried Dehn. Back in Russia, 1848–56, he briefly resumed his military career, commanding a company at Sevastopol' during the Crimean War. He made his first stab at operatic composition with Tsïganï; a setting, begun in 1850 but never finished, of a libretto by Nikolay Ogaryov after Pushkin's The Gypsies (later the source for Rachmaninoff's Aleko).

In 1856 Kashperov returned to Berlin, resumed his studies with Dehn and became close to Glinka, who was there for a second educational visit. After Glinka's death the next year, Kashperov went on to Italy, where he lived until 1865 and produced three operas, the first by a Russian to be produced in Italy since the 18th century.

He returned to Russia at Nikolay Rubinstein's invitation to join the faculty of the newly formed Moscow Conservatory, where he was professor of singing, 1866–72.

In Moscow he joined forces with Aleksandr Ostrovsky, whom he had met in Italy. The playwright, a great lover and connoisseur of Italian opera, eagerly arranged his own most famous play, The Storm, as a numbers libretto for Kashperov to set in his wonted Donizettian manner (Groza, 1867). The story was stripped down to the love intrigue, which, denuded of its social and cultural milieu (the most essential of its components for most readers), is reduced to a typical tale of a fickle woman, a spineless paramour and a ridiculous cuckold. Several roles are virtually eliminated, including that of Kabanova, the heroine's mother-in-law, often viewed as the play's central character. The individual, scattered speeches and admissions of the lovers Boris and Katerina are gathered into big expository arias, set, Italian-style, in sequences of mounting tempos. Each of the four acts is furnished with an impressive ensemble finale.

Most critics wrote off the result as a joke, and Kashperov lacked the wherewithal to captivate public taste. He was the main Russian epigone of Italian opera in the second half of the 19th century, but taste in Russia was veering sharply away from Italian opera in the period between the Forza débâcle (1862) and the advent of Adelina Patti (1869). Discouraged, 'Il Signor maestro Kasperoff' (as Cui dubbed him) lapsed into indolence. It took him two decades to produce another luckless opera (Taras Bulba, after Gogol'), and at his death he was deemed a walking anachronism.

WORKS

Tsïganï, 1950 (op, N. Ogaryov, after A.S. Pushkin: The Gypsies), inc.
Maria Tudor (op, 4, A. Ghislanzoni, after V. Hugo), Milan, Carcano, 7 Dec 1859
Cola di Rienzi (melodramma, 4, Ghislanzoni, after E. Bulwer-Lytton), Florence, Pergola, March 1863
Consuelo (op, after G. Sand), Venice, 1865
Groza [The Storm] (op, 4, A. Ostrovsky, after his play), St Petersburg, Mariinskiy, and Moscow, Bol'shoy, 30 Oct/11 Nov 1867
Taras Bulba (op, 5, I. Shpazhinsky, after N. Gogol'), Moscow, Bol'shoy, 20 April/2 May 1887

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Serov: '"Groza", opera v 4-kh deystviyakh. Libretto A.N. Ostrovskogo. Muzïka V.N. Kashperova', Izbrannïye stat'i, ed. G. Khubov, ii (Moscow, 1957), 72–8 [orig. pubd 1867]
I. Turgenev: 'Ob opere "Mariya Tyudor" Kashperova', Sanktpeterburgskiye vedomosti (8 Feb 1868)
'V.N. Kashperov', RMG, i/8 (1894), 169–71
V. Kiselyov: 'A.N. Ostrovsky i V.N. Kashperov', A.N. Ostrovskiy i russkiye kompozitorï, ed. Ye. Kolosova and V. Filippov (Moscow and Leningrad, 1937), 67–92
R. Taruskin: Opera and Drama in Russia (Ann Arbor, 1981), 154–7

RICHARD TARUSKIN

Kashua [kashwa]. See CACHUA.

Kaşıklar (Turkish: 'spoons'). See LOZHKY.

Kasilag, Lucrecia Roces (b San Fernando, La Union, 31 August 1918). Filipina composer and administrator. She studied at the Philippine Women's University (BA 1936, BM 1949), at St Scholastica's College with Baptista Battig (teacher's diploma in piano 1939), and theory and composition at the Eastman School with Allen McHose and Wayne Barlow (MMus 1950). While her training in the USA developed a leaning towards neo-classicism, her active involvement as music director of the folkdance group Bayanihan significantly influenced her style, which is a combination of the rhythms and scales of Asian instrumental music with the structural and formal designs of Western classical music. In Toccata (1958) and Divertissement (1960) she used the kulintang, a Philippine gong-chime instrument. Kasilag's extensive output also includes a number of large-scale theatre pieces such as Filasiana Choral Dance Kaleidoscope of Asia (1964) and the opera-oratorio Dularawan (1969), as well as improvisational works, including Ekologie I (1972) for tape recorder and indigenous instruments and East Meets Jazz 'Ethnika' (1982). A prolific composer, Kasilag has composed hundreds of works in diverse genres.

A leading figure in art administration, she served as dean of the College of Music and Fine Arts of the Pacific Western University (1953–77), chair of the League of Filipino Composers from 1955, president and artistic director of the Cultural Center of the Philippines from its foundation (1969–86), president of the National Music Council of the Philippines (1973–83) and chair of the Asian Composers' League (1975–84). Among the many leading national musical and cultural organizations which she has headed are the Music Promotion Foundation and the National Music Competitions for Young Artists. She has won the Republic Cultural Heritage Award in Music (1960, 1966), the ASEAN Outstanding Award for the Performing Arts (1995) and awards from the BRD, mainland China, France, Japan, Spain, Taiwan and the USSR; she has received three honorary doctorates. In 1989 she was proclaimed National Artist.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Legend of the Sarimanok, orch, trad. insts, 1963; Filasiana Choral Dance Kaleidoscope of Asia, 1964; Dularawan (op-orat), 1969; Sisa (ballet), orch, synth, 1978; Legende (ballet), 1984; Trojan Women (incid music), chanter, trad. insts, 1994
Orch: Divertissement, pf, orch, 1960; Vn Conc., no.1, 1983; Vn Conc. no.2, 1994
Chbr and solo isnt: Toccata, wind, perc, 1958; Derivations I–IV, pf, 1961–89; Ekologie I, tape rec, trad insts; Ekologie II–IX, various trad. insts ens, 1979–89; 5 Portraits, 2 amp pf, gongs, kubing, radio, 1973; Visions: Dialogue, fl, Pinoy fls, 1996
Vocal: Misang Pilipino, chorus, org, 1975; Teacher dealry beloved (cant.), 1967; Trichotomy, 1v, Western and Asian insts, tape, 1967; Dichotomy, S, orch, trad. insts, 1973; De profundis, solo vv, double chorus, orch, 1977; East Metts Jazz 'Ethnika', 1v, jew's hp, jazz qt, 1982; Ethnic Mindanao Songs, children's chorus, trad. perc insts, 1989

RAMÓN P. SANTOS

Kašlík, Václav (b Poličná, 28 Sept 1917; d Prague, 4 June 1989). Czech composer, opera producer and conductor. He studied musicology with Nejedlý at Prague University and composition with Alois Hába and Karel, conducting with Talich and opera production with Pujman at the Prague Conservatory (1936–42). In 1940 he began working as a conductor for Brno radio, and in the following year he made his first appearance with the Czech PO. He worked with E.F. Burian at the theatre D 41 and at the Prague National Theatre (1941–3), at which he made his début as producer with Vomáčka's The Watersprite. In 1945 he and Hába founded the Grand Opera of the Fifth of May in Prague. In 1953 he returned to the Prague National, after which he established an international reputation as a producer. His daring stagings of Janáček in Prague have been widely acclaimed, and his use of television, film and projections brought new dimensions to Martinů's Julietta in Prague, Les contes d'Hoffmann in Berlin, Die Soldaten in Munich, The Fiery Angel in Frankfurt and Samson et Dalila in Milan. In 1969 he produced an imaginative Pelléas at Covent Garden, where he returned to produce Nabucco in 1972 and Tannhäuser in 1973. He was also in demand as a producer in Canada, the USA and Argentina.

His compositions are coloured by the folk music of Moravia and Wallachia, stylized in a manner that has something in common with that of Janáček; yet he also used serial techniques. He enjoyed most success with the stage works, and in particular with Krakatit, which was originally composed as a television opera but later adapted for the stage. The score effectively uses electronic means together with orchestral, jazz and pop music; the text deals with the possible dangers and profits attached to the peaceful or military use of atomic energy. His brother Buhumil (1894–1974) was an ethnomusicologist, and Hynek (1904–80) a musicologist and flautist.

WORKS
(selective list)

Zbojnická balada [The Brigand's Ballad] (op, 1, Kašlík, after V. Školaudy and folk poetry), 1939–42, Prague, Grand Opera of 5 May, 17 June 1948; rev. 1978 (3), Prague, National, 2 Oct 1986
Křížová cesta [The Way of the Cross] (op, 13 stations, J. Bogner), 1941–5, inc., unperf.
Krakatit (op, 2, O. Vávra, after K. Čapek), 1960–61, Czechoslovak TV, 5 March 1961
La strada (Spl, Kašlík, after F. Fellini; lyrics P. Kopta, J. Kainar, V. Nezval and J. Wolker), 1976, Prague, Smetana, 13 Jan 1982
Krysař [Pied Piper] (Spl, Kašlík, after V. Dyk, lyrics J. Brukner), Plzeň, Chamber, 27 Oct 1984

Ballets: Don Juan, 1940; Jánošík, 1950; Pražský karneval [Prague Carnival], 1959
Orch works, vocal works, film scores

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS; GroveO (H. Havlíková)
J. Volek and V. Pospíšil: 'Dvojí operní podaba Krakatitu' [Two sides of the opera Krakatit], HRo, xiv (1961), 296–9
V. Holzknecht: 'Podoba Václava Kašlíka' [The appearance of Kašlík], HRo, xxx (1977), 566–8
V. Kašlík: Jak jsem dělal operu [How I made an opera] (Prague, 1987)
E. Herrmannová: 'Za Václavem Kašlíkem' [For Václav Kašlík], HRo, xlii (1989), 392–3

BRIAN LARGE/MOJMÍR SOBOTKA

Kašman, Giuseppe. See KASCHMANN, GIUSEPPE.

Kasparov, Yury Sergeyevich (b Moscow, 8 June 1955). Russian composer. He is a graduate of the Moscow Institute of Energy (1978) and the Moscow Conservatory (where he studied composition with Denisov until 1991). He has been the chief music editor of the Central Studio of documentary films (1984–9) and since 1990 he has been artistic director of the Moscow Ensemble of Contemporary Music (MECM). He is a member of the Union of Composers of Moscow.

A turning point in Kasparov's development was his First Symphony Guernica – his first orchestral score – which won first prize at the All-Union Competition of Composers in 1985. His Ave Maria was his first international success; it won first prize at the Guido d'Arezzo choral competition in 1989. By preference a composer of chamber works, Kasparov uses the music and aesthetics of Bach and of both the Classical Viennese and the Second Viennese schools as his most important points of reference. His music is saturated with detail and displays a mastery of many contemporary techniques. Despite this, Kasparov considers that the avant-garde is now exhausted and that the composer must open up new horizons by rethinking the fundamental concepts of tonality, sense of tonic, and broader issues of stability and flux (in Russian: ustoy and neustoy). Perhaps as a result of his background in physical sciences, he frequently concentrates on rhythmic structures, interpreting rhythm as a distinctive kind of tonic, and more broadly, as the core of the thematic content of the composition. It was in this vein he wrote his Dvenadtsat' primerov sootvetstviy mezhdu fagotom, vosem'yu kontrabasami i vosem'yu litavrami [12 Examples of Conformity between a Bassoon, Eight double-basses and Eight kettle-drums] (1985). The recipient of many commissions (from the Zürich New Music Days, Radio France Festival and the publishers Le Chant du Monde, Billaudot and Sikorski), his works have received performances in festivals in Russia, Italy, Germany, France, Sweden and Finland.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Nevermore (mono-op, after E.A. Poe: The Raven), Bar, 17 insts, 1992
Orch: Sym. no.1 'Guernica', 1984; Sym. no.2 'Kreutzer-Sinfonie', 1986; Linkos, sequence for orch, 1988; Ob Conc., 1988; Genesis, microsym., 1989; Sym. no.3 'Ecclesiastes', 1999; Logos, conc., 1993; Bn Conc., 1996;
Chbr and solo inst: Diffusion, offstage tuba, 3 ens, 1988; Epitaph in Memory of Alban Berg, ob, vn, hp, perc, 1988; Invention, str qt, 1989; Chbr Sym. no.1 'Silencium', 14 insts, 1989; Sonata-infernale, bn, 1989; Cantus firmus, vn, 1990; Credo, org, 1990; Devil's Trills, 16 insts, 1990; Notturno, cl, vn, pf, 1990; Postludio, hp, 1990; Sketch of the Picture with Collage, tpt, vn, pf, 1990; Variations, cl, pf, 1990; Goat's Song, bn, db, perc, 1991; Landscape Fading into Infinity, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1992; Over Eternal Peace, bn, 14 insts, 1992; Schoenberg–Space, vn, vc, pf, 1993; Briefly about Serious Matters, trbn, org, 1994; Game of Gale, t sax, pf, mar, 1994; Touching, 16 insts, 1994; 7 Illusory Images of Memory, 16 insts, 1995; 12 Samples of Interrelations, bn, 8 db, 8 timp, 1995
Vocal: Ave Maria, 12 solo vv, vn, org, vib, 1989; Stabat mater, S, str qt, 1991; A Dream (after Poe), S, org, 1996; Effet de Nuit (after P. Verlaine), B-Bar, cl, hn, vc, pf, vib, 1996
El-ac: Chaconne, bn, vc, elecs, 1992; Reminiscence, pf, elecs, 1993

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CC (G. McBurney)
F.C. Lemaire: La musique du XXe siècle en Russie et dans les anciennes républiques soviétiques (Paris, 1994)
P. Pospelov: 'Yury Kasparov: tonika muzïkal'noy zhizni' [Kasparov: the tonic of musical life], Muzïka iz bïvshego SSSR, ed. V. Tsenova, ii (Moscow, 1996)

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kasprzyk, Jacek (b Biała Podlaska, 10 Aug 1952). Polish conductor. He studied under Stanisław Wisłocki at the Warsaw Academy of Music and made his début at the Wielki Theatre, Warsaw, in 1975 (Don Giovanni). In 1977 he won third prize at the Karajan International Competition and was appointed principal conductor of the Polish Radio National SO in Katowice, becoming artistic director in 1980. Meanwhile he made his foreign début at Düsseldorf in 1976 (Queen of Spades) and his US début (at Carnegie Hall) in 1978. After moving to London Kasprzyk became principal conductor of the Wren Orchestra in 1983, and the same year conducted the LSO and the Hallé Orchestra as well as touring with the Chamber Orchestra of Europe. In 1984 he made his Proms début with the BBC Welsh SO. From 1991 to 1995 he was principal conductor of the North Netherlands Orchestra and in 1992 became principal guest conductor of the English Sinfonia; in 1995 he made his début with the New Zealand SO, in 1996 was appointed principal guest conductor of the Warsaw National PO, and became artistic director of the Wielki Theatre, Warsaw in 1998. Kasprzyk has also appeared frequently as an opera conductor; he conducted A Midsummer Night's Dream in Bordeaux (1985), Weill's Seven Deadly Sins in Lyons (1987–8), Der fliegende Holländer for Opera North (1989) and Il barbiere di Siviglia for the ENO (1992). His recordings include symphonies by Schubert, Mahler, Rachmaninoff and Gorecki, and a notably atmospheric account of Szymanowski's Symphony no.2.

LUDWIK ERHARDT

Kassa (Hung.). See KOŠICE.

Kassal, Luis. See KALAŠ, JULIUS.

Kassel. City in Germany. Under the rule of the Hesse landgraves Kassel enjoyed several periods of musical prominence: with Schütz in the 17th century, with outstanding productions of French and Italian opera in the 18th century, and with Spohr in the 19th century; it is still an important musical centre. The earliest documented evidence of Kassel dates from 913. In 1170 the city obtained its charter. It was the seat of the landgraves of Hesse from 1277 until 1807, when it became capital of the Kingdom of Westphalia under Jérôme Bonaparte; in 1813 it was once more the seat of the landgrave, called Prince-Elector of Hesse from 1803. In 1866 the Hesse electorate was annexed by Prussia, and Kassel became capital of the Prussian province of Hesse-Nassau. After the partitioning of Germany in 1945 Kassel became part of the West German state of Hesse.

Kassel's earliest churches were the Ahnaberg monastery (founded 1148, building demolished 1897) and the Carmelite convent (1262–1526) with the Brüderkirche. In 1364 the Kollegiatstift St Martin was established in the Martinskirche. All the churches in Kassel had organs at early dates; the Martinskirche had its first perhaps as early as 1390 and was given a second in the 15th century. By 1402 the city's churches were employing singers. The court organist, in addition to his responsibilities at court, performed at the Martinskirche and the Brüderkirche. The organs were restored or replaced on many occasions, and in 1732 Bach stayed briefly in the city to try the reconstructed organ at the Martinskirche. Nevertheless, Kassel's church music was not particularly outstanding until 1960, when Klaus Martin Ziegler established a choir at the Martinskirche which has become distinguished for its performances of modern church music, giving an annual Contemporary Sacred Music Week.

Moritz the Learned (1592–1627) was outstanding among the Hesse landgraves. Under his rule Kapellmeister Georg Otto established a 'Kassel school' of composers (see Blume), including Schütz, Christoph Cornet, Valentin Geuck and the prince himself. The landgrave corresponded with all the notable musicians of the day, and John Dowland, Alessandro Orologio and Michael Praetorius visited his court. He arranged for Schütz and other musicians to study with Giovanni Gabrieli in Venice. His compulsory introduction of Reformed (Calvinist) Protestantism did not decrease the splendour of his court Kapelle; he built the first theatre in Germany (the Ottoneum, erected 1603–6; see illustration) and after 1594 regularly engaged English acting troupes at court. He also founded a court school, which later became the Collegium Mauritianum (see below).

Ottoneum Theater, Kassel (now the Naturkundemuseum), designed by Wilhelm Vernucken, 1603–6: lithograph by Friedrich Fennel, c1900

Under the rule of Wilhelm VI (1649–63) the court composers Georg Diessener, Christian Herwich and David Pohle wrote instrumental music in the French style. Landgrave Carl (1677–1730) assigned to Daniel Eberlin, and later Ruggiero Fedeli, the task of reorganizing the Kapelle, which then employed several notable violinists and viol players: August Kühnel, Gottfried Thielcke, Johann Adam Birckenstock, L.A.F. Baptiste and D. Agrell. Landgrave Friedrich II (1760–85), having been converted to Catholicism, required not only Catholic church music but also Italian and French opera of his Kapellmeister Ignatio Fiorillo and court composers C. Kalkbrenner and Matthia Morelli. French opera at the court was placed under the direction of the Marquis de Luchet at Voltaire's recommendation.

In spite of numerous ballet, theatre and opera productions no permanent theatre besides the Ottoneum was built until Landgrave Friedrich II ordered the erection of the Komödienhaus and a court theatre in the palace of Prince Maximilian. Electors Wilhelm II (1821–31) and Wilhelm III (1831–66) both oversaw the renewal of Kassel's theatre, appointing Spohr as Kapellmeister and retaining Moritz Hauptmann, K.F. Curschmann and Carl H.A. Reiss for the court orchestra. A larger theatre was built on the Friedrichsplatz in 1909, but was destroyed by bombs in 1943. After being housed temporarily for 16 years in the city hall, the Staatstheater entered its new building on the Friedrichsplatz in 1959: Wagner-Regeny's Prometheus was commissioned for the occasion.

Kassel's opera enjoyed its greatest renown under the direction of Spohr (1822–57), who performed works by Beethoven, Wagner and Weber as well as his own. In 1866 the Electoral Court Theatre became the Royal Prussian Court Theatre, and in 1919 the Prussian State Theatre. Between 1856 and 1914 Carl Reiss, Wilhelm Treiber and Franz Beier conducted the opera, while Emil Paur, Mahler (1883–5) and Ernst Zulauf (1903–27) were also on the staff. Krenek was dramaturg in 1925–7. After 1914 the chief opera conductors included Robert Laugs, Christoph von Dohnányi and Gerd Albrecht. General music directors have included James Lockhart, Woldemar Nelsson and Adam Fischer.

Kassel had a resident court orchestra from about 1512. Landgrave Philipp the Magnanimous (1518–67) appointed as Kapellmeister Johannes Heugel, whose many manuscripts now form a valuable part of the Kassel library. Georg Otto, Kapellmeister under Moritz the Learned, was likewise exceptionally prolific, as were his students Schütz and the landgrave himself. During these years about 30 musicians were enrolled in the Kapelle. At the beginning of the 18th century the Kapelle was put under Italian leadership for the first time, with Ruggiero Fedeli and Fortunato Chelleri as Kapellmeister. Under Ignatio Fiorillo the Kapelle (numbering from 20 to 30 musicians) regularly performed operas and Catholic sacred compositions. Johann Friedrich Reichardt and later Felice Blangini directed the Kapelle under Jérôme Bonaparte; attempts to obtain Beethoven and Ries for the position were unsuccessful. Subscription concerts were instituted in 1815. Under Spohr's direction the Kassel orchestra was one of the largest and most important in Germany, and since his time, in addition to its opera commitments, the orchestra has given subscription and chamber concerts and has held special performances for Good Friday and penitential days.

There was little choral activity in Kassel until the 20th century, though Bach's St Matthew Passion was first performed on 20 October 1832, Spohr directing several combined choral societies together with his own Cäcilienverein. Laugs founded the Städtischer Konzertverein, which, with the Lehrergesangverein, he conducted in performances of Schoenberg's Gurrelieder and Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

The Musikalische Gesellschaft, with its own instruments, library and concert series, was founded in 1766. Members of the court Kapelle were frequent guest artists, and often such notable visiting musicians as Karl Stamitz performed with the society. Six musical societies were active in Kassel around the year 1810.

Between the two world wars, while Laugs was musical director, Kassel was the site of numerous music festivals. Its more recently established festivals include the Documenta, the annual Kasseler Musiktage (held between 1933 and 1938 and from 1952), the Contemporary Sacred Music Week (from 1966) and the Gustav Mahler Festival (from 1989).

At first the Kassel schools were influenced and controlled by the Hesse princes. In 1595 Landgrave Moritz founded a court school for pages, choirboys and children of the nobility. From this the Collegium Mauritianum emerged, which in 1618 became a Ritterakademie and was renamed the Collegium Mauritianum Adelphicum. The Städtische Lateinschule was founded in 1539, with Petrus Nigidius as its first rector. The Partim Schüler of the Kassel school chorus was also responsible for performances at church services. In 1779 Friedrich II created the lyceum Fridericianum from the older Lateinschule. Although around 1910 there were several music schools in the city, only the Musikakademie and the university music department have remained important.

The Deutsches Musikgeschichtliches Archiv, a central institute of research with an extensive microfilm library of music sources, was founded in Kassel in 1954. The Central Secretariat of RISM also has its offices in Kassel.

The publishing house of Bärenreiter, located in Kassel since 1927, with its numerous affiliated houses and recording companies, has attracted many musicological societies to Kassel: the Internationale Heinrich Schütz-Gesellschaft, the Internationaler Arbeitskreis für Musik, the Landgraf-Moritz-Stiftung, the Louis Spohr-Gedenk- und Forschungsstätte, the Gesellschaft für Musikforschung and the Mitteldeutscher Sängerbund.

Despite serious fire damage during World War II the Kassel Library (founded *c*1580 by Landgrave Wilhelm IV and now known as the Landesbibliothek und Murhard'sche Bibliothek der Stadt Kassel) possesses a valuable music department with unique manuscripts by Giovanni Gabrieli, Schütz and other 16th- and 17th-century musicians.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (H. Broszinski, C. Gottwald)

D.A. von Apell: Gallerie der vorzüglichsten Tonkünstler und merkwürdigen Musik-Dilettanten in Cassel (Kassel, 1806)

D.C. von Rommel: Geschichte von Hessen (Marburg and Kassel, 1820–58)
C. Israel: 'Übersichtlicher Katalog der Musikalien der ständischen Landesbibliothek zu Cassel', Zeitschrift des Vereins für hessische Geschichte und Landeskunde, new ser. (1881), suppl.7 [whole issue]
E. Zulauf: Beiträge zur Geschichte der landgräflich-hessischen Hofkapelle zu Cassel bis auf die Zeit Moritz des Gelehrten (Kassel, 1902)
F. Blume, ed.: Geistliche Musik am Hofe des Landgrafen Moritz von Hessen (Kassel, 1931); introduction repr. in Zeitschrift des Vereins für hessische Geschichte und Landeskunde, lxviii (1957), 131–40
P. Heidelbach: Kassel: ein Jahrtausend hessischer Stadtkultur (Kassel, 1957)
C. Engelbrecht: 'Die Hofkapelle des Landgrafen Carl von Hessen-Kassel', Zeitschrift des Vereins für hessische Geschichte und Landeskunde, lxviii (1957), 141–73
C. Engelbrecht: Die Kasseler Hofkapelle im 17. Jahrhundert und ihre anonymen Musikhandschriften auf der Kasseler Landesbibliothek (Kassel, 1958)
C. Engelbrecht and others: Theater in Kassel (Kassel, 1959)
R. Lebe: Ein deutsches Hoftheater in Romantik und Biedermeier: die Kasseler Bühne zur Zeit Feiges und Spohrs (Kassel, 1964)
F. Carspecken: Fünfhundert Jahre Kasseler Orgeln (Kassel, 1968)
H.J. Schaefer: 475 Jahre Orchester in Kassel (Kassel, 1977)
H.J. Schaefer: Gustav Mahler: Jahre der Entscheidung in Kassel, 1883–1885 (Kassel, 1990)

CHRISTIANE BERNSDORFF-ENGELBRECHT

Kassern, Tadeusz (Zygfryd) (b Lemberg, 19 March 1904; d New York, 2 May 1957). Polish composer. He studied harmony, counterpoint and composition with Sołtys and the piano with Jerzy Lalewicz at the Lwów Conservatory, and then continued his studies at the Poznań Conservatory with Brzostowski and Opieński (1922–6); he also took courses in law. In 1931 he went to Paris, where he was closely associated with the circle around Boulanger, though he was never her pupil. On his return to Poland, he worked as a lawyer and music critic in Poznań until the outbreak of war. In 1945 Kassern, who was of Jewish descent, went to New York as cultural attaché to the Polish consulate, and in 1948 became Polish cultural delegate to the United Nations. Thereafter he taught at the Third Street Music School and the Jaques-Dalcroze Institute.

Kassern's early compositions were influenced by Szymanowski. He first made his mark as a composer with the Concerto for Soprano, which took second prize in the 1928 composers' competition of the Society of Young Polish Musicians in Paris. In the 1930s he was considered by some to be one of the most gifted Polish composers of his generation. He based many works (e.g. the Piano Sonata no.2 and the Suita orawska, 'Orawa suite', for male chorus) on Polish folk music. After World War II he turned to classical sources as models for the forms and polyphony of his music. Many of his works were lost during the war.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops (all libs. in Eng.): The Anointed (Koniec Mesjasza) (4, Kassern, after J. Żuławski), 1949–51; Sun-Up (Jutrzenka) (Amer. folk op, after L. Vollmer), 1952; Comedy of the Dumb Wife (Komedia o niemej żonie) (Kassern, after Rabelais, France), 1953; Eros and Psyche (Kassern, after Żuławski), 1954, inc.

Orch: Fl Conc., 1934; Concertino, fl, cl, bn, 1935, lost; Dies irae, sym. poem, 1935, lost; Db Conc., 1937; Suita pastoralna, small orch, 1937, lost; Pf Concertino, 1940, lost; Conc., str, 1944; Concertino, ob, str, 1946; Concertino, fl, xyl, cel, str, 1948; Teen-Age Concs., pf, orch: no.1, F, 1952, no.3, C, 1955; no.4, F, 1955

Vocal: Conc. (T. Miciński), S, orch, 1928; Malowaski (children's cant., K. Iłłakowiczówna), S, chorus, orch, 1934, lost; 4 motety kopernikowskie (J. Kasprowicza, after Copernicus), boys' chorus, male chorus, 1937; Suita orawska, unaccomp. male chorus, 1938; songs and folksong arrs.

Other inst: Pf Sonata no.1, 1926, lost; Pf Sonatina no.1, 1935; Pf Sonata no.2 'Orawska', 1937; Pf Sonatina no.2, 1944; Pf Sonatina no.3 'Kolędowa', 1945; Sonata brevis, pf, 1945; Sonatina, fl, pf, 1948; 4 Minatures/Piano, 1949; Sonatina on Themes of Stephen Foster, 1951; Słodki kramik (Candy Music Bk), 1955

Principal publishers: PWM, Schirmer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (A. Mrygón)
T. Chylińska: 'Ze Stanow Zjednoczonych do Polski' [From the USA to Poland], RM, xxxii/7 (1987), 3–6

BOGUSŁAW SCHÄFFER/R

Kassia [Cassia, Kasia, Eikasia, Ikasia, Kasianē, Kassianē] (b 810 CE; d by 867). Byzantine-Greek composer and hymnographer. Born into a wealthy family associated with the imperial court in Constantinople, she received a sophisticated education, including the study of classical Greek literature (the influence of which may be seen in her liturgical and secular poetry, epigrams and moral sayings), and was once considered as a possible bride for the Emperor Theophilus. She became the abbess of a monastery and during the reigns of Theophilus (829–42) and his son Michael (842–67) wrote a number of liturgical compositions to contemporary texts, some of which may be settings of her own poems.

More than 50 liturgical works have been attributed to Kassia (although the authenticity of 26 is now disputed), the majority of them stichēra. Her most famous composition in this genre is the hymn Augoustou monarchēsantos ('Augustus was reigning') for Hesperinos on Christmas Day; its melody was so well known in medieval Byzantium that it was mentioned in the chronicles. Words and music are closely interlinked in this hymn: the text compares and contrasts the reign of Augustus (27 BCE–14 CE), the first Roman emperor, with the rule of Jesus Christ, and the comparison is underlined by the use of paired, rhyming couplets with corresponding paired lines of music, exemplifying the sequence form. Most of Kassia's melodies are concise, syllabic settings that closely reflect the rhythms and structures of the text; musical motifs are often used to symbolize and mirror the words and there is a preference for the second and fourth modes. Kassia is the only hymnographer to have written a penitential hymn on Mary Magdalene, Kyrie hē en pollais.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MUSIC EDITIONS

D. Touliatos, ed.: Kassia: Six Stichēra (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1996)
D. Touliatos: 'Kassia (ca. 810–between 843 and 867)', Women Composers: Music through the Ages, ed. M.F. Schleifer and S. Glickman (New York, 1996), i, 1–24 [incl. catalogue, facs., transcrs.]
D. Touliatos, ed.: Kassia: Thirteen Compositions (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1999)
D. Touliatos, ed.: Kassia: Complete Compositions (Bryn Mawr, PA, in preparation)

STUDIES

K. Krumbacher: 'Kassia', Sitzungsberichte der philosophisch-philologischen und der historischen Klasse der bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften (1897), 305–70
H.J.W. Tillyard: 'A Musical Study of the Hymns of Cassia', Byzantinische Zeitschrift, xx (1911), 420–85
I. Rochow: Studien zu der Person, den Werken und dem Nachleben der Dichterin Kassia (Berlin, 1967)
J. Raasted: 'Voice and Verse in a Troparion of Cassia', Studies in Eastern Chant, iii, ed. M. Velimirović (London, 1973), 171–8
D. Touliatos-Banker: 'Women Composers of Medieval Byzantine Chant', College Music Symposium, xxiv/1 (1984), 62–80 [incl. catalogue and transcr. of Kassia's works]

A. Tripolitis: Kassia: the Legend, the Woman and her Work (New York, 1992)
D. Touliatos: 'The Traditional Role of Greek Women in Music from Antiquity to the End of the Byzantine Empire', Rediscovering the Muses: Women's Musical Traditions, ed. K. Marshall (Boston, 1993), 111–23, 250–53

DIANE TOULIATOS

Kastagnetten (Ger.). See CASTANETS.

Kastal'sky, Aleksandr Dmitriyevich (b Moscow, 16/28 Nov 1856; d Moscow, 17 Dec 1926). Russian composer and folklorist. The son of a priest, he acquired his musical education at the Moscow Conservatory (1876–78), where he studied music theory, composition and the piano. In 1887 he joined the Moscow Synodal School of Church Singing as a piano teacher on the recommendation of his teacher, Tchaikovsky. In later years he taught musical and theoretical disciplines and folklore at the schools of the Synod and the Philharmonia, as well as at the People's Conservatory in Moscow. Kastal'sky was also active as a conductor (from 1891 he was assistant to the precentor, and from 1903 precentor of the Synodal Choir), and in studying folksongs and Russian music of the Middle Ages. From 1910 to 1918 Kastal'sky was the director of the Synodal School of Church Singing and did much work in transforming it into a higher educational establishment for choral training.

Kastal'sky's first choral works date from 1896, and like his later works in this genre, they were written for the Synodal Choir. In the period up to the 1917 Revolution he wrote over 130 works for the church, bringing him recognition as the foremost composer of liturgical music in Russia and the creator of a musical language based on old Russian chant and Russian folksong. The outstanding representative of the 'neo-Russian' style in Russian art, Kastal'sky had a great influence on the sacred music of his contemporaries, including Rachmaninoff. He was also the composer of secular choruses and cantatas, the opera Klara Milich (1907) and reconstructions of early music. In writing such works, Kastal'sky can be regarded as a pioneer of a style perpetuated by Stravinsky, who, in works such as Svadebka ('The Wedding'), also drew on historical and ethnographic sources.

After 1917 Kastal'sky concentrated on studying and arranging Russian folksongs. This material forms the basis of two of his books devoted to specific features of traditional musical systems, and also of numerous choral works and works for voice and instruments of which the Derevenskaya simfoniya ('The Village Symphony') (1923), and Sel'skiye rabotï v narodnïkh pesnyakh ('Rural Work in Folksongs') (1924) are the most significant. His works with a political theme, written in homage to the times, are notable for their national colouring.

As director of the folk choir academies of Moscow and Petrograd (1918–23), as well as a professor of the Moscow Conservatory (1923–6) and a member of Narkompros (the People's Commissariat for Enlightenment, 1918–26), Kastal'sky was one of the most authoritative musical figures of the 1920s and took part in developing a concept of musical education in the new Russia, insisting on a distinctive path for the musical development of the country, based on its national traditions.

WORKS
(selective list)

CHORAL

Sacred choral: Liturgiya sv. Ioanna Zlatousta. Izbrannïye pesnopeniya dlya zhenskogo khora [The Liturgy of St John Chrysostom. Selected Canticles for Female Chorus], 1905; Stikh o russkom tserkovnom penii [A Verse about Russian Church Singing] (cant., A.D. Kastal'sky and N.L. Kastal'sky), chorus, orch, 1911; Bratskoye pominoveniye [Brotherly Prayer of Remembrance] (cant.), 1v, chorus, orch., 1916; Vechnaya pamyat' geroyam. Izbrannïye pesnopeniya panikhidï [To the Everlasting Memory of Heroes. Selected Canticles from the Funeral Service], 1917; Iz patriarshego i arkhiereyskogo sluzheniya [From the Patriarch's and the Bishop's Service], 1918; over 130 works for chorus, 1896–1926

Secular choral: Bïlinka, Slava (1902); Pesni k rodinye [Songs to the Motherland] (N.V. Gogol' and I.S. Nikitin), 1901–3; K zarubezhnïm bratyam [To our Brothers Overseas], B, chorus, 1921; Gimn truda [Labour Anthem] (I. Filipchenko), chorus, insts (1923); Derevenskaya (Sel'skokhozyaystvennaya) simfoniya [A Village (Agricultural) Symphony], chorus, orch, 1923; Troyka (P. Oreshin), chorus, insts (1924); Poyezd [Train] (Oreshin), chorus, insts (1924); V.I. Leninu: u groba [To Lenin: at his Graveside] (V. Kirilov), reciter, chorus, orch, 1924, perf. at Lenin's funeral; Sel'skiye rabotï v narodnïkh pesnyakh [Rural Work in Folksongs], chorus, orch of folk insts, 1924; Kumach [Red Calico] (N. Aseyev), chorus, pf, perc (1925); Pesnya o kladye [Song about Hidden Treasure] (D. Bedny), chorus, pf, perc (1925); Kantata: 1905 (A. Bezïmyansky), chorus, pf (1925)

OTHER WORKS

Klara Milich (op, after I.S. Turgenev), 1907; incid music for Stepan Razin (V.F. Kamensky), 1919; Korol' Lir [King Lear] (W. Shakespeare), 1919; Gannel' (Hauptmann), 1919
8 p'yes na gruzinskiye narodnïye melodii [8 Pieces on Georgian Folktunes], pf (1901)

Principal publishers: Jürgenson, Muzsektor

EDITIONS AND ARRANGEMENTS

Iz minuvshikh vekov [From Bygone Centuries], chorus, pf, 4 vols. (Moscow, 1906–1914)
Peshchnoye deystvo [Saving from the Furnace], B, chorus (Moscow, 1909)
Obraztsï tserkovnogo peniya na Rusi v XV–XVIII v. [Examples of Church Singing in Russia from the 15th Century to the 18th] (Moscow, 1915) [written in 1902]
Kartinï narodnïkh prazdnovaniy na Rusi [Scenes of Peasant Celebration in Russia], pubd in Muzïka i revolyutsiya (1927), no.1
Collections of folksong and street cries, choral arrs. of folksong and revolutionary songs

WRITINGS

'Prostoye iskusstvo i yego neprostïye zadachi' [Simple art and its complex tasks], Melos, ii (St Petersburg, 1918)
Osobennosti narodno-russkoy muzïkal'noy sistemï [Peculiarities of the Russian folk music system] (Moscow and Petrograd, 1923, 2/1961)
Osnovï narodnogo mnogogolosiya [Principles of folk polyphony], ed. V. Belyayev (Moscow and Leningrad, 1948)
S.G. Zvereva, A.A. Naumov and M.P. Rakhmanova, eds.: Russkaya dukhovnaya muzïka v dokumentakh i materialakh [Russian religious music in documents and materials], i: Sinodal'nïy khor i uchilishsche tserkovnogo peniya, vospominaniya, dnevniki, pis'ma [The synodal school of church music, memoirs, diaries, letters] (Moscow, 1998) [incl. articles on church music, 165–8, and selected letters, 269–312]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye. Braudo: Obituary, Pravda (21 Dec 1926); S. Bugoslavsky: Obituary, Izvestiya (21 Dec 1926)
I. Glebov [B. Asaf'yev]: 'Kastal'skiy', Sovremennaya muzïka (1927), no.19, 233–5
B. Asaf'yev: 'Cherez proshloye k budushchemu' [Through the past to the future], SovM: sbornik (1943), no.1, p.7
D.V. Zhitomirsky: A.D. Kastal'skiy: stat'i, vospominaniya, materialï (Moscow, 1960)
M.P. Rakhmanova: 'Aleksandr Kastal'skiy i perspektivï yego idey' [Aleksandr Kastal'sky and the outlook of his ideas], SovM (1977), no.6
B.V. Asaf'yev: 'O khorovom stile Kastal'skogo' [About Kastal'sky's choral style], O khorovom iskusstve (Leningrad, 1990), 90–94

SVETLANA ZVEREVA

Kastendörfer, Stephan. See KASCHENDORF, STEPHAN.

Kastens, Lambert Daniel (d Viborg, 30 Oct 1744). Danish organ builder of German origin. He was the leading figure in Danish organ building during the high Baroque period. He was a pupil of Arp Schnitger in Neuenfelde, near Hamburg, and eventually became one of his most trusted workmen. In about 1715 he settled in Itzehoe, and after Schnitger's death (1719) Kastens took over his organ-building licence in Schleswig, Holstein, Oldenburg and Delmenhorst in 1721; he also established a workshop in Copenhagen in 1724. He built new organs in most of the major churches in the city after they had been destroyed in a great fire in 1728; a few façades survive. His instruments are similar in style to those of Schnitger, whose traditions were carried on by Kastens's pupils Johann Dietrich Busch (see BUSCH family) and Hartvig Jochum Müller.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBL (O. Olesen)
N. Friis: Orgelbygning i Danmark (Copenhagen, 1949, 2/1971)
O. Schumann: Quellen und Forschungen zur Geschichte des Orgelbaus im Herzogtum Schleswig vor 1800 (Munich, 1973)
G. Fock: Arp Schnitger und seine Schule (Kassel, 1974)

OLE OLESEN

Kastner, Alfred (b Vienna, 10 March 1870; d Hollywood, CA, 24 May 1948). American harpist, composer and teacher of Austrian origin. He studied the harp under Antonio Zamara at the Musikverein Konservatorium in Vienna (1882–8). His first important position was in 1890 as first harpist with the Polish National Opera in Warsaw; from 1893 he played with the Royal Hungarian Opera under Nikisch. Through Nikisch's effort a chair for harp was founded at the National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music, to which Kastner was appointed. He played in Zürich with the Municipal Orchestra, gave concerts in Switzerland from 1897 and during 1901–2 and 1903–4 went to the USA as first harpist with the Philadelphia Orchestra. Between seasons he rejoined his family in Warsaw (his wife was Polish) and gave concerts in Poland, Russia, Finland and Sweden. In 1904 Kastner joined the Queen's Hall Orchestra at the urging of his friend Fritz Kreisler. He played in the London premières of Debussy's Danse sacrée et danse profane and Ravel's Introduction et allegro. Kastner succeeded John Thomas at the RAM (1909–13) and also taught at the GSM. At the outbreak of World War I he returned to the USA to play with the New York PO, and in September 1919 he became principal harpist on the founding of the Los Angeles PO, from which he retired in 1936. He was a highly regarded teacher during the period of intensive growth in the film industry. His compositions, which are all for harp, include 50 leichte Übungen op.11 (Bayreuth, ?1901), Richard Wagner-Orchesterstudien (Leipzig, n.d.) and about 20 other works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.H. Cambern: 'Alfred Kastner, Man, Musician, Pedagogue', Harp News, i/10 (1954), 6
A.M. Stockton: 'Alfred Kastner', American Harp Journal, i/4 (1967–8), 5

ALICE LAWSON ABER-COUNT

Kastner, Emerich (b Vienna, 29 March 1847; d Vienna, 5 Dec 1916). Austrian writer on music. He studied the piano with Liszt and was a conductor in Vienna (1870–72), but subsequently gave up practical music to devote himself to furthering the cause of Wagner, while working as a civil servant and later as a banker. He edited the periodicals Parsifal (1884–5, with the supplement Wiener musikalische Blätter) and Kastner's Wiener musikalische Zeitung (1885–8, with the supplements Musikalische Chronik (1886–7) and Moniteur musical (1887–8)), and in 1881 started a Richard-Wagner-Kalender, though this was published for only three years. With Julius Kapp he started work on Richard Wagners gesammelte Briefe, but owing to the outbreak of World War I only two volumes appeared (Leipzig, 1914), covering correspondence to the middle of 1850.

WRITINGS

Wagner-Catalog (Offenbach, 1878/R) ed.: Richard-Wagner Kalendar (Vienna, 1881–3)
Bühnenfestspiele zu Bayreuth (Vienna, 1884)
ed.: Briefe Richard Wagners (1830–1883) an: Berlioz, Boito, Cornelius (Vienna, 1885)
Wagneriana, i: Chronologie der Briefe Richard Wagners (Vienna, 1885)
ed.: Neuestes und vollständigstes Tonkünstler- und Opern-Lexikon (Berlin, 1889) [incomplete]
Chronologisches Verzeichnis der ersten Aufführungen von Richard Wagners dramatischen Werken (Leipzig, 1897, 2/1899)
Verzeichnis der Briefe Richard Wagners an seine Zeitgenossen (Berlin, 1897) ed.: 'Bibliographie [1900–1907]', Beethoven-Jb 1908, 139–81; Beethoven-Jb 1909, 331–86
ed.: 'Briefe und andere Schriftstücke L. van Beethovens, nach den Textanfängen geordnet von Emerich Kaster', Beethoven-Jb 1909, 214–318
ed.: 'Nachträge zum Verzeichnis der Briefe', Beethoven-Jb 1909, 397–400
ed.: Ludwig van Beethoven: sämtliche Briefe (Leipzig, 1910, rev. 2/1923/R by J. Kapp) Bibliotheca Beethoveniana: Versuch einer Beethoven-Bibliographie (Leipzig, 1913, rev. 2/1925 by T. von Frimmel) [suppl. to Nottebohm's Beethoven catalogue]
ed., with J. Kapp: Richard Wagners gesammelte Briefe (Leipzig, 1914–33)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Beechey: 'The First Wagner Catalogue', MO, cvi (1982–3), 215–16

M. LEDATA

Kastner, Georges Frédéric Eugène. See under KASTNER, JEAN-GEORGES.

Kastner, Jean-Georges [Johann Georg] (b Strasbourg, 9 March 1810; d Paris, 19 Dec 1867). French writer on music and composer. To respect his father's wishes he studied for a career in theology but this was abandoned in the 1830s. He was composing by 1826 and in 1830 was put in charge of the Strasbourg National Guard band; between 1826 and 1835 he wrote four operas, three symphonies, five overtures, ten serenades for wind, a piano concerto and numerous marches, choruses and waltzes. His first three operas were not performed, but after Die Königin der Sarmaten was played in Strasbourg (1835), the town council awarded him a stipend for study at the Paris Conservatoire. There he studied with Reicha (counterpoint and fugue) and H.-M. Berton (composition) and began work on the numerous treatises for which he was to become widely known. These include a Méthode élémentaire for voice and methods for nearly every wind instrument.

Kastner's marriage to a wealthy pupil, Léonie Boursault, enabled him to compose and write without financial worries. He wrote five operas in Paris, of which only La maschera (1841) was staged. He also wrote numerous songs and partsongs, mainly for men's voices. But his strongest interest was in wind music and he was particularly enthusiastic about the innovations of Adolphe

Sax. His two compositions for the saxhorn and a set of variations for the alto saxophone were among the earliest works for those instruments, and his Manuel général de musique militaire (1848) includes some of the earliest illustrations of Sax's instruments. Although his music never earned him much success, his theoretical works and writings on music won him a solid reputation. His Traité général d'instrumentation (1837, enlarged 2/1844) was the first of its kind and was adopted by the Conservatoire, along with its companion volume the Cours d'instrumentation (1839, suppl. 1844). Kastner reported the latest developments in the construction of wind instruments, in Germany as well as France, in the Traité, but he also described long-outmoded instruments, such as the cornetto and theorbo. The Traité certainly influenced Berlioz (1843) and the two men were good friends; in 1859 Berlioz gave Kastner the autograph manuscript of Roméo et Juliette.

Kastner wrote on a wide range of musical subjects: he contributed to the Revue et gazette musicale, Le ménestrel, the Revue étrangère and a number of German periodicals. At his death he left incomplete a vast project for a music encyclopedia. His most original writings were the nine livres-partitions, lengthy essays followed by music. These works attempt a synthesis of art and knowledge of a phenomenological or mystical cast; he tackled the relationships between music and death (Les danses des morts), music and mythology and mystic incantation (Les sirènes), music and phenomena of science (La harpe d'Eole) as well as other theoretical, historical and analytical works and several brief biographies.

His son Georges Frédéric Eugène Kastner (b Strasbourg, 10 Aug 1852; d Bonn, 6 April 1882) was a physicist who invented the pyrophone, an organ whose pipes were set in motion by gas jets; he wrote Les flammes chantantes (Paris, 1875).

WORKS

most printed works published in Paris

STAGE

Die Königin der Sarmaten (op, 5), Strasbourg, 13 June 1835
La maschera (oc, 2, A.J.F. Arnould and J. de Wailly), Paris, OC (Favart), 17 June 1841, vs (1841)
Le dernier roi de Juda (biblische Oper, 2, M. Bourges), concert perf., Paris, 1 Dec 1844
Unperf.: Gustav Wasa (op, 5) (1832); Oskars Tod (op, 4) (*c*1833); Der Sarazene (komische Oper, 2) (1835); Beatrice, die Braut von Messina (op, 2, G. Schilling, after F. von Schiller) (1839); Juana (oc, 2) (1840), inc.; Les nonnes de Robert-le-diable (oc, 3, Scribe) (1845); Pépito (oc, 3) (1846)

VOCAL

Choral: Trauergesang, acc. orch (1828); La résurrection de Christ, hymn, with solo v, orch (1835); Bibliothèque chorale, 72 songs, 2–4vv, unacc. (1838); Suite des cantiques, choruses, 3vv, unacc. (1838); Introduction à la bibliothèque chorale, 24 choruses, 1, 2vv, unacc. (1839); others, incl. some in Livres-partitions
*c*50 qts, duos and songs, incl. lieder, romances, ballades, dramatic scenes, most acc. pf (1836–48)

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Pf Conc. (1827); Märsche für Infanterie- und Kavalleriemusik (1830); 10 serenades, wind band (1832–5); 3 syms. (1832–5); 5 ovs. (1832–5); 2 Festival Ovs. (1858–60)
Chbr: Adagio et grande polonaise brillante, saxhorn, pf (1846); Fantaisie et variations brillants, a sax, pf (1847)
Pf: 13 valses nouvelles (1833); Grande march héroïque, pf 4 hands (1840); 9 polkas (1858–60); others, incl. many waltzes

PEDAGOGICAL

Elementary methods: voice, piano, violin, flute, flageolet, cornet (1838, 2/1845); cello, oboe, clarinet, horn, ophicleide, trombone (1845)
Others, incl. methods for saxophone, timpani

LIVRES-PARTITIONS

essays followed by works for chorus

Musik der Zigeuner – Les Romnitschels (F. Maillan), symphonie dramatique, with orch (1849–50)
Les danses des morts – La danse macabre (E. Thierry), with orch (1852)
Recherches historiques sur le chant en choeur pour voix d'hommes – Les chants de la vie, 28 choruses, 4–6, 8vv, unacc. (1854)
Essai historique sur les chants militaires des français – Les chants de l'armée française, 22 choruses, 4vv, unacc. (1855)
La harpe d'Eole et la musique cosmique – Stéphen, ou La harpe d'Eole (Maillan), grand monologue lyrique, with chorus, orch (1856)
Les voix de Paris – Les cris de Paris (Thierry), symphonie dramatique, with orch (1857)
Les sirènes – Le rêve d'Oswald, ou Les sirènes (Maillan), symphonie dramatique, with orch (1858)
Untersuchungen über die Beziehungen der Musik zum Mythus – La fille d'Odin, symphonie-cantate, with orch (1866)
Parémiologie musicale de la langue française – La Saint-Julien des ménétriers (Thierry), symphonie-cantate, with orch (1866)

WRITINGS

Traité général d'instrumentation (Paris, 1837, enlarged 2/1844)
Tableaux analytiques et résumé général des principes élémentaires de musique (Paris, 1838)
Cours d'instrumentation (Paris, 1839, suppl. 1844)
Mémoire sur l'état de la musique en Allemagne (Paris, 1843)
Manuel général de musique militaire (Paris, 1848)
La Marseillaise et les autres chants nationaux de Rouget de Lisle (Paris, 1848)
Other theoretical, historical, analytical works, some unpubd
Brief biographies in RGMP (1836–45), Jb des deutschen Nationalvereins (1839–41) and other periodicals [incl. H.-M. Berton, A. Reicha, G. Schilling, R. Schumann, G. Weber]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Ludwig: Jean Georges Kastner (Leipzig, 1886)
P. Spitta: 'Johann Georg Kastner', Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze (Berlin, 1894/R), 333–61
H. Bartenstein: 'Die frühen Instrumentationslehren bis zu Berlioz', AMw, xxviii (1971), 97–118
S. Carter: 'Georges Kastner on Brass Instruments', Perspectives in Brass Scholarship: Amherst, MA, 1995, 171–92

THOMASIN LA MAY/STEWART A. CARTER

Kastner, Macario Santiago (b London, 15 Oct 1908; d Lisbon, 12 May 1992). British musicologist, pianist and harpsichordist, active in Portugal. He studied music in London, Amsterdam and Leipzig (theory with Friedrich Högner, the piano with Hans Beltz, the harpsichord with Ramin and musicology with Hans Prüfner); later he went to Barcelona, where he studied the harpsichord and clavichord with Juan Gibert Camins and musicology with Anglés (1930–36). He settled in Lisbon in 1933 and in 1947 became professor of the harpsichord, clavichord and the interpretation of early music at Lisbon Conservatory and was appointed a permanent member of the Spanish Institute of Musicology. He toured Europe as a clavichord and harpsichord player and lecturer. He directed the chamber ensemble Menestréis de Lisboa, which was devoted to early music, and from 1958 worked for the Gulbenkian Foundation as musicological adviser and editor of early music editions.

Kastner was primarily an expert on Iberian keyboard music of all periods, but particularly the 16th to 18th centuries, publishing many editions of this repertory together with important studies related to it. His other major interests were music for harp and for wind instruments of the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries, which he also edited. In Portugal, he taught at some stage all the main musicologists of the younger generation and his influence was decisive in the establishment of musicology as a scientific discipline. He also worked at the Museu Instrumental do Conservatório Nacional de Lisboa (now Museu da Música), cataloguing musical instruments, and collaborated in the organization of several exhibitions. Spain recognized his outstanding work on Spanish music by naming him corresponding member of the Real Academia de Bellas Artes in 1965 and in Portugal he was awarded the honorary doctorate by Coimbra University and the grade of Commander of the Military Order of Santiago de Espada in 1984, and posthumously the Great Cross of the Order of the Infante Dom Henrique. The Festschrift Livro de homenagem a Macario Santiago Kastner, ed. M.F. Cídrais Rodrigues, M. Morais and R.V. Nery (Lisbon, 1992) was published in honour of his life and work.

WRITINGS

Música hispânica: o estilo de Padre Manuel R. Coelho, a interpretação de música hispânica para tecla desde 1450 até 1650 (Lisbon, 1936)
'La musique de clavier portugaise', ReM, nos.195–6 (1940), 139–45
Contribución al estudio de la música española y portuguesa (Lisbon, 1941)
'Tres libros desconocidos con música orgánica en las bibliotecas de Oporto y Braga', AnM, i (1946), 143–51
Carlos de Seixas (Coimbra, 1947)
Federico Mompou (Madrid, 1947)
'Los manuscritos musicales núms.48 y 242 de la Biblioteca General de la Universidad de Coimbra', AnM, v (1950), 78–96
'Parallels and Discrepancies between English and Spanish Keyboard Music of the 16th and 17th Century', AnM, vii (1952), 77–115
'Portugiesische und spanische Clavichorde des 18. Jahrhunderts', AcM, xxiv (1952), 52–61
'Le "clavecin parfait" de Bartolomeo Jobernardi', AnM, viii (1953), 193–209; abridged in La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 293–303
'Relations entre la musique instrumentale française et espagnole au XVIe siècle', AnM, x (1955), 84–108; xi (1956), 91–110
'Una intavolatura d'organo italiana del 1598', CHM, ii (1956–7), 237–43
'Algunas cartas del P. Antonio Soler dirigidas al P. Giambattista Martini', AnM, xii (1957), 235–41
ed.: J. Bermudo: Declaración de instrumentos musicales (Kassel, 1957) [facs. edn]
'La música en la Catedral de Badajoz', AnM, xii (1957), 123–46; xv (1960), 63–83; xviii (1963), 223–38
'Le rôle des tablatures d'orgue au XVIe siècle dans l'avènement du Baroque musical', Le 'Baroque' musical: Wégimont IV 1957, 131–49
ed.: F. de Salinas: De musica (Kassel, 1958) [facs. edn]
'Órganos antiguos en España y Portugal', Miscelánea en homenaje a Monseñor Higinio Anglés (Barcelona, 1958–61), 433–48
'Palencia, encrucijada de los organistas españoles del siglo XVI', AnM, xiv (1959), 115–64
'Veinte años de musicología en Portugal (1940–1960)', AcM, xxxii (1960), 1–11
'Harfe und Harfner in der iberischen Musik des 17. Jahrhunderts', Natalicia musicologica Knud Jeppesen septuagenario collegis oblata, ed. B. Hjelmborg and S. Sørenson (Copenhagen, 1962), 165–72
'Randbemerkungen zu Juan Cabanilles' Claviersatz', AnM, xvii (1962), 73–97
'Quelques aspects du Baroque musical espagnol et portugais', Actes des Journées internationales d'étude du Baroque [I]: Montauban 1963 [Baroque, i (1965)], 85–90
'Ursprung und Sinn des "medio registro"', AnM, xix (1964), 57–69
'Vestigios del arte de Antonio de Cabezón en Portugal', AnM, xxi (1966), 105–21
'Semitonia-Probleme in der iberischen Claviermusik des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts', AnM, xxiii (1968), 3–33
Preface to Antología de organistas do século XVI, PM, ser.A, xix, ed. R. Fernández (1969)
Antonio und Hernando de Cabezón: eine Chronik dargestellt am Leben zweier Generationen von Organisten (Tutzing, 1977)
Três compositores lusitanos para instrumentos de tecla, séculos XVI e XVII: António Carreira, Manuel Rodrigues Coelho, Pedro de Araújo/Drei lusitanische Komponisten für Tasteninstrumente (Lisbon, 1979)
'Problemas de semitonía en la música ibérica para el teclado de los siglos XVI y XVII', Joan Baptista Cabanilles: músico valenciano universal, ed. J.M.L. Cisteró and others (Valencia, 1981), 119–52
'Sobre las Diferencias de Antonio de Cabezón contenidas en las "Obras" de 1578', RdMc, iv (1981), 213–35
'A harpa em Portugal (séculos XIV–XVIII)', Boletim da Associação portuguesa de educação musical, xlii–xliii (1984), 12–16
'Die im Instrumentenmuseum des Konservatorium zu Lissabon erhaltenen Holzblasinstrumenten der Familie Haupt', Tibia, ix (1984), 128–32
The Interpretation of 16th- and 17th-Century Iberian Keyboard Music (Stuyvesant, NY, 1987)
'La teoría de Tomás de Santa María comparada con la prática de algunos de sus contemporáneos', Nassarre, iii (1987), 113–27

EDITIONS

Cravistas portuguezes (Mainz, 1935–50)
Manuel Rodrigues Coelho: 5 tentos (Mainz, 1936); 4 susanas (Mainz, 1955); Flores de música: para o instrumento de tecla y harpa, i: Livro de tentos; ii: Composiciones sobre temas liturgicos, PM, ser.A, i, iii (1959–61)
Francisco Correa de Arauxo: Libro de tientos y discursos de música practica, y theorica de organo, intitulado Facultad organica (Alcalá, 1626), MME, vi, xii (1948–52); Facultad organica (Madrid, 1974)
Antonio de Cabezón: Claviermusik (Mainz, 1951); Tientos und Fugen: aus den 'Obras' (Mainz, 1958)
Antonio Soler: 6 conciertos para dos instrumentos de tecla, MH, ser.C, Música de cámara, i, iii–vi, viii (1952–62); 2 × 2 Sonatas (Mainz, 1956); VI conciertos de dos órganos obligados, i–ii (Mainz, 1972)
António Carreira: Drei Fantasieën (Hilversum, 1952)
Silva ibérica de música para tecla de los siglos XVI, XVII y XVIII (Mainz, 1954–65)
J. Blanco: 1 concierto de dos órganos (Mainz, 1965); Secondo concerto, per due organi (Milan, 1972)
Carlos de Seixas: 80 sonatas para instrumentos de tecla, PM, ser.A, x (1965); 25 sonatas para instrumentos de tecla, PM, ser.A, xxxiv (1980)
Ascanio Mayone: Secondo libro di diversi capricci per sonare, Orgue et liturgie, lxiii, lxv (Paris, 1964–5)
Otto tentos del Cinquecento di autori spagnoli e portoghesi per strumenti a tastiera (Milan, 1970)
Antonio de Cabezón und Zeitgenossen: Kompositionen für Tasteninstrumente (Frankfurt, 1973)
José da Madre de Deus: Fugas para orgão do século XVIII, PM, ser.B, xlv (1984)

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO/MANUEL CARLOS DE BRITO

Kastorsky, Vladimir (b Bol′shiye Saly, 2/14 March 1871; d Leningrad [now St Petersburg], 2 July 1948). Russian bass. He studied with Stanislaus Gabel in St Petersburg and made his début in the provinces, going to the Mariinsky, St Petersburg [later Leningrad], in 1895. There he remained until 1930, singing in a wide repertory which included Wagnerian roles such as Wotan and King Mark. In 1908 he sang Pimen at Paris in the first performances of Boris Godunov outside Russia. For many years he taught singing in Leningrad, and at an advanced age appeared at the Bol′shoy in a supporting role in The Queen of Spades. He also became a famous singer of folksongs, especially with a male-voice quartet which toured extensively. A voice of fine quality, almost baritonal in timbre, is heard in recordings, impressive also in the low register, evenly produced, tastefully directed and well preserved in later years.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.Yu. Levik: Zapiski opernogo pevtsa [Notes of an opera singer] (Moscow, 1955, 2/1962; Eng. trans., 1995, as The Levik Memoirs)

J.B. STEANE

Kastsyukavets', Larïsa Filipawna (b Minsk, 15 Feb 1939). Belarusian musicologist. After graduating from the M.I. Glinka Music School, Minsk in 1961, she studied at the State Conservatory of Belarus, Minsk (1961–6) under L.S. Mukharinskaya and later gained the Kandidat degree at the Moscow Conservatory with a dissertation on the kant, studying with A.V. Rudneva (1978). She began teaching at the State Conservatory of Belarusin 1965, working her way up to head of the music theory department (1982–6) and in 1996 she was appointed professor of the Belarusian music department. Her research and publications have broadened the base of source materials for the history of Belarusian culture. She has deciphered the singers' alphabet books and the collections of melodies from the divine service of the Orthodox church and had studied the mode and intonation of the znamennïy chant ('Iz istorii drevnerusskogo znamennogo peniya', From the history of the old Russian znamennïy chant, 1981). Kastsyukavets' has deciphered and provided commentaries on amateur compositions by secular composers in Belarus of the 16th century to the 18th and has published several works on Belarusian musical culture of the past, such as Polatski sshïtak ('The Polatsk notebook', 1990). She has a particular interest in genre music, and is an advocate of the kant. She has also investigated the musical folk culture of Belarus, Russia, Ukraine and Poland, recording several thousand peasant songs, including research on the songs and the art of the performers ('Ob odnom tipe kupal'skikh pesen', On one type of Midsummer Night (Kupalle) song, 1983). She has organized concerts of newly-discovered music and has developed courses in musical palaeography, deciphering folksongs and their stylistic features.

WRITINGS

'K istorii rukopisnogo sbornika' [On the history of the manuscript collection], Voprosï teorii i istorii muzïki (Minsk, 1976), 206–28

Kantovaya kul' tura v Belorussii: issledovaniye [The culture of the kant in Belarus: a study] (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1978; Minsk, 1975)

'Iz istorii drevnerusskogo znamennogo peniya' [From the history of the old Russian znamennïy chant], Voprosï muzïkoznaniya (1981)

'Ananchïtskiya spyavachki' [Singers of Ananchït], Belarus', i (1983), 34–5

'Narodnïye pesni na stikhi Yanki Kupalï' [Folksongs set to poems by Yanka Kupala], Voprosï kul'turï i iskusstva Belorussii, ii (Minsk, 1983), 21–5

'Ob odnom tipe kupal'skikh pesen' [On one type of Midsummer Night (Kupalle) song], Pamyati K. Kvitki, ed. A.A. Banin (Moscow, 1983), 40–45

'Tanetssezza i yego pretvoreniye v kantovoy kul'ture' [The dance sezza and its interpretation in the culture of the kant], Voprosï kul'turï i iskusstva Belorussii, iv (Minsk, 1985), 59–64

Podgotovka i provedeniye fol'klornoy ekspeditsii: metodicheskiye rekomendatsii [Preparing for and conducting folklore expeditions: methodological recommendations] (Minsk, 1987)

'Belaruski patrïyatïchnï kant-himn Afanasiya Filipovicha' [The Belarusian patriotic kant-anthem of Afanasy Filippovich], Muzïka: vopït, prablemï, reklama, infarmatsïya (Minsk, 1989), 24–5

'Zhorstki ramans na partïynay hlebe' [A cruel romance on Party soil], Mastastva Belarusi, i (1991), 46–8

'Iz sposterzhen' nad istoriyeyu rozvitku ridzvyanïkh psal' miv-kalyadok' [Observations on the historical development of Christmas psalms and carols], Zapïskï navukovoho tovarïstva imeni T. Shevchenka, ccxxvi (L'viv, 1993)

'Kantavaya lirika na tekstï "Pesni pesnyaw"' [Kantï of the lyrical kind set to the texts of the 'Song of songs'], Pomniki mastatskay kul'turï ėpokhi Adradzhennya (Minsk, 1994), 207–20

ed.: 'Kupal'ski abryad' [The rite of Kupalle (midsummer night)], Belaruskiya narodnïya abryadï (Minsk, 1994)

'Stikhira Baharodzitsï na praklyatstse yerėtïkow' [The canticle of the Virgin cursing heretics], Pïtanni kul'turï i mastatstva Belarusi, xiii (Minsk, 1994), 54–8

Kantï Yepifaniya Slavinetskaha [The kantï of Yepifany Slavinetsky] (Minsk, 1996)

EDITIONS

Belaruskaya muzïka XVI–XVII st. [Belarusian music of the 16th and 17th centuries] (Minsk, 1990)

Polatski sshïtak [The Polatsk notebook] (Minsk, 1990)

Muzïka Belarusi XVII st.: rïfmativornï psaltïr [Belarusian music of the 17th century: the rhymed psalter] (Minsk, 1991)

Belaruskiya kantï [Belarusian kantï] (Minsk, 1992)

Belaruskiya narodnïya abryadï [Belarusian folk rituals] (Minsk, 1994)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Salawyova: 'Pyats' tïsyach pesen' [5000 songs], Rabotnitsa i selyanka, xii (1985), 14–15 [on the folklore activities of L.F. Kastsyukavets']

A. Salamakha: 'L.P. Kastsyukavets'', Beloruskaya ėntsïklapediya literaturï i mastatstva, iii (1986), 14

T.S. Yakimenko: 'Etnomuzïkologicheskiye issledovaniya v Belorusskoy akademii muzïki' [Ethnomusicological research in the Belarusian Academy of Music], Belorusskaya etnomuzïkologiya: ocherki istorii, xix–xx (1997), 177–80

TAISIYA SHCHERBAKOVA

Kaswa. See CACHUA.

Kas'yanov, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich (b Bolobonovo, Nizhegorod region, 17/29 Aug 1891; d Gor'kiy, 13 Feb 1982). Russian composer. He graduated from the Petrograd Conservatory having studied composition with N.A. Sokolov and the piano with Lyapunov. In his youth he had been a pupil of Balakirev and Glazunov; he was also an acquaintance of Yu.A. Shaporin. From 1918 until his death he lived and worked in Gor'kiy (Nizhniy Novgorod). In the first years after the Revolution he helped set up a People's Conservatory, which was later converted into Nizhegorod Musical Training College. He worked in the radio laboratory of M. Bronch-Bruyevich, under whose direction the first Russian radio concert was produced. Kas'yanov directed the music department of the theatre in Gor'kiy and also conducted the symphony orchestra. From the mid-1930s he worked closely with the Opera and Ballet Theatre. In the 1950s he became head of the local section of the Union of Composers, and in 1957 he was appointed professor at the Gor'kiy Conservatory.

Kas'yanov's creative work links him with 19th–century Russian traditions of composition, especially those of the Balakirev circle. Characteristic of this is his preference for operatic and other vocal genres. Russian historical motifs predominate in Kas'yanov's operas, which are frequently set within the vicinity of the Volga. The opera Stepan Razin is written in the spirit of a folk-music drama and draws on the folksong traditions of the Volga regions. Chorus scenes with folk elements are found in the opera Foma Gordeyev, based on a novel by Gor'kiy. The opera Ermak is set in the time of the conquest of Siberia; Kas'yanov's treatment is in the epic-heroic mould established by Borodin.

In his romances Kas'yanov sets classic Russian poetry. The mode of expression, psychology and emotional range of the romances is reminiscent of Tchaikovsky and Rachmaninoff, while the oriental motifs found in songs such as Vostochnïy romans (Eastern Song) suggest the traditions of the St Petersburg school. Kas′yanov also sets Russian poetry in the best of his choral works; these include Nye penitsya more (The Sea is not Foaming) after Tolstoy, and Osen′ (Autumn) after Tyutchev.

Kas′yanov stopped composing between 1957 and 1967 owing to loss of hearing, the result of a lengthy progressive illness. In later years he recovered and revised his operas and also wrote a series of piano works (in particular the 24 Preludes) showing his admiration for Chopin. His last works are characterized by a chamber-like tone of utterance and clarity of writing.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops.: Stepan Razin, 1939, rev. 1953; Foma Gordeyev, 1946, rev. 1966; Ermak, 1956, rev. 1961
Orch: Fantasticheskaya Syuita, 1947
Chbr: 2 pf trios on themes from Chuvash folksongs, 1934
Pf: 7 sonatas; 24 preludes, 1968; Ballade, 1970; Scherzo, 1971
Vocal: songs for 1v, pf after A.S. Pushkin, F.Tyutchev, Ye. Baratïnsky, A. Blok, V. Bryusov, S. Marshak, V. Inber and others; arrangements of Russian and Chuvash folk songs
Incid music for theatre

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Ugryumov: A. Kas′yanov (Mosow, 1957)
N. Blagovidova: 'Yubiley Kas′yanova' [Kas′yanov's jubilee], SovM (1962), no.9, pp.154–5
V. Kollar: 'Stareyshina gor′skikh kompozitorov' [The elder of Gor′kiy's composers], Muzïkal′naya zhiz′n (1971), no.16, p.21 only
I. Yeliseyev: 'Rïtsar′ kuchkistskikh traditsiy' [A knight of kuchkist traditions], SovM (1971), no.11, pp.39–42
I. Yeliseyev: Aleksandr Kas′yanov (Moscow, 1989)

TAMARA NIKOLAYEVNA LEVAYA

Katanga guitar style. Term coined by Gerhard Kubik in 1965 for a type of acoustic guitar music that had developed in the late 1940s and early 1950s along the Copperbelt mining area in Katanga (southern Belgian Congo) and Northern Rhodesia. Its main exponents include the guitar music composers MWENDA JEAN BOSCO, Losta Abelo, Edouard Masengo and others (Low, 1982). Hugh Tracey's comprehensive coverage of this style cluster (see Guitar 1 and 2, Decca 1170 and 1171) exerted considerable influence on the rise of popular music in Central and East Africa.

The Katanga guitar style embraces a stylistic conglomerate characteristic of a distinctive time period within which the most diverse individual forms and innovations became possible. Between 1946 and 1962 developments and mutations occurred prolifically, and this kind of music reached its peak of popularity. It was performed in a variety of township languages, including Ciluba (Luba), Lunda, Icibemba (e.g. Aushi) and, most important, Kingwana ('Congo Kiswahili'). The social environment of its exponents was that of mine workers and persons working for the Belgian colonial administration. Beginning in 1965 commercial and political factors marginalized this style. The mass media now promoted electrically amplified guitar music almost exclusively, and the major exponents of the Katanga guitar style frequently dropped into oblivion. Its techniques, however, persisted and influenced many guitarists in the region.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Kubik: 'Neue Musikformen in Schwarzafrika: Psychologische und musikethnologische Grundlagen', Afrika Heute, iv (1965), 1–16
H. Tracey: Catalogue of the Sound of Africa Recordings, 2 vols. (Roodepoort, 1973)
K. wa Mukuna: 'The Origins of Zairean Modern Music: a Socio-Economic Aspect', African Urban Studies, iv (1979–80), 31–9
J. Low: Shaba Diary: a Trip to Rediscover the 'Katanga' Guitar Styles and Songs of the 1950s and '60s, Acta Ethnologica et Linguistica, liv (Vienna, 1982)
African Guitar: Solo Fingerstyle Guitar Music, Composers and Performers of Congo/Zaire, Uganda, Central African Republic, Malawi, Namibia and Zambia, videotape, Stefan Grossman's Guitar Workshop (New Jersey, 1995) [incl. notes by G. Kubik]

GERHARD KUBIK

Katanyktikon (Gk.: 'compunction'). A penetential STICHĒRON or kathisma (see HESPERINOS, §2) sung in the Byzantine Office. Four of each type are set in each of the eight modes. Two stichēra katanyktika are sung as antiphons to psalm verses at Hesperinos on Sunday and Monday and the other two at Orthros (hoi ainoi) on Monday and Tuesday. However, from Lent until Pentecost all four are chanted one after the other at both services. The four katanyktika kathismata are normally sung in pairs after each of the two Psalter readings at Orthros on Monday and Tuesday, except during Lent when they are chanted only after the first reading; from Easter until Pentecost only two are used, one on Monday and the other on Tuesday. In addition to these two genres, the paraklētikē preserves katanyktikoi kanōnes by Joseph the Hymnographer, two in each mode for Monday and Tuesday

DIMITRI CONOMOS

Katchen, Julius (b Long Beach, NJ, 15 Aug 1926; d Paris, 29 April 1969). American pianist of Russian ancestry. Educated privately, he played Mozart's D minor Concerto K466 in public at the age of ten, repeating it the following year with the Philadephia Orchestra under Ormandy. Shortly afterwards he played with the New York PO and at the age of 12 gave his first New York recital. However, his parents then withdrew him from concert life and he subsequently entered Haverford College, Pennsylvania, where he specialized in English literature and philosophy. Later he claimed that such breadth of education was vital to his musical thinking and particularly to his view of works such as Schubert's B♭ Sonata and Beethoven's Diabelli Variations, speculative masterpieces that became central to his catholic repertory. Subsequently awarded a French government fellowship, Katchen left for France in 1946 and settled in Paris, which became his home for the rest of his life. An ambitious 20-year-old with a powerful musical intelligence and a virtuoso technique, Katchen quickly became a major figure on the international music scene and signed an exclusive recording contract with Decca. He included Britten's left-hand Diversions (which he recorded with the composer) and Ned Rorem's Second Sonata in his repertory; but the composer with whom he was most closely associated was Brahms. His cycle of the complete solo piano music was given in Berlin, London, New York, Amsterdam and Vienna, a formidable undertaking complemented by frequent performances of both the Brahms piano concertos and much of his chamber music. He recorded all these works for Decca, together with a vast range of other music. Katchen's death from cancer at the age of 42 robbed the world of a pianist who could transcend the printed page and communicate that music is the richest and most inclusive reflection of human experience.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Minshull: 'Julius Katchen', Gramophone, xlvii (1969–70), 21 only

BRYCE MORRISON

Kathakali. A dance-drama of south-west India. See INDIA, §IX, 1(iv).

Kathistē. Sign used in pairs in Byzantine EKPHONETIC NOTATION.

Katims, Milton (b New York, 24 June 1909). American conductor and violist. After attending Columbia University, where he studied the violin with Herbert Dittler, he changed to the viola and developed an interest in conducting. In both these activities his mentor was Leon Barzin, who at the time conducted the National Orchestral Association in New York. Katims was a violist and assistant conductor for the WOR radio station from 1935 to 1943, when he joined the NBC SO under Toscanini as first-desk viola, later becoming principal guest conductor (1947–54). During his time with the NBC SO he gave a masterclass for violists at the Juilliard School, was a member of the New York Piano Quartet, and was guest violist with the Budapest String Quartet. From 1954 to 1975 he was music director and conductor of the Seattle SO; he also conducted the New York PO, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Boston SO, the London PO, the Israel PO and other orchestras, and conducted premières of works including Visions of Poets (1962) and Spectrum (1964), both by Benjamin Lees, Leon Kirchner's Piano Concerto no.2 (1964) and Roger Reynolds's Graffiti (1966); as a violist he gave the première of Morton Gould's Viola Concerto (1952). Katims was a member of the music panel of the US Information Service (1960–67) and of the first Washington State Arts Commission (1961); he became a member of the US State Department Music Panel for Cultural Presentations in 1967. He was artistic director of the School of Music, University of Houston, Texas, from 1976 to 1984.

GEORGE GELLES/JACOB HOSLER

Katin, Peter (Roy) (b London, 14 Nov 1930). British pianist. He studied at the RAM from the age of 12 with Harold Craxton, and made his début at the Wigmore Hall in 1948. Concerts throughout England were followed by tours of Europe, Africa, the USA and Japan. In 1952 he made his first appearance at the Proms, and the following year achieved a notable success there in Rachmaninoff's Third Concerto. In 1958 Katin became the first British pianist to make a solo tour of the USSR. He specializes in Romantic and Impressionist music, particularly Chopin, and plays with a direct musicianship that is underpinned by considerable technical command; he has also directed concertos by Mozart and Beethoven from the keyboard. His recordings include Mozart's sonatas, Chopin's nocturnes and impromptus, Grieg's Lyric Pieces and Rachmaninoff's preludes, and he has written many articles on piano technique and interpretation. He taught at the RAM, 1956–9, the University of Western Ontario, 1978–84, and in 1992 was appointed to the RCM.

JOAN CHISSELL/JESSICA DUCHEN

Katowice. City in southern Poland, capital of the Katowice region and the principal city of Silesia. Since the end of the 19th century Katowice has been the most important musical centre in Upper Silesia, notable for its various music societies, workers' ensembles and folk groups. The first professional musical institutions in the city were created after Poland regained its independence in 1918. These include the Opera (1925), the Polskie Towarzystwo Muzyczne (Polish Music Society, 1929), the Instytut Muzyczny (Music Institute, 1925–9), the conservatory (1929), the Katowice SO (1929), and the Wojskowa Szkota Muzyczna (Army Music School, 1930), the only one of its kind in the country.

After the devastation of World War II new institutions were created which survive to the present day. From 1945 the Opera was directed by Adam Didur, a famous international bass. The Silesian State PO was formed in 1945 and has numbered among its artistic directors Stanisław Skrowaczewski (1949–54) and Karol Stryja (from 1953). The renowned Polish RSO, known as the Wielka Orkiestra Symfoniczna Polskiego Radia (WOSPR), was also founded in Katowice in 1945; its first music director was Witold Rowicki (1945–7), who was followed by Grzegorz Fitelberg and Henryk Czyż. In 1945 the conservatory was re-established as the Państwowa Wyższa Szkoła Muzyczna (State Academy of Music). In 1979 the institution changed its name to the Akademia Muzyczna im. Karola Szymanowskiego (Karol Szymanowski Academy of Music); it is notable for being the only Polish conservatory with a department devoted to light music. Musical education is also provided by the Gimnazjum i Liceum Humanistyczno-Muzyczne (Grammar School of Humanities and Music), Państwowe Liceum Muzyczne im. K. Szymanowskiego (Szymanowski State Music High School) and the music department of the University of Silesia. Other active music institutions include the Archiwum Śląskiej Kultury Muzycznej (Archive of Silesian Musical Culture), the Związek Zawodowy Muzyków (Union of Professional Musicians), the Związek Śląskich Szkól Śpiewaczych and the local branches (Union of Silesian Singing Schools) of the Zwią zku Kompozytorów Polskich (Polish Composers' Union) and the Towarzystwa Chopinowskiego (Chopin Society). Two important music festivals are held annually in Katowice: the Fitelberg Conductors' Competition, and (since 1979) the Jesień Gitàrowa ('Guitar Autumn'). Since 1952 the folklore of the Silesian region has been greatly popularized by the Państwowy Zespół Ludowy Piésni i Tanca 'Śląsk' (Silesian State Ensemble of Folksongs and Dance). The most significant composers working in and around Katowice have been Bolesław Woytowicz (1899–1980), Bolesław Szabelski (1896–1979), Wojciech Kilar (b 1932) and Henryk Górecki (b 1933).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Markiewicz: 'Główne tendencje twórcze w katowickim środowisku kompozytorskim' [The main creative trends among Katowice's composers], Muzyka, xix/2 (1974), 22–30

J. Bauman-Szulakowska: 'Polska kultura muzyczna na Górnym Ślą sku w okresie międzywojennym 1922–39' [Polish musical culture in Upper Silesia during the inter-war period, 1922–39], Księga in memoriam Karol Musioła (Katowice, 1992)

K. Bozenek: 'Česko-polsko-německé hudební filiace ve Slezsku 18. století' [Czech-Polish-German musical affiliations in 18th-century Silesia], ibid.

J. Bauman-Szulakowska and I. Bias, eds.: Twórczość kompozytorów środowiska katowickiego [The creative work of composers from Katowice] (Katowice, 1993)

JOLANTA GUZY-PASIAKOWA

Kats, Boris Aronovich (b Leningrad [now St Petersburg], 15 July 1947). Russian musicologist. He studied with Klimovitsky at both the Leningrad Conservatory (1966–71) and the Leningrad Institute of Theatre, Music and Cinematography (1972–6), taking the Kandidat degree in 1976 with a dissertation on variation cycles. From 1979 he was head of the department of history and theory at the Musorgsky College, Leningrad, and in 1997 he became dean of the department of art history at the European University of St Petersburg. He was visiting professor at the department of Slavonic languages and literature at the University of Illinois in 1995–6. Kats's primary research interest is the interaction of music and poetry. He has written authoritatively on the music of Vladimir Shcherbachyov, Galina Ustvol'skaya, Boris Tishchenko and Aleksandr Knayfel', and on settings of the poetry of Anna Akhmatova, Boris Pasternak and Osip Mandel'shtam. His work in this area resulted in his book Muzïkal'nïye klyuchi k russkoy poėzii (1997). He has undertaken important research into the methodology of musical analysis. He has developed his own research methodology that draws on aspects of cultural history, structuralism, semiotics and intertextual methods. He has also made contributions to Russian Bach studies, and has written a notable book on film music (1988). A prominent critic, his reviews touch on problems of musical language, as well as the psychology of perception and other matters.

WRITINGS

'Ob otgranichennosti variatsionnogo tsikla' [On the delimitation of variation form], SovM (1974), no.2, pp.100–05
Vnutrennyaya organizatsiya variatsionnogo tsikla i yeyo khudozhestvennoye znacheniye [The interior organization of the variation cycle and its artistic significance] (diss., Institute of Theatre, Music and Cinematography, Leningrad, 1976)
'Syuzhet v bakhovskoy fuge' [The subject of a fugue by Bach], SovM (1981), no.10, pp.100–10; Bulg. trans. in Muzikalni horizonti (1985), no.3, pp.9–23
… Stan' muzïkoyu, slovo: o pretvorenii russkoy poeticheskoy liriki v vokal'nïkh tsiklakh sovetskikh kompozitorov 1960–1970 godov [… Let the word become music: on Russian poetry as interpreted in the song cycles of Soviet composers in the period 1960–70] (Leningrad, 1983)
Vremena – lyudi – muzïka [Times – people – music] (Leningrad, 1983) [biographical studies of Bach's sons and Leopold Mozart]
'K tvorcheskomu portretu V.V. Shcherbachyova' [Towards a creative portrait of Shcherbachyov], V.V. Shcherbachyov: stat'i, materialï, pis'ma, ed. R. Slonimskaya and A. Kryukov (Leningrad, 1985), 5–48
'O kompozitsii "Gol'dberg-variatsiy" Bakha' [On the structure of Bach's Goldberg Variations], I.S. Bakh i sovremennost', ed. N.A. Gerasimova-Persidskaya (Kiev, 1985), 57–64
ed.: Muzïka v zerkale poėzii [Music in the mirror of poetry] (Leningrad, 1985–7)
O muzïke Borisa Tishchenko [On the music of Tishchenko] (Leningrad, 1986)
Prostïye istinï kinomuzïki [The simple truths of film music] (Leningrad, 1988)
'Tri zametki k probleme: Musorgskiy i kul'tura yego vremeni' [Three notes on the problem: Musorgsky and the culture of his time], Muzïka – kul'tura – chelovek, ed. M.L. Muginshteyn (Sverdlovsk, 1988), 110–26; partial Eng. trans. as 'In "Permanent Impermanence"', in Kul'turologiya: the Petersburg Journal of Cultural Studies, i/3 (1993), 62–8 with R.D. Timenchik: Anna Akhmatova i muzïka [Anna Akhmatova and music] (Leningrad, 1989)
'Zur Emblematik im Spätwerk Bachs: einige Bemerkungen zum "Musikalischen Opfer" BWV1079', Beiträge zur Bach-Forschungen, ix–x (1991), 269–76
Raskat improvizatsiy: muzïka v sud'be, tvorchestve i v dome Borisa Pasternaka [A thunder roll of improvisations: music in the fate, the work and the home of Boris Pasternak] (Leningrad, 1991)
O. Mandel'shtam: Polon muzïki, muzï i muki: stikhi i proza o muzïke [Filled with music, the muse and pain: poetry and prose about music] (Leningrad, 1991)
'Otzvuki Vagnera v russkoy poėzii' [Echoes of Wagner in Russian poetry], MAk (1994), no.3, pp.134–40
'K polifonicheskim illyuziyam russkikh poėtov' [On the polyphonic illusions of Russian poets], Yezhekvartal'nik russkoy literaturï i kulturï (1995), nos.1–2, pp.46–111
'Slovo, spryatannoye v muzïke: k probleme, obostryonnoy sochineniyami Aleksandra Knayfelya' [A word hidden in music: on a problem made more acute by the works of Aleksandr Knayfel'], MAk (1995), nos.4–5, pp.49–56
'Shostakovich kak ob"yekt poėticheskogo vnimaniya' [Shostakovich as the object of poets' attention], D.D. Shostakovich: sbornik statey k 90-letiyu so dnya rozhdeniya, ed. L.G. Kovnatskaya (St Petersburg, 1996), 367–78
Muzïkal'nïye klyuchi k russkoy poėzii [The musical keys to Russian poetry] (St Petersburg, 1997)
'Bach Reception: Russia and Ukraine', J.S. Bach, ed. M. Boyd (Oxford, 1999)

LYUDMILA KOVNATSKAYA

Katsaris, Cyprien (b Marseilles, 5 May 1951). French pianist. After early musical training in Cameroon he studied piano at the Paris Conservatoire with Aline van Barentzen and Monique de la Bruchollerie, winning premiers prix for piano in 1969 and for chamber music (in the class of Jean Hubeau) in 1970. The same year he won the Prix Albert Roussel, and in 1974 he won first prize in the Cziffra Competition. His international career was launched with performances conducted by Bernstein and Dorati, and he has performed with leading orchestras throughout the world. He was the first pianist to record the complete Beethoven symphonies transcribed by Liszt and the original version for piano and voice of Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde (with Brigitte Fassbaender and Thomas Moser); Katsaris has also recorded numerous works by Chopin, and has given particularly colourful and virtuoso accounts of the complete polonaises and scherzos.

CHARLES TIMBRELL

Katsarova(-Kukudova), Rayna (b Sofia, 7 May 1901; d Sofia, 14 Sept 1984). Bulgarian ethnomusicologist. During her studies at the State Music Academy in Sofia, which she completed in 1925, she was greatly influenced by Dobri Khristov and Stoyan Brashovanov. In 1931 she did postgraduate work under Hornbostel and Lachmann in Berlin. Though Bartók, with whom she corresponded, and the work of the Soviet ethnomusicologists Filaret Kolessa and Klyment Kvitka all affected her development as an ethnomusicologist, her most influential teacher was probably the Bulgarian folklorist Vasil Stoin. From 1926 to 1927 she worked as a music teacher at a secondary school; she then became assistant keeper (1934–7), senior keeper and head of the folk music section of the Ethnographical Museum in Sofia (1947–52). In 1952 she was appointed senior research worker and head of the Institute of Musicology at the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences until her retirement in 1962; she was honoured by the state in 1971. A founder member of the International Folk Music Council, she became a member of the Société Internationale d'Ethnologie et Folklore in 1965. In her work on Bulgarian folksongs and dances she paid particular attention to children's folk games and songs, folk puppet theatre and carnivals, and music education based on folklore. She delivered a number of papers at international congresses and many of her precise, carefully researched studies were published in foreign journals and dictionaries.

WRITINGS

'Narodnata pesen v pomosht na narodnoto vaspitanie' [The folksong as an aid in national education], Prosveta, iii (1935), 311ff
'Lazarnica', JEFDSS, ii (1935), 62–72
'Dneshnoto sastoyanie na epichnia rechitativ v Balgariya' [Present state of the recited epic poetry in Bulgaria], Izvestiya na narodniya etnografski muzei v Sofiya, xiii (1939), 182ff
'Detski igri na pesen v Trakiya' [Children's singing-games in Thrace], Balgarski narod, i (1942), 60ff

'Ugarchinska pentatonika' [The pentatonic scales of Ugarchin], Izvestiya na narodniya etnografski muzei v Sofiya, xiv (1943), 78ff
Dances of Bulgaria (London, 1951)
'Folk Music: Bulgarian', Grove5
'Dneshnoto sastoyanie na narodnata pesen i tantsoviya folklor v Dobrudzha' [Present state of the folksong and folkdance in Dobrudzha], Kompleksna nauchna dobruzhanska ekspeditsiya prez 1954 godina: dokladi i materiali, ed. I. Penkov and L. Tonev (Sofia, 1956), 139–61
'Verbreitung und Varianten eines bulgarischen Volkstanzes', Studia memoriae Belae Bartók sacra, ed. B. Rajezky and L. Vargyas (Budapest, 1956, 3/1959), 69–87
'Narodni hora i igri v Strandzha' [Folkdances (horos) and games in Strandzha], Kompleksna nauchna Strandzhanska ekspeditsya prez 1955 godina: dokladi i materiali, ed. P. Stainov and L. Tonev (Sofia, 1957), 359–423
'L'ethnomusicologie en Bulgarie de 1945 à nos jours', AcM, xxxii (1960), 77–89
'Phénomènes polyphoniques dans la musique populaire bulgare', SM, iii (1962), 161–72
'Balkanski varianti na dve turski pesni' [Balkan variations of two Turkish songs], Zbornik za narodni život i običaje Južnih Slavena, xl (1962), 241–54
'Padarevski kukeri' [Kukeri from Padarevo], Yugoslav Folklore Association: Congress IX: Mostar and Trebinje 1962, 499ff
'La classification des mélodies en Bulgarie', SM, vii (1965), 293–300
'Oplakvane na pokojnizi' [Death laments], IIM, xiii (1969), 177–202 [incl. Fr. and Russ. summaries]
'Variations and Permutations of a Spring Melody', SM, xii (1970), 29–48

EDITIONS

Koledarski pesni [Christmas carols] (Sofia, 1934)
Duli, duli gayda [Duli, duli bagpipe] (Sofia, 1947) [children's folksongs] with K. Dzhenev: Balgarski tanzov folklor [Bulgarian folkdances] (Sofia, 1955; Eng. trans., 1958/R) with E. Stoin and I. Kachulev: Narodni pesni ot severoiztochna Balgariya [Folksongs from north-west Bulgaria] (Sofia, 1962)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Kats-Chernin, Elena (b Tashkent, 4 Nov 1957). Australian composer of Uzbek origin. She emigrated to Australia with her family in 1975. In 1980, after graduating from the Sydney Conservatorium (1979), she studied with Lachenmann at the Hochschule für Musik in Hanover. Remaining in Germany, she produced music for ballets and numerous soundtracks for theatre productions in Bremen, Bochum and Vienna. She remained fully occupied with theatre music (1985–9) until Transfer was commissioned by the Sydney SO. She returned to Sydney in 1994. In 1996 she won the Sounds Australian Award for Best Composition with Cadences, Deviations and Scarlatti (1995) and the Jean Bogan Prize with Charleston Noir (1996). In her music Kats-Chernin often combines simple formulaic material with idiosyncratic textures. This is demonstrated in three key works, Tast-en (1991) for piano, Retonica (1993) for orchestra and Clocks (1993) for 20 musicians and tape. Each of these pieces begins with a single idea such as a note, chord or pulse, which is then manipulated in varied and often unpredictable ways, pushing the material to its limits. Kats-Chernin works from an intuitive perspective. Important aspects of her works are concerned with an exploration of timbres and textures and a sense of the ridiculous.

WORKS
(selective list)

Music theatre: Behind the Scenes, 1985; Choros, 1988; Hours, 1990
Chbr ops: Iphis (R. Toop), 1997; Matricide (1, K.M. Fallon), 1998
Orch: Pf Conc., solo pf, trbns, perc, double str orch, 1979; Bienie, 1980; Transfer, 1989; Retonica, 1993; Stairs, 1994; Zoom and Zip, str orch, 1997
Chbr: Metro, 2 pf, 2 metronomes, 1976; Veter, fl, cl, vc, 1977; In Tension, fl, cl, perc, pf, vn, vc, 1982; Totschki, ob, cl, 1992; Clocks, 20 pfmrs, tape, 1993; Cadences, Deviations and Scarlatti, fl + pic, ob, cl, hn, tpt, trbn, tuba, perc, hp, pf, str trio, db, 1995; ProMotion, cl, gui, pf, perc, vc, db, 1995; Purple Prelude, cl, hp, pf, str trio, db, 1996
Solo inst: Tast-en, pf, 1991; Variations in a Serious Black Dress, pf, 1995; Charleston Noir, pf, 1996; The Schubert Blues, pf, 1996; Wild Rice, vc, 1996
Choral: Raspberry, mixed chorus, 1989; Doo (K. Winter, Kats-Chernin), 3 SATB choruses, childrens' chorus, 1996

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Shaw: 'A Never-Ending Search for a Sound Nobody has Ever Heard: an Interview with Elena Kats-Chernin', Context [School of Music, U. of Melbourne], no.13 (1997), 25–34
S. Shineberg: 'It's Got to be Fun', ABC Radio 24 Hours (1997), Nov, 28–31
K. Burke: 'Notable Success: profile Kats-Chernin', Sydney Morning Herald (19 Dec 1998)

RUTH LEE MARTIN

Kątski [de Kontskï]. Polish family of musicians. They were the children of a minor official in Kraków, who played different instruments, sang and composed. All child prodigies, the older ones first appeared in a public concert on 3 February 1822 in Kraków; shortly afterwards their father moved the family to Warsaw, where they studied and performed. In 1827 they began their first tour through Poland and Russia; they visited St Petersburg, remaining there the first six months of 1829 and performing at court, and Moscow, which they left in July 1830, returning to Kraków in October 1831. In 1832 they went to Vienna, which was their base for several years. In 1835 they worked their way through Germany and France to Paris, where they arrived in 1836 and gave their first, very successful concert on 1 February 1837. Their careers began to diverge after they settled in Paris.

(1) Karol Kątski [Charles de Kontskï] (b Kraków, 6 Sept 1815; d Paris, 27 Aug 1867). Violinist and composer. He studied at the Warsaw Conservatory and had composition lessons from Bianchi in St Petersburg and with Reicha in Paris (although he cannot have arrived in Paris long before Reicha's death, unless he preceded the rest of his family there). Although a respected musician, he did not, in Fétis's opinion, fulfil the promise of his childhood; he lived in Paris as a teacher, violinist (in the Opéra-Comique orchestra for several years) and viola d'amore player. He composed chamber music and pieces for violin and piano, published in Paris and Leipzig, and was a member of the music societies of Vienna, Munich, Stockholm, Kraków and Lublin.

(2) Maria Eugenia Kątski [Eugénie de Kontskï] (b Kraków, 22 Nov 1816). Singer, sister of (1) Karol Kątski. Highly praised by critics for the beauty of her voice and the finished technique of her singing, she stopped performing in public after her marriage.

(3) Antoni Kątski [Antoine de Kontskï] (b Kraków, 27 Oct 1817; d Ivanichy, nr Akulovka, Novgorod, 7 Dec 1899). Pianist and composer, brother of (1) Karol Kątski. He studied piano performance first with his father, and by the end of the 1820s he was probably a student of the music high school in Warsaw and with Field in Moscow (1829–30); he was later a composition pupil of Sechter in Vienna. In Paris, where he was a great success and had lessons from Thalberg, he was a member of the jury of the competitions of the conservatoire. He was a court pianist in Berlin between 1851 and 1853, and between 1854 and 1867 he was in St Petersburg, where he founded the Classical Music Lovers' Society. Later he lived in London and from 1883 to 1896 in America. In 1897 he started a world tour, visiting Australia, New Zealand, East Asia, Siberia and Warsaw. He died during this tour. He was decorated with orders by many kings in Europe. His playing was characterized by great delicacy of touch and brilliance of execution, but some critics considered him superficial. His repertory changed from virtuoso pieces to more serious works by Bach, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, Chopin and Mendelssohn. He started composing very early and his first pieces were published in Warsaw in 1825. He composed over 400 salon pieces, published in Germany, France, Russia and England, of which Le réveil du lion op.115 became widely popular. He also composed symphonies, piano concertos, overtures, chamber and sacred music as well as operas: Marcello, composed 1850; Les deux distraits, London, 1872 (to his own libretto), and Le sultan de Zanzibar, New York, 1886. He also wrote a piano tutor L'indispensable du pianiste, published in French, German and Russian.

(4) Stanisław Kątski [Stanislas de Kontskï] (b Kraków, 8 Oct 1820). Pianist and composer, brother of (1) Karol Kątski. He was a pupil of his brother (3) Antoni Kątski and lived mostly in Paris as a teacher and composer of salon music.

(5) Apolinary Kątski [Apollinaire de Kontskï] (b Poznań, 2 July 1826; d Warsaw, 29 June 1879). Violinist and composer, brother of (1) Karol Kątski. His first teacher was his father. He played in public when he was four and toured with his family. He had great success in Paris (1837) and in London, where he performed during the coronation festivities. Returning to Paris in 1838, he was heard by Paganini, who took him as a pupil and is said to have bequeathed to him his violin and compositions. From the late 1840s he toured widely; during the 1848 Revolution he played in Germany for the benefit of Polish refugees. In 1852 he succeeded Vieuxtemps as solo violinist of the Russian imperial chapel, and in 1859 he received authorization to found a conservatory in Warsaw, which opened in 1861 with himself as director and violin master. He held this post until his death. Apolinary Kątski made a great contribution to the development of music education in Poland. Thanks to that, he managed to break down the resistance of the Russian authorities, and secured the support of the Russian administration for the establishment of the Warsaw Music Institute. (Since the Russians had closed the Warsaw Conservatory in 1831 there had been no place for the study of music to a high level.) At the institute Kątski gave classes in speech declamation (part of the operatic studies) and placed special emphasis on ensemble work. He also organized an orchestra, which he directed, giving regular concerts at St John's Cathedral in Warsaw.

Apolinary Kątski was a violinist of great technical proficiency, especially in the dexterity of his left hand; he was renowned for his 'pizzi-arco' (a combination of pizzicato and bowing), and his mastery of harmonics, and his beautiful, differentiated sound. He was also an excellent chamber music player. His compositions (violin concerto, mazurkas, fantasias, studies and other pieces for violin, piano pieces and a cantata (published in Warsaw, 1863) are musically unimportant.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
'Apollinar von Kontski', AMZ, l (1848), 570–73
'Le conservatoire de musique de Varsovie et son fondateur', RGMP, xxxii (1865), 321–2
J.W. Reiss: 'Apolinary Kątski (1826–1879)', Poradnik muzyczny (1950), no.9, p.2
S. Świerzewski: 'Apolinary Kątski: słynny wirtuoz polski' [Apolinary Kątski: famous Polish virtuoso], RM, iv/23 (1960), 4–5
S. Śledziński: 'Na marginesie Symfonii a-moll Antoniego Kątskiego' [A marginal work: the symphony in A minor by Antoni Kątski], Studia Hieronymo Feicht septuagenario dedicata, ed. Z. Lissa (Kraków, 1967), 362–9
S. Śledziński: 'Bracia Kątscy w Rosji' [The Kątski brothers in Russia], Polsko-rosyjskie miscellanea muzyczne, ed. Z. Lissa (Kraków, 1967), 381–92
W. Grigor'ev: 'Apolinarij Kontskij i nekotorye problemy tvorceskogo nasledija Paganini' [Apolinary Kontskij and certain problems in the creative legacy of Paganini], Voprosy smyckovogo iskusstva [Problems in the art of bowing] (Moscow, 1980)

PAUL DAVID, DENNIS LIBBY/ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Kattnigg, Rudolf (Karl) (b Oberdorf, nr Treffen, 9 April 1895; d Klagenfurt, 2 Sept 1955). Austrian composer, conductor and pianist. The son of a doctor, he was educated in Villach and then studied law at Graz University. After serving as an artillery officer during World War I he studied at the Vienna Music Academy under Joseph Marx, Ferdinand Löwe, Eusebius Mandyczewski and Clemens Krauss. In 1923 he became the conductor of the opera school there, and from 1928 to 1934 was the musical director at the Innsbruck music school. His early compositions were mostly orchestral and chamber works; from 1934 he lived in Germany and Switzerland, and after his marriage to the operetta singer Trude Kollin began composing operettas, through which he gained his widest fame. In 1939 he returned to Austria, devoting himself to composition and performing his music as conductor and pianist. His operettas are traditional in style, reflecting in their effective vocal writing and classical orchestral writing Kattnigg's thorough musical training. His other compositions include two symphonies, a piano concerto, chamber and vocal works.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Rosenmontag in Venedig [Donna Miranda] (comic op, H.W. Geissler and B. Hardt-Warden), perf. Graz, 1953
Tarantella (ballet), Vienna, op.30, 1942
Incid music to Lenau: Faust, op.9

operettas, unless otherwise stated

Der Prinz von Thule (O. Walleck, 'E. Kahr'), Basle, Stadttheater, 13 Dec 1936; Kaiserin Katharina (H.F. Beckman and P. Beyer), Berlin, Admiralspalast, 3 Feb 1937; Die Gräfin von Durazzo [Balkanliebe] (4, 'Kahr', Hardt-Warden), Leipzig, Neues Operetten-Theater, 22 Dec 1937; Mädels vom Rhein (G. Quedtenfeldt), Bremen, Schauspielhaus, 1938; Die Mädel von St Goar (Quedtenfeldt), Bremen, Schauspielhaus, 4 Feb 1939; Hansi fliegt zum Negerkral (3, H. Kassmekat), Vienna, Opernhaus, 16 Dec 1942; Bel ami (musical, 3, F. Eckhard, after G. de Maupassant), Vienna, Raimundtheater, 18 Jan 1949; Rendezvous um Mitternacht (musical, O.E. Groh), Vienna, Raimundtheater, 20 May 1956

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Sym., C, op.6, 1925; Sym., g, op.10, 1930; Pf Conc., op.15, 1934; Concertino, pf, fl, str orch, 1940; 4 Konzert-Stücke, pf, orch
Orch suites: Burleske Suite, op.5, 1924; Bilder aus Südkärnten, 1952; Gipfelkreuz-Suite, 1948
Other orch works: Divertimento, 1935; 4 slowenische Tänze, 1950; Symphonische Walzer, 1942; Partita, str orch; Siciliana; Bolero

Chbr: Str Qt, a, 1940; Pf Qt no.1, op.3, lost; Pf Qt, e, op.4, 1924; Str Trio no.1, c, op.2; Str Trio no.2, D, op.8; Sonata, vn, pf; Rhapsodie, vn, pf
Pf solo: 3 Klavier-Stücke, op.1, 1932; 4 Präludien und Fugen im alten Stil, op.7, 1926
Sacred vocal works: 'Gegrüsset seist du Maria', S, vn and pf/str orch; 'Vater Unser', 4vv, mixed choir/str orch
Other vocal works: 8 einzelne Lieder; 5 ernste Lieder; 5 ernste Bonsels-Liede Film scores, incl. Hab ich nur deine Liebe (after Suppé), 1953

ANDREW LAMB

Katuar, Georgy. See CATOIRE, GEORGY.

Katul'skaya, Yelena Kliment'yevna (b Odessa, 21 May/2 June 1888; d Moscow, 19 or 20 Nov 1966). Russian soprano. She studied privately in Odessa (1904) and St Petersburg (1905–7), then entered the St Petersburg Conservatory and graduated from Natal'ya Iretskaya's class in 1909. She made her début as Lakmé at the Mariinsky Theatre, St Petersburg, where she sang until 1911, then went to the Bol'shoy, Moscow (1913–45). Her roles included Rimsky-Korsakov's Volkhova, Swan Princess and Snow Maiden; Marguerite and Juliet; Cio-Cio-San and Massenet's Manon. A sensitive, cultured musician, she had a lyrical voice of beautiful timbre and wide range. She was also well known as a recitalist, with an extensive repertory ranging from Russian folksong and works by Soviet composers to early Italian and modern French music. From 1948 she taught at the Moscow Conservatory, as a professor from 1950.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye.A. Grosheva: Ye.K. Katul'skaya (Moscow and Leningrad, 1957)
Ye.A. Grosheva, ed.: Yelena Kliment'yevna Katul'skaya: sbornik statey [Collection of articles] (Moscow, 1973)

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY

Katunda [Catunda], Eunice (do Monte Lima) (b Rio de Janeiro, 14 March 1915; d São José dos Campos SP, Aug 1991). Brazilian pianist and composer. She studied the piano with Oscar Guanabarino and Marieta Lion, and composition with Furio Franceschini and Camargo Guarnieri. Koellreutter instructed her in the use of 12-note technique, and she was also a conducting student of Hermann Scherchen, who performed her Quatro cantos à morte in 1949. An excellent pianist and an original composer, she has combined folk elements with 12-note writing in her Homenagem a Schoenberg, which was performed at the 1950 ISCM Festival. From 1944 she gave recitals in Brazil and elsewhere, including in her repertory such composers as Hindemith, Bartók, Stravinsky, Berg, Schoenberg, Paz, Santoro, Gilberto Mendes and Guerra Peixe. She was a member of the Música Viva group organized by Koellreutter. In 1950 she left the group, committing herself to socialism and the study of Brazilian folk music. She also undertook Brazilian studies under the supervision of Pierre Verger. Her music is characterized by the combination of serial music and Brazilian folk motives. Her Negrinho do pastoreio is a cantata for three voices, guitar, flute and percussion. She has taught composition at the Rio de Janeiro conservatory and musicology at the University of Brasília.

WORKS
(selective list)

Choral: Negrinho do pastoreio (cant.), 3vv, fl, gui, perc, 1946; Cantata do soldado morto, chorus, small orch, 1965; 6 líricas gregas, v, perc, 1974; Cantata dos marinheiros, chorus, orch, 1975
Orch: 4 cantos à morte, 1948; A negrinha e Iemanjá, chorus, orch, 1955; Pf Conc., 1955
Chbr and solo inst: Homenagem a Schoenberg, cl, va, vc, pf, 1949; Serestas, 4 sax, 1956; 2 serestas, gui, 1972
Pf: Momento de Lorca, 1957; 4 momentos de Rilke, 1958; Sonata de louvação, 1960; Sonata fúnebre, 1970

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Mariz: História da música no Brazil (Rio de Janeiro, 1983), 269–72
C. Kater: 'Eunice Katunda', Opus [Port. Alegre], iii/3 (1991), 64–8

IRATI ANTONIO, JOHN M. SCHECHTER

Katz, Erich (b Posen [now Poznań], 31 July 1900; d Santa Barbara, CA, 30 July 1973). German composer and music educator, naturalized American. He studied at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik and the University of Berlin (1918–21) and completed the PhD in musicology at the University of Freiburg (1922–6). Co-founder (1928) and co-director of the Freiburger Kurse für Musiktheorie (later the Freiburg Music Seminary), he was also a choral conductor, organist and music critic, and the editor of Das neue Chorbuch (Mainz, 1931). In 1939 he fled to England, where he taught at the Bunce Court School. He moved to the USA in 1943 and became head of the composition department at the New York College of Music (later New York University) and the New School for Social Research. He also served as director of the American Recorder Society, which he helped to reorganize in 1947, and the Musicians' Workshop, a performing group specializing in early and contemporary works. Influenced by Gebrauchsmusik, Katz composed for recorders, other instruments, and voices and made numerous transcriptions and editions of early music. After retiring to California in 1959, he taught at the Santa Barbara City College and directed a Collegium Musicum.

MSS in US-BO

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B.R. Atwater: 'Erich Katz: Teacher – Composer, 1900–1973', American Recorder, xiv/4 (1973), 115–35 [incl. work-list]
C. Primus: 'Erich Katz: the Pied Piper Comes to America', American Music Research Center Journal, i (1991), 1–19
M. Davenport: 'Carl Orff: the Katz Connection', American Recorder, xxxvi/4 (1995), 7–15, 34–9

CONSTANCE M. PRIMUS

Katz, Israel J(oseph) (b New York, 21 July 1930). American ethnomusicologist. He attended UCLA (BA 1956) and then spent two years on a fellowship (1959–61) in Jerusalem, where he studied privately with Gerson-Kiwi while undertaking field research among the Sephardi Jewish communites of Israel. He returned to UCLA and took the doctorate in 1967 with a dissertation on Judeo-Spanish ballads; his mentors at university included Ki Mantle Hood, Boris Kremenliev, Klaus P. Wachsmann and Walter Rubsamen. After teaching at McGill University, Montreal (1968–9), he was assistant professor (1969–74) and then associate professor at Columbia University (1974–5). He conducted research in Spain on a Guggenheim Fellowship (1975–6), and joined the faculty of the Graduate School, CUNY in 1976. In 1982 he became associated with the University of California at Santa Cruz (1982–9) and at Davis (1989–97), collaborating as an associate researcher with Samuel G. Armistead and Joseph H. Silverman on the series Folkliterature of the Sephardi Jews. He has also been a visiting lecturer at Brooklyn College, Hunter College, SUNY (Stony Brook) and the Hebrew Union College. He served as editor of Ethnomusicology (1970–72), the Yearbook of the International Folk Music Council (1977–9) and co-editor (with Albert Weisser, 1976–82) and editor (1983–8) of Musica judaica.

In his research Katz has concentrated on the ethnic groups of the Mediterranean region, particularly the music of the Sephardi and oriental Jewish communities. His dissertation compared the stylistic features of traditional ballads from Jerusalem with those of other eastern Jewish groups and he has studied various manifestations of the Judeo-Spanish tradition, such as Moroccan ballads and traditional Spanish tunes. He has worked extensively on the Pan-Hispanic Romancero, particularly the Judeo-Spanish branch, whose diffusion throughout the greater Mediterranean region demanded a closer scrutiny and delineation of stylistic features. He has also studied the traditional folk music of Spain, including the Cantigas de Santa Maria. Transcription and analytical techniques, as well as comparative tune scholarship are basic to his scholarship.

WRITINGS

Judeo-Spanish Traditional Ballads from Jerusalem: an Ethnomusicological Study (diss., UCLA, 1967; New York, 1972–5)

'A Judeo-Spanish Romancero', EthM, xii (1968), 72–85

'The Traditional Folk Music of Spain: Explorations and Perspectives', YIFMC, vi (1974), 64–85

'Abraham Zvi Idelsohn (1882–1938): a Bibliography of his Collected Writings', Musica judaica, i (1975–6), 1–32

'Stylized Performances of a Judeo-Spanish Traditional Ballad', Studies in Jewish Folklore: Chicago 1977, 181–200

with S.G. Armistead and J.H. Silverman: 'Judeo-Spanish Folk Poetry from Morocco (the Boas-Nahon Collection)', YIMC, xi (1979), 59–75

ed., with J.E. Keller: Studies on the Cantigas de Santa María: New York 1981

'The Enigma of the Antonio Bustelo Judeo-Spanish Ballad Tunes in Manuel L. Ortega's Los hebreos en Marruecos (1919)', Musica judaica, iv (1981–2), 33–68

'The Musical Legacy of the Judeo-Spanish Romancero', Hispania Judaica: Studies on the History, Language and Literature of the Jews in the Hispanic World, ii, ed. J.M. Sola-Sole, S.G. Armistead and J.H. Silverman (Barcelona, 1982), 45–58

'Higinio Anglés and the Melodic Origins of the Cantigas de Santa Maria: a Critical View', Alfonso X of Castile, the Learned King: Cambridge, MA, 1984, 46–75

'Contrafacta and the Judeo-Spanish Romancero: a Musicological View', Hispanic Studies in Honor of Joseph H. Silverman, ed. J.V. Ricapito (Newark, DE, 1988), 169–87

'Eric Werner (1901–1988): a Bibliography of his Collected Writings', Musica judaica, x (1988), 1–36

'The Music of Sephardic Spain: an Exploratory View', Musical Repercussions of 1492: Washington DC 1988, 97–128

'Melodic Survivals? Kurt Schindler and the Tune of Alfonso's Cantiga Rosa das rosas in Oral Tradition', Emperor of Culture: Alfonso X the Learned of Castile and his Thirteenth-Century Renaissance, ed. R.I. Burns (Philadelphia, 1990), 159–81, 251–57

'Three Traditional Judeo-Greek Hymns and their Tunes', in R. Dalven: The Jews of Ioannina (Philadelphia, 1990), 191–208

'J.B. Trend's Little-Known Bibliographical Contribution to the Study of Spain's Traditional Folk Music', AnM, xlvi (1991), 345–88

'Kurt Schindler: la aventura individual y colectiva de un cancionero', Musica y poesia popular de Espana y Portugal (Salamanca, 1991), 11–43, 97–173

ed.: Libraries, History, Diplomacy, and the Performing Arts: Essays in Honor of Carleton Sprague Smith (Stuyvesant, NY, 1991)

'Musical Settings of the Lament Vida de freira in Sixteenth- and Seventeenth-Century Spanish and Portuguese Sources', Estudios de folklore y literatura dedicados a Mercedes Díaz Roig, ed. B. Garza Cuarón and Y. Jiménez de Báez (Mexico City, 1992), 667–705

'Pre-Expulsion Tune Survivals among Judeo-Spanish Ballads? A Possible late Fifteenth-Century French Antecedent', Hispanic Medieval Studies in Honor of Samuel G. Armistead, ed. E.M. Gerli and H.L. Sharrer (Madison, WI, 1992), 173–92

'The Sacred and Secular Music Traditions of the Sephardic Jews in the United States', Sephardim in the Americas: Studies in Culture and History, ed. M.A. Cohen and A.J. Peck (Tuscaloosa, AL, 1993), 331–56

'Legado musical de la diaspora sefardi', Judios, sefarditas, conversos: la expulsion de 1492 y sus consecuencias: New York 1992, ed. A. Alcala (Valladolid, 1995), 365–92

'In the Footsteps of Kurt Schindler: the Portuguese Fieldwork', Cancioneiro tradicional de Trás-os-Montes, ed. S.G. Armistead and M. da Costa Fontes (Madison, WI, 1998)

'The Romances of Dora Ayach: Larache 1916–Casablanca 1962', Jewish Culture and the Hispanic World: Essays in Memory of Joseph H. Silverman, ed. S.G. Armistead and others (Berkeley, forthcoming)

Manuel Manrique de Lara and the Sephardic Ballad Tradition (forthcoming)

The Musical World of Kurt Schindler (1882–1935) (forthcoming)

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

with S.G. Armistead: Tres calas en el romancero sefardi (Madrid, 1979) with S.G. Armistead: En torno al romancero sefardi (Madrid, 1982)

with D.L. Lida, S.G. Armistead and J.H. Silverman: 'Five Judeo-Spanish Ballads from Smyrna', Florilegium Hispanicum: Medieval and Golden Age Studies Presented to Dorothy Clotelle Clark (Madison, WI, 1983), 279–89

with S.G. Armistead and J.H. Silverman: Judeo-Spanish Ballads from Oral Tradition (Berkeley, 1986–94)

with M. da Costa Fontes: Romanceiro da provincia de Tras-os-Montes (Coimbra, 1987)

with M. Manzano Alonso: K. Schindler: Folk Music and Poetry of Spain and Portugal (New York, 1991) with M. da Costa Fontes: O romanceiro portugues e brasileiro (Madison, WI, 1997) [incl. 'The Musical Legacy of the Luso-Brazilian Romanceiro', 399–406]

PAULA MORGAN/R

Katzenmusik (Ger.). See CHARIVARI.

Katzer, Georg (b Habelschwerdt [now Bystrzyca Kłodzka], Silesia, 10 Jan 1935). German composer. He studied composition with Wagner-Régeny and Ruth Zechlin at the Hochschule für Musik in East Berlin (1953–9), and then with Karel Janeček at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts. His studies were completed in East Berlin in the masterclasses of Eisler and Spies at the Germany Academy of Arts, during which time he was a piano player for a Berlin cabaret. In 1976–7 he worked in electronic-music studios in Bratislava and Paris, and in 1978 became a member of the GDR's Academy of Arts, where he became artistic director of the studio for electronic music. Until 1991 he trained the advanced composition pupils (since 1987 as professor in composition). In 1982 he held a guest professorship at Michigan State University. From 1982 to 1989 he was vice-president of the East German Union of Composers and Musicologists. He was elected president of the GDR branch and board member of the International Society of Electro-Acoustic Music in 1989. In the following year he became president of the GDR's Music Council. Since 1993 he has been a member of the Akademie der Künste in Berlin. He has won many awards for composition.

At the beginning of his career Katzer followed the models of Bartók, Stravinsky and of his teacher Eisler. In the late 1960s, influenced by Lutosławski and B.A. Zimmermann, he departed from traditional tonal and formal conventions. However, classical forms as well as the idea of internal development continued to serve as a point of reference for his more experimental works, e.g. in his Sonatas I and II for orchestra. His music is generally characterized by a playful approach to given material rather than adherence to any aesthetic dogma. The stylistic means he employs are as manifold as the genres in which he composes. They include serial as well as aleatory and collage techniques and electronic sounds.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Das Land Bum-Bum (op, R. Kirsch), 1974; 'Schwarze Vögel' (ballet, B. Köllinger), 1974–5; 'Ein neuer Sommernachtstraum' (ballet, Köllinger), 1978–9; 'Gastmahl oder Über die Liebe' (op, G. Müller), 1987–8; 'Antigone' (op, Müller), 1990

Vocal: Der Wanderer (J. Bobrowski), spkr, chorus, orch, 1969; Orchesterlieder (G. Maurer), Bar, orch, 1971; Die Igeltreppe (S. Kirsch), 1971; Heine-Lieder, S, pf, 1974; De musica, 12 vv, 1977; Stimmen der toten Dichter, S, pf, tape, 1977; Bobrowski-Lieder, Mez, fl, pf, 1982; 5 neue Heine-Lieder, middle v, pf, 1986

Orch: 3 sonatas: 1968, 1969, 1970; Baukasten, 1971–2; Conc for orch no.1, 1973–4; Die D-Dur-Musikmaschine, 1973–4; Jazz-Trio Conc., 1975; Empfindsame Musik, 58 str, 3 perc, 1976; Dramatische Musik, 1977; Sound-House (after F. Bacon), 1979; Pf Conc., 1980; Conc., vn, chbr orch, 1981; Fl Conc., 1984; Konfrontation, ob, chbr orch, 1986; Conc. for orch no.2, 1986; Vc Conc., 1986; Ob Conc., 1987; Landschaft mit steigender Flut, 1993

Chbr: Str Qt, 1965–6; Divertissement à trois, 3 insts, 1969; Trio ad libitum, 3 insts, 1969; Pas de deux, ens, 1970; Dialog, fl, pf, 1971; Hommage à Jules Verne, 9 insts, 1971; Die Igeltreppe (S. Kirsch), 1971; Streichermusik I, 14 str, 1971; Streichermusik II, 18 str, 1972; Pf Qnt, 1972–3; Szene, chbr ens, 1975; Dialog, fl, pf, 1975; Saitenspiele, hp, vc, 1976; 2 Verlautbarungen, pf trio, 1976; Kammermusik, hpd, wind qnt, 1977; Essay avec Rimbaud, ob, vc, pf, tape, 1979; 5 Bagatellen, vn, cl, pf, 1981; Kommen und gehen, wind qnt, pf, 1982; miteinander – gegeneinander, eng hn, va, 1983; Str Qt, 1985; La Mettrie, pf, 5 insts, 1985–6; Str Qt, 1985–6; 3360, wind qnt, pf, 1986; Trio, accdn, gui, vn, 1987; La Mettrie II, fl, ob, cl, hn, bn, pf, 1988; Zungen und Saiten, accdn, vn, va, vc, 1988–9; Str Qnt, 1990; Sax Qt, 1993; Trio, str, 1994; Stille Stücke, vn, accdn, gui, 1994; Essays, cl, vn, pf, 1995; Klänge, Schattenklänge und mechanische Konstruktionen, 2 pf, perc, 1995; Oboenlandschaft mit Ovid, 2 ob soli, 8 ob, 1996

Elec: Rondo ('Bevor Ariadne kommt'), 1976; 'Stille, doch manchmal spürest du noch einen Hauch', 1977; Musikmaschine II, 1980; Aide-mémoire, tape, 1982–3; La flûte fait le jeu, 1983; Steine-Lied, 1985

Multimedia compositions; improvised music

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Deutscher Verlag für Musik, Peters (Leipzig), Verlag Neue Musik (Berlin)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (J. Raab); RiemannL12

F. Schneider: Momentaufnahme: Notate zu Musik und Musikern der DDR (Leipzig, 1979)

G. Belkius: 'Bemühungen um neuen Wirkungsraum für Musik: der Komponist Georg Katzer', Weimarer Beiträge, xxviii/4 (1982), 42–55

S. Amzoll: 'Georg Katzer', Komponieren zur Zeit: Gespräche mit Komponisten der DDR, ed. M. Hansen (Leipzig, 1988), 109–41

M. Vetter: Kammermusik in der DDR (Frankfurt, 1996)

S. Amzoll: 'Georg Katzer', Kammermusikführer, ed. I. Allihn (Stuttgart, 1998), 333–6

LARS KLINGBERG

Kauder, Hugo (b Tobitschau, Moravia [now Tovočov, Czech Republic], 9 June 1888; d Bussum, Netherlands, 22 July 1972). Austrian composer, violinist and writer on music. His formal musical training consisted of violin lessons in his home town. In 1905 he moved to Vienna, where he played in the orchestra of the Konzertverein (1910–19). Self-taught as a composer, he studied the scores of Josquin des Prez and other 15th- and 16th-century Franco-Flemish composers while a student at the Technische Hochschule and Vienna University. His own style is characterized by contrapuntal textures and conservative harmonies. Other influences include the conductors Ferdinand Löwe and Franz Schalk, the poets Rudolf Pannwitz and Otto zur Linde, and the linguist and anthropologist Helen Guttman, whom he married in 1923. His writings include two books, Entwurf einer neuen Melodie- und Harmonielehre (Vienna, 1932) and Counterpoint: an Introduction to Polyphonic Composition (New York, 1960/R), critical essays on musical events (1920–50) and articles for Musikblätter des Anbruch (1919–22). He moved to the Netherlands in 1938, but went on to England two years later. He settled in the USA in 1940. His honours include the City of Vienna composition prize (1928) for his First Symphony and a Fromm Foundation Award (1953).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Das Reich der Seele (H.D. Tang), 3 songs, chorus, str, 1928–9; Der Mensch in der Höhle der Völker (R. Pannwitz), 1935–8; Vorspiel zu einem Weltspiel (Pannwitz), 1935; Die Suche nach dem Traum (Tang, trans. V. Hundhausen), 1937–8; The Bride's Tragedy (Pannwitz), S, A, T, chorus, orch, 1938; Merlin (musikdrama, prol, 2, Pannwitz), 1955–62

Orch: Sym. no.1, a, 1921; Vn Conc., 1925; Double Conc., vn, va, orch, 1926; 6 Preludes, Passacaglias and Fugues, 1927–54; Ob Conc., 1928; Hn Conc., 1930; Va Conc., 1932; Kleines Konzert, pf, orch, 1933; Prelude and Rondo, D, 1934; Suite concertante, ob, orch, 1935; Sym. no.2, 1939; Sym. no.3, 1939; Pf Conc., 1950; Sym. no.4, 10 insts, 1956; Passacaglia, 1961; Sym. no.5, 1965; 4 other works

Vocal: Auf die sistinische Madonna (A. Schopenhauer), 1v, orch, 1916; Das Lied des Zwerges, 1v, orch, 1919; Die Welt ist Grün, 1v, orch, 1921; Venedig (F. Nietzsche), 1v, orch, 1925; Die Sonne sinkt (Nietzsche), S, A, T, Bar, chorus, orch, 1933; Chorbüchlein I–IV, chorus (1937); Gesang der Geister über den Wassern (J.W. von Goethe), mixed chorus, str qnt, 1937; Requiem (F. Hebbel), A, chorus, orch, 1949; Chbr Music (J. Joyce), S, A, T, str qt, 1951; *c*100 lieder, 1v, pf; duos, 1v, inst; other choral works; other solo vocal works

Chbr and solo inst: 8 sonatas, vn, pf, 1913–56; 4 sonatas, va, pf, 1918–58; 19 str qts, 1921–69; Str Qnt, 1924; 3 suites, solo inst, 1925–6; Qnt, ob, vn, 2 va, vc, 1933; 6 sonatinas, vn, pf, 1934–41; 5 sonatas, 2 vn, 1940–61; 3 sonatas, hn, pf, 1944–7; Little Suite, 2 tpt, 2 hn, 3 trbn, tuba, 1954; Qnt, hp, str qt, 1954; 3 sonatas, vn, va, 1955; Sym. no.4, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, str qt, db, 1956; *c*28 trios, various insts; many other chbr works; *c*25 kbd works

Arrs. of works by J.S. Bach, G.F. Handel, W.A. Mozart, R. Schumann, G.M. Tartini, F.M. Veracini, H. Wolf

Principal publishers: Universal, Doblinger, N.V. Uitgeverij-C.A. Mees, Boosey & Hawkes, Braude, E.C. Schirmer, Southern

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Kauder: Hugo Kauder: Biografie und Wersverzeichnis (New York, 1975)

W. Pass, G. Scheit and W. Svoboda: Orpheus im Exil: die Vertreibung der österreichischen Musik von 1938–45 (Vienna, 1994)

THOMAS L. GAYDA

Kauer, Ferdinand (b Klein-Thaya [Tajax; now Dyjákovice], nr Znaim [now Znojmo], 18 Jan 1751; d Vienna, 13 April 1831). Austrian composer and conductor of Moravian birth. The son of a schoolmaster, he was educated by the Jesuits at Znaim, where he played the organ and studied classics. He then moved to the Jesuit seminary at Tyrnau (now Trnava), Hungary, as organist, also studying philosophy and later medicine. Although he prosecuted his studies 'bis zur Doctor Würde' (according to his autobiographical sketch in A-Wgm), he did not complete his qualifications; when the Jesuit university was transferred to Ofen, Kauer went to Vienna (*c*1777) and gradually established himself as a musician: first as a keyboard teacher, then as organist in a suburban church (the Servite church of Mariae Verkündigung, Rossau) and reader to the music publishers Artaria. He studied composition with Heidenreich and Zimmermann and became a violinist in the orchestra of the Theater in der Leopoldstadt (probably quite soon after Marinelli opened it in 1781); in 1789, when he was appointed director of the theatre's newly founded music school, he was referred to as the 'former orchestra-director' (i.e. leader).

Although his name is connected with a few Singspiele given at the Leopoldstadt Theatre in the 1780s, he did not become established as a composer until the early 1790s. Then for the next two decades he was second Kapellmeister to Wenzel Müller and, during Müller's Prague engagement, to Tuček. During these years he composed a succession of Singspiele and other theatre scores including Das Faustrecht in Thüringen (1796; together with its two sequels it received 157 performances in 20 years), Die Löwenritter (1799, with three sequels) and Das Donauweibchen (1798). This last is the work on which Kauer's fame was based: it held its place in the repertory of the Leopoldstadt Theatre for 40 years, being given over 100 times; the first sequel was even more successful. Goethe staged Das Donauweibchen at Weimar as Die Saalnixe, and mentions it in his novel Die Wahlverwandtschaften. It was frequently performed in various countries (including Scandinavia) for many years, giving rise to numerous imitations and sequels.

In 1810 Kauer went to Graz as Kapellmeister, staying there only one season (and writing some six new theatre scores) before returning to the Leopoldstadt Theatre. In 1814 he moved to the Theater in der Josefstadt as Kapellmeister, but the resources of this theatre were not comparable with those of the Leopoldstadt (its orchestra, numbering 25 players, was not notably smaller than that in the Leopoldstadt, which at this time was 32 strong, but the standards were much lower). The one famous actor and singer of the theatre was Ferdinand Raimund, who was also engaged in 1814; most of Kauer's successful scores from this period included leading roles for Raimund, especially the series of plays centring on the character of Adam Kratzerl, a violinist, first introduced in 1815 in Die Musikanten am Hohen Markt. These and several others of Kauer's scores for this theatre were written to texts by Josef Alois Gleich, Raimund's father-in-law and for a time the director of the theatre. In four seasons Kauer wrote more than 20 new scores for the Josefstadt Theatre, and revived about 30 of his older works.

In 1818 Kauer lost his post through a change in the management and serious financial difficulties at the theatre, and was deemed too old (and probably too feeble and old-fashioned as a composer) to be taken back into the Leopoldstadt company. For some years he eked out a miserable existence, occasionally having a new score accepted by the Josefstadt Theatre, until he was admitted to the Leopoldstadt orchestra in 1821 as a lowly second violinist. His name continues to appear among the orchestra members in the theatre's almanac until 1830. During the night of 28 February to 1 March 1830 he was among the victims of severe floods in the Leopoldstadt when a sudden thaw caused the Danube to overflow its banks. He lost almost all he possessed, including his musical scores, and died in utter poverty little more than a year later.

The events of the Danube flood, but also certain personal characteristics, encourage the opinion that Grillparzer may have had Kauer in mind in his depiction of the old musician hero in his story Der arme Spielmann (1842). Kauer is a good example of the once-popular composer pathetically outliving his fame, which, though modest enough viewed with the benefit of hindsight, brought him much artistic success if little financial gain. Goethe wrote a new text for Hulda's famous and touching air 'In meinem Schlösschen ist's gar fein' from Das Donauweibchen, and Gerber in 1813 revised his own earlier dismissive comments on Kauer on the basis of better acquaintance with his works. Kauer is at his best and most characteristic in simple strophic songs and airs, whose melodies and instrumentation often have considerable charm. However, harmonic and contrapuntal predictability all too often diminishes the impact of a promising number, and the ensembles seldom carry much weight or distinction. There are frequent echoes of Mozart and Wenzel Müller in his scores; Weber (who conducted Das Sternenmädchen in Prague) and Lortzing in their turn probably owed a debt to Kauer.

Although important primarily for his music for 200-odd stage works (including Singspiele, parodies, local plays, pantomimes etc.), Kauer also wrote examples of almost every musical genre then current. Nelsons grosse Seeschlacht (*c*1798, dedicated to the Duke of Sussex, and published in versions for wind ensemble and piano trio) and one or two other occasional pieces enjoyed considerable popularity, and quite a number of his works were published. He also brought out several theoretical works, including tutors for the flute, piano, violin and cello and on thoroughbass, and a singing manual, all published by Artaria between 1787 and 1794. A revised Klavier Schule was brought out by J. Eder in 1803. There are welcome signs of a renewal of interest in Kauer's music, signalled by the publication and recording of some of his instrumental works.

WORKS

STAGE

(selective list; for fuller list see GroveO)

all first performed in Vienna

WL – Theater in der Leopoldstadt
WJ – Theater in der Josefstadt

Der Streit zwischen dem Zauberer Scionco und der Fee Galantina, oder Kasperl bleibt Kasperl (comedy with machines and music, 3), WL, 3 Feb 1784

Der unschuldige Betrug, oder Auf dem Lande kennt man die Rache nicht (Kinder-Operette, 1, L. Huber), WL, 22 June 1790

Bastien und Bastienne (Operette), WL, 18 Aug 1790 [an anon. Spl with the same title was perf. 1781–6]

Die Serenade, oder Der gefoppte Alte (Spl, 2), WL, 4 June 1792

Das Faustrecht in Thüringen, pt 1 (Schauspiel, 4, K.F. Hensler), WL, 7 April 1796, ?D-Mbs; pt 2 (4), 28 June 1796; pt 3(4), 17 Jan 1797

Das Donauweibchen, pt 1 (romantisch-komisches Volksmärchen, 3, Hensler), WL, 11 Jan 1798, many MSS; vs (Brunswick, n.d.); pt 2 13 Feb 1798

Die Löwenritter (Schauspiel, 4, Hensler), WL, 5 Sept 1799; pt 2, 17 Sept 1801; pt 3 (Schauspiel, 4, J.A. Gleich), 4 Oct 1804

Das Sternenmädchen im Meidlinger Walde (romantisch-komisches Volksmärchen, 3, Huber), WL, 20 Oct 1801; ov., songs (Offenbach, n.d.)

Philibert und Kasperl, oder Weiber sind getreuer als Männer (Zauberoper, Hensler, 3), WL, 7 Feb 1804

Faschingswehen (Lustspiel, 3, J.F. Kringsteiner), WL, 4 March 1805

Die Kreutzerkomödie (Posse, 3, Kringsteiner), WL, 21 June 1805, ?Mbs

Der travestierte Telemach (Karikatur, 3, J. Perinet), WL, 29 Aug 1805; rev. of his own Telemach, Prinz von Ithaka (Hensler), 1801

Antiope und Telemach (Travestie, 2, Perinet), WL, 23 Oct 1805, second part of Der travestirte Telemach

Albert der Bär, oder Die Weiber von Weinsberg (Schauspiel, 3, J.A. Gleich), WL, 27 March 1806

Das bezauberte Kaffeehaus (magic pantomime, 2, F. Kees), WL, 19 March 1806

Heinrich der Stolze, Herzog von Sachsen (Schauspiel, 3, Gleich), WL, 5 Oct 1806

Orpheus und Euridice, oder So geht es im Olymp zu (mythologische Karikatur, 2, K. Meisl), WL, 20 Feb 1813
Antonius und Cleopatra (Posse, 1, M.F. Perth, after A. Kotzebue), WJ, 25 Feb 1814
Die Musikanten am hohen Markt (Posse, 3, Gleich), WJ, 28 March 1815

OTHER VOCAL

Sanctus, Benedictus, Agnus Dei, 4vv, insts, A-Wn
Officium defunctorum, KN
Die Sündfluth, oder Noah's Versöhnungsopfer (orat, F.H. von Tibery), 1807, Wgm
Motet, KN; canon, Wgm
Other works, incl. 9 orats and cants., 3 requiem settings, 14 masses, smaller sacred pieces, all lost

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: *c*30 syms., concertante syms., lost; Wellington's and Blucher's Famous Battle near Waterloo, orch, after 1815, GB-Lbl; 2 kbd concs., D, F, A-Wgm; concs. for vn, fl, ob, cl, db, lost
Chbr: Nelsons grosse Seeschlacht, pf, acc. vn, vc (Vienna, *c*1798), also pubd for wind ens; Grand trio, vn, va, vc (Vienna, 1802); 12 minuets, 6 trios, all 2 vn, b, 1791, Wgm; 12 fughe, vn (Vienna, n.d.); 24 piccole cadenze, vn (Vienna, n.d.); others, lost
Solo kbd: Sonata militare (Vienna, ?1789); Fantasia, hpd (Vienna, n.d.) [incl. themes from 9 ops]; 12 variations on the duetto 'Nel cor più', hpd (Vienna, n.d.); 12 hongroises, kbd 4 hands, 2 sonatas, 6 capricci on airs from L'arbore di Diana, 12 hongroises for the coronation, 1808, all Wgm; others, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (M. Fürstenau); EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL; MGG1 (E. Badura-Skoda); WurzbachL
Autobiographical sketch (MS, A-Wgm) [incl. list of works, inc.]
L. Schmidt: Zur Geschichte der Märchenoper (Halle, 1895)
B. Glossy and R. Haas, eds.: Wiener Comödienlieder aus drei Jahrhunderten (Vienna, 1924) [incl. 3 arias by Kauer]
T. Haas: 'Ferdinand Kauer (1751–1831): ein Künstlerschicksal', Neue Musik-Zeitung, xlvi (1925), 273–5, 300–04
R. Haas: 'Singspiel und Volksmusik', Almanach der deutschen Musikbücherei, v (1926), 152–63
K. Manschinger: Ferdinand Kauer: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Wiener Singspiels um die Wende des 18. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Vienna, 1929)
F. Hadamowsky: Das Theater in der Wiener Leopoldstadt, 1781–1860 (Vienna, 1934)
A. Weinmann: Vollständiges Verlagsverzeichnis Artaria & Comp. (Vienna, 1952, 2/1978)
A. Bauer: Opern und Operetten in Wien (Graz, 1955)
A. Bauer: Das Theater in der Josefstadt zu Wien (Vienna, 1957)
W. Stockmeier: Die Programmusik (Cologne, 1970)
L. Meierott: 'Die Schlacht bei Würzburg, 1796, als Vorlage musikalischer Kompositionen', Mainfränkisches Jb für Geschichte und Kunst, xxiii (1971), 109–16
R.M. Longyear: 'Ferdinand Kauer's Percussion Enterprises', GSJ, xxvii (1974), 2–8
J. Schläder: Undine auf Musiktheater: zur Entwicklungsgeschichte der deutschen Spieloper (Bad Godesberg, 1979)
A. Ziffer: Kleinmeister zur Zeit der Wiener Klassik (Tutzing, 1984)
J. Krämer: Deutschsprachiges Musiktheater im späten 18. Jahrhundert: Typologie, Dramaturgie und Anthropologie einer populären Gattung (Tübingen, 1998)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Kauffmann, (Karl) Emil (b Ludwigsburg, 23 Nov 1836; d Tübingen, 17 June 1909). German educator, conductor and composer. He attended the Gymnasium in Heilbronn. After the family moved to Stuttgart in 1851, he concentrated on developing his musical abilities, studying the violin with Edward Keller, the piano with W. Jung and theory with Immanuel Faisst. He joined the Hofkapelle orchestra in 1854, and was first violinist from 1862 to 1868. He also began what was to become an accomplished career as a choral director, culminating in his conducting of the German première (1900) of Bruckner's Mass in F minor. He taught violin and piano at the Allgemeinen Musikschule in Basel from 1868 to 1877, when he became music director at the University of Tübingen, a post he held until 1906. Among the many students guided and inspired by Kauffmann were the theorist and composer August Halm, the scholar Karl Grunsky and the singer Hugo Faisst.

Unlike his staunchly anti-Wagnerian father (see below), Emil Kauffmann was a champion in Swabia of the music of Wagner, Bruckner and especially Wolf. Kauffmann and Wolf established a lifelong friendship and maintained an exchange of correspondence that provides valuable insight into Wolf's life (Wolf's letters survive; Kauffmann's have been lost). Kauffmann promoted Wolf's music by arranging performances, encouraging students such as Hugo Faisst, Karl Diezel and Emma Dinkelacker to pioneer his works, and by writing a series of articles in the Schwäbische Kronik and the Leipzig Musikalisches Wochenblatt. Other published writings include Entwicklungsgang der Tonkunst von der Mitte des 18. Jahrhunderts in ihren Hauptvertretern (diss., U. of Tübingen, 1883; Tübingen, 1884), the monograph Justinus Heinrich Knecht: ein schwäbisher Tonsetzer des 18. Jahrhunderts (Tübingen, 1892) and numerous newspaper articles on various topics.

Despite his support for 'progressive' music of the latter half of the 19th century, his own compositions are largely conservative. He published 64 lieder (opp.1–4, 6–7, 10–15, 17, 19–20) on texts by Mörike, Goethe, Eichendorff, Rückert, Byron, Heine, Schiller, Shakespeare and others, three pieces (op.8) and a sonata for piano (op.9), eight male choruses (op.5) and Die Nacht (Hölderlin, op.16) for male chorus, soloists and piano.

He was the son of the mathematician and composer Ernst Friedrich Kauffmann (b Ludwigsburg, 27 Nov 1803; d Stuttgart, 11 Feb 1856). A friend of Mörike, Kauffmann wrote mainly vocal works, usually settings of Swabian poets such as Mörike and Kerner. His published works include 54 lieder and 14 songs for male chorus. He wrote several other songs and a cantata on Goethe's Rinaldo. A fragment of an opera, Das Tyrfingschwert, survives.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (E.F. Schmid)
E. Hellmer, ed.: Hugo Wolfs Briefe an Emil Kauffmann (Berlin, 1903)
K. Grunsky: 'Emil Kauffmann', Biographisches Jb und Deutscher Nekrolog, xiv (1912), 133–4
W. Schmid: 'Emil Kauffmann', Schwäbische Lebensbilder, iii (1942), 284–310
F. Walker: Hugo Wolf: a Biography (London, 1951, 2/1968/R)
F. Kauffmann: 'Ernst Friedrich Kauffmann', Schwäbische Lebensbilder, vi (1956), 211–29
M. Ulrich: Eduard Mörike among Friends and 'False Prophets': Words, Tones, and Images in the Mozart Novella, the Poetry, and the Lieder of E.F. Kauffmann and Hugo Wolf (diss., U. of Chicago, 1992)

TIMOTHY McKINNEY

Kauffmann, Georg Friedrich (b Ostermondra, Thuringia, 14 Feb 1679; d Merseburg, 24 Feb 1735). German organist and composer. He received his early keyboard training from J.H. Buttstett in Erfurt and continued under J.F. Alberti in Merseburg, with whom he also studied composition. When Alberti suffered a stroke in 1698 which caused paralysis in his right hand, Kauffmann deputized for him, and in 1710 succeeded his teacher as organist at the court of Duke Christian I of Saxony and at Merseburg Cathedral. Kauffmann subsequently became court organist for the Duke of Saxe-Merseburg and was later promoted to court Kapellmeister.

Kauffmann's music and reputation spread beyond Merseburg within a few years of his appointment in 1710. Bach's friend J.G. Walther, who may have known Kauffmann in Erfurt, copied his chorale-prelude on Herr Gott, dich loben alle wir early in the second decade of the century (D-Bsb Mus.Bach. P 802), and Walther's pupil J.T. Krebs copied Kauffmann's G major Fantasia at roughly the same time. (Two later manuscripts written by Walther, D-Bsb Mus.2254/1–4 and NL-DHgm 4.G.14, contain further copies of Kauffmann's organ works.) In Leipzig, the university considered asking Kauffmann to inspect the newly finished organ of the Paulinerkirche in 1717, but the invitation eventually went to Bach; five years later, two scribes who worked for Johann Kuhnau – one of them his nephew J.A. Kuhnau, who later worked for Bach – copied parts to Kauffmann's solo cantata Unverzagt, beklemmtes Herz, probably for a performance on 16 August 1722, shortly after Kuhnau's death. Kauffmann may have owed his Leipzig contacts to J.P. Kunzen, the librettist of his oratorio Die Himmelfahrt Christi. In Halle, the organist Gottfried Kirchhoff owned cantatas by Kauffmann, which he presumably used for performance in the Marienkirche; none of these copies, however, still exists.

In autumn 1722 Kauffmann went to Leipzig to compete for Kuhnau's former position of Kantor at the Thomaskirche. The minutes of the Leipzig town council for 22 November 1722 list Kauffmann, described as 'court organist and music director in Merseburg', as one of seven contestants. According to the Hollsteinischer Correspondent (Hamburg) of 8 December, he performed his test piece on 29 November, the first Sunday of Advent. The council minutes of 21 December report that Kauffmann 'requested again that he be admitted to examination'. The council acceded to the request since J.S.Bach and Graupner were allowed two cantata performances each. He remained among the finalists for the job until Bach ultimately received it in April 1723. Bach and Kauffmann may have had at least indirect contacts during the following years. In or about 1727, when Bach's son Wilhelm Friedemann was studying in Merseburg with J.G. Graun, J.A. Kuhnau copied the scores of two Kauffmann cantatas, Komm, du freudenvoller Geist and Nicht uns, Herr; he copied a third, Die Liebe Gottes ist ausgegossen, at an uncertain later date. The pieces most probably served for performance at the Neue Kirche in Leipzig.

In 1725 Mattheson's Critica musica carried an announcement for a treatise by Kauffmann, who referred to himself in the prospectus as 'director of church music to the Duke of Saxe-Merseburg'. The treatise – completed in manuscript but never printed, and since lost – bore the title Introduzzione alla musica antica et moderna, das ist: Eine ausführliche Einleitung zur alten und neuen Wissenschaft der edlen Music; the contents, given in summary, included 'the general and special rules of composition in the old and new style', a formulation that suggests Kauffmann followed the tradition of 'figural' contrapuntal reduction established by Christoph Bernhard.

Eight years later Kauffmann began the serial publication of his Harmonische Seelenlust, the first collection of chorale preludes for organ to appear in print since Scheidt's Tabulatura nova of 1624. The title-page shows the composer as 'chapel director and court organist to the Duke of Saxe-Merseburg' – somewhat confusingly, since according to other sources, J.T. Römhild had become ducal Kapellmeister in 1731. Kauffmann most probably planned the Harmonische Seelenlust as a complete edition of his organ chorales and it was published on a subscription basis. He died of consumption before the entire collection appeared, but his widow saw the remaining instalments through the press; this may account for the inclusion of three pieces by Walther (two settings of Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten and one of Wir Christenleut) and one by Zachow (Nun lasst uns Gott, dem Herren), among the later numbers. The publication met with little initial success – in a letter of 4 August 1736, Walther reported a complaint from one of the publishers to the effect that 'buyers are getting scarcer all the time, and if it continues like this, he will have to give it up' – but it soon established itself as one of the most significant achievements of German organ music and remained in high esteem into the 19th century. Its 98 chorale preludes, described by the composer as 'short, but elaborated with particular invention and pleasing style', embrace virtually every type current in the early 18th century, including duets ('in which there is always figural activity [etwas Obligates], which restores what the absence of other voices takes away'), fughettas on the first line of the chorale, and a variety of cantus firmus settings, six of which have the melody 'played à part on the oboe' and are the earliest examples of the type. Kauffmann furnished unusually careful performance directions, often providing copious ornaments, tempo markings, and detailed suggestions for registration. The music reveals a vivid motivic imagination and a flair for affective dissonances and harmonic progressions.

Kauffmann's vocal works, with their concise phrase structure and avoidance of polyphonic complexity, adhere to the stylistic norms of German sacred music in his generation. All use librettos of the post-Neumeister type, consisting almost exclusively of recitatives and arias; scriptural texts and chorales appear only in the outer movements of Nicht uns, Herr and Die Liebe Gottes ist ausgegossen. The opening choruses of these cantatas – one fugal, the other freely concerted – have considerable breadth and rhythmic vigour. In the Ascension Oratorio, Kauffmann aids the dramatic flow by avoiding text repetition and demonstrates his fine instrumental style in the symphonia – a French overture in the style of Handel. Kauffmann's recitatives achieve notable fluency of declamation; his arias, all set as strict da capos, have attractive thematic material and maintain well-balanced proportions between sections.

The inventiveness and solid craftsmanship of Kauffmann's music bear out Walther's opinion that it 'cannot but be considered estimable by people of judgment'. Despite the small extent of his surviving output, Kauffmann ranks among the very best of J.S. Bach's German contemporaries.

WORKS

VOCAL

all in D-LEm

Die Himmelfahrt Christi (orat, J.P. Kunzen), SSATB, 2 tpt, timp, 2 ob, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, org [autograph score]

Die Liebe Gottes ist ausgegossen (cant. for Whit Sunday), SSTB, 2 tpt, timp, 2 ob, 2 vn, 2 va, bc [score copy by J.A. Kuhnau]

Komm, du freudenvoller Geist (cant. for Whit Sunday), SSTB, 2 ob, 2 vn, 2 va, bc [score copy by Kuhnau]

Nicht uns, Herr, sondern deinem Namen gib Ehre (cant. for Visitation), SATB, 2 ob, 2 vn, 2 va, bc [score copy by Kuhnau]
Unverzagt, beklemmtes Herz (cant. for the 11th Sunday after Trinity), S, 2 vn, bc [pts copied by Kuhnau and anon. scribe]

KEYBOARD

Fantasia, G, D-Bsb Mus.Bach. P 801 [copy by J.T. Krebs]
Harmonische Seelenlust musikalischer Gönner und Freunde, das ist: Kurtze, jedoch nach besondern Genie und guter Grace elaborirte Praeludia von 2, 3 und 4 Stimmen über die bekanntesten Choral-Lieder, 98 preludes on 63 chorales and 66 figured bass settings, org (Leipzig, 1733–6); ed. P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1951)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FrotscherG; GerberNL; MGG1 (F.W. Riedel); WaltherML
W. Serauky: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Halle (Halle and Berlin, 1935–43/R)
F. Treiber: 'Die thüringisch-sächsische Kirchenkantate zur Zeit des jungen J.S. Bachs (etwa 1700–1723)', AMf, ii (1937), 129–59
H. Becker: 'Die frühe hamburgische Tagespresse als musikgeschichtliche Quelle', Beiträge zur hamburgischen Musikgeschichte, ed. H. Husmann (Hamburg, 1956), 22–45
W. Neumann and H.-J. Schulze, eds.: Bach-Dokumente, ii: Fremdschriftliche und gedruckte Dokumente zur Lebensgeschichte Johann Sebastian Bachs 1685–1750 (Kassel, 1969)
H. Zietz: Quellenkritische Untersuchungen an den Bach-Handschriften P 801, P 802 und P 803 aus dem 'Krebs'schen Nachlass' unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Choralbearbeitungen des jungen J.S. Bachs (Hamburg, 1969)
A. Glöckner: 'Neuerkenntnisse zu Johann Sebastian Bachs Aufführungskalender zwischen 1729 und 1735', Bach Jb 1981, 43–75
A. Glöckner: 'Leipziger Neukirchenmusik 1729–1761', BMw, xxv (1983), 105–12
H.J. Busch and J. Goens: 'Georg Friedrich Kauffmanns Harmonische Seelenlust und seine Registrierungskunst im Dienste der Affektenlehre', Ars organi, xxxix (1991), 151–9
C. Wolff: Bach: Essays on His Life and Music (London, 1991)
P. Janson: Applicato textus or dramma per musica? The Function of the Church Cantatas by George Friedrich Kauffmann (diss., U. of Victoria, BC, 1992)
J. Butt: 'J.S. Bach and G.F. Kauffmann: Reflections on Bach's Later Style', Bach Studies, ii, ed. D.R. Melamed (Cambridge, 1995), 47–61

JOSHUA RIFKIN/PETER JANSON

Kauffmann, Leo Justinius (b Dammerkirch [now Dannemarie, Alsace], 20 Sept 1901; d Strasbourg, 25 Sept 1944). German composer. After preliminary studies in Strasbourg he became a pupil of Jarnach in Cologne and also took lessons with Florent Schmitt during his military service. In 1929 he secured a teaching position at the Rheinische Musikhochschule in Cologne, and from 1932 was director of music for broadcast drama and composer for Cologne Radio. Kauffmann achieved international prominence with his Allemanische Suite, which was first performed at the ISCM Festival in 1933, but during the early years of the Third Reich much of his music was condemned as modernist. As a consequence Kauffmann could only maintain his employment in Cologne by writing under a pseudonym. Nevertheless, during the war years he was allowed to resume his professional work, and in 1940 moved to Strasbourg, where he became a teacher in composition at the Conservatory. It was there that he was killed during an air-raid.

Kauffmann's large output contains works in almost every genre, but he became best-known throughout Germany for his opera Die Geschichte vom schönen Annerl (1940). Based on an episode of love and honour during the Thirty Years War, the work was first championed by the conductor Hans Rosbaud; its expanded diatonic style with clearly delineated numbers exerted considerable appeal. His next stage work Das Perlenhemd presented an intriguing mixture of opera, melodrama, pantomime and play, and was similarly accessible, although Goebbels's declaration of Total War in August 1944 halted its progress in German opera houses.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Abenteuer in Kaschgar (Märchenoper), 1924; Liebe um Gloria (Operette), Vienna, 1924; Die Ardwibele (Spl), 1928; Das Zauberflötchen (Märchenspiel, Mathiesen), 1934; Gesang ins Glück (Operette), 1935; Die Serenade (Funkoper, H. Kranz), Cologne Radio, 2 July 1936; Die niegesehene Braut (Spl, Kranz), 1937; Liebe im Park (Operette, E. Wippermann), 1937; Frühere Verhältnisse (Rundfunkburleske, after J.N. Nestroy), 1939; Die Geschichte vom schönen Annerl (9 scenes, E. Reinacher and E. Bormann, after Brentano), Strasbourg, 20 June 1942; Das Perlenhemd (Kammeroper, 6 scenes, Bormann and Kauffmann), Strasbourg, 22 July 1944; Agnes Bernauer (Reinacher, after F. Hebbel), 1944, inc.; Hyppolitos, inc.; Der Verwandelte (Wippermann), inc.

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Divertimento, vn, orch, 1925; Orchester-Stück, 1926; Stück für grosses Orchester, 1927; 4 Orch-Stücke, 1930; Allemanische Suite, 1933; Serenade, str, 1941; Musik, 4 hn, 3 tpt, 3 trbn, tuba, 1941; Sym., 1942; Concertino, db, orch, 1942; Festliche Musik, 2 tpt, 3 trbn, str, 1943; Concert Suite from Die Geschichte vom schönen Annerl, 1943
Vocal: Acherontische Suite, S, T, Bar, spkr, chorus, orch, 1929; Mass, chorus, org, str, 1935; Hymne der Heimat, male chorus, orch, 1938; *c*4 cants.; unacc. choral pieces; *c*25 songs; 3 song cycles
Chbr: Divertimento, fl, va da gamba/va, hpd/pf, 1938; Kleine Suite, va, pf, 1938; Str Qt, 1942; Qnt, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, 1943; Variationen über ein Kinderlied, fl, pf, 1944

Principal publishers: W. Müller, Peters, Schott, Simrock, Universal, Tonger, Würges

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.-J. Seydel: 'Leo Justinius Kauffmann', Musica, v (1951), 186–9
H. von Radzibor: 'Kauffmann, Leo Justinius', Rheinische Musiker, iv, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1966)

ERIK LEVI

Kauffmann [Kaufman, Kaufmann], Paul (bap. Nuremberg, 29 Feb 1568/9; bur. Nuremberg, 1632). German printer. One of ten children of Johannes Kauffmann and his wife Veronica (née vom Berg), he was the grandson of Katherina GERLACH and the heir, through his mother, to his grandmother's firm, previously owned by Johann vom Berg and Ulrich Neuber.

He had worked in his grandmother's printing house from the late 1580s (although not in the early 1580s, as some writers have indicated). After Katherina Gerlach's death in 1592, her will, dividing the firm between her two daughters, Katherina Dietrich and Veronica Kauffmann, was contested. In 1594 the legal dispute was resolved; Veronica Kauffmann's part of the firm, which apparently included the printing portion of the firm, formally became Paul Kauffmann's in 1595. There is no mention of the shop in Nuremberg documents between 1617 and 1632. After Kauffmann's death in 1632, the firm apparently passed to David Kauffmann, one of his younger brothers, who is however listed in the city's documents only as a bookseller, not as a printer.

In his early years, Kauffman printed almost exclusively secular lieder settings by Germans, including Demantius, Haussmann and Resinarius. Although this repertory continued to be important throughout his career, a major influence was his association with Hans Leo Hassler. In an extensive output (over 100 music books in 20 years) he printed much of the latter's music and also works by the Italians who had influenced Hassler's style. Thus following the German practice of printing large-scale miscellaneous anthologies, Kauffmann introduced much fine Italian music into Germany. Individual volumes were accorded to Croce, Gastoldi and Marenzio, as well as Vecchi, while the large anthologies edited by Kaspar Hassler concentrated on the Venetian repertory. In Kauffmann's hands, the firm continued to print many theological, legal and scientific books. A catalogue of his publications was prepared in 1609 by the Frankfurt bookseller Stein.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Cohen: Musikdruck und -drucker zu Nürnberg im sechzehnten Jahrhundert (Nuremberg, 1927) [incl. list of titles]
R. Wagner: 'Ergänzungen zur Geschichte der Nürnberger Musikdrucke des 16. Jahrhunderts', ZMw, xii (1929–30), 506–8
R. Wagner: 'Nachträge zur Geschichte der Nürnberger Musikdrucker im sechzehnten Jahrhundert', Mitteilungen des Vereins für Geschichte der Stadt Nürnberg, xxx (1931), 107–51
S. Jackson: Johann vom Berg and Ulrich Neuber: Music Printers in Sixteenth-Century Nuremberg (diss., CUNY, 1998)

STANLEY BOORMAN, SUSAN JACKSON

Kaufman, Fredrick (b Brooklyn, NY, 24 March 1936). American composer and conductor. He studied the trumpet with Vacchiano, composition with Giannini, and jazz performance and arranging with John Lewis at the Manhattan School (BMus 1959, MMus 1960), and composition with Persichetti at the Juilliard School. He performed as a trumpeter in the New York City Ballet Orchestra, the Goldman Band (now the Guggenheim Memorial Band), the Woody Herman Band and the Sauter-Finegan Orchestra, as well as in various Broadway shows. From 1969 to 1971 Kaufman was assistant professor and composer-in-residence at the University of Wisconsin. In 1971 he moved to Israel, where he served as director of music for the city of Haifa (1971–2) and taught at the Rubin Academy in Jerusalem. His music was performed by the Israel PO, the Jerusalem SO and other resident organizations. He returned to the USA in 1976 and took up academic posts at Eastern Montana College (1977–82), Philadelphia College of the Performing Arts (1982–5) and in 1993 at Florida International University. In 1980–81 he also taught at King's College, London. Among his awards have been a Fulbright Fellowship for his research in Lagos which resulted in his book The African Roots of Jazz (Sherman Oaks, CA, 1979).

Kaufman's music reflects his varied cultural and intellectual background, combining eastern European folk traditions, jazz and the avant garde. These influences are manifested in such disparate works as Stars and Distances for 16-part chorus (1982), written with the stated intention of creating 'a polyrhythmic kaleidoscope in which melody, harmony and speech mingle', the neo-classical Clarinet Concerto (1988), and the opera Masada (1995), both of which make use of aleatory and 12-note techniques. Underlying all his music is a sense of balance and formal design showing a discipline and control which reflects his early classical training.

WORKS

Dramatic: A Children's Opera (Kaufman), 1967; The Nothing Ballet, 1971; Ballet Music, 1975; Masada (op, 3, C. Eisendrath), 1995
Orch and choral: Sym. no.1, str, 1966; Conc., vn, str, 1967; Sym. no.2, wind, 1971; 3 Cants. (Pss.), chorus, org, 1975; Triple Conc., pf, t sax, jazz band, orch, 1975; Echoes (Kaufman), chorus, cl, perc, 1978; Sym. no.3, str, perc, 1978; Sym. no.4 'When the Twain Meet', orch, 1981; Southeast Fantasy, sym. wind ens, 1982; Stars and Distances, spoken sounds and words, chorus, 1982; Prayer (Eisendrath), chorus, cl, perc, 1985, rev. SATB, cl, pf, 1988; Mother of Exiles, SATB, str, 1986; Conc. 'Kaddish', vc, str, 1987; Seascape, cel, hp, str, perc, 1987; Sym. no.5 'American', 1987; Cl Conc., 1988; Sym. no.6 'Dance of Death', 1990; Fanfare for Ob, ob, orch, 1990; Lachrymose, va conc., 1994, arr. vc, orch, 1996; Silver Fanfare, chorus, orch, 1997
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1966 [based on Sym. no.1]; Gigue, pf/hpd, 1969; Interiors, vn, pf, 1970; Sonata, vn, pf, 1970; And the World Goes On, t sax, bar sax, pf, perc, elec gui, tape, 1971; Str Qt, 1972, withdrawn; Introduction and Dance, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1974; Yom Kippur War Piece, shofar, drum, tape, 1974; 5 Moods, ob, 1975; Perc Trio, 1977; 5 Fragrances, cl, hp, perc, 1980; Gigue, 2 vn, 1980; Gigue no.2, pf/hpd, 1980; Metamorphosis, pf, 1981; Time and Space, pf, 1981; Mobile Str Qt, 1982; Meditation for a Lonely Flute, 1983; A/V Slide Show, trbn, 1984–5; A Bud for Bloom, fl, ob, pf, 1988; 5 Reflections of Winter, cl, pf, perc, hp, 1989; Echoes, Mez, ob, vn, pf, 1990; Nodus, cl, pf, 1991; Catalan Concertante no.1, str qt, 1992; A/V Slide Show no.2, trbn, 1993; Genesis, vn, 1994; Sudon, cl, pf, 1999; Catalan Concertante no.2, gui qt, 1999
Film scores: Ein Hod (1973); San Francisco Bay (1977); Arabs in America (1979)

DOUGLAS TOWNSEND

Kaufman, Louis (b Portland, OR, 10 May 1905; d Los Angeles, 9 Feb 1994). American violinist and viola player. He studied with Henry Bettman and then Franz Kneisel at the Institute of Musical Art in New York, graduating in 1926 with the Loeb Award. In 1927 he won the Naumburg Award, which resulted in a New York recital in 1928. He played the viola in the Musical Art Quartet from 1927 to 1933 but left to pursue a career as a soloist violinist. In 1933 he married the pianist Annette Leibole and together they appeared in concerts and made recordings for over 50 years. He was then engaged by MGM and subsequently played solos in some 400 film scores. He gave many premières of modern works, including Anthony Collins's Violin Concerto and Leighton Lucas's Concert champêtre. Kaufman possessed a faultless technique but sought above all else beauty of sound, perpetuating the school of Elman, Kreisler and Heifetz. He owned both the 'ex-Zimbalist' Guadagnini (1775) and the 'ex-Barrère' Stradivari (1727).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Mell: 'An Interview with the Violinist Louis Kaufman', Journal of the Violin Society of America, vii/4 (1986), 3–38
H. Roth: 'Louis Kaufman', The Strad, xcviii (1983), 98–101
M. Campbell: Obituary, The Independent (14 Feb 1994)

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kaufman, Nikolai (b Ruse, 23 Sept 1925). Bulgarian folklorist and composer. He graduated in 1952 in both theory and performance at the State Academy of Music in Sofia and worked at the Music Institute of the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences, as junior research fellow (1953–66) and senior research fellow (1966–89). He received the doctorate at the institute in 1973 with a dissertation on Bulgarian polyphonic folksong; in 1979 he was appointed professor of ethnomusicology at the State Academy of Music and in 1989, senior research fellow at the Institute for Folklore of the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences. His areas of research include various aspects of Bulgarian and Jewish folk music and he has been a member of the Union of Bulgarian Composers' executive committee since 1965. Much of his work in the 1960s on the folksong from particular regions in Bulgaria was published in Izvestiya na Instituta z muzika (see vols.vi, vii, ix, xi, xii, 1960-67).

WRITINGS

'Triglasnite narodni pesni ot Kastoria' [Three-part folksongs from the Castoria region], IIM, vi (1959), 65–158 [incl. Russ. and Fr. summaries]
Balgarskata revoliutsionna pesen [Bulgarian revolutionary songs] (Sofia, 1966)
'Die Mehrstimmigkeit in der Liederfolklor der Balkanvölker', Etudes balkaniques et sud-est européenes I: Sofia 1966, 1067–84
Nyakoi obshti cherti mezhdu narodnata pesen na balgarite i iztochnite slavyani [Common centres in the folksong of the Bulgars and eastern Slavs] (Sofia, 1968)
Balgarskata mnogoglasna narodna pesen [Bulgarian polyphonic folksong] (diss., Bulgarian Academy of Sciences, 1973; Sofia, 1968)
'Pesni na balgarite mokhamedani ot Rodopite [Songs of the Bulgarian Moslems of the Rhodope region], Rodopski sbornik, ii (1969), 41–130 [incl. Russ. and Eng. summaries]
'Die instrumentale Volksmusik der Bulgaren aus Bessarabien und Taurien', Festschrift to Ernst Emsheimer, ed. G. Hilleström (Stockholm, 1974), 87–94
'The Folksongs of Bulgarian Jews in the Past', Godishnik na evreite ot Balgariya, no.20 (1985), 111–44; Russ. trans. in Muzyka v borbe s fasizhmom, ed. I. Medvedeva (Moscow, 1985) with D. Kaufman: Pogrebalni i drugi oplanvaniya v Balgariya [Funerary and other lamentations in Bulgaria] (Sofia, 1988) [incl. Russ. and Eng. summaries]
'The Folk Music of the Ashkenazi Jews', Godishnik na evreite ot Balgariya, no.25 (1991), 197–212; see also ibid., no.26 (1992), 211–43
'Instrumentalna muzika uz pogreb u naseljima oko reke Dunav' [Instrumental music at funeral rites in settlements along the Danube], Značenje djelatnosti Vinka Žganca: Čakovec 1990 [Narodna umjetnost, iii (1991)], 269–82 [with Eng. summary]
Balkarska narodna muzika [Bulgarian folk music] (Sofia, 1970; Ger. trans., 1977)
Balgarskata svatbena pesen [Bulgarian wedding songs] (Sofia, 1976) [with Eng. summary]
Narodni pesni na balgarite ot Ukrainska i Moldavska SSR [Folksongs of the Bulgarians from the Ukraine and from Moldavia], i-ii (Sofia, 1982) with A. Spasov and D. Petkov: Okrazhen savet za kultura: narodni pesni ot Raikovo i za Raikovo [Fragments of Soviet culture: folksongs from the Raikovo and for Raikovo] (Sofia, 1983)
Ukrainski narodni pesni [Ukrainian Folksongs] (Sofia, 1987)

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Pesni na balgarskoto rabotnichesko dvizhenie 1891–1944 [Songs of the Bulgarian workers' movement 1891–1944] (Sofia, 1959)
Balgarski gradski pesni [Bulgarian urban songs] (Sofia, 1968) with T. Todorov and J. Manolov: Narodni pesni ot Yugozapadna Balgariya, i–ii: Pirinski kray [Folksongs from south-west Bulgaria, i–ii: Pirin region] (Sofia, 1968–94) [thematic catalogue pubd Sofia, 1994] with T. Todorov: Narodni pesni ot rodopskiya kray [Folksongs from the Rodopa region] (Sofia, 1970)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Kaufmann, Armin (b Neu-Itzkany, Bukovina, Austria [now Romania], 30 Feb 1902; d Vienna, 30 June 1980). Austrian composer and violinist. The son of a customs inspector who later became a school headmaster and composer, he grew up in a household where music was played every evening. He received his first formal musical training in Brno where, in addition to violin and cello lessons, he studied theory with Bruno Weigl and assisted in the preparation of Weigl's Harmonielehre (Mainz, 1925). After World War I Kaufmann went to Vienna, where he resumed his study of music theory with Joseph Marx at the Vienna Music Academy in 1928. Soon he occupied a respected position in Viennese musical life. As a violinist he toured Europe and Africa in several string quartets (the last of which was the renowned Rothschild Quartet), taught at the Vienna Conservatory and played in the Vienna SO. These activities influenced his extensive compositional output, within which he recognized three stylistic periods: an early period marked by the influence of Romanian folk music; a middle period in which he developed a stylized bitonality connecting major and mediant-related minor keys; and a late period in which he attended to musical meaning and clarity of musical expression. In 1980, the year of his death, an Armin-Kaufmann-Gesellschaft was founded to promote his work.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Dem Krach im Ofen (children's op, A. Jirasek, W. Pribil), 1956, Vienna, 27 May 1961
Orch: Sym. no.1 'Kuckuck', 1952–3; Burletta, mand orch, 1953–4 [arr. mand/vn/vc, pf]; Sym. no.2, *c*1956; Festlicher Auftakt, wind ens, orch, 1957–8; Sym. no.3, 1962–6; Zirkus Poldrini (Zirkusgeschichte, H. Rubner), spkr, orch, 1963–4; Conc., tárogató, chbr orch, 1966–7; Sym. no.4, 1967–8; Pf Conc., 1968–9; Konzertante Musik, fl, pf, str, 1977–8
Choral: Chorsinfonie, 4-pt male chorus, orch, 1935–7; Mutter (G. Körber), 3-pt female chorus, pf, 1949; 5 Chöre, 3-pt mixed chorus, 1951; Weinchor (H. Wamlek), male chorus, 1952; Der Masslose (E. Roth), 4-pt male chorus, 1954; Zucchini-Tomaten-Melanzan (C. Hocheneder), female vv, pf, 1969–70
Solo vocal: Lieder (H. Cloeter), 1v, pf, 1930–35; 5 Tierlieder (M. Berger), S, pf, 1932; 5 Lieder (M. von Dauthendey, C. Morgenstern, Berger, Cloeter), medium v, pf, 1935; Von der Liebe (various), 1v, pf, 1940–46; 3 Lieder (K. von Grüneisen, E. Lasker-Schüler, Werneck), S, pf, 1949; Ich denke an dich (St Chiavacci), Mez, pf, 1978
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt nos.1–5, 1926–35; Quartettino II, mand, str trio, 1947; Trio und Rondo, cl, hn, hp, 1947 [arr. pf trio]; Quartettino III, gui, str trio, 1949; Suite, 2 gui, 1949; Trio, vn, gui, db/vc, 1950; Str Trio, 1952; Suite, zither, 1952; Für Heidi, vc, 1954; Trio, va d'amore, db, pf, 1955; Str Qt no.6, 1961–2; Sonata, va, pf, 1963; Pf Qnt, 1964; Festfanfare, brass, 1965; Str Qt no.7, 1969; 4 Miniaturen, fl, 1979
Kbd (pf, unless otherwise stated): Groteske Sonate no.1, 1927; Aphorismen, 1933–4; Vorspiel und Nachspiel, org, 1947; 3 Stücke, 1952; 4 Stücke, 1959; 4 Stücke, 1975; Woodchuck, 1977; Kalenderblatt, 1979

Principal publisher: Doblinger

RAINER BONELLI

Kaufmann, Dieter (b Vienna, 22 April 1941). Austrian composer, conductor and stage director. He studied at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik (teaching diploma, 1965) with Schiske, von Einem and others and at the Paris Conservatoire (1967–9), where his teachers included Messiaen and Leibowitz; he also studied electro-acoustics with François Bayle and Pierre Schaeffer. He has worked as a freelance composer for Austrian Radio (from 1966) and taught at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik (from 1970, professor 1990). A founding member of the Groupe International de Musique Electroacoustique de Paris (1969), he also co-founded the K & K Experimentalstudio, Vienna (1975), which has staged many productions of his works, and the Gesellschaft für Elektroakustische Musik (1984, chair 1988–91). He has served as chair (1988–91) of the Austrian section of the ISCM and as a committee member for Austro Mechana (from 1992).

The electro-acoustic music and musique concrète that Kaufmann encountered in Paris influenced both his compositional style and his activities as a conductor and stage director. The student revolts of 1968 made him keenly aware of social issues, as is evident in Evocation (1968), his oratorio against violence. Central concerns of his works have included the relationship between the production and staging of art (Volksoper, 1973–8), and the role of women in contemporary life (Bildnis einer Frau im Spiegel, 1973). During the 1980s he explored the conflict between the individual and society: Die Reise ins

Paradies (1987) depicts a failed attempt at Utopian life, while the church opera Bruder Boleslaw (1989) tells the story of a medieval penitent denied any form of communication. Kaufmann has described his relationship to tradition as parallel to that of the composer of musique concrète to sound: he emphasizes connections between existing material rather than inventing new material.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Aus der Arbeitswelt (multimedia, Kaufmann), op.32, 1971–6; Concertomobil (Musiktheater), op.18, 1971; Pupofon (Musiktheater), op.19, 1971; Spiegelstimme (Musiktheater), op.21, 1972; Semi-Buffa (Miniaturoper), op.23, 1973; Volksoper (G. Jonke, after trad.), op.36, 1973–8; Deklaration (multimedia), op.31, 1975; Ständchen für einen Potentaten, op.45, 1982; Die Reise ins Paradies (vokales Theater, after R. Musil), op.56, 1987; Bruder Boleslaw (Spiel und Messe, R. Brandstätter and Kaufmann), op.61, 1989; Still ist das Land (multimedia), op.64, 1992 [after A. Tisal: Tanzcafé Lerch]; Dolores – ein Heldenleben? (Operette, M.G. Hofmann), op.76, 1996; incid music for radio and stage

El-ac: Gefängnisse, op.13, org, tape, 1968–71; Wiener Werkel, op.16, 1971; Bildnis einer Frau im Spiegel, op.24, 1973; Konkrezia. Ton aus Ton, op.28, pfmr, ceramic object, tape, 1975; Meine Welt – ich sehe keine andere (after W. Buchebner), op.35, 1v, wind, perc, tape, 1977; Kakophonie – Euphonie (Missklang – Schönklang), op.40, pfmr, tape, live elecs, light, 1979; Heiligenlegende (after E. Cardenal), op.44, various, 1982; Schreie, Schüsse, Stille, op.54, pfmr, tape, 1986 [from Der Schrei des Geduldigen]; Widerständchen, spkr, 1v, pf, tape, 1988; Wer hat mein Lied so zerstört (La guillotine permanente) (A. de Lamartine, S. Kestenholz, T. de Méricourt, B. Brecht), spkr, tape, op.62, 1989; Blech und Kehle (Eine Alpensymphonie), op.68, 1992; Schrott und Kron (Eine Abfallsymphonie), op.69, 1992; O santa acusmatica 'La mer', op.75, cptr, 1994

Other works: Wach auf, mein Herz, choral partita, op.1, org, 1964; Der Schrei (F.García Lorca), op.4, S, A, B, fl, bn, str trio, 1965; Evocation (orat, after I. Bachmann), op.11, spkr, S, A, T, B, chorus, vn, str, pf, 1968; Pax, op.15, 18vv, loud spkr, 1970; Es ist genug, op.39, variations, mixed chorus, org, 1979; Tuten und Blasen, op.42, wind, perc, 1980; Genius Compact, op.67, 6 bagatelles, sax qt, 1992; Requiem, A, Sp. bells, orch, op.71, 1993; O santa acusmatica 'Offenes Meer', op.75a, wind, str qnt, pf, perc, 1996

MSS in A-Wn

Principal publishers: Apoll, Alekto, Schott, Ars Viva, Reimers

Principal recording companies: Amadeo, Harmonia Mundi, Jeunesses Musicales

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LZMÖ [incl. further bibliography]

C. Dahlhaus: 'Umgestülpte Operette: zu Diether Kaufmanns Volksoper', ÖMz, xxxix (1978), 223–7

M. Diederichs-Lafite: 'Um etwas zu sagen über die Welt, muss man mit dieser Welt arbeiten!', ÖMz, xlix (1994), 378–81 [interview]

A. Schiffer-Ekhart and G. Trimmel: Das K & K Experimentalstudio: Dieter Kaufmann and Gunda König: eine Bilddokumentation (Vienna, 1996)

SIGRID WIESMANN

Kaufmann, Harald (b Feldbach, 1 Oct 1927; d Graz, 9 July 1970). Austrian musicologist. He studied philosophy and jurisprudence, taking doctorates in both, and musicology with Hellmut Federhofer in Graz. He was a member of the circle of the philosopher Ferdinand Weinhandl, and was subsequently influenced by Ernst Bloch and Adorno. He worked as a music critic for the Graz newspaper Neue Zeit (1947–67) and for the Austrian radio; he was also a frequent lecturer and became an influential figure in the re-evaluation of cultural movements, such as the Second Viennese School, suppressed during the Nazi regime. His major study of Jewish culture under the Habsburg monarchy, Geist aus dem Ghetto, dates from this time. Through his active support of new music he helped establish Austria's first festival dedicated to avant-garde music, 'Musikprotokoll', as part of the Festival Steirischer Herbst in Graz. In 1967 he founded the Institut für Wertungsforschung which sought to combine music analysis, sociology and philosophy in studies on aesthetics. As director of the institute Kaufmann had many exchanges with eminent composers, including Ligeti, Dallapiccola and Krenek, many of whom were personal friends. A Harald Kaufmann Archive was founded at the Akademie der Künste in Berlin in 1994 to make his manuscripts and correspondence available to the public. His work is collected in three volumes, Spurlinien, Fingerübungen and Von innen und aussen.

WRITINGS

Neue Musik in Steiermark (Graz, 1957)

Eine bürger liche Musikgesellschaft: 150 Jahre Musikverein für Steiermark (Graz, 1965)

Hans Erich Apostel (Vienna, 1965)

Spurlinien: analytische Aufsätze über Sprache und Musik (Vienna, 1969)

Fingerübungen: Musikgesellschaft und Wertungsforschung (Vienna, 1970)

ed. W. Grünzweig and G. Krieger: Von innen und aussen: Schriften über Musik, Musikleben und Ästhetik (Hofheim, 1993)

Geist aus dem Ghetto: ein Beitrag zur jüdischen Kultur in der Habsburg-Monarchie (forthcoming)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Marckhl: 'Harald Kaufmann zum Gedenken', ÖMz, xxv (1970), 637–8

W. Grünzweig and G. Krieger: 'Werten als Wissenschaft: Spurlinien eines Begriffs', ÖMz, l (1995), 741–51

WERNER GRÜNZWEIG

Kaufmann, Henry W(illiam) (b Cambridge, MA, 23 Oct 1913; d New Brunswick, NJ, 24 Aug 1982). American musicologist. He received the BMus and MMus from Yale University, where he studied under Hindemith. At Harvard University he worked with John Ward, Nino Pirrotta and Walter Piston, and took the PhD in 1960 with a dissertation on the life and works of Nicola Vicentino. He taught at the University of Wisconsin (1948–50), at Boston University (1950–56) and at Ohio State University (1958–62). In 1962 he was appointed professor of music and chairman of the department at Rutgers University; he was chairman until 1972. Kaufmann's principal field of study was Italian Renaissance music, particularly in 16th-century Florence. His special interest in Vicentino resulted in modern editions of both his musical and theoretical works.

WRITINGS

The Life and Works of Nicola Vicentino (diss., Harvard U., 1960)

'The Motets of Nicola Vicentino', MD, xv (1961), 167–85

'Vicentino's Archiorgano: an Annotated Translation', JMT, v (1961), 32–53

'Vicentino and the Greek Genera', JAMS, xvi (1963), 325–46

'A "Diatonic" and a "Chromatic" Madrigal by Giulio Fiesco', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering for Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966/R), 474–84

The Life and Works of Nicola Vicentino (1511–c.1576), MSD, xi (1966)

'Art for the Wedding of Cosimo de' Medici and Eleonora of Toledo (1539)', Paragone, no.243 (1970), 52–67

'More on the Tuning of the Archicembalo', JAMS, xxiii (1970), 84–94

'Music for a Noble Florentine Wedding (1539)', Words and Music: the Scholar's View ... in Honor of A. Tillman Merritt, ed. L. Berman (Cambridge, MA, 1972), 161–88

'Music for a Favola pastorale (1554)', A Musical Offering: Essays in Honor of Martin Bernstein, ed. E.H. Clinkscale and C. Brook (New York, 1977), 163–82

'Francesco Orso da Celano, a Neapolitan Madrigalist of the Second Half of the 16th Century', Studi musicali, ix (1980), 219–69
'Francesco Orso's Commentary on the Chromatic Writing of his First Book of Madrigals (1567)', Essays on the Music of J.S. Bach and Other Divers Subjects: a Tribute to Gerhard Herz, ed. R.L. Weaver (Louisville, KY, 1981), 156–64

EDITIONS

Nicola Vicentino: Opera omnia, CMM, xxvi (1963)

PAULA MORGAN

Kaufmann [Kaufman], Paul. See KAUFFMANN, PAUL.

Kaufmann, Walter (b Karlsbad [now Karlovy Vary, Czech Republic], 1 April 1907; d Bloomington, IN, 9 Sept 1984). American ethnomusicologist, conductor and composer of Austro-Hungarian origin. He studied at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik with Franz Schreker and Curt Sachs and at Prague University with Gustav Becking and Paul Nettl. He conducted opera in Karlovy Vary and Eger, Bohemia, 1927–8. His appointments included those of music director for All-India Radio (1935–46), head of the piano department at the Conservatory of Halifax, Nova Scotia (1947–8), conductor of the Winnipeg SO (1949–56), and professor of musicology at Indiana University (1957–77). Kaufmann is best known for his two books, The Ragas of North India (1968) and The Ragas of South India (1976), in which he exhaustively catalogued rāga according to indigenous taxonomies. His other writings concentrated on the transcription and notation of Asian music. His compositions show a mixture of Eastern and Western influences, often blending tonal and serial elements into dissonant polyphonic textures.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Der Hammel bringt es an den Tag, Prague, 1934; A Parfait for Irene, Indiana U., 1952; Sganarelle, Vancouver, 1955; The Scarlet Letter, Indiana U., 1962; The Research, Indiana U., 1966; A Hoosier's Tale, Indiana U., 1966; 5 others
Orch: 6 syms., 1930, 1933, 1936, 1939, 1940, 1956; 2 pf concs., 1934, 1959; Madras Express, 1948; Vc Conc., 1952; 6 Indian Miniatures, 1965; many ovs. and suites
Chbr music

Principal publishers: Indiana University Press, Shawnee

WRITINGS

Musical Notations of the Orient (Bloomington, IN, 1967/R)
The Ragas of North India (Bloomington, IN, 1968/R)
'The Mathematical Determination of the Twelve lu are Performed by Prince Liu An in his Huai-nan tzu (Second Century BC)', Umakhak ronch'ong: Yi Hye-Gu paksa song'su kinyom (Seoul, 1969), 371–82
'Parallel Trends of Music Liturgies and Notations in Eastern and Western Music', Orbis musicae, ii (1973–4), 97–119
Tibetan Buddhist Chant: Musical Notations and Interpretations of a Song Book by the Bkah Brgyud pa and Sa skya pa Sects (Bloomington, IN, 1975)
Musical References in the Chinese Classics (Detroit, 1976)
The Ragas of South India: a Catalogue of Scalar Material (Bloomington, IN, 1976/R)
Alt Indien, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, ii/8 (Leipzig, 1981)
Selected Musical Terms of Non-Western Cultures: a Notebook-Glossary (Warren, MI, 1990)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Noblitt, ed.: Music East and West: Essays in Honor of Walter Kaufmann (New York, 1981) [incl. list of works and writings, 381–6]

□

Kaukesel, Guibert. See GUIBERT KAUKESEL.

Kaun, Bernhard Theodor Ludwig (b Milwaukee, 5 April 1899; d Baden-Baden, 3 Jan 1980). German composer of American birth, son of HUGO KAUN. Largely self-taught as a composer, he was tutored by his father, and studied the violin and piano while attending Gymnasium in Berlin. During World War I he served in the German army, playing the clarinet in a military band. After the war he arranged and conducted for RCA Victor in Berlin for several years. In 1924 he moved to the USA, where he worked as a music copyist in New York, conducted at the Alhambra Theater, Milwaukee (1924), and taught at the Eastman School of Music (1925–8). Recognized particularly for his orchestrations, he arranged music from Wagner's music dramas for the New York release of Fritz Lang's film Siegfried and orchestrated Howard Hanson's Legend of Beowulf and Organ Concerto.

In 1930 Kaun was invited to Hollywood by Heinz Roemheld, music director of Universal Studios. Over the following decade he worked for both Warner Bros. and Paramount, composing music for over 170 films; his first assignments included the first full-length score for a sound film (Heaven on Earth, 1931) and music for Frankenstein (1931). Highly sought after as an orchestrator, he orchestrated now classic film scores for Max Steiner (King Kong, 1933; Gone with the Wind, 1939), Erich Wolfgang Korngold, Ernst Toch (Peter Ibbetson, 1935), Dimitri Tiomkin (Lost Horizon, 1937) and Charlie Chaplin, as well as orchestrating his own scores. His eclectic, colouristic style, influenced by the music of Strauss, Sibelius, Ravel and early Schoenberg, was praised by Stravinsky. In 1941 Kaun left Hollywood for New York, where he devoted himself to composing concert music. He returned to Germany in 1953, where he conducted the Graunke Orchestra (Munich) until 1963.

WORKS
(selective list)

Film scores (names in parentheses are of directors): Frankenstein (J. Whale), 1931; Heaven on Earth (R. Mack), 1931; Doctor X (M. Curtiz), 1932; I am a Fugitive of a Chain Gang (M. LeRoy), 1932; The Mystery of the Wax Museum (Curtiz), 1932; 20,000 Years at Sing Sing (Curtiz), 1932; A Farewell to Arms (F. Borzage), 1933, collab. W.F. Harling and others; Luxury Liner, 1933; Death Takes a Holiday (M. Leisen), 1934, collab. M. Roder and others; The Firebird (W. Dieterle), 1934 [after Stravinsky]; The Scarlet Empress (J. von Sternberg), 1934, collab. J. Leipold and others; Oil for the Lamps of China (LeRoy), 1935, collab. H. Roemheld; She (L.C. Holden and I. Pichel), 1935, collab. M. Steiner; The Black Legion (A. Mayo), 1936; The Petrified Forest (Mayo), 1936; Story of Louis Pasteur (Dieterle), 1936, collab. Roemheld; The Walking Dead (Curtiz), 1936; The Patient in Room 18 (B. Connolly and C. Wilbur), 1937; The Return of Doctor X (V. Sherman), 1939; Forest Murmurs (S. Vorkapich), 1947; Special Delivery (J. Brahm), 1955; Alle Wege führen heim (H. Deppe), 1957; Lassie (TV series), 1958–9
Other works: Entice Italienne; Zeitstimmung, female vv; Sketches, suite, orch, 1927; Nederländisches Volkslied, 1v, pf, 1929–30; Romantic Sym., C, 1930s, rev. 1960s; Qnt, ob, str, 1940; Sinfonia concertante, hn, orch, 1940; The Vagabond, suite, orch, 1956 [based on film and TV scores]; 20 pf pieces

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W.H. Rosar: 'Music for the Monsters: Universal Pictures' Horror Film Scores of the Thirties', Quarterly Journal of the Library of Congress, xl (1983), 390–421
C. McCarty: Film Composers in America: a Filmography 1911–1970 (Oxford, forthcoming)

WILLIAM H. ROSAR

Kaun, Hugo (b Berlin, 21 March 1863; d Berlin, 2 April 1932). German composer and choral conductor. Born into a merchant family, he composed prolifically as a youth. He studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1879–80) and in 1881 began a determined study of the piano with Oscar Raif. At the same time he attended the composition classes of Friedrich Kiel at the Prussian Academy of Arts. Kaun busied himself with piano teaching, composition and conducting a mixed chorus, but following his father's death in 1886, he went to the USA, settling in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where there was a large German community; while there, Kaun associated with, among others, the music theorist Bernhard Ziehn. A hand injury forced him to give up thoughts of a career as a pianist, and so he spent his years in the USA teaching, composing and directing a choral society, the Milwaukee Liederkranz. Some of his works were performed by the Chicago SO under Theodore Thomas, who was one of the early champions of Kaun's music.

Kaun returned to Berlin in 1902, and by the 1920s his fame as a composer had spread throughout German-speaking Europe. In 1912 he was elected a member of the Academy of Arts and in 1922 he joined the composition staff of the Berlin Conservatory. Kaun was a prolific composer whose output embraces most genres. Of his four neo-Wagnerian operas. Der Fremde (1920) was regarded as the most significant, though in the more radical cultural climate of the Weimar Republic, it quickly disappeared from the repertory, and attempts to revive it during the Third Reich faltered. Although Kaun died one year before Hitler came to power, his nationalist choral works, particularly those for unaccompanied male chorus, enjoyed great popularity throughout Germany after his death. He was out of sympathy with the modernist climate of the 1920s, and was one of a number of neo-Wagnerian composers who were espoused by the Nazis.

WORKS

(selective list)

Operas: Der Pietist (1, W. Drobegg), Leipzig 1895; Sappho (3, after F. Grillparzer), Leipzig, Neues, 27 Oct 1917; Der Fremde (4, F. Rauch), Dresden, Staatsoper, 24 Feb 1920; Menandra (3, Kaun, after F. Jansen), Kiel, 1926

3 syms., no.1 'An mein Vaterland', d; no.2, c; no.3, e; 3 pf concs., B♭, e♭, c; Fantasie-Stück, op.66, vn, orch; Vineta, op.8, sym. poem; Im Urwald, op.43, sym. poem; Sir John Falstaff, op.60, sym. poem; 3 suites, 3 ovs., 5 marches, 12 chbr orch pieces

4 str qts, F, d, c, a; 2 pf trios; Octet, F, op.26, cl, bn, hn, str qt, db; Qnt, f♯, op.28, vc, str qt; Pf Qnt, op.82; many duos; Aus den Bergen, suite, sax, pf, 1932

Abendfeier in Venedig, op.17, 8vv chorus, str orch, 2 hp, 1890; Auf dem Meer, op.54, sym. poem, Bar, chorus, orch, n.d.; Mutter Erde, orat, soloists, chorus, orch, 1911; Requiem, Mez, boys' choir, org, 1921; *c*226 choral pieces, incl. *c*160 for male vv; *c*170 songs and duets

Pf Sonata, A, op.2; *c*115 pf pieces; arrs. pf duo/duet; org pieces

Principal publishers: Amsel, André, Breitkopf & Härtel, Kahnt, Rühle, Zimmermann

WRITINGS

Harmonie- und Modulationslehre (Leipzig, 1915, 2/1921)
Aus meinem Leben (Berlin, 1932) [with list of works]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R. Schaal)
W. Altmann: 'Hugo Kaun', Monographien moderner Musiker, ed. C.F. Kahnt, i (Leipzig, 1906), 156–64
G.R. Kruse: 'Hugo Kaun', Die Musik, ix/4 (1909–10), 339–51
F. Stege: 'Hugo Kaun', ZfM, Jg.98 (1931), 105–10
R. Schaal: Hugo Kaun, 1863–1932, Leben und Werk: ein Beitrag zur Musik der Jahrhundertwende (Regensburg, 1948) [with list of works]

WILLIAM D. GUDGER/ERIK LEVI

Kavafian, Ani (b Istanbul, 10 May 1948). American violinist of Armenian parentage, sister of IDA KAVAFIAN. She emigrated to the USA with her family in 1956 and began violin studies in Detroit with Ara Zerounian (1957–62) and Mischakoff (1962–6). At the Juilliard School of Music from 1966 (MA 1972), she studied the violin with Galamian and chamber music with Galimir and the Juilliard Quartet. In 1969 she made her début at Carnegie Recital Hall. Her European début was at the Salle Gaveau in Paris (1973). After winning the Avery Fisher Prize (1976), she performed with the New York PO (1977), when she played Beethoven's Violin Concerto under the direction of Leinsdorf. She later appeared with other major orchestras.

Kavafian has balanced her career as a solo artist with that of a chamber musician. She toured with Music from Marlboro (1971–2) and in 1972 began playing with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, of which she became an artist-member in 1980; in 1978 she made her first appearance with the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival. Her premières include works by Husa, Rorem, Street and Takemitsu, and she has made several chamber music recordings. She combines technical virtuosity with sensitive musicianship, and her warm and rich tone is complemented by her violin, the 'Muir Mackenzie' Stradivari of 1736. Professor of violin at the Mannes College from 1982, she was appointed in 1983 to the same position at the Manhattan School and Queens College, CUNY.

K. ROBERT SCHWARZ/R

Kavafian, Ida (b Istanbul, 29 Oct 1952). American violinist of Armenian parentage, sister of ANI KAVAFIAN. She emigrated to the USA with her family in 1956 and began violin studies in Detroit at the age of six with Ara Zerounian; later she studied with Mischakoff and (from 1969) at the Juilliard School (MA 1975) with Shumsky and Galamian. In 1973 she won the Vianna da Motta International Violin Competition in Lisbon, and in the same year was one of the founding members of the chamber ensemble Tashi; her recordings and engagements throughout the world with the group demonstrated a commitment to chamber music, especially new music. She joined the Beaux Arts Trio in 1992.

Kavafian made her New York recital début in 1978, accompanied by Peter Serkin. Her European début was in 1982 at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in London. She has appeared as a soloist with many orchestras, and as a chamber musician with the Guarneri String Quartet and at several festivals, including Spoleto (USA and Italy), the Berkshire Music Festival, the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival and the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. Active as both violinist and violist, she performed with her sister Ani Kavafian at a duo recital in Carnegie Hall (1983). She has given premières of works by Takemitsu, Wuorinen, Peter Lieberson and Ruth Crawford, as well as joining Chick Corea and Gary Burton for an international jazz tour (1983–4). Her playing is fiery and uninhibited, and her sensuous tone is enhanced by her instrument, a J.B. Guadagnini of 1751.

K. ROBERT SCHWARZ/R

Kaval [kavali, kavall]. Wooden rim-blown flute of south-eastern Europe and Turkey, similar to the NEY of the Arab world. Kaval may once have referred to various Balkan duct and rim-blown flutes, accounting for the present day diversity of the term's usage. It is generally made of boxwood, with seven finger-holes and one thumb-hole, and is primarily a pastoral instrument.

The Bulgarian kaval, once made of a single piece of wood, is now constructed of three separate sections (of cornel, plum or boxwood), with a total length of 60 to 90

cm. Bone rings cover the joints, to prevent the wood from cracking. Metal decoration is also found. The finger-holes are located in the central section, while the lower (shorter) section has four additional holes called dushnitsi or dyavolski dupki ('devil's holes'); these are not covered in performance. The kaval can be made in various tunings, D being the most common. Its range is almost three octaves, mostly chromatic.

In the south-west Rhodope mountains, two kavals in the same tuning (called chifte kavali) are played together, one performing the melody, the other a drone. This type of kaval is made from one piece of wood. A similar use of the kaval is also known in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Kosovo (Yugoslavia), where one kaval of the pair is 'male', the other 'female'. The Albanian kavall is better known as the fyell.

In Turkey the term 'kaval' is used generally to refer to all shepherd's pipes and more particularly (though not invariably) to ductless flutes. The presence or absence of a duct is sometimes specified by the addition of a qualification: dilsiz kaval ('kaval without a tongue'), dilli kaval ('kaval with a tongue'). Other qualifications may be added to describe materials, size or constructional features: kamiş kavalı ('reed kaval'), çam kavalı ('pine kaval'), madenı kavalı ('metal kaval'); cura kavalı ('small kaval'), çoban kavalı ('shepherd's kaval', i.e. long kaval); üç parçalı kavalı ('kaval with three parts'). The kaval can be made of wood, cane, bone or metal (usually brass) and has five or more finger-holes, one thumb-hole and sometimes additional unfingered holes like the Bulgarian instrument.

In Thraki and some of the Aegean islands the term 'kavali' refers to an end-blown flute of the floyera family. It has seven finger-holes and sometimes an additional thumb-hole. In northern Greece the term kavali is also used to denote the souravli.

The Romanian caval is a large duct flute. It has five finger-holes arranged in groups of two and three, counting from the distal end. Also from Romania, the caval dobrogean ('Dobrujan caval') or caval bulgăresc is a similar instrument to the Bulgarian kaval.

VERGILIJ ATANASSOV, R. CONWAY MORRIS, RADMILA PETROVIČ, TIBERIU ALEXANDRU

Kaveret [Poogy]. Israeli pop/rock band. It was formed in 1972 by Danni Sanderson, who composed and wrote the lyrics for most of the band's songs as well as playing the guitar and singing. The members of Kaveret included Gidi Gov (vocals), Alon Olearchik (bass guitar), Ephraim Shamir (guitar, vocals), Meir Fenigstein (drums), Yoni Rechter (keyboards) and Yitzhak Klepter (guitar), several of whom met while performing in the Nakhal Army Entertainment Ensemble. Kaveret's music was a combination of cheerful rock melodies, amusing wordplay and absurd, nonsensical humour, and during the period 1973–5 the band's first two albums and its shows gained enormous popularity. After the release of a less successful third album in 1975, the group disbanded in 1976, but during brief reunions in 1984, 1990 and 1998 Kaveret gave concerts which drew audiences of many thousands. Kaveret was the first group to introduce successfully the concept of a rock band within Israeli popular music; its blend of humour and rock proved highly influential, and its song repertory became well loved. Several members of the band contributed further to the development of Israeli popular music during their subsequent careers as performers, composers, arrangers and producers.

RECORDINGS

Poogy Tales, Hed Artzi (Israel) 14376 (1973)
Poogy in Pita, Hed Artzi 14419 (1974)
Crowded in the Ear, Hed Artzi 14541 (1975)

MOTTI REGEV

Kavsadze. Georgian family of folksingers. Sandro Kavsadze (b Khovle, nr Kaspi, 1874; d Tbilisi, 12 June 1939) came from a family of priests with a deep knowledge of folksinging. He acquired most of the traditional Kartli-Kakhetian (eastern Georgian) repertory from his family. Later, during his studies at Gori Theological College, he perfected his repertory of eastern Georgian church songs with Simon Goglichidze. While still a student, he conducted the college choir, as well as being one of the leading voices in the first Georgian professional choir organized by Lado Agniashvili. Between 1894 and 1911 he organized and conducted choirs in Gori and Tbilisi. In 1909 he made his early recordings of eastern Georgian folksongs, including the virtuoso solo song Urmuli ('The Bullock-Carters' Song'). In the period 1911–35 he taught Georgian traditional singing in Imereti (the central region of western Georgia). In 1935 he organized and led the eastern Georgian choir which participated in a major series of performances organized by the Soviet government in Moscow and Leningrad (St Petersburg) leading to the recording of 20 songs in 1937. His singing style, based on a strong and beautiful voice with a wide range and a virtuoso technique, influenced many other performers of the eastern Georgian singing tradition.

His grandson Anzor Kavsadze (b Chiatura, 7 Aug 1930) also acquired his knowledge of traditional Kartli-Kakhetian repertory from his family. In 1956 he graduated from the Tbilisi State Conservatory as a choir conductor, going on to take a postgraduate degree as an opera-symphonic conductor with Odyssey Dimitriadi (1964). From 1951 he worked as a singer and conductor of the Georgian Radio Folk Ensemble, conductor of the Tbilisi Conservatory Choir (1954–8), conductor of the Georgian Philharmonic choir (1956–7), chief conductor (1957–66) and then artistic director and chief conductor of the Georgian State Folksong Ensemble, with appearances throughout former USSR, Europe, and North and South America, studio recordings, and radio and TV broadcasts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

L. Gegechkor: 'Sandro Kavsadze', Kartuli khalkhuri simgeris ostatebi, i (Tbilisi, 1954), 7–30
L. Gegechkor: 'Anzor Kavsadze', Kompozitorï i muzïkovedi Gruziy [Composers and musicologists of Georgia] (Tbilisi, 1985), 187 only Sandro Kavsadze (1874–1939), coll. A. Erkomaishvili, rec. 1909–37, Melodiya M30 46085 and 46086 (1986)

JOSEPH JORDANIA

Kawai. Japanese firm of instrument makers. Founded in 1927 and incorporated in 1951, Kawai was at the end of the 20th century the second largest producer of pianos in Japan, the world's largest producer of that instrument. Manufacture of instruments gave way to military supplies during World War II but was resumed in 1948, and by 1963 an American branch was opened. Annual production rose from approximately 2000 instruments during the early 1950s to about 30,000 by the late 1960s; in 1990 their total production reached 2 million. Kawai's headquarters are in Hamamatsu, with factories in Ryuyo and Maisaka. The firm has a piano assembly plant in Lincolnton, North Carolina, and a finishing plant in Greer, South Carolina; the Lowrey Organ Co. is a wholly-owned subsidiary. Kawai's pianos have achieved a high reputation, the concert grand having been used in several international competitions. The company makes several excellent models of smaller grands, and a fine upright. In 1991 Kawai entered a cooperative venture with Steinway for the Boston piano, whereby Steinway designs and Kawai builds it under Steinway quality-control procedures. Kawai also makes other instruments and is heavily involved in educational projects in Japan.

CYRIL EHRLICH/EDWIN M. GOOD

Kay, Hershy (b Philadelphia, 17 Nov 1919; d Danbury, CT, 2 Dec 1981). American composer and arranger. He studied at the Curtis Institute (1936–40), where his teachers included Randall Thompson (composition). Self-taught as an orchestrator, he began a successful career orchestrating musicals and ballets in New York. His first professional project was to orchestrate several Brazilian songs for soprano Elsie Houston's night club act in the Rainbow Room. Beginning with Bernstein's On the Town in 1944, Kay became one of the most sought after orchestrators on Broadway. His credits include later works by Bernstein, Marc Blitzstein, Harvey Schmidt, Cy Coleman, Andrew Lloyd Webber and others. He created ballet scores for Balanchine and the New York City Ballet, the Joffrey Ballet, the Royal Ballet and the Royal Danish Ballet. He also arranged film and television scores, and night club acts. He completed the orchestration of Kurka's opera The Good Soldier Schweik after the composer's death. His last arrangement was of Bernstein's Olympic Hymn, first performed at the opening of the Olympic Congress in Baden-Baden (1981).

Kay's original compositions draw on a wide range of styles, including serialism (The Clowns, 1968). His ballets show the influence of a variety of sources, from folk music and British music hall ditties to John Philip Sousa, Noël Coward, Francis Poulenc, Jacques Offenbach and others. His reconstruction for Eugene List of Louis Moreau Gottschalk's Grande tarantelle for piano and orchestra, later choreographed by Balanchine as Tarantella, led to a revival of interest in Gottschalk's music. A modest, self-effacing man, Kay claimed he could teach all he knew about orchestration 'in twenty minutes'; he was widely admired for his skills and his ability to work well under pressure. He was a strong advocate for paying royalties to arrangers, rather than a set fee per page of completed work. He taught orchestration for a year (1972) at Columbia University.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ballets: The Thief who Loved a Ghost, 1950 [after C.M. von Weber]; Cakewalk, 1951 [after Gottschalk]; Western Sym., 1954 [based on Amer. folksongs]; The Concert, 1956 [after Chopin]; Stars and Stripes, 1958 [after J.P. Sousa]; Tarantella, pf, orch, 1961 [after Gottschalk]; L'inconnue, 1963 [after F. Poulenc]; The Clowns, 1968; Cortège burlesque, 1969; Meadowlark, 1969; Who Cares?, 1970 [after G. Gershwin]; Grand Tour, 1971 [after N. Coward]; Winter's Court, 1972 [based on Renaissance dances]; Union Jack, 1976 [based on British folksongs]

Orchestrations (musicals, unless otherwise stated): L. Bernstein: On the Town, 1944; K. Weill: A Flag is Born (pageant), 1946; Bernstein: Peter Pan, 1950; J. Moross: The Golden Apple (op), 1954; E. Robinson: Sandhog, 1954; M. Blitzstein: Reuben, Reuben, 1955; Bernstein: Candide, 1956, rev. 1974; J. Urbont: Livin' the Life, 1957; R. Kurka: The Good Soldier Schweik (op), 1958 [completed by Kay]; Mother Goose Rhymes, 1958 [background music for C. Ritchard recording]; Blitzstein: Juno, 1959; M. Rodgers: Once Upon a Mattress, 1959; The Happiest Girl in the World, 1961 [after J. Offenbach]; J. Herman: Milk and Honey, 1961; H. Schmidt: 110 in the Shade, 1963; M. Charlap: Kelly, 1965; M. Schafer: Drat! The Cat!, 1965; A. Previn: Coco, 1969; Bernstein: Mass (theatre piece), 1971; M. Hamlisch: A Chorus Line, 1975; Bernstein: 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, 1976; J. Ross: Music Is, 1976; C. Coleman: On the Twentieth Century, 1978; B. Lane: Carmelina 1979; A. Lloyd Webber: Evita, 1979; Coleman: Barnum, 1980

Orchestrations (film scores): A. North: Man with the Gun, 1955; North: The King and Four Queens, 1956; North: South Seas Adventure, 1958; S. Kaplan: Girl of the Night, 1960; T.Z. Shepard: Such Good Friends, 1971; North: Bite the Bullet, 1975

Other works: Gottschalk: Grande tarantelle, pf, orch, 1961 [reconstruction]; wind music; music for TV, radio, night club acts

Principal publisher: Boosey & Hawkes, Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Sonino: 'Hershy Kay', Musical America, lxxxi/10 (1961), 10–11, 56–7

R. Landry: 'Says Arrangers Rate Royalties: Hershy Kay Argues that Orchestrating in Modern Sense is Comparatively New Profession', Variety, no.224 (1961), 79 only

'Hershy Kay, Arranger, Dies: did Shows, Ballets and Films', New York Times (4 Dec 1981)

WAYNE J. SCHNEIDER

Kay, Ulysses (Simpson) (b Tucson, AZ, 7 Jan 1917; d Englewood, NJ, 20 May 1995). American composer. He was the nephew of black American jazz cornettist and bandleader Joe 'King' Oliver. After studying the piano, violin and saxophone from a young age, he enrolled at the University of Arizona as a liberal arts student, but soon changed his focus to school music. He completed the MA in composition at the Eastman School, where he studied with Bernard Rogers and Howard Hanson, and pursued further composition study with Hindemith at the Berkshire Music Center and Yale University. After military service, during which he played in the US Navy Band and in the dance orchestra at Quonset Point, Rhode Island, he studied with Luening at Columbia University. He was appointed editorial advisor (1953) and later music consultant for Broadcast Music, Inc., New York, a position he held until 1968. After serving briefly as visiting professor at Boston University and UCLA, Kay was appointed professor at Herbert H. Lehman College, CUNY (1968). He was named a distinguished professor in 1972, serving until his retirement in 1988. Among his honours and awards are a Fulbright Scholarship, a Rosenwald Fellowship, a Guggenheim Fellowship (1964–5), the Prix de Rome and six honorary doctorates. In 1958 he was selected by the US State Department to tour Russia with a delegation of American composers as part of a cultural exchange. He was elected to the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters in 1979.

Kay's musical language is tonal, though extensively chromatic. Lyrical melodies, rich harmonies and polyphonic textures are also characteristic. His orchestration reflects a creative understanding of the timbral possibilities of orchestral instruments. Sinfonia in E (1950) is based on classical ideals, while Six American Dances for String Orchestra (1954) embodies a distinctly American spirit. Imitative counterpoint is employed in How Stands the Glass Around (1954) and techniques such as Klangfarbenmelodie are explored in Markings (1966).

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Danse Calinda (ballet, after R. Torrence), 1941, Rochester, NY, 23 April 1941, arr. orch, 1947
The Boor (op, 1, U. Kay, after A. Chekhov), 1955, Lexington, KY, 12 April 1968
The Juggler of Our Lady (op, 1, A. King), 1956, New Orleans, 23 Feb 1962
The Capitoline Venus (op, 1, J. Dvorkin, after M. Twain), 1970, Urbana, IL, 12 March 1971
Jubilee (op, 3, D. Dorr, after M. Walker), 1976, Jackson, MS, 20 Nov 1976
Frederick Douglass (op, 3, Dorr), 1985, Newark, NJ, 14 April 1991
6 film scores, 1948–66; 8 TV scores, 1958–64

ORCHESTRAL

Orch: Qnt, fl, str orch, 1943; Of New Horizons, ov., 1944; Suite, 1945; A Short Ov., 1946; Brief Elegy, ob, str, 1946; Ancient Saga, pf, str, 1947; Suite, str, 1947; Conc. for Orch, 1948; Portrait Suite, 1948; Suite, 1948 [from The Quiet One]; Pietà, eng hn, str, 1950; Sinfonia, E, 1950; 6 American Dances, str, 1954; Serenade, 1954; Fantasy Variations, 1963; Umbrian Scene, 1963; Reverie and Rondo, 1964; Presidential Suite, 1965; Markings, 1966; Aulos, fl, 2 hn, perc, str, 1967; Sym., 1967; Scherzi musicali, chbr orch, 1968; Theater Set, 1968; Harlem Children's Suite, 1973; Qnt Conc., 5 brass, orch, 1974; Southern Harmony, 1975; Chariots: Orch Rhapsody, 1978; Str Triptych, str orch, 1987; 8 works for concert band

VOCAL

Choral with insts: Song of Jeremiah (cant., J. Moffatt, after Bible), Bar, SATB, orch, 1945, rev. 1947; Song of Ahab (cant.), Bar, 10 insts, 1950 [withdrawn]; Phoebus, Arise (cant., Kay, T. Hood, Lord Herbert of Cherbury, W. Drummond, T. Middleton, W. Rowley, A. Cowly), S, B, SATB, orch, 1959; Choral Triptych (cant., Pss v, xiii, Bible: Alleluia), SATB, str/org, 1962; Inscription from Whitman (cant., W. Whitman), SATB, orch, 1963; Stephen Crane Set (cant., S. Crane), SATB, 13 insts, 1967; Once There was a Man (A Covenant for our Time) (R. Caudill), nar, SATB, orch, 1969; Parables (anon.), SATB, chbr orch, 1969
Choral with kbd: Grace to You, and Peace (T. Melnechuk, after Bible), SATB, org, 1955; Hymn-Anthem on 'Hanover' (O worship the King) (R. Grant), SATB, org/pf, 1959; To Light that Shines (S. Johnson), SAB, pf/org, 1962; The Birds (P. Bailey, J. Hogg, W. Cowper, A. Tennyson, S. Taylor), SA, pf, 1964; Emily Dickinson Set (E. Dickinson), SSA, pf, 1964; 4 Hymn Anthems (J. Kelbe, Bible: Psalms, H.W. Longfellow, C. Wesley, Lat. antiphon), SATB, org, 1965; Epigrams and Hymn (J. Whittier, J. Murray, S. Longfellow), SATB, org, 1975; Festival Pss (Bible), Bar, SATB, pf, 1983–4
Unacc. choral: 4 Pieces (C. Sandburg, W. Shakespeare, A.E. Housman, W. Cather), TTBB, 1941; As Joseph was A-Walking (anon.), SATB, 1943; Christmas Carol (S. Teasdale), SSA, 1943; Come Away, Come Away Death (Shakespeare), TTB, 1944; A Lincoln Letter (A. Lincoln), B, SATB, 1953; Triumvirate (R.W. Emerson, H.W. Longfellow, H. Melville), TTBB, 1953; A Wreath of Waits (anon.), SATB, 1954; How Stands the Glass Around (J. Wolfe), SSATB, 1954; What's in a Name? (H.F. More), SSATB, 1954; A New Song (Pss cxlix, ciii, cxvii), SATB, 1955; Flowers in the Valley (anon.), SATB, 1961; Like as a Father, SATB, 1961; 2 Dunbar Lyrics, SATB, 1965; Triple Set (M. Bruse, R. Sheridan), TTBB, 1971; 2 Folksong Settings, SATB, 1975
Solo: 3 Pieces after Blake, S, orch, 1952 [arr. as Triptych on Text of Blake, S, pf trio, 1962]; Jersey Hours (Triptych) (D. Dorr), 1v, 3 hp, 1978; 10 other songs For 1v and pf

CHAMBER

3 or more insts: Pf Qnt, 1949 [withdrawn]; Brass Qt, 1950; Str Qt no.2, 1956; Serenade no.2, 4 hn, 1957; Serenade no.3, str qt, 1960; Str Qt no.3, 1961; Heralds I, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, 1968; Facets, ww qnt, pf, 1971; Heralds II, 3 tpt, 1974; 5 Winds, ww qnt, 1984
1–2 insts: 10 Short Essays, pf, 1939; Duo, fl, ob, 1943; Prelude, fl, 1943, rev. 1975; 4 Inventions, pf, 1946; 2 Meditations, org, 1950; Partita, A, vn, pf, 1950; 2 Short Pieces, pf 4 hands, 1957; Org Suite no.1, 1958; 5 Portraits, vn, pf, 1972; Guitarra, gui, 1973, rev. 1985; Nocturne no.1, pf, 1973; Visions, pf, 1974–5; 2 Impromptus, pf, 1986; Pantomime, cl, 1986; 5 other works for brass insts

Principal publishers: Associated, Duchess, Carl Fischer, Peer, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD; SouthernB
N. Slonimsky: 'Ulysses Kay', American Composers Alliance Bulletin, vii/1 (1957), 3–11
D. Baker, L. Belt and H. Hudson, eds.: The Black Composer Speaks (Metuchen, NJ, 1978) [incl. interview, work-list and discography]
C. Hobson and D. Richardson: Ulysses Kay: a Bio-Bibliography (Westport, CT, 1994)
S.A. Floyd jr, ed.: The International Dictionary of Black Composers (Chicago, 1999)

LUCIUS R. WYATT

Kayagŭm [kayago] (from Kaya: name of an ancient Korean tribal league; gŭm: 'string instrument'). Korean 12-string plucked long zither. The kayagŭm now occurs in two basic sizes: a large instrument (variously called pŏpkŭm, chŏngak kayagŭm or p'ungnyu kayagŭm) for court and aristocratic music, about 160 cm long by 30 cm wide; and a smaller instrument (sometimes called sanjo kayagŭm, see illustration) for folk and virtuoso music, about 142 cm long by 23 cm wide.

The larger instrument is fashioned from a single piece of paulownia wood, with a gently curving front and partially hollowed out from the rear. At the lower end stylized ram horns are carved out of the board. The 12 strings, originally of twisted silk but now often synthetic, run from pegs under the top end, through small holes, over a curved, fixed bridge, across 12 individual moveable bridges ('wild-goose feet', 6 to 7 cm high), and across another fixed bridge to looped moorings where reserve string is kept in coils.

The smaller and more recent instrument resembles its predecessor in most ways but is constructed like the six-string KŎMUN'GO, the top from paulownia wood and the rear from chestnut. The ram horns are only hinted at, and the lower fixed bridge is eliminated. The curvature of the face of the instrument is also more pronounced. The smaller size and greater curvature permit more rapid, virtuoso performance.

The kayagŭm is usually tuned pentatonically, and there are various tunings in each repertory. A typical tuning in court music is E♭–F–A♭–B♭–e♭–f–a♭–b♭–c′–e♭′–f′–a♭′ with e♭ as tonic; a common tuning for folk music is F–B♭–c–f–g–b♭–c′–d′–f′–g′–b♭′–c″, with b♭ as tonic. Retuning is possible during performance by sliding the movable bridges.

The instrument is played with the lower end pointing somewhat away from the performer's left, so that it passes in front of the left knee; the top end is supported on the right knee. The strings are plucked with the fleshy part of the fingers of the right hand (thumb and first three fingers), as well as by an outward flick using the fingernails. Two or three fingers of the left hand press down on the strings a few centimetres to the left of the movable bridges, thereby making intermediate pitches available and producing various ornaments, including the wide vibrato characteristic of Korean music. The tone of the kayagŭm is more delicate than that of the kŏmun'go and is considered more feminine.

Kayagŭm (12-string zither)

The history of the kayagŭm can be traced back to the Silla dynasty (57 BCE– 935CE). A legend, recounted in the Samguk sagi (History of the Three Kingdoms, 1145), explains that King Kasil of the tribal league Kaya (6th century CE) made the kayagŭm based on instruments from China and commanded the music master U Rŭk to compose 12 pieces for the new instrument; later U Rŭk, because of turbulent times in Kaya, went over to King Chinhŭng of Silla (ruled 540–76) and was well received, his music and the instrument being perpetuated.

A few pottery figures survive from the Silla period which clearly depict a kayagŭm-like instrument, complete with ram horns, but the best evidence comes from four early 9th-century examples in excellent condition in the Shōsōin Repository in Nara, Japan (where they are referred to as shiragi-goto: 'KOTO from Silla'). These instruments reveal that the modern kayagŭm is strikingly similar to its ancient ancestors.

Today the kayagŭm is perhaps the best-known and favourite of traditional Korean melody instruments. Many court and aristocratic pieces (such as the suite Yŏngsan hoesang) call for it, and there are numerous schools of virtuoso solo performances (sanjo). Modern composers also write for the kayagŭm in a variety of styles, one leading composer being Hwang Byunghki (b 1936). In recent years there have been structural developments, such as a large instrument tuned an octave lower and instruments with extra strings (for a total of 13, 18, 21 or more strings). The kayagŭm has also been adopted in Mongolia as a native instrument (called yatga).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Sŏng Hyŏn, ed.: Akhak kwebŏm [Guide to the study of music] (Seoul, 1493/R), 7.24*a*–28*a*

Hayashi Kenzō: Dongya yueqi kao [Study of East Asian musical instruments] (Beijing, 1962), 158–64

Hayashi Kenzō and others: Shōsōin no gakki [Musical instruments in the Shōsōin] (Tokyo, 1967) [incl. Eng. summary]

Chang Sahun: Han'guk akki taegwan [Korean musical instruments] (Seoul, 1969), 75–86

Kim Chŏngja: Chŏngak kayagŭm po [Aristocratic music for kayagŭm] (Seoul, 1979)

K. Howard: Korean Musical Instruments: a Practical Guide (Seoul, 1988), 163–90

Hwang Byungki: Chŏng Namhŭi che Hwang Pyŏnggi ryu kayagŭm sanjo [Kayagŭm sanjo of the Chŏng Namhŭi – Hwang Byunghki school] (Seoul, 1998)

ROBERT C. PROVINE

Kaye, Geoffrey. See KETÈLBEY, ALBERT W(ILLIAM).

Kayn, Roland (b Reutlingen, 3 Sept 1933). German composer. After private instruction (1947–52), he studied in Stuttgart at the Musikhochschule and the Technical University (with Max Bense) until 1955, when he took the organist's examination at the Esslingen Kirchenmusikschule. He then studied for a further three years with Blacher (composition) and Rufer (analysis) at the Berlin Musikhochschule. Having made his first electronic music essays under Eimert at Cologne in 1954, he worked from 1959 in the studios in Brussels, Cologne, Milan, Munich, Utrecht and Warsaw. In 1960 he moved to Rome where in 1964, with Clementi and Evangelisti, he founded the improvisation group Nuova Consonanza, of which he remained a member until 1968. Also in 1964 he was appointed new music editor at NDR, Hamburg. In 1970 he joined the Instituut voor Sonologie at Utrecht University, where his electro-acoustic works of the 1970s and early 80s were realized.

Kayn's early works were influenced by Schoenberg, Varèse and, in the case of the organ pieces, Messiaen. Encouraged by Bense, however, he became interested in cybernetics and information theory and has applied this knowledge to composition, for instance in the major electro-acoustic compositions Monades, Makro and Infra. He regards his method of selecting materials on a cybernetic basis as an alternative to computer techniques; his aim is a strictly controlled effect using the widest possible scale of perceptible sound qualities.

WORKS
(selective list)

Elektronische Symphonien: no.1, 1966–96; no.2, 1970–96; no.3, 1971–97; no.4, 1988–97; no.5, 1977–97; no.6, 1979–97; no.7, 1984–98

Other el-ac: Cybernetics I–III, 1966–9; Entropy PE 31, 1967–70; Monades, 1971; Simultan, cybernetic project for 1–5 rooms, 1970–71; Eon, 1975; Makro I–III, music theatre, 1977; Infra, 1979–80; Tektra, 1980; Ready-Made I–II, 1982; Scanning, 1982–3; Collage-Décollage, 1984; Assemblage, 1984–5; Cybernetic Serendipity, 1987; An Artificial Acoustic Environment, 1989; Transfluxion, 1990; Syzygy Dynamical Units, 1991; Syntropie, 1995; Equivalence sonore I–III, 1995; Refractions, 1995; Frottage I–II, 1996; Minimax, 1996; Emissioni trasformati I–II, 1996

Other works: Meditationen I–III, org, 1953–4; Evokation, org, 1954, rev. 1985; Spektren, str qt, 1956; Quanten, pf, 1957; Sequenzen, orch, 1957; Aggregate, brass, str, perc, 1958; Vectors I, chbr orch, 1960; Phasen, speech sounds, 4 perc, 1961; Schwingungen, 5 inst groups, 1961–2; Allotropie, multiple inst groups, 1962–4; Diffusions, 1–4 elec org, 1965; Signals, 7 inst groups, tape, 1964–6; Vectors II, 4 ens, orch, 1960–68; Engramme, variable ens, 1971–4; Ektropie, choruses, orch, 1973–5; Chréodes, chorus, orch, 1982–3; Meta, cl, 1985; Supra, orch, 1988; Interfaces, orch, 1993; multiplex, orch, 1994; Fractals, pf, 1994–5

Principal publishers: Suvini Zerboni, Moeck

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CC (R. Klein) [incl. further bibliography]; VintonD

R. Kayn: 'Komponieren zwischen Computer und Kybernetik', Melos/NZM, iii (1977), 22–7

HANSPETER KRELLMANN/R

Kayser, Hans (b Buchau, Württemberg, 1 April 1891; d Bolligen, nr Berne, 14 April 1964). Swiss theorist of German birth. He studied art and natural science at the University of Berlin and music with Humperdinck, Schoenberg and Kretzschmar at the Hochschule für Musik; he graduated in aesthetics in Erlangen in 1916. From 1919 he was the general editor of the series Der Dom: Bücher Deutscher Mystik, contributing two of the 13 volumes himself (on Paracelsus and Böhme). One volume of this series was devoted to Kepler, and Kayser's closer acquaintance with his Harmonice mundi led him to what was to be his main contribution to musical knowledge: a modern theory of harmony which, on the basis of Pythagoras, aimed at supplementing the visual contemplation of the world (aesthesis) by an aural contemplation (acroasis). This was to be achieved by introducing the concept of Tonzahl, in which the reduction of the qualitative to the quantitative became invertible, so that any numerical relation, by the exact measurement of intervallic properties, could also serve as a measurement of feeling. Kayser settled in Switzerland in 1933 and was naturalized in 1948.

WRITINGS

Orpheus: morphologische Fragmente einer allgemeinen Harmonik, i (Potsdam, 1924)
Der hörende Mensch (Berlin, 1932)
Vom Klang der Welt (Zürich, 1937, 2/1946)
Abhandlungen zur Ektypik harmonikaler Wertformen (Zürich, 1938/R)
Grundriss eines Systems der harmonikalen Wertformen (Zürich, 1938, 2/1946)
Harmonia plantarum (Basle, 1943)
Akróasis (Basle, 1946, 5/1989; Eng. trans., 1970)
Die Form der Geige (Zürich, 1947)
Lehrbuch der Harmonik (Zürich, 1950)
Bevor die Engel sangen: eine harmonikale Anthologie (Basle, 1953)
Paestum: die Nomoi der drei altgriechischen Tempel zu Paestum (Heidelberg, 1958)
Die Harmonie der Welt (Vienna, 1968)
ed. J. Schwabe: Orphikon: eine harmonikale Symbolik (Basle, 1973)
Aufsätze aus dem Nachlass (Vienna, 1975) [incl. unpubd essays and U. Hasse: 'Anhang: Der harmonikale Briefwechsel Gustav Fueters', 35–9]
Im Anfang war der Klang: was ist Harmonik? (Berne, 1986) [repr. of earlier writings incl. 'Die Harmonie der Welt', 15–28, 'Der harmonikale Teilungskanon', 49–56]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Haase: Kaysers Harmonik in der Literatur der Jahre 1950 bis 1964 (Düsseldorf, 1967) [incl. complete list of writings and bibliography]
R. Haase: Hans Kayser: ein Leben für die Harmonik der Welt (Basle, 1968)
R. Haase: Geschichte des harmonikalen Pythagoreismus (Vienna, 1969)
U. Haase: Der Briefwechsel Hans Kaysers (Vienna, 1973)
R. Haase: Paul Hindemiths harmonikale Quellen: sein Briefwechsel mit Hans Kayser (Vienna, 1973)
E.F. Altwein: 'Zum Briefwechsel Paul Hindemith–Hans Kayser', Hindemith-Jb 1973, 144–51; 1975, 152–7

DOROTHEA BAUMANN

Kayser, Isfrid (b Türkheim an der Wertach, nr Augsburg, 13 March 1712; d Marchtal, nr Ulm, 1 March 1771). German composer. He was the son of the village organist and schoolmaster at Türkheim, who gave him his earliest musical education. He went to school in Munich and in 1732 entered the Premonstratensian monastery of Marchtal. Marchtal was one of a group of Swabian monasteries, mainly Premonstratensian and Benedictine, where music was extensively cultivated in the 18th century. By 1741 he had become director of music, a post he held for about ten years; from about 1750 onwards he worked as parish priest in nearby villages. In 1761 he returned to Marchtal, becoming sub-prior in 1763.

In his lifetime, Kayser was one of the best-known of the Bavarian church composers. Thanks to him, Marchtal had so high a reputation for music that Marie Antoinette visited it on a journey to France; on a more local level, he had connections in such musical centres as Ulm and Munich. He seems to have taught composers elsewhere by correspondence.

Kayser began composing in the early 1740s. The chief characteristics of Bavarian church music as developed in the 1720s and 30s by J.V. Rathgeber and his contemporaries had been compactness, tunefulness, a non-contrapuntal choral style and reasonably easy solo parts, the solo voices being used only in alternation with the tutti. It was intended for parish choirs who could not manage elaborate music. By the 1740s some composers were beginning to publish more ambitious liturgical music, obviously intended for experienced choirs in large churches or monasteries; Kayser is the most important of these. He retained the basic scoring of most published church music of this period – SATB solo and chorus, two violins and continuo, with occasional trumpets and drums. The style, however, is quite different from that of Rathgeber or of Kayser's more restrained contemporaries. Both masses and psalm settings are on a much larger scale. Psalm settings are divided into several movements, including da capo arias, and the longer sections of the Ordinary are similarly divided. His Kyries in particular are large in scale, usually consisting of a slow introduction followed by a fugue, which returns after a solo 'Christe eleison'. He also habitually ended the Gloria with a fugal 'Cum Sancto Spiritu'; his choral fugues show him as a highly accomplished contrapuntist. Even in homophonic movements, however, his choral textures are interesting and varied; unlike many of his contemporaries he rarely resorted to simple repeated-chord declamation, and he had considerable skill in building up a movement out of contrasted motifs. He had comparatively little gift for melodic invention, and rarely used the ritornello principles employed by many of his contemporaries in choral movements. But he had a talent for dramatic word-setting and inventive harmony. More than any other south German church composer of this period, his music can be said to be progressive in harmonic and melodic idiom. Though his choral writing is not usually difficult, his solo parts and string writing make considerable demands on the performers. He was one of the first composers to write completely idiomatically for the violin in published church music. The arias in his psalms and masses are usually long and elaborate, and his lack of melodic invention often makes interest flag. This is even more noticeable in his op.1 cantatas, whose arias are longer and more elaborate than those in his strictly liturgical pieces, and which, lacking an italianate capacity for melodic invention, often degenerate into rather turgid note-spinning.

Kayser also produced some instrumental music. Little is extant, but the op.4 partitas, in which the outlines of Classical sonata form are clearly present, show that he was as forward-looking here as in liturgical music.

WORKS

all published in Augsburg

op.
1	Cantatae sacrae, 18 arias with recitatives, 1v, 2 vn, va, bc (1741)
2	VI. missae, 4vv, insts, bc (1743)
3	Psalmi longiores et breves ... ac antiphonis Marianis, 4vv, insts, bc (1746), 5 vesper sets
4	Concors digitorum discordia (1746), kbd suites
5	XII. offertoria solemnia de communi sanctorum ... pars prima, 4vv (1748)
6	XII. offertoria solemnia breviora ... pars secunda, 4vv, insts, bc (1750), 12 off, 6 Tantum ergo
7	III. vesperae cum consuetis antiphonis, 4vv, insts, bc (1754)

ELIZABETH ROCHE

Kayser, Johann Melchior. See CAESAR, JOHANN MELCHIOR.

Kayser, Leif (b Copenhagen, 13 June 1919). Danish composer. He studied at the Copenhagen Conservatory (1936–41) with Haraldur Sigurđsson (piano), Rung-Keller (organ, harmony and counterpoint) and Schierbeck (orchestration). In 1939 his First Symphony was given a successful première in Göteborg and, after his début as a concert pianist in 1941, he continued as a private pupil with Tor Mann (conducting) and Rosenberg (composition) in Stockholm. During the following years, however, he abandoned his musical career to some extent and concentrated on philosophical and theological studies in Rome (1942–9). He was ordained and served from 1949 to 1964 as chaplain at the Catholic church of St Ansgar in Copenhagen, where he was also organist (1937–42, 1951–4). After 1950 he increasingly returned to his musical activities and began to compose again, mostly in the sphere of church music. He studied composition with Boulanger in Paris in 1955, a period reflected in the austere modal colouring of some of his music; from 1964 to 1982 he taught orchestration and composition at the Copenhagen Conservatory.

Kayser's orchestral music shows particular genius. His symphonic style is derived from that of Nielsen, whose hymn-like and lyrical melodic style can be traced in Kayser's Second Symphony. He has developed his orchestral technique in a series of Studi and arrangements for orchestra; he himself considers his piano reductions of some 30 orchestral works, including Nielsen's Third, Fourth and Fifth Symphonies, as important to his development. He has contributed substantially to modern Danish church music with organ and choral works in a retrospective style influenced by Gregorian chant. Of particular note are the Christmas Oratorio, the Te Deum and the large-scale Requiem for organ. Kayser has also written much chamber music.

WORKS
(selective list)
dates are of first performance unless otherwise stated

ORCHESTRAL

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1937–8, rev. 1940; Sym. no.2, 1939; rev. 1942; Kong Kristian stod, ov., 1940, rev. 1945–6; Variazioni, 1942–4, rev. 1948; Divertimento, 1946–8; Hn Conc., hn, solo str, 1941–51; Sym. no.3, 1943–53; 3 Studi, 1955–6; Sym. no.4, 1945–63; Suite, str, 1955–65; Sinfonietta, 1967; Sinfonia sacra, 1971–6; 2 tempi, accdn, orch, 1978; Tuba Conc., tuba, str, 1978; works for band
Film scores: Shaped by Danish Hands, 1947; Pearyland, 1950; Shakespeare og Kronborg, 1950; Den standhaftige tinsoldat, 1954, arr. rec, orch
Arrs. for orch and band

VOCAL

Choral: Juleoratorium, op.11, solo vv, vv, orch, 1943–7; TeD, vv, orch, 1946–53; 2 Masses, female vv, children's vv, 1950; 3 motets, unacc., 1954–5; 2 motets, female vv, 1955; Beata viscera, vv, org, 1959; Ave Maria IV, female vv, org, 1959; Mass no.3, vv, str ad lib, 1960; Norsk messe, unison vv, org, 1967–9; 4 Pss, children's vv, 1968; Chinese Aquarellen, female vv, gui ad lib, 1975; works for unacc. chorus, children's chorus
Solo: 3 Pss, A, org, 1954–6; Beatus vir, S, A, Bar, org, 1955; Chinesischer triangel, Mez, fl, gui, 1962–72; In natale Salvatoris, Mez, org, 1964; Templum Dominum, 4 pss, Bar, org, 1968

CHAMBER AND INSTRUMENTAL

Ens: Str Qt, 1948–51; Advent, fl, str trio, 1960; Trio, ob, bn, hn, 1961; Trio no.2, fl, ob, vc, 1966; Duo, fl, vn, 1974; Caleidoscopio, fl, org, 1976; Trilogia pasquale, ww qnt, 1980; works for brass, recs
Solo inst: 7 pezzi, vn, 1941; 6 monologhi, vc, 1952; 4 pezzi, vn, 1955; Quasi sarabande, vn, 1956; 10 pieces, hn, 1983–4; works for accdn
Pf: 6 små improvisationer, op.1, 1937–8; 4 klaverstykker, op.4, 1939–40; Pièce symphonique, op.9, 1945; Humoresker, 1971–85; Konservatoriestykker, 2 vols., 1977, 1982 (4 hands)
Org suites, 1956, 1958, 1966–8, 1973
Other org works: 3 improvisazioni, 1942; Parafrase over gregorianske motiver, op.10, 1946; Variazioni sopra 'In dulci jubilo', op.14, 1947–8, rev. 1984; Pezzi sacri I–II, 1951–79; Requiem, 11 meditations, 1955–8; Sonatina, 1956; Variazioni pasquali, 1957–60, Conc., 1965; Fantasia e inno, 1969; Sonata, 1969; Entrata reale, 1971; Partita, 1985; Notturno drammatico, 1987; Partita, 1988; Lumen, 1988; 2 Pieces, 1997

NIELS MARTIN JENSEN/DANIEL M. GRIMLEY

Kayser, Philipp Christoph (b Frankfurt, 10 March 1755; d Oberstrass, nr Zürich, 24 Dec 1823). German composer, active in Switzerland. The son of a Frankfurt organist, he moved in 1775 to Zürich, where he established himself as a music teacher. Goethe visited him there in 1775 and again in 1779, when he asked Kayser to compose music for his Singspiel Jery und Bätely. Kayser never set the work, but he visited Goethe in Weimar in 1781 and again from October 1787 until June 1788 in Rome, and Goethe continued in his hopes for Kayser's collaboration, particularly in the revised versions of Erwin und Elmire and Scherz, List und Rache. Kayser also brought with him to Rome an overture to Egmont, for which (as for Erwin und Elmire) Goethe sought instrumental music to express the emotions of the characters. After hearing Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail Goethe abandoned his own attempts at Singspiel, and as Kayser's weaknesses as a composer became apparent, the friendship and collaboration ceased. After returning to Zürich in 1789 Kayser wrote no more music.

Kayser's most significant works are his songs, of which he composed over 100. Of the 19 songs published as Gesänge mit Begleitung des Claviers (1777) five are settings of lyric poems by Goethe, including the sensitive Ein Veilchen auf der Wiese stand and a setting of Ihr verblühet, süsse Rosen in which he successfully adapted a Grétry melody into a da capo aria. Kayser's setting of a poem by H.L. Wagner inspired Goethe to fit to it the first version of his well-known parody Füllest wieder Busch und Tal. 'Herr! Ein Mädchen', from Scherz, List und Rache, was scored for four strings and oboe, perhaps in consequence of Goethe's advice to him 'to keep the accompaniment modest … the expert achieves more with two violins, viola and bass than with an entire band of instruments. Use the winds as seasoning and singly: here a flute … there an oboe'.

A manuscript of 71 songs (a number of them unpublished) was made at Goethe's behest at Weimar in 1777–8.

WORKS
F – ed. in Friedlaender (1898–1916)

SONGS

[25] Vermischte Lieder mit Melodien aufs Clavier (Winterthur, 1775)
[19] Gesänge mit Begleitung des Claviers (Leipzig and Winterthur, 1777), incl. 4 songs from Erwin und Elmire: Ein Schauspiel für Götter; Ein Veilchen auf der Wiese stand, F ii, facs. in 'Goethe, Johann Wolfgang', MGG1; Ihr verblühet, süsse Rosen, F i; Sieh mich, Heilger, wie ich bin, F ii; also Warum siehst du mich unwiderstehlich (J.W. von Goethe), ed. in Friedlaender (1902)
Um Friede (Der du von dem Himmel bist) (Goethe), in Pfenninger's Christliches Magazin, iii/1 (Zürich, 1780), F i; 4 others in Pfenninger's Christliches Magazin (1779) and his Ausgewählte Gesänge mit Melodien (Zürich, 1792)
71 songs in Goethe's Notenheft of 1778, D-WRgm, incl. 38 previously pubd and 7 more Goethe songs: Füllest wieder's liebe Tal, F i; Hab oft ein dummen, düst'ren Sinn; Herz, mein Herz, was soll das geben; Ich muss, ich muss ihn sehen [duet from Erwin und Elmire]; Im Felde schleich ich still und wild, F i; In allen guten Stunden; Liebliches Kind, kannst du mir sagen [from Claudine von Villa Bella]

OTHER WORKS

Scherz, List und Rache (Goethe), 1785–6, 1st version, CH-Zz, 2nd version, D-WRgm; 1 song, 1 scene, F i–ii
Egmont (incid music, Goethe), *c*1786–8, lost

Weihnachtskantate, 2vv, str (Zürich, 1780)
2 sonates en symphonie, hpd, acc. vn, 2 hn (Zürich, *c*1784)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.W. von Goethe: Italienische Reise (Tübingen and Stuttgart, 1816–17, many later edns; Eng. trans., 1962), esp. Nov 1787
D. Hess: Flüchtige Notizen über P.C. Kayser (MS, CH-Zz)
M. Friedlaender, ed.: Gedichte von Goethe in Kompositionen seiner Zeitgenossen (Weimar, 1896–1916)
M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)
W. Bode: Die Tonkunst in Goethes Leben (Berlin, 1912)
H. Spiess: 'Philipp Christoph Kayser und Goethes Notenheft vom Jahre 1778', Jb der Goethe-Gesellschaft, xvii (1931), 132–53
E. Refardt: Der 'Goethe-Kayser': ein Nachklang zum Goethejahr 1949 (Zürich, 1950)
E. Beutler, ed.: Goethe: Briefe der Jahre 1764–1786 (Zürich, 1951)
F.W. Sternfeld: Goethe and Music: a List of Parodies (New York, 1954/R)
K. Pendle: 'The Transformation of a Libretto: Goethe's "Jery und Bätely"', ML, lv (1974), 77–88
J. Hennig: 'Goethe und die italienische Musiktheorie', AnMc, no.22 (1984), 221–7
T. Baumann: North German Opera in the Age of Goethe (Cambridge, 1985)

F.W. STERNFELD

Kazachok. A term derived from the Turkic word kasak or kosak ('Cossack'). It refers to a folkdance characteristic of the peasant-warriors from Cossack territory and also to its music. Variants of the kazachok include the Kuban-kazachok (from the Kuban district) and the Ter-kazachok (from the northern Caucasus). The most popular variant was the Ukrainian kazachok, danced throughout the former USSR by the Cossacks in the Russian army. It is a fast couple-dance in 2/4 with a constantly increasing tempo and an improvisational character. The woman leads and the man follows, repeating her figures; she indicates changes in movements by clapping her hands. The characteristic movement is in a line, alternating with other Ukrainian folkdance movements.

The first arrangement of a kazachok is attributed to the Polish or Belorussian lutenist and composer K.S.R. Dusiacki (first half of the 17th century). Manuscript collections of kazachok melodies date from the second half of the 18th century and printed collections from the end of the 18th century. The kazachok was performed in the 18th century in French ballets and achieved popularity after the Russian troops visited Paris in the 1820s. At the beginning of the 19th century, it was performed as a circle-dance; since the end of the 1960s, it has been revived in many countries. There are arrangements of it in the works of A. N. Serov, Tchaikovsky and other Russian composers; one of the best-known works is the Ukrainian kazachok for orchestra by A.S. Dargomizhsky.

Based on MGG (xvi, 920–21) by permission of Bärenreiter

DIETER LEHMANN

Kazakhstan (Kaz. Kazak Respublikasy). Country in CENTRAL ASIA. The Kazakhs are a Turkic-speaking people who inhabit a vast area of 3000 km² from east (the Altai mountains) to west (the Caspian Sea) and 2000 km² from north (the southern Urals) to south (Tien Shan); 2·7 million km² in total. In 1991 the Kazakhs numbered approximately 10 million people, of which 6,797,000 lived in the Kazakh Republic, 1,665,000 in republics of the former USSR and 1,535,000 in other countries. The percentage of Kazakhs in the Republic's population reached 53·4% in 1999. Russians, Ukrainians, Germans, Koreans, Uighurs, Uzbeks, Tartars and others (there are about a hundred 'nationalities') also live in the Republic, whose total population is estimated at 16·93 million in 2000.

1. NOMADIC MUSICAL CULTURE. Until the gradual annexation to Russia, completed by the mid-19th century, Kazakh musical culture was that of nomadic pastoralists, who migrated widely across steppeland in seasonal movements. Living in the transportable round felt tent or the yurt, their traditional musical genres were embedded in rituals of hospitality as well as annual and life-cycle rituals. Their music was influenced by the structure of society and by their religious complexes.

Originating in this nomadic past, Kazakh society is divided into three Zhuzs (Hordes): Uly (Greater), Orta (Middle) and Kishi (Lesser). Each is distinguished territorially: the Greater zhuz is located in the south-east of contemporary Kazakhstan, the Middle zhuz in central Kazakhstan and the Lesser zhuz in western Kazakhstan. Each zhuz is divided into clans and families who follow exogamous rules of marriage.

Co-existing religious complexes include folk-religion, shamanism and Islam. Folk-religious beliefs include worship of Tengri (Heaven) as the male life-source, Jer-Su (Earth-Water) as the female life-source, and Umai as the patroness of fertility and childbirth. Shamanism (baqsylyk), which found expression through musicians, healers and diviners, exerted a basic influence on all aspects of Kazakh musical culture, especially on the role of epic bard. Towards the end of the 10th century, Islam became firmly established among the settled inhabitants (in Semirechy and by the river Syr Darya) in the south of modern Kazakhstan. During the 16th century the Kazakhs became Sunnite Muslims of the hanafit tendency (Mazhab). In southern Kazakhstan Sufism is also known in connection with the worship of Hoja Ahmed Yasawi (1103–67).

Despite sparse settlement in different regions of the country, Kazakhs share common linguistic, cultural and material characteristics. Traditional vocal genres may be divided into women's music, which is closely linked to ceremonies and rituals, and performed unaccompanied, and men's music, which is accompanied by the performer's own instrument. The master–apprentice training system, performance skills and high social status of the male musician-singer or instrumentalists indicates the professionalism of oral culture.

2. WOMEN'S VOCAL REPERTORIES. Women perform songs during ceremonies and in non-formal situations. They do not usually use instrumental accompaniment.

Ceremonial songs are not conceptualized as 'song' but are specified according to function. They include wedding songs (tanysu), such as the popular 'Zhar-Zhar' (performed antiphonally by a male and female chorus); brides' laments (synsu); farewell songs (koshtasu); ritual songs, such as those performed to begin a festival (toi bastar) or to unveil the face of the bride (betashar); laments at funerals and annual funeral remembrances (as-joktau, daus), messenger-songs of death (yestirtu) and condolence (konil-aitu, jubatu); and calendar songs such as carols (jarapapzan) or songs performed during the fasting at Ramadan. Lyrical or 'simple songs' (qara öleng) are not performed in ceremonial contexts. These take the form of song-poem dialogues (qayim öleng), improvisations about guests at parties (bokyet-öleng) or an exchange of song riddles (jumbak-öleng). They have a typical verse form of eleven syllables, that is, 4 + 3 + 4 or 3 + 4 + 4, which are combined in two four-line verses.

1. Map of Kazakhstan

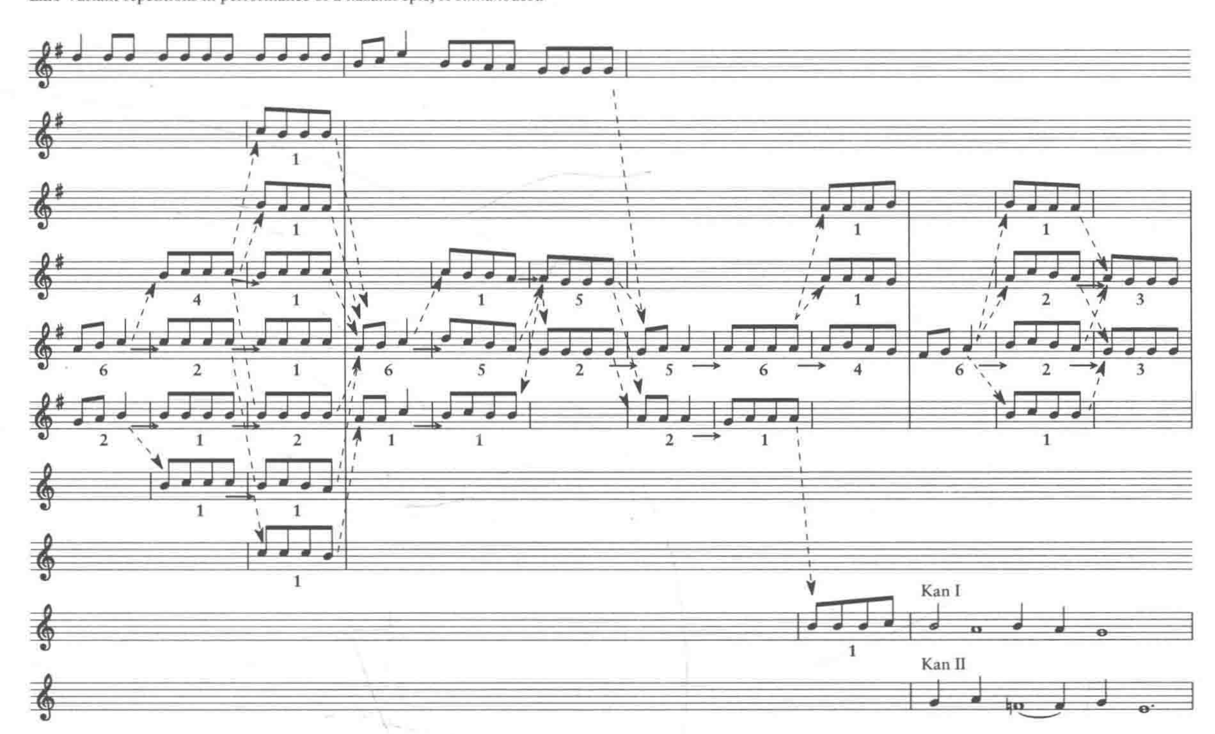
3. Men's vocal repertories.

(i) Epics and narrative songs. For Kazakhs, epics comprise their history, literature and philosophy. Traditionally the zhyrau, or epic bard, had special social status: he was a consultant to the khan, a keeper of the people's history, and he took over certain functions of the shaman, such as the establishment of relations between generations and the expression of ethnic identity. Epics transmitted information about the history of the ethnic group, its cultural traditions and social structure in a ritual and emotionally-charged context.

Lengthy heroic epics (batyrlar zhyry) such as 'Kyorogly', 'Alpamïs' and 'Yedigye' form the core of the epic tradition, versions of which are famous all over the Turkic-speaking world. Also part of the tradition are sung tales such as 'Oraq-Mamaï', 'Qarasai-Qazi' and 'Shora batyr'. These are full of legendary figures and their deeds, and often include extensive family genealogies, which are carefully passed down from generation to generation, and stories about particular families. 'Lyrical' or 'social-life' epics form another large category. These are usually named after the main female characters ('Kyz-Zhibyek', 'Sulushash' and 'Maqpalqyz') or lovers ('Qozy Qorpyesh-Bayan Sulu').



Performances are regulated by 'schools' of highly-developed oral traditional skills transmitted by the 'tutor–pupil' system, which have regional peculiarities. In addition to such musical skills, the bard is also believed to have magical powers. The vocal timbre he uses differentiates his epic performance from that of song. It is reminiscent of the sounds produced by the qobuz, a two-string fiddle used by shamans. His intonation is similar to dramatically saturated oratorical speech.

Epics usually contain three main sections: a preface or 'initial' section (bastaú); a central recitation, based on a measured rhythmic intonation which tends to multiple repetitions (uzyn sanar, meaning literally a 'long pursuit' or 'hunt'); and a conclusion (qaiyrma or 'turning point', i.e. the conclusive break when recitation of a text is replaced by jubilation without a text). This final section is usually performed at a slower tempo in order to break the vocal pulse of the preceding section.

Verses are formed by an indefinite number of lines joined by one rhyme (tirade). A tirade allows an unspecified number of variant repetitions of its separate elements and may be followed by improvised vocalisations (ex.1).

Traditionally, epics must be accompanied by the dömbra. Many short narrative songs are related to epics (zhyr) and often occur within them. These include terme ('string'), tolgau ('meditation'), osiyet ('exhortation'); naqyl soz ('words of edification'), arnau ('dedication'), khat ('letter'), maqtau ('praise-song'). During bastau-en ('preface songs'), which usually precede the performance of long sung tales, the narrator calls for inspiration and addresses the audience with the list of legends he knows. Similarly, in tanysu the narrator introduces himself and in tandatu, he suggests that the audience chooses the most desirable items from his great repertory.

(ii) Poetry-songs. The aqyn or poet-singer was traditionally a professional performer who participated in contests

Ex.1 Variant repetitions in performance of a kazakh epic, A Kunanbaeva

(aitys). Like the zhyrau, the aqyn gained his gift in miraculous ways and had a famous akyn from the past as a guardian who instructed him in dreams. An aitys (literally, 'to talk together') usually comprises a dialogue contest between two or more poet-singers. Contests occurred during festivals, banquets and other social gatherings which sometimes lasted until long after midnight. According to custom, the defeated party had to recall the whole aitys by heart.

There are many varieties of aitys, for instance, qyz ben zhigit aityssy ('aitys between a girl and a youth'), din aityssy ('religious aitys'), zhumbak aityssy ('aitys riddles'), and aqyndar aityssy ('aitys between akyns'). The aqyndar aityssy involved demonstrations of skills ranging from a restricted body of knowledge, such as geography (tau olen, zher olen, su olen), to improvisation contests at weddings (kaim olen). There were three important conditions (excluding the obligation to have professional skills) for the participants of contests: representatives of the same clan and those who were related on their fathers' sides must not compete; each participant had to praise his clan and criticize the clan of his rival; and appeals not normally ethically allowable were allowed during the contest.

Poetical dialogue was also used in charms (badik) or in children's songs (e.g. debates between goats and sheep).

(iii) Lyrical songs. Lyrical songs performed by professional singers (anshi, sal, syeri) flourished between the second half of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th centuries.

The central Kazakhstan region of Saryaki ('golden steppe') is particularly noted for its lyrical songs (Amirova, 1990). The most famous singers of the Arkin school are Akhan Syerye Koramsinuly (1843–1913), BIRJAN-SAL KOJAGULULY (1831–94), Zhayau Musa Baizhanuly (1835–1929), Ibrai Sandybaiuly (1860–1932), Muhit Myeraliuly (1841–1918), Madi Bapiuly (1880–1921), Asyet Naimanbay-uly (1867–1922) and Yestai Byerkyenbay-uly (1874–1946). Amre Kashaubay-uly (1888–1934) became widely known even outside Kazakhstan; he successfully performed at two World Exhibitions of the decorative arts (Paris, 1925 and Frankfurt, 1927). 20th-century followers of the great singer-composers of the past include Manarbyek Yerzhanov (1901–66), Zhusubyek Yelyebyekov (1904–77) and Zhanibyek Karmyenov (1949–92).

Lyrical songs frequently begin with a protracted and high-pitched opening cry; both descending and arch-like melodic contours are characteristic. Refrains, sung with vocables rather than words, demonstrate the vocal skills of the singer. The song structure is marked by variety and asymmetry in the interior parts of strophes (tunes and refrains) and possible incompatibility of musical boundaries and word lines. Professional singers are conscious of copyright, which they assert in a number of ways, including giving the song a fixed title, indicating authorship in the first verse, and performing a tale about how the song was created as a preface to its performance. After such autobiographical beginnings, songs embrace a number of subjects including farewell songs (to youth, a lover, the homeland or life), and pronouncements about the art of singing and the beauty of songs.

These lyrical songs are accompanied by the dömbra. However, unlike those used by epic singers and performers of instrumental pieces (kyui), these dömbras have a small resonator, a relatively short neck with eleven frets, and are plucked (shertip oinau) rather than strummed.

4. INSTRUMENTS AND MUSIC. Of many musical instruments from the past, only the shan-qobuz (jews' harp), sybyzgy (end-blown flute), qobuz (see QOBUZ (i)) and dömbra were still in use at the beginning of the 20th century (Sarïbayev, 1978). The shan-qobuz is played mostly by women and the sybyzgy, 60 to 65 cm long and made from an umbellate plant stalk or from wood, is played by male herders and shepherds (fig.2).

The two-string fiddle qobuz, played by shamans, was also linked with the epic tradition. One of the most distinguished composers and performers was Yqylas Dükenuly (1843–1916) whose instrumental pieces form the basic repertory of modern qobyz players.

The DÖMBRA is the most widely disseminated instrument among modern Kazakhs. The degree to which the instrument has become a symbol of Kazakh identity is illustrated by the dömbra headpiece of a Kazakh grave in West Mongolia (fig.3). There are two types of dömbra: the type characteristic of western Kazakhstan is pear-shaped and has a long thin finger-board with 12 to 14 frets. The second type, characteristic of south, central and eastern Kazakhstan, has a trapezium-shaped flat body (shanaq) and a short wide neck (moïyn) with between seven and nine frets.

All perne (a term meaning both the frets and the notes produced when the frets are stopped), have their own traditional names which vary by region and performer. It is not rare for them to be named after the titles of pieces played on them, such as turkimen perne or saryaka pernesi. In the past the strings (shekter) were made of goat or sheep's gut but contemporary instruments are fitted with nylon or metal strings. Traditionally there were three and even four-string dömbras found, for

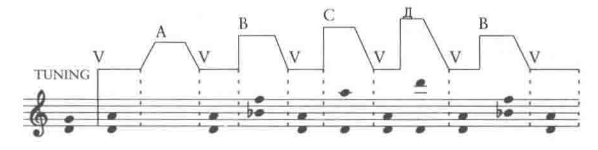
3. Dömbra headpiece on a Kazakh grave in West Mongolia



2. Kazakh playing a sybyzgy (end-blown pipe), West Mongolia instance, in Semypalatin province. The contemporary dömbra has a compass of two octaves.

The dömbra is used either as an accompaniment to singing or to perform instrumental pieces or kyui. Kyui (literally, 'condition', 'state', 'mood') is an instrumental poem, a programmatic work. The title of the kyui usually indicates the content of the instrumental narrative. However, its topic is traditionally also given by the performer or kyuishi, usually before its performance. The subject may be a legend or tale about the origin of the kyui. These legends represent a variety of oral tale or angime (Mukhambetova, 1985).

Two main types of kyui are known in Kazakhstan. In western Kazakhstan, the strings are strummed (tökpe, meaning literally, 'stream', 'continuously pouring') by upward and downward movements of the right hand, creating a musical texture that incorporates a continuous drone. In the seven provinces of Kokchetav, Pavlodar, Semipalatinsk, eastern Kazakhstan, Karagand, Zhezkazgan and Chimkent, the strings are plucked (shertpe, meaning literally, 'plucking', 'flicking', 'touching the string') by individual fingers, creating a melodic line without a drone.

Ex.2 Underlying structure of a kyui according to Raimbergenev (Mukhambetova, 1985)

After studying folk terminology, Bagdaulet Amanov (1944–76) suggested that the underlying structure of a kyui is as follows: an initial section or bas buyn ('head articulation'); central sections or orta buyn; and two culminating sections, a small culmination (kishi saga) and a second great culmination (ülken saga) (ex.2).

Tartys-kyui are instrumental dömbra pieces performed in contests, called aitys-kyuiler in Mangystau territory of western Kazakhstan (Utegaliyeva, 1997). There are three types of tartys (in this context meaning 'to measure the strength'): those that measure performance skills; those that test compositional skills in relation to improvisation; and those that demonstrate compositional skills and memory. In the last of these, the performer must must remember and be able to play a new kyui after hearing it once. (Amanov in Mukhambetova, 1985)

Distinguished kyuishi in the tökpe tradition include Qurmanghazy Saghyrbaev (1818–89), DAULETKEREI SHIGAEV (1820–87), Qazanghap Tilepbergenuly (1834–1927), Espai Balustauly (1810–1901), Dina Nürpeisqyzy (1861–1955) and Seitek Orozalynuly (1861–1923). In the sherpte tradition, distinguished kyuishi include Tättimbet Qazanghapuly (1815–62), Sügir Äliuly (1882–1961), as well as Baizhigit, Toqa, and Dairabai.

5. TRADITIONAL MUSIC DURING THE SOVIET PERIOD. Kazakh traditional culture experienced an enormous shock in the 1920s and 30s with the forced transition from a nomadic to a settled lifestyle under the pressure of Soviet ideology and rule. A cultural revolution was carried out that assumed the total primacy of European music (in particular the Russian classics of the 19th century), the summit of which were symphony and opera. The urbanization of culture, demographic loss (25% of Kazakhs were suppressed) and a policy of moving Russians into Kazakhstan changed the status of professional musicians of the oral tradition to the position of anonymous folklore, and deprived distinguished musicians not only of the opportunity of developing the tradition but also of physical existence. This cultural policy introduced European forms of art with ethnographic 'decorations'.

The policy proved successful and in 1934 led to the creation of the State Orchestra of folk instruments, named after Kurmangaya (organized and instructed by Ahmet Zhubanov) on European and Russian patterns. This necessitated the large-scale reconstruction of traditional instruments in accordance with symphonic orchestral types. In place of traditional solo performance, collective performance was introduced, which required performing in unison, breaking the tradition of improvised variations in instrumental kyui. When traditional master-performers were invited to participate in reorganized concerts, the connections between instrumental pieces and legends were cut out because they were incompatible with European concert forms.

Lyrical songs were reinterpreted as operatic arias and for a long period Kazakh 'bel canto' became representative of all Kazakh culture. Lyrical songs performed in this new style became aesthetically acclaimed and were employed more often than all other genres of traditional music culture.

The 1960s and 70s were a turning-point in the musical culture of Soviet Kazakhstan in connection with radical changes in the ethnic identity of the Kazakhs. During this period there was a revival of interest in their own culture, history and peculiarities. Indeed, there were more in-depth studies of oral traditional music and an extension of the fieldwork possibilities for ethnomusicologists in the Republic. As a result, the second orchestra for folk instruments, 'Otrar sazy' was created in the 1980s. (From 1981 the director was Nurgisa Tlendiyev, a composer and dömbra-player.) This orchestra includes a large number of ethnically specific, non-European instruments, such as the sybyzgy and saz-surnay or clay flute. This kind of collective performance became a model for many amateur ensembles.

During the 1990s youth groups developed, including those who fused the style and technique of rock and pop groups with Kazakh traditional music: for instance, the group 'Roksonaky' took the first prize at the International Festival 'Asia Dausy'.

Contemporary folkloristics began in the 1920s. The publications of Aleksandr Zatayevich (1869–1936) have a continuing importance. Zatayevich wrote more than 2300 pieces of Kazakh folk music (not counting the musics of other nationalities inhabiting the Republic), and he published 1500 of them in two volumes during his lifetime (Zatayevich, 1925, 1931). Ahmet (1906–68) and Kudaibergen (1899–1938), the Zhubanovs, Boris Erzakovich (1908–97), Asiya Baigaskina (1928–99), and Bolat Sarïbayev (1927–84) laid down the foundations of modern Kazakh ethnomusicology.

6. OPERA, ORCHESTRAL AND CHAMBER MUSIC. After the October Revolution of 1917, in keeping with the cultural policies of the Soviet state, Kazakhstan had to develop a single musical culture that was 'socialist in content and national in form'. The bases of this culture were the European harmonic system and genres that had been assimilated in Imperial Russia by the early 20th century. It was obligatory to retain a 'national' element but this was interpreted primarily as an external, decorative and exotic attribute.

In order to produce European musical art forms professional performers and composers needed to be trained. Accustoming traditional Kazakh musicians and singers to European methods of performance was accomplished through numerous amateur music and theatre groups. In 1932 the first technical college for music and drama was established in Alma-Ata. It was there that the composers Kapan Musin and Kuddus Kuzham′yarov, the singers Rishat and Muslim Abdullin and Shabal Baysekova, the conductor Gaziz Dugashev and the musicologist Gaukhar Chumbalova received their initial education.

A music school was subsequently established in Ural′sk. The pupils were drawn from orphanages and from the villages. Kazakh musicians became literate in European musical notation through the choirs formed in various towns with the assistance of such professional musicians as I.V. Kotsïk, Dmitry Matsutsin, Latïf Khamidi, D. Kovalyov, Z. Pisarenko, A. Moskalenko and B. Orlov. In the autumn of 1933 a music studio attached to the national theatre was opened, where musicians could receive lessons in musical literacy, solfeggio as well as listening to music.

Professional composers were invited to work in Kazakhstan, including graduates of the Leningrad and Moscow conservatories: YEVGENY GRIGOR′YEVICH BRUSILOVSKY, Vasily Velikanov, Mikhail Ivanov-Sokol′sky. The appearance of the first significant works of opera, ballet and the symphony are associated with them.

The development of choral, instrumental and symphonic music in Kazakhstan was inspired by the first Kazakh operas by Brusilovsky, Kïz-Zhibek and Er-Targïn (the names of epic heroes). These works, staged in 1934 and 1937, make extensive use of traditional songs and instrumental pieces known as kyui (see §4 above). The operas were written as a result of the creative interaction between the composer and traditional musicians who were the performers of these operatic roles. These works reflected the innate 'theatricality' of traditional Kazakh musical culture, and the artistry of professional Kazakh songs that became the basis for their vocal presentation. The arrangements and orchestral episodes are characterized by extreme economy, while the choral parts are performed predominantly in unison and occasionally in two parts. This 'birth' of Kazakh opera introduced the local listening public to European genres and forms, to the orchestra, the chorus and the ballet.

A significant stage in establishing opera in Kazakhstan was the appearance of an opera by Kazakh composers: for the centenary of the outstanding Kazakh poet, educator and philosopher Abai Kunanbayev, the composers Ahmet Zhubanov and Latïf Khamidi wrote the opera Abay. Kazakh opera as a genre is epitomized by Birzhan i Sara ('Birzhan and Sara') which was composed by Mukhtan Tulebayev (1913–60) and staged in 1946. The heroes of the opera are traditional akyn (poet-singers). Birzhan is considered to be the 19th-century founder of this professional singing style, and his life and artistic fate form the basis of the libretto. The uses of harmony, polyphony and orchestral texture are unsurpassed in Kazakh Soviet music. During the 1950s Brusilovsky composed the opera Dudaray (1953) and Kuddus Kuzham'yarov (1918–94) the Uighur opera Nazugum (1956). Kuzham'yarov also composed the ballet Chin Timur (1969) and the opera Saldyr Palvan (1977).

Two later operas drawn from Kazakh epics – Enlik-Kebek (1972) by Gaziza Zhubanova and Alpamysh (1973) by Erkegali Rakhmadiyev – also became popular. In Enlik-Kebek, based on Mukhtar Auyezov's play, the conflict of good and evil is expressed musically through the opposition of traditional and modern sound worlds. The epic tale of Alpamysh is known to many Turkic peoples and this opera is framed by a prologue and an epilogue performed by a bard (zhyrau). The opera is thereby set in both legendary and historical time.

Symphonic music began to develop in Kazakhstan much later than opera. The first serious works appeared in the 1940s. The symphonic suite Sarï Arka (1943) by Brusilovsky combines the traditions of Russian classical symphonic style with Kazakh traditional themes, songs and kyui. In 1947 Vasily Velikanov's Kazakh Symphony appeared, a work that continues the tradition of a lyrical and epic symphonic style. Velikanov combines traditional songs and kyui with polyphony. The symphonic poem has become the favourite genre of Kazakh composers, for instance Rizvangul by Kuzham'yarov (1950), Dzhaylauday by Kapan Musin (1948) and Kazakhastan by Tulebayev (1951).

The 'Zhiger' symphony by Gaziza Zhubanova (1971) extended the emotional and conceptual frontiers of contemporary Kazakh music by including philosophical and psychological elements. This symphony includes six kyui by the 19th-century composer Dauletkerey. The symphonic music of Kazakhstan during the 1980s is represented by the symphonies of Kuzham'yarov, Sïdïkh Mukhamedzhanov and Bakir Bayakhunov; symphonic poems and symphonic pictures are represented by Bazarbay Dzhumaniyazov, Anatoly Bïchkov and Mansur Sagatov. The orchestral works Ata tolgauï, Kosh-keruen, and Ansau, composed by Nurgisa Tiyendiyev, leader of the folkloric ensemble Otar Sazy, continue and develop the tradition of the orchestral kyui. Kenzhebek Kumïsbekov also works successfully in this genre.

Orchestral arrangements of traditional kyui, and European and Russian classics form the repertory of the Kurmangazya State Folk Instruments Orchestra of Kazakhstan, formed during the 1930s as a folkloric ensemble but now comprising graduates from the State Conservatory of Alma-Ata. The only higher educational establishment for music in the Republic, the Conservatory of Alma-Ata was opened in 1944. Over a 50-year period the conservatory trained about 6000 graduates, providing professional personnel for all music training establishments, including schools and colleges as well as the State Choral Cappella, the State SO, the Abay Kazakh State Academic Theatre of Opera and Ballet, the State Wind Band, the State Chamber Orchestra, the Light SO, and the Orchestra of Radio and Television.

Musicians who have received international acclaim include the singers Bibigul' Tulegenova, Yermek Serkebayev, Alibek Dnishev, the conductor Tolepbergen Abdrashev, the violinists Gaukhar Murzabekova and Ayman Musakhodzhayeva and the pianists Gul'zhamilya Kadïrbekova and Zhaniya Aubakirova. Each year the Conservatory Chamber Orchestra (directed by Anvar Akbarov) and the State Quartet tour internationally.

Choral music, like other European musical genres, appeared in Kazakhstan after the communist revolution. Instrumental (orchestral) music made extensive use of traditional instrumental styles but choral music did not have a precedent in traditional arts. Choral singing did not exist, unless unison group singing during certain rituals (weddings and funerals) is taken into account. In the early post-revolutionary years the compulsory teaching of choral singing was introduced in national institutions of education. The repertories of these choirs consisted predominently of revolutionary and traditional songs.

In 1935 the State Choral Cappella was founded, of which the first directors were Dmitry Matsutsin and Boris Lebedev. The contributions of Latïf Khamidi and Bakhïtzhan Baykadamov to choral music is significant. The work of the latter was for many years closely associated with the Cappella, and Baykadamov was one of the first composers to write choral works based on instrumental kyui.

The history of the cantata and oratorio in Kazakhstan began in the post-war years. In general they follow the 'official' social and political line. The first work in this genre was the cantata by Brusilovsky entitled Sovetskiy Kazakhstan, dedicated to the 30th anniversary of the October Revolution. One of the best examples of the genre is the cantata by Tulebayev, Zarya kommunizma ('The Dawn of Communism'). The main protagonists are the akyn (singer) and the people; at the heart of the composition is the akyn's solo. Despite the simplicity of its musical language, Sïdïkh Mukhamedzhanov's oratorio Golos vekov ('The Voice of Centuries', 1960) occupies a notable place in the history of the genre, as do the oratorios by Gaziza Zhubanova Zarya nad step'yu ('Dawn over the Steppes', 1962) and Aral'skaya bïl' ('Aral Story', 1978). The boldest, most innovatory and artistically the most valuable investigations into the realm of the cantata and oratorio are associated with Zhubanova.

The opening of music schools and colleges in the Republic, and the need for a national repertory of pieces for teaching purposes stimulated compositions for piano and violin. In the 1930s and 40s trios, quartets and quintets (by B. Yerzakovich, S. Shabel'sky and M. Skorul'sky) began to appear. In the post-war years work in the spheres of chamber and instrumental music intensified. In the 1970s and 80s chamber, orchestral and instrumental works were composed by Zh. Dastenov, V. Novikov, A. Serkebayev and M. Sagatov.

The concerto genre in Kazakh Soviet culture was extensively represented. The first work in this genre was the Violin Concerto (1957) by Zhubanova. The concerto for trumpet and orchestra (1973) by Kuzham'yarov also became popular. The piano concerto is represented by the concertos of Nagim Mendïgaliyev, Tles Kazhgaliyev and Serik Yerkimbekov. Being close to 'national' culture but characteristic of the European genre, the concertos of Kazakh composers are distinguished by their improvisatory style, virtuosity and vivid colouring.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

STUDIES

A.K. Zhubanov: Strunï stoletii [The strings of the centuries] (Alma-Ata, 1956, 2/1975, in Kazakh as Gasyrlar pernesi)

B. Erzakovich: Pesennaya kul'tura kazakhskogo naroda: muzïkal'no-istoricheskoye issledovaniye [The song culture of the Kazakhs: a musical-historical study] (Alma-Ata, 1966)

V. Dernova, ed.: Narodnaya muzïka v Kazakhstane [Folk music in Kazakhstan] (Alma-Ata, 1967)

A.K. Zhubanov: Solov'i stoletii: ocherki o zhizni i tvorchestve kazakhskikh narodnïkh kompozitorov-pevtsov [The nightingales of the centuries: essays on the lives and works of Kazakh folk composers-singers] (Alma-Ata, 1967, 2/1975, in Kazakh as Zamana bylbyldary)

V. Belyayev: Central Asian Music: Essays in the History of the Music of the Peoples of the USSR, ed. M. Slobin (Middletown, CT, 1975)

E.D. Tursynov: Qazaq auyz adebietin zhasaushylardyn okilderi [Types of creators of Kazakh oral literature] (Alma-Ata, 1976)

B.G. Erzakovich: Muzïkal'noye naslediye kazakhskogo naroda [Musical legacy of the Kazakhs] (Alma-Ata, 1979)

P.V. Aravin: Dauletkerei i kazakhskaya muzïka XIX veka [Dauletkerei and Kazakh music of the 19th century] (Moscow, 1984)

A.B. Kunanbayeva: 'Fenomen muzïkal'noy ėpicheskoy traditsii v kazakhskom fol'klore' [The phenomenon of musical epic tradition in Kazakh folklore], Artes Populares, xiv (1985), 121–33; repr. in Kazakhskaya muzïka (Alma-Ata, 1992), 34–43

A. Mukhambetova, ed.: Instrumental'naya muzïka kazakhskogo naroda [Instrumental music of the Kazakhs] (Alma-Ata, 1985)

P. Shegebayev: 'Applikaturno-intonatsionnaya osnova kazakhskoy dombrovoy muzïki' [The basis of fingering and intonation in Kazakh dömbra music], Problemy traditsionnoi instrumentalnoy muzykï narodov SSSR, ed. I. Machijevsky (Leningrad, 1986), 135–47

A.B. Kunanbayeva: 'Kazakhskii ėpos segodnya: skazitel' i skazaniye' [The Kazakh epos today: story and storyteller], Soviet Ethnography, iv (Moscow, 1987), 101–10 [incl. Eng. summary]

I. Zemtsovsky and A. Kunanbayeva, eds.: B. Asaf'ev: o narodnoy muzïke [On folk music] (Leningrad, 1987)

A. Kunanbayeva: 'Zhanrovaya sistema kazakhskogo muzïkal'nogo eposa: opït obosnovaniya' [The system of genres of the Kazakh ėpos: definition of the problem], The Music of Epics, ed. I.I. Zemtsovsky (Yoshkar Ola, 1989), 82–112

D. Amirova: 'Kazakhskaya narodno-professional'naya pesnya: k probleme zhanrovo-stilevoy atributsii' [The Kazakh folk-professional song: toward the genre-stylistic attribution], Pesennïy fol'klor narodov Kazakhstana, ed. A.I. Mukhambetova (Alma-Ata, 1990), 137–47

A. Mukhambyetova: 'Philosophical Problems of Being in the Art of the Kazakh Kyuishi', YTM, xxii (1990), 36–41

A.E. Baigaskina: Ritmika kazakhskoy traditsionnoy pesni [The rhythmics of Kazakh traditional song] (Alma-Ata, 1991)

I.I. Zemtsovsky, ed.: Narodnaya muzïka SSSR: opït diskografii [Folk music of the USSR: an attempt at a discography] (Moscow, 1991), 41–9 [on Kazakhstan]

I. Kozhabekov, ed.: Kazakhskaya muzïka: traditsii i sovremennost': sbornik trudov [Kazakh music: tradition and contemporaneity: a collection of articles] (Alma-Ata, 1992)

S. Elemanova: Kazakhskaya muzïkal'naya literatura: uchebnik [The Kazakh musical literature: a textbook] (Alma-Ata, 1993)

G. Bisenova: Pesennoye tvorchestsvo Abaya [The song legacy of Abai] (Almaty, 1995)

A. Kunanbayeva: 'The Kazakh Zhyrau as the Singer of Tales', Ethnohistorische Wege und Lehrjahre eines Philosophen: Festschrift, Dedicated to Prof. Lawrence Krader, ed. D. Schorkowitz (Frankfurt, 1995), 293–303

A. Mukhambetova: 'The Traditional Musical Culture of Kazakhs in the Social Context of the 20th Century', World of Music, xxxvii/3 (1995), 66–83

A. Esenuly (Toqtaghanov): Kyui – tangirding kubiri [Kyui – the epistle of the Most High] (Almaty, 1996; Russ. trans., 2/1997, as Kyuiposlaniye Vsevïshnego)

S. Utegaliyeva, ed.: Traditsionnaya muzïka Azii: issledovaniya i materialï [Traditional music of Asia: study and materials] (Almaty, 1996)

J. Porter, ed.: Folklore and Traditional Music in the Former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe (Los Angeles, 1997)

S. Utegaliyeva: Mangïstauskaya dombrovaya traditsiya [Mangystau dömbra tradition] (Almaty, 1997)

COLLECTIONS

A. Zatayevich: 1000 pesen Kirgizskogo (Kazakhskogo) naroda (napevï i melodii) [1000 songs of Kyrghyz (Kazakh) people: tunes and melodies] (Orenburg, 1925, 2/1963)

A. Zatayevich: 500 kazakhskikh pesen i kyuyev Adayevskikh, Bukeyevskikh, Semipalatinskikh i Ural'skikh[500 songs and kyuis of Aday, Bukey, Semipalatinsk and the Ural Kazakhs] (Alma-Ata, 1931)

B.G. Erzakovich: Narodnïye pesni Kazakhstana: ėtnograficheskii sbornik [Folksongs of Kazakhstan: an ethnographic collection] (Alma-Ata, 1956)

T. Bekkhozhina: 200 kazakhskikh pesen [200 Kazakh songs] (Alma-Ata, 1972)

T. Bekkhozhina, ed.: Qazyna [A treasure] (Alma-Ata, 1972)

T. Mergaliev: Dombyra sazy [The dömbra melody] (Alma-Ata, 1972)

B. Sarybayev: Kazakhskiye muzïkal'nïye instrumentï [Kazakh musical instruments: an illustrated album] (Alma-Ata,1978)

A. Ketegenova, ed.: Makpal: 100 songs [A velvet: 100 songs: a songbook recorded by Mukan Tulebayev] (Alma-Ata, 1979)

B. Karakulov: Asïl mura: naslediye: muzïkal'no-ėtnographicheskii sbornik [The precious heritage: a musical-ethnographic collection] (Alma-Ata, 1981)

B.G. Erzakovich, ed.: Kazakhskiy muzykal'nïy fol'klor [Kazakh musical folklore] (Alma-Ata, 1982)

A. Raimbergenov and S. Amanova: Kyui qainary [The geyser of kyuis] (Alma-Ata, 1990)

B.G. Erzakovich: Qazaq khalqynyng ghashyqtyq anderi antologiiasy [Anthology of Kazakh folk love songs] (Almaty, 1994)

G. Baitenova: Tsvetï na pepelishche . . . pesni-pisma, sozdannïe vo vremya Velikoy Otechestvennoy voinï [The flowers on the site of fire . . . songs – letters of the period of World War II] (Almaty, 1995; also in Kazakh)

RECORDINGS

for a list of LP discs see Zemtsovsky 1991, 41–9

Music of Kazakhstan, i: Songs Accompanied on Dömbra and Solo Kobyz, King records [Japan] KICC 5166 (1992)

Mongolie: chants Kazakhs et tradition épique de l'Ouest, perf. A. Desjacques, Ocora 558 660 (1993)

Music of Kazakhstan, ii: Dömbra Music of Kazakhstan and Songs Accompanied on Dömbra, King records [Japan] KICC 5199 (1995)

Kirghizes et Kazakhs: maîtres du komuz et du dombra, Ocora/Radio France C560121 (1997)

ALMA KUNANBAYEVA (1–5), SAIDA ELEMANOVA(6)

Kazandzhiev, Vasil (b Ruse, 10 Sept 1934). Bulgarian composer and conductor. Together with Iliev, Nikolov, Tutev and Ivan Spassov, Kazandzhiev was one of the five innovators of contemporary Bulgarian music, and as such was blacklisted by the communist authorities in Bulgaria for many years. A child prodigy, at the age of 13 Kazandzhiev became the private composition student of Iliev. At the same time, while still living in Ruse, he was deeply influenced by the latter's and Dobrin Petkov's conducting style. On the recommendation of Hadjiev he went to study composition and orchestration at the State Academy in Sofia with Pancho Vladigerov and conducting with Vladi Simeonov. Kazandzhiev graduated from the academy in 1957 and became conductor at the Sofia Opera, a post he held until 1964. In 1962 he founded the Sofia Soloists chamber ensemble with which he achieved international acclaim, touring Europe, Asia and the USA; he led the ensemble until 1978. In 1963 he was appointed teacher of score reading at the State Academy and later became professor of conducting. From 1979 to 1993 he was chief conductor of the Sofia National RSO.

As a student his compositional style showed the influence of Vladigerov, with regard to orchestration, and Hindemith in its formal clarity and accuracy. His first notable composition was the Divertimento for small orchestra. With the temporary thaw in the political climate of the early 1960s, Bulgarian musicians made closer contacts with Poland. Kazandzhiev, along with Tutev, attended the Warsaw Autumn Festival in 1965. This event marked a major change in Kazandzhiev's compositional style, especially with the introduction of aleatory elements and graphic notation as in Complexi sonori for strings (1965). This same work was highly acclaimed following a performance given by the Sofia Soloists under the composer's direction at the 1967 Zagreb Biennial Festival. Aspects of Bulgarian history and culture have also played an increasingly important role in Kazandzhiev's compositional processes. This is evident in his preoccupation with timbral and colouristic effects as well as in his choice of subject matter. From the 1970s Kazandzhiev has experimented with blending elements from Bulgarian folk music – free improvisation (measureless folksongs), diaphonia and other vocal and instrumental effects – with aleatory devices. Some of his best-known works were composed during this period (e.g. Zhivite ikoni ('Living Icons'), Kartini ot Balgariya ('Pictures from Bulgaria') and Apokalipsis.

Kazandzhiev has received Bulgaria's highest awards, including Merited Artist (1970), the Dimitrov Prize (1971) and People's Artist (1980).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Tpt Conc., 1955; Conc., pf, sax, orch, 1957; Divertimento, 1957; Vn Conc., 1962; Septemvri 23, heroic ov., 1963; Sinfonia na tembrite [Sym. of Timbres], 1963; Complexi sonori, str, 1965; Zhivite ikoni [Living Icons], chbr orch, 1970; Kartini ot Balgariya [Pictures from Bulgaria], str, perc, 1971; Apokalipsis, 1973; Capriccio, 1979; Ilyuminatsii, 1980; Sym. no.3, 1983; Affreschi Sacri, 1993

Chbr: Wind Qnt, 1951; Toccata, pf, 1957; Wind Trio, 1957; Pf Sonata, 1958; Str Qt no.1 (Perspektivi), 1966; Triomphe des carillons, pf, 1974; Sonata, vc, 1976; Strophes, fl, vn, pf, 1976; Episodi, cl, hp, perc, 1977; Dialogzi, fl, hp, 1978; Equilibristics, pf, 1979; Otrazheniya [Reflections], fl, pf, 1979; Impulsi, wind trio, 1980; Meditation, vn, pf, 1982; Pf Qnt 1982

Other songs and inst pieces, film scores

Principal publishers: Nauka i izkustvo, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Shurbanova: 'Anketa Vasil Kazandzhiev', Balgarska muzika, xxxiii/10 (1982), 28–45 [interview]
B. Badarov: 'Vasil Kazandzhiev na 50 godini' [Kazandzhiev at 50], Muzikalni khorizont (1984), no.9, pp.90–94
M. Bozhikova: 'Klastari i folklor: po treta simfoniya na Vasil Kazandzhiev', Balgarska muzika, xxxix/9 (1988), 5–7 [on the Third Symphony]

ANNA LEVY, GREGORY MYERS

Kazanli, Nikolay Ivanovich (b Tiraspol, 5/17 Dec 1869; d Petrograd, 23 July/5 Aug 1916). Russian composer and conductor. He was educated at the Odessa Music School (1879–83) and at the St Petersburg Conservatory, where he studied under Rimsky-Korsakov (1891–4); he also took lessons from Balakirev. From 1897 he made regular appearances as a conductor in the major cities of western Europe: an enthusiastic advocate of Russian music, he conducted the first German performance of Glinka's Ruslan and Lyudmila at Munich in 1899. He supervised the music teaching in the military schools of St Petersburg, and was a member of the commission for the improvement of Russian military music. He composed the opera Miranda (performed in 1910), orchestral music and choral works, and edited over 100 classical pieces for small orchestra; he also wrote articles on music for both the Russian and the German press.

WORKS

Stage: Miranda (Poslednyaya bor′ba) (op, Polilov), St Petersburg, Mariinsky, 1910, pf score (Leipzig, 1908)

Orch: Sinfonietta, G, 1893; Sym., f, 1897; Glinkiana (Moscow, 1908); Villa u morya [The Villa by the Sea], sym. fantasy after Böcklin, 1913, pf 4 hands (Leipzig, 1917); Concerto sinfonico russo, 1913; Noch′ karnavala [Carnival night], 1914 (Leipzig, 1916)

Vocal: Rusalka, 1v, orch, 1897; Lenora, 1v, orch, 1897; Velikaya panikhida [Requiem], chorus (Moscow, 1912); songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Tyuneyev: 'N.I. Kazanli', RMG, xxii (1915)
V. Karatïgin: Obituary, MS (1916–17), no.1, p.116
G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol′sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974) [incl. list of writings]

JENNIFER SPENCER/R

Kazarian, Yury Shaheni. See GHAZARIAN, YURY SHAHENI.

Kazenin, Vladislav Igorevich (b Vyatka, 21 May 1937). Russian composer. He studied at the Urals State Conservatory, composition with N. Khlopkov and the piano with I. Zetel′. Since 1968 he has lived in Moscow where he has occupied various administrative posts in the Composers' Union. He is a laureate of All-Union song contests, and has been awarded the title of Honoured Representative of the Arts of the RSFSR, and the Order of the Workers' Red Banner. The various genres represented in his output range from the formal instrumental sonata to musical comedy. That a sense of civic duty is an important impetus for his work is demonstrated by the incidental music to the series of cinema epics Velikaya Otechestvennaya ('The Great Patriotic War'). His musical language combines elements of Russian folklore with more contemporary turns of phrase.

WORKS

Stage: Mï bol′shiye druz′ya [We're Great Friends] (musical comedy, after I. Rif), 1959; Ray v shalashe [Paradise in a Shelter of Branches] (musical comedy, A. Loktev, L. Paley), 1975;

Dyadushkin son [Uncle's Dream] (musical comedy, K. Vasil'yev, after F. Dostoyevsky), 1981; more than 7 others
Choral: Posvyzshcheniye soldatu [Dedication to a Soldier] (cant., Russ. poets), 1985
Orch: Poėma pamyati Yuliusa Fuchika [Poem in Memory of Julius Fučík], 1959; Baletnaya syuita no.1, 1960; Fantasticheskoye shestviye [Fantastic Procession], 1962; Ov., 1975; Baletnaya syuita no.2, 1983
Pf: 3 sonatas: 1956; 1958; 1977; 5 p'yes [5 Pieces], 1982
Vocal (1v, pf): song cycles after Russ. poets, incl. Vokal'nïy tsikl na stikhi sovetskikh poėtov [Song Cycle to Words by Soviet Poets], 1972
Music for children, incid music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Pal'mova: 'Vladislav Igorevich Kazenin', Kompozitorï Urala (Sverdlovsk, 1968)
I. Likhachova: Vladislav Kazenin (Moscow, 1990)

GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kazhlayev, Murad (b Baku, 15 Jan 1931). Azerbaijani composer and conductor. Born into the family of an eminent doctor, he studied at the special music school attached to the Azerbaijan State Conservatory (1938–1949) and at the conservatory itself (1950–55), from which he graduated in composition under B.I. Zeydman. As a conductor, he completed his apprenticeship under Niyazi. He then lived in Makhachkala (1955–89) the capital of Daghestan, where he taught at the music school and directed the symphony orchestra of Daghestan Radio and Gunib (a variety ensemble of singers in Baku); he also headed the Daghestan Composers' Union. In 1989 he moved to Moscow to occupy the post of principal conductor of the Large Concert Orchestra of State Television and Radio. Since 1993 he has also been a professor of the Rostov Conservatory. He was made a People's Artist of the USSR (1981), and is a laureate of the Glinka Prize (1970) and composing competitions in Vienna (1959) and Prague (1966).

Kazhlayev's music enjoys great popularity in Russia and neighbouring countries; this is as much due to its energy, colour, melodic simplicity, rhythmic variety, inventiveness and brilliance of orchestration as the inherent blending of the traditions of formal art, light music and jazz. National colouring gives a special charm to his music: Kazhlayev's understanding of specifically Caucasian folklore made him sensitive to the characteristics of the art of other peoples. The Afrikanskiy kontsert ('African Concerto') for jazz orchestra is a prime example of this sensitivity; the work found its way into repertories of a number of well-known ensembles during the 1960s, including the Duke Ellington orchestra. Kazhlayev composed the first Daghestani ballet Goryanka ('The Mountain Girl') – or, in its revised version Asiyat – after the dramatic poem by Rasul Gamzatov; staged by Oleg Vinogradov at the Kirov Theatre in Leningrad with the involvement of Mikhail Barïshnikov, this production was a milestone for the Kirov ballet. Among Kazhlayev's orchestral compositions are a corpus of works inspired by the nature, environment and culture of Daghestan and other eastern countries, among which Daghestan, Shamil', Farkhad i Shirin and the Simfonicheskiye tantsï-kartinï ('Symphonic Dance-Pictures') stand out. Kazhlayev's songs have gained wide currency, especially the song cycle O tebe ya dumayu ('I'm Thinking of You') to poems by Gamzatov. He has also written a great deal of music for the theatre and the cinema. Characteristic of Kazhlayev's conducting is its liveliness, rhythmic impulsiveness and subtle feeling for orchestral colour. Concerts of his works have been given in the USA (1991), Italy (1992) and Israel (1995).

WORKS
(selective list)

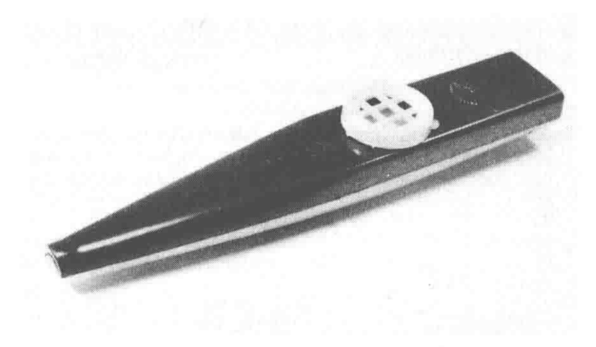
Stage: Goryanka [The Mountain Girl] (ballet, O. Vinogradov, after R. Gamzatov), Leningrad, Kirov, 1968, rev. as Asiyat, 1984; Moy brat igrayet na klarinete [My Brother Plays the Clarinet] (musical), 1972; Million novobrachnïkh [A Million Newly-Weds] (revue, I. Rakhlin, O. Levitsky), 1971, Leningrad Music Hall; Valida (operetta, A. Abu-Bakar, K. Krikoryan, V. Portnov, V. Yes'man, Portnov, after Abu-Bakar: Pora krasnïkh yablok [The Time of Red Apples]), 1989
Orch: Pamyati 28 geroyev-panfilovtsev [In Memory of the 28 Panfilov Heroes], sym. poem, 1953; Daghestan, sym. pictures, 1955, rev. 1960; Concert Waltz, str, 1956; Tuchi pokidayut nebo [Clouds are Leaving the Heavens], sym. suite, 1959; Vostochnaya ballada [Eastern Ballad], 1960; Privetstvennaya uvertyura [Welcome Ov.], 1961; Simfonicheskiye tantsï-kartinï [Sym. Dance-Pictures], 1968–70; Liricheskiye novellï, 1968–71; Simfonicheskiye valsï [Symphonic Waltzes], 5 movements, 1975; Utro Rodinï [The Morning of the Homeland], sym. fantasy, 1977; Farkhad i Shirin [Farkhad and Shirin], sym. frescoes in 10 movts, 1979; Farkhad i Shirin: liricheskiye stranitsï [Farkhad and Shirin: Lyrical Pages], 1991; Shamil': simfonicheskiye illyustratsii v 10 chastyakh [Shamil: symphonic illustrations in 10 movts], 1992
Inst: Molodyozhnïy [Youth], str qt, 1954; 6 Preludes, pf, 1956–67; Detskiy al'bom [Children's album], pf, 1959; Pieces, str qt, 1960; Scherzino, vc, 1962; Nocturne, fl, 1966; Romance, tpt, 1966; 10 Miniatures, pf, 1969; Narodnaya muzïka Dagestana [The Folk Music of Daghestan], acc/bayan, 1973; P'yesï na dagestanskiye narodnïye temï [Pieces on Daghestani Folk Themes], vn, pf, 1984
Vocal: Gorskaya pesnya [Mountain song] (Gamzatov), song cycle, 1965; O tebe ya dumayu [I'm thinking of you] (Gamzatov), song cycle, 1965; choruses (Gamzatov), 1972
Jazz compositions, light music, music for plays, films, stage revues and the circus

Principal publishers: Muzïka, Sovetskiy Kompozitor

WRITINGS



'Nad chyom ya rabotayu?' [What am I working on?], SovM (1967), no.4, pp.145–6
'Yesli khotite pisat' muzïku, izvol'te uchit'sya' [If you want to write music, then learn, if you please], SovM (1968) no.8, pp.14–15
'Neobkhodimo shirokoye pole poiska' [A broad field of search is needed], SovM (1983), no.4, pp.26–31

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Yu. Korev: 'Murad Kazhlayev', Sovestkaya muzïka: stat'ii materialï, i (Moscow, 1956), 323–5
V. Vanslov: 'Legenda gor' [Legend of the mountains], SovM (1968), no.6, pp.40–46
O. Vinogradov: 'Dialogi', Muzïka i khoreografiya sovremennogo baleta [The music and choreography of contemporary ballet] (Leningrad, 1974), 86–100
M. Korkmasova: 'Fol'klornïye istoki tvorchestva M.M. Kazhlayeva' [The folklore sources of Kazhlayev's work], Ideyno-khudozhestvennïye problemï sovremennogo iskusstva Dagestana, ed. D.M. Magomedov (Makhachkala, 1982), 55–64

MIKHAIL GRIGOR'YEVICH BYALIK

Kazoo [bazoo, bazooka, gazooka, gazoota]. A simple MIRLITON which amplifies the human voice while also imparting a buzzing, rasping quality to it. First manufactured in the USA around 1850, it has been produced since the 1890s in many countries under different names and in a variety of forms. It now consists of a cigar-shaped tube of plated metal or plastic with a flattened opening at one end and a smaller, circular opening at the other (see illustration). Over a large hole on the top a circular disc of animal membrane or equivalent material is held in place by a screw-on metal cup. As the performer sings or hums into the flattened end the membrane vibrates (strongly if the cup is uncovered but less so if partly covered by the hand) and many kinds of wavering and loud, quacking effects are possible. The sound of the Modern kazoo, made in Germany (Horniman Museum, London)

kazoo could be amplified by fitting a trumpet or trombone bell to the end. In this form it was often known as a 'jazz-horn', 'jazzophone', 'cantophone', etc. It originally had an important role in black American music, especially in country string bands and early jazz ensembles, but is now often regarded as a toy. In England the kazoo was known as bazooka, gazoota, gazooka or hooter and was popularly used in the 1920s and 1930s in working men's bands (see Holland). In the West Riding of Yorkshire, where the kazoo was known as a 'Tommy Talker', there were many 'Tommy Talker bands' and 'Waffen Fuffen bands' which played at carnivals and galas. In these the kazoo was the principal instrument, augmented by a variety of others which, for the purposes of competition, had to be made of tin. The instrument is also used in some professional popular music ensembles and occasionally in contemporary art music compositions.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Wharton and A. Clarke: 'The Tommy Talker Bands of the West Riding', Musical Traditions, i (1983), 16–21

B. Holland: Here's to the Next Time: Carnival Jazz Bands of the Nineteen-Twenties and Thirties (Manchester, 1988)

B. Hopkin: 'Mirlitons: Kazoos and Beyond', Experimental Musical Instruments, v/1 (1989), 4–8

ANTHONY C. BAINES, PAUL OLIVER/MARTIN KIRNBAUER

Kazuro, Stanisław (b Teklinapol, 2 Aug 1881; d Warsaw, 30 Nov 1961). Polish composer and teacher. He studied at the Warsaw Music Institute, the Accademia di S Cecilia and under d'Indy in Paris. Active in Warsaw as a teacher (he published several books on solfège), he became rector of the Warsaw Conservatory (the renamed Institute) in 1945. He was also well known as a choirmaster, notably of the Warsaw PO Oratorio Choir and the Powiśle Choir of 300 Children. (EMuz, A. Mrygoń)

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Bajka [Fable] (B. Grabowski), Warsaw, 1916; Powrót [Return] (Kazuro), Warsaw, 1936

Orch: 2 tańce białoruskie; Młodość [Youth], sym. poem; Rapsodia polska; Prelude, str; Smutna ziemia [Sorrowful Earth], sym. trilogy; Suita mazurków, small orch; Sym. Adagio, str; 12 miniatur, str; 3 vn concs., 1951–3; Cl Conc., 1953; Variations, cl, str, 1955

Inst: All'antico, vn, pf; [Inwencje [Inventions], 3 vn; Mała fantazja [Little Fantasia], vn, pf; Prelude and Fugue, vn, va, pf; 22 inwencje, fl, ob, cl; pieces for pf and org

Other works: Sym. 'Wiosna' [Spring] (E. Słoński), S, chorus, orch, 1919; Suita taneczna, chorus, orch, 1936; 3 orats, 3 choral suites, choral songs, solo songs, children's songs, vocal and inst folksong arrs.

Principal publisher: PWM

For fuller list see Twórczość Stanisława Kazuro: katalog utworów (Warsaw, 1949)

MIECZYSŁAWA HANUSZEWSKA/R

Każyński, Wiktor (b Vilnius, 18 Dec 1812; d St Petersburg, 6 March 1867). Polish composer, conductor, pianist and writer on music. He studied law at the University of Vilnius. Before 1827 he studied music privately with J.D. Holland; some sources also refer to a period of study under Elsner (probably by correspondence). From 1830 he wrote various works for the theatre in Vilnius, and from 1836 he was Kapellmeister for Wilhelm Schmidkoff's new operatic ensemble; he was also organist at the university church of St John (1836–40). As pianist and accompanist he took an active part in the city's concert life, organizing in spring 1842 a series of concerts in the Müller Hall with the participation, among others, of Moniuszko. That autumn he moved to St Petersburg, where he became music adviser and secretary to General Alexey L'vov, with whom he made a musical tour of Germany in 1844; this is described in his Notatki z podróży muzykalnej po Niemczech odbytej w roku 1844 ('Notes from a musical journey through Germany in 1844') (St Petersburg, 1845). From 1845 until his death he was musical director and conductor of the orchestra of the Alexandrinsky Theatre in St Petersburg.

Każyński's compositions include incidental music, overtures, ballet music, orchestral fantasias and piano miniatures, as well as operas, operettas and melodramas, which were staged with limited success in Vilnius and St Petersburg. Many works are lost, and his stage works were not published. The piano compositions were written mainly during his years in St Petersburg. His songs to Polish poems have a lyrical, personal character, and the children's song Wlazł kotek na płotek ('Kitten on the Fence'), to words by W. Syrokomla, gained enormous popularity. Każyński also contributed articles on music to various Vilnius and St Petersburg periodicals.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Piękna Alaiss, mniemana czarownica [Beautiful Alaiss, the would-be Witch] (incid music), Vilnius, 25 March 1830

Szczególniejsze spotkanie [The most Remarkable Meeting] (comic op, E. Sakowicz), Vilnius, 21 April 1832

Przerwane wesele [The Interrupted Wedding] (pantomime), Vilnius, 22 Oct 1833

Podziemny wychowaniec [Underground Foster-Child] (incid music, F. Grillparzer), Vilnius, 30 March 1839

Fenella (comic op), Vilnius, 1840; based on Auber's La muette de Portici

Żyd wieczny tułacz [The Wandering Jew] (incid music, L.C. Caigniez), Vilnius, 1840

Antoni i Antosia (comic op, A. Słowaczyński, after J.A.J. Desboulmiers: Toinon et Toinette), Vilnius, *c*1840

Ryszard III [Richard III] (incid music, W. Shakespeare), St Petersburg, 1847

Mąż i żona [Husband and Wife] (comic op), St Petersburg, 1848

OTHER

Orch: Pf Conc., f♯ (Vienna, 1847); Sym. no.3, A, *c*1849

Chbr: Duo brillant sur Bianca e Gualtiero de Lvoff, vn, pf (Vienna, *c*1845); Śpiewnik Wiktora Każyńskiego [Songbook] (St Petersburg, 1854–5); pf miniatures

WRITINGS

Notatki z podróży muzykalnej po Niemczech odbytej w roku 1844 [Notes from a musical journey through Germany in 1844] (St Petersburg, 1845)

Historia opery włoskiej [History of Italian opera] (St Petersburg, 1851)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (B. Chmara-Żaczkiewicz)

J. ze Śliwina: 'Wiktor Każyński', Athenaeum [Warsaw], vi (1845), 96–120

J.I. Kraszewski: 'Wiktor Każyński po wtóre' [Każyński once more], Athenaeum [Warsaw], iv (1846), 209–18

S. Świerzewski: Józef Ignacy Kraszewski i polskie życie muzyczne XIX wieku [Kraszewski and Polish musical life in the 19th century] (Kraków, 1953)

W. Rudziński: Introductionto W. Każyński: notatki z podróży muzykalnej po Niemczech odbytej w roku 1844 (Kraków, 1957)

BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Keane, David (Roger) (b Akron, OH, 15 Nov 1943). Canadian composer. He studied composition and the double bass at Ohio State University (BMus 1965, MMus 1967) and then moved to Canada as a conscientious objector to the war in Vietnam. After spending three years in Vancouver as a music teacher and professional bassist, he joined the staff of the music department at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario (1970–97). He established and directed the electronic music studio at Queen's, and subsequently wrote the book Tape Music Composition (London, 1980). He became a Canadian citizen in 1974.

Keane's research interests include music perception and cognition, and the history, techniques and aesthetics of electro-acoustic music. He has written a considerable amount of music for amateur and young musicians, in addition to his large output of electro-acoustic, multimedia and concert music. Influences on his compositional style range from medieval music to computer music technology. He has travelled widely in Europe and North America to lecture on electro-acoustic music and supervise performances of his own works. (EMC2, F.R.C. Clarke)

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: The Devil's Constructs (chbr op, 1, D. Fanstone), 1978; Carmina tenebrarum (op, 1, Keane and M. Cuddy), 1983; Harlequins (chbr op, 2, Cuddy), 1986; multimedia, music for dance, sound sculpture compositions

Orch: Tombeau de Lester Pearson, 1973; Variations on a Theme of Guillaume de Machaut, concert band, 1975; Orbis, 4 vn, str, 1981; Ortus, 1982; Folkdance Transform, orch, elecs, 1995

Chbr and solo inst: Elegy, db, tape, 1976; Henge, trbn ens, 1978; Lyra, pf, tape, 1978; Hornbeam, hn, tape, 1979; Fantasy, 2 pf, 1982; Gymel, vc, 1983; Los rayos del sol, pf, 1986; Tango, ob, pf, 1986, rev. ob, tape, 1990; Epiphanies, a rec, cptr, 1987; Nautilus, cl, tape, 1988; Dwelling, bar sax, tape, 1989; Turbo Toccata, hpd, 2 synth, 1989; Saxophonics, s sax, synth, 1990; Raw Umbra, accdn, b cl, mar, 1991; Wervelwind, b trbn, tape, 1991, rev. 1993; Pulsar, b cl, tape, 1992; Tarantelle, eng hn, elecs, 1992; Sinfonia no.2, ww ens, elecs, 1993

Choral: Corona, S, SATB, orch, 1978; Missa brevis, SATB, fl, eng hn, 1982; Laminae (Cuddy), SATB, concert band, 1984; The Seasons (Cuddy), vv, medieval inst ens, 1994

Vocal: Evening Song (B. Elder), S, tape, 1978; Parthenope (Cuddy), S, fl, pf, 1986; Lumina (Cuddy), S/T, tape, 1988

Tape: In memoriam Hugh LeCaine, 1978; La cascade enchantée, 1982; Elektronikus mozaïk, 1984; La aurora estrellada, 1985; Pianocentrix, 1988

MSS in CDN-Tcm

ROBIN ELLIOTT

Kearns, William Henry (b Dublin, 1794; d London, 28 Dec 1846). Irish violinist, conductor and composer. He was in London by 1817: on 16 July of that year his operetta Bachelor's Wives, or The British at Brussels was produced at the English Opera House, and enjoyed a substantial run. On 3 September 1818 he was engaged for the season of 1818–19 as principal first violin at Covent Garden under Henry Bishop. At some point Kearns became an assistant to S.J. Arnold and William Hawes, directors of the English Opera House, and in 1827 he wrote additional accompaniments for their performances of Purcell's King Arthur. Also, his arrangements of two items from Spohr's Zemire und Azor were published (?1831). Kearns remained active as a violinist and played in the festival held at Westminster Abbey in 1834. Later he arranged piano accompaniments for vocal works, including Haydn's The Seasons (1840), and in 1845 he produced an adaptation of 'Deh prendi un dolce amplesso' from Mozart's La clemenza di Tito, which became The Young Protestant's Hymn ('We won't give up the Bible'). He collaborated with H.J. Gauntlett in editing The Comprehensive Tune Book (1846); Henry Thomas Smart was among his pupils.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Parry: An Account of the Royal Musical Festival held in Westminster Abbey 1834 (London, 1834), [34]

R. Northcott: The Life of Sir Henry R. Bishop (London, 1920), 44

T. Fenner: Opera in London: Views of the Press 1785–1830 (Carbondale, IL, 1994), 378

GEORGE BIDDLECOMBE

Keats, Donald (Howard) (b New York, 27 May 1929). American composer. He studied at Yale University with Quincy Porter and Hindemith (MusB 1949) and at Columbia University with Luening and Cowell (MA 1951); as a Fulbright Scholar he attended the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Hamburg (1954–6) for studies with Jarnach. He received the PhD (1961) at the University of Minnesota, where his teachers included Dominick Argento and Paul Fetler. In 1957 he joined the faculty of Antioch College, becoming full professor in 1967. In 1975 he became a faculty member of the Lamont School of Music at the University of Denver, where he held to the Lawrence C. Phipps Chair in the Humanities (1982–5). His awards include two Guggenheim Fellowships (1964, 1972) and an NEA grant (1975).

Keats's early works, while making use of dissonance, are often based on clearly articulated tonal centres. With the String Quartet no.2 (1964–5) he moved away from tonality; instead, short motivic ideas and sonorities became increasingly important (as in his use of quartertone 'bends' in the Puerto Rican song cycle Tierras del alma, 1979). A sparing use of systematic techniques (such as serialism in the Piano Sonata), subtle metric-rhythmic relationships (as in the String Quartet no.1) and lyricism (An Elegiac Symphony) are particularly notable in Keats's style, as are occasional fast, driving, scherzo-like movements.

WORKS

Orch: Concert Piece, 1952; Sym. no.1, 1955–7; An Elegiac Sym., 1960–62, rev. 1973; The New Work, ballet, 1967; Branchings, 1976; Pf Conc., 1981–5; Elegy, 1993

Chbr and solo inst: 2 str qts, 1951, 1964–5; Theme and Variations, pf, 1954–5; Pf Sonata, 1960–61; Polarities, vn, pf, 1970; Dialogue, pf, wind, 1973; Diptych, vc, pf, 1973–4; Epithalamium, pf trio, 1977; Musica Instrumentalis I, 10 insts, 1980; Revisitations, pf trio, 1992; several other early works

Vocal: The Hollow Men (T.S. Eliot), SATB, (cl, 3 trbn, pf)/pf, 1952; A Love Triptych (W.B. Yeats), S, pf, 1973; Tierras del alma (Poemas de amor) (C.A.C. de Ruibal), song cycle, S, fl, gui, 1979; other songs and choruses

Principal publisher: Boosey & Hawkes

JEROME ROSEN/MICHAEL MECKNA

Keats, John (b London, 31 Oct 1795; d Rome, 23 Feb 1821). English poet. His appreciation of music was vivid, dating from his schooldays: the distant music referred to in The Eve of St Agnes was suggested by sounds he heard from the headmaster's house at Enfield, where he was a fellow pupil of Edward Holmes. The headmaster's son, Charles Cowden Clarke, introduced Keats to both poetry and music, playing to him on the piano works by Handel, Mozart and Arne. Their friendship was reviewed in Keats's verse epistle To Charles Cowden Clarke (1816). Joseph Severn later declared that 'he had an ample capacity for Painting & Music & applied them largely to his Poetry, I could point out many passages taken from the one & the other. ... There is a beautifull air of Gluck's which furnished the groundwork of the coming of Apollo in Hyperion' (letter to R.M. Milnes, 6 October 1845). Recollecting Keats's general love of music and in particular his admiration of Haydn, Benjamin Bailey told Milnes: 'I well remember his telling me that, had he studied music, he had some notions of the combinations of sounds, by which he thought he could have done something as original as his poetry' (letter of 7 May 1849). Holmes and Keats frequented the house of Vincent Novello, where musical parties were given; Holmes remembered Keats arguing with Leigh Hunt about fugues and declaring that their working of themes was 'like two dogs running after one another through the dust'. In his last months in Rome, Keats delighted in hearing Haydn piano sonatas played to him by Severn, and compared Haydn to a child 'for there is no knowing what he will do next'. As befits one of the most musical of English poets, musical imagery abounds in Keats's masterpieces and some literary scholars (Barlow and Minahan) have found resemblances to sonata form in the structure of the odes.

Not only the lyrical qualities of Keats's genius but also the imagery in his poetry have attracted many English composers, most substantially Holst in his Choral Symphony. The work that has been perhaps the most popular with musicians is the ballad La belle dame sans merci, set by, among others, Stanford, Mackenzie, Parry, Rubbra, Armstrong Gibbs, Hindemith and Geoffrey Bush. Several of his lyric poems, including Hyperion, Lamia and Isabella, form the basis of symphonic poems by Edward MacDowell, Frank Bridge and others, while his odes On a Grecian Urn, To Autumn and To a Nightingale have inspired a variety of vocal settings from Hamilton Harty to Holst and his sonnet To Sleep is set by Britten in his Serenade op.31.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. and M. Cowden Clarke: Recollections of Writers (London, 1878/R)

E. Blunden: Leigh Hunt: a Biography (London, 1930/R), 202

H.E. Rollins, ed.: The Keats Circle: Letters and Papers, 1816–1878 (Cambridge, MA, 1948)

S.E. Coffman: Music of Finer Tone: Musical Imagery of the Major Romantic Poets (Salzburg, 1979)

L.K. Barlow: Musical Imagery in the Poetry of Keats (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1984)

J.A. Minahan: Word Like a Bell: John Keats, Music and the Romantic Poet (Kent, OH, 1992)

JOHN WARRACK/ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Kecapi. See KACAPI (i).

Kechakmadze, Ioseb (b Ozurgeti, western Georgia, 27 March 1939). Georgian composer. He studied composition at the Tbilisi State Conservatory with Tuskia and Toradze, graduating in 1968. He then taught in the faculty of choral conducting where, since 1980, he has occupied the position of faculty head and professor. He is secretary to the board of directors of the Union of Georgian Composers, and has been awarded many prizes and honours, including the Paliashvili Prize (1976), Honoured Artist of the Georgian SSR (1979), Prize of the Council of Ministers of the Georgian SSR (1980) and the Sh. Rustaveli Prize (1995).

Principally a composer of choral music, he has developed the ancient traditions of Georgian choral singing and has enriched it with new stylistic tendencies from western European vocal music. He has increased contact between the composer and the audience, and has thus gained a special place in Georgian musical life. In various works attention is centred on aspects of the national disposition and character: a lavish joie-de-vivre, resistance to limitations, staunchness of spirit and optimism, epic might and will for independence and the depth and asceticism of the Orthodox Christian spirit. Despite using a terse, relatively static choral style and a limited range of expression, he succeeds in conveying his beliefs and ideals. This laconism of thinking shows itself particularly vividly in the works concerning national heroes or ethical ideals founded on historical events or folklore. He has also composed works dealing with contemporary social issues.

Of particular importance are the a cappella folkloristic choruses. Using the principles of Bartók's approach to folksong, he turns to the songs of specific regions of Georgia and achieves an original reworking of the material by seeking out and developing their latent harmonic, polyphonic and textural richness within a contemporary musical idiom.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: 5 p′yes [5 Pieces], chbr orch, 1965; U mogilï neizvestnogo soldata [At the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier], sym. poem, 1968

Vocal-orch: Khalkhis khma [The Voice of the People] (cant., Dzh. Mudzhiri), T, Bar, chorus, orch, 1966; Kartulo tsao [The Georgian Sky] (ballad), 1v, chorus, orch, 1970; Mamapapuro kerao [Hearth of our Fathers] (ode, G. Leonidze), 1v, male chorus, orch, 1972; Oda Il′ya Chavchavadzes [Ode to Il′ya Chavchavadze] (V. Pshavela), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1977

Unacc. choral: Saundzhe kvela ėrisa [A Treasure for all Peoples] (E. Didimamishvili), 1965; Diad Rustavels [To the Great Rustaveli] (Didimamishvili), 1965; Vepkistkaosans [The Hero in the Tiger Skin] (Leonidze), 1965; Simgera Sakartveose [Song of Georgia] (G. Abashidze), 1966; Utsnobi djariskatsis Saplavton [Tomb of the Unknown Soldier] (choral poem, Abashidze), 1969; Zarzmis zmaneba [Vision of Zarzma] (choral poem, Abashidze), 1970; Pshauri idilliebi [Pshavsk idylls] (choral cycle, A. Kalandadze), 1972; Dzveli Tphilisis simgerebi [Songs of Old Tbilisi] (5 paraphrases, Ė. Gurdzhi, G. Skadarnova, trad.), 1976; Mtisai barsa [Mountain Melodies] (choral cycle, A. Kalandadze), 1978; Davitianidan [From Davitiani] (choral cycle, L. Guramishvili), 1980; Adgilis deda [The Keeper of the Hearth] (choral cycle, after Georgian mythological texts), 1982; Ėkzersis, female chorus, 1982; 20 Gundi [20 Choruses] (after I. Chavchavadze), 1985; Sikvdil mikhmobs menatsvale [Death Calls for a Substitute] (choral poem, trad.), solo vv, double chorus, 1993

Songs, musicals, incid music, film scores

MSS in Sakartvelos Kulturis Saministro [Georgian Ministry of Culture], Tbilisi

Principal publisher: Muzfond Gruzii Tbilisi

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Shaverzashvili: 'Kamernaya i khorovaya muzïka na pod″yome' [Chamber and choral music on the rise], Vecherniy Tbilisi (4 April 1972)

G. Orjonikidze: 'Gzebi da perspektivebi' [Ways and perspectives], Sabchota khelovneba (1978), no.9, pp.88–98

A. Tsulukidze: 'Gulitadi milotsva' [Hearty congratulation], Drosha (1980), no.1, pp.13–14

N. Moistsrapishvili: 'Master khorovoy muzïki' [A master of choral music], Muzïkal′naya zhizn′ (1982), no.12, p.7 only

LEAH DOLIDZE

Keck, Johannes [Keckius] (b Giengen an der Brenz, *c*1400; d Rome, 29 June 1450). German theologian and writer. He studied theology, philosophy and the liberal arts at the University of Vienna from 1422 to 1429, and as a Master of Arts lectured there in mathematics, philosophy and theory from 1429 to 1431. In 1434 he was at Munich, where he held a benefice at the Peterskirche, and in 1441 he studied at Basle, gaining a doctorate in theology. Here he taught for about a year and took part in the reform Council of Basle. In 1442 he joined the Benedictine Order at Tegernsee, a monastery well known at that time for its practice of the arts and sciences; there in that year Keck wrote his treatise Introductorium musicae (GerbertS, iii, 319–29), describing himself as professor of the arts and sacred theology. In 1450 he undertook a penitential pilgrimage to Rome, but died of the plague soon after his arrival.

Keck's treatise is a short work suitable either for school use or for self-instruction, and is in its elementary way both speculative and mathematical as it deals with the origins of music and with the arithmetical proportions of tones; in the preface he attempted a theological justification for the practice of music, yet the treatise itself, although written in a monastery, makes no attempt to teach such practical matters as psalm chanting and solmization. The first of its five chapters discusses the origins and classification of music, discounting the obscure explanation that its etymology derives from moys ('water'), and supporting the theory that it was derived from the Muses (musae). Thus he supported a long line of theorists who from Boethius onwards stated that music was invented by Pythagoras; with a further group of theorists stemming from Cassiodorus he classified music into three divisions: harmonica, rhythmica and metrica. The following four chapters deal briefly with the proportions of intervals, their graphic representation, consonances and dissonances, and the several species of semitones. Keck's other writings include tracts on the Council of Basle, sermons, commentaries on the Benedictine Rule and a grammar.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Hüschen)

M. Gerbert: De cantu et musica sacra, ii (St Blasien, 1774/R), 139, 193, 213

U. Chevalier: Répertoire des sources historiques du Moyen Age (Montbéliard, 1894–1903/R, 2/1905–7/R), 2710

G. Pietzsch: 'Zur Pflege der Musik an den deutschen Universitäten bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts', AMf, i (1936), 257–92; vi (1941), 23–56, esp. 37

N.C. Carpenter: Music in the Medieval and Renaissance Universities (Norman, OK, 1958/R), 102

See also THEORY, THEORISTS.

GORDON A. ANDERSON/R

Kecskeméti, István (b Budapest, 21 Dec 1920). Hungarian musicologist. He graduated as a pianist at the Liszt Academy (1943) and also studied at Budapest University (1938–44) for the doctorate in economics (1945). Later he studied composition with Hammerschlag at the National Conservatory of Budapest (1950–51) and musicology with Kodály, Szabolcsi, Bartha and Bárdos at the Budapest Academy (1951–6), where he graduated in 1957 with a dissertation entitled Mozart salzburgi zongoraversenyei ('Mozart's Salzburg piano concertos'). From 1957 to 1981 he worked as a librarian, and in 1966 succeeded Vécsey as head of the music division of the National Széchényi Library, Budapest, and as director of RISM in Hungary (from 1973).

Kecskeméti has discovered and edited autographs by Fux, Süssmayr, Schubert, Liszt and the Hungarian composer of the 'reform' period, Béni Egressy, and has prepared thematic catalogues of the Süssmayr and Dittersdorf manuscripts in the Hungarian National Library. He is the compiler of the thematic catalogue of the works and manuscripts of Kodály (forthcoming). His stylistic studies deal in particular with the music of Mozart, Chopin and Kodály. In 1960 he won second prize (no first prize was awarded) at the International Musicological Competition in Warsaw with a study entitled Volkstum und Europäertum in Chopins Mazurkas, and in 1977 he was awarded the Erkel prize.

WRITINGS

'Johann Joseph Fux ismeretlen zenei kézirata' [An unknown Fux manuscript], Az Országos Széchényi könyvtár évkönyve 1958, 238–46 [with Ger. summary]

'A századvég magyar zenéje a hetvenöt éves "Kiállitási Album" tükrében' [Hungarian music of the end of the century as seen in the 'Exhibition album' of 1885], Magyar zene, i/6 (1960–61), 157–68

'Beiträge zur Geschichte von Mozarts Requiem', SMH, i (1961), 147–60

'Claude Debussy, musicien français', RBM, xvi (1962), 117–49

'Süssmayr-Handschriften in der Nationalbibliothek Szechenyi, Budapest', SMH, ii (1962), 283–320; viii (1966), 297–377

'Unbekannte Eigenschrift der 18. Rhapsodie von Franz Liszt', SMH, iii (1962), 173–9

'Egy Bartók-Chopin-párhuzam' [A Bartók-Chopin parallel], Magyar zene, vii (1966), 141–5

'Musikhandschriften österreichischer Meister in der Ungarischen Nationalbibliothek', ÖMz, xxi (1966), 594–8

'Barockelemente in den langsamen Instrumentalsätzen Mozarts', MJb 1967, 182–92

Járdányi Pál (Budapest, 1967)

'A magyar nemzeti hangfelvételi gyüjtemény ügye' [Project of the Hungarian national sound archives], Az Országos Széchényi könyvtár évkönyve 1967, 359–64 [with Ger. summary]

'Kodály balladaköltészete' [The ballad poetry of Kodály], Magyar zene, viii (1967), 563–73; ix (1968), 3–4

'Bartók Béla Keszthelyen' [Bartók in Keszthely], Magyar zene, ix (1968), 301–8

'Eine wieder aufgetauchte Eigenschrift Schuberts', ÖMz, xxiii (1968), 70–74 [on Die Nacht D534]

'Opernelemente in den Klavierkonzerten Mozarts', MJb 1968–70, 111–18

'Egressy Béni eredeti hangjegykéziratai' [Autograph music manuscripts of Egressy], Szabolcsi Bence 70. születésnapjára, ed. F. Bonis (Budapest, 1969), 191–200 [summaries in Eng., Ger.]

'Neu entdeckte Schubert-Autographe', ÖMz, xxiv (1969), 564–8

'Die Eigenschrift der italienischen Fassung der "Hymne de l'enfant" von F. Liszt', SMH, xiii (1971), 333–45

'The Student Kodály's Stage Music', SMH, xiv (1972), 35–52

Zoltán Kodály ... eine Ausstellung zum 90. Geburtstag, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 7 Nov – 16 Dec 1972 (Vienna, 1972)

'Two Liszt Discoveries, 1: an Unknown Piano Piece; 2: an Unknown Song', MT, cxv (1974), 646–8; 743–4

'Die Dittersdorf-Handschriften in der Széchényi Nationalbibliothek, Budapest', Beiträge zur Musikdokumentation: Franz Grasberger zum 60. Geburtstag (Tutzing, 1975), 155–92

'An Early Bartók–Liszt Encounter', Bartók Studies, ed. T. Crow (Detroit, 1976), 79–83

'Kodály zeneszerzői műhelymunkája a "Sírfelirat" kimunkálásában' [Kodály's compositional workshop in the elaboration of his Epitaph op.11 no.4], Magyar zenetörténeti tanulmányok Zoltán Kodály, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1977), 43–50 [summaries in Eng., Ger.]

'Wiederkenhrende Erscheinungen uns äussere Parallelen der Musik Zoltán Kodálys', Kodály Conference: Budapest 1982, 57–88

'Kodály Zoltán, Marosszéki táncok: keletkezéstörténet, források, műhelymunka' [Kodály's Dances of Marosszék: origins, sources, workmanship], Magyar zene, xxv (1984), 333–75

A zeneszerző Kodály: kistanulmányok az életmű első felebő [Kodály the composer: brief studies on the early works] (Kecskemét, 1986; Eng. trans., 1986)
'Liturgical Elements in the Opera The Queen of Sheba by Karl Goldmark', Orbis musicae, x (1990–91), 229–40

EDITIONS

Johann Joseph Fux: Te Deum (1706), Sämtliche Werke, ii/1 (Graz, 1963)
Franz Xaver Süssmayr: Ouverture, Musica rinata, vi (Budapest, 1965); Das Namensfest, ibid, viii (Budapest, 1965)
F. Schubert: Eine altschottische Ballade, D923 (Budapest, 1971) [previously unknown third version, with facs. of autograph]

JOHN S. WEISSMANN/R

Kedusha (Heb.: 'sanctification'). See QEDDUSHAH.

Kee, Piet(er William) (b Zaandam, 30 Aug 1927). Dutch organist. After receiving his first lessons from his father, the organist and composer Cor Kee (1900–97), he studied organ (with Anthon van der Horst), piano and composition at the Amsterdam Conservatory. He graduated in 1948 and obtained the prix d'excellence in 1953; he also won first prize three times at the Haarlem International Improvisation Competition. From 1952 until 1987 he was organist of the Laurenskerk in Alkmaar, and from 1956 until 1989 city organist on the famous Müller organ of the St Bavo, Haarlem. He also taught many eminent organists at the Muzieklyceum and the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam (1954–1988), and has been a tutor at the International Summer Academy for organists in Haarlem. He has given international masterclasses and has served on the jury of many festivals.

Kee has made numerous recordings, notably a Bach series on different European organs. His favoured repertory is the north European Baroque; but he also plays much 20th-century organ music. He has composed organ works, songs and a suite for carillon, and four remarkable works for organ in combination with other instruments: Music and Space for two organs and five brass instruments (1969), Confrontation for church organ and three street organs (1979), Integration for church organ, three barrel organs, flageolet, mechanical birds and mixed choir (1980) and Network for two organs, electronic keyboard, alto saxophone and soprano recorder (1996). He was created a Knight of Orange-Nassau in 1972 and an honorary FRCO in 1987.

GERT OOST

Keeble, John (b Chichester, *c*1711; d London, 24 Dec 1786). English organist, theorist and composer. Trained as a choirboy at Chichester Cathedral under Thomas Kelway, he went to London, where he studied composition and Greek with Pepusch. He was appointed organist at Ranelagh Gardens in 1742, and in April 1744 he became assistant organist to Thomas Roseingrave at St George's, Hanover Square, sharing Roseingrave's salary until the latter retired to Ireland in the early 1750s. He was succeeded at Ranelagh by Butler, and as organist of St George's by Jacob Kirkman. His pupils included John Burton and Lord Fitzwilliam (studies by the latter, dated 1762, are in GB-Cfm).

His four volumes of Select Pieces for the Organ (London, 1777–*c*1780) are in reality collections of multi-movement voluntaries that demonstrate his traditional concept of formal design. In his preface he refers to the 'Obligato stile of writing' of these pieces, drawing particular attention to the use of 'Fuges, Inversions, Canons, Double Descants and the like'. Keeble carefully marked the appearance of each subject to assist comprehension, and emphasized the cumulative effect of contrapuntal ingenuity. Although his stylistic approach was less commonly adopted by younger composers of voluntaries of the time, he strongly endorsed it as being 'proper for the Church'. He also composed 25 of a set of 40 Interludes to be Played between the verses of the Psalms (London, *c*1787), the remainder being contributed by Kirkman. His treatise, The Theory of Harmonics, or an Illustration of the Grecian Harmonics (London, 1784), demonstrates the deep impression made by his studies with Pepusch and continues in the philosophical tradition of writings by William Jackson (A Preliminary Discourse to a Scheme Demonstrating the Perfection and Harmony of Sounds, London, 1726), Robert Smith (iii) (1748), Trydell (1766) and William Boyce.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH
R. Andrews: 'Viscount Fitzwilliam: Musical Antiquarian', Gainsborough, English Music and the Fitzwilliam (Cambridge, 1977), 7–10
T. McGeary: 'Music Literature', The Eighteenth Century, ed. H. Diack Johnstone and R. Fiske (Oxford, 1990), 397–421

STODDARD LINCOLN/GERALD GIFFORD

Keel, Howard [Leek, Harold Clifford] (b Gillespie, IL, 13 April 1917). American singer and actor. Known primarily for his starring roles in MGM musicals from the 1950s, Keel began his career as a singer on Broadway and in the West End. His Broadway début was as Billy Bigelow in Carousel, succeeding John Raitt in the role. He subsequently played Curly McLain in Oklahoma! in both New York and London. Other stage roles included Clint Maroon in Saratoga and David Jordan in No Strings. His film début was in the English motion picture The Small Voice (1948), and it was his performance in Annie Get Your Gun (1950) which established his career in Hollywood. Subsequent credits included Pagan Love Song (1950), Show Boat (1951), Lovely to Look At (1952), Calamity Jane (1953), Kiss Me, Kate (1953), Deep in My Heart (1954), Rose-Marie (1954), Seven Brides for Seven Brothers (1954), Jupiter's Darling (1955) and Kismet (1955).

Keel's robust and intensely masculine baritone necessitated his performing strong lead characters, and he was known for his excellent technique, wide range and commanding tone quality. He has continued to give concerts into the 1990s, particularly in the UK, where he has remained especially popular.

WILLIAM A. EVERETT, LEE SNOOK

Keeley, Mary Anne. See GOWARD, MARY ANNE.

Keen (from Irish caoine: 'weeping'). A lamentation sung for the dead. See CAOINE; LAMENT, §I and SCOTLAND, §II.

Keene, Christopher (b Berkeley, 21 Dec 1946; d New York, 8 Oct 1995). American conductor. He studied the piano and the cello, conducted several ensembles at high school and made his opera début in a 1965 production of Britten's Rape of Lucretia at Berkeley. In 1966 he served as assistant conductor at the San Francisco Opera, and a year later held the same position in San Diego. At the Spoleto Festival in 1968 he conducted, at Menotti's invitation, The Saint of Bleecker Street. In 1969 he received the first Julius Rudel Award, and was appointed music director to the American Ballet Company, a position he held for one year. From 1971 to 1976 Keene served in various positions at Spoleto, and from 1977 to 1980 was music director of Spoleto USA. In this period Keene gained his early reputation as a champion of new and American music. He directed the Syracuse SO (1975–84), the New York Artpark summer festival (1978–89), and founded and conducted the Long Island PO (1979–90). As guest conductor, Keene appeared at the Metropolitan Opera, Covent Garden, the Deutsche Oper in Berlin, the Lyric Opera of Chicago, and the Vienna Volksoper. He also conducted the Chicago SO and the New York PO. Keene's greatest influence was at the New York City Opera. After his 1970 début there in Ginastera's Don Rodrigo, he conducted some 300 performances of more than 50 operas. Early success led to his appointment as music director of New York City Opera (1982–6), and subsequently as general director (1989–95). His tenure was riddled with difficulties, including problems with finance, a musicians' strike, administrative conflicts and Keene's own battles with alcoholism and AIDS. He was a steadfast advocate for the music of Menotti, Henze, Mayuzumi, Hindemith, Reimann, Pasatieri, Sessions, Floyd, Keith Jarrett, Corigliano, Diamond and Glass, and conducted numerous premières. However, some of this repertory failed to attract audiences, and in 1993 the NYCO board relieved Keene of his administrative duties. Nevertheless, he remained a constant supporter of contemporary music. Keene was also a composer and librettist, and his considerable library is housed at Indiana University.

CHARLES BARBER, JOSÉ BOWEN

Keene, Stephen (b ?Sydenham, Oxon, *c*1640; d after 1719). English virginal, spinet and harpsichord maker. He was apprenticed from 1662 to the virginal maker Gabriel Townsend for seven years, and became a freeman of the Joiner's Company (and, in 1704–5, its Master). Keene was obviously an able teacher of his craft, for at least three of his apprentices, Edward Blunt (*b c*1678; d before Dec 1718), Charles Brackley (*b c*1688) and Thomas Barton (b 1685; d before 1736), pursued successful careers as makers of spinets, virginals or harpsichords, while both Brackley and Blunt were taken into partnership with Keene.

Keene's surviving instruments include two fine English virginals, one dated 1668 and the other 1675, both showing Townsend's influence. In addition, nearly 30 bentside spinets by Keene have survived; those with dates on the nameboard span the years 1685 to 1711. These are all superficially similar: Keene's spinets have a short octave compass of G′/B′–d‴, although, a few have a broken octave with the C♯ and D♯ split. Many have a distinctive marquetried panel above the keyboard bearing figures of birds and flowers, while the keyboards have black naturals (variously reported as being made from snakewood or ebony) with embossed paper or vellum keyfronts, and ivory sharps.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BoalchM

A.J. Hipkins: Musical Instruments, Historic, Rare and Unique (London, 1885, 3/1945)

CHARLES MOULD

Keenlyside, Simon (b London, 3 Aug 1959). English baritone. He studied with John Cameron at the RNCM, where he sang Lescaut in Manon (1987). His professional stage début was as Almaviva in 1988 at Hamburg. He then moved to Scottish Opera (1988–94), where he sang Billy Budd, Rossini's Figaro, Marcello, Danilo (Die lustige Witwe), Belcore and Papageno, the last-named hailed as a virtuoso performance. He made his Covent Garden début, as Silvio, in 1989, followed by Guglielmo, which was also the role of his admired Glyndebourne début in 1995. His début at La Scala in 1995 was Papageno (with Muti), and he returned to the house for Mozart's Count Almaviva and Ubalde (Gluck's Armide) in 1999. He made his first Metropolitan appearance, as Belcore, in 1996, the year in which he scored a notable success as Thomas's Hamlet at Geneva, catching all the role's inwardness. This was followed in 1997 by an ardent Pelléas at San Francisco and a mercurial Don Giovanni at Ferrara with Abbado. Keenlyside's interpretation of the title part in Monteverdi's Orfeo, in which he toured with René Jacobs in 1998–9, was notable for its single-minded intensity; and he revealed his comic gifts as Rossini's Figaro at the Berlin Staatsoper, and as Dandini at the Paris Opéra (both 1998), where he also sang Yeletsky in 1999. His operatic recordings include Don Giovanni (with Abbado) and Ned Keene (Peter Grimes). He is also an accomplished interpreter of lieder (as revealed on recordings of Schubert and Schumann) and mélodies, and he has regularly performed the song cycles of Mahler in concert. All his performances are distinguished by his mellow yet incisive tone and high intelligence as an interpreter. (R. Milnes: 'Simon Keenlyside', Opera, xlviii (1997), 1284–90)

ALAN BLYTH

Kehl, Johann Balthasar (b Coburg, 24 Aug 1725; d Bayreuth, 7 April 1778). German composer. He attended the Ratsschule in Coburg (1733–41), and in 1742 moved to Bayreuth, where he studied with the Hofkapellmeister Johann Pfeiffer and was engaged as a cellist by the court. Through the court's advanced musical culture he became acquainted with the most recent developments in north German, Italian and French music, and began his own efforts in composition – predominantly ballets and concertante works for various solo instruments, now almost all lost. In 1762 he was appointed organist at the Neustädter Kirche, Erlangen, where he taught the composers J.W. Stadler and J.P. Schulthesius and established a firm reputation as a composer of large-scale sacred works, notably with Die Pillgrimme auf Golgatha. In Hiller's opinion, he was one of the best and most accomplished harpsichordists of his time, and this period also saw the appearance in Nuremberg of most of his keyboard works. He returned to Bayreuth in 1774 as Stadtkantor. He went blind towards the end of his life.

Kehl is best known for his chorale settings of 1764, which combine songlike writing of the empfindsamer Stil with cantus firmus devices. These and other keyboard works, none of which reflects the influence of the piano, unite a wide array of national styles and reveal a lesser master of the galant idiom.

WORKS

printed works published in Nuremberg

Vocal: Die Pillgrimme auf Golgatha (Passion cant., F.W. Zachariä, perf. Lübeck, 1765, B-Bc, D-Bsb, LÜh; Die Hirten bey der Krippe von Bethlehem (orat, K.W. Ramler), by 1766, lost, see Hiller; Du singst o Nachtigall (J.F. von Cronegk), aria, lute acc., As; aria, 1v, kbd, Ngm; several cant. cycles, lost

Inst: Sammlung einiger variirenden Choräle, i–iv (1764); Sonata prima, hpd, vn (1764); 4 hpd sonatas in J.U. Haffner: Oeuvres mêlées, ix–xii (1764–5); Sonata, hpd (after 1773); Hpd Conc., D-Bsb; Andantine and variations, Fantasie, hpd, Bsb; Sonata, hpd, PL-WRu; ballets, other works, lost, mentioned in Hiller

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; NDB (F. Krautwurst)

J.A. Hiller, ed.: Wöchentliche Nachrichten und Anmerkungen die Musik betreffend, i (Leipzig, 1766/R)

G. Schmidt: 'Johann Balthasar Kehl und Johann Wilhelm Stadler', Archiv für Geschichte von Oberfranken, xlvi (1966), 183–240

M. Bauer: 'Johann Balthasar Kehls Passionskantate "Die Pillgrimme auf Golgatha": eine neuerschlossene Quelle zur Musikgeschichte der Frühklassik in Franken', Musik in Bayern, no.54 (1997), 47–78

FRANZ KRAUTWURST

Kehraus (Ger.: 'sweeping out'). The traditional term for the last dance at balls in German-speaking countries; the dance usually took place after midnight, and with it the dancers swept out of the ballroom. The melody associated with it was the 17th-century Grossvater-Tanz (ex.1).

Schumann made allusions to it in the closing pages of both Papillons op.2 and Carnaval op.9; in the latter it symbolizes the sweeping out of the Philistines by Schumann's Davidsbündler.

MICHAEL TILMOUTH

Kehrreim (Ger.). See REFRAIN.

Keifferer, Christian (b Dillingen, *c*1575; d Weissenau, nr Ravensburg, 1635). German composer and organist. Two of his brothers, the university organist Johann Egolph and Leonardus, composer at the monastery in Ursberg, were educated at Dillingen University. He may be the third Keifferer who matriculated there, on 21 May 1587, but this is not certain, since his baptismal name is not given – nor is it otherwise known: he adopted the name Christian only when he became a priest. About 1595 he took his vows and he probably entered the Premonstratensian abbey at Weissenau around this time; here he carried out the duties of both priest and organist. He was ordained priest before 1601. The standard of music at the abbey must have been rewarding to him, for not only did he have a large new organ at his disposal but composers from outside, among them Jacob Reiner and Michael Kraf, were encouraged to dedicate collections of vocal music to the abbey. He was made sub-prior in 1616 and remained at the abbey, where he also assumed other functions, until his death from plague.

Keifferer wrote only sacred music: to him all other music was nothing more than 'a game with trifles'. Only two collections survive complete: the Parvulus flosculus (1611) contributes to the tricinium tradition; his Sertum (1613) contains 54 hymns following the seasons of the church's year and is an important contribution to the German hymn literature of the early 17th century. Most are fairly short, homophonic pieces with sparse imitation in a simple style which mirrors the prevailing attitude of the Counter-Reformation towards the function of music. The final Magnificat is Keifferer's first known composition with continuo. The motets of 1618 have a continuo part throughout. Although this part plays no more than a supporting role in the six-part pieces, it is clearly independent in the final three-part motet, which, for this reason and through its use of short, contrasting motifs, is one of the most forward-looking of Keifferer's works. In general his primary aim appears to have been to articulate the text as clearly as possible, and to this end he sometimes sacrificed overall musical rhythmic variety and dramatic interpretation.

WORKS

Parvulus flosculus, 3vv (Dillingen, 1610), inc.
Parvulus flosculus ... ultima pars, 3vv (Dillingen, 1611)
Odae soporiferae, 4vv (Dillingen, 1612)
Sertum, tum hybernis, 4, 5, 8vv (Dillingen, 1613), incl. Mag
Flores musici, 6vv, bc, 1618[8a], 1 motet also in 1622[2] and 1672[2]
Flores musicales, 3vv, bc (Ingolstadt, 1624), inc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Goovaerts: Ecrivains, artistes et savants de l'ordre de Prémontré: dictionnaire bio-bibliographique, i (Brussels, 1899–1902/R)

U. Höflacher: 'P. Christian Keifferer und die Musikpflege im Kloster Weissenau um 1600', 850 Jahre Prämonstratenserabtei Weissenau 1145–1995 (Sigmaringen, 1995), 507–23

A. LINDSEY KIRWAN/STEPHAN HÖRNER

Keil, Alfredo (b Lisbon, 3 July 1850; d Hamburg, 4 Oct 1907). Portuguese composer and painter of German descent. He was educated as a gentleman of extremely broad culture. He was widely travelled, with a knowledge of six languages and an unusual range of artistic interests and talents, including poetry and archaeology, but principally painting and music, in both of which he became a successful professional. He first studied music in Lisbon and in 1868 went to Nuremberg, where he studied painting with Kremling and music with Kaulbach. In 1870, because of the war, he returned to Portugal and, a few years later, began to exhibit his paintings, winning medals and awards at various expositions. His published compositions were at first limited to light music, dances and songs, but in 1883 he produced a one-act comic opera, Susana, and this initiated a series of weightier works: cantatas, a symphonic poem and, in 1888, his first full-scale opera, Donna Bianca (Lisbon, S Carlos). This highly successful work, which had 30 performances and won for its composer the Order of Santiago, was followed by Irene (1893, Turin) and Serrana (1899, S Carlos). During this time he continued to paint and to indulge his interest in the other arts. He amassed important collections, including one of some 400 antique musical instruments (now in the Museu da Música, Lisbon), and cultivated, with more or less success, a wide range of eminent men in the arts, including, in music, Gounod, Verdi, Massenet, Ambroise Thomas, Puccini, Mascagni and Leoncavallo.

Consciously nationalist, Keil chose Portuguese subjects for all three of his major operas although they were all originally performed in Italian. In the dedication to Massanet of the vocal score of Serrana the composer states that it is the first opera to be printed with a Portugese text, but the score also includes the Italian text. Serrana was also seen by critics as the most successful of his attempts, and the most successful attempt of any composer up to that time, to create a Portuguese musical idiom, and for these reasons he is usually granted the position of founder of Portuguese national opera.

Keil's nationalism is also evident in some of his smaller works, such as the Marcha de Gualdim Pais, written for a commemoration at Thomar of this hero of medieval Portugal in 1895, and his hymns for the 500th anniversary of the birth of Henry the Navigator in 1894 and, especially, A Portugueza. This piece, written during the patriotic ferment resulting from Portugal's diplomatic and military clash with Great Britain in 1890, was forbidden to be sung in public after the uprising of 1891 and became the national anthem of the new republic in 1911.

WORKS

STAGE

Susana (ópera cómica, 1, H. Lopes de Mendonça), Lisbon, Trindade, 1883

Donna Bianca (drama lírico, prol, 4, C. Fereal, after A. Garrett: Dona Branca), Lisbon, S Carlos, 10 March 1888; vs (Paris, 1889)

Irene (leggenda mistica/dramma lirico, 4, Fereal, after the popular legend Santa Iria), Turin, Regio, 22 March 1893; vs (Leipzig, 1895)

Serrana (drama lírico, 3, Lopes de Mendonça, after C. Castelo Branco: Como ela amava), Lisbon, S Carlos, 13 March 1899; P-Lt, vs (Leipzig, 1906)

A morte (incid music, Lopes de Mendonça), 2 nos., incl. Marcha fúnebre

Unfinished ops: A India; Simão o Ruivo

OTHER WORKS

Vocal: Patria (cant., M.R. Chiappe Cadet), perf. 1884; As orientais (cant., C. Fereal), perf. 1886; Poema da primavera (cant.), perf. 1930; A Portugueza (H. Lopes de Mendonça), hymn (Lisbon, 1890); Hino do Infante D. Henrique (Oporto, 1893); numerous songs, incl. the collections 12 mélodies (Lisbon, 1881), [12] Impressions poétiques (Lisbon, 1885); 6 Songs (R.F.A. Sully-Prudhomme, J. de Saint-Germain) (Paris, 1886); Manuelinas (J. de Castilho), 4 songs (Lisbon, n.d.)

Inst: 3 orch suites; Una caçada na côrte, sym. poem, after C. Dantas, perf. 1885; Marcha de Gualdim Pais, 1895 (Lisbon, 1896); numerous polkas, waltzes, other pieces, pf

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B.S. Ribeiro Arthur: Artes e artistas contemporâneos, ii (Lisbon, 1898)

'Alfredo Keil', Diccionario bibliographico portuguez, ed. I.F. da Silva and P.V. de Brito Aranha, xx (Lisbon, 1911/R), 332ff

M. Lambertini: 'Portugal', EMDC, I/iv (1920), 2401–69, esp. 2453

'Keil, Alfredo', Grande enciclopédia portuguesa e brasileira (Lisbon and Rio de Janeiro, 1936–60) [with full list of works]

R.V. Nery and P.F. Castro: Historia da música (Lisbon, 1991)

DENNIS LIBBY, LUISA CYMBRON

Keil, Charles (b Norwalk, CT, 12 Aug 1939). American ethnomusicologist. He was educated in American studies at Yale University (BA 1961) and in anthropology at the University of Chicago (MA 1964, PhD 1979 with a dissertation on the Tiv song) with Leonard Meyer, David Schneide and Clifford Geertz. He became affiliated with the State University of New York, Buffalo in 1968 and was made professor in 1983. He has held visiting appointments at Trent University, ON (1982, 1983) and at the University of Natal (1993) and has received numerous grants, including a Guggenheim fellowship (1979–80) and a Rockefeller Foundation Research Grant (1975). In 1990 he became president of Musicians United for Superior Education and has served on the board of directors. The main areas of his work have been African-American blues, Polish-American polka music in everyday life, and the creation of grooves in all musics of the world, with a focus on African and African diaspora musics.

WRITINGS

Urban Blues (Chicago, 1966/R)

Tiv Song: the Sociology of Art in a Classless Society (diss., U. of Chicago, 1979; Chicago, 1979/R)

'Slovenian Style in Milwaukee', Folk Music and Modern Sound: University, MS, 1982, 32–59

'The Dyna-Tones: a Buffalo Polka Bank in Performance, in Rehearsal and on Record', New York Folklore, xix/3–4 (1984), 117–34

'Paideia con Salsa: Ancient Greek Music Education for Active Citizenship and the Role of Latin Dance-Music in our Schools', Becoming Human through Music: Middletown, CT, 1984 (Middletown, CT, and Reston, VA, 1985), 87–94

'People's Music Comparatively: Style and Stereotype, Class and Hegemony', Dialectical Anthropolog, x (1985), 119–30

'Sociomusicology: a Participatory Approach', Echology, ii (1988), 125–32

'Culture, Music and Collaborative Learning', Dialectical Anthropology: Essays in Honor of Stanley Diamond, ed. C.W. Gailey (Gainesville, FL, 1992), 327–33 with A. Keil and R. Blau: Polka Happiness (Philadelphia, 1992)

ed., with D. Cavicchi and S. Crafts: My Music (Hanover, NH, 1993)

'Ritual Happiness: Music and Human Rites', Symposium on Ethnomusicology XI: Durban 1993, 66–73

with S. Feld: Music Grooves: Essays and Dialogues (Chicago, 1994)

'The Theory of Participatory Discrepancies: a Progress Report', EthM, xxxix (1995), 1–19

'Applied Sociomusicology and Performance Studies', EthM, xlii (1998), 303–12

GREGORY F. BARZ

Keilberth, Joseph (b Karlsruhe, 19 April 1908; d Munich, 20 July 1968). German conductor. He studied at Karlsruhe and joined the Staatstheater there in 1925 as a répétiteur, becoming general music director ten years later. He was appointed chief conductor of the German PO, Prague, in 1940; musical director of the Dresden Staatsoper in 1945; chief conductor of the Hamburg PO in 1950; and, from 1951, conductor at the Bayerische Staatsoper, Munich. As well as remaining closely associated with the Bamberg SO (successor to the German PO, Prague), he was a frequent guest conductor with the Berlin PO and the Cologne Radio SO. His career reached its first peak in 1952 when he made his début at Bayreuth and appeared at the Edinburgh Festival with the Hamburg Staatsoper (in Der Freischütz and Der Rosenkavalier). At Bayreuth he conducted the Ring and other operas in successive years up to 1956, and he appeared regularly at the Salzburg and Lucerne festivals. In 1959 he succeeded Fricsay as general music director of the Bayerische Staatsoper, Munich, where he played a major part in the artistic direction of the rebuilt National Theatre. He died after collapsing during a performance of Tristan und Isolde (as had his Munich predecessor, Felix Mottl, in 1911).

Keilberth was representative of German musical traditions in his direct, dynamic and solidly robust approach, and was highly regarded as an interpreter of Richard Strauss, Pfitzner, Reger and Hindemith. His great understanding of style and purpose was heard to notable effect in such works as Pfitzner's Palestrina and Von deutscher Seele, Strauss's Arabella and Intermezzo, Bruckner's symphonies and Hindemith's Mathis der Maler. Skilled and sympathetic in the direction of singers, he gave some fine performances of Mozart and Wagner operas, and among his numerous records were Der Freischütz and the first complete recording of Hindemith's Cardillac.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Freyse: 'Joseph Keilberth: ein Schallplatten-Porträt', NZM, Jg.124 (1963), 435–9

J. Keilberth: 'Begegnungen mit Pfitzner und seinem Werk', Mitteilungen der Pfitzner-Gesellschaft, xviii (1967), 1–9
R. Hartmann: 'Joseph Keilberth', Opera, xix (1968), 799–802
W.-E. von Lewinski: Joseph Keilberth (Berlin, 1968)

GERHARD BRUNNER

Keillor, Elaine (Frances) (b London, ON, 2 Sept 1939). Canadian musicologist and pianist. She studied the piano and was the youngest student ever to graduate from the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto; she later took the doctorate in musicology at the University of Toronto with a dissertation on the keyboard music of the 18th-century composer Honauer. Her interest then turned to ethnomusicology and Canadian music. She did fieldwork and published articles on the Amerindian peoples of the Northwest Territories, and conducted research on various aspects of Canadian musical life in the 19th and 20th centuries. She has edited four volumes of music (two piano, two orchestral) for the Canadian Musical Heritage Society, of which she was a founding member and director (from 1989); she has also been a council member of the AMS (1992–6) and the Society for Ethnomusicology (1995–8). She has given the premières of many new works by Canadian composers such as Weinzweig, on whom she wrote a major study. Since 1977 she has taught at Carleton University, where she is responsible for Canadian music studies. An active performer as well as a respected scholar, Keillor has gained a place as an important spokesperson for the research and performance of Canadian music.

WRITINGS

Leortzi Honauer (1737–ca. 1790) and the Development of Solo and Ensemble Keyboard Music (diss., U. of Toronto, 1976)
'Les tambours des Athapascans du nord', Recherches amérindiennes au Québec, xv/4 (1985–6), 43–52
'The Role of Youth in the Continuation of Dogrib Musical Traditions', YTM, xviii (1986), 61–75
'Musical Activity in Canada's New Capital City in the 1870s', Musical Canada: Words and Music Honouring Helmut Kallman, ed. J. Beckwith and F.A. Hall (Toronto, 1988), 115–33
'La naissance d'un genre musical nouveau, fusion du traditionnel et du "country"', Recherches amérindiennes au Québec, xviii/4 (1988–9), 65–74
'Fighting the Sounds of Canada's Musical Past', FAM, xli (1994), 20–32
John Weinzweig and his Music: the Radical Romantic (Metuchen, NJ, 1994)
ed.: Music for Orchestra, ii–iii (Ottawa, 1994–5)
'The Emergence of Post-Colonial Musical Expressions of Aboriginal Peoples within Canada', Cultural Studies, ix (1995), 106–24
'Indigenous Music as a Compositional Source: Parallels and Contrasts in Canadian and American Music', Taking a Stand: Essays in Honour of John Beckwith, ed. T.J. McGee (Toronto, 1995), 185–218
'Auf Kanadischer Welle: the Establishment of the Germanic Musical Canon in Canada', Music in Canada, ed. G. Bimberg (Bochum, 1997), 49–76
'The Canadian Soundscape', Profiles in Canada, ed. K.G. Pryke and W.C. Soderland (Toronto, 1998), 339–68

GORDON E. SMITH

Keim (Ger.: 'germ', 'nucleus'). A term used by Arnold Schering and others to denote an underlying thematic idea. See ANALYSIS, §II, 4.

Kein, Arnold. See CAEN, ARNOLD.

Keinspeck [Künspeck, Reinspeck], Michael (b Nuremberg, *c*1470). German theorist. About 1495 he was living in Basle and teaching music at the university. He described his studies in music in Alsace-Lorraine in the prologue of his small treatise Lilium musicae planae (Basle, 1496). It was one of the earliest books containing music printed from woodblocks. It is a manual of practical instruction in Gregorian chant for priests and students, and, as such, does not discuss the philosophical and theoretical bases of the subject. Nevertheless he described himself as a 'Musicus Alexandrinus' and linked himself with the Alexandrian interpreters of the Greek classics. His treatment of 'musica choralis' is based on the writings of Hugo Spechtshart of Reutlingen (1488).

Keinspeck rejected the Guidonian hand as a teaching method, but at the same time he favoured the use of the scala which combined the use of pitch names ('claves') and solmization syllables ('voces'). The treatise, much used at Basle University, was disseminated further by editions in Ulm (1497), Augsburg (1498, 1500) and Strasbourg (1506). The last edition was published by Jean Adelphus Muling, a young doctor who called himself a pupil of Keinspeck. Muling added another preface and a description of the theory of Gregorian modes of Jacob Twinger of Königshofen.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Ammel: Michael Keinspeck und sein Musiktraktat 'Lilium musicae planae' Basel 1496 (Marburg, 1970)
W. Werbeck: Studien zur deutschen Tonartenlehre in der ersten Hälfte des 16. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1989)

KLAUS WOLFGANG NIEMÖLLER

Keipfer, Georges-Adam. See GOEPFERT, GEORGES-ADAM.

Keirleber, Johann Georg. See KEYRLEBER, JOHANN GEORG.

Keiser, Reinhard [Cesare, Rinardo] (b Teuchern, nr Weissenfels, 10 or 11 Jan 1674 [bap. 12 Jan]; d Hamburg, 12 Sept 1739). German composer. He was the foremost composer of German Baroque opera.

1. LIFE. Keiser was the son of Gottfried Keiser (d before 1732), an organist and composer, and Agnesa Dorothea von Etzdorff (1657–1732), who had married only four months before his birth. The elder Keiser seems to have lost or given up his position as organist at Teuchern in 1674 or 1675 and departed, leaving his wife and two sons behind. On 13 July 1685 Keiser enrolled at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, for seven years, and it was there presumably that he received his principal musical education, studying under Johann Schelle and perhaps Johann Kuhnau. Mattheson observed, however, that he owed his composing skill almost entirely to natural ability and the study of the best Italian music.

After leaving the Thomasschule, Keiser probably soon made his way to Brunswick, where the court opera was flourishing under the leadership of Johann Kusser; by 1694 he had obtained an appointment as 'Cammer-Componist'. His opera Procris und Cephalus, on a text by the court poet F.C. Bressand, was performed in Brunswick that year, while another opera, Basilius, was done in Hamburg, perhaps at the invitation of Kusser, by then musical director of the Theater am Gänsemarkt. Between 1695 and 1698 Keiser produced five more operas for the Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel court, all with Bressand, but in 1696 or 1697 he moved to Hamburg as Kusser's successor at the Opera. There he found one of his most sympathetic literary collaborators in C.H. Postel, with whom he wrote eight operas, including Adonis (1697), Janus (1698) and the lost Iphigenia (1699).

Beginning in 1703 Keiser also tried his hand at managing the opera house, in partnership with a literary man named Drüsicke. According to Mattheson their administration got off to a good start but was soon beset by financial difficulties, at least partly precipitated by riotous living by Keiser and his friends. In spring 1704 the theatre was temporarily closed, and Keiser left briefly for Weissenfels, where he gave the first performance of his Almira, originally intended for Hamburg. Drüsicke apparently passed on the Almira libretto to the youthful Handel, a member of the opera orchestra, who scored a great success with his own setting in January 1705, leading to strained relations between the two composers that no doubt contributed to Handel's decision shortly afterwards to leave for Italy. Octavia (1705), Keiser's first opera after returning from Weissenfels, inaugurated an important series of eight historical dramas with librettos by Barthold Feind. Following the final collapse of his administration in 1707, Keiser appears to have absented himself from the opera house for more than a year, passing much of his time visiting the estates of noble friends. He may not have participated in the highly successful première of Der Carneval von Venedig in summer 1707, and he composed no new work for 1708. Whatever rift may have existed between him and the new director, J.H. Sauerbrey, seems to have been healed by 1709, and his dominance over the Hamburg repertory became more complete than ever. By the time Sauerbrey's long regime ended in bankruptcy in 1718, Keiser had composed more than 40 operas for the Gänsemarkt theatre.

Sauerbrey was succeeded as director by J.G. Gumprecht, a member of the Schott family that owned the building, who undertook to reverse the company's declining fortunes. For reasons that can only be surmised, Keiser was not retained as musical director. Instead he sought unsuccessfully to obtain a position elsewhere as court Kapellmeister, visiting Gotha and Eisenach in June 1718 and lingering long (at least from April 1719 to November 1720) in Stuttgart in an effort to unseat the incumbent, Giuseppe Brescianello. In 1721 he may have conducted a performance of Tomyris in Durlach before returning to Hamburg, where his arrival was celebrated on 9 August with a performance of his oratorio Der siegende David. With the formation of a troupe of Hamburg musicians to provide operas for the Danish court Keiser saw another opportunity for a permanent position. Beginning in December 1721 he composed or revised seven operas for Copenhagen, but he was rewarded only with the empty title of Royal Danish Kapellmeister and lost six months' salary when the impresario, Johann Kayser, absconded in March 1723.

Meanwhile, perhaps as a result of the replacement of Gumprecht as director in May 1722, Keiser again began composing for the Hamburg Opera, presenting Ariadne in November 1722 and a much revised Carneval von Venedig in February 1723. Though Telemann was now musical director, Keiser soon regained much of his former prominence. In 1725 and 1726, while Telemann composed relatively little for that theatre, Keiser turned out five major new works, two revised versions, and parts of two intermezzos. The situation changed dramatically in 1727, however, as the opera house passed through one of its periodic crises. Thenceforth it was Telemann who composed most of the new operas, and Keiser seems to have withdrawn entirely until the première of his Lucius Verus in October 1728; he may well have left the city at that time, for when his Masagniello and Nebucadnezar were revised for revivals in 1727 and July 1728 respectively the new music was supplied by Telemann. Keiser's daughter Sophia (1712–68) sang at the Hamburg Opera during this period.

On 2 December 1728 Keiser succeeded Mattheson as Kantor of Hamburg Cathedral, an important post which nonetheless brought him meagre remuneration. He never again composed a wholly new opera, though he did revise Croesus in 1730, provide German recitatives for Handel's Partenope in 1733, and put together the pasticcio Circe in 1734. His diminished productivity probably had less to do with the demands of his ecclesiastical duties than with the increasingly sorry state of the Hamburg Opera, which finally closed its doors in 1738. After the death of his wife in 1735, he 'found reason' (in Mattheson's words) 'to remain completely in retirement' until his own death four years later.

2. Works. Although he composed in a variety of genres Keiser was always primarily an opera composer. Claims that he wrote well over a hundred operas (which he himself fostered) are certainly exaggerated, but he can be shown to have composed at least 66, several of which he drastically revised during his final Hamburg period. Less than a third of his dramatic music has survived, but this includes largely complete scores of 19 operas and substantial portions of several others.

The subject matter of Keiser's opera librettos is extremely diverse. In addition to works with the usual mythological, historical (see illustration) and pastoral plots there are two biblical operas (Salomon and Nebucadnezar), a double opera dealing with two famous Hamburg pirates (Störtebecker und Jödge Michaels), and a drama built around a revolution that had taken place less than 60 years earlier (Masagniello). Many of the operas have comic characters, and in 1707 a new form of comic opera was inaugurated with Der Carneval von Venedig, an adaptation of a comédie lyrique (originally set by Campra) with some scenes in Plattdeutsch; it led eventually to three sequels built around popular German festivals, Die Leipziger Messe, Der Hamburger Jahr-Marckt and Die Hamburger Schlacht-Zeit. The last two works belong to a group of five comic operas or intermezzos dating from 1725–6, part of a larger wave of comedy at the Hamburg Opera, for which Telemann seems to have been largely responsible. In 1703, apparently at Keiser's instigation, 11 Italian aria texts were introduced into the libretto of Claudius, probably to counter competition from foreign theatrical players. The novelty proved immensely popular, and thereafter most Hamburg operas contained some numbers in Italian.

Central to Keiser's approach to opera was an intense concern for the relationship between music and text. He gave the fullest statement of his views (which appear to have coincided closely with those of his friends Mattheson and Feind) in the prefaces to two vocal collections, Componimenti musicali (1706) and Divertimenti serenissimi (1713). The chief aim of music, he held, was the expression of the emotions (Affecten) contained in a poetic text, which in the case of opera meant not merely abstract states of feeling but the actual passions of the characters, 'after true Nature, with its constantly changing conditions' (Divertimenti serenissimi). As a musical dramatist he displayed great versatility, dealing equally well with comedy and pathos and with amorous and martial sentiments. He had a special affinity for suffering heroines, such as Agrippina (Janus), Octavia, Marianne (Masagniello) and Penelope (Ulysses), and was particularly responsive to images of nature, which inspired some of his most splendid arias, including 'Kühle Winde' in Tomyris, 'Ihr sanften Winde' in Ulysses and 'Klarer Spiegel' in Cupido. He took unusual care over characterization, an interest he shared with Feind. His depiction of the overbearing and unstable revolutionary Masagniello shows what original figures he was capable of creating when provided with an adequate literary foundation. In addition, Keiser seems to have attempted, to a degree extraordinary before the 19th century, to give each opera a distinctive stylistic colouring expressive of its dramatic character. Thus Claudius and Nebucadnezar differ radically in musical language though composed only a year apart.

Suicide of Cato from Keiser's 'Cato', Act 3, Theater am Gänsemarkt, Hamburg, 1711: engraving from the original libretto

No small part of the dramatic impact of Keiser's operas derives from the recitatives. He attached great importance to the musical observance of the rhetorical 'distinctions' implied by marks of punctuation and was, according to Mattheson, the first composer (along with himself) to have adopted this 'oratorical and rational manner' of setting a text. The simple recitatives are full of unconventional expressive touches, while those with accompaniment rise to an extraordinary pitch of intensity in works such as Janus and Octavia.

Keiser's arias are mostly italianate in design, though hardly ever purely Italian in idiom. He also wrote numerous French dance airs and, for the comic or lower-class characters, jolly songs reminiscent of German folksong. The early operas display the formal variety characteristic of the Hamburg tradition, as da capo arias alternate freely with those in strophic, sectional binary and through-composed forms, but increasing Italian influence in the 1710s led to an overwhelming preponderance of da capo structure. Ostinato arias, usually with some interruption or transposition of the bass, are common in Adonis, Janus and La forza della virtù; thereafter they become rare, though there are some fine later examples (e.g. 'Stille Düffte' in Octavia) as well as many arias with patterned basses. In keeping with the general trend in Italian opera the length of Keiser's arias grew somewhat over the years, but even in the 1720s his da capo arias are still of modest proportions and do not necessarily cadence out of the tonic during the first section. After initially employing the Lullian type of overture with a slow introduction leading to a faster, quasi-fugal section he gradually abandoned it in favour of various italianate forms, whose diversity is suggested by the multiplicity of their titles – 'Aria' (Masagniello), 'Sonata' (Fredegunda), 'Concerto' (Tomyris and Circe), 'Intrada' (Ulysses), 'Sinfonia' (Cupido and Croesus) and 'Burla' (Jodelet). The ballet music, when preserved, is invariably French.

Never a learned composer, Keiser had little interest in counterpoint or motivic development. He was above all a melodist, and his seemingly inexhaustible fund of lyrical ideas won him high praise from his German contemporaries. C.P.E. Bach considered that 'in the beauty, novelty, expression, and pleasing qualities of his melody' he had nothing to fear from comparison with Handel. Along with an astonishing variety of contour and character and a comparative freedom from formula, Keiser's melodies tend to have strong elements of periodic structure. From the very beginning he favoured relatively short phrases and marked segmentation within longer ones, and as early as Pomona (1702) and Claudius (1703) symmetrical formations became prominent, especially in the numerous arias in 6/8 or 12/8 time. Not all Keiser's vocal lines are smoothly lyrical, however, and the coloratura writing in soprano roles like Fredegunda and Tomyris could be successfully negotiated only by a singer of extraordinary agility.

He was also a master of orchestral colour, and particularly in the operas between Octavia (1705) and Trajanus (1717) he experimented with many rich and unusual sonorities, frequently writing three or more separate parts for oboes, recorders or bassoons. Octavia is the earliest Hamburg opera score to contain horns, the 1711 Croesus the first to include chalumeaux. In the later operas there are many arias in which the scoring or texture changes almost incessantly, a style seen at its most kaleidoscopic in 'Kühle Winde' in Tomyris. Some arias or sections have minimal accompaniment; 'Dieser Haare güldnes Schertzen' in La forza della virtù, the most extreme case, lacks any instrumental support and replaces the expected ritornellos with wordless passages intoned by the singer (an effect borrowed from C.F. Pollarolo's setting of the same libretto).

A number of Keiser's operas incorporate arias by other composers, a fact usually acknowledged, however imprecisely, in the printed libretto. During his early years the borrowings are comparatively rare, but in the 1720s and 30s they become much more numerous. Ulysses (1722) and Cupido (1724) both contain Italian arias apparently inserted at the behest of singers, and several later operas are pasticcios of a kind favoured in Hamburg at this period, in which the Italian arias were taken from earlier works while the house composer furnished new recitatives, German arias, and instrumental movements. This description certainly fits Jodelet (1726) and Circe (1734) and probably also the lost operas Bretislaus (1725) and Mistevojus (1726); the last includes seven arias from the composite Muzio Scevola composed for London in 1721 by Filippo Amadei, Giovanni Bononcini, and Handel, along with an aria of Caldara added to the Hamburg version in 1723. It cannot be assumed, however, that these imported Italian arias were always taken over unchanged: comparison of 'Ch'io ti miri' in Jodelet with Giovanni Bononcini's setting of the same text in his cantata Dove le piante giro reveals that Keiser elaborately reworked his slender model, adding obbligato parts for violin and cello.

In addition to operas Keiser composed ballets, serenatas, Passions, oratorios, Italian and German cantatas, and Latin church works, though much of this music is lost. The extent of his surviving German sacred works has been considerably exaggerated as a result of the mistaken identification of several Berlin manuscripts as being in his hand. His Passions, distinguished by the same concern for textual expression found in the operas, seem to have been particularly influential; J.S. Bach performed the St Mark Passion on at least three occasions between 1713 and the 1740s, and the harmonic richness of Bach's recitative style may owe something to study of that work. Keiser was the first composer to set Brockes's famous Passion oratorio text and the only one to have his setting published, if only in part. Very little instrumental music is preserved – a few trio sonatas and concertos and a curious ensemble suite in which every movement echoes the cuckoo's call. Mattheson relates that Keiser wrote much more for his patron Count von Dernath but concedes that his compositions of this sort were somewhat less extraordinary and less engaging than his vocal productions.

Over the course of his long career Keiser's style underwent a remarkable evolution. In part he was responding to changes in contemporary taste, but it is also clear that he steadily refined and enriched his compositional technique in a way that belies the picture of a brilliant but frivolous natural genius presented by Crysander and others. The elaborate revisions made in Croesus when it was revived in 1730 seem to have stemmed as much from an urge to improve as from a need to adapt to altered tastes or conditions.

Among 18th-century German musicians Keiser was held in very high esteem. Mattheson called him 'the greatest opera composer in the world', and Scheibe considered him 'perhaps the most original musical genius that Germany has ever produced'. He had a profound and lasting impact on the style of Handel, who, moreover, borrowed countless melodic ideas from Claudius, Octavia and other operas. Yet even at the height of his fame Keiser's operas were scarcely performed outside Hamburg and Brunswick, and after the collapse of the Hamburg Opera in 1738 they virtually disappeared from the stage and seem to have been largely forgotten except by connoisseurs. Since the late 19th century Keiser has found some eminent musicological champions, including Kretzschmar, Leichtentritt and Grout, but to date the modern revival of Baroque opera has largely passed him by, probably because of the formidable demands he often makes on performers, the disconcerting mixture of languages, and a tendency among twentieth-century listeners to approach him with expectations based on the very different styles of Bach and Handel.

Keiser was the first great figure in German operatic history. If he failed to establish a truly national genre and even contributed to the increasing italianization of the existing form, he nonetheless raised German dramatic music to a new level, matching if not surpassing the achievements of his principal French and Italian contemporaries. It is unfortunate that so much of his music is lost and that during his final years, when his creative powers were at their peak, he should have had so few opportunities for composing entirely new operas.

WORKS

HG – Hamburg, Theater am Gänsemarkt

OPERAS

lost unless otherwise indicated

Basilius [Der königliche Schäfer, oder Basilius in Arcadien] (3, F.C. Bressand, after F. Parisetti: Il re pastore), HG, 1694; rev. as Arcadia, oder Die königliche Schäferey, Brunswick, Rathaus, 1699

Procris und Cephalus (Spl, 3, Bressand), Brunswick, Rathaus, 1694, 10 arias, duet D-Bsb, SWl

Die wiedergefundenen Verliebten [Die beständige und getreue Ismene] (Schäferspiel, 3, Bressand), Salzthal, nr Wolfenbüttel, 24 May 1695

Clelia (Spl, 5, Bressand), Brunswick, Rathaus, 1695

Circe, oder Des Ulysses erster Theil (Spl, 3, Bressand), Brunswick, Rathaus, Feb 1696

Penelope, oder Des Ulysses anderer Theil [Penelope und Ulysses ander Theil] (Spl, 3, Bressand), Brunswick, Rathaus, Feb 1696

Mahumeth II (3, H. Hinsch), HG, 29 Feb 1696

Adonis [Der geliebte Adonis] (Spl, 3, C.H. Postel), HG, 1697, Bsb (facs. in Handel Sources, i, 1986); 1 aria, B-Br
Irene [Die durch Wilhelm den Grossen in Britannien wider eingeführte Irene] (Sing- und Tantz-Spiel, 1, Postel), HG, 10 Jan 1698
Orpheus (Spl, 5, Bressand), Brunswick, Rathaus, 1698; rev. as Die sterbende Euridice and Die verwandelte Leyer des Orpheus [Die sterbende Eurydice, oder Orpheus erster Theil and Orpheus ander Theil] (3, 3), Brunswick, Rathaus, 1699; rev. as Die biss in und nach dem Todt unerhörte Treue des Orpheus (5), with prol, Apollo ermunterte seine Musen, HG, 1709, D-Bsb [without recits.], duet in Divertimenti serenissimi; 1 aria, Bsb
Der güldene Apfel [Der aus Hyperboreen nach Cymbrien übergebrachte güldene Apfel] (3, Postel), HG, 1698
Janus [Der bey dem allgemeinen Welt-Friede von dem grossen Augustus geschlossene Tempel des Janus] (Spl, 3, epilogue, Postel), HG, 1698; rev. as Der von Othino dem Uhrheber des Dänischen Reichs geschlossene Tempel des Janus, Copenhagen, 30 Nov 1722; rev. with prol by Telemann, HG, 10 Oct 1729, Bsb (facs. in Handel Sources, i, 1986); 1 aria, Bsb
Iphigenia [Die wunderbahr-errettete Iphigenia] (Spl, 5, Postel, after Euripides), HG, 1699
Hercules und Hebe [Die an dem glücklichen Vermählungs-Tage ... vorgebildete Verbindung des grossen Hercules mit der schönen Hebe] (Spl, 3, Postel), HG, 16 Feb 1699; excerpts, S-Uu
Die Wiederkehr der güldnen Zeit (Spl, 3, Bressand), HG, 1699

La forza della virtù, oder Die Macht der Tugend (Spl, 3, Bressand, after D. David), HG, 1700, D-Bsb (facs. in Handel Sources, ii, 1986); 1 aria, B-Br; excerpts in Die auserlesensten Arien der Opera genannt La forza della virtù (Hamburg, 1701/*R*1986 in Handel Sources, ii)
Endymion [Der gedemühtigte Endymion; Der siegende Phaeton] (Spl, 3, Nothnagel), HG, 1700
Störtebecker und Jödge Michaels erster Theil (Spl, 3, Hotter), HG, 1701
Störtebecker und Jödge Michaels zweyter Theil (Spl, 3, Hotter), HG, 1701
Psyche [Die wunder-schöne Psyche] (Spl, 3, Postel), HG, 26 Oct 1701, 5 arias, D-SWl, W
Pomona [Sieg der fruchtbaren Pomona; Streit der vier Jahres Zeiten, oder Der siegende Herbst] (18 scenes, Postel), HG, 19 Oct 1702, Bsb; 3 arias, B-Br
Claudius [Die verdammte Staat-Sucht, oder Der verführte Claudius] (Spl, 3, Hinsch), HG, 1703, D-Bsb (facs. in Handel Sources, iii, 1986) 3 arias, Bsb; rev. as Claudius, römischer Kayser, HG, 17 July 1726 ?incl. It. arias by other composers
Minerva [Die Geburth der Minerva; Die betrogene Venus] (Spl, 3, Hinsch), HG, ?28 Aug 1703, aria in Arsinoe, 1710
Salomon [Die über die Liebe triumphirende Weissheit, oder Salomon] (Spl, 3, Duke Anton Ulrich of Brunswick or J.C. Knorr von Rosenroth, rev. C.F. Hunold), HG, 26 Nov 1703, 7 arias Bsb, Hs, S-Uu; incl. 7 arias by G.C. Schürmann, 1 aria by an unknown composer
Nebucadnezar [Der gestürtzte und wider erhöhte Nebucadnezar, König zu Babylon unter dem grossen Propheten Daniel] (Spl, 3, Hunold), HG, 1704, B-Br, D-Gs; rev. version, HG, 1709; rev. Telemann, HG, 28 July 1728, Bsb (facs. in Handel Sources, iii, 1986)
Almira [Der in Krohnen erlangte Glücks-Wechsel, oder Almira, Königin von Castilien], 1704 (Spl, 3, F.C. Feustking, after G. Pancieri: Almira), comp. for HG, unperf.; 2 arias A-Wn, D-Bsb, excerpts in Componimenti musicali (Hamburg, 1706); rev. as Almira, Königin von Castilien, Weissenfels, Neu-Augustusburg, 30 July 1704; rev. as Der durchlauchtige Secretarius, oder Almira, Königin in Castilien with prol., Il genio d'Holsatia (lib rev. B. Feind), HG, 1706; with epilogue Der Genius von Europa, HG, 26 July 1708; incl. 3 arias by R. Fedeli
Octavia [Die römische Unruhe, oder Die edelmühtige Octavia] (Spl, 3, Feind), HG, 5 Aug 1705, *PL-Kj, 3 arias, A-Wn, excerpts in Componimenti musicali (Hamburg, 1706); ed. F. Chrysander and M. Seiffert, G.F. Händels Werke, suppl. vi (Leipzig, 1902/R); incl. 2 arias by P. Hebenstreit
Lucretia [Die kleinmühtige Selbst-Mörderin Lucretia, oder Die Staats-Thorheit des Brutus] (musicalisches Trauer-Spiel, 5, Feind), HG, 29 Nov 1705, 1 aria, Wn
La fedeltà coronata, oder Die gekrönte Treue (Spl, 3, Hinsch), HG, 1706, 9 arias from Almira (Weissenfels version), 2 arias, Wn, D-Bsb
Masagniello [Masagniello (Masaniello) furioso [oder] Die neapolitanische Fischer-Empörung] (drama musicale, 3, Feind), HG, June 1706; rev. Telemann, HG, 18 June 1727; *Bsb, 2 arias, Bsb, SWl; ed. in EDM, 1st ser., lxxxix (1986)
Sueno [La costanza sforzata/Die gezwungene Beständigkeit, oder Die listige Rache des Sueno] (Spl, 3, Feind), HG, 11 Oct 1706
Der Carneval von Venedig [Der angenehme Betrug, oder Der Carneval von Venedig] (Spl, 3, [? J.A.] Meister and M. Cuno, after J.F. Regnard: Le carneval de Venise), HG, sum. 1707, 36 arias, A-Wn, D-Hs, SWl [? earlier version, Weissenfels, 1705]; rev. HG, 8 Feb 1723; rev. HG, 1733; ? some numbers by Graupner
Helena [La forza dell'amore/Die Macht der Liebe, oder Die von Paris entführte Helena] (Spl, 3, Keiser, after A. Aureli: Helena rapita da Paride), HG, 1709; incl. 1 aria not by Keiser
Heliates und Olympia [Die blut-durstige Rache, oder Heliates und Olympia] (Spl, 3, Keiser), HG, 1709, 3 arias, A-Wn; partly by Graupner
Desiderius, König der Longobarden (musicalisches Schauspiel, prol, 5, epilogue, Feind), HG, 26 July 1709, *PL-Kj, 1 aria, D-Bsb
Arsinoe [La grandezza d'animo, oder Arsinoe] (Spl, 5, Breymann), HG, 1710, *Bsb, 3 arias, A-Wn, D-Bsb, 1 aria in Divertimenti serenissimi
Die Leipziger Messe [Le bon vivant, oder Die Leipziger Messe] (Singe- und Lust-Spiel, 3, C.H. Weidemann), HG, 1710
Aurora [Der Morgen des europäischen Glückes, oder Aurora] (Schäffer-Spiel, 5, Breymann), HG, 26 July 1710, 10 arias, A-Wn, D-Bsb, SWl, chorus in Trajanus, 1717
Julius Caesar [Der durch den Fall des grossen Pompejus erhöhete Julius Caesar; Der Fall des grossen Pompejus] (Spl, 5, Feind), HG, Nov 1710, 1 aria, SWl
Croesus [Der hochmüthige, gestürtzte und wieder erhabene Croesus] (Spl, 3, L. von Bostel, after N. Minato: Creso), HG, 1711, 4 arias, Bsb, SWl rev. HG, 6 Dec 1730; *PL-Kj, ed. in DDT, xxxvii–xxxviii (1912/R)
Cato [L'amore verso la patria/Die Liebe gegen das Vaterland, oder Der sterbende Cato] (musicalisches Schauspiel, 3, Feind, after M. Noris: Catone uticense), HG, 1711, 1 aria, D-Bsb
Carolus V [Die oesterreichische Grossmuth, oder Carolus V] (musicalisches Schauspiel, 3, epilogue, J.U. von König), HG, 28 Jan 1712; rev. HG, 1 Oct 1714; 10 arias, A-Wn, D-Bsb, SWl
Diana [Die entdeckte Verstellung, oder Die geheime Liebe der Diana] (pastoral, 3, König, partly after F. de Lemene: Endimione), HG, April 1712, 7 arias, Bsb, SWl; rev. as Cupido [Der sich rächende Cupido], HG, 9 July 1721, Bsb, incl. 7 It. numbers by G. Bononcini and others
Heraclius [Die wiederhergestelte Ruh, oder Die gecrönte Tapferkeit des Heraclius] (Spl, prol, 5, epilogue, König, after N. Beregan: L'Heraclio), HG, June 1712, PL-Kj, 8 arias, D-Bsb, 2 not in score
L'inganno fedele, oder Der getreue Betrug (heroisches Schäfer-Spiel 3, König), HG, Oct 1714; rev. as Die gecrönte Tugend, 15 Nov 1714; 2 arias Bsb, excerpts in Erlesene Sätze aus der Opera L'inganno fedele (Hamburg, 1714), ed. in DDT, xxxvii–xxxviii (1912); rev. 1726
Fredegunda (musicalisches Schau-Spiel, 5, König, after F. Silvani: Fredegonda), HG, March 1715, Bsb, 4 numbers, SWl
Artemisia (musicalisches Schau-Spiel, 3, ? G.H. Stölzel and others), HG, 1715
Das römische April-Fest (musicalisches Lust- und Tantz-Spiel, 5, Feind), HG, June 1716
Achilles [Das zerstörte Troja, oder Der durch den Tod Helenen versöhnte Achilles] (musicalisches Spl, 5, J.J. Hoë, after U. Rizzi: Achille placato), HG, ?4 Dec 1716, 2 arias, A-Wn, D-Bsb
Julia [Die durch Verstellung und Grossmuth über die Grausamkeit siegende Liebe, oder Julia] (Spl, 5, Hoë, after G.F. Bussani: Antonio e Pompeiano), HG, Feb 1717; Acts 1–2 rev. as Antonius römischer Kaiser, Copenhagen, 30 Jan 1722, 1 aria, Bsb
Tomyris [Die grossmüthige Tomyris] (Spl, 3, Hoë, after D. Lalli: L'amor di figlio non conosciuto), HG, July 1717, Bsb [2 copies], 1 aria, A-Wn; ed. in Die Oper, i (Munich 1975); rev. HG, 1723, with 2 arias by G. Bononcini
Trajanus [Der die Vestung Siebenbürgisch-Weissenburg erobernde und über die Dacier triumphirende Kayser Trajanus] (Spl, 3, epilogue, Hoë), HG, 4 Nov 1717, D-Bsb, 1 aria, A-Wn, D-Bsb
Jobates und Bellerophon [Das bey seiner Ruh und Gebuhrt eines Printzen frolockende Lycien unter der Regierung des Königs Jobates und Bellerophon] (Spl, prol, 3, epilogue, Hoë), HG, 28 Dec 1717, 3 arias, A-Wn, D-Bsb, duet in Jodelet, 1726
Cloris und Tirsis (3, epilogue, various), Copenhagen, 18 Dec 1721

Psyche [Die unvergleichliche Psyche] (musicalisches Schauspiel, prol, 3, Postel, rev. F.M. Lersner), Copenhagen, 16 April 1722
Augustus [Der durch Grossmuth und Gnade siegende Augustus] (Spl, prol, 3, epilogue, Hoë), Copenhagen, ?Oct 1722
Ulysses (musicalisches Schau-Spiel prol, 3, Lersner, after H. Guichard: Ulysse), Copenhagen, Court, ?Nov 1722, Bsb; ed. in EDM, cvii (1995); incl. 2 It. arias by Orlandini
Ariadne [Die betrogene und nachmals vergötterte Ariadne] (Spl, prol, 3, Postel), HG, 25 Nov 1722, aria in Ulysses, 1722
Der Armenier, 1722 (Lersner), comp. for Copenhagen, ?unperf.
Sancio, begun 1723 (König, after F. Silvani: Il miglior d'ogni amore per il peggiore d'ogni odio), intended for HG, ? not completed
Cupido: see Diana, 1712
Bretislaus, oder Die siegende Beständigkeit (Spl, prol, 3, epilogue, J.P. Praetorius), HG, 7 Feb 1725; incl. It. arias by M.A. Gasparini, Lotti, Orlandini and A. Pollarolo; 7 arias in Jodelet, 1726, incl. 1 by Keiser
Der Hamburger Jahr-Marckt, oder Der glückliche Betrug (schertzhafftes Spl, 5, Praetorius), HG, 20 June 1725
Die Hamburger Schlacht-Zeit, oder Der missgelungene Betrug (Spl, prol, 5, Praetorius), HG, 22 Oct 1725; banned after 1 perf.
Mistevojus (Spl, 5, J.S. Müller, after A. Zeno and P. Pariati: Antioco as rev. by B. Feind), HG, Jan or Feb 1726; incl. It. arias by F. Amadei, G. Bononcini, Caldara and Handel
Barbacola (Zwischen-Spiel, 1, Praetorius), HG, Jan or Feb 1726, ? partly by Lully
Jodelet [Der lächerliche Printz Jodelet] (schertzhaftes Spl, 5, Praetorius, after Matsen), HG, 1726, Bsb ed. in PÄMw, xviii, Jg. xxi–xxii (1892/R); incl. It. arias by A. and G. Bononcini, Caldara, Chelleri, M.A. Gasparini, Giacomelli, Lotti, Orlandini, Vivaldi and others
Buchhöfer, der stumme Printz Atis (int, 2, Praetorius), HG, 1726, parody of Croesus, 1711, ? arr. by another composer
Lucius Verus, oder Die siegende Treue (Spl, 3, Hinsch, after Zeno: Lucio Vero), HG, 18 Oct 1728; ? a few It. arias by other composers
Circe (Spl, 5, Praetorius and J.J. van Mauritius), HG, 1 and 3 March 1734 in 2 pts, *Bsb; incl. It. arias by Giacomelli, Handel, Hasse, Orlandini, Steffani, L. Vinci and others
Aria, Durch Tugend, Rach' und Güte, for Graupner: L'amore ammalato, HG, 1711, *Bsb
Recits. and addl numbers for Handel: Oriana [Amadigi di Gaula], HG, Sept 1717, 2 arias, duet, A-Wn, D-Bsb; aria, Ein Glässgen Wein, in Ulysses, 1722
Recits. and addl arias for F.B. Conti: Il trionfo dell'amor e della constanza [Il trionfo dell'amicizia e dell'amore], HG, Jan 1718, aria, Bsb; aria from Tomyris, 1717
Prol to F. Amadei, G. Bononcini and Handel: Muzio Scevola, HG, 7 Jan 1723
Jauchzen der Künste (prol to Judith, pasticcio, J.G. Hamann), HG, 7 May 1733

SERENATAS AND OTHER OCCASIONAL WORKS
lost unless otherwise indicated

Aller-unterthänigtser Gehorsam … (Tantz- und Singe-Spiel), ballet for the name day of Emperor Leopold I, HG, 15 Nov, 1698
Das höchst-preiszliche Crönungs-Fest [Königliches Preussisches Ballet] (ballet, Nothnagel), for the coronation of Frederick I of Prussia, HG, 1701; rev. as Die allgemeine Freude des König-Reiches Preussen [Neues Preussiches Ballet] (lib rev. H. Hinsch), HG, 1702
Als Ihro Magnifice Herr Lucas von Bostel … zum Bürgermeister-Ampte würdigst worden, serenata, Hamburg, 1709
Der vergnügte Elbe-Strohm, cant. for Petri-Mahl, Hamburg, 21 Feb 1709, lost
Das entzifferte Verhängnis, cant. for Petri-Mahl, Hamburg, 21 Feb 1710, lost
Die gekrönte Würdigkeit (serenata, König), for Petri-Mahl, Hamburg, 21 Feb 1711
Die gestillte Klage der Elbe (serenata, König), for Mathiae-Mahl, Hamburg, 25 Feb 1712
Die Stärke der Liebe (dialogue, König), before 1713 [parody of existing music by Keiser]
Triumph des Friedens (serenata, König), for the Peace of Baden, HG, 9 Dec 1714
Der Abschied, die Wiederkunfft und Paarung der Geliebten, serenata pastorale, Hamburg, 1714, aria in D-SWl
Das verewigte und triumphirende Ertz-Hauss Oesterreich (serenata, Brockes), for the birthday of Emperor Charles VI, HG, 1716
Il trionfo di primavera (serenata, ? C. Gazal), for the birth of Archduke Leopold of Austria, Hamburg, 1716
Serenata (M. Richey), for the wedding of Otto Luis with Madame Beltgens, 1716, S, A, T, B, 2 fl, zuffolo, 2 ob, chalumeau, 2 bn, 2 vn, va, bc, Bsb
Der zur angenehmen Mayen-Zeit in Ludwigs-Auen enstandene Lust-Streit, serenata, Ludwigsburg, 1719 or 1720, 5 arias from Aurora, 1710
Das frohlockende Gross-Brittannien (serenata, Schwemschuch), for the birthday of George II of England, HG, 8 July 1724
Das jauchzende Cimbrien [Das wegen Verbannung der Land-Plagen … jauchzende Cimbrien] (serenata, Schwemschuch), for the birthday of Frederick IV of Denmark, HG, 20 Oct 1724
Bey dem höchst-feierlichst-begangenen hohen Geburts-Feste … Friderici Ludovici zu Hannover [Geburts-Fest des Printzen von Wallis] (prol, J.P. Praetorius), HG, 31 Jan 1726
Das um den Rang streitende Friedensburg, Friederichsberg, Friederichsburg und Rosenburg, serenata, Copenhagen, 1726; MS destroyed, 1794
Europa [Die in ihrer Friedens-Hofnung gestärckte Europa] (serenata, 3, J.G. Glauche), Hamburg, 1730, recits. and choruses by Keiser, arias by Porpora und L. Leo Erwachet und lachet, cant., B, 2 ob, 2 hn, 2 vn, va, bc, 1732, D-Bsb

PASSIONS AND ORATORIOS
lost unless otherwise indicated

Der blutige und sterbende Jesus (Passion orat, Hunold), Hamburg, Holy Week, 1705
Thränen unter dem Creutze Jesu (Passion orat, J.U. von König), Hamburg, Holy Week, 1711; rev. as Der zum Tode verurtheilte und gecreutzigte Jesus, 2 numbers, D-Bsb, excerpts in Seelige Erlösungs-Gedancken (Hamburg, 1715)
Der für die Sünde der Welt gemartete und sterbende Heiland Jesus (Passion orat, B.H. Brockes), Hamburg, Holy Week, 1712, Bsb, SHs, DK-Kv, 3 arias, D-Gs, excerpts in Auserlesene Soliloquia (Hamburg, 1714); ed. in EDM (forthcoming)
Braut-Messe aus dem XXIII Psalm Davids (orat, König), before 1713
Braut-Messe, Die geistliche Vermählung der Seelen mit Christo nach Anleitung des hohen Liedes Salomons (orat, König), before 1713
Der siegende David [Die über den Triumph ihres Heylandes Jesu jubilirende gläubige Seele; Die durch Grossmuth und Glauben triumphirende Unschuld] (orat, 2, König), Hamburg, 2 Nov 1717, Bsb
Die Danckbarkeit an den Gerechten Held, Easter orat, Hamburg
Der Sieg des Lebens über den Tod (orat, J.J. Rambach), Hamburg
Recits. (Ger.) for Resurrection orat by Gasparini, Hamburg, 4 April 1736
Doubtful: Passio Jesu Christi secundum Marcum [Jesus Christus ist um unser Missetat willen verwundet] (St Mark Passion), S, A, T, B, SATB, str, Hamburg, Holy Week, 1707, Bsb, Gs (poss. attrib. to F.N. Brauns); ed. in Die Kantate, clii (Stuttgart, 1967); Öffnet euch, ihr frechen Augen, Bsb (inc.); Wir gingen alle in der Irre [Lukas-Passion], Bsb (inc.)

OTHER SACRED

Ky, Gl, a, SATB, 2 vn, va, bc, D-Bsb, Hs
Ky, Gl, D, SATB, 2 hn, 2 vn, va, bc, BNms
San, G, SATB, ob, 2 vn, 2 va, vc, bc, Bsb
TeD, D, SATB, 3 tpt, timp, 2 ob, 2 vn, va, bc, Bsb
Braut-Messe einer gläubigen Seelen mit Christo, Concert, S, T, ob, 2 vn, bc, 1709, SWl
Motets: Beati omnes qui timent Dominum (Ps cxxvii), SATTB, 2 tpt, bn, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, Bsb; Benedictus Dominus Deus meus (Ps cxliii), S, 2 vn, bc, Bsb; Jubilae Deo omnis terra (Ps xcix), A, 2 vn, bc, Bsb; Laetatus sum (Ps cxxii), S, bc, Bsb; Lauda Jerusalem (Ps cxlvii), SATB, 2 vn, bc, Bsb; Laudate pueri (Ps cxii), SATB, 2 vn, bc, Bsb; Laudate pueri (Ps cxii), B, 2 vn, bc, Bsb
Cants.: Das Fest der Erndte, S, A, T, B, 2 tpt, 2 fl, 2 ob, 2 vn, va, bc, B-Bc; Der bekennende und jubilirende Lutheraner (C.G. Wend), on the 200th anniversary of the Augsburg Confession, Hamburg, 25 June 1730, lost; Ich hab einen guten Kampf gekämpft, S/T, 2 ob, 3 viols, bc, D-Bsb, Ich liege und schlaffe ganz in Frieden, SATB, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, bc, Bsb; Meine Heiland lebet, 2 S, 2 ob, bn, bc, ?1717, S-L; Meine Seele bleibet stille (Ps lxii, adapted by Hunold), S, bc, in Musicalische Land-Lust (Hamburg, 1714)
Doubtful, all in D-Bsb: San, B♭, SATB, 2 vn, va, bc [musically identical with 'Doni pace' in Handel's Flavio]; De profundis clamavi (Ps cxxix), motet, SATB, 2 vn, va, bc, ed. H. Kümmerling (Cologne, 1964); Du wirst ihn zum Herren machen, cant., SAATB,

2 vn, va, bn, bc; Es steh Gott auf, cant., SSATB, 2 ob, 2 vn, va, bc; Glückseelges Menschenkind (Ich will mich mit dir verloben), cant., B, 2 fl, 2 ob, 2 vn, bc; Herr, lehre uns bedenken, cant., SATB, 2 ob, bn, 2 vn, va, vle, bc; Ich kan nicht mehr ertragen, cant., S, B, 2 vn, 2 va, bc; Kann dich mein Bitten nicht bewegen, cant., SSATB, 2 vn, bc (inc.); Mein Gott, mein Gott, cant., SATB, 2 vn, va, bc; Nisi Dominus (Ps cxxvi), motet, SATB, 2 ob, vn, va, bc; Will mich der Erdenschlund erschrecken (Cant. von der Grossmuth), B, 2 rec, 2 ob, 2 vn, va, bc

OTHER SECULAR

Gemüths-Ergötzung (?Postel), 7 Ger. cants., 1v, insts (Hamburg, 1698)
Componimenti musicali (Hamburg, 1706)
Divertimenti serenissimi ... oder Durchlauchtige Ergötzung, incl. 3 cants., 2 duets, arias (Hamburg, 1713); 1 duet, ed. in G.F. Händels Werke, xxxii (1870, rev. 1880/R)
Musicalische Land-Lust (Hunold), incl. 4 Ger. cants., 1 sacred, S, bc (Hamburg, 1714)
Kayserliche Friedens-Post, nebst verschiedenen moralischen Sing-Gedichten und Arien (?König), vv, insts (Hamburg, 1715) [incidental music for a play celebrating the Treaty of Baden, perf. at residence of Baron von Kurtzrock, Hamburg, 4 Nov 1714]
Sieg der Tugend, oder Hercules auf dem Scheide-Wege (Concert, König), Hamburg, 1713, A-Wn
Other cants.: Begl'occhi risolvetevi, S, 2 vn, bc, Bsb; Benchè sempre crudele, S, fl, bc, ROu; Benchè sempre crudele, B, vn, hpd, Bsb; Che dici amor, S, bc, Bsb; E costume del mio squardo [La bella cantatrice] (Coviello), S, bc, US-BEm D-Bsb; Non sà dire l'alma mia, S, bc, Bsb; Poco amore mi contenta, S, vn, bc, Bsb; Qual nuova crudeltate, S, bc, Bsb; Quando mai ritornerete, S, bc, US-BEm D-Bsb; Voglio rider, S, bc, S-L
Misc. arias: Amor, soll ich dich meiden, A-Wn, parody of 'Parto, ti rasserena' from Fredegunda, 1715; Bleibet feste Felsen-Sinnen, Wn, parody of 'Quanto dolci, quanto care' from Arsinoe, 1710, ?inserted in rev. of Aurora; Euch ihr liebenswürdgen Augen, D-Bsb; Luci non vi turbate, Bsb; Wolt ihr gleich schönste Augen scheiden, SWl
Doubtful arias: Casti amori [Mit dem Hetzen sich ergetzen], A-Wn, D-Bsb, version of 'Per dar pace' from Handel's Rodrigo, ?inserted in rev. of Aurora; Du bist recht schön, Durch zwey Kohlen schwartze Augen, A-Wn, from J.C. Schieferdecker's Justinus; Es ahnet mir, geliebte Seele, D-Bsb, from Graupner's Bellerophon; Mi dice la constanza, Bsb, from J.D. Heinichen's Calpurnia; Ohn'eure Küsse, HG, 1696, Bsb, trans. of 'Se non vi bacio' from A. Steffani's Orlando generoso

INSTRUMENTAL

Conc., D, vn, orch, D-ROu [partly rev., as ov. to Circe]
Conc., D, fl, str, SWl; ed. F. Nagel (Mainz, 1976)
Sinfonia, D, A-Wn [related to conc. in D-ROu]
3 suites (d, D, G), 4 insts, S-L
Suite ex opera Kuckuk, G, 2 vn, bc, Uu
3 sonatas (D, G, D), fl, vn, bc, Stuttgart, 1720, D-ROu; ed. in NM, lxviii (1930/R), cxiv (1935/R), cxxxii (1937/R)
Sonata, D, 2 fl, bc, ROu
Other works, mentioned by Mattheson, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Mattheson GEP; MGG1 (H. Becker); PEM (K. Zelm); SmitherHO, ii
F. Chrysander: 'Geschichte der Hamburger Oper unter der Direction von Reinhard Keiser (1703–1706)', AMZ, new ser., xv (1880), 17–88
J. Sittard: 'Reinhard Keiser in Württemberg', MMG, xviii (1886), 3–12
H. Leichtentritt: Reinhard Keiser in seinen Opern (Berlin, 1901)
T. Krogh: 'Reinhard Keiser in Kopenhagen', Musikwissenschaftliche Beiträge: Festschrift für Johannes Wolf, ed. W. Lott, H. Osthoff and W. Wolffheim (Berlin, 1929/R), 79–87
R. Petzoldt: Die Kirchenkompositionen und weltliche Kantaten Reinhard Keisers (1674–1739) (diss., U. of Berlin, 1935)
W. Schulze: Die Quellen der Hamburger Oper (1678–1738), Mitteilungen aus der Bibliothek der Hansestadt Hamburg, new ser., 4 (Hamburg, 1938)
H. Kümmerling: 'Fünf unbekannte Kantaten in Reinhard Keisers Autograph', Festschrift Max Schneider zum 80. Geburtstage, ed. W. Vetter (Leipzig, 1955), 177–81
W. Dean: 'Handel and Keiser: Further Borrowings', CMc, no.9 (1969), 73–80
R.D. Brenner: 'Emotional Expression in Keiser's Operas', MR, xxxiii (1972), 222–32
B. Deane: 'Reinhard Keiser: an Interim Assessment', Soundings, iv (1974), 30–41
H. Frederichs: Das Verhältnis von Text und Musik in den Brockespassionen Keisers, Händels, Telemanns und Matthesons (Munich, 1975)
K. Zelm: Die Opern Reinhard Keisers: Studien zur Chronologie, Überlieferung und Stilentwicklung (Munich, 1975)
H.-J. Theill: 'Reinhard Keisers Masaniello furioso: Notizen zur Herausgabe einer Hamburger Barockoper', Schweizer Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, iii (1978), 107–42
S. Leopold: 'Feinds und Keisers Masagniello furioso: eine politische Oper?', HJbMw, v (1981), 55–68
K. Zelm: 'Reinhard Keiser und Georg Philipp Telemann: zum Stilwandel an der frühdeutschen Oper in Hamburg', Die Bedeutung Georg Philipp Telemanns für die Entwicklung der europäischen Musikkultur im 18. Jahrhundert: Magdeburg 1981, 104–13
K. Zelm: 'Zur Verarbeitung italienischer Stoffe auf der Hamburger Gänsemarkt-Oper', HJbMw, v (1981), 89–106
K. Zelm: 'Stilkritische Untersuchungen an einem Opernpasticcio: Reinhard Keiser's Jodelet', Festschrift Heinz Becker, ed. J. Schläder and R. Quandt (Laaber, 1982), 10–25
R. Meyer: Die Hamburger Oper, 1678–1730: Einführung und Kommentar zur dreibändigen Textsammlung (Millwood, NY, 1984)
K. Zelm: 'Georg Philipp Telemann und Reinhard Keiser: zur Konzeption der Opernarie um 1730', Telemann und seine Freunde: Magdeburg 1984, ii, 3–14
J.H. Roberts: 'Handel's Borrowings from Keiser', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, ii (1986), 51–76
J.D. Arnn: Text, Music, and Drama in Three Operas by Reinhard Keiser (diss., Rutgers U., 1987)
K.-P. Koch: Reinhard Keiser (1674–1739): Leben und Werk (Teuchern, 1989)
A. Glöckner: 'Bachs frühe Kantaten und die Markus-Passion von Reinhard Keiser', Das Frühwerk Johann Sebastian Bachs: Rostock 1990, 257–66
K.-P. Koch: 'Zu Reinhard Keisers Spätschaffen', HJb 1990, 91–105
J.H. Roberts: 'Keiser and Handel at the Hamburg Opera', HJb 1990, 63–87
D. Schröder: 'Zu Entstehung und Aufführungsgeschichte van Händels Oper "Almira": Anmerkungen zur Edition des werkes in der Hallischen Händel-Ausgabe', HJb 1990, 147–53
H.J. Marx: 'Zur Autorschaft des Kammerduetts "Caro autor di mia doglia" (HWV 183)', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, v (1993), 308–13
M.A. Radice: 'Concerning the Dating of Reinhard Keiser's St Mark Passion', Bach, xxiv (1993), 15–20
K.-P. Koch: 'Das Jahr 1704 und die Weissenfelser Hofoper: zu den Umständen der Aufführung von Reinhard Keisers Oper Almira', Weissenfels als Ort literarischer und künstlerischer Kultur im Barockzeitalter: Weissenfels 1992, 75–95
K.-P. Koch: 'Reinhard Keiser und Georg Philipp Telemann: Bemerkungen zu ihren Beziehungen untereinander', Auf der gezeigten Spur: Beiträge zur Telemannforschung: Festgabe Martin Ruhnke zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. W. Hirschmann, W. Hobohm and C. Lange (Oschersleben, 1994), 67–86
K.-P. Koch: 'Reinhard Keisers gedruckte weltliche Kantaten (1689–1715)', Zur Entwicklung, Verbreitung und Ausführung vokaler Kammermusick im 18. Jahrhundert: Blankenburg, Harz, 1994, 49–63
K.-P. Koch: 'Keiser, Graupner, Grünewald und Schieferdecker: die Jahre 1706–1709', Georg Friedrich Händel: ein Lebensinhalt: Gedenkschrift für Bernd Baselt (1934–1993) (Kassel, 1995), 413–22
H.J. Marx and D. Schröder: Die Hamburger Gänsemarkt-Oper: Katalog der Textbücher (1678–1748) (Laaber, 1995)
J.H. Roberts: 'A New Handel Aria, or Hamburg Revisited', Georg Friedrich Händel: ein Lebensinhalt: Gedenkschrift für Bernd Baselt (1934–1993) (Kassel, 1995), 113–30
D. Schröder: '"Das Römische April-Fest": ein "musikalisches Lust- und Tantz-Spiel" (Hamburg, 1716)', Tanz und Bewegung in der barocken Oper: Salzburg 1994, 125–39
K.-P. Koch: 'Reinhard Keisers Schaffen im Hinblick auf französische Einflüsse', Französische Einflüsse auf deutsche Musiker im 18. Jahrhundert, ed. F. Brusniak and A. Clostermann (Cologne, 1996), 77–91

H. Lölkes: '"...damit ein vollständiges / zur Christlichen Übung dienendes / Opus daraus erwachse": zu den Soliloquiadrucken aus Reinhard Keisers Passionen', AMw, liv (1997), 299–320
G. Feder: 'Friedrich Maximilian von Lersner: der Textdichter von Reinhard Keisers Oper "Ulysses" (1722)', Traditionen, Neuansätze: für Anna Amalie Abert, ed. K. Hortschansky (Tutzing, 1997), 221–43
D.R. Melamed and R.L. Sanders: 'Zum Text und Kontext der "Keiser"-Markuspassion', BJb, lxxxv (1999), 35–50

JOHN H. ROBERTS

Keita, Salif. Malian vocalist. See MALI, §3.

Kelani, Reem Yousef (b Manchester, 7 Aug 1963). Palestinian singer, musician and musicologist. Her father came from Ya'bad, near Jenin, her mother from Nazareth, and Kilānī was born in England but brought up in Kuwait. She studied Western classical music as a child and started singing in public at an early age. After graduating in zoology from Kuwait University, she worked as a scientific assistant researcher. At the same time she built her reputation as a concert performer, at first mainly of jazz and then increasingly of Arab music. By the time Kilānī left Kuwait for London in 1989 she was a well-established performer. She has since built up an international career as a leading performer and researcher of Palestinian music. Her repertory includes traditional songs, improvisations and settings of contemporary Palestinian poetry. Through her workshops on music and dance for children, she communicates the Palestinian heritage to younger generations. She has given many concerts in Britain, and has toured North America, Europe and the Middle East. She has also worked as a performer, composer and adviser on numerous films, TV and radio programmes.

Kilānī's repertory and technique were influenced by the Lebanese singer Fayrūz but she has also drawn on and developed her Palestinian musical heritage including Arab maqāmāt. Her visits to Nazareth in the 1970s stimulated her interest in the music of Galilee, and in 1996 she started research into traditional music based on interviews with old women in Palestine and in the refugee camps of Lebanon.

SUSANNAH TARBUSH

Keldïsh, Yury [Georgy] Vsevolodovich (b St Petersburg, 16/29 Aug 1907; d Moscow, 11 Dec 1995). Russian musicologist. He studied composition at the Moscow Conservatory under Mikhail Ivanov-Boretsky, graduating in 1932. He took the doctorate in 1947 with a dissertation on Stasov. He lectured on the history of Russian music at the Conservatory (1930–57), was made a professor there (1948) and was head of the department of Russian music history (1946–9). He was a senior scientific collaborator at the Institute of Art History of the USSR Academy of Sciences (1947–50). From 1950 to 1956 he was a professor at the Leningrad Conservatory; also from 1950 he was deputy director with responsibility for academic work and from 1955 to 1957 director of the Institute for the History of the Arts in Leningrad. He became head of the department of music of the peoples of the USSR (1960); rising to senior (1974) and chief scientific collaborator (1982). He was a member of the Russian Association of Proletarian Musicians (RAPM) between 1926 and 1932, and a member of the Union of Composers from its foundation. He was created Honoured Art Worker of the RSFSR (1966), and was made an associate member of the British Academy (1976). He was a member of the editorial team of the Bol'shaya sovetskya ėntsiklopediya from 1948; between 1957 and 1960 he was chief editor of the journal Sovetskaya muzïka and from 1967 he was chief editor of the Muzïkal'naya ėntsiklopediya – the first Russian musical encyclopedia. He initiated the publication of the ten-volume Istoriya russkoy muzïki (Moscow, 1983–97), nine volumes of which had appeared before his death.

The theme of Keldïsh's academic study is the history and development of Russian music. Not even the constraints of communist ideology and dogma, which left their marks on Keldïsh's work at the time of his membership of RAPM, prevented the appearance of the characteristic features of his scholarly attitude: a striving for historical authenticity and the painstaking analysis of musical material. He was the earliest and most versatile analyst of pre-19th-century Russian music, and, while confirming the value of Russian music, he acknowledged the role played in its development by the West. One of the pivotal ideas of his historical writing is that of Russia in the context of world culture. He was especially concerned with the music of Musorgsky, Tchaikovsky and Rachmaninoff, but was among the first to give due consideration to Russian composers of the 'second rank'.

Keldïsh was also one of the earliest writers to approach Russian religious music, which had been artificially excluded from study and performance during the communist era. He initiated the series Pamyatniki Russkogo Musïkal'nogo Isskustvo (Moscow, 1972–84), which contained Russian religious and secular compositions from the 16th century to the 18th, leading to the return to the repertory of many of these works.

WRITINGS

Romansovaya lirika Musorgskogo [Musorgsky's lyrical songs] (Moscow, 1933)
Vospominaniya o Musorgskom A.A. Golenishcheva-Kutuzova [Golenishchev-Kutuzov's reminiscences of Musorgsky] (Moscow, 1935)
ed.: M.P. Musorgskiy: pis'ma k A.A. Golenishchevu-Kutuzovu [Letters to Golenishchev-Kutuzov] (Moscow, 1939) [incl. 'M.P. Musorgskiy i A.A. Golenishchev-Kutuzov']
Khudozhestvennoye mirovozzreniye V.V. Stasova [The artistic world views of Stasov] (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1947)
Istoriya russkoy muzïki [History of Russian music] (Moscow, 1947–54)
ed., with Ye. Arkin and M.O. Yankovsky: V.V. Stasov: pis'ma k rodnïm [Letters to relatives] (Moscow, 1953–62)
ed., with M.S. Druskin: Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki, 1790–1825 [Essays on the history of Russian music] (Leningrad, 1956) [incl. 'Ideyno-obshchesvennïye predposïlki razvitiya russkoy muzïki v kontse XVIII i nachale XIX veka' [Ideological and social premises in the development of Russian music at the end of the 18th and beginning of the 19th centuries], 7–47]
Russkaya sovetskaya muzïka (Moscow, 1958)
'Simfonicheskoye tvorchestvo A.K. Glazunova' [Glazunov's symphonic works], Glazunov: issledovaniya, materialï, publikatsii, pis'ma, i, ed. M.O. Yankovsky (Leningrad, 1959), 115–244 ed.: È.F. Napravnik: avtobiograficheskiye, tvorcheskiye materialï, dokumentï, pis'ma [Autobiographical and creative material, documents and letters] (Leningrad, 1959)
ed.: Voprosï muzïkoznaniya [Questions of musicology], iii (1960) [incl. 'Nekotorïye voprosï sovetskoy muzïki' [Some questions of Soviet music], v–xxxii]
Kritika i zhurnalistika: izbrannïye statey [Criticism and journalism: selected articles] (Moscow, 1963)
'Dante v russkoy muzïke', Dante i Slavyane, ed. I. Bėlza (Moscow, 1965), 49–66
'Ob izuchenii drevnerusskogo pevcheskogo iskusstva' [On the study of the art of singing in Old Rus'], in N. Uspensky: Drevnerusskoye pevcheskoye iskusstvo (Moscow, 1965), 5–23
Russkaya muzïka XVIII veka [18th-century Russian music] (Moscow, 1965)

'M.V. Ivanov-Boretskiy', Vïdayushchiyesya deyateli teoretiko-kompozitorskogo fakul'teta Moskovskoy konservatorii, ed. T.F. Myuller (Moscow, 1966), 100–06
'Vozniknoveniye i razvitiye russkoy operï v XVIII veke' [The rise and development of 18th-century Russian opera], Musica antiqua Europae orientalis: Bydgoszcz and Toruń 1966, 489–506
100 let Moskovskoy konservatorii, 1866–1966 [100 years of the Moscow Conservatory] (Moscow, 1966)
'Neizvestnaya opera russkogo kompozitora' [An unknown opera by a Russian composer], SovM (1966), no.12, pp.39–45 [on Maksym Berezovs'ky]
'Russkaya muzïka na rubezhe dvukh stoletiy' [Russian music at the turn of the century], Russkaya khudozhestvennaya kul'tura XIX – nachala XX vekov, ed. A.D. Alekseyev (Moscow, 1968–77), i, 271–96; ii, 288–340
'Ob istoricheskikh kornyakh kanta' [The historical roots of the kant], Musica antiqua II: Bydgoszcz 1969, 437–66 [with Fr. summary]
ed.: Istoriya muzïki narodov SSSR [History of the music of the peoples of the USSR] (Moscow, 1970–72)
'Die Symphonie in Russland', Die Welt der Symphonie, ed. U. von Rauchhaupt (Hamburg and Brunswick, 1972); 237–46; Eng. trans. in The Symphony (London, 1973)
'K istorii operï Yamshchiki na podstave' [The history of Fomin's opera The Postdrivers], SovM (1973), no.10, pp.88–92
Muzïkal'naya ėntsiklopediya (Moscow, 1973–82)
'Problema stiley v russkoy muzïke XVII i XVIII vekov' [The problem of style in Russian music of the 17th and 18th centuries], SovM (1973), no.3, pp.58–65
Rakhmaninov i yego vremya [Rachmaninoff and his time] (Moscow, 1973)
Ocherki i issledovaniya po istorii russkoy muzïki [Sketches and research on the history of Russian music] (Moscow, 1978)
Istoriya russkoy muzïki, i: Drevnyaya Rus' XI–XIX vekov [The history of Russian music, i: Old Rus' from the 11th century to the 19th] (Moscow, 1983)
'Asaf'yev, kritik i stroitel' sovetskoy muzïkal'noy kul'turï' [Asaf'yev, critic and builder of Soviet musical culture], B.V. Asaf'yev i sovetskaya muzïkal'naya kul'tura: Moscow 1984, 5–16

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], ii (Moscow, 1974) [incl. list of writings]
O. Levasheva: 'Yuriy Vsevolodovich Keldïsh: stranitsï tvorcheskoy biografii' [Pages of a creative biography], in Yu. Keldïsh: Ocherki i issledovaniya po istorii russkoy muzïki (Moscow, 1978), 3–35
'Bol'shoy uchyonïy, prekresnïy chelovek' [A great scholar, a fine person], MAk (1995), no.2. pp.231–5

NELLI GRIGOR'YEVNA SHAKHNAZAROVA

Keldorfer, Viktor (Josef) (b Salzburg, 14 April 1873; d Vienna, 28 Jan 1959). Austrian choral conductor and composer. After studies in Salzburg, including music instruction at the Mozarteum, Keldorfer went in 1892 to Vienna, where he directed church choirs and became an associate conductor of the Vienna Männergesang-Verein. After serving as chief conductor of that chorus from 1909 to 1921, he went on to direct the Schubertbund (1922–38, 1945–54). At the tenth Deutsches Sängerfest in 1928, he directed a massed choir of about 40,000 singers. He edited the first complete collection of Schubert's works for men's chorus (Vienna, 1928), eight choral works by Bruckner, and a large number of works by Johann Strauss, father and son. Of his numerous compositions, almost exclusively vocal, the a cappella men's choruses are the most outstanding.

WORKS
(selective list)

Missa solemnis, g, op.60, chorus, str orch, org (1908)
Latin and German motets, *c*150 secular choral pieces Principal publishers: Bosworth, Universal

WRITINGS

Worte ohne Lieder eines alten Musikanten (Vienna, 1947)
Klingendes Salzburg: kleine Musikgeschichte der Mozart-Stadt (Zürich, 1951)
Der Spielmann des Herrn: der Salzburger Franziskanermönch Pater Peter Singer (Salzburg, 1952)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Jancik)
O. Dobrowlony: Viktor Keldorfer: Leben und Wirken eines österreichischen Künstlers (Vienna, 1947)
V. Keldorfer: Generalbeichte eines achtzigjährigen Sängerführers: Autobiographie in 800 Knittelversen (Vienna, 1953)

WILLIAM D. GUDGER

Keledi. Gourd and bamboo mouth organ. The term is used primarily by Kayan and Bahau peoples of Indonesian and Malaysian Borneo, although similar instruments have been played by many Borneo peoples, including the Iban, Kanowit, Dusun/Kadazan, Murut, Sebop, Kenyah and Punan (see INDONESIA, §VII, 1(ii), and MALAYSIA, §III). While organological details vary from group to group, these instruments generally consist of a dried gourd wind chamber, into which are inserted five to eight bamboo pipes. The Dusun/Kadazan and Murut of north-eastern Borneo (Sabah, Malaysia) organize the pipes into two parallel ranks of four tubes each. Peoples of the central highlands and adjacent areas to the east, west and south, usually arrange the tubes into a circular formation. With the exception of one mute pipe (typical of instruments from Sabah), the ends of the tubes sealed inside the wind chamber are equipped with free reeds. These vibrate when the player fills the reservoir with air by blowing into the neck of the gourd. Some instruments can also be made to sound by inhaling. Different pitches are produced with the fingers, either by covering one or two small holes on the exposed part of each tube, or by stopping the open end of the tube itself. A drone pipe is present on many instruments.

Historically, mouth organs have been played in various ritual and recreational contexts across the island of Borneo. In many of these contexts it has been played solely by men, although in some communities both men and women have played.

Many peoples of the central highlands have either discontinued performance of the mouth organ in the 20th century, or play it only rarely. Younger people are often unaware that such an instrument ever existed in these communities. In Sabah, however, the mouth organs of the Dusun/Kadazan and Murut have attained the status of a kind of cultural emblem, and are often sold in museums and craft shops.

Other terms for Borneo mouth organs include enkerurai, enkrurai, enkruri, kerurair (Iban); keluri (Sebop, some Kenyah, Kayan, and Iban sub-groups); keredi (some Kayan sub-groups); garudé (some Dusun, certain peoples of the central highlands); kediré', kediréq, kedirek (some Kenyah sub-groups); sampotan, sempotan, sumpotan, sompoton (most Dusun/Kadazan and Murut); and slidap (some Kenyah sub-groups).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W.H. Furness: Home-Life of Borneo Headhunters (Philadelphia, 1902)
H.H. Juynboll: Borneo: Katalog des Ethnographischen Reichmuseums, ii (Leiden, 1910–32)
R. Liew: 'Music and Musical Instruments in Borneo', Journal of the Sabah College Borneo Society, iii (1962), 10–17
E.M. Frame: 'The Musical Instruments of Sabah, Malaysia', EthM, xxvi (1982), 247–74
J. Pugh-Kitingan: 'Instruments and Instrumental Music of the Tambunan Kadazan/Dusun', Sabah Museum and Archives Journal, i/2 (1988), 24–61

V.K. Gorlinski: 'Pangpagaq: Religious and Social Significance of a Traditional Kenyah Music-Dance Form', Sarawak Museum Journal, xl/61 (1989), 279–301 [special issue]

VIRGINIA GORLINSKI

Kelemen, Milko (b Slatina, Croatia, 30 March 1924). Croatian composer and conductor. He studied composition with Šulek at the Zagreb Academy of Music (1945–52), under Messiaen and Aubin in Paris (1954–5) and with Fortner at the Freiburg Musikhochschule (1960–61). He held a Humboldt Scholarship to study at the Siemens electronic studio in Munich from 1966 to 1968, and he spent the years 1968–9 in Berlin with the aid of a scholarship awarded by the German Academic Exchange Service. From 1970 to 1972 he was professor of composition at the Düsseldorf Conservatory. He took up a similar appointment at the Stuttgart Musikhochschule (1973–1989). In 1961 Kelemen founded the Zagreb Biennale and became its first president; in this and other ways he was largely responsible for paving the way for avant-garde music in Croatia. Awards made to him include the Beethoven Prize awarded by the City of Bonn (1961), the prize awarded by the Italian section of the ISCM (1962), several awards from the City of Zagreb, the Bernhard Sprengel Prize from the City of Hanover (1969) and the Croatian Vladimir Nazor Prize (1984) for his life's work.

Kelemen's style underwent a dynamic evolution. His compositional output can be divided into three periods: an early corpus – Piano Sonata (1954) to Études contrapuntiques (1959) – written in a style influenced by folk music; an avant-garde period during which Kelemen experimented with musical structure; and, from Grand jeu (1982) onwards, a period marked by his discovery of a new, personal use of intervals and harmony. This last phase also assimilated earlier stylistic changes. An important work in this evolving process was Composé (1967); for the first time he found a new way of handling tonality and intervals. Eventually, he developed a form of polytonality. To achieve a desired effect, Kelemen may use any number of contemporary techniques, though he may also resort to the archetypal or exotic as a means of expression. In the multimedia ballet-opera Apocalyptica (1973–4), Kelemen and his collaborators used dispersed dramaturgy and allegory to portray some of the enduring and essential problems of the human condition within modern civilization. Salut au monde (1998), a much later work scored for soloists, double chorus, slide projections and lighting effects, uses bright vocality to create dramatic tension.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Der Spiegel (ballet), 1960, Paris, 18 Aug 1960
Abbandonate (ballet), 1964, Lübeck, 1 Sept 1964
Der neue Mieter (musical scene, after E. Ionesco), 1964, Münster, 15 Sept 1964, as Novi stanar, Zagreb, 18 May 1965
Der Belagerungszustand (op, 2, after A. Camus), 1970, Hamburg, 13 Jan 1970, as Opsadno stanje, Zagreb, 9 May 1971
Apocalyptica (multimedia ballet-op, F. Arrabal), collab. E. Kieselbach, concert perf., Graz, 10 Oct 1979; staged, Dresden, Semper-Oper, 10 May 1982

VOCAL

Die Spiele (V. Popa) Bar, str, 1958; Inserate (newspaper advertisements), chorus, 1960; Epitaph (G. Vitez), Mez, va, perc, 1961; Hommage à Heinrich Schütz (Bible), solo vv, chorus, 1965; O Primavera (cant., anon. Ital. poet), 1965; Die Wörter (cant., J-P. Satre), Mez, orch, 1966; Musik für Heissenbüttel (H. Heissenbüttel), Mez, cl, vn, vc, 1968; Passionato (F. Kriwet), 3 choruses, fl, 1972; Gasho (Keleman), 4 choruses, 1974, rev. as Monogatari, 12 vv, 1978; Die 7 Plagen (F. Arrabal), Mez, 1975; Die Richter, double chorus, 1977 [from Apocalyptica]; Landschaftsbilder, Mez, str qt, 1986; Animaux phantastiques, chorus, insts, 1995; Requiem (W. Whitman), spkr, 6 vc, bass drum, lighting, slide projections, 1995; Salut au monde (Whitman), solo vv, 2 choruses, orch, lighting, slide projections, 1998

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Koncertantne improvizacije, str, 1955; Adagio ed allegro, str, 1956; Bn Conc., str, 1957; Conc. giocoso, chbr orch, 1957; Concertino, db/vc, str, 1957; Konstellationen, chbr orch, 1960; Skolion, 1960; 5 Essays, str, 1961; Équilibres, 2 orch, 1962; Transfiguracije, pf, orch, 1962; Sub rosa, 1965; Composé, 2 pf, orch, 1967; Surprise, str, 1967; Changeant, vc, orch, 1968; Floreal, 1970; Olifant, trbn, 2 orch, 1971; Abecedarium, str, 1974; Mirabilia, pf, 2 orch, ring modulator, 1975; Mageia, 1978; Infinity, 1979; Grand jeu, vn, orch, 1982; Love Song, str, 1984; Phantasmen, va, orch, 1985; Archetypon, 1986; Antiphonie, org, orch, 1987; Drammatico, vc, orch, 1991; Für Anton, 1996; Delicate Clusters, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata, 1954; Étude, contrapuntiques, wind qnt, 1959; Sonata, ob, pf, 1960; Der Esel geht am Meer spazieren, pf; Radiant, chbr ens, 1963; Dessins commentées, pf, 1964; Entrances, wind qnt, 1966; Motion, str qt, 1969; Fabliau I, fl, 1972; Varia melodia, str qt, 1972; Rontondo I, wind trio, 1977; Splintery, str qt, 1977; 10 Fabeln, 2 rec; Säulen des Himmels, pf, 1986; Sonette, str qt, 1987; Memories, str trio, 1988; Nonett, 1993; Goodbye my Fancy, vn, pf 1998

WRITINGS

'Abschied von der Folklore', Melos, xxvi (1959), 178–80
'Leerzimmer und Kindheitserinnerung', Melos, xxxiv (1967), 244–9
Der Komponist und die Zagreber Musikbiennale (Graz, 1971)
'Muzika, publika i … kompozitor' [Music, the public and … the composer], Novi zvuk, ed. P. Selem (Zagreb, 1972)
'Nigdje ni traga panici' [No sign of panic], ibid.
'Kako podučavati novu glazbu' [How to teach new music], ibid. with B. Lazarin: 'Ne vidim razlike iamedu modernog i avangardnog' [I don't see a difference between the modern and the avant garde], ibid.
Notizen eines Komponisten (Wilhelmshaven, 1996)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Helm: 'Milko Kelemen: Yugoslav Avangardist', Musical America (New York, 1962)
E. Sedak: 'Milko Kelemen ili igra kao bijeg pred starim i novim dogmama u glazbi' [Milko Kelemen or the game of escape from old and new dogmas in music], Novi zvuk, ed. P. Selem (Zagreb, 1972)
F. Prieberg: 'Zwanzig Fragen an Milko Kelemen', Melos, xli (1974), 65–71
A. Browning: 'Une conversation avec Milko Kelemen', Cadmos (1979)
D. Davidović: 'Čisto-nečisto: uz Infinity (1978) Milka Kelemena' [Pure-impure: concerning Infinity (1978) by Kelemen], Arti musices, xxv/1–2 (1994), 267–75
W.M. Grimmel: 'Zwischen Ost und West: Milko Kelemen wird 70', NZM, Jg.155, no.2 (1994), 45–6

RUDOLF LÜCK, KORALJKA KOS

Kelemen, Zoltán (b Budapest, 12 March 1926; d Zürich, 9 May 1979). Hungarian bass-baritone. He studied in Budapest and Rome, making his début in 1959 at Augsburg as Kecal. After an engagement at Wuppertal, in 1961 he joined the Cologne Opera, remaining there until his death; he took part in the première of Zimmermann's Die Soldaten (1965) and made his London début with the company at Sadler's Wells (1969) as the Mayor in Der junge Lord. He first appeared at Bayreuth in 1962 as Ortel and a Nobleman (Lohengrin); in 1964 he sang Alberich, the role of his Salzburg (1965), Metropolitan (1968) and Covent Garden (1970) débuts, and which he recorded for Karajan. A fine Mozartian, he was an earthy Leporello, a suave Alfonso and an amusing, menacing Osmin. His other roles included Pizarro, Don Magnifico, Falstaff (Nicolai and Verdi), Dulcamara, the Grand Inquisitor, Ochs, Gianni Schicchi, Rangoni and Klingsor, which he also recorded. Kelemen was a powerful actor and coloured his rich, agile voice cleverly to suggest humour or malevolence as a character required.

ALAN BLYTH

Kéler, Béla (Albrecht Pál) [Keler, Adalbert Paul von] (b Bártfa, Hungary [now Bardejov, Slovakia], 13 Feb 1820; d Wiesbaden, 20 Nov 1882). Hungarian conductor and composer. As a patriotic Hungarian he used the Hungarian form of his name with surname first. He was at first a law student and then for four years a farmer before he took up music seriously, teaching himself theory from the writings of Albrechtsberger. After a spell as theatre violinist in Eperjes (Prešov), he moved to Vienna in 1845, taking a place as first violin in the orchestra of the Theater an der Wien and studying further with Simon Sechter. In 1854 he took over Gungl's orchestra in Berlin for a time and in 1855 that of August Lanner in Vienna on the latter's death; in 1856 he became bandmaster of the 10th Austrian Infantry Regiment. In 1860 he started an orchestra in Budapest, but this failed and from 1863 to 1870 he was conductor at Wiesbaden, composing there his most successful works including the Lustspiel-Ouverture. From 1872 his concert tours took him through Germany, to London and Manchester in 1874–5 and to Denmark and Switzerland. Brahms's fifth Hungarian Dance is based on Kéler's csárdás Bártfai emlék op.31. In 1879 he celebrated his silver anniversary as a conductor with a Jubiläums-Fest-Ouverture. An account of his life is given in Z. Sztehlo: Kéler Béla (Budapest, 1930).

WORKS
(selective list)

12 ovs., incl.: Ouverture romantique, op.72; Lustspiel-Ouverture, op.73; Tempelweihe, op.95; Ungarische Lustspiel Ov., op.108; Französische Lustspiel Ov., op.111; Italienische Schauspiel Ov., op.131; Jubiläums-Fest-Ouverture, op.132; Spanische Lustspiel Ov., op.137
27 waltzes, incl.: Hoffnungsstrahlen, op.17; Am schönen Rhein, op.83; An der Themse-Strand, op.104
22 marches, incl. Prinz Friedrich, op.13
13 galops, incl. Hurra, hurra, hurra, Sturm-galop, op.12
Die Schmetterlingsjagd, ballet, op.133
19 polkas, 14 csárdás, 10 mazurkas, 4 quadrilles

ANDREW LAMB

Kell, Reginald (Clifford) (b York, 8 June 1906; d Frankport, KY, 5 Aug 1981). English clarinettist. He won a scholarship to study with Haydn Draper at the RAM from 1929 to 1932, taught there from 1935 to 1939 and 1958 to 1959, and was made a Fellow in 1941. Much influenced by Leon Goossens, Kell's own expressive use of vibrato inspired a new style of clarinet playing in England. He was principal clarinet of the following orchestras: RPO (1931–2), Royal Opera House (1932–6), LPO (1932–6), LSO (1936–9), Toscanini International, Lucerne (1939), Liverpool PO (1942–5) and Philharmonia (1945–8). In 1938 Kell adjudicated at the International Festival of Woodwind Playing at Vienna. In 1948 he emigrated to the USA and toured there as a soloist and in the Canadian provinces. Kell was trustee and professor at the Aspen Music School in Colorado from 1951 to 1957. He made many recordings, including a notable account of the Brahms Clarinet Quintet, made in 1937 with the Busch Quartet. He published a Kell Method (New York, 1968) and some studies, and was director of Boosey & Hawkes's band instrument division from 1959 to 1966. In 1971 he returned to live in England.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Gelatt: Music Makers (New York, 1953)
Obituary, The Clarinet, ix/2 (1982), 6–11
P. Weston: Clarinet Virtuosi of Today (London, 1989), 12–13

PAMELA WESTON

Keller, Alfred (b Rorschach, canton of St Gallen, 5 Jan 1907; d Rorschach, 14 June 1987). Swiss composer. He attended the Zürich Conservatory (1925–7), where he studied with Carl Baldegger (piano) and Volkmar Andreae (composition and conducting), among others, and the Preussische Akademie der Künste, Berlin (1927–30), where his teachers included Schoenberg. Upon his return to Switzerland in 1930, he was active as a private teacher and conductor; later he taught the piano at the Rorschach teachers' training college (1946–75). His many songs, written for the choirs he conducted, are written in a traditional tonal idiom; other works remain faithful to dodecaphony, drawing on Hauer's 12-note method as well as Schoenberg's. The dominance of short motifs in his music and his use of symmetrical and analogous structures, such as in the Variationen über ein Thema von Schoenberg (1962), also attest to the influence of Webern. Keller made cautious use of more experimental techniques as well; in Duettino for flute and clarinet (1970), for example, clattering noises are integrated, through the use of spatial notation, into an otherwise strictly regulated context. Writing in a style distinct from the neo-classicism popular in Switzerland at the time, only a few of his works were published and performances of his composition were rare.

WORKS

Orch: Passacaglia, str, 1960–61; Variationen über ein Thema von Schoenberg, 1962, rev. 1967; Ossia, 1980–81
Vocal: Das Liebespaar von Übermorgen (E. Basler), 1v, speaking chorus, 2 sax, 2 tpt, trbn, pf, perc, 1935; 4 Lieder, 1v, pf, 1941; Galgenlieder (C. Morgenstern), 1v, fl, cl, hn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1942–4; Trinken wir (S. Petöfi), 1v, pf, 1945; Ewiger Augenblick (H. Helmerking), S, fl, b cl, cel, hp, vn, vc, 1962–3; Der enthüllte Stern (R.B. Matzig), 1v, fl, ob, cl, vn, va, vc, hp, perc, 1974–5; 3 Lieder (R. Hörler), 1v, pf, 1982; various works for chorus; arrs. of popular songs; music for children
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1930; Ciacona, fl, 1970; Duettino, fl, cl, 1970; Burletta, cl, 1972; Capricciettto, fl, 1973; Canzonetta, ob, 1973; Pastorella, Scherzino, ob, 1973; Monodialog, 2 fl, 1976
Kbd (pf, unless otherwise stated): Sonata, 1928; Suite, 1936–7; Toccata, 1952, rev. 1967; Epitaph für Arnold Schoenberg, 1956, rev. 1958; 3 Zwölfton-Etüden: Martellato, Flageolett, Perpetuum mobile, 1956; Polymetrum, Palindrom, Permutatio, 1967–8; 3 Klavierstücke: Melancholericon, Consolation, Omaggio, 1972–4; 4 Chorale Preludes, org, 1976–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Larese: Alfred Keller: eine Lebensskizze (Amriswil, 1969)
N. Schmuck: Alfred Keller: Entwicklung und Beschreibung seiner Kompositionsmethode (Steinach, St Gallen, 1978)
W. Labhart: 'Musik aus der Stille: Hinweise auf den Komponisten Alfred Keller', Rorschacher Neujahrsblatt, lxxxiii (1983), 93–104
C. Keller: 'Bauen mit Tönen: zum Tode von Alfred Keller', Dissonanz, xiii (1987), 22–3

CHRISTOPH KELLER

Keller, Hans (b Vienna, 11 March 1919; d London, 6 Nov 1985). British music critic and writer of Austrian birth. He grew up in Döbling (Vienna) in a circle that included Franz Schmidt and the writer and violinist Oskar Adler. After being held by the Nazis during the Anschluss, he fled in 1938 to London where he stayed for the rest of his life. During the next ten years he studied the violin, took the LRAM, and played in a variety of string quartets and orchestras. At the same time he worked with sociologists on small group psychology, and taught himself psychoanalysis through the writings of Freud, Flügel, Jones and Glover. (Later, he psychoanalysed himself, and even took a patient.) His early published and unpublished writings are mainly in these fields, and their stance and aphoristic clarity pervade his life's work.

From the mid-1940s Keller wrote extensively and provocatively on film music, championed the work of Benjamin Britten, and emerged as a keen protagonist of Schoenberg. He came to prominence as a self-styled 'anti-critic' through the outspoken little journal Music Survey (1949–52); this he edited jointly with Donald Mitchell, as he did the forthright Benjamin Britten: a Commentary on his Works from a Group of Specialists (1952). In the 1950s, arguably his golden years, he wrote seminal studies of Stravinsky, Gershwin, Elgar, Schoenberg and (especially) Mozart; he sustained a number of columns devoted to the contemporary music scene, notably 'The New in Review' for Music Review; and he devised a form of wordless musical criticism ('Functional Analysis') that explored the latent unity of manifestly contrasting themes. Many of these analyses were performed and broadcast in Britain and Germany. He also began to teach at the Dartington Summer School and to address the problems of music education.

In 1959 Keller joined the BBC, and over the next 20 years took charge, successively, of music talks, chamber music, orchestral music, regional symphony orchestras and new music. During 15 of these years he was also chairman of the working party that planned the International Concert Seasons of the European Broadcasting Union. He was himself a distinctive radio speaker and his virtuoso broadcasts on the chamber music of Beethoven and Schoenberg have now been transcribed. However, by challenging the proposal to abolish the Third Programme in favour of generic programming, he found himself assuming the controversial role of conscience to the BBC. He retired at the age of 60 in 1979.

It was during these years that he propounded in The Listener his 'two dimensional theory of music', by which 'background' expectation was contradicted by 'foreground' innovation. This theory he ramified in later writings. In another column, 'Truth and Music' for Music and Musicians (1966–71, 1984–5), he elaborated his aesthetic views, which were rooted in Kant and Schopenhauer. Elsewhere, he explored his familiar topic of the relation between tonal and 12-note music in the work of Shostakovich; he addressed the classical romanticism of Schumann and Mendelssohn; and, at Dartington, he spoke on the 'Principles of Composition' and 'Music and Psychopathology'. His interests in music, psychoanalysis and football were united in 1975 (1984 minus 9) (1977), and he wrote and translated several librettos. Some of this work was on behalf of Britten, who rewarded him with the dedication of his Third String Quartet (1976).

In the late 1970s two visits to the Jerusalem Music Centre Mishkenot Sha'ananim yielded The Jerusalem Diary – a commentary on contemporary society, music and politics in Israel – and a defence of The Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Both books still await publication. In his last six years after leaving the BBC, he worked as a string coach at the Guildhall and Yehudi Menuhin Schools of Music, made two trips to Canada and the USA, lectured and broadcast in Germany and taught musical analysis in a variety of colleges. He completed Stravinsky Seen and Heard (1982), The Great Haydn Quartets: Their Interpretation (1986) and Criticism (1987), and wrote voluminously on a variety of subjects including bowing, the lied, creative character, symphonism, modern music and culture.

In 1985 he was awarded a cross of honour by the President of Austria. Shortly afterwards, at the time of his death, he was celebrated for the breadth of his interests, for his charismatic if combative personality, for his loyalty to a remarkable circle of friends, and for his fearless defence of individuals. Music Analysis published a bibliography in 1986 and a selection of Essays on Music appeared in 1994.

See also ANALYSIS, §II, 5.

WRITINGS

'Film Music', Sight and Sound, no.60 (1946–7), 136; no.62 (1947), 63–4; no.64 (1947–8), 168–9; MR, x (1949), 50–51, 138, 225–6, 303; xi (1950), 52–3; Music Survey, i (1949), 196–7; ii (1949–50), 25–7, 101–2, 188–9, 250–51; iii (1950–51), 42–3; MT, xcvi (1955), 265–6

Benjamin Britten: Albert Herring (London, 1947)

Benjamin Britten: The Rape of Lucretia (London, 1947)

The Need for Competent Film Music Criticism (London, 1947)

'Britten and Mozart: a Challenge in the Form of Variations on an Unfamiliar Theme', ML, xxix (1948), 17–30; unauthorized Ger. trans., ÖMz, v (1950), 138–47

'The Beggar's Opera', Tempo, no.10 (1948–9), 7–13

'Resistances to Britten's Music: their Psychology', Music Survey, ii (1949–50), 227–36

'Arthur Benjamin and the Problem of Popularity', Tempo, no.15 (1950), 4–15

'Schoenberg and the Men of the Press', Music Survey, iii (1950–51), 160–68

'Is Opera Really Necessary?', Opera, ii (1951), 337–45, 402–9

ed., with D. Mitchell: Benjamin Britten: a Commentary on his Works from a Group of Specialists (London, 1952) [incl. 'Peter Grimes: the Story, the Music not Excluded', 111–31; 'The Musical Character', 319–51]

'The Idomeneo Gavotte's Vicissitude', MR, xiv (1953), 155–7

'Film Music: British', Grove5

'National Frontiers in Music', Tempo, no.33 (1954), 23–30

'First Performances: Dodecaphoneys', MR, xvi (1955), 323–9

'First Performances: their Pre- and Reviews', MR, xvi (1955), 141–7

'Strict Serial Technique in Classical Music', Tempo, no.37 (1955), 12–24

'The Chamber Music', The Mozart Companion, ed. H.C.R. Landon and D. Mitchell (London, 1956), 90–137

'The Entführung's "Vaudeville"', MR, xvii (1956), 304–13

'Key Characteristics', Tempo, no.40 (1956), 5–16

'KV503: the Unity of Contrasting Themes and Movements', MR, xvii (1956), 48–58, 120–29

'The New in Review', MR, xvii (1956), 94–5, 153–4, 251–3, 332–6; xviii (1957), 48–51, 150–53, 221–4; xix (1958), 52–4, 137–41, 226–8, 319–22; xx (1959), 71–2, 159–62, 289–99; xxi (1960), 79–80; xxii (1961), 51–2

'Serial Octave Transpositions', MMR, lxxxvi (1956), 139–43, 172–7

'A Slip of Mozart's: its Analytical Significance', Tempo, no.42 (1956–7), 12–15

'Elgar the Progressive', MR, xviii (1957), 294–9

'Functional Analysis: its Pure Appreciation', MR, xviii (1957), 202–6; xix (1958), 192–200; see also MR, xxi (1960), 73–6, 237–9

'Rhythm: Gershwin and Stravinsky', The Score, no.20 (1957), 19–31

'Schoenberg's "Moses and Aron"', The Score, no.21 (1957), 30–45

'Knowing Things Backwards', Tempo, no.46 (1958), 14–20

'Principles of Composition', The Score, no.26 (1960), 35–45; no.27 (1960), 9–21

'New Music: Beethoven's Choral Fantasy', The Score, no.28 (1961), 38–47

'Whose Fault is the Speaking Voice?', Tempo, no.75 (1965–6), 12–17

'Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart', 'Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky', The Symphony, i, ed. R. Simpson (Harmondsworth, 1966–7), 50–103, 342–53
'The Contemporary Problem', Tempo, no.82 (1967), 29; no.83 (1967–8), 24–5; no.84 (1968), 25–6; no.85 (1968), 30–33; no.86 (1968), 26–7; no.87 (1968–9), 76–9; no.88 (1969), 56–7; no.89 (1969), 25, 27–8; no.91 (1969–70), 34–6
'Towards a Theory of Music', The Listener (11 June 1970)
'Shostakovich's Twelfth Quartet', Tempo, no.94 (1970), 6–15
'Closer Towards a Theory of Music', The Listener (18 Feb 1971)
'Music and Psychopathology', History of Medicine, iii/2 (1971), 3–7
'Mozart's Wrong Key Signature', Tempo, no.98 (1972), 21–7
'Schoenberg: the Future of Symphonic Thought', PNM, xiii/1 (1974–5), 3–20
'Music 1975', New Review, no.24 (1976), 17–53
'The Classical Romantics: Schumann and Mendelssohn', Of German Music: a Symposium, ed. H.-H. Schönzeler (London and New York, 1976), 179–218
'Description, Analysis and Criticism: a Differential Diagnosis', Soundings [Cardiff], vi (1977), 108–20
'My Family, You and I', New Review, nos.34–5 (1977), 13–23
1975 (1984 minus 9) (London, 1977)
'The State of the Symphony: not only Maxwell Davies', Tempo, no.125 (1978), 6–11
'Operatic Music and Britten', The Operas of Benjamin Britten, ed. D. Herbert (London, 1979), xiii–xxxi
'Schoenberg's Return to Tonality', Journal of the Arnold Schoenberg Institute, v/1 (1981), 2–21
'Epilogue/Prologue: Criticism and Analysis', MAn, i (1982), 9–31 with M. Cosman: Stravinsky Seen and Heard (London, 1982)
'Goethe and the Lied', Goethe Revisited: a Collection of Essays, ed. E.M. Wilkinson (London, 1984), 73–84
'The Musician as Librettist', Opera, xxxv (1984), 1095–9
'Personal Recollections: Oskar Adler's and My Own', in H. Truscott: The Music Forum of Franz Schmidt, i: The Orchestral Music (London, 1984), 7–17
'Whose Authenticity?', EMc, xii (1984), 517–19
'Functional Analysis of Mozart's G minor Quintet', MAn, iv (1985), 73–94
The Great Haydn Quartets: Their Interpretation (London, 1986)
Criticism (London, 1987)
C. Wintle, ed.: Essays on Music (Cambridge, 1994)
C. Wintle, ed.: Three Psychoanalytic Notes on Peter Grimes (1946) (London, 1995)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Wintle, ed.: 'Hans Keller (1919–1985): a Memorial Symposium', MAn, v (1986), 341–440 [incl. list of pubns, 407–40]
A. Garnham: Hans Keller and the BBC (diss., U. of London, in progress)

CHRISTOPHER WINTLE

Keller, Hermann (b Stuttgart, 20 Nov 1885; d Freiburg, 17 Aug 1967). German musicologist and keyboard performer. After studying architecture at Stuttgart and Munich, he was encouraged to take up a musical career by his teacher Max Reger. He studied at Munich, Stuttgart and Leipzig, and in 1910 took a teaching post at Weimar, where he performed double concertos with Reger. In 1916 he was appointed organist at the Markuskirche, Stuttgart. He taught at the Musikhochschule there from 1919 and took the doctorate at Tübingen in 1924 with a dissertation on musical articulation. From 1928 he was head of the department of church and school music in the Musikhochschule, and became its director in 1946, retiring in 1952.

Keller was best known for his work as a scholar and performer of 17th- and 18th-century keyboard music; his particular interest lay in the keyboard works of J.S. Bach, on which he contributed a number of articles to the Bach-Jahrbuch between 1913 and 1954. He edited Bach's keyboard works (and some for organ), the organ works of Scheidt, Buxtehude (a selection in two volumes), Lübeck, Frescobaldi, Handel's organ concertos opp.4 and 7 (arranged for organ solo) and a selection of 150 sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti. In his editions he was particularly adept at providing convincing completions for fragmentary pieces. Towards the end of his life Keller turned his attention to Chopin, and besides some articles, he was responsible for a critical edition of the preludes (1956).

WRITINGS

Reger und die Orgel (Munich, 1923)
Die musikalische Artikulation, insbesondere bei Joh. Seb. Bach (diss., U. of Tübingen, 1924; Stuttgart, 1925)
Schule des klassischen Triospiels (Kassel, 1928, 4/1955)
Schule des Generalbass-Spiels (Kassel, 1931, 5/1967; Eng. trans., 1965/R; Jap. trans., 1976)
Schule der Choral-Improvisation für Orgel (Leipzig, 1939)
Die Kunst des Orgelspiels (Leipzig, 1941/R)
Die Orgelwerke Bachs (Leipzig, 1948/R; Eng. trans., 1967)
Die Klavierwerke Bachs (Leipzig, 1950/R; Jap. trans., 1972)
Phrasierung and Artikulation (Kassel, 1955; Eng. trans., 1965/R; Jap. trans., 1970)
Essay in Die Bedeutung der Zeichen Keil, Strich und Punkt bei Mozart, ed. H. Albrecht (Kassel, 1957), 7–21
Domenico Scarlatti, ein Meister des Klaviers (Leipzig, 1957; Jap. trans., 1974)
'Gibt es eine h-moll Messe von Bach?', Musikerkenntnis und Musikerziehung: Dankesgaben für Hans Mersmann, ed. W. Wiora (Kassel, 1957), 69–75
'Chopin: Stil und Persönlichkeit', Musica, xiv (1960), 133–9
'Zur Textkritik des Préludes und Etudes von Chopin', Chopin-Jb 1963, 80–87
Das Wohltemperierte Klavier von Johann Sebastian Bach (Kassel, 1965, 4/1989; Eng. trans., 1976; Fr. trans., 1972; It. trans., 1991)
'Zur Geschichte der Urtextausgaben der Klavierwerke Bachs in der Edition Peters', DJbM, x (1965), 127–32
'Schuberts Verhältnis zur Sonateform', Musa – mens – musici: im Gedenken an Walther Vetter (Leipzig, 1969), 287–95

HUGH COBBE

Keller, J(?ohann) Gottfried [Godfrey] (d London, ?before 25 Nov 1704). German composer and harpsichordist, active in England. Nothing is known for sure of his life before 23 June 1694, when he was given a passport to travel to Holland, but he seems to have been in England around 1680, for Edward Lowe (d 1682) copied five pieces by him in a set of partbooks (GB-Ob Mus.Sch.E.443–6) begun in 1677, three of which also exist in apparently autograph parts in GB-Ob Mus.Sch.C.44. Assuming he remained in England throughout the 1680s and 90s, it is likely he became involved in public concerts, though he is only mentioned in advertisements for concerts at Drury Lane Theatre and at York Buildings in 1703 and 1704. He was listed as teaching the keyboard with Henry Purcell and Giovanni Battista Draghi in the abortive proposal for a Royal Academy in 1695, and married Mary Goodrick on 31 March 1698 in the London church of St James, Duke's Place. Hawkins called him 'a celebrated master of the harpsichord', and added that he was prevented from publishing his continuo treatise, A Compleat Method (London, 1705), by 'an immature death'. He is mentioned as 'being lately Dead' on 25 November 1704, when Gottfried Finger's library was offered for sale; he had purchased it with John Banister (ii) before Finger's departure from England in 1701. He left his 'best fiddle' and a spinet to his elder son Godfrey.

In his compositions Keller was capable of achieving an effective synthesis between the Purcellian idiom and the German sonata. His sonatas are similar in style and scoring to those by the Moravian composer Gottfried Finger, which suggests either that he was closely connected with Finger in England, or that he also came from that part of central Europe. The six sonatas of 1699 were dedicated to Princess Anne, and were probably composed for musicians in her service, including the trumpeter John Shore and the oboe and recorder players James Paisible and Peter La Tour. Like Finger, he also wrote a good deal of easy, attractive music for amateur recorder players. His Compleat Method includes some figured bass 'lessons' with fugal entries, and simple 'Rules for Tuning a Harpsicord or Spinnet'.

WORKS

3 airs, C, vn, 1691[5]
2 sonatas, G, C, 2 rec/vn, 2 ob/vn, bc, 6 sonates . . . par Mr. Fingher et . . . Mr. Keller (Amsterdam, 1698); ed. D. Lasocki (London, 1979, 1981)
8 sonates à trois parties, F, B♭, d, F, 2 rec/vn, bc; B♭, vn, vn/ob, bc; c, 2 rec/vn, bc; a, G, rec, vn/ob, bc (Amsterdam, 1699[9]/R), no.4 by R. Orme; 1 ed. D. Lasocki (London, 1981)
6 Sonatas, D, D, D, tpt/ob, str, bc; d, B♭, F, 2 rec, 2 ob/vn, bc (Amsterdam, 1699); 1 ed. M. Tilmouth (London, 1960); 1 ed. P. Holman (London, 1979)
Trumpet minuet, C, vn, 1700[8]
Air, g, 2 rec, 50 airs Anglois, i (Amsterdam, 1702/R)
Ground, F, rec, b, 50 airs Anglois, i (Amsterdam, 1702/R); version in D, vn, b, GB-Lcm 11.F.10
Prelude, D, vn, Select Preludes or Volentarys (London, 1704), arr. rec, F, Select Preludes and Vollumtarys (London, 1708); ed. R. Colwell (London, 1949)
6 sonate à tre (Amsterdam, 1706), d, F, g, B♭, C, G, 2 rec, bc; 2 ed. D. Lasocki (Tokyo, 1978, 1981)
3 sonatas, C, F, F, 2 rec, bc, 2 sonatas, F, C, 3 rec, Lbl (inc., 1 pt only), frags. DRc
2 pieces, C, a, 3 vn, b, bc, sonata, d/b, 3 rec/vn, DRc
Chaconne, D, vn, bc, chaconne, d, vn, b viol, bc, sonata, A, 2 vn, bc, suite, g, 2 vn, b, bc, chaconne, G, 2 vn, b, bc, Ob
Air, a 4, C, US-LAuc, Finney Partbooks
11 pieces, D, C, G, d, kbd, GB-Ob; air, F, inc., kbd, GB-CDu

WRITINGS

A Compleat Method for Attaining to Play Thorough Bass upon either Organ, Harpsicord or Theorbo-Lute (London, 1705, 6/1717, and as an appx to 1731 edn of W. Holder: A Treatise of the Natural Grounds, and Principles of Harmony)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDA; HawkinsH
F.T. Arnold: The Art of Accompaniment from a Thorough-Bass (London, 1931/R)
M. Tilmouth: 'The Royal Academies of 1695', ML, xxxviii (1957), 327–34
M. Tilmouth: Chamber Music in England, 1675–1720 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1959)
M. Tilmouth: 'A Calendar of References to Music in Newspapers Published in London and the Provinces (1660–1719)', RMARC, no.1 (1961) [whole issue]
F. Lesure: Bibliographie des éditions musicales publiées par Estienne Roger et Michel-Charles Le Cène (Amsterdam, 1696–1743) (Paris, 1969)
P. Holman: 'The Trumpet Sonata in England', EMc, iv (1976), 424–9
D. Lasocki: 'The French Hautboy in England, 1673–1730', EMc, xvi (1988), 339–57
I. Spink, ed.: The Seventeenth Century, The Blackwell History of Music in Britain, iii (Oxford, 1992)

PETER HOLMAN

Kelleri [Keller], Fortunato. See CHELLERI, FORTUNATO.

Kelley, Edgar Stillman [Stillman-Kelley, Edgar] (b Sparta, WI, 14 April 1857; d New York, 12 Nov 1944). American organist, composer and writer on music. He began piano lessons with his mother, then studied with F.W. Merriam (1870–74) before going to Chicago, where he continued his piano studies with N. Ledochowski and took harmony and counterpoint lessons with Clarence Eddy. In 1876 he went to Stuttgart and studied under Max Seifritz (composition and orchestration), Wilhelm Krüger and Wilhelm Speidel (piano), and Friedrich Finck (organ). He returned to the USA in 1880 and settled in San Francisco. For six years he taught, composed, and gave piano and organ recitals; he also studied the music of the Chinese community, which resulted in the suite Aladdin for orchestra (1887–93).

Kelley spent the years 1886 to 1892 in New York, conducting light opera, arranging music, composing, and teaching theory and piano. In 1891 he married Jessie Gregg (1865–1949), a pianist and teacher, who was later prominent in the National Federation of Music Clubs; her promotional and managerial efforts greatly enhanced her husband's career. In 1892 Kelley returned to the West Coast to become music critic of the San Francisco Examiner, but he moved back to New York four years later. In 1898 he was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters. For the academic year 1901–2 he was acting professor of music at Yale.

From 1902 to 1910 Kelley lived in Berlin, where he taught piano and composition; Riegger was one of his pupils. He returned to the USA in 1910 to teach at Western College for Women at Oxford, Ohio; the following year the college granted him a permanent fellowship in composition. He also accepted an appointment at the Cincinnati College of Music to teach theory and composition (1911–34). During this period he published two books, Chopin the Composer (1913) and Musical Instruments (1925). Kelley received honorary degrees from Miami University, Oxford, Ohio (DLitt 1916) and the University of Cincinnati (LLD 1916).

Kelley's music shows the influence of his training in the Germanic tradition; harmony is tempered by a sure instinct for thematic development and a sense of symmetry. His works, predominantly programmatic, are characterized by clear writing, free experimentation with tonal colour and the use of whimsical details that enliven otherwise conventional methods. In his liking for circumspect musical innovation, extra-musical depiction and humour he bears an affinity with the Boston composer, George Chadwick. His theatre works, particularly the incidental music to Ben Hur, foreshadow the film music of the next several decades, and in fact Kelley wrote one film score, though the film, Corianton, apparently was never released.

Typical compositional traits are revealed in his Chinese suite Aladdin, whose four movements depict a wedding, palace garden, flight of a genie, and 'Feast of Lanterns'. The music is filled with Chinese pentatonic melodies and instrumental sounds, and displays picturesque orchestration. In sharp contrast, his Symphony no.2 ('New England') reflects his New England ancestry. Its four movements are cast in typical symphonic structures. The music, less obviously programmatic than in the suite, is grave and reflective, as the composer ponders the experiences of the Pilgrims who settled in Plymouth in 1620. The third movement makes moving use of Timothy Swan's New England hymn 'Why do we mourn departing friends'. Almost of of Kelley's compositions adhere either to the colourfulness of the suite or the solemn expressivity of the symphony.

Kelley had strong ideas about nationalism in music and the position of American composers, which he expressed in numerous articles. He was avowedly an American composer and his works embody the spirit and sentiment of American life. Although many of Kelley's stage works and symphonic pieces achieved success when first performed, little of his music continues to be performed.

WORKS

Stage: Music to Macbeth (incid music, W. Shakespeare), op.7, 1882–4, rev. as orch suite, Gaelic March, arr. pf 4 hands (1886); Pompeiian Picnic (operetta, A.C. Gunter), op.9, 1887; Prometheus Bound (incid music, Aeschylus), op.16, 1891; Puritania (operetta, C.M.S. McLellan), op.11, 1892; Ben Hur (incid music, L. Wallace), op.17, 1899; The Pilgrim's Progress (musical miracle play, after J. Bunyan), op.37 (Boston, 1917); other incid music

Orch: Confluentia, op.2 no.2, str, 1882 [arr. of no.2 of 3 Pieces, pf]; Aladdin: a Chinese Suite, op.10, 1887–93; Sym. no.1 'Gulliver: his Voyage to Lilliput', after J. Swift, op.15, 1900; Sym. no.2 'New England', op.33, 1913; Alice in Wonderland, suite, 1919; The Pit and the Pendulum, suite after E.A. Poe (New York, 1930); Corianton, film score, *c*1930

Vocal: A Wedding Ode, op.4, male chorus, orch, 1882; Phases of Love, 6 songs, op.6, S, pf, no.6 pubd (1888); 2 Songs, op.8 (1901); O Captain! My Captain! (W. Whitman), op.19, chorus, orch (Boston, n.d.); A California Idyll, op.38, S, orch, 1918; America's Creed, op.40, chorus, orch (Boston, 1919); other choral pieces, songs

Chbr and solo inst: Theme and Variations, op.1, str qt, *c*1880, rev. as op.25; 3 Pieces, op.2, pf (1891), no.2 Confluentia arr. str orch; Lyric Opera Sketches, pf (1894); Pf Qnt, op.20, 1898–1901; Str Qt, op.25 (New York, 1907); other pieces, arrs., pf

MSS in US-OX

Principal publishers: G. Schirmer, Stillman-Kelley Publication Society, Birchard, Ditson

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD; Grove, Amer. suppl; GroveA

R. Hughes: 'Edgar Stillman Kelley', Music, x (1896), 279–87

A. Shepherd: 'Stillman-Kelley, Edgar', Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music, ed. W.W. Cobbett (London, 1929–30, 2/1963)

M.R. King: Edgar Stillman Kelley: American Composer, Teacher, and Author (diss., Florida State U., 1970)

L.L. Rivenburg: 'Edgar Stillman Kelley and the American Musical Theatre', Musical Theatre in America: Greenvale, NY, 1981, 111–22

N.E. Tawa: Mainstream Music of Early Twentieth Century America (Westport, CT, 1992)

KATHERINE K. PRESTON/N.E. TAWA

Kellie, 6th Earl of. See KELLY.

Kellner, Andreas (d Stettin, 1591). German printer. In 1572 he took over the subsidiary press in Stettin founded by his father-in-law JOHANN EICHORN.

Kellner, David (b Leipzig, *c*1670; d Stockholm, 6 April 1748). German organist, lutenist, composer and theorist. Nothing is known about his life before 1711 when he was in Stockholm as organist at the Jacobskyrka and as carillonneur at the German Church. Only vague evidence connects him with Leipzig and Hamburg, where he may have been a captain in the military. Kellner was one of the last of the lutenist virtuoso-composers. His only extant composition is a collection of 17 lute pieces (XVI [sic] Auserlesene Lauten-Stücke, Hamburg, 1747) in various dance forms, as well as more extended pieces described as fantasies and variations on a chaconne in A major. In 1720 Kellner composed a 'musicalisches Concert', Der frolockende Parnassus, for the name day (18 July) of King Frederick I of Sweden.

Kellner's primary fame rests on his popular thoroughbass manual, Treulicher Unterricht im General-Bass, published in Hamburg in 1732, and reissued in numerous editions until as late as 1796, including Swedish (1739) and Dutch (1741) translations; the third German edition (Hamburg, 1743) has been published in facsimile (Laaber, 1980). The first two editions appeared with only the initials D.K. on the title-pages. However, in the second edition (Hamburg, 1737; ed. E. Thom (Michaelstein, ?1985)) Georg Philipp Telemann gave the author's complete name (although as Keller) in a new preface. The long-lived popularity of Kellner's treatise, especially in Sweden, where it was almost the only instructional work of its type in use for a long period, can be explained by its brevity (less than 100 pages) and the conciseness of the explanations. The work stands in marked contrast to the more important thoroughbass works of the period by Mattheson and Heinichen, which were exceedingly complex, lengthy and undoubtedly expensive. Kellner divided his book into seven chapters: 1. On intervals, chords, regulating the parts; 2. On the use of the figures; 3. On the natural Ambitus of keys and the accompaniment; 4. On unusual progressions which deviate from natural ones; 5. On the modulation [Ausweichungen] of keys; 6. On the nature of consonances; 7. On the use of dissonances. For those familiar with Heinichen's monumental treatise, Der General-Bass in der Composition (Dresden, 1728), Kellner's work will frequently seem derivative not only in spirit but also in phraseology.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.A. Wienandt: 'David Kellner's Lautenstücke', JAMS, x (1957), 29–38

W. Hobohm: Commentary to E. Thom, ed.: David Kellner: Treulicher Unterricht im General-Bass, nebst einer Vorrede von Georg Philipp Telemann (Michaelstein, ?1985)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Kellner, Johann Christoph (b Gräfenroda, Thuringia, 15 Aug 1736; d Kassel, 1803). German organist and composer, son of JOHANN PETER KELLNER. He studied music first with his father and later with Georg Benda at Gotha. After a stay in Amsterdam and The Hague he became the court organist and Kantor in the Lutheran church at Kassel.

Apart from a Singspiel, Die Schadenfreude, Kellner's output is dominated by keyboard works that continue in his father's galant style. His preludes show a preference for harmonious, homophonic writing, with clear song-like melodies and figured elaboration. In the fugues the counterpoint is set off by harmonic centres of gravity, and the instrumental works clearly reveal sonata- and toccata-like treatment. The galant style is most apparent in the keyboard concertos, which grew partly from the playful style favoured by amateurs (e.g. op.5) and partly from C.P.E. Bach's concerto style using contrasts and dramatic tension. In the relationship between the solo instrument and the orchestra Kellner anticipated the Viennese Classical concerto. The sonata form pervades his various instrumental works, yet his chorale settings, organ trios and fantasias combine counterpoint with galant expression. The emphasis on Empfindsamkeit is also present in the cantatas; for some of these it is not clear whether Kellner or his father composed them. His theory treatise, Grundriss des Generalbasses op.16 pt.1 (Kassel, 1783, 7/1796), achieved great success, and the inclusion of many works by Kellner in 18th-century collections indicates the extent to which he was in touch with the prevailing taste.

WORKS

INSTRUMENTAL

Hpd/pf concs. (all pubd in Frankfurt): 1 as op.3 (n.d.), lost; 1 as op.4 (n.d.); 3 as op.5 (n.d.); 3 as op.7 (n.d.); 3 as op.8 (n.d.), lost; 1 as op.11 (?1782); others, mentioned in EitnerQ, lost

Chbr: 3 sonatas, hpd/pf, vn, vc, op.9 (Kassel, n.d.), lost; Serenade, pf/(2 vn, fl, 2 hn, b), 2 sonatas, pf, acc. vn, 1 conc., pf, acc. 2 vn, op.13 (Kassel, n.d.); Sonata, pf, ad lib vn, va, op.18 (Offenbach, n.d.); Sonata, hpd/pf, fl/vn, vc, op.19 (Darmstadt, n.d.), lost

Kbd (org, unless otherwise stated): 6 fugues, pf (Amsterdam and The Hague, 1765), lost; 3 Vor- oder vielmehr Nachspiele, 3 Fugen, 3 Choral-Vorspiele, im Trio mit dem Canto-firmo, op.14 pt 1 (Kassel, n.d.); Orgel-Stücke von verschiedener Art, op.14 pt 2 (Kassel, n.d.); Mein trautes Röschen, rondo, C, pf (Speyer, 1782); 31 neue Orgelstücke, op.17 pt 1 (Speyer, 1789): 12 preludes, 14 chorale preludes incl. 4 Triomässig, fantasia, fugue, qt for 4 hands and pedals, 2 trio chorales for 2 kbds and pedals; Menuett, Fantasie, Fuge, Marche, Quartetto, pf (Speyer, 1789); Sinfonia, D, pf (Speyer, 1789); Neue Orgelstücke, op.17 pt 2 (Darmstadt, 1793); 14 Orgelstücke, bestehend in leichten Vor- und Nachspielen, zwischen neuen Choral-Vorspielen, op.20 pt 1 (Brunswick, n.d.); 2 Fugen, pf/org 4 hands (Leipzig, 1795); Caffe, fughette, pf (Leipzig, 1795), lost; Marsch der Leibgarde zu Hessen-Cassel, variations, pf (Leipzig, 1795), lost; 6 fugues très faciles, org/pf (Amsterdam, ?1802); 3 Fugen (Kassel, n.d.), lost; VIII Easy Preludes, org/hpd (London, n.d.), lost; 2 Nachspiele, fugue, op.posth. (Brunswick, n.d.), lost; other pf works in 18th-century collections

VOCAL

Die Schadenfreude (Spl, C.F. Weisse), Kassel, 1782, vs, op.10 (Kassel, ?1782); 7 cants., incl. 4 perhaps J.P. Kellner, D-Bsb; Herr Bachus ist ein braver Mann (G.A. Burger), song, ed. E. Consentius, Gedichte (Berlin, 1914); others, mentioned in EitnerQ, lost

For bibliography see KELLNER, JOHANN PETER.

KARL GUSTAV FELLERER

Kellner [Keller, Kelner], Johann Peter (b Gräfenroda, Thuringia, 28 Sept 1705; d Gräfenroda, bur. 22 April 1772). German organist and composer, father of JOHANN CHRISTOPH KELLNER. His parents wished him to become a lamp-black merchant like his father, but he was determined to study music. He probably received his first training at the village school in Gräfenroda, where he sang under the Kantor Johann Peter Nagel; his first keyboard teacher was Nagel's son Johann Heinrich. He next studied for a year in Zella (presumably 1720–21) with the organist Johann Schmidt and then for a year in Suhl (presumably 1721–2) with the organist Hieronymous Florentius Quehl, who gave him his first composition lessons. Kellner next returned to Gräfenroda and served for three years as a tutor. On 21 October 1725 he successfully auditioned for the post of Kantor in neighbouring Frankenhain, where he remained for over two years. In December 1727 he was back in Gräfenroda, first as assistant Kantor under J.P. Nagel and later, after Nagel's death in 1732, as Kantor. He remained in this post until his death.

Kellner was famous throughout Thuringia as an organist and teacher. According to his autobiography, published in F.W. Marpurg's Historische-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik (Berlin, 1754–78/R, i, 439–45) he performed for the dukes of Coburg and Weimar and the Prince of Sondershausen. Among his many pupils were J.P. Kirnberger, J.E. Rembt and Johannes Ringk. Kellner also played a critical role in the dissemination of the music of J.S. Bach, evinced by the many manuscript copies of Bach's compositions – primarily keyboard and organ works – that stem from his circle. These manuscripts, many of which are in Kellner's hand, often represent the earliest or only source of a work, and they shed light on the chronology, compositional history and authenticity of the music. Kellner appears also to have transcribed for keyboard certain chamber works by Bach, such as the sonatas BWV1027 and 1039. Whether he was a pupil of Bach is unclear, but the two knew one another personally. Another of Kellner's acquaintances was G.F. Handel.

On the whole, Kellner's keyboard music typifies the galant idiom of the post-Bach generation, despite the obvious influence of Bach's Das wohltemperierte Clavier on certain movements of the Certamen musicum. Although his organ works incline more toward late Baroque style, the setting of Was Gott tut, das ist wohlgetan achieves a thoroughly Rococo texture. The D minor organ fugue (BWVAnh.180) is a double fugue featuring separate expositions for the two subjects. Rather pedestrian by comparison is the C minor organ fugue, which is merely a transposition of a movement from the Certamen musicum and was published in 1947 as a work by W.F. Bach (ed. E. Power Biggs). The Prelude and Fugue in D minor is noteworthy for its brilliant pedal solo, which reflects Kellner's virtuosity as an organist. His ornamental setting of Herzlich tut mich verlangen (BWVAnh.47) is still regularly played.

WORKS

printed works published in Arnstadt unless otherwise stated; MSS in B-Bc, D-Bsb, Dl, LEm, NL-DHgm

Org: Fugue, d, Prelude and Fugue, d, 2 trios, D, G, all ed. G. Feder, Die Orgel, ii/7 (Lippstadt, 1958); Prelude in C, ed. R. Wilhelm, Orgelmusik um Johann Sebastian Bach (Wiesbaden, 1985); 2 fugues, c, D; 3 preludes, C, C, g; 2 preludes and fugues, both G; chorale settings: Herzlich tut mich verlangen (Leipzig, 1907); Was Gott tut, das ist wohlgetan (Leipzig, 1907); Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten (Wiesbaden, 1985); Lobt Gott, ihr Christen, allzugleich; Nun danket alle Gott; Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr

Other kbd: Certamen musicum, bestehend aus Präludien, Fugen, Allemanden, Couranten, Sarabanden, Giguen, wie auch Menuetten, 6 suites (1739–49); 3 Sonates (1752); Manipulus musices, oder Eine Hand voll kurzweiliger Zeitvertreib, 4 suites (1752–6); Concerto, F (Leipzig, 1956); 2 fugues, a, C; Menuet, a; 3 preludes and fugues, a, C, G; 2 sonatas; 12 Variationes

Vocal: 36 church cants., D-F; annual cycle of church cants. with obbl org, 1753 (lost)

Other works listed in Fechner and MGG1 may be by Kellner's son, Johann Christoph Kellner

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FrotscherG; MGG1 (L. Hoffman-Erbrecht)

W. Kahl, ed.: Selbstbiographien deutscher Musiker des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Cologne, 1948/R)

Gedenkschrift anlässlich der Johann-Peter-Kellner-Festwoche in Gräfenroda (Gräfenroda, 1955)

M. Fechner: Die Klavier- und Orgelwerke Johann Peter Kellners (Diplomarbeit, U. of Leipzig, 1965)

H.-J. Schulze: Bach-Dokumente, iii (Kassel and Leipzig, 1972)

R. Stinson: The Bach Manuscripts of Johann Peter Kellner and his Circle: a Case Study in Reception History (Durham, NC, 1989)

R. Stinson: '"Ein Sammelband aus Johann Peter Kellners Besitz": neue Forschungen zur Berliner Bach-Handschrift P804', BJb 1992, 45–64

R. Stinson: Preface to Keyboard Transcriptions from the Bach Circle (Madison, WI, 1992)

RUSSELL STINSON

Kellogg, Clara Louise (b Sumterville [now Sumter], SC, 9 July 1842; d New Hartford, CT, 13 May 1916). American soprano and impresario. She learned music from her parents and started studying the piano at the age of five. In 1857 her family moved to New York, where she studied with Achille Errani, Emanuele Muzio and others. After a modest concert tour (1860), she made her début as Gilda at the Academy of Music (27 February 1861) and subsequently sang opera in New York and Boston. During the Civil War she toured, performing opera from Boston to Chicago and giving operatic concerts. Her first notable triumph was as Marguerite in the New York première of Gounod's Faust (Academy of Music, 25 November 1863). Although she became closely identified with the role, she described Marguerite in her memoirs as 'a little fool' and preferred Aida and Carmen.

Kellogg's London début, also as Marguerite, was at Her Majesty's Theatre (2 November 1867); she subsequently performed at Drury Lane, at the 1868 Handel Festival, and regularly in opera and concerts from 1868 to 1873. In 1872 she joined Pauline Lucca in the USA in an opera troupe managed by Maretzek, and in 1873 organized the Kellogg Grand English Opera Company, for which she was prima donna and artistic manager. Kellogg's desire to establish English-language opera in America was an extension of a similar vernacular opera movement in England; her troupe used the advertising slogan 'opera for the people'. The company was only moderately successful, perhaps because of competition from other English-language troupes; it disbanded after 1876. During the late 1870s and early 1880s Kellogg resumed opera and concert appearances in both the USA and Europe. She retired in 1887 shortly after marrying her manager Carl Strakosch, nephew of Max Strakosch.

Kellogg had a pure, sweet soprano voice of large range and penetrating quality; she was also a good actress. She sang more than 40 roles (in Italian, English and French) and had immense energy and stamina: during the 1874–5 season alone she gave 125 performances. She was the first American-born prima donna to achieve a solid European reputation.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DAB (F.H. Martens); NAW (W. Lichtenwanger)
'Miss Kellogg and English Opera', New York Times (20 Feb 1874)
P. Hanaford: Women of the Century (Boston, 1877)
C. Lahee: Famous Singers of Today and Yesterday (Boston, 1898)
T. Hopkins: The Kelloggs in the Old World and the New (San Francisco, 1903)
C.L. Kellogg: Memoirs of an American Prima Donna (New York and London, 1913/R)
E.E. Hipsher: American Opera and Its Composers (Philadelphia, 1934)
O. Thompson: The American Singer (New York, 1937/R)

H. WILEY HITCHCOCK/KATHERINE K. PRESTON

Kelly [Kellie], 6th Earl of [Erskine, Thomas Alexander] (b Kellie Castle, Fife, 1 Sept 1732; d Brussels, 9 Oct 1781). Scottish composer. Born into a genteel, poor and somewhat bohemian landowning family, he seems to have learnt to play the violin at an early age. He attended Edinburgh High School for two years, but his formal education was ended by the 1745 Rebellion, in which his father sided with Bonnie Prince Charlie. At 17 Kelly joined the Edinburgh Musical Society (as 'Lord Pittenweem', the family's cadet title), probably taking violin lessons from McGibbon. He also closely studied the orchestral works of contemporary masters, especially those of Barsanti, who had lived in Edinburgh up to 1743. In about 1752 he went on the Grand Tour, spending much of the next four years in Mannheim, and then probably Paris, studying composition and violin with Johann Stamitz; in August 1755 Stamitz published his orchestral trios op.1 from Paris, 'dédiées à The Right Honourable Mylord Pittenweem'. On his father's death in 1756 Kelly returned to Scotland an ardent convert to Mannheim orchestral music. His own opus 1, a set of six splendid orchestral overtures glowing with Mannheim effects to which British audiences were totally unaccustomed, was published by Bremner in Edinburgh in 1761.

Kelly probably spent considerable time in London in the early 1760s; from this period date his friendships with the actor Samuel Foote and the castrato G.F. Tenducci. In 1762 he became Grand Master Mason of England. He wrote two overtures for pasticcios given in London theatres, for Ezio (Little Haymarket, 29 November 1764) and The Maid of the Mill (Covent Garden, 31 January 1765).

From 1767 Kelly spent most of his time in Edinburgh. He accepted the deputy governorship of the Edinburgh Musical Society that year. It was largely through his efforts that Tenducci became a frequent visitor to Edinburgh (where he sang in the Scottish production of Arne's Artaxerxes in 1769), that J.G.C. Schetky, Thomas Pinto, the Corri family and John Collett settled in the town, and that the Reinagle family were encouraged to stay. He continued to compose, and his work was performed locally to vast applause: by 1770 it had become an outstanding attraction for upper-class visitors to Edinburgh (see Smollett and Topham). After 1769 no more of Kelly's new compositions were printed, but they circulated vigorously round Scotland in manuscript copies.

By 1774 there are signs that Kelly's creativity was waning. His eight minuets for Lord Stanley's wedding in Surrey are all recycled old ones (see Johnson, 1984), and after that he seems to have suffered a complete nervous and physical breakdown. Home's portrait (*c*1778, touched up for publication as an engraving) shows him a worn-out wreck in his mid-40s. He went to Spa in Belgium in 1781, to drink the waters, but the cure was unsuccessful and he died in Brussels on the way back.

Kelly's published work represents perhaps a sixth of his output. The discovery of the Kilravock Manuscript in 1989 has made possible a whole new appraisal of his music. The manuscript (now GB-En Acc.10383; probably collected and copied in Edinburgh *c*1770) contains a mixture of previously-lost masterpieces, abandoned experiments and student exercises, and shows Kelly dealing with the problems of form, gesture and language in the new style which was shortly to emerge as Viennese Classicism. Kelly liked irregular phrase-lengths, wide-ranging modulations and dramatic changes of mood. Outstanding among the Kilravock pieces are the Duo for two violins (which is symphonic in scope but with domestic means), the Trio Sonata in F and the Quartetto in A (a powerful essay in Sturm und Drang).

WORKS

Six Overtures op.1 (Edinburgh, 1761); no.2, ed. D. Johnson, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. E, i (New York, 1984)
No.?3 of Six Simphonies in Four Parts by J. Stamitz, his Pupil the Earl of Kelly, and Others (London, *c*1765)
Nos.13, 17, 25 and 28 (ov., Maid of the Mill) of The Periodical Overture in 8 parts (London, 1766–70); no.17, ed. D. Johnson (London, 1974), no.28, ed. D. Johnson, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. E, i (New York, 1984)
6 Sonatas, vn/fl, vn, bc (London, 1769); no.4, ed. D. Johnson (London, 1973)
9 sonatas, 2 vn, bc, no.4, ed. D. Johnson (Edinburgh, 1991); duo, 2 vn; 6 qts, str, bc; Largo, vn, bc; all in GB-En
*c*20 minuets in Bremner's Collection of . . . Minuets (London, *c*1765), Stewart's Collection of . . . Minuets (Edinburgh, *c*1765), The Favourite Minuets Perform'd at the Fête Champêtre (London, *c*1775), Minuets . . . Composed by . . . Kelly (Edinburgh, 1836)
Vocal: Death is now my only treasure, S, orch, in A Collection of Favourite Airs . . . sung by Tenducci (London, *c*1775); The Lover's Message, S, vn, bc, in Minuets . . . Composed by . . . Kelly (Edinburgh, 1836)

Lost: Serenata, Edinburgh, 21 June 1769 (see Edinburgh Evening Courant, 14 June 1769); orch pieces listed in GB-Eu La.III.562–4, 761; Music for wind (see Robertson)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; DNB ('Erskine, Thomas Alexander'; L.C. Sanders)
T. Smollett: The Expedition of Humphry Clinker (London, 1771), ii, 235
E. Topham: Letters from Edinburgh (London, 1776), 157, 373–5
T. Robertson: An Inquiry into the Fine Arts (London, 1784), 436
H. Riemann: Preface to DTB, ii, Jg.vii (Leipzig, 1906/R)
C.L. Cudworth: 'The English Symphonists of the Eighteenth Century', PRMA, lxxviii (1951–2), 31–51, esp. 31–4
W.B. H[owie]: 'Scotland's Musical Earl', The Scotsman (31 Aug 1957)
D. Johnson: Music and Society in Lowland Scotland in the Eighteenth Century (London, 1972), 68–84, 212–14
D. Johnson: Scottish Fiddle Music in the 18th Century (Edinburgh, 1984), 143–50, 154, 159–60, 200–201
D. Johnson: The Kilravock Manuscript (unpubd consultation paper, 1991, GB-En)

DAVID JOHNSON

Kelly, Bryan (George) (b Oxford, 3 Jan 1934). English composer. A boy chorister at Worcester College, Oxford, he went on to study composition with Howells and Jacob at the RCM (1951–5) and privately with Boulanger in Paris. After teaching at the Royal Scottish Academy, Kelly returned to the RCM in 1963 as professor of theory and composition. In 1984 he left England to live in Italy, then France. A prolific and versatile writer of choral, orchestral, brass band, instrumental and educational works, he adopted early on a practical approach to composition based on traditional disciplines. His early choral training was influential in building up a body of music for vocal forces of all sizes, distinguished by a blend of typically English and French harmonies, with the occasional use of syncopation and jazz rhythms. Although his concert overture Latin Quarter (1955) set a pattern for lighter, small-scale orchestral works, the one-movement Symphony (1988) adds a powerful Romantic element to the clean textures and clear formal design characteristic of his work. Further information is given in F. Howes: 'Bryan Kelly', MT, cviii (1967), 801–4.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Latin Quarter, ov., 1955; Music for Ballet, 1957; Suite: The Tempest, 1964; Cuban Suite; Sinfonia concertante, 1967; Cookham Rondo, 1969; Improvisations on Christmas Carols, 1969; Ob Conc., 1972; Gui Conc., 1978; Concertante Dances, 1980; Sym., 1988

Choral: Mag and Nunc, SATB, org, 1965; Communion Service, C, SATB, org, 1967; Partita for Voices, SATB, 1967; Abingdon Carols, SATB, 1969; 3 London Songs, SATB, 1969; Stabat mater, S, B, SATB, orch, 1970; At the Round Earth's Imagin'd Corners, T, SATB, str, 1972; Let there be Light, S, nar, SATB, orch, 1972–3; 7 Popular Hymns, unison vv, pf/org, 1976; Latin Magnificat, chorus, orch, 1979; Missa brevis, SATB, org, opt tpts, 1991; Dover Beach, SSAATTBB, 1995

Works for brass band, chbr ens, solo insts; childrens' ops and cants.; educational pieces

Principal publishers: Chappell, Mozart, Novello, Roberton

MATTHEW GREENALL

Kelly, Frederick Septimus [Sep, Cleg] (b Sydney, 29 May 1881; d Beaucourt-sur-Ancre, 13 Nov 1916). Australian composer and pianist. He was educated at Sydney Grammar School (1891–2), Eton College (1893–9) and Balliol College, Oxford (Nettleship Scholar, 1900–03). There he took an active part in the Balliol Concerts, and indulged his lifelong passions, rowing and music. Three times winner of Henley's Diamond Sculls and a member of the victorious England crew at the 1908 Olympic Regatta, he was an Edwardian sporting legend. Athletic achievement and private means always cast the seriousness of Kelly's musical career into doubt despite studies with Ernst Engesser and Iwan Knorr at the Hoch Konservatorium, Frankfurt (1903–8), and promising solo appearances. He travelled widely, and in 1911 he played in Sydney, making his London début the following year. As chairman of the Classical Concert Society (1912–14), Kelly turned towards chamber music, performing with Tovey, Jelly d'Arányi and Casals. He joined the Royal Naval Division in September 1914, and sailed with Rupert Brooke and William Denis Browne for the Dardanelles, gaining the DSC at Gallipoli in January 1916. Promoted Lieutenant-Commander, he died on the Somme. The modal Elegy, commemorating Brooke, is a departure from Kelly's idiom which remains essentially conformist for all the bravura of his piano writing and intensity of his songs.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Scherzo, c, 1905; Suite, E♭, 1905–8; Serenade, e, op.7, fl/vn, hn, str, 1911, arr. fl, pf, 1914; Elegy, str, hp, 1915–16

Vocal: 45 songs, 1v, pf, 1899–1915, incl. 2 Songs (W. Shakespeare, J. Todhunter), op.1, 1901–3; 6 Songs (P.B. Shelley and others), op.6, 1909–13

Chbr: Sonata, d, vn, pf, 1901; Str Trio, b, op.8, 1910–11; Sonata, G, vn, pf, 1915–16

Pf: In May, 1895; Irish Air with Variations, 1898; Theme, Variations and Fugue, op.5, 2 pf, 1905–13; Waltz–Pageant, op.2a, 4 hands, 1905–12, op.2b, solo, 1911–13; Allegro de concert, op.3, 1907–13; A Cycle of Lyrics, op.4, 1907–10; 12 Studies, op.9, 1908–15; Rule Britannia (Arne, arr. Kelly), 2 pf, 1910; Sonata, f, 1910–14; Jig, 1912; Polka, 1912–15; 24 Monographs, 1912-15

Org: 2 preludes, 1914–15

MSS in AUS-CAnl, Scm, GB-ALb, Lbbc, WRec, D-F
Principal publishers: Schott, Edwin Ashdown, OUP

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'In memoriam Lieut. F.S. Kelly, D.S.C.', Eton College Chronicle (7 Dec 1916) [obituary]
M. Grierson: Donald Francis Tovey: a Biography Based on Letters (London, 1952)
J. Carmody: 'Kelly, Frederick Septimus', Australian Dictionary of Biography, 1891–1939, ix, ed. B. Nairn and G. Sarle (Melbourne, 1983), 554–5
S. Banfield: Sensibility and English Song: Critical Studies of the Early Twentieth Century (Cambridge, 1985)
R. Davies: Composers of the Great War (diss., U. of Wales, Aberystwyth, 1985)
R. Davies: 'Two More Corners, Two More Foreign Fields: Rupert Brooke and the Gallipoli Composers', British Music, xii (1990), 41–3

RHIAN DAVIES

Kelly, Michael (William) (b Dublin, 25 Dec 1762; d Margate, 9 Oct 1826). Irish tenor, composer, theatre manager and music publisher. The eldest of the 14 children of Thomas Kelly (Deputy Master of Ceremonies at Dublin Castle, and a wine merchant), Michael Kelly grew up amid the rich musical life of Dublin, and received singing lessons from various immigrant Italians, notably Passerini and Rauzzini. His piano teachers included Michael Arne. He made an impromptu début as the Count in Piccinni's La buona figliuola on 17 May 1777, and went on to sing in Dibdin's Lionel and Clarissa and Michael Arne's Cymon, before leaving Dublin in 1779, on Rauzzini's advice, to study in Naples.

His most influential teachers were Fenaroli and Aprile, and he enjoyed the patronage of Sir William Hamilton. He made his Italian début in Florence in May 1781, and then sang in various Italian cities including Venice where in 1783 his fortunes took a decisive turn. Count Durazzo, Joseph II's ambassador in Venice, recruited him for the newly created Italian opera company in Vienna. Over the four years Kelly spent there he sang with the best singers of the day, including Nancy Storace, Benucci and Stefano Mandini. Kelly took secondary or comic tenor roles. Kelly worked with Stephen Storace, Martín y Soler and Paisiello, but his most memorable association was with Mozart, who wrote the roles of Don Basilio and Don Curzio in Le nozze di Figaro for him.

In his Reminiscences he left a vivid picture of his acquaintance with Mozart, both socially and in the opera house. Although Kelly's comments on musical life in Vienna are often superficial, he saw humanity in the round with keen observation and humorous detachment. It is these qualities which make the book so attractive: its first volume, particularly, is a valuable source of information about the music and manners of the time. Even if written with the aid of a rough diary or notes, the Reminiscences, which run to some 170,000 words, are a remarkable testimony to Kelly's memory. They were ghosted, not long before Kelly's death, by Theodore Hook, who was described by his great-great-nephew, the English music critic Martin Cooper (1910–86), as 'a man of the theatre, professional writer, almost a professional wag and something of a crook'. Perhaps some of Hook's character colours Kelly's narrative.

In February 1787, with the Storaces and Attwood, Kelly left Vienna for London, visiting Mozart's father in Salzburg en route. Kelly quickly established himself as the principal tenor at Drury Lane, making his début on 20 April. He continued to sing there until 1808, creating the lead roles in several of Stephen Storace's English operas. But he was unable to sustain a singing career at the King's Theatre in the Haymarket, where he made his first appearance in June 1789. In 1793 he became its stage manager, and continued with few interruptions in that capacity for nearly 31 years. Kelly won greater approval for his technique than for the quality of his voice. In his Memoirs of the Life of John Philip Kemble (1825), James Boaden wrote:

> 'His voice had amazing power and steadiness, his compass was extraordinary. In vigorous passages he never cheated the ear with the feeble wailings of falsetto, but sprung upon the ascending fifth with a sustaining energy that often electrified an audience'.

Lord Mount Edgcumbe, however, no mean judge, expressed a less favourable view in his Musical Reminiscences (1825):

> 'Though he was a good musician and not a bad singer, having been long in Italy, yet he had retained, or regained, so much of the English vulgarity of manner that he was never greatly liked at this theatre [Drury Lane]'.

Kelly claimed to have written over 60 theatre pieces between 1797 and 1821. For many of these, however, he contributed just a few songs; at other times he wrote in collaboration. He commanded a limited but prolific vein of melodic invention and seems to have relied on others for harmony and orchestration. In 1801, Thomas Moore wrote: 'Poor Mick is rather an imposer than a composer. He cannot mark the time in writing three bars of music: his understrappers, however, do all that for him'. Kelly himself said (i, 133–4) that the German bandmaster K.T. Eley provided the wind accompaniment for the march in Blue Beard. He caught the current taste so well that his music became widely popular: it was extensively pirated in America, resulting in some 200 separate issues. Blue Beard remained in the repertory for 26 years. In 1801 Kelly set up as a publisher, in premises so close to the King's Theatre that he could offer patrons a private entrance through the shop, directly on to the stage. His publications included operas in vocal score and a considerable number of single songs. But the business seems to have needed more time than he could spare and was declared bankrupt in 1811. Kelly also engaged in the wine trade which, added to the suspicion that some of his compositions came from abroad, induced Sheridan to suggest that his shop-sign should read 'Michael Kelly, composer of wines and importer of music'. However, in compiling operas pasticcio-fashion from other, usually Italian, scores Kelly was following the English practice of the day.

Kelly never married, though he lived with ANNA MARIA CROUCH for some years in what seems to have been a platonic relationship. Kelly was buried in the churchyard of St Paul's, Covent Garden. His niece, Frances Maria Kelly (1790–1882), was an actress and singer of considerable distinction.

WORKS

STAGE

Blue Beard (grand dramatic romances 2, G. Coleman (ii)), London, Drury Lane, 16 Jan 1798, vs (London, 1798), collab. R.T. Eley and others

The Captive of Spielberg [Spilberg] (musical drama, 2, P. Hoare), London, Drury Lane, 14 Nov 1798, selections (London, 1798), collab. J.L. Dussek

The Wood Demon (One o'clock, or The Knight and the Wood Daemon) (grand dramatic romance, 3, M.G. Lewis), London, Drury Lane, 1 April 1807, song (1807), rev. M.P. King, 1811

Contribs to: False Appearances, 1789; Fashionable Friends, 1789: A Friend in Need, 1797; The Last of the Family, 1797; The Chimney Corner, 1797; The Castle Spectre, 1797; The Outlaws, 1798; Aurelio and Miranda, 1798; Feudal Times, 1799; Pizarro, 1799; Of Age To-morrow, 1800; De Montfort, 1800; The Indians, 1800; Deaf and Dumb, 1801; Adelmorn the Outlaw, 1801; The Gipsey Prince, 1801; Urania, 1802; Algonah, 1802; A House to be Sold, 1802; The Hero of the North, 1803; The Marriage Promise, 1803; Love Laughs at Locksmiths, 1803; Cinderella, or The Little Glass Slipper, 1804; The Counterfeit, 1804; The Hunter of the Alps, 1804; The Gay Deceivers, 1804; The Blind Bargain, 1804; The Land We Live In, 1804; The Honey Moon, 1805; A Prior Claim, 1805; Youth, Love and Folly, 1805; We Fly by Night, 1806; The Forty Thieves, 1806; Adrian and Orilla, 1806; The Young Hussar, 1807; Town and Country, 1807; Adelgitha, 1807; Time's a Tell-tale, 1807; The House of Morville, 1807; The Jew of Mogadore, 1808; The Africans, 1808; Vernoni, 1808; The Foundling of the Forest, 1809; The Jubilee, 1809; Gustavus Vasa, 1810; The Peasant Boy, 1811; The Royal Oak, 1811; The Absent Apothecary, 1813; The Russians, 1813; Polly, or The Sequel to Beggar's Opera, 1813; The Illusion, 1811; Harlequin Harper, 1813; Remorse, 1814; The Unknown Guest, 1815; The Conquest of Taranto, 1817; The Bride of Abydos, 1818; Abudah, 1819; The Lady and the Devil, 1820

MISCELLANEOUS

Various songs and duets; one set of country dances; a ballet, 1810; 6 sonatas, A, E♭, F, C, E, G, 2vn, b (London, n.d.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDA; DNB (L.M. Middleton); LS; SartoriL

M. Kelly: Reminiscences (London, 1826, 2/1826/R with introduction by A.H. King); ed. R. Fiske (London, 1975)

S.M. Ellis: The Life of Michael Kelly, Musician, Actor and Bon Viveur (London, 1930)

T. Walsh: Opera in Dublin, 1798–1820: Frederick Jones and the Crow Street Theatre (Oxford, 1993)

ALEC HYATT KING/R

Kelly, T(homas) C(hristopher) (b Wexford, 5 Dec 1917; d Kildare, 31 March 1985). Irish composer. He pursued a degree in music under Larchet at University College, Dublin. After a term as the organist and choirmaster in Newry, he took up a post as music master at Clongowes Wood College. As a composer he concentrated both on arrangements and original compositions. His works are primarily miniatures, exhibiting a light and accessible style and a keen sense of musical heritage. The Three Pieces for Strings (1949) are based on native musical idioms and rhythms. The Wexford Rhapsody, based on traditional Irish airs, has become a standard in the Irish symphonic band repertory. Many of his works were given their première by the orchestras of the national broadcasting service, RTE.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: 3 Pieces, str, 1949; Wexford Rhapsody, sym. band, *c*1954; Variations on a Trad. Air, orch, 1955; Fantasia, hp, orch, 1958; Pf Conc., 1960; The Dream and the Reality, orch, 1966; Lament for O'Donovan Rossa, nar, orch, chorus, 1967; Carolan Suite in Baroque Style, vn, orch, 1978

Choral: The Salley Gardens (W. B. Yeats), 1948, rev. 1960; Everlasting Voices (Yeats), 1959; Mass in Gregorian Style, 1974; Mass for Peace, 1976

Pf: 4 Interludes, 1949; Suite of Irish Airs, 1953

JOSEPH J. RYAN

Kellyk, Hugh (fl late 15th century). English composer. His two extant compositions, the seven-voice Gaude flore virginali and the five-voice Magnificat, are found in the Eton Choirbook (ed. in MB, x, 2/1967, no.2; xii, 2/1973, no.45). Harrison considered that the former 'to judge by its style is one of the earlier pieces in the MS', but old-fashioned idioms are well handled even in fully scored passages. (HarrisonMMB)

MAGNUS WILLIAMSON

Kelpius, Johannes (b nr Schässburg, Transylvania [now Sighişoara, Romania], 1673; d Germantown, PA, 1708). German mystic and hymnbook compiler. He attended the University of Altdorf, near Nuremberg, and in 1689 he obtained the master's degree in theology and published his thesis. After two more Latin theological publications, the second at Altdorf in collaboration with Johannes Fabricius, he emigrated to America with about 40 celibate followers, Pietists interested in preparing for the imminently expected millennium.

On 22 June 1694 they disembarked at Bohemia Landing, Maryland, proceeding to Germantown, Pennsylvania, where they settled on a wooded ridge overlooking Wissahickon Creek. Between 1697 and 1706 he compiled a 70-page hymnbook which with the English translation of his disciple Christopher Witt (*c*1675–1765) is the earliest extant musical manuscript compiled in the 13 colonies (Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Ac. 189).

Four of the ten melodies copied for the singing of his perfervid poetry come from Christian Knorr von Rosenroth's Neuer Helicon (Nuremberg, 1684), and another four derive from German sources dated 1690 and later. The rich harmonies in the seven melodies with basses are realized for keyboard, not four voices, and show considerable musical skill.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.F. Sachse: The German Pietists of Provincial Pennsylvania (Philadelphia, 1895/R), 219–50

J.F. Sachse, ed.: 'The Diarium of Magister Johannes Kelpius', Pennsylvania-German Society: Proceedings and Addresses, xxv/2 (1917), 5–100

Church Music and Musical Life in Pennsylvania in the Eighteenth Century, i (Philadelphia, 1926/R), 1–165 [incl. facs. of The Hymn Book of Magister Johannes Kelpius]

A.G. Hess: 'Observations on The Lamenting Voice of the Hidden Love', JAMS, v (1952), 211–23

D. Krummel and others: Resources of American Music History (Urbana, 1981), items 948, 1338

ROBERT STEVENSON

Kelterborn, Rudolf (b Basle, 3 Sept 1931). Swiss composer, teacher and conductor. He received his training in Basle, Zürich, Salzburg and Detmold, his many teachers including Handschin, Burkhard, Blacher, Fortner and Bialas. He began his teaching career in 1955 at the Basle Musikakademie and was active as a conductor of choirs and amateur orchestras. In 1960 he was offered a position as teacher of theory and composition at the Nordwestdeutsche Musikakademie in Detmold, becoming professor in 1963, and from 1968 to 1975 taught at the Zürich Konservatorium und Musikhochschule. In 1974 he became director of the music department of the DRS, the radio station serving German and Romansh Switzerland. In 1980 he turned again to teaching, becoming lecturer in theory and composition at the Musikhochschule in both Karlsruhe and Zürich. From 1983 to 1994 he was director of the Basle Musikakademie. In addition, he was editor-in-chief of the Schweizerische Musikzeitung (1969–74), on the music committee of Zürich's Tonhalle Orchestra, on the endowment council of Pro Helvetia, on the executive committee of the Schweizerische Tonkünstlerverein and directed the Musikforum Basel (1986–96). Awards he has received include the Kompositionspreis der Stadt Stuttgart (1961), the Bernhard-Sprengel-Preis der deutschen Industrie, the Kompositionspreis des Schweizerischen Tonkünstlervereins, the Zürcher Radiopreis (1984) and the Musikpreis der Stadt Basel (1985). Guest lectures have taken him throughout the world; he has been as active as a writer on music and has also conducted (mainly his own works) in Germany, Russia and the USA. In 1997 he became a member of the Akademie der Freien Künste Mannheim.

Kelterborn became active as a composer in an intensive and varied way. In the 1960s his works attracted attention in important centres for new music: in Stockholm, at the Darmstadt courses, at the Schweizerische Tonkünstlerfeste, in Hanover, Zürich, Athens and Zagreb. The première of the Canto appassionato (1958) at Darmstadt in 1960 drew considerable notice. In this work the 'Canto appassionato' itself, consisting of 11 notes, was used – for the first time – as the very organizing principle, determining the entire work's sequence of events. In Changements (1972–3) any particular musical situation is subjected to change until another, new situation is reached. The work is characterized by these processes, which are at the same time embedded in an idiosyncratic tripartite form.

A fruitful cooperation arose in 1974 when Kelterborn began the opera Ein Engel kommt nach Babylon with the writer Friedrich Dürrenmatt, who rewrote his dramatic text, taking wholly into account the dramatic prerequisites of opera; Kelterborn in turn absorbed the writer's evocative visions in a profound way. Further operas on literary texts followed: Der Kirschgarten (1979–81), Ophelia (1982–3) and the dramatic chamber opera Julia (1989–90). In the years 1990–97 the three significant Ensemble-Bücher for different vocal and instrumental combinations were written. These works document the composer's ability to place text and music in a close relationship and also reveal a more concentrated and compelling formal shape to his expression. The musical parameters of Kelterborn's compositions are always many-layered; behind his expressive and intensive musical language, for example, are concealed structural connections such as cells or motifs.

In his search for his own way of working he has taken an individual route, as he places artistic freedom before any given compositional technique or school. He makes use of 12-note methods in many works, but even here dogmatic systematization is alien to him. He freely takes from the technique only those elements which he considers necessary. He made use of traditional forms only in his early works. His formal development soon brought him to the point of conceiving new structures, which since the 1960s he has constructed specifically for each work. Nevertheless, some works such as Miroirs are strictly composed on the basis of firmly established principles (e.g. with rows of numbers in cells or rhythms), while some also display contrapuntal forms. This many and varied approach, however, has not resulted in an output lacking in unity. The rational elements of his approach, which are not always aurally ascertainable, are a counterweight to his expressive musical language, to his expressiveness, as well as to sections of his works which take the form of improvisation.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Die Errettung Thebens (op, 3, Kelterborn), 1960–62, Zürich, 1963; Kaiser Jovian (op, 4, H. Meier), 1964–6, Karlsruhe, 1967; Relations (ballet, choreog. A. Menge), 1973–4, Berne, 1975; Ein Engel kommt nach Babylon (op, 3, F. Dürrenmatt), 1975–6, Zürich, 1977; Der Kirschgarten (op, 4, Kelterborn, after A. Chekhov), 1979–81, Zürich, 1984; Ophelia (op, 5 scenes, H. Meier), 1982–3, Schwetzingen, 1984; Julia (chbr op, D. Freeman and Kelterborn), 1989–90

Vocal: Missa, solo vv, chorus, small orch, 1957–8; Ewige wiederkehr, Mez, fl, str trio, 1959; Cantata profana, Bar, chorus, 13 insts, 1959–60; Die Flut, orat, solo vv, spkr, chorus, orch, 1963–4; Der Traum meines Lebens verdämmert, chbr cant., Mez, 8 insts, 1964; Kana: Auferstehung, Bar, 2 vn, org, 1964; 3 cantiones sacrae, chorus, 1967; 5 Madrigals, S, T, orch, 1968; Musica spei, S, chorus, org, 1968; Dies unus, S, male chorus, orch, 1971; 3 Fragmente (G. Trakl, R. Browning, Petrarch), mixed chorus, 1973; Consort-Music (female v/7 insts)/8 insts, 1975; Gesänge zur Nacht (I. Bachmann), S, chbr orch, 1978; Schlag an mit deiner Sichel (M. Basko, Petrarch, Magister von Biberach; Basler Totentanz, Bible), A, 2 T, Bar, Renaissance insts, 1981; Die schwarze Spinne (H.J. Schneider), 8 vv, choir, orch, 1982; Lux et tenebrae (Bible: Moses), choir, orch, 1987; Ensemble-Buch II (Trakl), female v, insts, 1992–4

Orch: Sonata, 16 str, 1955; Mouvements, 1957; Canto appassionato, 1958; Concertino, pf, perc, str, 1958–9; Chbr Sym. no.1, vn, 10 wind, hp, perc, low str, 1960; Metamorphosen, 1960; Lamentationes, orch, 1961; Scènes fugitives, fl, orch, 1961; 4 Nachtstücke, chbr orch, 1963; Chbr Sym. no.2, str, 1964; Musik, cl, str, 1965–6, arr. pf, wind, 1970; Phantasmen, 1965–6; Sonata sacra, 10 brass, 1965–6; Miroirs, wind, hp, pf, perc, dbs, 1966; Sym. no.1, 1967; Sym. no.2, 1969–70; Traummusik, small orch, 1971; Kommunikationen, 6 groups, 1971–2; Changements, 1972–3; Nuovi canti, fl, chbr orch, 1973; Tableaux encadrés, 13 str, 1975; Espansioni (Sym. no.3), large orch, Bar, tape, 1974–5; Erinnerungen an Orpheus, 1977–8; Visions sonores, 6 perc groups, 1979; Chiaroscuro, 1979–80; Musica luminosa, 1983–4; Sym. no.4, 1985–6; Rencontres, orch, pf, 1991–2; Namenlos, large ens, elecs, 1996; 4 Movements for Classical Orch, 1996; Passions, str orch, 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, 2 pf, 1955; 5 Fantasien, fl, vc, hpd, 1958; Lyrische Kammermusik, cl, vn, va, 1959; Esquisses, hpd, perc, 1962; Monosonata, pf, 1965; Fantasia a 3, pf trio, 1967; Incontri brevi, fl, cl, 1967; Str Qt no.4, 1968–70; Inventionen und Intermezzi, 2 va da gamba, hpd, 1969; 4 Stücke, cl, pf, 1969–70; Reaktionen, vn, pf, 1974; Sevenminute-Play, fl, pf, 1976; Szene, 12 vc, 1977; Musik, 6 perc, 1984; Sonata in einem Satz, vc, pf, 1985; Str Trio, 1995–6; Fantasien, Inventionen und Gesänge, cl, str qt, 1995–6

MSS in CH-Bps

Principal publishers: Bärenreiter-Verlag Kassel, Bote & Bock

WRITINGS

Stilistische Mannigfaltigkeit in der zeitgenössischen Musik (Amriswil, 1958)

'Kriterien bei der Festlegung einer Zwölftonreihe', Musica, civ (1960), 278–81

'Zur kompositorischen Individualität: Randbemerkungen aus der Perspektive eines Komponisten', SMz, ci (1961), 20–24

'Die Bedeutung historischer Musik für den zeitgenössischen Komponisten', Musica, xxiii (1969), 441–5

Zum Beispiel Mozart: ein Beitrag zur musikalischen Analyse (Basle, 1981)

'Erfahrungen mit der Literatur-Oper', Deutsche Oper Berlin: Beiträge zum Musiktheater IV (1984–5), 123–30

Musik im Brennpunkt (Kassel, 1988)

Analyse und Interpretation: eine Einführung anhand von Klavierkompositionen (Winterthur, 1993)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Mohr: 'Rudolf Kelterborn', SMz, c (1960), 8–12

E. Mohr: 'Zur Kompositionstechnik Rudolf Kelterborns', Musica, xiv (1960), 281–5

D. Larese and F. Goebels: Rudolf Kelterborn (Amriswil, 1970)

W.-E. von Lewinski: 'Schwerige Musik zum Verstehen: der Komponist Rudolf Kelterborn', Musica, xxiv/6 (1970), 16–19

Werkverzeichnis Rudolf Kelterborn (Zürich, 1980)

M.S. Weber: Die Orchesterwerke Rudolf Kelterborn (Regensburg, 1981)

Rudolf Kelterborn: Musikmanuskripte (Winterthur, 1991)

A. Briner, T. Gartmann and F. Meyer: Rudolf Kelterborn (Berne, 1993)

MARTIN S. WEBER

Kelway, Joseph (b ?Chichester, *c*1702; d London, ?May, 1782). English organist, harpsichordist and composer. Three facts are known about his student years: he served an apprenticeship to a dancing master in Bath; he studied intermittently with Chilcot; and Geminiani undertook to instruct him. In 1730 he became organist of the London church of St Michael Cornhill, and in 1736, on the death of John Weldon, he assumed the same duties at St Martin-in-the-Fields. According to Sainsbury, Handel frequently visited the church to hear his organ playing. Kelway gained a fine reputation as a harpsichordist and teacher: Handel's friend Mrs Delany sought his instruction in 1736, and in 1761 he became the teacher of Queen Charlotte. It also seems that Lord Fitzwilliam became his patron. Little is known of his last years; Kelway seems to have suffered a mental illness. The portraits of him mentioned in Grove's Dictionary (5th edn) have not been located.

As an organist, Kelway was noted for his bold improvisations; Burney described his playing style as one of 'masterly wildness . . . bold, rapid, and fanciful'. As a harpsichordist he was an exponent of the Scarlatti style; Mrs Delany rated him as 'little inferior to Handel'.

Although Kelway's six sonatas (London, *c*1764) are known principally by Burney's acid comment, 'the most crude, aukward, and unpleasant pieces of the kind that have ever been engraved', the music itself reveals a composer of considerable originality and boldness. The fast movements are brilliant to an extreme, and the irrepressible passage-work is characterized by a striking asymmetry unusual for its day, while the slow movements set forth a fascinating sinuous lyricism. He also left some unpublished harpsichord pieces (GB-Lbl R.M.24.i.16–18; Cfm 106). His elder brother Thomas (b Chichester, *c*1695; d Chichester, 21 May 1749) was also an organist and composer. He studied the organ with John Reading, and became apprentice organist (1720) and then full organist (1733) of Chichester Cathedral. His compositions (in GB-CHc and Och) consist of services and anthems apparently written for the Cathedral.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; SainsburyD

Lady Llanover, ed.: The Autobiography and Correspondence of Mary Granville, Mrs. Delany (London, 1861–2/R)

M.B. Foster: Anthems and Anthem Composers (London, 1901/R)

O.E. Deutsch: Handel: a Documentary Biography (London, 1955/R)

C.V. Pilkington: 'A Collection of English Eighteenth-Century Harpsichord Music', PRMA, lxxxiii (1956–7), 89–107

STODDARD LINCOLN

Kelz [Kölz], Matthias (i) (b Bautzen; fl early 17th century; d ?Sorau, Lower Lusatia [now Żary, Poland]). German composer and theorist; he appears to have been unrelated to Matthias Kelz (ii). About 1626 he was Kantor at Stargard, Pomerania, and from 1635 at Sorau; this information derives from Walther, who also stated that he died at Sorau. Gerber's claim that he studied composition in Italy is possibly supported by the nature of his light, italianate sacred pieces for three voices, whose title-page also cites his birthplace as Bautzen: Operetta nuova, neues Werklein: Erster Theil sonntäglichen evangelischen Sprüchlein, von Advent bis Palmarum, auf eine leichte, doch reine Italian-Villanellische, wie auch Dialogen Manier (Danzig and Leipzig, 1635). His only other known music is Osanna musicum (Wittenberg, 1623) for two four-voice choirs and continuo. He also wrote a treatise, Isagoge musicae, which is lost; according to Mattheson, W.C. Printz (who also worked at Sorau) made a copy of it. (GerberNL; GöhlerV; MatthesonGEP; WaltherML)

NIGEL FORTUNE

Kelz [Kölz], Matthias (ii) (b Schongau, Upper Bavaria, *c*1635; d Augsburg, 20 March 1695). German composer. He was apparently unrelated to Matthias Kelz (i). He probably studied at the Jesuit Gymnasium at Augsburg and received his training in music there. In 1661 he was a final-year student in philosophy and moral theology at Augsburg and went into business as a grocer in the Kitzenmarkt, behind St Ulrich. By about 1687 he was still in Augsburg, working as a government official. Of eight works that he published between 1658 and 1669 only the first and last survive, and it is thus impossible to give a comprehensive evaluation of his work as a composer. He was one of the early members of a Swabian school of Baroque songwriters who introduced popular elements into their songs. The sonatas and dance movements of his three-part suites (1658), which make great demands on the players, show an abundance of ideas and a search for originality. The improvisatory form of their introductory movements is sometimes reminiscent of the violin sonatas of Biagio Marini.

WORKS

published in Augsburg

Primitiae musicales seu Concentus novi harmonici, Italis dicti, Le sonate, intrade, mascarade, 2 vn, vle, bc (1658); 1 allemande ed. in Mohr, ii

Epidigma harmoniae novae . . . seu Exercitationum musicarum . . . in subsidium in arte chelystica profectus, vn, b viol (1669); passomezo, chique, ed. in Pirro, 988ff

Comitia pastorum spiritualia ... das ist Neu erbaute geistliche Schäfferey von allerhand auserlesenen weihnachtlichen Kripp-Oden, 2–6vv/insts, lost

Dialogi suevici arguti et faceti, das ist Oberländisch schwäbische Tafelmusik, 2vv, 2 vn, lost

Joco-seria harmonica sacro-profana, nempe capriceto, gavotti, gique, 3–5 insts, bc, lost

Palaestra musicalis sacroprofana sive Sonate, canzone, symphonia, 3 viols, 2–5 vn, lost

Viridarium Parthenicum, oder Keuscher Liebs- und Lust-Garten, mit allerhand weltlichen Oden, lost

Ars methodica et fundamentalis, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; WaltherML

A. Göhler: Verzeichnis der in den Frankfurter und Leipziger Messkatalogen der Jahre 1564 bis 1759 angezeigten Musikalien (Leipzig, 1902/R)

A. Pirro: 'La musique en Allemagne pendant le xviie siècle et la première moitié du xviiie siècle: La musique instrumentale', EMDC, I/ii (1913), 986–1008, esp. 987–90

E. Mohr: Die Allemande: eine Untersuchung ihrer Entwicklung von den Anfängen bis zu Bach und Händel (Zürich, 1932), i, 81; ii, 53–4

ADOLF LAYER

Kemanak. Idiophone of Central Java, played in pairs. Each consists of a metal disc, rolled to form a 'tube' (with a split in the concave surface) which resembles a banana with the 'stalk' still attached. One of the pair is pitched higher than the other and they are played in a hocketing fashion, by striking with a padded mallet and then moving the kemanak rapidly upwards, at the same time bringing the thumb down to cover the base of the split and thereby producing a 'swooping' sound. Kemanak are featured in the pieces accompanying the bedhaya repertory of court dances (see INDONESIA, §III).

MARGARET J. KARTOMI/MARIA MENDONÇA

Kemble, Adelaide (b London, 1814; d Warsash, Hants., 4 Aug 1879). English soprano. She was the younger daughter of the actor Charles Kemble. In 1835 she sang in the Concerts of Ancient Music on 13 and 20 May, in a performance of Messiah given by the Royal Society of Musicians on 10 June, and at the York Festival in September. Subsequently she studied in Paris, Germany (1837) and Italy (1839), where she had lessons at Giuditta Pasta's house on Lake Como. Later that year she appeared as Norma at La Fenice, and in the season of 1840–41 she performed in Bellini's Beatrice di Tenda and Rossini's Otello at the S Carlo, Naples. She also sang at Trieste, Padua, Bologna and Mantua. Her sister Frances Kemble reported that she appeared at La Scala but this is not confirmed by Gatti. In 1841 she returned to England and on 2 November appeared with great success in an English version of Norma at Covent Garden. During the following year she sang in English versions of Le nozze di Figaro, La sonnambula, Rossini's Semiramide, Cimarosa's Il matrimonio segreto and Mercadante's Elena da Feltre in London and Dublin. In 1843 she married Edward John Sartoris and retired from professional singing. Later she turned to writing fiction and her novel A Week in a French Country-House (1867) has many references to music. According to her sister her voice was of mezzo-soprano register, which she extended by study.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (L.M. Middleton)

H.F. Chorley: Thirty Years' Musical Recollections (London, 1862), i, 112, 213–4

F.A. Kemble: Records of a Later Life (London, 1882), 123–5, 133, 293–5

A. Luzio: Carteggi verdiani (Rome, 1935–47), iv, 77, 276

C. Gatti: Il Teatro alla Scala nella storia e nell'arte, 1778–1963 (Milan, 1964)

C.M. Roscioni, ed.: Il Teatro di San Carlo (Naples, 1968)

W.H. HUSK/GEORGE BIDDLECOMBE

Kemp, Andrew (fl 1560–70). Scottish composer. All the known facts of his life date from the first decade of the Reformation. Thomas Wood (i) of St Andrews, in one of his characteristic comments on the music in his anthology (IRL-Dtc, GB-Eu, Lbl , US-Wgu), said of Kemp's Have mercy that 'the letter of this sang wes geven be maister gudman sumtyme minister of Sanctandrous to Andro kempe, maister of the sang Scule to set It in four pairtis. It is verray hard till it be thryse or four tymis weill and rychly [?rychtly] sung'. Christopher Goodman arrived in Scotland from Geneva in 1560, was appointed minister of St Andrews in 1561 and returned to his native England in 1565. Kemp must therefore have composed his anthem some time between 1560 and 1565. It is, as Wood said, a difficult piece that repays study – complex in imitation, almost wilful in dissonance, intense in feeling.

Completely different in style is Kemp's entirely chordal setting of the Te Deum (1566), described by Wood as 'verray dulce musike'. It sets the prose text of the Te Deum in attractively varied and flexible rhythms according to the stresses of the words, somewhat in the style of the chordal pieces in Day's Certaine Notes (1565). Kemp adopted much the same idiom (but with psalm tunes as 'cantus firmi') in the three canticles that he contributed to Wood's collection; two of them are precisely dated – Come, Holy Ghost (5 December 1566) and We praise thee, God (8 January 1567).

Kemp is listed as one of the prebendaries and choristers of the collegiate chapel of St Salvator in St Andrews as late as August 1569. In the following year he was appointed master of the song school of St Nicholas in Aberdeen. It was probably after this that he composed his set of psalm tune arrangements, 44 of which have survived in Duncan Burnett's book (GB-En) of *c*1615 – the compiler and some contents of which have strong links with Aberdeen. Kemp's Proper settings include nine whose tunes are untraceable elsewhere; they are probably the work of the composer himself. The settings are accomplished in a direct if occasionally rugged way. Where the psalm tune is constructed on more subtle rhythmic lines – i.e. where it is likely to be French – suspension, double suspension and dissonance in the other voices are usually prominent features. Kemp placed nine of his tunes in the top voice.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Stuart, ed.: Extracts from the Council Register of the Burgh of Aberdeen, i:1398–1570 (Aberdeen, 1844)
J. Anderson, ed.: Calendar of the Laing Charters (Edinburgh, 1899)
H. Scott: Fasti Ecclesiae Scoticanae, v (Edinburgh, 1925), viii (Edinburgh, 1950)
K. Elliott ed.: Music of Scotland, 1500–1700, MB, xv (1957, 3/1975), [song texts ed. H.M. Shire]
K. Elliott, ed.: Fourteen Psalm-Settings of the Early Reformed Church in Scotland (London, 1960)
K. Elliott: 'Scottish Music of the Early Reformed Church', Transactions of the Scottish Ecclesiological Society, xv/2 (1961), 18–32

KENNETH ELLIOTT

Kemp, Ian (Manson) (b Edinburgh, 26 June 1931). British musicologist. He was educated at Felsted School, then studied at Cambridge University (1951–4). After graduating he joined the editorial staff at Schott (London), where he met and established a lifelong friendship with Michael Tippett. He was successively lecturer and senior lecturer at the University of Aberdeen (1959–61, 1964–71), university lecturer and fellow of St John's College, Cambridge (1972–6), professor of music at Leeds University (1977–81) and professor of music at Manchester University (from 1981). He retired in 1991.

Kemp's main areas of research are the music of Berlioz, Hindemith, Weill and Tippett. His books include standard monographs on Hindemith (1970) and Tippett (1984) and he was the author of the articles on Hindemith and Tippett for the first edition of The New Grove Dictionary of Music. His article on Weill's Der Jasager (1993) interprets the opera as a model for the instruction of composition students.

WRITINGS

ed.: Michael Tippett: a Symposium on his 60th Birthday (London, 1965)
Hindemith (Oxford, 1970)
'Hindemith's Cardillac', MT, cxi (1970), 268–71
'Harmony in Weill', Tempo, no.104 (1973), 11–15
'Rhythm in Tippett's Early Music', PRMA, cv (1978–9), 142–53
Tippett: the Composer and his Music (London, 1984/R)
'Music as Metaphor: Aspects of Der Silbersee', A New Orpheus: Essays on Kurt Weill, ed. K.H. Kowalke (New Haven, CT, 1986), 131–46
ed.: Hector Berlioz: Les troyens (Cambridge, 1988) [incl. 'Biographical Introduction', 3–17; 'Les troyens as Grand Opera', 89–93; 'The Unity of Les troyens', 106–18; 'Commentary and Analysis: (a) Chasse royale et orage; (b) The Act 1 Finale', 150–61]
'Romeo and Juliet and Roméo et Juliette', Berlioz Studies, ed. P. Bloom (Cambridge, 1992), 37–39
'Der Jasager: Weill's Composition Lesson', A Stranger Here Myself: Kurt Weill-Studien, ed. K.H. Kowalke and H. Edler (Hildesheim, 1993), 143–57

EDITIONS

Hector Berlioz: Songs for Voice and Orchestra, New Edition of the Complete Works, xiii (Kassel, 1975)

ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Kemp, Joseph (b Exeter, bap. 20 April 1778; d London, 22 May 1824). English educationist and composer. He was placed as a chorister in Exeter Cathedral under William Jackson, with whom he continued as a pupil after leaving the choir. In 1802 he moved to Bristol as organist of the cathedral; he resigned in 1807, and settled in London as a teacher. In 1808 he took the degree of MusB at Cambridge with a war anthem, A Sound of Battle is in the Land (composed 1803). In 1809 he was permitted to proceed Doctor of Music, by special dispensation, his exercise being the anthem The Crucifixion. He produced two theatrical pieces in London about this time, The Jubilee (1809) and The Siege of Isca (1810, with Domenico Corri), as well as a short-lived journal, the New Musical Magazine, Review and Register, in which he published or reviewed much of his own music. He then began his most important work, developing his 'New System of Musical Education' – perhaps the first method in England for the group instruction of music. In 1814 he returned to Exeter, where he established a musical college. From 1818 to 1821 he lived in France, and then again returned to Exeter.

Kemp's musical output is undistinguished. Apart from anthems and other church music, he published songs, duets, trios, glees and canzonets, some in his Vocal Magazine (Bristol, *c*1807–8), as well as 'musical illustrations' of Scott and Shakespeare, and some instrumental teaching pieces.

WRITINGS

The New Musical Magazine, Review and Register, 13 monthly nos. (London, March 1809 – March 1810)
The New System of Musical Education, Being a Self-Instructor and Serviceable Companion to Music Masters (London, *c*1810–19)

Upwards of 100 Cards, containing more than 500 Points in Music, Connected with the New System of Musical Education(London, *c*1810)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (L.M. Middleton); Grove1 (W.H. Husk); SainsburyD
J.C. Kassler, ed.: The Science of Music in Britain, 1714–1830 (New York, 1979)
L. Langley: The English Musical Journal in the Early Nineteenth Century (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1983)

LEANNE LANGLEY

Kempa, Johannes de. See ŁODZIA Z KĘPY, JAN.

Kempe, Rudolf (b Niederpoyritz, Saxony, 14 June 1910; d Zürich, 12 May 1976). German conductor. He began to learn the piano, then the violin and the oboe before he entered the Musikhochschule in Dresden. In 1928 he joined the Dortmund Opera orchestra as first oboist, and only two months later moved in the same capacity to the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, where he remained for seven years and gained wide experience under several distinguished conductors. His own conducting début was at the Leipzig Opera in 1935, in Lortzing's Der Wildschütz, as a result of which he joined the opera staff as a répétiteur. He also frequently took part in chamber music ensembles and lieder recitals.

During military service in 1942 Kempe was temporarily employed as a répétiteur at the Chemnitz Opera, and after his discharge in 1945 he returned there as conductor and musical director, 1946–8. After a year at the Weimar Opera he went to Dresden as chief conductor (1949–50) and musical director (1950–53) and to the Staatsoper in Munich (1952–4), in succession to Solti. Kempe's international recognition began when he opened the 1951–2 season at the Vienna Staatsoper. He made his British début conducting Arabella during a guest season by the Bavarian company at Covent Garden in September 1953, and first conducted the Covent Garden company in Salome the next month. Except during a year of serious illness (1955), Kempe remained a frequent guest at Covent Garden until 1960. His sensitive ear for balance and texture, and his consideration towards the singers, gained him the lasting affection of both performers and public, and newcomers to Wagner's Ring at that time could count themselves fortunate to have heard the cycle under Kempe's warm, broad and relaxed direction in successive annual performances. He made his Metropolitan début in 1954, his Bayreuth debut in 1960, and was active in the concert hall in Britain and elsewhere, but found himself unable to accept Covent Garden's pressing invitation to a resident appointment.

At Beecham's request, however, Kempe became associate conductor of the RPO in 1960, and principal conductor on Beecham's death the next year. It fell to him to conduct the Delius Centenary Festival concerts at Bradford in 1962, which he did with memorable distinction. In 1963 he resigned, but after the RPO was administratively reorganized he accepted a renewed contract that year as artistic director, and from 1970 he was named 'conductor for life', but he resigned for personal reasons in July 1975. He was also musical director of the Zürich Tonhalle Orchestra, 1965–72, of the Munich PO from 1967, and was appointed principal conductor of the BBC SO from September 1975. Kempe's performances were regularly marked by a clarity of rhythm and phrasing, and a restraint and subtlety of expression; these qualities, along with his command of pacing and texture, made him an outstanding interpreter of Wagner. His recordings include distinguished sets of Lohengrin, Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, Ariadne auf Naxos and Strauss's complete orchestral works. He was married to the soprano Elisabeth Lindermeier.

Rudolf Kempe, 1974

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.D. Rosenthal: 'Rudolf Kempe', Opera, x (1959), 713–18
C. Kempe-Öttinger, ed.: Rudolf Kempe: Bilder eines Lebens (Munich, 1977; Eng. trans., 1979) [incl. discography]

NOËL GOODWIN

Kempen, Ludwig van. See LUDOVICUS SANCTUS.

Kempen, Paul van (b Zoeterwoude, nr Leiden, 16 May 1893; d Amsterdam, 8 Dec 1955). Dutch conductor. He studied the violin at the Amsterdam Conservatory and at 17 was a member of the Concertgebouw Orchestra under Mengelberg. From 1916 he was Konzertmeister at Posen, Bad Nauheim and elsewhere, and in 1932 was appointed musical director at Oberhausen, where he made his conducting début. He also taught the violin at Dortmund, and conducted the Deutsche Musikbühne (1933–4), touring Germany. In 1933 he took German citizenship and in 1934 he became chief conductor of the Dresden PO, raising it to a new level of eminence among European orchestras with widely admired performances of major choral and orchestral works that combined a strong architectural sense with precision of phrasing and detail. He succeeded Karajan as general musical director at Aachen (1942–4). After the war he was at first made unwelcome in the Netherlands, although he had been officially exonerated of pro-Nazi sympathies. He toured abroad as a guest conductor and from 1945 to 1949 directed annual conductors' courses at the Accademia Musicale Chigiana, Siena. In 1951 a performance of the Verdi Requiem with the Concertgebouw Orchestra led to audience demonstrations and a walk-out by several players. In 1949 he was appointed chief conductor of the Radio Hilversum PO, and from 1953 he was general musical director at Bremen.

CHARLES BARBER

Kemper. German firm of organ builders and string keyboard instrument makers. Adolf Kemper (1811–80) became a citizen of Lübeck in 1839. His son Emanuel (1844–1933) took over the workshop of Theodor Voigt in 1868 and founded the present firm, which has remained under the control of the original family, from Kempringen, Westphalia. Emanuel's son Karl Reinhold (1880–1957), well known for his collaboration with H.H. Jahnn, took over the firm in 1910. Karl's son Emanuel Magnus (b Apenrade, 30 Sept 1906; d Lübeck, 17 March 1978) entered the firm in 1944, and greatly broadened its interests to include clavichords, spinets and harpsichords. On 1 January 1974 Emanuel Reinhold (b Lübeck, 8 Jan 1947), son of Emanuel Magnus, became head of the firm. It is uncertain whether Peter Kemper (b Menden, bap. 18 April 1734; d Bonn, 24 Oct 1820) was a member of this family. He was an organ builder in the tradition of Balthasar König, and his work included the organs in Bonn Minster and Aachen Cathedral.

The firm builds organs of all types: it played a leading part in the Orgelbewegung. Major contracts have included organs for the monastery of St Johannes, Berlin-Spandau; St Mary, Gdańsk; Frombork Cathedral; the south-west organ, Jakobikirche, Hamburg; the west organ, Jakobikirche, Lübeck; the north and west organs, Marienkirche, Lübeck; the Bonnevoie church, Luxembourg; and the Nikolaikirche, Siegen. The firm has carried out a number of important restorations: at St Nicholas, Brzeg (organ by Engler), the Jakobikirche, Hamburg (Schnitger), and elsewhere.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (E.K. Rössler)

W. Stahl: Geschichte der Kirchenmusik in Lübeck (Kassel, 1931)

W. Lottermoser: 'Orgelneubau auf akustischer Grundlage: Hauptorgel St Nikolai in Siegen/Westfalen', Gravesaner Blätter, nos.11–12 (1958), 131–57 [with Eng. trans.]

H. Fischer, ed.: 100 Jahre Bund deutscher Orgelbaumeister, 1891–1991: Festschrift mit einem lexikalischen Verzeichnis deutscher Orgelbauwerkstätten (Lauffen, 1991)

HANS KLOTZ

Kempff, Wilhelm (b Jüterbog, 25 Nov 1895; d Positano, 23 May 1991). German pianist. He came from a family of distinguished Lutheran church musicians, and was first taught by his father. After lessons with Ida Schmidt-Schlesicke, he entered the Berlin Hochschule für Musik at the age of nine, and studied composition with Robert Kahn and the piano with Heinrich Barth. In 1914 he went to study at the Viktoriagymnasium in Potsdam, after which he returned to Berlin to complete his training at the Hochschule and to study philosophy and music history at the university. In 1916 he began his concert career as a pianist and organist by touring with the Berlin Cathedral choir in Germany and Scandinavia. The following year, at the Berliner Singakademie, he gave a piano recital that included Beethoven's Hammerklavier Sonata and Brahms's Variations on a theme of Paganini, and in 1918 he made his first appearance as a soloist with the Berlin PO. During the next three decades, his concert tours took him through Europe, South America and Japan. However, it was not until 1951 that he gave his first recital in London, when he was acclaimed as a pianist of impressive stature. His American début was in New York in 1964. It was therefore comparatively late in his career that he gained international fame as a performer of the Classical and Romantic repertory, with particular emphasis on the works of Beethoven. He was also a sympathetic exponent of chamber music, performing with such artists as Kulenkampff, Schneiderhan, Pierre Fournier, Szeryng and Menuhin.

Wilhelm Kempff

Kempff was a distinguished teacher. From 1924 to 1929 he was director of the Stuttgart Musikhochschule, where he conducted masterclasses, and from 1931 to 1941 he taught at summer courses in the Marmorpalais, Potsdam, in company with Edwin Fischer and Walter Gieseking. In 1957 he began to direct Beethoven courses at Positano. He was also a composer, whose works include four operas, ballets, two symphonies, a piano and a violin concerto, music for piano, organ and chamber ensembles, and songs.

After World War II Kempff became increasingly respected as a commanding and lucid exponent of the works of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin and Brahms. A pianist who in intimate music could sound charming, lyrical and spontaneous, he was not without occasional affectations of phrasing; but at its best his playing achieved nobility and poetry through clear textures, singing tone quality and refined, subtle coloration. He recorded much of his repertory, including the complete sonatas of Beethoven and Schubert and Beethoven's concertos, piano trios and violin sonatas; he also edited the piano works of Schumann. He wrote Unter dem Zimbelstern: das Werden eines Musikers (Stuttgart, 1951) and Was ich hörte, was ich sah: Reisebilder eines Pianistin (Munich, 1981).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Gavoty and R. Hauert: Wilhelm Kempff (Geneva, 1954)

K. Wagner: 'Gieseking und Kempff zum Sechzigsten', Musica, ix (1955), 566–7

J. Kaiser: Grosse Pianisten in unserer Zeit (Munich, 1965, 5/1982; Eng. trans. 1971), 76ff

R. Purkyt: 'Wilhem Kempff auf Schallplatten', Phono, xii (1965–6), 36
J. Hunt: Giants of the Keyboard: Kempff, Gieseking, Fischer, Backhaus, Schnabel (London, 1994)

ROBERT PHILIP/R

Kempis. See A KEMPIS family.

Kempul. Suspended bronze gong used in Central, East and West Javanese gamelan. It is approximately 38 cm in diameter and is beaten with a padded mallet (see GAMELAN, §I).

Kena [quena]. Generic, Andean word used to refer to a variety of vertical flutes. It applies especially to the NOTCHED FLUTE, a form of construction which dates back to at least the Chavin era (900–200 BCE) in PERU. Notched flutes termed kena, as well as many other names, are found widely in Bolivia, Peru, northern Chile and northern Argentina, but less frequently in Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela and the Guyanas. The name kena may derive from the kena-kena, a cane notched flute known since the 16th century and still played in Aymara rural communities on the Bolivian altiplano, especially around Lake Titicaca. It is 50–70 cm long, with six finger-holes, and is principally played during agrarian or patronal fesivals in the dry winter months, from Easter to All Saints, in monophonic consorts with drums.

Kena (notched flute) played by an Aymara Indian, Lake Titicaca, Bolivia

The kena notched flute has been an important instrument in mestizo culture since at least the 19th century and is played during Carnival celebrations in many small rural towns of the southern Andes. For example, small brass kenas are played by young men on horseback in Vitichi, Potosí department, Bolivia. Today the word kena most often refers to a standardized cane or wooden notched flute, typically of six finger-holes and a rear thumb-hole played in urban mestizo traditions and pan-Andean popular styles. Instruments of similar construction have been played in mestizo contexts in Peru, in combination with guitar, mandolin or charango, since the early years of the 20th century. Since the 1960s the urban kena has surged in popularity in Andean and other Latin American cities, with many Latin American musicians playing the instrument in Europe. As a result its playing technique has been developed incorporating many aspects of Western aesthetics. As a fully chromatic solo instrument, with a compass of some three octaves, it is often played with great virtuosity and expressiveness.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

H.C. Buechler: The Masked Media: Aymara Fiestas and Social Interaction in the Bolivian Highlands (The Hague, *c*1980)
G.W. Cespedes: 'New Currents in música folklórica in La Paz, Bolivia', Latin American Music Review, v/2 (1984), 217–42
Bolivia: Larecaja and Omasuyos: Anthology of the Music of the Andes, GREM/IFEA CD G 8901 (1989)
The Art of the Andean Flute: Los Calchakis, Arion CD ARN 60352 (1997)

HENRY STOBART

Kendale, Richard (d 1431). English author and theorist. John Bale, in his Scriptorum illustrium maioris Brytanniae ... (Basle, 2/1557–9), referred to several grammatical tracts by Richard Kendale, none of which is now extant. In GB-Lbl Lansdowne 763, ff.52–3, there is a short musical treatise ascribed to R. Kendale, said to be 'monachus ... de Sherborn' (Dorset). The Sherborne house belonged to the same order as St Faith's in Horsham, where Bale found the grammatical tracts: this might provide the means of proving that Richard Kendale and R. Kendale are identical, as is usually supposed. The musical treatise Gamma musice cum versibus misticis deals in the first part with the Guidonian gamut and solmization syllables, to which are added the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7 against the pitches e a d′ e′ a′ e″. The omission of 6 for d″ is clearly accidental. The significance of these figures is not clear, but the pitches chosen represent the normal hexachords of the solmization system transposed up a major 6th, giving all the sharps normally found in music of the period. The second part of the treatise consists of mystical verses 'huic gamme pertinentes'. The gamut is said to include all music. A transcription of the work exists in GB-Lbl Add.4912, ff.81–2. (See also DNB.)

ANDREW HUGHES

Kendang [kendhang]. A generic term for any double-headed laced drum, cylindrical or conical, of the islands of Java, Bali and, to a lesser extent, Lombok. All ordinary gamelan include one or more kendang played by the orchestral leader, who gives cues to the other musicians regarding formal structure, speed, number of repetitions, beginnings and endings, etc. This is done through an elaborate standardized system of fixed rhythmical patterns composed of the various sounds each drum may produce.

In Central Java the kendhang has a double-conical, or 'bellied' body, to which the heads are laced with leather.

It is played by hand. In the Central Javanese gamelan there are three sizes. The smallest, the kendhang ketipung, is about 40 cm long. It is played also in rural ensembles such as the reyog ensemble in Ponorogo, East Java, where its name is abbreviated to tipung. The kendhang batangan (or kendhang ciblon) is about 65 cm long and is usually made of jackfruit wood. It now has a large repertory and is used in the wayang (puppet) theatre and in dance music, where it is played in a relatively elaborate style. The kendhang gendhing (or kendhang gedhé or kendhang ageng) is the largest drum in the Central Javanese gamelan. It is about 70 cm long and is played either alone or (by the same player) with the ketipung.

In Sundanese areas of West Java the heads of the kendang are laced with cord of buffalo hide and tautened by sliding rings. In ensembles a pair of kendang are often used. The larger is the kendang ageung ('big drum'), about 65 cm long, with heads measuring about 30 cm and 26 cm in diameter. It rests slanting downwards on a low wooden trestle. The player beats the larger head with his right hand, sometimes with a drumstick, and his left hand plays the smaller head. The heel of the right foot is used continuously in Sundanese kendang playing to modify the pitch of the larger drum head. This kendang is played in combination with two smaller drums, kulanter. The kulanter is about 36 to 38 cm long, with heads measuring about 18 and 16 cm in diameter. It is played in an upright position to the left of the performer. The kendang penca are one or two pairs of drums used for the Sundanese penca (a dance based on penca silat, the art of self-defence). They accompany penca performances together with a tarompet (oboe) and a gong.

The kendang of Balinese orchestras is made of jackfruit wood and its heads of water-buffalo skin or cowhide. Its outside is cylindrical, tapering slightly at one end, and inside it is shaped like an hourglass (see DRUM, fig.1*d*). The average length (in the large gamelan) is 60 to 65 cm. Kendang are tuned and played in pairs, consisting of a lower-pitched kendang wadon ('female drum') and a higher-pitched kendang lanang ('male drum'); which drum leads depends on the context. They are played with hands, sometimes combined with a stick, giving a variety of open and muted sounds which are combined into conventional interlocking patterns determined by the musical form.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. McPhee: Music in Bali (New Haven, CT, 1966/R)
H. Susilo: Drumming in the Context of Javanese Gamelan (thesis, UCLA, 1967)
M. Tenzer: Balinese Music (Singapore, 1991)
S. Cook: Guide to Sundanese Music (Bandung, 1992)

MARGARET J. KARTOMI, ERNST HEINS, RUBY ORNSTEIN/R

Kendrā [kendera, kendra, kenra]. A name for various chordophones of South Asia. It is a variant of the term kingṛā.

1. Rajasthan. 2. Central India.

1. RAJASTHAN. In Rajasthan kendra denotes a bamboo stick zither with resonators. The body is made from a 60 cm length of bamboo, below which are attached two spherical gourd resonators. It is fitted with two metal strings, raised by a vertical bridge and tensioned by two lateral pegs, which the player plucks with a plectrum. The instrument provides a drone accompaniment to the ballads and epic songs of the Jogi, a caste of itinerant professional singers of the region of Banswara and Dungarpur in the hills of the South-West.

2. CENTRAL INDIA. In East-Central India kendrā denotes the plucked or bowed chordophones of Ādivāsī groups, particularly in the states of Bihar and Orissa. It appears often in traditional song texts of the Muṇḍā people of southern Bihar, where it is usually paired with the ṭuila (single-string plucked stick zither). The exact nature of the kendrā, however, appears to be unclear or unknown to most of the Muṇḍā people, and it is possible that for them it is a generic term for all plucked chordophones. Since at least the early decades of the 20th century the term has been applied to a wide variety of string instruments, many of them similar in form to the chordophones of non-Ādivāsī traditional musicians in North India.

The instrument known as kendrā among some Muṇḍāri Christian converts in southern Bihar, and also among some non-converts, is a single-string plucked lute with a gourd soundbox resembling the ektārā of the area's non-Ādivāsī musicians (see EKTĀR). The gourd tends to have a deeper, more rounded back than that of the ektārā, and the area of its skin belly tends to be smaller in relation to the diameter of the gourd. The lute-type kendrā is played by men as a drone to accompany solo or small-group singing or while they dance in the village dancing-ground.

A two-string fretted and plucked stick zither with two gourd resonators called kendrā appears to have been played by the Muṇḍā people in southern Bihar early in the 20th century in areas in which they had close contact with Hindus. It is now extremely rare, perhaps even non-existent, in Muṇḍāri villages. This kendrā appears to resemble the *kullutan rājan*of the relatively isolated Sora (Savara, Saora) people of Orissa, apart from having two gourd resonators instead of one. It also appears to be related in general form to both the South Indian kinnarī vīṇā and the present-day bīn of North India.

In Orissa the word kendrā refers to a fretless fiddle with a tortoiseshell soundbox and skin belly. It may also be applied to several varieties of fiddle, with a membrane belly, of both Orissa and Bihar (in southern Bihar they would most commonly be called banam).

The jogi kendrā is a fiddle about 42 cm long, with a bamboo-tube fingerboard and a coconut-shell soundbox covered with laced 'parchment'. A single-'hair' playing string is hooked on the lower end of the soundbox by a cotton loop. On the upper end of the fingerboard the string is either tied to a peg or fixed directly to the fingerboard by wrapped cotton cord. Small bells may be attached to the small triangular-shaped bow. Thumb pressure adjusts the tension of the bow hair.

The majhi kendrā is a fiddle popular in Ādivāsī areas of the Mayurbhanj district of Orissa. This kendrā is like the jogi kendrā in form and material, but it is larger, about 64 cm long. The hollow soundbox may be of coconut shell, horn or wood and is covered with a nailed 'parchment' belly. The single-hair playing string is hooked at the lower end by cotton cord, passes over a wooden bridge and is tied directly to the instrument's body at the upper end. String tension is regulated by a movable piece of wrapped cotton cord on the fingerboard.

For the gopīyantra kendrā see VARIABLE TENSION CHORDOPHONE.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Hoffmann and A. van Emelen: Encyclopaedia mundarica, v/1–13 (Patna, 1938–50), 2286–7

K.S. Kothari: Indian Folk Musical Instruments (New Delhi, 1968), 69
O. Prasad: Munda: Music and Dance (diss., Ranchi U., 1971), 68
K. Kothari: Folk Musical Instruments of Rajasthan (Borunda, 1977)
B.C. Deva: Musical Instruments of India: their History and Development (Calcutta, 1978), 159, 169

GENEVIÈVE DOURNON/R (1), CAROL M. BABIRACKI/R (2)

Kendrick, Graham (Andrew) (b Blisworth, Northants., 2 Aug 1950). English songwriter, singer and guitarist. The son of a Baptist minister, he trained as a teacher before embarking on a career as a singer-songwriter following his experience of Christian charismatic renewal. He gained early performing experience in a band with his brother and sister and with the organization British Youth for Christ. His tour of 55 venues in 1978 was the catalyst for the founding of Spring Harvest, which rapidly became one of the largest annual Christian conventions in Britain and established Kendrick as one of the most sought-after singer-evangelists. The dissemination of his music has been accelerated by wide sales of his albums, of which he made 28 between 1971 and 2000, and by the yearly March for Jesus (established 1992), for whose events in the streets of thousands of cities worldwide his songs have been the musical focus. More ambitious still is The Millennium Chorus, 12 songs by Kendrick which were performed through the Millennium Television Network on 31 December 1999 to an estimated audience of over three billion. He has published over 300 songs, and a number of these – notably Shine, Jesus, Shine (1987) – have been adopted internationally by congregations of all denominations. Kendrick's style most often inclines to popular music genres, but can also allude to Baroque or Romantic idioms (as, respectively, in Make Way, 1986 and The Servant King, 1983). Reviving a Methodist practice, he occasionally provides refrains with separate parts for men and women, for illustrative purposes (Led like a Lamb, 1983) or for drama (For this Purpose, 1985).

Principal publishers: Kingsway, Make Way Music, Ascent Music

ANDREW WILSON-DICKSON

Kenessey, Jenő (b Budapest, 23 Sept 1905; d Budapest, 19 Aug 1976). Hungarian composer and conductor. He studied with Lajtha (composition) and Viktor Sugár (organ) at the Budapest Conservatory and later with Siklós (composition) at the Budapest Academy of Music. A scholarship enabled him to study with Schalk in Salzburg and to visit Germany and Italy. In 1929 he was appointed coach at the Hungarian State Opera House, where he later became a conductor, remaining there until his retirement in 1965; he was principally associated with ballet. In 1953 he received the Kossuth Prize and the title Artist of Merit.

Kenessey's compositional style developed under the influence of Lajtha. His music is marked by a Latin clarity of form, a harmonic world reminiscent of the Impressionists, a striking, mainly dance-like, rhythmic pulse and a very colourful orchestral palette. He was also influenced by the folklorism of the Kodály school, though he showed a preference for the verbunkos, which he used particularly in his ballets; Majális ('May Festival'), for example, draws on more recently discovered material of this type. His masterpiece is the one-act opera Arany meg az asszony ('Gold and the Woman'), where his style is enriched with borrowings from Puccini, primarily in the area of dramaturgy (short ariosos, the coalescing of recitatives with arias, and the alternation of lyrical, dramatic and comic scenes).

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Arany meg az asszony [Gold and the Woman] (1, G. Krúdy), 1941–2, Budapest, Opera, 1943
Ballets: Montmartre, 1932; Csizmás Jankó [Johnny in Boots], 1, 1937, Budapest, Opera, 1937; Enyém a vőlegény [Mine is the Bridegroom], 1, 1938, Budapest, 1938; Talán holnap [Perhaps Tomorrow], 1, 1938, Budapest, Operetta Theatre, 1938; Miraggio [partly after Liszt], 1, 1938, Milan, Scala, 1938; Majális [May Festival], 1, 1948, Budapest, Opera, 1948; A keszkenő [The Kerchief] [partly after Hubay], 3, 1951, Budapest, Opera, 1951; Bihari nótája [Bihari's Song], 3, 1954, Budapest, Opera, 1954
Orch: Kis szvit [Little Suite], chbr orch, 1929; Táncimpresszió, 1930; Falusi képek [Village Scenes], 1933; Trojka, sym. poem, 1934; Menyasszonytánc és verbunkos [Bridal Dance and Recruiting Dance], 1938; 2 tánc, small orch, 1938; Vígjátéknyitány [Comedy Ov.], 1941; Divertimento, S, orch, 1943; Sárközi táncok [Dances from Sárköz], 1953; Balatoni hajnal [Dawn at Balaton], sym. poem, nar, orch, 1972
Choral: Kantáta Goethe Pandórájából [Cant. on Goethe's Pandora], chorus, orch, 1960; Fényküllők [Beams of Light], chorus, orch, 1960; unacc. pieces
Chbr: Pf Qt, 1928–9; Sonata, fl, hp, 1940; Hp Trio no.1, fl, va, hp, 1940; Sonata, fl, va, pf, 1940; Divertimento, va, hp, 1963; Hp Trio no.2, vn, va, hp, 1972
Solo inst pieces, songs

Principal publisher: Editio Musica

PÉTER P. VÁRNAI

Kenig, Józef (b Płock, 16 Feb 1821; d Warsaw, 13 March 1900). Polish journalist and writer on artistic, musical and theatrical subjects. He was connected with the literary and artistic group Cyganeria Warszawska. From 1843 he was joint editor and from 1859 to 1889 editor-in-chief of the daily Gazeta Warszawska. His editorials on social and political subjects (the first to appear in the Polish press) exerted a significant influence in moulding public opinion towards a marked liberalism. His principal occupation from 1855 to 1860 was music criticism. By emphasizing the significance of folk elements he helped to encourage the national movement in Polish music. Kenig's son by his second marriage, Włodzimierz Kenig (1883–1929), was a noted violinist, conductor and composer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (H. Secomska)
S. Jarociński: Antologia polskiej krytyki muzycznej XIX i XX wieku, do roku 1939 [Anthology of music criticism] (Kraków, 1955), 130–59

STEFAN JAROCIŃSKI

Kenigsberg, Alla Konstantinovna. See KOENIGSBERG, ALLA KONSTANTINOVNA.

Kenins, Talivaldis [Ķeniņš, Tālivaldis] (b Liepāja, 22 April 1919). Canadian composer and teacher of Latvian birth. Intending to take up a career in the Latvian diplomatic service, he studied general arts at the Lycée Champollion, Grenoble. Upon his graduation in 1939 he returned to his native country, arriving shortly before the outbreak of World War II. He attended the Latvian Conservatory in Rīga (1940–44), where his principal teachers were Arvīds Žilinskis (piano), Jāzeps Vītols (counterpoint) and Ādolfs Ābele (harmony, form, orchestration). With the advance of the Soviets into Latvia near the end of the war, he fled to Germany and later made his way to France.

From 1945 to 1950 he attended the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied with Aubin, Simone Plé-Caussade and Messiaen. In 1951 he emigrated to Canada (naturalized 1956) where he became organist and choir director of St

Andrew's Latvian Lutheran Church in Toronto. In 1952 he joined the music faculty of the University of Toronto, becoming professor of composition in 1973, a post he retained until his retirement in 1984. He was also an active member of the Canadian League of Composers, becoming its president in 1973–4. He retained an active interest and involvement in Latvian music, despite a 45-year self-imposed exile. He founded the Toronto Latviešu Koncertapvienība (Latvian Concert Association of Toronto) in 1959, assisted in many Latvian song festivals and wrote often for Latvian exile publications.

Kenins's early successes were with chamber works. In 1950 his Cello Sonata was awarded a premier prix at the Paris Conservatoire and in the same year his Septet was conducted by Scherchen at Darmstadt. The greater and perhaps most accomplished part of his work has continued to fall into this category, where his music's character and style are revealed most clearly. His music is impassioned but disciplined, possessing a sense of fantasy which is nonetheless based on traditional forms and procedures. Lyrical melodies, contrapuntal textures, clear formal structures and concertante treatments, featuring imaginative interplays of instrumental colour, dominate his musical style. Ostinato patterns also abound, creating rhythmic patterns which are supple and, particularly in fast movements, often animated and witty. In the larger works, too, chamber qualities are often present; the orchestration tends to stress clear lines and textures. The Second Symphony, for instance, is a Sinfonia concertante for flute, clarinet and orchestra, and contrasts solo and chamber-music groupings with full orchestral writing. Particularly notable is Kenins's contrapuntal skill displayed in the variety of fugal writing that appears in his music. The Seventh Symphony, for example, contains a striking integration of fugue and passacaglia.

In the 1970s, however, his work moved away from some of its traditional aspects, including fugal procedures, towards a freer and less discursive concept of line and colour, a more astringent treatment of dissonance and (as in the Fourth Symphony) an incorporation of indeterminate elements. Later works return to more traditional techniques. Some show an open admiration for the 'old masters' but treat their sources in imaginative ways (e.g. Variations on a Theme by Schubert, Schumann Paraphrases and Fugue); many restore the incisive vigour of his earlier music. Not wanting to write a Ninth Symphony, he chose instead to write an extensive chamber work (Nonet) that incorporates many elements of his symphonic and concertante style.

Kenins's Latvian heritage asserts itself most strongly in his vocal music. Among his many choral works is Chants of Glory and Mercy (Gloria), which includes a setting of a letter from a woman deported to Siberia. He has also written simpler solo songs and folksong arrangements on Latvian texts. In 1989, 1991 and 1994 he returned to Latvia for concerts celebrating him and his music. On the first visit he was named an honorary professor at the Rīga Conservatory.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pf Conc., unorchd, 1946; Sym. no.1, 1959; Conc., vn, vc, str, 1964; Sym. no.2, 1967; Sym. no.3, 1969–70; Fantaisies concertantes, pf, orch, 1971; Sym. no.4, 1971–2; Vn Conc., 1973–4; Naačnaača, sym. poem, 1975–6; Sym. no.5, 1975; Sinfonietta, 1976; Beatae voces tenebrae, 1977; Sym. no.6, 1978; Sym. no.7, 1980; Conc. da camera no.1, fl, cl, pf, str, 1980–81; Conc., 14 insts, 1982; Conc. da camera no.2, fl, ens, 1983; Conc., 5 perc, orch, 1983; Partita for Str on Lutheran Chorales, 1983; Sym. no.8, 1985–6; Double Conc., vn, pf, orch, 1987; Conc., pf, perc, str, 1990; Honour and Freedom, orch, 1991; Va Conc., 1998

Vocal: Lūgšana Latvijai [Prayer for Latvia], S, Bar, men's chorus, org/orch, 1951; Kurzemes kareivim [To a Soldier from Kurland], solo vv, SATB, org/orch, 1953; Daniel, solo vv, SATB, org, 1956; Bonhomme! Bonhomme!, SATB, 1964; Piae cantiones novae [after medieval songs in the Piae cantiones of 1571], SATB, 1968; Chants of Glory and Mercy (Gloria), solo vv, SATB, orch, 1970; Lagalaî, SATB, fl, hn, perc, 1970; Sawan-Oong, B, nar, SATB, orch, 1973; Cant. baltica, SATB, ens 1974; Alleluia, SATB, 1981; Songs to the Almighty, Mez/Bar, org/orch, 1986; The Sunken Cathedral, SSAATTBB, 1989; Cant. of Chorales, S, SATB, hn, tpt, org, 1992 [on themes by J.S. Bach]; solo songs, partsongs, folksong arrs.

Chbr: Str Qt, 1947–8; Septet, cl, bn, hn, str trio, db, 1948–9; Sonata, vc, pf, 1949–50; Pf Trio, 1952; Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1955; Pf Qt no.1, 1957–8; Divertimento, cl, pf, 1959–60; Concertante, fl, pf, 1966; Concertino a 5, fl, ob, va, vc, pf, 1968; Partita breve, va, pf, 1970–71; Conc.-fantasy, org, perc, 1976; Sextet, bn, str, 1977–8; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1979; Pf Qt no.2, 1979; Qnt, pf, winds, 1983; Aria per corde, str qnt/str orch, 1984; Variations on a Theme by Schubert, wind qnt, 1984; Concertino barocco, 2 vn, 1985; Nonet, ob, cl, hn, pf, str qnt, 1985–93; Suite en concert, 2 gui, str qt/str orch, 1987; Str Trio, 1989; Colloquens partriae (Reflections on a theme by Imants Zemzaris), vc, pf, 1989; Pf Qnt, 1993–4; Sonata, va, pf, 1995; Aizmirstas lappuses [Forgotten Pages], cl, vc, pf, 1997

Kbd: Concertino, 2 pf, 1956; Sonata no.1, pf, 1961; Folk Dance, Variations and Fugue, 2 pf 8 hands, 1963; Suite, D, org, 1966–7; Diversities (12 Studies in Contemporary Styles for Young Pianists), pf, 1968; Sinfonia notturna, org, 1978; Sonata no.2 (Sonata-Fantaisie), pf, 1981; Sonata no.3 '... motions ... and emotions', pf, 1985; Sonata, 2 pf, 1988; Ex Mari (Episodes from Georgian Bay), org, 1992; Schumann Paraphrases and Fugue, pf, 1994–5; educational pf pieces.

Other solo inst: Chaconne on a Latvian Folk Theme, vn, 1978; Sonata, vc, 1982; Die Zauberklarinette, cl, 1991

Principal publishers: Berandol, Boosey & Hawkes, Frederick Harris, Kalnājs, Leeds, Gordon V. Thompson, Waterloo

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Talivaldis Kenins', Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, viii (Washington DC, 1962), 108–12

'Talivaldis Kenins: a Portrait', Musicanada, (1969), 8–9

V. Bārzkalns: 'Tālivaldis Ķeniņš', Latvju mūzika, iii (1970), 232–61, 308

L. Hepner: 'Talivaldis Kenins', Contemporary Canadian Composers, ed. K. MacMillan and J. Beckwith (Toronto, 1975), 117–22

G. Levitch: 'Talivaldis Kenins: One of Canada's Best-Known Composers Talks about his Musical Life',Canadian Composer, no.107 (1976), 10, 12, 14

W. Kemp: 'The Sacred Choral Music of Talivaldis Kenins', Royal Canadian College of Organists Quarterly, xvi (1977), 38–48

C. Goulet: 'Kenins' Optimistic Retirement', Canadian Composer, no.188 (1984), 4, 6, 8

P. Rapoport: 'The Symphonies of Talivaldis Kenins', Tempo, no.157 (1986), 13–20

P. Rapoport: 'The Piano Music of Tālivaldis Ķeniņš', Sound Notes, vii (1994), 16–17, 19–24

I. Zemzare: Tālivaldis Ķeniņš: starp divām pasaulēm [Tālivaldis Ķeniņš: between two worlds] (Rīga, 1994)

WARREN DRAKE/PAUL RAPOPORT

Kennan, Kent (Wheeler) (b Milwaukee, WI, 18 April 1913). American composer and teacher. After private piano and organ studies he attended the University of Michigan (1930–32) and then studied composition with Hanson at the Eastman School (BM 1934, MM 1936). The award of the Prix de Rome took him to the Italian capital for three years, and there he studied for a short period with Ildebrando Pizzetti. Returning to the USA in 1939, he was appointed to teach at Kent State University; a professorship at the University of Texas, Austin, was interrupted by service as an army bandmaster, after which he taught at Ohio State University (1947–9) before returning to his position as professor of composition at the University of Texas. His earlier music shows Romantic, Impressionist, and some jazz influences by turns, but from the 1940s his style was mainly neo-classical.

WORKS
(selective list)

Night Soliloquy, (fl, str, pf)/(fl, wind)/(fl, pf), 1936; Il campo dei fiori, tpt, orch, 1937; Noctorno 'From a Rome Diary', va, orch, 1937; Dance Divertimento, orch, 1938, rev. 1988; arr. 2 pf; Promenade, orch, 1938; Sym., orch, 1938; Blessed are they that Mourn (Bible), chorus, orch, 1939; Elegy, ob, orch, 1939; 3 Preludes, pf, 1939; Retrospectives, 12 pieces, pf, 1939–60, rev. 1988; Sea Sonata, vn, pf, 1939; The Unknown Warrior Speaks, male chorus, 1944; Sonatina, pf, 1945; Concertino, pf, orch, 1946, arr. pf, wind, 1963; A Clear Midnight (W. Whitman), 1v, pf, 1947, arr. SATB, pf, 1989; Scherzo, Aria, and Fugato, ob, pf, 1948; 2 Preludes, pf, 1951; Variations on a Quiet Theme, org, 1952; Sonata, tpt, pf, 1956; Threnody, fl/vn, pf (1994); other kbd pieces, orch works, songs

Principal publishers: Remick, G. Schirmer, C. Fischer

WRITINGS

The Technique of Orchestration (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1952, 3/1983 with D. Grantham, 5/1997)

Counterpoint: Based on Eighteenth Century Practice (Englewood Cliffs, 1959, 4/1998)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD

J.A. Wyss: The Art Songs of Kent Kennan (diss., U. of Texas, Austin, 1981)

W. THOMAS MARROCCO

Kennedy [Nigel (Paul)] (b Brighton, 28 Dec 1956). English violinist. Born into a musical family, as a child he learnt the piano with his mother. At seven he entered the Yehudi Menuhin Music School, where he took up the violin, and later he studied with Dorothy Delay at the Juilliard School in New York. There he began playing with jazz musicians such as Stephane Grappelli. In 1977 he made his London concerto début, in 1980 he appeared with the Berlin PO, and in 1985 he toured the USA. At first he showed considerable promise, especially in performances of the Elgar Concerto which, while dangerously slow, were fully committed. Some of his artistic decisions were ill-judged, however; a recording of Walton's Viola Concerto showed him to be no match tonally for specialist viola players. Since the late 1980s many of his activities appear to have been geared to obtaining maximum publicity. Saturation marketing propelled a scrappily played recording of Vivaldi's 'Four Seasons' into the bestseller lists, although it must be emphasized that Kennedy has found new audiences for such music. In 1992–7 he was absent from the concert hall, apparently taking stock of his musical life. He remains as image-conscious as ever – letting it be known, for instance, that he wishes to be called simply 'Kennedy'. Some listeners have been affronted by his irreverent antics on the concert platform, others have found his violin tone ever more astringent and his technique unworthy of his reputation. Self-indulgence has spilled over into his interpretations, especially those of the Brahms and Elgar concertos. His ventures into jazz, improvisation and 'crossover' music have received a mixed reception, and a recorded Kreisler recital was ill-tuned, edgy and stylistically neuter. However, Kennedy remains a potentially exciting performer, who plays Bach with an engaging impetus and at his best has interesting interpretative ideas. He has written an autobiography, Always Playing (London, 1991).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Smith: 'Back off Track', The Strad, cx (1999), 243–7

TULLY POTTER

Kennedy, David (b Perth, 15 April 1825; d Stratford, ON, 12 Oct 1886). Scottish tenor. He had his first lessons from his father, and at 20 became precentor in South Street Church, Perth. His ambition was to follow in the steps of John Wilson by singing traditional Scottish and touring internationally. His first opportunity came in 1859, at the Burns centenary concert in Liverpool, where the enthusiastic reception encouraged him to undertake a series of concerts in Edinburgh. In the summer of 1860 he made a series of concert tours in Scotland, reaching the Orkney Islands in 1861. His first London recital was in the Queen's Concert Rooms, Hanover Square, in 1862. During the 1862–3 season, he gave 100 recitals. Sir Michael Costa was so impressed by his singing of oratorio that he advised him to give up Scots songs in favour of classical repertory. But Kennedy felt committed to taking the Scottish tradition all over the world. With his second wife and six of his children, he took his Scottish entertainments adventurously, sometimes even dangerously, all over the globe – Canada, the USA, New Zealand, Australia, India and other countries. Paying a return visit to Canada in 1886, he died after a brief illness, and was buried in Edinburgh.

Several of Kennedy's children were professional musicians. James, a baritone, Kate, a contralto, and Lizzie, a soprano, all died in the fire that burnt down the Théâtre Municipal, Nice, in 1881. A daughter, Margaret, became a 'sub-professor' at the RAM, while Marjorie Kennedy-Fraser became world famous as the arranger of Songs of the Hebrides.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (W.D. Walker)

M. Kennedy: David Kennedy, the Scottish Singer (London, 1887) [incl. Kennedy's son David's Singing Round the World]

M. Kennedy-Fraser: A Life of Song (London, 1929/R)

JEAN MARY ALLAN/RUZENA WOOD

Kennedy, (George) Michael (Sinclair) (b Manchester, 19 Feb 1926). English writer on music and musical institutions. He was educated at Berkhamsted School and joined the Manchester staff of the Daily Telegraph in 1941. He was its northern music critic (1950–89) and its northern editor (1960–86). In 1989 he became chief music critic of the Sunday Telegraph. He was appointed OBE in 1981 and CBE in 1997. His first major work, commemorating the Hallé centenary, was The Hallé Tradition; it is a well-documented and vivid account of the orchestra during the 100 years from its formation under Hallé. Before Vaughan Williams died he asked that Kennedy should write the musical side of his biography, and the resulting book, prepared over eight years, is marked by the same attention to detail as both his first book and his sensitive study of Elgar. After Barbirolli's death Kennedy was the obvious choice as his official biographer, and his Barbirolli: Conductor Laureate, with his edition of Hallé's diary and correspondence, complements his earlier account of the orchestra.

Kennedy's musical roots are firmly in the north of England, and he has done that region great service. His books on the musical life and institutions of the area show his ability to combine unobtrusive scholarship with music journalism, and demonstrate his identification with the musical activities of the region.

WRITINGS

The Hallé Tradition: a Century of Music (Manchester, 1960)
The Works of Ralph Vaughan Williams (London, 1964, 3/1980); thematic catalogue pubd separately (London, 1972, 2/1996)
Portrait of Elgar (London, 1968, 3/1987)
Elgar Orchestral Music (London, 1970)
Portrait of Manchester (London, 1970)
The History of the Royal Manchester College of Music, 1893–1972 (Manchester, 1971)
Barbirolli: Conductor Laureate (London, 1971)
ed.: The Autobiography of Charles Hallé, with Correspondence and Diaries (London, 1972)
'The Unknown Vaughan Williams', PRMA, xcix (1972–3), 31–41
Mahler (London, 1974, 2/1990)
Richard Strauss (London, 1976, 2/1995)
ed.: The Concise Oxford Dictionary of Music(3/1980, rev. 4/1996 with J. Bourne)
Britten (London, 1981, 2/1993)
The Hallé, 1858–1983 (Manchester, 1982)
Strauss Tone Poems (London, 1984)
ed.: Oxford Dictionary of Music(Oxford, 1985, 2/1994)
Adrian Boult (London, 1987)
Portrait of Walton (Oxford, 1989, 2/1998)
Music Enriches All: the Royal Northern College of Music (Manchester, 1994)
Richard Strauss: Man, Musician, Enigma (Cambridge, 1999)

DAVID SCOTT/R

Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. Arts complex opened in Washington, DC, in 1971. See WASHINGTON, DC, §3.

Kennedy-Fraser, Marjorie [née Kennedy] (b Perth, Oct 1857; d Edinburgh, 22 Nov 1930). Scottish singer, folksong collector and editor. Her father, David Kennedy, was her first teacher, and she completed her studies under Mathilde Marchesi in Milan and Paris. From the age of 12 she acted as her father's accompanist. This background, together with her striking musical abilities, brought her to a leading position in promoting interest in the Gaelic songs of the Hebrides, although she was neither the first nor the most highly qualified collector in this area. Her published arrangements were criticized as being too free, but she defended them on the ground of the variability of the songs according to time, place and singer. This she had learnt from her experience as a collector in the Outer Hebrides, which she visited first in 1905. She was married to A.J. Fraser, and her daughter Patuffa became a player of the cláirseach. In addition to her publications, her lecture-recitals – given with her daughter and with her sister Margaret – were of prime importance in introducing Hebridean song to scholars, singers and the general public. She took the title role in Bantock's Celtic folk opera The Seal Woman (1924), for which she also wrote the text. Her suite for cello and piano, Songs of the Hebrides, was published in London in 1922.

EDITIONS

with K. Macleod: Songs of the Hebrides, i (London, 1909); ii (London, 1917); iii (London, 1921)
From the Hebrides (Glasgow and London, 1925)
More Songs of the Hebrides (London and New York, 1929)

WRITINGS

A Life of Song (London, 1929/R)

H.C. COLLES/FRANK HOWES

Kennersley, Robert. See KINDERSLEY, ROBERT.

Kenney, Sylvia W(isdom) (b Tampa, FL, 27 Nov 1922; d Northampton, MA, 31 Oct 1968). American musicologist. She studied at Wellesley College (AB 1944), Yale University (BMus 1945, MA 1948, PhD 1955) and undertook research in Brussels (1950–51). From 1952 to 1954 she was instructor in music at Wells College and after taking her doctorate under Schrade at Yale she worked in the library of Baldwin-Wallace College (1955–7) until her appointment as assistant professor, later associate professor, of the history of music at Bryn Mawr College (1957–63). She was associate professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara (1965–6), and professor of music history at Smith College from 1966 to her death. She was also visiting lecturer at the University of California, Los Angeles (1961), visiting professor at Yale (1963–4) and held leading posts with the American Musicological Society and the College Music Society.

In her work on the 15th-century English composer Walter Frye, Kenney sought to explain the popularity of his music on the Continent. She claimed that English discant theory, with its emphasis on note-against-note consonant writing, was the basis of much of the English music of the time, and that this duet structure came to replace the soloistic cantilena then cultivated on the Continent and led towards a style involving more equal activity and consonance among the voices. She concluded that many works of the high Renaissance were a synthesis of the contenance angloise with italianate melodic style. Another important contribution was her distinction between English discant theory and the practice of faburden.

WRITINGS

'The Theory of Tactus in Musical Paleography', Scriptorium, v (1951), 289–98
The Works of Walter Frye (diss., Yale U., 1955)
ed.: Catalogue of the Emilie and Karl Riemenschneider Memorial Bach Library (New York, 1960)
'Ely Cathedral and the "Contenance Angloise"', Musik und Geschichte: Leo Schrade zum sechzigsten Geburtstag (Cologne, 1963), 35–49
'Four Settings of "Ave regina coelorum"', Liber amicorum Charles van den Borren (Antwerp, 1964), 98–104
Walter Frye and the 'Contenance Angloise'(New Haven, CT, 1964/R)
'In Praise of the Lauda', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966/R), 489–99
Reviews of books and music for Scriptorium, Notes, MQ and JAMS

EDITIONS

Walter Frye: Collected Works, CMM, xix (1960)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Reviews of Walter Frye and the 'Contenance Angloise': M. Picker in American Choral Review, viii/2 (1965–6), 18; P. Gülke in Mf, xix (1966), 459–60; C.U. Brown in Notes, xxii (1965–6), 1212–15; S.R. Charles in JAMS, xx (1967), 290–92; J.D. Bergsagel in ML, xlviii (1967), 376–8; A. Lönn in STMf, xlix (1967), 202–5
Obituaries: P. Kepler, JAMS, xxii (1969), 528; H.W. Kaufman, College Music Symposium, ix (1969), 8–9

ARTHUR PARRIS

Kennis, Willem Gommaar [Guillaume Gommiare] (b Lier, nr Antwerp, 30 April 1717; d Leuven, 10 May 1789). Flemish violinist and composer. His father, Pierre Kennis, was his first music teacher. By the age of five he was a chorister at St Gummaruskerk in his home town. On 16 July 1728 he became a second violinist in the church orchestra, and from 1742 he was kapelmeester there. At the beginning of 1750 he was appointed to the same post at the St Pieterskerk, Leuven, where he stayed for the rest of his life. Kennis was renowned above all as a violinist. Among the admirers of his virtuosity were the Duke of Chartres and Louis XV, as well as Burney, who met Kennis at Leuven and particularly admired his facility in extremely difficult solos. He composed mainly chamber music, much of which features a virtuoso violin part.

WORKS

Sacred: Et honor tibi sit, hymn, a, SATB, bc, 1743, B-Ak; Salve regina, d, 5vv, 2 vn, vc, org, 1746, Ak; Haec dies, Victimae paschali laudes, F, SATB, orch, Lc; Mag, G, ?5vv, bc, Ak [only 4vv extant]; Regina caeli laetare, D, SATB, bc, US-AAu; Requiem, E♭, SATB, bc, B-Ak; Responsoria pro defunctis, SATB, bc, Lc; TeD, C, SATB, bc, Ak; Tria sunt, motet pro defunctis, TTB, str, org, Ak

Trio sonatas: 6, 2 vn, bc, op.2 (Brussels, n.d. [?1747–9]); 6 trio da camera, 4 for vc, vn, b, 2 for 2 vc/vn, b, op.6 (Paris, 1763); 6, 2 vn, vc, op.7 (Leuven, n.d. [1760–65]); 6, 2 vn, vc, op.8 (Paris, 1766)

Duets: 6 sonates, 2 vn, op.4 (Liège, n.d. [1753–62]); 6, vn, vc, op.9 (Paris, 1767); 6, 2 vn, op.10 (Paris, 1772); 6, 2 vn, op.12 (London, 1781)

Other works: 6 sonates, vn, acc. vc/hpd, op.1 (Liège, n.d. [1744–7]); 6 sonates, vn, bc, op.3 (Leuven, n.d. [1749–54]); 6 sinfonie a 4, 2 vn, va, b, op.3 (Paris, n.d. [1753–8]); 6 str qts, op.11 (Paris, n.d. [1772–81])

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BNB (C. Piot); BurneyGN; FétisB; GerberL; VannesD

E.G.J. Gregoir: Galerie biographique des artistes musiciens belges (Brussels, 1862/R)

R. van Aerde: Ménestrels communaux et instrumentistes divers, établis ou de passage à Malines, de 1311 à 1790 (Mechelen, 1911)

G. Huybens and L. van Buyten, eds.: Willem Gommaar Kennis (Lier 1717–Leuven 1789), leven en werk: zijn muzikale betekenis in de 18de eeuw (Leuven, 1983) [incl. thematic catalogue]

JACQUES VAN DEUN/R

Kennis, Guillaume Jacques Joseph (b Leuven, 21 May 1768; d Antwerp, 8 April 1845). Flemish violinist and conductor. He had his first lessons in music from his father, WILLEM OMMAAR KENNIS. In 1789 he succeeded his father as kapelmeester of St Pieterskerk in Leuven, where he stayed until the church was closed by the French in 1797. In 1803 he was appointed kapelmeester at Antwerp Cathedral, with the task of reorganizing its music after the chaos of the French occupation. He collected scores, particularly the works of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, and his library survives in the cathedral archives. He also arranged many works by great masters for use in the cathedral, but his only known composition is an occasional cantata, for a celebration in memory of Rubens, conducted by Jacques Bender on 15 August 1840.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BNB (C. Piot); FétisB; VannesD

H. Roelstraete: 'De Vlaamse orgelmuziek van 1800 tot aan Wereldoorlog I', Adem, xvii (1981), 6–9

JACQUES VAN DEUN

Kenny, Yvonne (Denise) (b Sydney, 25 Nov 1950). Australian soprano. She studied in Sydney and Milan, making her début in 1975 at the Queen Elizabeth Hall, London, in the title role of Donizetti's Rosmonda d'Inghilterra. The following year she made her Covent Garden début in the première of Henze's We Come to the River, then sang roles ranging from Handel (Semele and Alcina) and Mozart (Ilia, Pamina, Servilia and Susanna) to Micaëla, Sophie (Der Rosenkavalier and Werther) and Britten's Helena. In 1984 she created the title role in Gavin Bryars's Medea in Lyons. Her roles with Australian Opera have included Mélisande, Massenet's Manon, Leïla, Countess Adèle, Fiordiligi and Handel's Alcina and Cleopatra. At Zürich she added two further Mozart roles to her repertory: Giunia (Lucio Silla) and Aspasia (Mitridate), a part she also sang to acclaim at Aix-en-Provence and Covent Garden. Kenny's other Mozart roles include Konstanze, Donna Elvira, Donna Anna, which she sang at Glyndebourne in 1991, and the Countess, which she has performed in Washington, DC, and in Munich. She has sung Romilda (Xerxes) for ENO, and made a notable impression as the Countess (Capriccio) in Berlin (1993) and Vienna (1995). She is also admired as an oratorio singer, particularly in Handel, and as a recitalist. Her opera recordings include Adelia (Ugo conte di Parigi), the title roles in Emilia di Liverpool and Mayr's Medea in Corinto, Penelope Rich in Gloriana and several of her Mozart roles. In these and in her recordings of such works as Messiah, Elijah and Mahler's Fourth Symphony, Kenny reveals a full-toned, flexible voice, a stylish sense of phrase and an excellent coloratura technique. (H. Canning: 'Yvonne Kenny', Opera, xliii, 1992, 1385–93)

ELIZABETH FORBES

Kenong. High-rimmed bossed gong used in sets in a Central Javanese gamelan. It is about 38 cm wide and 27 cm high and rests on cords in a wooden box-frame (see GAMELAN, §I and INDONESIA, §III).

Kent, James (b Winchester, 13 March 1700; d Winchester, 6 May 1776). English organist, composer and music copyist. He was successively a chorister of Winchester Cathedral and of the Chapel Royal under Croft. By the patronage of Sir John Dolben he was appointed organist of Finedon, Northamptonshire, on the installation of an organ there in 1717, and in 1731 he became organist of Trinity College, Cambridge. In January 1738 he succeeded John Bishop as organist of both the cathedral and college of Winchester, which posts he resigned in 1774: his work at Winchester was notable for his diligence in teaching the choristers. He assisted Boyce in the compilation of his Cathedral Music (1760–73).

Like Nares, Kent wrote church music in a post-Croft style without the distinction of Greene, mildly florid or mellifluously charming, of which his best-known anthem, Hear my prayer, for two solo trebles, is representative. Some of his anthems use musical ideas from other composers: he certainly borrowed from G.B. Bassani in Hearken unto this, O man, and a manuscript volume of Bassani's music once belonging to Kent is extant (GB-Ob). His indebtedness to music by Croft was recognized in the 18th century. In addition to copying undertaken as part of his regular duties, Kent seems to have created his own collection of manuscript full scores, though the extent of it cannot be reconstructed from the sale catalogue claiming to include his library (Watson, 22 May 1835). (H.W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c.1538 (Oxford, 1991))

WORKS

TeD, Jub, Mag, Nunc Dimittis, D, GB-Cjc, Ckc, Ctc, Lsp, WB

TeD, Jub, A, IRL-Dcc

Gl, C, GB-Ctc

A Morning and Evening Service with 8 Anthems by the Late James Kent, ed. J. Corfe (London, *c*1777): TeD, Jub, Cantate Domino, Deus miseratur, C; Give the Lord the honour due; Hearken unto this, O man; It is a good thing to give thanks; Lord, who shall dwell?; My soul truly waiteth; O Lord our governor; Rejoice in the Lord; The Lord is my shepherd

12 Anthems Composed by James Kent (London, 1773): All Thy works praise Thee, O Lord; Blessed be Thou, Lord God of Israel; Hear my prayer; In the beginning was the word; Lord, how are they increased; Lord, what love have I; My song shall be of thy mercy; Sing, O heavens; The Lord hath prepared his seat; When the Son of Man shall come; Who is this that cometh from Edom?; Why do the heathen?

10 anthems: Bow down thine ear, GB-GL, Och, WO; Hearken unto my voice, ed. S. Arnold: Cathedral Music, i (London, 1790); In the Lord put I my trust, Ckc; I will lift up mine eyes, Cfm; O clap your hands, WB; O Lord, thou art my God, IRL-Dcc; Teach me, O Lord, GB-Ckc, DRc, EL; The glory of the Lord, Ob; The king shall rejoice (music arr. from A. Lotti), IRL-Dcc; Thou art my portion, GB-Cjc
Single chant, g, Och
Tune for Ps cv, Och
When artful Damon, cant., Lbl

WATKINS SHAW/DONALD BURROWS

Kent bugle. See KEYED BUGLE.

Kentēmata. Sign used in pairs in Greek EKPHONETIC NOTATION.

Kentner, Louis (b Karwin, Silesia [now Karviná, Czech Republic], 19 July 1905; d London, 22 Sept 1987). British pianist and composer of Hungarian birth. He studied the piano with Arnold Szekely and Leó Weiner and composition with Hans Koessler and Kodály at the National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music, where he first attracted attention for his playing of Chopin in a concert in 1916. He made his official début in 1918 and in 1920 undertook his first European tour. In the early part of his career he was particularly associated with the music of Chopin and Liszt, although after 1933, when he gave the first Hungarian performance of Bartók's Second Concerto, he also made a speciality of that composer's music; he gave the first European performance of Bartók's Third Concerto in 1945 and the British première of the Scherzo op.2 in 1962.

In 1935 he settled in London, and his love of his adopted homeland was reflected in his performances of music by Walton, Bax, Lambert, Ireland and Tippett, of whose Piano Concerto he gave the première in 1956. Walton's Violin Sonata (1949–50) was composed for Kentner and his brother-in-law Yehudi Menuhin. Despite such a catholic repertory (he was also admired in Mozart, Beethoven and Bach), Kentner will always be associated with his pioneering work on Liszt's behalf. In 1933 London, in particular, was hardly ready for programmes devoted entirely to Liszt which alternated many of the dark-hued and prophetic works of his later years with earlier music then widely regarded as flashy and meretricious. Kentner quickly erased such prejudice with his authority, richness, eloquence and colour, qualities memorably captured on a CD recording of performances dating from 1937 to 1941. His extensive discography also includes inimitably stylish readings of Chopin's A♭ Impromptu and C♯ minor Waltz, Liszt's Les Patineurs (abridged for accommodation on 78s), Balakirev's B♭ minor Sonata, and an impish performance of the waltz from Walton's Façade. In addition, Kentner was an admirable chamber musician, as witness his long partnership with Menuhin, and a much loved teacher. He was created a CBE in 1978.

BRYCE MORRISON

Kenton [Kornstein], Egon F(rancis) (b Nagyszalonta, 22 May 1891; d Paris, 3 Dec 1987). American viola player and musicologist of Hungarian birth. He gained a diploma at the Royal Academy of Music, Budapest, in 1911; he then studied at the University of Berlin until 1914. From 1911 to 1923 he was violist in the Hungarian String Quartet, touring throughout Europe. After settling in the USA in 1923 he taught and performed in concerts, radio broadcasts and recording sessions. In 1947 he took the MA at New York University; he taught music history and allied subjects at the University of Iowa, Peabody College, Nashville, and the University of Connecticut until his retirement in 1961. From then until 1971 he was librarian of the Mannes College of Music. As a scholar Kenton specialized in late 16th-century Venetian music. His monograph on the life and works of Giovanni Gabrieli was the first such study in English; Kenton translated material from Winterfeld's pioneering book and provided extensive biographical and analytical material and a thorough catalogue of Gabrieli's works.

WRITINGS

'A Note on the Classification of 16th-Century Music', MQ, xxxviii (1952), 202–14
'The "Brass" Parts in Giovanni Gabrieli's Instrumental Ensemble Compositions', Brass Quarterly, i (1957–8), 73–80
'Nel quarto centenario della nascita di Giovanni Gabrieli', RaM, xxviii (1958), 26–31
'The Late Style of Giovanni Gabrieli', MQ, xlviii (1962), 427–43
'Lo stile tardo di Giovanni Gabrieli', Musiche italiane rare e vive da Giovanni Gabrieli a Giuseppe Verdi, Chigiana, xix (1962), 9–34
'A Faded Laurel Wreath', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966), 500–18
Life and Works of Giovanni Gabrieli, MSD, xvi (1967)
'The Music of the 18th Century: a Retrospective Bird's Eye View', CMc, no.9 (1969), 96–104

PAULA MORGAN

Kenton, Stan(ley Newcomb) (b Wichita, KS, 15 Dec 1911; d Los Angeles, 25 Aug 1979). American jazz bandleader, pianist and arranger. After playing the piano and writing arrangements for various theatre and dance bands in the 1930s he formed his own 14-piece big band, the Artistry in Rhythm Orchestra, in 1941. This group immediately drew public attention with its large sound and precise execution (for example, on the album Artistry in Rhythm, 1943, Cap.), and from 1945, when Pete Rugolo became its staff arranger, it began to dominate jazz popularity polls. In 1949 Kenton appeared in Carnegie Hall with a new 20-piece orchestra, Progressive Jazz, which gave its name to the jazz movement it represented. After retiring briefly in 1949 for reasons of health, Kenton assembled his most ambitious band, the 43-piece Innovations in Modern Music Orchestra, with strings and an expanded wind section. This group conducted two nationwide tours (1950–51), performing monumental 'arranger's originals' such as Bob Graettinger's City of Glass (1951, Cap.), but in the end proved too costly to maintain. Thereafter Kenton led a succession of more conventional big bands, with which he frequently recorded and undertook foreign tours.

Kenton established the first of his university 'jazz clinics' in 1959, at Indiana and Michigan State universities. Although he continued to produce outstanding big-band recordings – his albums West Side Story and Adventures in Jazz (both 1961, Cap.) received Grammy awards – his later career centred on university campuses, where he proved to be an outstanding band trainer and talent scout. In January 1965 he launched his Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra, a 23-piece concert jazz band with symphonic pretensions (its first concert, at which Friedrich Gulda performed his jazz piano concerto, included transcriptions of works by Wagner), but after two seasons this ensemble also failed. In 1970 Kenton formed his own recording and publishing companies, Creative World Records and Creative World Music, to disseminate the past and current work of his bands.

Kenton occupies an ambiguous position in jazz history: his own considerable talents as an arranger and pianist were soon overshadowed by those of his superior sidemen and staff arrangers, and his obvious success with the public at large was offset by almost universal condemnation from the jazz critical establishment. At its worst (in his Innovations orchestra) the progressive-jazz movement he initiated was vacuous and pretentious; at its best it served as a vehicle for some of the most sensitive and inventive big-band scores of the post-swing era (by Rugolo, Shorty Rogers, Gerry Mulligan, Neal Hefti, William Russo, Johnny Richards and others). An extraordinarily large number of excellent jazz soloists began their careers in Kenton's groups, among the best being Anita O'Day, June Christy, Lee Konitz, Art Pepper, Stan Getz, Zoot Sims, Pepper Adams, Maynard Ferguson, Kai Winding, Laurindo Almeida and Shelly Manne. Scores from his library continue to circulate widely among American stage bands; 12 of them were choreographed for a ballet evening at Sadler's Wells Theatre, London, in 1954. Kenton's greatest contribution was probably as an educator and trainer of young talent, in which area his influence is still evident in American universities.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.J. Dietzel and H.H. Lange: Stan Kenton (Berlin, 1959) [H.J. Dietzel: Stan Kenton Biography and H.H. Lange: Stan Kenton Discography bound together]

J. McKinney: 'The Kenton Story: the Rise and Achievements of the Most Controversial Figure in the History of Jazz', Crescendo, iv (1965–6), no.3, pp.20–23; no.4, pp.17–19; no.5, pp.32–3; no.6, pp.24–6; no.7, pp.12–14

P. Venudor and M. Sparke: The Standard Stan Kenton Directory, i: 1937–1949 (Amsterdam, 1968)

A.J. Agostinelli: Stan Kenton: the Many Musical Moods of his Orchestras (Providence, RI, 1986) [bio-discography]

L. Arganian: Stan Kenton: the Man and his Music (East Lansing, MI, 1989)

E.F. Gabel: Stan Kenton: the Early Years, 1941–1947 (Lake Geneva, WI, 1993)

M. Sparke, P. Venudor amd J. Hartley: Kenton on Capitol and Creative World (Hounslow, 1994) [discography]

Collection of scores held at US-DN

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Kent Opera. Opera company based in England, active in the period 1969–89. It was founded by Norman Platt (artistic director) and Roger Norrington (musical director until 1984) to bring professional opera to centres outside London, and it initiated the idea of regionally based opera companies in England under the auspices of the Arts Council of Great Britain. It performed regularly in Kent (usually at Tunbridge Wells and Canterbury), toured southern England and performed abroad. In addition to well-known operas by Verdi, Mozart, Sullivan and Britten, productions included less familiar works by Handel, Telemann and Monteverdi, and works commissioned from Alan Ridout (The Pardoner's Tale and Angelo, 1971) and Judith Weir (A Night at the Chinese Opera, 1987).

The company received critical acclaim for imaginative productions by Platt, Jonathan Miller, Adrian Slack and Nicholas Hytner, for Roger Norrington's specialist interpretation and for the quality of its singers and orchestra. In 1989 the Arts Council withdrew its funding and the company was forced to close.

CAROLINE BENT

Kentucky dulcimer. See APPALACHIAN DULCIMER.

Kentucky Opera Association. Opera company established in 1952, based in LOUISVILLE.

Kenya, Republic of (Swahili Jamhuri ya Kenya). Country in East Africa. It has a population of 30·34 million (2000 estimate) and an area of 571,416 km². Music and music-making in Kenya are as varied as the country's traditions and cultures. Apart from indigenous peoples, other important groups include the descendants of Arab settlers found mainly along the coast and recent Indian and European settlers following British colonization at the beginning of the 20th century. Each culture is distinct despite cross-influences. Kenyan music has much in common with that of other sub-Saharan African countries and beyond due to history and geography. Indeed, studies of musical instruments and many musical traditions in Kenya are best understood within this wider context. Kenya straddles the equator along the Indian Ocean (fig.1). As a colony, Kenya was carved out of a variety of peoples and cultures. The two parts (the British-controlled mainland and the Arab-influenced coastal protectorate) became the modern republic of Kenya in 1963.

1. ETHNIC GROUPS AND HISTORICAL BACKGROUND. The major ethnic groups in Kenya include: coastal Bantu (Swahili, Pokomo, Giriama or Giryama, Digo, Duruma and Taita), the central Bantu (Kikuyu, Embu, Meru and Kamba), the interlacustrine Bantu (Gusii, Kuria and Luhya or Luyia), the plains Nilotes (Masai or Maasai), the lake or river Nilotes (Luo), the highland Nilotes (Kipsigis, Nandi, Keiyo, Marakwet, Pokot, Samburu and Tungen or Tugen), other Nilotes (Iteso and Sabaot) and the Cushitic group (Oromo, Somali and Turkana). The traditional musics of each group are distinct, though there are similarities among related groups such as the Kalenjin, coastal Bantu and central Bantu. However, in neo-traditional music played on Western instruments by the various tribal groups, differences, apart from language, are less distinct. A form of BENGA, the Kenyan version of rumba, is present in nearly all ethnic groups.

The development of music in Kenya has had many influences: traditional African values, colonial legacies, church missionaries, the music recording industry, mass media (especially radio and television), improved communications in the second half of the 20th century, the rise of Kinshasa as a musical colonizer in Africa and the spread of AfricanAmerican culture. Cultural diffusion and improved communications have expanded the forms of musical presentation found in the country, such as performances using traditional and Western instruments, choirs, Gospel music, tribal/traditional dances, live jazz bands or discos in hotels and night clubs, brass bands playing official military music, musical broadcasts from radio and television stations, music played in homes on cassette, disc or video players and, in a few places, Western classical music.

Contemporary Kenyan music exhibits four main features. The first is the marked decline in the use of traditional musical instruments. Western instruments, real or improvised, are increasingly popular due to the influence of European missionaries and administrators.

1. Map of Kenya

With few exceptions, Europeans promoted their own culture and condemned everything African as 'primitive'. The second is the ubiquity of popular music that has influenced most forms of Kenyan music. Though this may be a universal trend, it has assumed extreme heights in Kenya, and there is little room for the artistic music of the 1950s and 60s that was meant not just for viewing and dancing but also for listening. Thirdly, the dominance of foreign musics on Kenyan television and radio has thwarted inventiveness among local musicians. Lastly, most modern Kenyan music performed on Western instruments draws on established, albeit modified, ethnic traditional rhythms and values. The older musical traditions are fairly well documented. However, music of post-independence Kenya has yet to be studied seriously.

2. Main musical phases and characteristics. Various phases and characteristics may be identified in the development of Kenyan music. The pre-colonial period was dominated by African instruments in an African cultural setting. The second phase may be identified with colonial rule and the destabilization of African culture. During this phase Africans attempted to copy popular Western instrumental techniques as faithfully as they could. The recording industry arrived and provided the single most important source for the study of African music. Up to the early 1970s, the greater percentage of recorded music was in the Swahili language. Thereafter, languages of individual ethnic groups have been used widely. Phase three began with the arrival of independence and another period of instability. Cultural populism in music emerged and is still a force today. The easy availability of recording facilities has led to a music explosion of a kind. Finally, the fourth phase is characterized by wide experimentation, as Kenyan musicians attempt to come to terms with the flood of external influences, mainly from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, America and Europe.

(i) Pre-colonial period. Pre-colonial music was dominated by traditional beliefs and customs, songs about life and death, simple melodies or plain songs and, generally, the subservience of musical instruments to the human voice and dance. Music was part of a community's life, and traditional musical instruments were dominant. Drums and horns had a special place in most cultures as they were used for conveying special messages. Some of these characteristics still obtain in modern Kenyan music. In this pre-colonial period only the coastal area had towns. Thus, music was integral to rural social life.

(ii) Colonial period. Profound changes in cultural habits took place after European colonization. Among the most far-reaching was the introduction of Western instruments (guitars, accordions, saxophones, acoustic drums, flutes and trumpets, among others) initiated by Christian missionaries for use in church music. The guitar (Spanish, acoustic and electric) occupies a central position in most recorded music (fig.2). The arrival of the Arabs along the coast centuries ago led to the birth of taarab, a hybrid musical genre. The other crucial developments involved the music recording industry, Western education and the improvement of all types of communications. The establishment of railway networks, air transport and radio and television further changed the face and soul of music in Kenya.

The music recording industry made possible a break with the musical domination of the church. New sounds and styles were introduced from other continents as well as other parts of Africa by Hugh Tracey, the Columbia Gramophone Recording Company, Odeon Recording Company, Victor (HMV), the African Music Society based in South Africa and the Decca Company. Locally recorded Kenyan music was promoted by Peter Colmore and Charles Worrod. By the end of the 1960s there were recording studios in Nairobi, Mombasa, Kericho and other towns.

Initially, recorded music was imported for the up-and-coming, salaried town dwellers. Apart from American folk music, the most important foreign music for quite some time was Cuban rumba. Early popular musicians included George Sibanda of Zimbabwe, the legendary MWENDA JEAN BOSCO and other Congolese musicians such as Leon Bukasa, Losta Abelo and Jonnie Bokelo. In East Africa at large, popular musicians included Frank Hamblick (Frank na Dada Zake) from Tanzania, as well as Paul Mwachupa, FUNDI KONDE, Daniel Katuga and Esther John.

The first generation of recorded musicians from the colonial era, primarily from the coast, included Onesmus Kayamba, Roa Rebman, Sammy Kaleso, Lukas Tututu (whose Malaika tune was later popularized by Fadhili William), Walter Kivura, Hardy Gidion, Jonathan Sambu, Esther John, Lang (Horace) Obiero and Daniel Katuga. The artists distinguished themselves by developing simple but effective techniques on Western instruments. The combination of Spanish guitar, saxophone and voice in Fundi Konde's music is striking. The similarities between the Spanish guitar and the lyres of western Kenya, especially the Luhya litungu, have often been noted. In contrast to post-colonial music, these early musicians composed and recorded beautiful tunes. Although recorded music dates back to the mid-1920s, the period from the mid-1940s onwards may be regarded as not only the first phase but also the 'golden age' of Western-inspired music in Kenya. Contemporary performers and audiences constantly return to the tunes composed at that time.

2. Pierre Gwa with guitar at Linjombo village, upper Sangha area, May 1966

The period 1965–75 may be regarded as an extension of the first phase. Western instruments were still handled with much integrity, and there was a significant increase in the number of musicians, including the older ones. The market for recorded music was much greater as urban migration increased. Nairobi became a major centre of music recording in East Africa. The majority of musicians came from western Kenya (Luo, Luhya, Gusii and the Kipsigis of the Kalenjin group), but were increasingly based in Nairobi and other urban centres.

(iii) Post-colonial period. Music of the post-colonial era (from about the mid-1970s) has several distinct features. The first is the rise and development of 'neo-traditional' popular music, including many types of music and dance: choirs, Gospel music, tribal dance troupes, jazz bands, discos and Western popular music. Though these musics are played predominantly on Western musical instruments, traditional rhythms have always been strong (e.g. Misiani with the nyatiti and Kikuyu musicians with muthirigu rhythms). With few exceptions, guitar playing was inferior to that of earlier days. One possible explanation is the emergence of populism at the expense of serious art. National and institutional choirs became very widespread, among them Muungano, Kariakor Friends, Machakos Town and St Stephen's. Gospel music, inspired by the famous Arusha Town Choir of Tanzania, became and still is extremely popular. Benga, as typified by Daniel Owino Misiani and George Ramogi, became a national standard.

While the Luo, coastal tribes, Luhya and Kalenjin (especially Kipsigis) dominated the early period of recorded music, the Kikuyu, Kamba and Luo took the lead in the mid-1970s. The creative output, especially the Kikuyu recordings (Kamaru, Kiratu, James Mbugua etc.), is immense. As in the earlier period, the common instruments included guitars, accordions, acoustic drums, saxophones, maracas or other rattles (fig.3), flutes (a direct kwela influence from Malawi), bottles and wooden sticks (both borrowed from Katanga, now Shaba, in the Democratic Republic of the Congo).

In the last 20 years of the 20th century, a few musicians (e.g. Kelly Brown and Zanaziki) attempted to integrate Western popular styles with local rumba. A few groups, such as Harrison Ngunjiri, Five Alive and Swahili Nation, produce music almost identical to AfricanAmerican pop. These musicians have a large following among educated youths, especially in urban centres. The proliferation of recording studios in Nairobi and other towns means that virtually anything can be recorded or produced; in earlier times only reputable bands and talented individuals had access to these studios.

The Kenya Broadcasting Corporation English programme airs the latest Western popular hits, while the

3. Digo chivoti (side-blown flute) and kayamba (rattle)

Swahili programme broadcasts popular African music, including non-Kenyan artists such as Koffi Olomide and Kanda Bongoman. Three recently introduced FM radio stations are also dedicated to foreign musics. As a result of cultural revival, indigenized forms of 'Songs of Praise' introduced by the missionaries have been replaced on the air by locally composed tunes by composers such as Gideon Mweresa of western Kenya.

3. PRESERVATION OF CULTURAL TRADITIONS. Many Kenyan traditional instruments and performance styles are declining in comparison to the pre-colonial period, leading to deliberate efforts to preserve Kenyan culture. Notable examples are the efforts of groups such as the Bomas of Kenya to preserve tribal songs and dances, the establishment of a music school at Kenyatta University, the establishment of a national Muungano Choir and attempts by the Ministry of Culture and Social Services to document and preserve tribal musics. The prominence of tribal rhythms in music played on Western instruments implies that the roots of traditional expressive culture are not dead, only the medium of presentation has changed. Musicians who perform on traditional instruments generally regard their skills as hereditary. They consider themselves as poets or 'prophets' with the talent of interpreting life around them for the masses. As with circumcisors, painters, sculptors and medicine men, their skills cannot be transmitted through public education. Earning a living with their skills is hard in contemporary Kenya, and this accounts, perhaps, for some of the difficulties encountered in trying to design traditional African music education curricula.

In response to foreign-inspired jazz bands and disco music, even in the rural villages, traditional music is projected as 'pure' and free from foreign influence. In annual school and college choir festivals, each choir must, in addition to a European 'set song', stage an 'African folksong' which is usually a combination of singing and dancing, accompanied by traditional musical instruments (rattles, drums, lyres and horns) and elaborate traditional dress (fig.4). Another manifestation of this cultural juxtaposition is found in tourist hotels that have resident jazz bands; these hotels also often hire tribal dancers for tourists to sample 'true' African culture. There are also formal tribal dance troupes that entertain the President and visiting foreign dignitaries on state occasions. These dances are quite different from their pre-colonial precursors, which did not have to pander to audiences with 'exotic' expectations and to television cameras.

4. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, PERFORMANCE STYLES AND ROLES. In early 21st-century Kenya, Western instruments, especially the guitar, dominate the music market. Surviving traditional instruments are now more or less consigned to museums.

H.O. Anyumba and W.A. Omondi are authorities on (nyatiti) lyres that are related to the guitar and are found exclusively in western Kenya. Apart from studying the nyatiti, Anyumba has gone further to demonstrate the differences among the various lyres (Kalenjin, Gusii, Bukusu of the Luhya group, Bunyore of the Luhya group,

4. Abu (gourd trumpet) of the Luo people

5. Thum or nyatiti (lyre) of the Luo people

Luo and Kuria; figs.5 and 6). Some lyres are merely used as a rhythmic instrument, while others offer possibilities for handling complicated tunes.

The two-finger guitar-playing style, as described by David Rycroft in his studies of Mwenda Jean Bosco (1961, 1962), is the most common playing style (for illustration see BOSCO, MWENDA JEAN). But the melodic exploration characteristic in Bosco's performances is rare. Despite the many fine musicians Kenya has produced, there are no giants of the Bosco, Hamblick, Sibanda and Franco variety, although a few Kenyan songs such as Fadhili's Malaika and Brown's Hakuna Matata have reached beyond the country through commercialization.

Kenyan music-making may be vocal, instrumental or both. It may also rely heavily on dance or literary references. One of the best examples of the oral aspect is found in music of the Kikuyu people in which instrumental accompaniment is sometimes purely rhythmic (Chiuri, 1984). Similarly, other extra-musical elements supersede melody in forms of Swahili music (Jones, 1975–6; King'ei, 1992).

Another prominent feature in Kenyan music is the dedication of songs to respected individuals within a community, most pronounced among the Luo.

Kenyan music, whether played on traditional or Western instruments, is generally structured on repetitive rhythmic patterns, with minimal or free variation. Diatonic and pentatonic scales are present throughout the country. In dance music, tempos are often strict, and metres may be simple or compound, duple or triple (Omondi, 1980).

6. Litungu (lyre) of the Luhya people

5. MUSIC EDUCATION. Early music education in Kenya was private and designed largely for the benefit of the immigrant European community. Later, the East Africa Conservatoire of Music (now Kenya Conservatoire of Music) was formed to systematize music education. Under the leadership of Nat Kofsky, the conservatory played a central role in the spread of Western music in Kenya. Another institution, the Kenya Cultural Centre, provided lessons for piano, violin, guitar and other Western instruments. Kofsky also organized concerts at the Kenya National Theatre where world-renowned performers were invited to give recitals for audiences comprised mostly of European expatriates.

Although the Ministry of Education introduced music as a subject in school curricula in the 1960s, the primary means for transmitting musical traditions were annual music festivals in which school and college choirs from throughout the country competed. Today, music is a primary educational resource, but the quality of teaching varies greatly depending on the availability of basic facilities. The music school at Kenyatta University, established in 1974, is still a young programme, but scholars graduating from the programme are already making an impact through their research. In the towns, private tutors continue to play a very vital role in music education.

6. RESEARCH. Considerable research and documentation projects have been undertaken on many aspects of Kenyan music. The subjects covered include traditional songs and dances, musical instruments and the socio-cultural significance of music-making.

A major source for future studies is the research and training project on music and dance launched in the 1980s, jointly sponsored by the Ministry of Planning and National Development and the Institute of African Studies of the University of Nairobi. Research teams visited districts throughout Kenya in order to document and record music and dance. The project's initiative to film, record and publish reports on Kenyan music was never completed owing to lack of funds. However, reports on work undertaken in 18 districts are available at the Institute of African Studies.

Nearly all the instruments found in Kenya are also used throughout sub-Saharan Africa. Important studies on Kenyan instruments include: Scott (1949), Hyslop (1958; 1959; 1975), Anyumba (1971), Varnum (1970), Sassoon (1975), Kavyu (1977; 1978; 1980), Omondi (1971; 1980), Low (1982), Senoga-Zake (1986) and Wahome (1986). In spite of these and other achievements, serious gaps remain to be investigated. These include further research on pre-colonial music, repertories of individual musicians, transcriptions of songs, Kenya's contribution to world music and documentation of the vast amount of music recorded since 1963. Other obstacles include the very short tradition of recorded knowledge, the dearth of scholarly research and slow or clogged-up channels of communication. As a result, many musicians and musical traditions remain undocumented. In most areas of Africa, written records followed the advent of European explorers in the 15th century. The earliest records are patchy, and even archaeological findings have not contributed much detail. Though written records became more stable from the late 19th century, not all cultures have been documented.

The greater part of music and music-making in Kenya remains within oral tradition. The majority of recorded songs have not been transcribed, making analysis difficult. The most important libraries and archives for the study of collected Kenyan music include the Sound Library of the Kenya Broadcasting Corporation, the University of Nairobi Institute of African Studies and the Institute of Development Studies, the Africana Section of the University of Nairobi Library, Kenyatta University Library, Kenyatta University Music School Library and the Nation Newspapers Library.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 (W.A. Omondi)

R.R. Scott: 'Kenya Exhibition of Musical Instruments', African Music Society Newsletter, i/2 (1949), 22–7

H. Tracey: 'Recording Tour, May to November 1950, East Africa', African Music Society Newsletter, i/4 (1951), 38–51

G. Hyslop: 'African Musical Instruments in Kenya', AfM, ii/1 (1958), 31–7

G. Hyslop: 'More Kenya Musical Instruments', AfM, ii/2 (1959), 24–32

D. Rycroft: 'The Guitar Improvisations of Mwenda Jean Bosco', AfM, ii/4 (1961); iii/1 (1962)

H.O. Anyumba: 'The Nyatiti Lament Songs', East Africa: Past and Present (Paris, 1964), 187–98

G. Hyslop: The Prospects for Music in Education in Kenya (Nairobi, 1964)

J.S. Roberts: 'Popular Music in Kenya', AfM, iv/2 (1968), 53–68

J.P. Varnum: 'The Ibirongwe of Kuria: a Cattle Herding Flute in East Africa', EthM, xiv (1970), 462–7

J.K. Wahome: Songs of Kenya: Embu, Gikuyu and Meru (Nairobi, 1970)

H.O. Anyumba: Contemporary Lyres in East Africa, U. of Nairobi Department of History Staff Seminar Series, xiii: East Africa and the Nile Valley (Nairobi, 1971)

W.A. Omondi: An Introduction to the Music of the Luo I, discussion paper, Institute of African Studies, xvi (Nairobi, 1971)

H.O. Anyumba: A Musical Profile of some Kalenjin Songs, U. of Nairobi Department of History Staff Seminar Series (Nairobi, 1973)

G. Hyslop: Musical Instruments of East Africa (Nairobi, 1975)

T.O. Ranger: Dance and Society in Eastern Africa, 1890–1970 (Berkeley, 1975)

H. Sassoon: The Siwas of Lamu: Two Historic Trumpets in Brass and Ivory (Lamu, 1975)

A.M. Jones: 'Swahili Epic Poetry: a Musical Study', AfM, v/4 (1975–6), 105–29

P.N. Kavyu: An Introduction to Kamba Music (Nairobi, 1977)

J.K. Wahome: Songs from Kenya (Nairobi, 1977)

P.N. Kavyu: 'The Development of Guitar Music in Kenya', Jazz Research, x (1978), 111–20

P.N. Kavyu: Traditional Musical Instruments of Kenya (Nairobi, 1980)

A. Kemoli: Ethnomusicology: a Factor in the Preservation of Cultural Heritage (Nairobi, 1980)

M. wa Kinyatti: Thunder from the Mountains: Mau Mau Patriotic Songs (London, 1980)

W.A. Omondi: Thum: the Traditional Lyre Music of the Luo People of Kenya (diss., U. of London, 1980)

G. Kubik: 'Neo-Traditional Popular Music in East Africa since 1945', Popular Music, i (1981), 83–104

A. Darkwa: 'The Marakwets and Keiyo in Music: a Socio-Cultural Study', BPM, x (1982), 149–66

J. Low: 'A History of Kenyan Guitar Music 1945–80', AfM, vi/2 (1982), 17–36

J. Low: Shaba Diary: a Trip to Rediscover the Katanga Guitar Styles and Songs of the 1950s and the 60s (Vienna, 1982)

J.W. Chiuri: Pop Music as a Form of Oral Literature: a Survey of Joseph Kamaru (thesis, Kenyatta U., 1984)

W.A. Omondi: 'Problems in Collection and Preservation of Music Data in Kenya and Suggested Solutions to the Problems', Vital Arts, Vital Libraries: Cultural Life and Tradition in Developing Countries and the Role of Libraries: Nairobi 1984, 15

G. Senoga-Zake: Folk Music of Kenya (Nairobi, 1986)

J.K. Wahome: Musical Instruments: a Resource Book on Traditional Musical Instruments of Kenya (Nairobi, 1986)

V.A. Briginshaw: 'Giriama and Digo Dance Styles', AfM, vi/4 (1987), 144–54

G. Kubik: Malawian Music: a Framework for Analysis (Zomba, 1987)

A. Seago: 'East African Popular Music', AfM, vi/4 (1987), 176–7

O.M. Khayota: The Abakuria of Kenya: the Art of Music and Dance (Nairobi, 1990)

C.A. Kratz: 'Persuasive Suggestions and Reassuring Promises: Emergent Parallelism and Dialogic Encouragement in Song', Journal of American Folklore, ciii (1990), 42–67

E. Bradtke: 'Off the Beaten Track: Songs the Swahili Sing, Classics from the Kenya Coast', Sing Out!, xxxv (1990), 114 only

G.K. King'ei: Language Culture and Communication: the Role of Swahili Taarab Songs in Kenya, 1963–90 (diss., Howard U., 1992)

WILLIAM UMBIMA

Kenyon, Nicholas (b Altrincham, 23 Feb 1951). British music critic and administrator. He read modern history at Oxford (BA 1972), then worked for the English Bach Festival (1973–6) and BBC Radio 3 (1976–9), before becoming music critic of the New Yorker. He returned to England in 1982 and was music critic of The Times (1982–5), music editor of The Listener (1982–7) and music critic of The Observer (1986–92, chief music critic from 1987); he was also editor of Early Music (1983–92). In 1991 he was artistic advisor for the 'Mozart Now' festival at the South Bank Centre and also presented two programmes in the series 'Mozart Days' for Radio 3. In March 1992 he was appointed controller of BBC Radio 3 and from October 1995 has held the directorship of the BBC Promenade Concerts. In 1998 he relinquished his position at Radio 3 in order to concentrate on projects for the Proms and for the millennium celebrations.

Kenyon has held a notable and influential position in the musical arts in Britain throughout the 1990s and has played a key role in the promotion of early music, both as an editor and an administrator. He is the author of books on the history of the BBC SO and on the conductor Simon Rattle, and edited an important compilation of essays on questions of authenticity in early music performance. For many years he was a member of the Music Advisory Panel for the Arts Council and chaired an enquiry for the Arts Council into period instrument orchestras.

WRITINGS

'A Newly Discovered Group of Canons by Bach', MT, cxvii (1976), 391–3

ed.: The English Chamber Orchestra: a Pictorial Review (London, 1978)

The BBC Symphony Orchestra: the First 50 Years, 1930–1980 (London, 1981)

Simon Rattle: the Making of a Conductor (London, 1987)

ed.: Authenticity and Early Music (Oxford, 1988)

'Orchestras Today: New Traditions, Old Traditions', Klang und Komponist: Vienna 1990, 67–74
ed., with A. Holden and S. Walsh: The Viking Opera Guide (London, 1993)

ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Ķepītis, Jānis (b Trikāta, Valka district, 2 Jan 1908; d Rīga, 9 Aug 1989). Latvian composer and pianist. He graduated from Vītols's composition class (1931), Šuberts's piano class (1932) and Jānis Mediņš's orchestral conducting class (1934) at the Latvian Conservatory, Rīga, before continuing his piano studies with Robert Casadesus in Paris and with Gieseking in Wiesbaden. An active pianist, he was a member of the Jāzeps Vītols trio (1934–40) and worked at Latvian Radio (1934–52). In 1945 he was appointed to teach at the conservatory, where he was made head of the chamber ensemble department in 1960. Ķepītis was a prolific composer of chamber music and concertos. Ķepītis's music is unashamedly derived from late Romanticism and the folk music tradition. It is richly imaginative, tends towards an improvisatory style, and is characterized by lavish displays of mood and colour.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Minhauzena precības [Münchhausen's Wedding] (lyric comedy, 3, after M. Zīverts), 1945, Liepāja, 1960; Vasaras nakts [A Summer Night] (ballet, I. Sakss), 1952; Turaidas roze [The Rose of Turaida] (ballet, after J. Rainis), 1960, Rīga, 1966; Indulis un Ārija (op, after Rainis), 1969

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1934; Hp Conc., 1938; Hn Conc., 1940; Vn Conc. no.1, 1945; 5 Latvian Folkdances, 1951; Vc Conc., 1952; Pf Conc. no.2, 1953; Sym. no.1, 1955; Sym. no.2, 1963; Sym. no.3, 1971; Sym. no.4 (Meža simfonija) [The Forest Sym.], 1972; Pf Conc. no.3, 1973; Sym. no.5, 1974; Bn Conc., 1975; Sym. no.6, 1977; Vn Conc. no.2, 1978; Vn Conc. no.3, 1980

Chbr and solo inst: Noskaņas [The Mood], pf, 1950; 3 str qts, 7 pf trios, 3 pf sonatas

Other: *c*300 solo songs, choral songs, cants., music for folk insts

Principal publisher: Liesma

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Grīnfelds: Padoniju Latvijas mūzika [Music of Soviet Latvia] (Rīga, 1976), 178–81

JĒKABS VĪTOLIŅŠ/ARNOLDS KLOTIŅŠ

Kepler [Keppler], Johannes (b Weil der Stadt, nr Stuttgart, 27 Dec 1571; d Regensburg, 15 Nov 1630). German astronomer, mathematician, philosopher, astrologer and writer on music. His education at the monastic schools at Adelberg and Maulbronn included weekly lessons in music theory and the daily singing of four-part psalms and hymns; the nine hymns that he referred to in Harmonice mundi were in the school's repertory. His interest in music continued while he studied theology at the University of Tübingen, where he took the degree of MA in 1591. In 1594 he moved to Graz as a teacher of mathematics at the Protestant Stiftsschule. The lively music-making of Italian musicians at the Stiftskirche and at the court of Archduke Ferdinand stimulated his interest in the tunings of musical instruments and his experiments with monochords and with polychords of four and eight strings. He wrote that had Lassus still been alive he would have liked to learn tuning from him.

At the same time Kepler was deeply involved with harmonic speculations. He acknowledged Pythagoras and Plato as his teachers and, like them, believed that the harmony and order of the universe depended on ratios of simple numbers corresponding to the consonant intervals of the musical scale. He incorporated some of his musical speculations into his Prodromus dissertationum cosmographicarum continens Mysterium cosmographicum (Tübingen, 1596, 2/1621) and made plans in 1599 for a large-scale work, the Harmonice mundi. From 1601 to 1612 he was imperial mathematician at the court at Prague of the Emperor Rudolf II. He arrived in Prague in 1600 as assistant to his predecessor, Tycho Brahe. After Brahe's death he obtained his observational data, which he needed to prove his own 'harmonical' hypotheses, but which quickly led him to a detailed, pioneering investigation of planetary motion from a Copernican point of view. After a period of astonishing productivity in astronomy (including the first two laws of planetary motion as the result of the elliptical orbits of the planets) he settled in Linz and resumed work in 1618 on his Harmonices mundi libri V (Linz, 1619/R; Eng. trans., 1997; ed. W. von Dyck and M. Caspar, Gesammelte Werke (Munich, 1937–), vi), which was dedicated to King James I of England. He was on a journey when he died in 1630.

The fundamental concept underlying all five books of Harmonice mundi is that God created the world in accordance with certain geometric models which, therefore, stand expressed in the world. These models, or archetypal harmonies, are contained in the musical consonances. The third, musical book of Harmonice mundi is centrally devoted to a geometric derivation of the eight consonant intervals. Imposing three limiting conditions upon his general mode of derivation, Kepler proceeded through seven successive sections of a bent string (i.e. of a circle) by circumscribed regular polygons (from diagonal to octagon). In the first two books, which are mathematical, he had already treated pertinent geometric properties of such polygons. The third book comprises 16 chapters in which, besides consonance and dissonance, he discussed intervals, genera, modes, mutations, melody and notation. He here expressed some independent views. For example, he rejected the mathematical Pythagorean scale, because it did not appeal to the ear, and adopted Ptolemy's just scale. His own scale begins on G and consists of major (9:8) and minor (10:9) whole tones and the diatonic half-tone (16:15). Unlike Ptolemy he declared that major and minor 3rds and 6ths are consonances and thought polyphony a great advance on the monody of the ancients. He did, however, admit that in polyphonic music singers tempered their intervals. He was familiar with Vincenzo Galilei's equal temperament (half-tone = 99 cents) but rejected it. His cantus durus and cantus mollis are not the beginnings of modern major and minor as has often been asserted but are used for classifying the traditional modes. There are a number of musical illustrations in book 3, including a Turkish prayer sung by a priest at the court of Rudolf II and noted down by Kepler and, in the chapter on melody, a detailed analysis of Victimae paschali laudes.

In the fourth, astrological book Kepler began finding out in what empirical features of the created world God had expressed the ratios of the consonances. He found them in the planetary aspects, which he believed broadly govern human fate, and in the ultimate Harmony of the World, which he triumphantly analysed in the fifth, astronomical book. His harmony of the spheres is based on the relative maximum and minimum angular velocities of the planets measured from the sun. As the planets move in their orbits their speed is lowest when farthest from the sun and highest when nearest to it. The increase and decrease of speed correspond to the rise and fall of sound (theoretical, not actual) that the planets can emit within the musical intervals Kepler allotted to them. The range the earth can produce is very small – mi-fa (16:15; the diatonic half-tone) – while Venus's interval consists of the still smaller chromatic half-tone (25:24). Kepler believed the planets could produce six-part harmony, but this may have happened only once, perhaps at the time of creation. The final chapter contains what Kepler saw as the crowning achievement of his life: an argument meant to show that God, given the geometric and musical constraints inherent in the whole setup, could not have spaced the planets other than, at the creation, as he actually had. Kepler's third law of planetary motion was a by-product of these considerations. The best analyses of these captivating yet highly abstruse issues are in Dickreiter (1973), Walker (1978) and Stephenson (1994).

Harmonice mundi was severely criticized soon after its publication. Kepler was attacked by Robert Fludd in his Veritatis proscenium (Frankfurt, 1621), and he defended himself in his Apologia (Frankfurt, 1622). Harmonice mundi was a product of the late Renaissance, an age in which neo-Platonism, hermetics, cabalism, alchemy and magic were recognized pursuits. Rudolf II's court was a centre where practitioners of the occult sciences met, and they no doubt influenced Kepler's investigations. His Harmonice mundi was widely read; his work on music must have been studied by the young Isaac Newton, whose own music treatise shows signs of familiarity with it. Kepler was well acquainted with the writings on music of the ancients and had himself translated part of Ptolemy's Harmonics into Latin. He was also familiar with the writings of Macrobius, Boethius and Nemorarius and the Corpus hermeticum. Of modern writers he had read, among others, Artusi, J.T. Freigius, Listenius and Andreas Reinhard, and he corresponded with Sethus Calvisius. Hindemith's opera Die Harmonie der Welt (1957) is based on Kepler's life.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R. Haase)
M. Caspar and W. von Dyck, eds.: Johannes Kepler in seinen Briefen (Munich and Berlin, 1930) [incl. much musical material]
W. von Dyck and M. Caspar, eds.: Johannes Kepler: Gesammelte Werke (Munich, 1937–) [incl. correspondence with much musical material]
M. Caspar: Johannes Kepler (Stuttgart, 1948, 4/1995; Eng. trans., 1959/R)
E. Werner: 'The Last Pythagorean Musician: Johannes Kepler', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966/R), 867–82
R. Haase: Geschichte des harmonikalen Pythagoreismus (Vienna, 1969)
M. Dickreiter: Der Musiktheoretiker Johannes Kepler (Berne and Munich, 1973)
R.J.W. Evans: Rudolf II and his World (Oxford, 1973)
R. Haase: 'Kepler's Harmonies, between Pansophia and Mathesis Universalis', Vistas in Astronomy, xviii (1975), 519–33
D.P. Walker: 'La tradition mathématico-musicale du Platonisme', Platon et Aristote à la Renaissance: Tours 1973 (Tours, 1976), 249–60
D.P. Walker: 'Kepler's Celestial Music', Studies in Musical Science in the Late Renaissance (London, 1978)
H.F. Cohen: Quantifying Music: the Science of Music at the First Stage of the Scientific Revolution, 1580–1650 (Dordrecht, 1984), 13–34
J.V. Field: Kepler's Geometrical Cosmology (Chicago, 1988)
B. Stephenson: The Music of the Heavens: Kepler's Harmonic Astronomy (Princeton, 1994)

SUSI JEANS/H.F. COHEN

Keppard, Freddie (b New Orleans, 27 Feb 1890; d Chicago, 15 July 1933). American jazz cornettist. He studied the mandolin, violin and accordion, and was active professionally as a cornettist from about 1906 with his own group (the Olympia Orchestra) and other New Orleans ensembles of black musicians. In 1914 he moved to Los Angeles to join the Original Creole Band. After touring in vaudeville and performing in Chicago and New York with this group, he settled in Chicago; he was prominent there throughout the 1920s with his own bands, including the Jazz Cardinals (1926), and those of Doc Cook, Erskine Tate, Ollie Powers and Charlie Elgar.

Among the leading New Orleans trumpeters who left recordings of their work, Keppard is notable for a brusque and staccato style that comes closest to ragtime. Few of the recordings definitely identified as his substantiate either the esteem accorded him by other jazz musicians or his considerable popularity; but he seldom recorded before 1926, by which time his health was failing. Although his stature can never be fully assessed, he was one of the first musicians to lead a New Orleans jazz ensemble in the northern and western USA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Spencer: 'Trumpeter Freddie Keppard Walked out on Al Capone!', Music and Rhythm, ii/6 (1941), 13–17
W.C. Allen: 'Trumpet Giants, 3: Freddie Keppard', Hot Notes, ii/3 (1947), 2–5 [incl. discography]
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York, 1955/R)
S.B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/R)
L. Gushee: 'How the Creole Band Came to Be', Black Music Research Journal, viii (1988), 83–100
A. Ridley: 'The Keppard Brothers', Footnote, xix/3 (1988), 4–9

J.R. TAYLOR/R

Keraulophon. See under ORGAN STOP.

Kerckhoven [Kerchoven, van Kerckhove], Abraham van den (b ?Malines, *c*1618; d Brussels, end of Dec 1701). Flemish composer and organist. The Kerckhoven family was active in Brussels from the late 16th to the mid-18th century; several of its members served at the royal chapel. Abraham moved to Brussels as a young man; from 1633 (a date that invalidates the hitherto accepted year of his birth, 1627) he was organist of Ste Catherine. On the departure of Johann Kaspar Kerll in 1648 he replaced him as organist in the domestic music of Archduke Leopold Wilhelm of Austria, Governor of the Low Countries. In 1656 he received four months' wages from the royal chapel, and in 1659 he was the well-paid first organist there. He is recorded in documents up to 1673 as holding this post and a reference to him also occurs in 1684. In the records of his funeral service at Ste Catherine he is described only as organist of that church. He was buried on 9 January 1702.

Many of Kerckhoven's works, which are all for organ, are based on the ricercare technique inherited from the keyboard composers of the early 17th century. His imaginative treatment of themes is reminiscent of that of Peeter Cornet. In the longer fantasies and fugues, however, his harmonic and formal developments are more forward-looking. Some of his works contain indications of registration, but unfortunately almost nothing is known of the organs on which he played at the court and at Ste Catherine.

The member of the Kerckhoven family who contributed to the Préludes et versets dans tous les tons, composés de divers auteurs (MS, dated 1764, now lost, cited in Vander StraetenMPB, i, 83) was probably Melchior van den Kerckhoven (d Brussels, 1758), an organist at the royal chapel from 1707 until his death; this included a period as first organist from at least as early as 1737 until 1755, when he became second organist.

WORKS

for organ; in B-Br 3326, II

Edition: Abraham van den Kerckhoven: Werken voor orgel, ed. J. Watelet, MMBel, ii (1933)

4 fugues, 8 fantasias, 2 preludes and fugues
Missa duplex
Several settings Salve regina; many short versets grouped in modes

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Vander StraetenMPB
S. Clercx-Lejeune: 'Le dix-septième et le dix-huitième siècle', La musique en Belgique du Moyen Age à nos jours, ed. E. Closson and C. van den Borren (Brussels, 1950), 147–77
F. Peeters: 'Orgelmusik: Abraham van den Kerckhoven', De orgelkunst in de Nederlanden van de 16de tot de 18de eeuw, ed. F. Peeters and M.A. Vente (Antwerp, 1971; Eng. trans., 1971, 213–23) [incl. sound discs]
G. Potvlieghe: 'Abraham van den Kerckhoven', Het orgel, lxvii (1971), 157

MARY ARMSTRONG FERRARD

Kerényi, György (b Csorna, 9 March 1902; d Budapest, 30 Dec 1986). Hungarian ethnomusicologist and music educationist. He studied Hungarian literature at Budapest University (graduated 1924) and composition with Kodály at the Budapest Academy of Music (graduated 1925); he also studied in Berlin (1930) and Rome (1931). After working as a music teacher and choir trainer in Győr (1926–30) he was editor of the music education reviews Énekszó ('Singing', 1933–50) and Éneklő ifúgság ('Singing youth', 1941–9) and also served as national superintendent of music education in Hungary (1946–8). In 1951 he joined the folk music research group of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, of which he was a leading member until his retirement in 1970. During the years 1934–8 he took part, under the direction of Bartók and later of Kodály, in the preparation of the collected edition Corpus Musicae Popularis Hungaricae (1938–67). He also translated and edited the collection Nyugati kórusok ('Western choral pieces', Budapest, 1939), and with Kodály edited the two-volume Iskolai énekgyüjtemény ('School songbook', Budapest, 1943–4).

WRITINGS

'Egy 19. századi dallam életrajza' [The history of a 19th-century melody], Emlékkönyv Kodály Zoltán hatvanadik születésnapjára, ed. B. Gunda (Budapest, 1943), 275–82 [with Fr. summary]
'A regös ének magja' [The essence of the New Year's greeting], ZT, i (1953), 241–54
'The System of Publishing the Collection of Hungarian Folksongs: Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae', Studia memoriae Belae Bartók sacra, ed. B. Rajeczky and L. Vargyas (Budapest, 1956; Eng. trans., 1959), 453–68
'"Megy a kosár"' ['The basket turns'], ZT, vi (1957), 445–60 [with Eng. summary] with B. Rajeczky: 'Über Bartóks Volksliedaufzeichnungen', Liszt–Bartók: Budapest 1961, 441–8
'The Melody Core of Ushering in Summer in Transdanubia (Hungary)', SM, iii (1962), 181–214
Szentirmay Elemér és a magyar népzene [Szentirmay and Hungarian folk music] (Budapest, 1966)
'Egy XX századi dallam életrajza' [The history of a 20th-century melody], Ethnographia, lxxix (1968), 183–200 [with Ger. summary]
'Zsidó zene, magyar népzene' [Jewish music, Hungarian folk music], Magyar zenetörténeti tanulmányok Szabolcsi Bence 70. születésnapjára, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1969), 399–422 [with summaries in Eng., Ger., Russ.]
'Egy koldusének változatai' [Variants of a beggar song], Ethnographia, lxxxiii (1972), 77–84
Magyar énekes népszokások [Hungarian folk customs connected with singing] (Budapest, 1982)

FOLKSONG EDITIONS

Gyermekjátékok [Children's games], Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae, i (Budapest, 1951)
Jeles napok [Songs of the calendar customs], Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae, ii (Budapest, 1953)
Párosítók [Pairing songs], Corpus musicae popularis hungaricae, iv (Budapest, 1959)
Népies dalok [Popular songs] (Budapest, 1961)

BÁLINT SÁROSI

Kerer, Rudol'f (Rikhardovich) (b Tbilisi, 10 July 1923). Russian pianist. His father was a piano tuner who encouraged his musical interests. Early studies in Tbilisi were interrupted by World War II, when the family, like many of German origin in the area, was sent to Central Asia. Kerer studied mathematics and taught the subject in a school until 1954 before returning to study the piano with Z.Sh. Tamarkina and V.I. Slonim at Tashkent Conservatory. He created a sensation by winning the 1961 All-Union Competition for Musician-Performers as a complete unknown and at a relatively advanced age. Since that time he has taught at the Moscow Conservatory and performed in Russia, other Eastern bloc countries and Japan. He is most highly regarded for his structural command in large-scale repertory, in particular Beethoven and Prokofiev.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Tsïpin: 'Zametki o dvukh pianistakh' [Notes on two pianists], SovM (1978), no.8, 75–83
G. Tsïpin: Portretï sovetskikh pianistov (Moscow, 1990), 132–40

DAVID FANNING

Kerkar, Kesarbai (b Goa, 13 July 1892; d 1977). North Indian vocalist. She was attracted to devotional music as a child and began her training at the age of seven with Abdul Karim Khan of the Kirana gharānā. She later studied with Barkatullah Khan, the court sitār player in Mysore and Patiala, and Bhaskar Rao Bakhle of the Agra gharānā, and, most significantly in terms of musical style, with Ustad Alladiya Khan (1920–46), who stipulated that she should always sing with him at concerts. She remained with him until his death in 1946, when her solo career began. She inherited the style of Alladiya Khan, including melismatic tān in performances of khayāl and a preference for improvisation in Tīntāl. She also sang ṭhumrī. She was dubbed (Sur śrī) in 1938 by Rabindranath Tagore and was known thereafter as 'Queen of Music'. In 1953 she received the President's Award for Hindustani Vocal Music from the Sangeet Natak Akademi, and in January 1969 she was awarded the Padma Bhushan by the Government of India.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

Kesar Bai Kerkar, HMV 7EPE1 (1961)
Surshri Kesar Bai Kerkar, HMV EALP 1278 (1963)
A.D. Ranada: On Music and Musicians of Hindoostan (New Delhi, 1984)
B.C. Wade: Khyāl: Creativity within North India's Classical Music Tradition (Cambridge, 1984/R)

BONNIE C. WADE

Kerker, Gustave A(dolphe) (b Herford, Germany, 28 Feb 1857; d New York, 29 June 1923). American composer. He began studying the cello at the age of seven. In 1867 his family emigrated to the USA and settled in Louisville, where he played the cello and directed several theatre orchestras. In 1879 he wrote his first stage work, The Cadets, which was performed on a four-month tour of the South by the Herman Grau English Opera Company. He went to New York in 1880 as conductor of the H.V.B. Mann Opera Company, then transferred to the Thalia Theatre (1883) and the Bijou Opera House (1884); finally, the producer E.E. Rice arranged for him to become music director of the Casino Theatre.

Kerker's first Broadway operetta was The Pearl of Pekin (1888), after Lecocq, and by 1912 he had written at least 23 comic operas, musical comedies or revues, as well as dances, marches and songs for other shows. In 1890 he adapted a French operetta for Castles in the Air. The Belle of New York (1897) had only a modest run in New York but became Kerker's most popular work and the one by which he is best remembered, with almost 700 performances in London and many more on tours; several of its melodies are inspired by marches or lively dances, and the vocal lines have an unusually restless character with dotted rhythms and repeated notes. In his later works Kerker incorporated more of the Tin Pan Alley style of lyrical, graceful waltz songs and sentimental ballads. On the whole, his scores convey the gaiety and giddiness of New York's young, fashionable and European-orientated society at the turn of the century.

WORKS

all operettas; dates are those of first New York performance, Casino Theatre unless otherwise stated; some MSS in US-MAu

The Cadets, 1879; The Pearl of Pekin (C.A. Byrne, after A.C. Lecocq: La fleur de thé), Bijou, 1888; Castles in the Air (Byrne, after J. Offenbach: Les bavards), Broadway, 5 May 1890; Prince Kam, or A Trip to Venus (Byrne and L. Harrison), 29 Jan 1894; Kismet (R.F. Carroll), Herald Square, 8 Dec 1895; The Lady Slavey (H. Morton), 3 Feb 1896; An American Beauty (Morton), 28 Dec 1896; The Whirl of the Town (Morton), 25 May 1897; The Belle of New York (Morton), 28 Sept 1897; The Telephone Girl (Morton), 27 Dec 1897

The Girl from up There (Morton), Herald Square, 7 Jan 1901; A Chinese Honeymoon (G. Dance), 2 June 1902; The Billionaire (H.B. Smith), Daly's, 29 Dec 1902; The Blonde in Black (Smith), Knickerbocker, 8 June, 1903; Winsome Winnie (F. Ranken), 1 Dec 1903; The Social Whirl (J.W. Herbert), 7 April 1906; The Tourists (R.H. Burnside), Daly's, 25 Aug 1906; The White Hen, or The Girl from Vienna (P. West), 16 Feb 1907; Fascinating Flora (Burnside, Herbert), 20 May 1907; The Lady from Lane's (G. Broadhurst), Lyric, 19 Aug 1907; Two Little Brides (A. Anderson and H. Atteridge), 23 April 1912

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.W. McSpadden: Light Opera and Musical Comedy (New York, 1936)

G. Hughes: Composers of Operetta (New York, 1962)

D. Ewen: New Complete Book of the American Musical Theater (New York, 1970)

G. Bordman: American Musical Theatre: a Chronicle (New York, 1978, 2/1992)

DEANE L. ROOT/R

Kerl, Johann Caspar [Kaspar]. See KERLL, JOHANN CASPAR.

Kerle, Gaspard. See KERLL, JOHANN CASPAR.

Kerle, Jacobus de (b Ypres, 1531 or 1532; d Prague, 7 Jan 1591). Flemish composer and organist, active in Italy, Germany and elsewhere. He was one of the last important composers of the Netherlandish school.

1. LIFE. Kerle probably received his early education at the monastery of St Martin at Ypres, where he may well have been introduced to music by Gilles Bracquet. He was a singer at Cambrai Cathedral from September 1548 until *c*1550 (see Wright) and afterwards in Orvieto, where he was employed as magister capellae in charge of the boys' choir; soon after, he became cathedral organist and the town carillonneur. He later took holy orders, probably in Italy. In summer 1561 he stayed for two or three months in Venice while his psalms and Magnificat settings were being printed. After his return to Orvieto in September or October he met Cardinal Otto Truchsess von Waldburg, Bishop of Augsburg, who had been staying in Rome since 1559 and who was later to play an important part in the reform of church music. He commissioned Kerle to write the Preces speciales for the Council of Trent, and Kerle composed this work between autumn 1561 and the beginning of February 1562. At the end of February he left for Rome, where he became director of the cardinal's private chapel, although he had not yet visited Augsburg. Between August 1563 and May 1564 he travelled through northern Italy to Barcelona in the retinue of Cardinal Otto, who was taking the imperial princes Rudolf and Ernst to the Spanish court. Though he twice visited Trent on the journey, he took no part in the Council's deliberations. In mid-May the ten singers of the cardinal's chapel arrived at Dillingen. They performed on various festive occasions until the cardinal had to disband them 'because of debts' at the end of May 1565. Kerle then seems to have made for his homeland and on 22 December he was appointed director of music at Ypres Cathedral. He may not have stayed long here, since on 13 August 1566 a 'Jacobus Kerle' matriculated at the University of Dillingen, which had been founded by Cardinal Otto. Early in 1567, however, Kerle was certainly back at Ypres (if indeed he had left at all). At the beginning of April he was excommunicated and dismissed from his post there after an affray with another priest and a dispute with the chapter. He then moved to Rome with the idea of having the sentence of excommunication repealed, possibly after first going to Germany, where he may have stayed briefly at Munich.

In Rome in summer 1568 Kerle again met Cardinal Otto, who appointed him a member of the chapter of Augsburg Cathedral. It was probably on Otto's recommendation that he had composed a motet for the wedding celebrations of Duke Wilhelm V of Bavaria and Renée of Lorraine, which had taken place in late February and early March. On 18 August 1568 he was appointed vicar-choral at Augsburg and shortly afterwards organist of the cathedral. His six years or so at Augsburg were the most settled and productive of his life. In summer 1571 he was given one of the cathedral's highest salaries, but when the aged Kapellmeister, Anton Span, retired in 1574 his position went not to Kerle but to his colleague Bernhard Klingenstein, and Kerle exchanged his Augsburg prebend for one at Cambrai, which he held from 1575 to 1587. At the same time he applied to Prince Eberhard von Stain, the abbot of Kempten (Bavaria), for a new post and in doing so was supported by the abbot of Weingarten, with whom he had spent some weeks in 1572. At the beginning of June 1575 he left Augsburg, but it is not known if he in fact spent the ensuing years at Kempten or whether he went elsewhere. In March 1579 he became a member of the chapter of Cambrai Cathedral. After a short time an outbreak of war forced him to leave, and after staying for a time at Mons he became Kapellmeister to Gebhard Truchsess von Waldburg, the Archbishop and Elector of Cologne, early in 1582. Within a few months, however, in September, he moved yet again and entered the emperor's service at Augsburg. In October he joined the court chapel in Vienna, and in the spring of 1583 he settled in Prague, where he remained until his death. After losing his canonry at Cambrai he was made an honorary 'chantre' in the Mons choir in July 1587, and from the autumn of that year until spring 1588 he was also a canon of the collegiate foundation of the Heilige Kreuz at Breslau. As chaplain of the emperor's court chapel he now had little to do with the choir or with church music, and almost none of his music dates from his last years.

2. Works. Kerle's music combines Flemish polyphony of the post-Josquin generation with an Italian clarity deriving from the Roman school. It is basically polyphonic, and he made only sparing, though effective, use of homophony and chromaticism. His works are characterized by formal symmetry, smooth melodic lines and an avoidance of emotionalism, dramatic gesture or experimentation. In character they lie somewhere between those of Palestrina and Lassus, and a few of them are worthy to stand beside the works of these two composers.

As early as his first three publications Kerle seems to have anticipated the Roman polyphonic style. They contain liturgical compositions, in which the personal element is subservient to the demands of the liturgy. The basically polyphonic textures are relieved here and there by short sections of homophony, and the tightly knit contrapuntal structures are very much in the Flemish tradition. Roman influences are nonetheless also evident in more freely developed points of imitation and in a more subjective approach to the text. The Magnificat settings, which are similar in style to the hymns and psalms, though longer and more solemn, show specially well how far Kerle had assimilated the Roman style and how skilfully he was able to combine it with the Flemish style. The Preces speciales comprises settings of prayers arranged in the form of responsories and ends with a doxology and a Kyrie. As stated above, Kerle wrote this collection for the Council of Trent, and the prayers ask for blessing, for the successful continuation and outcome of the Council and for the reconciliation of the Christian Church and an end to religious wars. They are remarkable for the careful treatment of the texts and the economy of musical means, Kerle's aim being to secure maximum audibility of the words. The prayers were often performed at Trent and were spoken of as 'edifying and suitable for the time'. They were widely approved and did much to influence the future course of polyphonic church music: according to Ursprung, it is more appropriate to call Kerle, rather than Palestrina, the 'saviour of church music'.

Kerle's other sacred works include the early, old-fashioned masses and the very different Missa Regina, which is similar in style to the Preces and is seen by Ursprung as the very first 'post-Tridentine' mass; responsories and hymns, in which he incorporated homophony and chromaticism and in which short note values show madrigalian influence; and motets, which display great variety of form and a wide range of sonorities. His few extant secular works are of little importance.

WORKS

SACRED VOCAL

6 missae, 4, 5vv (Venice, 1562), ed. in Trésor musical, xxii–xxviii (Brussels, 1886–92)

4 missae ... adiuncto in fine Te Deum laudamus, 4, 5vv (Antwerp, 1582; 2/1583), 2 ed. in Antologia polyphonica, ii (Rome, 1932)

Motetti, 4, 5vv (Rome, 1557)

[15] Selectae quaedam cantiones sacrae, 5, 6vv (Nuremberg, 1571); TeD and 6 motets ed. in Trésor musical, i (Brussels, 1865); xvii (Brussels, 1881)

Liber modulorum, 4–6vv (Paris, 1572)

Liber [11] modulorum sacrorum, 5, 6vv, quibus addita est recens cantio de sacro foedere contra Turcas, 8vv (Munich, 1572)

Liber [16] modulorum sacrorum, 4–6vv (Munich, 1573), 1 ed. in HAM, i (1946)

Liber [16] mottetorum, 4, 5vv, adiuncto in fine Te Deum laudamus, 6vv (Munich, 1573)

[9] Sacrae cantiones, quas vulgo moteta vocant ... ecclesiastici hymni de resurrectione et ascensione, 5, 6vv (Munich, 1575)

[9] Selectiorum aliquot modulorum, 4, 5, 8vv (Prague, 1585)

[23] Hymni totius anni ... et Magnificat, 4, 5vv (Rome, 1558, lost; 2/1560)

[16] Magnificat octo tonorum, 4vv (Venice, 1561)

Liber [20] psalmorum ad vesperas, 4vv (Venice, 1561)

Preces speciales pro salubri generalis Concilii successu, 4vv (Venice, 1562); ed. in DTB, xxxiv, Jg.xvi (1926, rev. 2/1974)

5 motets, 1580[4], 1605[1]

SECULAR VOCAL

Il primo libro capitolo del triumpho d'amore de Petrarca, 5vv (Venice, 1570), lost

Madrigali, libro primo [Carmina italica musicis modulis ornata], 4vv (Venice, 1570), lost

Egregia cantio, in ... honorem Melchioris Lincken Augustani, 6vv (Nuremberg, 1574)

1 madrigal, 1561[15]

Other works, A-Wn; Öhk; D-As, Dl, Mbs, Rp, Rtt, Sl; GB-Lbl; Bressanone Cathedral Library; PL-GD; WRu; formerly Gymnasium Johanneum, Liegnitz, now ?PL-WRu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AmbrosG; BoetticherOS; MGG1 (W. Brennecke)

O. Ursprung: Jacobus de Kerle (1531/32–1591): sein Leben und seine Werke (Munich, 1913)

O. Ursprung: Die katholische Kirchenmusik (Potsdam, 1931/R)

G. Pietzsch: 'Zur Pflege der Musik an den deutschen Universitäten bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts', AMf, vi (1941), 23–56; repr. in book form (Hildesheim, 1971)

G. Reese: 'Maldeghem and his Buried Treasure', Notes, vi (1948–9), 75–117

E. Closson and C. van den Borren, eds.: La musique en Belgique du Moyen-Age à nos jours (Brussels, 1950)

L.H. Lockwood: 'Vincenzo Ruffo and Musical Reform after the Council of Trent', MQ, xliii (1957), 342–71

F. Haberl: 'Jacobus de Kerle e le sue "Preci speciali" per il Concilio di Trento', Quadrivium, vii (1966), 31–7

L. Lockwood: The Counter-Reformation and the Masses of Vincenzo Ruffo (Venice, 1970), 81, 222ff

G. Haydon: 'The Hymns of Jacobus de Kerle', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966, 2/1978), 336–58

A. Layer: Musikgeschichte der Fürstabtei Kempten (Kempten, 1975)

C. Wright: 'Musiciens à la cathédrale de Cambrai 1475–1550', RdM, lxii (1976), 204–28

B. Brumana and G. Ciliberti: Orvieto: una cattedrale e la sua musica (1450–1610) (Florence, 1990)

WILFRIED BRENNECKE

Kerling. German poet. See Spervogel, (1).

Kerll [Kerl, Gherl], Johann Caspar [Kaspar] [Cherll, Giovanni Gasparo; Kerle, Gaspard] (b Adorf, Saxony, 9 April 1627; d Munich, 13 Feb 1693). German composer and organist, partly active in Austria. He was widely admired in his own day as a fine keyboard player and as a composer, notably of keyboard and church music.

1. Life. Kerll's first teacher was his father, Caspar, organist at Adorf. He was composing by 1641 and studied with Giovanni Valentini in Vienna in the 1640s. From 1647 to 1656 he was organist at the Brussels court of Archduke Leopold Wilhelm, who sent him to Rome to study with Carissimi in the late 1640s and early 50s. Contrary to assertions frequently repeated in modern scholarship, Kerll could not have studied with Frescobaldi (d 1643), but he must have known Froberger. On 12 March 1656 he became vice-Kapellmeister and, on 22 September 1656, following the death of Giovanni Giacomo Porro, Kapellmeister at the court of the Elector Ferdinand Maria in Munich. Among his pupils there was the young Agostino Steffani.

In January 1657 Kerll's opera Oronte inaugurated the Munich opera house; it was the first of 11 operas, all lost. In May 1657 he married Anna Katharina Egermeyr in the Frauenkirche; they had eight children. In 1658 he composed the mass for the coronation of Emperor Leopold I at Frankfurt, where Kerll also demonstrated his prowess in improvisation on the organ. The emperor ennobled him in 1664. Kerll dedicated his Delectus sacrarum cantionum op.1 and a requiem (both 1669) to Ferdinand Maria. In 1673, after a quarrel with Italian singers at the Munich court, he abruptly resigned and moved to Vienna. Claims that he became organist at the Stephansdom cannot be verified. Leopold I granted him a pension in 1675, and in 1677 Kerll became one of Leopold's court organists. He commemorated Vienna's great plague of 1679 with Modulatio organica, eight sets of organ versets to be played in alternation with sung verses of the Magnificat, and the siege of Vienna in 1683 with the Missa in fletu solatium. Kerll then returned to Munich, where he published Modulatio organica (1686) and Missae sex ... adjuncta una pro defunctis (1689, dedicated to Leopold I). His last pupil was Franz Xaver Murschhauser.

2. WORKS. Kerll's keyboard music continues the traditions established by Frescobaldi and, especially, by Froberger. His Modulatio organica contains some of the finest contrapuntal writing for organ before J.S. Bach. Appended to Modulatio organica is Kerll's response to plagiarism: the earliest surviving thematic catalogue devoted to a single composer's works. It lists 22 keyboard works, of which 18 were composed by 1676 at the latest. The earliest surviving source is from the early 1650s. The eight toccatas, in keys corresponding to the church tones as used in the 17th century, typically begin with sustained harmonies and proceed through a series of contrapuntal sections, some in contrasting metres. Kerll's motifs and subjects often resemble those by Froberger: they tend to be more balanced in contour than the somewhat more angular ones favoured by Frescobaldi. Like Froberger, Kerll sometimes concluded a toccata with a gigue-like section in 12/8. The six canzonas, also generally corresponding to the church tones, are made up of sections of imitative counterpoint that may, however, dissolve into passage-work near cadences. Kerll's contrapuntal prowess is displayed in inversions and diminutions, and in the transformation of a subject in a contrasting metre. The Capriccio sopra il cucu was evidently modelled on Frescobaldi's Capriccio sopra il cucho, but goes further in motivic development and virtuosity. The battaglia and the passacaglia are Kerll's largest keyboard works. Like the ciaccona, the passacaglia is composed on a descending bass pattern.

Johann Caspar Kerll: engraving by Carl Gustav Amling, 1688

The four suites, clearly modelled on Froberger's, contain three or four dances, with the gigue, when present, placed last; two suites include variation movements entitled 'partita'. Imitative textures predominate in Kerll's surviving works for instrumental ensemble, which consist of three sonatas and a canzona for two violins, an independent viola da gamba and continuo. The 'fuga' that closes the Sonata modi dorii is in fact the ricercata published at Rome in 1650, Kerll's earliest known composition.

None of the music of Kerll's 11 known operas (some of them of doubtful authenticity) survives, but his school drama Pia et fortis mulier S Natalia S Adriani martyris coniuge expressa, an allegory in five acts, gives a good idea of his dramatic style conveyed in recitatives, ariettas, arias, ensembles and choruses. The strophic ariettas are essentially syllabic. A typical feature of the more demanding arias is an extended stepwise, gracefully descending line ornamented with successive échappées. Kerll also used an ensemble of four bass voices in 'Quatuor vent' in the last act.

The earliest of Kerll's 18 extant masses, the requiem for five unaccompanied voices (Missa pro defunctis, 1669) emulates the plainsong masses of Palestrina. The remaining works (three surviving as Kyrie and Gloria only) display a highly developed concertante technique, including occasional symphonies and sonatas. Three of the masses, Superba, Non sine quare, which is based on one of the organ versets, and Renovationis (the last two were published in the 1689 volume), are written with great economy of means. The last-named work is based almost entirely on exact or varied use of five subjects introduced in the Kyrie; fugal developments of great sophistication close each of the five main divisions of the mass. Some of Kerll's strongest dissonances result from simultaneous statements of a chromatic motif and its inversion; this procedure occurs significantly in the 'Amen' sections of the Missa in fletu solatium (also in the 1689 volume), where the continuo part includes the warning 'fuge consonantes' ('avoid consonances'). The works in Delectus sacrarum cantionum, for two to five solo voices in various combinations with continuo and in some cases with obbligato violins, recall those in Schütz's Kleine geistliche Concerte. They are sectional in structure, with changing metres and tempos, and characteristic features include both florid and imitative writing, with excursions to related tonal areas.

WORKS

Editions: Johann Kaspar Kerll: Ausgewählte Werke, ed. A. Sandberger, DTB, iii, Jg.ii/2 (1901) [S]

Johann Kaspar Kerll: Sämtliche Werke für Tasteninstrumente, ed. F. Di Lernia (Vienna, 1991–) [D]

Johann Kaspar Kerll: Sämtliche Werke für Tasteninstrumente, ed. J. O'Donnell, Diletto musicale, 1203–6 (Vienna, 1994) [O]

Johann Caspar Kerll: The Collected Works for Keyboard, ed. C.D. Harris (New York, 1995) [H]

MASSES

Missae sex, cum instrumentis concertantibus, e vocibus in ripieno, adjuncta una pro defunctis cum seq. Dies irae, 4–6vv, str, bn, bc (Munich, 1689); 1 ed. in DTÖ, lix, Jg.xxx/1 (1923/R), 1 ed. in Giebler (1957)

Missa a 3 chori, 12vv (3 choirs), 2 clarinos, 2 cornetts, 3 trbn, 2 vn, 3 va, vle, bc, A-KR; ed. in DTÖ, xlix, Jg.xxv/1 (1918/R)
Missa cujus toni, 4vv, 2 vn, 3 trbn, b viol/bn, vle, bc, KR; ed. in DTÖ, xlix, Jg.xxv/1 (1918/R)
Missa nigra, 6vv, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, KR
Missa pro defunctis, 5vv, 1669, D-Mbs
Missa quasi modo genita, 4vv, 2 vn, 4 va, 3 trbn, vle, bc, CZ-KRa, OLa
Missa 'Quid vobis videtur', 1670, KRa
Missa superba, 8vv, 2 vn, 4 trbn, vle, bc, A-KR, CZ-KRa; ed. in RRMBE, iii (1967)
Missa volante, 4vv, 2 vn, 3 va, bn, bc (insts ad lib), D-Bsb
[untitled] (Ky, Gl only), 5vv, [2 vn, 2 va], bc (insts ad lib), Bsb
[untitled] (Ky, Gl only), 5vv, 2 vn, bc, Bsb
[untitled] (Ky, Gl only), 4vv, 2 ob, 2 vn, 2 va, bn, bc, Bsb [scored by G. Harrer]
[untitled] (San only), 2 choirs, 2 ob, 4 trbn, 2 vn, 3 va, bc, F-Pc

OPERAS

music lost; first performed at the Munich Hofoper

Oronte (drama musicale, 3, G.J. Alcaini), 13 Feb 1657, lib GB-Lbl
Erinto (drama regio musicale, 3, P.P. Bissari), 1661, lib Lbl

Le pretensioni del sole (introduttione musicale, 1, D. Gisberti), 6 Nov 1667

Doubtful: Applausi festivi (barriera, 1, G.B. Maccioni), 28 Aug 1658; Ardelia (drama musicale, 3, Maccioni), 1660, lib I-Vgc; Fedra incoronata (drama regio musicale, 3, Bissari), 24 Sept 1662, lib D-W; Antiopa giustificata (drama guerriero, 1, Bissari), 26 Sept 1662, lib W; L'amor della patria superiore ad ogni altro (drama musicale, 3, F. Sbarra), 1665, lib GB-Lbl; Atalanta (attione dramatica, R. Pallavicino), 30 Jan 1667; lib B-Bc; I colori geniali (torniamente di luce, 1, Gisberti), 6 Nov 1669, lib GB-Lbl; Amor tiranno, overo Regnero innamorato (poesia dramatica-comica-nuova rappresentata in musica, Gisberti), 31 Oct 1672, lib Lbl

OTHER VOCAL

Delectus [26] sacrarum cantionum, 2–5vv, 2 vn, bc, op.1 (Munich, 1669); 9 in S

16 Lat. sacred works, 1, 3–6, 8, 9vv, 3 trbn, str, bc; 3 Ger. sacred works, 1v, 2 vn, bc: A-GÖ, Wn, CZ-KRa, D-Bsb, Mbs, W, S-Uu
Pia et fortis mulier S Natalia S Adriani martyris coniuge expressa, school play, Vienna, 1677, A-Wn, D-Mbs

Ger. secular cantata, 1v, bc, Kl
It. secular duet, 2vv, bc, I-Bc

INSTRUMENTAL

Modulatio organica super Magnificat octo ecclesiasticis tonis respondens, org (Munich, 1686); D, O, H
Ricercata a 4 in A. Kircher: Musurgia universalis (Rome, 1650/*R*1970); S, O, H

8 toccatas, 6 canzonas, battaglia, Capriccio sopra il cucu, ciaccona, passacaglia, 4 suites, kbd, A-GÖ; another MS, without suites, formerly D-Bhm, missing since World War II; copies (some incorrectly attrib.) of some pieces, A-Wm, Wn, D-Bsb, BEU, Dl, LEm, Mbs, OB, Rp, F-Pn, I-Bc, TRc, NL-At, US-NH; S, D, O, H
Canzona, 2 sonatas, Sonata modi dorii [Sonata con fuga] [final section = Ricercata a 4]; all 2 vn, va da gamba, bc; sonata, 2 vn, 2 va, bc: A-Wgm, Wn, CZ-KRa, D-Kl, F-Pn, S-Uu; sonata in S (kbd score)

For other lost works (incl. 4 masses, 25 offertories, litanies and sonatas) and doubtful works (incl. kbd pieces and writings) see MGG1, and Schaal, O and H

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ApelG; FrotscherG; KöchelKHM; MatthesonGEP; MGG1 (O. Kaul, F.W. Riedel)
H. Botstiber: 'Ein Beitrag zu J.K. Kerll's Biographie', SIMG, vii (1905–6), 634–6
A. Koczirz: 'Excerpte aus den Hofmusikakten des Wiener Hofkammerarchivs', SMw, i (1913), 278–303
G. Adler: 'Zur Geschichte der Wiener Messkomposition in der zweiten Hälfte des XVII. Jahrhunderts', SMw, iv (1916), 5–45
A. Sandberger: 'Johann Kaspar Kerll', Ausgewählte Aufsätze zur Musikgeschichte, i (Munich, 1921/R), 181–7
A.C. Giebler: The Masses of Johann Caspar Kerll (diss., U. of Michigan, 1957)
F.W. Riedel: 'Eine unbekannte Quelle zu Johann Kaspar Kerlls Musik für Tasteninstrumente', Mf, xiii (1960), 310–14
F.W. Riedel: Quellenkundliche Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik für Tasteninstrumente in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1960; enlarged 2/1990)
H. Schmid: 'Una nuova fonte di musica organistica del secolo XVII', L'organo, i (1960), 107–13
W. Kramer: Die Musik im Wiener Jesuitendrama von 1677–1711 (diss., U. of Vienna, 1961)
R. Schaal: Quellen zu Johann Kaspar Kerll (Vienna, 1962)
F.W. Riedel: 'Neue Mitteilungen zur Lebensgeschichte von Alessandro Prolietti und Johann Kaspar Kerll', AMw, xix-xx (1962–3), 124–42
H. Knaus: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte der Hofmusikkapelle des Erzherzogs Leopold Wilhelm', Anzeiger der österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften: philosophisch-historische Klasse, ciii (1966), 146–59
L.F. Tagliavini: 'Un'importante fonte per la musica cembalo-organistica di Johann Kaspar Kerll', CHM, iv (1966), 283–93
C.D. Harris: Keyboard Music in Vienna During the Reign of Leopold I, 1658–1705 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1967)
H. Knaus: Die Musiker im Archivbestand des kaiserlichen Obersthofmeisteramtes (1637–1705), ii (Vienna, 1968), 35, 37, 40, 95
E. Ritter: 'Musiker am kurbayerischen Hof zu München (1650–1730)', Archiv für Sippenforschung, xxxiv (1968), 617–20
C. Lunelli: 'Una raccolta manoscritta seicentesca di danze e partite per cembalo nella Biblioteca comunale di Trento', L'organo, xvi (1978), 55–75
A. Silbiger: Italian Manuscript Sources of 17th Century Keyboard Music (Ann Arbor, 1980)

C. DAVID HARRIS (with ALBERT C. GIEBLER)

Kerman, Joseph (Wilfred) (b London, 3 April 1924). American musicologist and critic. The son of an American journalist, he was educated at University College School, London, took the AB at New York University (1943) and the doctorate at Princeton University (1950), where he studied under Oliver Strunk, Randall Thompson and Carl Weinrich. After teaching at Westminster Choir College, Princeton (1949–51), he joined the faculty of the University of California at Berkeley (assistant professor 1951, associate professor 1955, professor 1960), serving as chairman of the music department (1960–63, 1991–4). In 1971 he was appointed Heather Professor of Music at Oxford, returning to Berkeley in 1974. He has held Guggenheim and Fulbright fellowships, and visiting fellowships at Princeton (1956), All Souls, Oxford (1966), Cornell (1970) and Clare Hall, Cambridge (1971). He was awarded an honorary doctorate by Fairfield University, Connecticut (1970), was elected Honorary Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music, London (1972), and Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (1973). In 1994 he was made an Honorary Member of the American Musicological Society and in 1997–8 occupied the Charles Eliot Norton Chair at Harvard University.

Kerman emerged as the leading figure of the generation that succeeded those founders of American musicology who came from, or were trained in, Europe. His forceful critical voice and pliant prose style have given new life to a discipline that has traditionally emphasized historical and 'scientific' methods and his interdisciplinary outlook and participation in general intellectual discourse have contrasted with musicology's tendency toward hermetic isolation. His proposal to make the means of musicology serve the end of criticism (first articulated fully in 'A Profile for American Musicology', 1965) has not gone unchallenged, but the impact of his work on musical scholarship in America and Britain has remained strong. He is best known to the general reader by his remarkable first book, Opera as Drama, which grew out of a regular series of essays in the New York Hudson Review from 1948 onwards. The Beethoven Quartets (1967) can be seen as an outcome of his admiration of Tovey, and his ingenious edition of the Kafka sketchbook as homage to the professional standards of the tradition in which he was trained. His doctoral dissertation, published in 1962, set new standards for English scholars by placing the Elizabethan madrigal in the context of its Italian forebear. Byrd, the odd man out in the English madrigal, continued to hold Kerman's interest, leading to his monograph on the masses and motets and an outstanding study of Byrd's deviant status as a Roman Catholic serving a Protestant regime. That article appeared in The New York Review of Books, to which Kerman has been a regular contributor since 1977. He is a founding editor of the journal 19th Century Music, and general editor of the series California Studies in 19th Century Music. Several generations of college students have been introduced to Western art music through his textbook Listen, written in collaboration with his wife Vivian Kerman.

The publication of Musicology (entitled Contemplating Music: Challenges to Musicology in its US edition) was a defining moment in the field. No book of its kind has maintained its status for so long since those of the founding fathers, so that any statement about the discipline, conservative or radical, still pays considerable attention to its arguments. Kerman's vision of a critical musicology was broad enough to create the space within which the various interests embraced by the so-called 'new musicology' (e.g. feminism, hermeneutics, queer studies) could begin to thrive in the nineties. He has remained a mordant observer of this and other developments, publishing his most important essays in an anthology entitled Write All These Down, and maintaining, in spite of (or because of) his debunking of 'analysis', an insistence on the centrality of the musical text or performance approached by means of what, following the literary studies with which he has always identified, he calls 'close reading'. His Charles Eliot Norton lectures, Concerto Conversations, further exemplify his thought in this regard.

WRITINGS

'Counsel for the Defense', Hudson Review, iii (1950–51), 438–46 [on D. Tovey]
The Elizabethan Madrigal: a Comparative Study (diss., Princeton U., 1951; New York, 1962)
Opera as Drama (New York, 1956/R, 2/1988)
'American Music: the Columbia Series', Hudson Review, xi (1957–8), 420–30, xiv (1961–2), 408–18
'Byrd's Motets: Chronology and Canon', JAMS, xiv (1961), 359–82
'A Romantic Detail in Schubert's Schwanengesang', MQ, xlviii (1962), 36–49; repr. in Schubert: Critical and Analytical Studies, ed. W. Frisch (Lincoln, NE, 1986), 48–64
'The Elizabethan Motet: a Study of Texts for Music', Studies in the Renaissance, ix (1962), 273–308
'On William Byrd's Emendemus in melius', MQ, xlix (1963), 431–49; repr. in Hearing the Motet, ed. D. Pesce (New York, 1997), 329–47
'A Profile for American Musicology', JAMS, xviii (1965), 61–9; correspondence pp.222 and 426
'Beethoven Sketchbooks in the British Museum', PRMA, xciii (1966–7), 77–96
The Beethoven Quartets (New York, 1967/R)
with H.W. Janson and D.J. Janson: A History of Art and Music (New York and Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1968)
'Beethoven's Early Sketches', MQ, lvi (1970), 515–38
ed.: Ludwig von Beethoven: Autograph Miscellany from circa 1786 to 1799: British Museum Additional Manuscript 29801, ff.39–162 (The 'Kafka Sketchbook') (London, 1970)
ed. W.A. Mozart: Piano Concerto in C Major, K.503 (New York, 1970) [Norton Critical Score] with V. Kerman Listen (New York, 1972, 4/1999)
'England c.1540–1610', Music from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance: a History of Western Music, i, ed. F.W. Sternfeld (London, 1973), 315–41
'Old and New in Byrd's Cantiones Sacrae', Essays on Opera and English Music in Honour of Sir Jack Westrup, ed. F.W. Sternfeld, N. Fortune and E. Olleson (Oxford, 1975), 25–43
'Viewpoint' [on tonality in Verdi], 19CM, ii (1978), 186–91
'Byrd's Settings of the Ordinary of the Mass', JAMS, xxxii (1979), 408–39
'Beethoven, Ludwig van' [with A. Tyson], 'Byrd, William', 'Madrigal', §IV, Grove6
The Music of William Byrd, i: Masses and Motets (London, 1981)
'Lyric Form and Flexibility in Simon Boccanegra', Studi verdiani, i (1982), 47–62 [orig. given at Studi verdiani IV: Chicago 1974, unpubd]
'Notes on Beethoven's Codas', Beethoven Studies 3, ed. A. Tyson (Cambridge, 1982), 141–59
with A. Tyson: The New Grove Beethoven (London, 1983)
Musicology (London, 1985; repr. Cambridge, MA, 1985, as Contemplating Music, 1985)
'American Musicology in the 1990s', JM, ix (1991), 131–44
'Representing a Relationship: Notes on a Beethoven Concerto [op.58]', Representations, 39 (1992), 80–101
Write All These Down: Essays on Music (Berkeley, 1994) [20 essays from 1957–94)
'Close Readings of the Heard Kind' [on Beethoven's op.95], 19CM, xvii (1994), 209–19
'Fuga super Jesus Christus Unser Heiland, a 4. Manualiter', Musical Transformation and Musical Intuition: Eleven Essays in Honor of David Lewin, ed. R. Atlas and M. Chernin (Roxbury, MA, 1994), 167–78
'Musicology in Transition', Irish Musical Studies, iv (1995), 19–33
'On Don Giovanni, no.2', Opera and the Enlightenment, ed. T. Bauman and M.P. McClymonds (Cambridge, 1995), 260–70
'Augenblicke in Fidelio', Fidelio, ed. P. Robinson (Cambridge, 1996), 132–44
Concerto Conversations (Cambridge, MA, 1999) [The Charles Eliot Norton lectures, 1997–8]

PHILIP BRETT

Kermisorgel (Ger.). See FAIRGROUND ORGAN.

Kern (Ger.: 'kernel'). A term used by Arnold Schering and others to denote an underlying thematic idea. See ANALYSIS, §II, 4.

Kern, Adele (b Munich, 25 Nov 1901; d Munich, 6 May 1980). German soprano. She studied in Munich, making her début there in 1924 as Olympia in Les contes d'Hoffmann. She was a member of the famous Clemens Krauss ensembles, first in Frankfurt, later in Vienna and finally in Munich from 1937 to 1943, and again briefly after World War II. She appeared frequently at Salzburg between 1927 and 1935, as Susanna, Despina, Marzelline and Sophie; she also sang at the Teatro Colón (1928) and Covent Garden (1931, 1934). The charm of her light, silvery voice can be heard in recordings of excerpts from her main roles.

HAROLD ROSENTHAL

Kern [née Seitz], Frida (b Vienna, 9 March 1891; d Linz, 23 Dec 1988). Austrian composer. She spent her childhood and youth in Linz, and in 1923 entered the Vienna Music Academy, where she studied composition with Franz Schmidt and conducting with Clemens Krauss and Robert Heger. In 1942 the city of Linz awarded her its composition prize. For the next two years (1943–5) she was a lecturer in music theory at the University of Vienna, but thereafter dedicated herself exclusively to composing. In 1960 she received an honorary professorship from the Austrian president.

As a composer she described herself as neo-classical. Her output includes several large orchestral works and she composed prolifically for chamber ensembles (including five string quartets). She died in a car accident. (A.I. Cohen: International Encyclopedia of Women Composers, New York, 1981, 2/1987, p.369).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Afrikanische Stimmungsbilder, op.34, small orch, 1934; Vn Conc., op.27, 1937; Vc Conc., op.28, 1937; Suite, op.33, 1939; Pf Conc., op.36, 1940; Variations, op.38, 1941; Passacaglia, op.45, 1943; Sym. no.1, op.46, 1943; Concertino, op.60, tpt, orch, 1951; Sym. March, op.73, 1956

Vocal: Auferstehungskantate, op.31, S, Bar, chorus, 1938; 3 Orchesterlieder, op.41, Bar, orch, 1942; Kinderchorlieder, op.52, 1952; 3 lieder cycles: op.65, A, pf, 1953, op.69, Mez, pf, 1954, op.83 (after Chin. texts), A, pf; Hymnus, op.78, A, str qt, 1959; Frau Musica, op.85, hymn, male chorus, brass

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, op.8, 1930; Sonata, op.9, vn, pf, 1931; Sonata, op.10, vc, pf, 1931; Pf Trio, op.15, 1933; Cl Qnt, op.19, 1933; Str Qt no.2, op.21, 1934; Ernste Musik, op.37, ww, brass, perc, 1940; Str Qt no.3, op.39, 1941; Str Trio, op.42, 1942; Str Qt no.4, op.48, 1948; Str Qnt, op.57, 1950; Rondino, op.58, pf, str qt, 1950; Fröhliche Impressionen, op.51, fl, vn, va, vc, hp, 1951; Ballade, op.59, hp, 1951; Variations, op.61, vn, hp, 1951; Serenade, op.62, fl, pf, 1952; Str Qt no.5, op.72, 1956; Etudes, op.80, mand, 1959

Pf: Russische Sonate, op.1, 1926; Scherzo, op.13, 2 pf, 1932; 3 Pieces, op.49, 2 pf, 1947; Elegy and Toccata, op.56, pf LH, 1949; Introduction and Toccata, op.66, 1953; Capriccio, op.70, 1955

ROSARIO MARCIANO

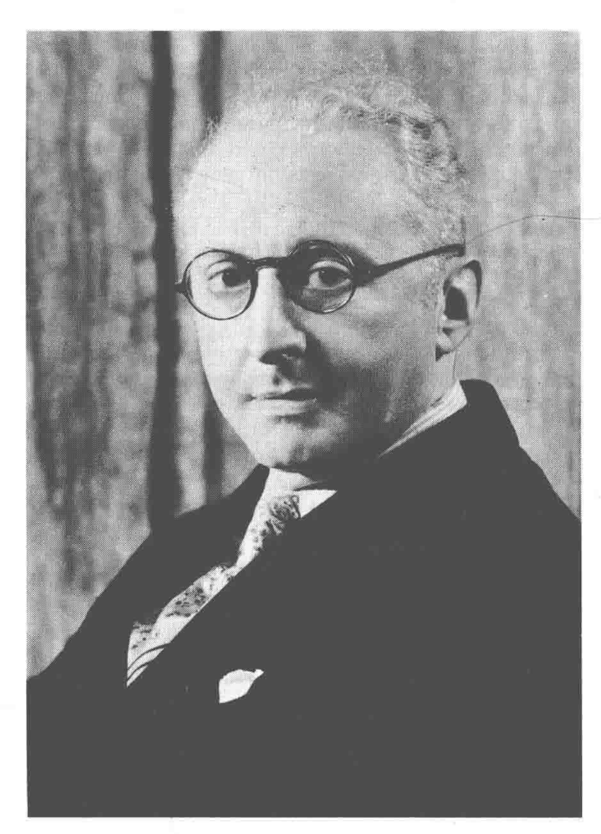
Kern, Jerome (David) (b New York, 27 Jan 1885; d New York, 11 Nov 1945). American composer. He was one of the most significant composers in the history of American popular musical theatre. His songs established a pattern for American show songs, and his theatre scores provided the bridge by which the 19th-century Ruritanian operetta style evolved into that of the specifically 20th-century American musical, with its close integration of book, lyrics and music.

1. LIFE. Kern learnt to play the piano from his mother, and in 1902 studied harmony, theory and piano at the New York College of Music. His first published composition, At the Casino (for piano), appeared in the same year. In 1903 he continued his musical training in Heidelberg, Germany, returning to New York via London. For a time he worked as a rehearsal pianist in Broadway theatres and as a song-plugger for such firms as Harms, in which he acquired a junior partnership. His first significant work was providing additional songs for adaptations of British musical shows, including Ivan Caryll's The Earl and the Girl (1905, which included Kern's song 'How'd you like to spoon with me?'). In 1905, as a representative of Harms, he made what was to be the first of several visits to London consequently integrating himself into the London theatrical scene and making many valuable contacts, notably George Grossmith jr, who introduced several of Kern's songs to the London stage. It was also in London that he obtained a contract from the American impresario Charles Frohman to provide songs for interpolation in American adaptations of London shows. By World War I over 100 of Kern's songs had been used in about 30 shows, mostly European operettas adapted for New York, notably 'They didn't believe me' for the New York version of Paul Rubens's and Sidney Jones's British musical The Girl from Utah (1914).

Between 1915 and 1918 he composed four musicals for the Princess Theatre in New York. The theatre seated only about 300 and an orchestra of around 11, thus demanding a small cast, limited sets, and an intimate style of production, which provided a sharp contrast to the large-scale Ruritanian operettas then in vogue. With the librettist Guy Bolton, later joined by the lyricist P.G. Wodehouse, Kern developed a new type of musical show in which the characters were more realistic and the story and songs more closely integrated than in the operettas and song-and-dance musicals that were currently popular. The series began with Nobody Home (adapted from Rubens's musical Mr. Popple (of Ippleton), 1915). The second, and Kern's first big success, was Very Good Eddie (1915); Oh Boy! (1917) was an even greater success than its predecessors. Although Oh Lady! Lady! (1918) was not so popular, it helped further to define Kern's new techniques; it included the song 'Bill', which later achieved its definitive position in Show Boat.

For a while Kern contributed to more traditional and commercially oriented musicals, introducing such standards as 'Look for the silver lining' in Sally (1920) and 'Who?' in Sunny (1925), which were big successes not only in New York but also in London. In 1927 Kern produced his most important work, Show Boat, a musical play with words by Oscar Hammerstein II, and perhaps the most influential Broadway musical play ever written in that it impelled composers of Broadway musicals to concern themselves with the whole integrated production as opposed to writing Tin Pan Alley songs for interpolation. At least six songs, which are integral to the characterization and story, have become standard favourites, including 'Ol' Man River', 'Can't help lovin' dat man', 'Make Believe', and 'Why do I love you?'. Show Boat has been filmed three times, and was the first musical to enter an opera company's repertory (New York City Opera, 1954). The rediscovery of the original performing material, with orchestrations by Robert Russell Bennett (Kern's regular orchestrator from 1923) led to a large-scale recording in 1987 and widespread opera house productions.

Kern's works were also being adapted for the screen, a transition accomplished notably in Roberta (1933, filmed 1935), with its setting in a Parisian fashion house and a score which included 'Smoke gets in your eyes'. Kern also turned to the composition of original film scores: the most celebrated example was Swing Time (1936), in which Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers performed such songs as 'A Fine Romance' and 'The Way You Look Tonight'. After Very Warm for May (1939, with the song 'All the Things you Are') was a failure on Broadway, Kern went



1. Performance of 'The Parson's Bride' in the auditorium of the 'Cotton Blossom', from Act 1 scene vi of Kern and Hammerstein's 'Show Boat', Ziegfeld Theatre, New York, 1927, with (on stage) Howard Marsh as Gaylord Ravenal and Norma Terris as Magnolia, and (left foreground) Charles Winninger as Cap'n Andy to live in Hollywood and wrote only for films, producing some of his most sophisticated songs. These included 'The Last Time I saw Paris', which won an Academy Award when interpolated in to the film Lady be Good (1941), 'Dearly Beloved' for You were never Lovelier (1942), and 'Long Ago and Far Away' for Cover Girl (1944). In 1945 he was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Kern's sudden death occurred in New York, where he had gone for a revival of Show Boat, and where he had planned to compose the score for a new stage musical that was eventually set by Irving Berlin as Annie Get Your Gun!. A film biography of Kern, Till the Clouds Roll by, after a song from Oh Boy!, was produced in 1946.

2. WORKS. When, after World War I, the American musical comedy began to replace European operetta as the most popular stage genre, Kern's work was crucial in providing a bridge between the two forms. He found some of his early models in Europe; his style always showed more evidence of European influence than that of most American composers of musicals, and his works were thus more readily acceptable outside the USA. At the same time he was one of the first to turn his back on European operetta which, as a result of his intimate acquaintance with the form in his early days, he did from a position of greater strength. His thorough knowledge of stage technique enabled him to combine the supremacy of lyrical song with the dramatic demands of plot and character motivations to create the American musical play. He was possibly America's most prolific theatre composer, with some 1000 songs in over 100 stage works.

A less startlingly original talent than Gershwin, Kern built upon his natural melodic gift to develop the distinctive attributes of incisive and varied rhythm and conversational phrasing that distinguish his songs. He was particularly good at absorbing, adapting, and improving upon the ideas of other composers, and this was a key element of his ability to remain pre-eminent in his field until the 1940s. His earliest songs, such as 'How'd you like to spoon with me?', have few pretensions to anything more than vaudeville effectiveness. 'They didn't believe me' and the songs of the Princess Theatre shows, however, demonstrate a developing sense of the effectiveness of melodic and rhythmic twists. Allied to increasingly sophisticated lyrics, this became still more pronounced in the 1920s, where some of Kern's most elegant, effortless melodies are characterized by held notes juxtaposed with small groups of quick notes (for example, 'Who?'), or by subtle changes of rhythm or metre ('Look for the silver lining'). By the time of Show Boat Kern had become a mature and rounded composer, able to capture the dignity of 'Ol' Man River' as readily as the light fluency of 'Why do I love you?' and the effective harmonic shifts of 'Can't help lovin' dat man'. In the early 1930s he combined his talent for changing rhythmic patterns with an expanded sense of the effectiveness of elegantly suspended melodic line in such pieces as 'I've told ev'ry little star' and 'The song is you' (both from Music in the Air) and above all in 'Smoke gets in your eyes'. His subtle use of melodic sequence and changing harmony is perhaps best displayed in the refrain of 'All the Things You Are' (Very Warm for May, 1939). In the film songs of his final years it was the compactness of his musical structures and the increasing range of emotional expression that were most notable. He collaborated with some of the most gifted lyricists of the time, including Oscar Hammerstein II, Dorothy Fields, Johnny Mercer and Ira Gershwin.

2. Jerome Kern, 1932

In his early days a fine companion with an impish charm and sense of humour, Kern later became somewhat remote and at times difficult to work with. He rarely collaborated with any single lyricist for long, and this contributes to the tendency to think of him essentially as a composer rather than as a songwriter or a partner in a songwriting team. He avoided large forms and symphonic styles, however, except in Scenario (1941, on themes from Show Boat), and in his Mark Twain Suite (1942). Like most composers of musicals, he had his songs orchestrated for the theatre by professional arrangers, notably Frank Saddler (to 1921), and Robert Russell Bennett (from 1923), who also arranged two concert pieces on melodies by Kern: Symphonic Study and Variations on a Theme by Jerome Kern.

See also MUSICAL, MUSICAL COMEDY, §2–3.

WORKS

Edition: The Jerome Kern Song Book (New York, 1955)

STAGE

unless otherwise stated, all are musicals, all are wholly or mostly by Kern, dates are those of first New York performances; librettists shown as (lyricist; book author) for additional performance details see GroveO

Mr Wix of Wickham (2, J.H. Wagner; H. Darnley), Bijou, 12 Sept 1904, collab. others
La Belle Paree (2, E. Madden; E. Smith;), Winter Garden, 20 March 1911, collab. F. Tours
The Red Petticoat (3, P. West; R.J. Young), Daly's, 13 Nov 1912
Oh, I Say! (3, H.B. Smith; S. Blow and D. Hoare, after H. Keroul and A. Barré), Casino, 30 Oct 1913
Ninety in the Shade (2, G. Bolton), Knickerbocker, 25 Jan 1915
Nobody Home (2, Bolton, after P. Rubens), Princess, 20 April 1915, collab. others
Cousin Lucy (C. Klein; S. Green), 27 Aug 1915
Miss Information (P. Dickey, C.W. Goddard), 5 Oct 1915 [incl. Some Sort of Somebody (E. Janis)]
Very Good Eddie (2, Green; P. Bartholomae and Bolton), Princess, 23 Dec 1915 [incl. Babes in the Wood]
Have a Heart (2, P.G. Wodehouse; Bolton), Liberty, 11 Jan 1917
Love o' Mike (2, H.B. Smith; T. Sidney), Schubert, 15 Jan 1917
Oh Boy! (2, Wodehouse; Bolton), Princess, 20 Feb 1917 [incl. Till the Clouds Roll By] Leave it to Jane (2, Wodehouse; Bolton, after G. Ade), Longacre, 28 Aug 1917
Miss 1917 (revue, Wodehouse; Bolton), Century, 5 Nov 1917, collab. V. Herbert
Oh Lady! Lady! (2, Wodehouse; Bolton), Princess, 1 Feb 1918
Toot, Toot! (2, B. Braley; E.A. Woolf, after R. Hughes: Excuse Me), George M. Cohan, 11 March 1918
Rock-A-Bye Baby (3, H. Reynolds; Woolf, M. Mayo: Baby Mine), 22 May 1918
Head over Heels (Woolf, after N. Bartley), George M. Cohan, 29 Aug 1918
She's a Good Fellow (3, A. Caldwell), Globe, 5 May 1919
Zip goes a Million (B. DeSylva; Bolton, after G.B. McCutcheon: Brewster's Millions), Worcester, MA, 8 Dec 1919
The Night Boat (2, Caldwell, after A. Bisson), Liberty, 2 Feb 1920 [incl. Whose baby are you']
Hitchy Koo, 1920 (revue, G. MacDonough and Caldwell), New Amsterdam, 19 Oct 1920
Sally (3, C. Grey; Bolton), New Amsterdam, 21 Dec 1920, ballet music by Herbert [incl. Look for the silver lining (B. DeSylva), Whip-Poor-Will (DeSylva), Wild Rose, Sally]; film, 1929
Good Morning, Dearie (2, Caldwell), Globe, 1 Nov 1921 [incl. Ka-Lu-A]
The Cabaret Girl (3, G. Grossmith and Wodehouse), London, Winter Garden, 19 Sept 1922
The Bunch and Judy (2, Caldwell; Caldwell and H. Ford), Globe, 28 Nov 1922
The Beauty Prize (3, Grossmith and Wodehouse), London, Winter Garden, 5 Sept 1923
Stepping Stones (2, Caldwell; Caldwell and R.H. Burnside), Globe, 6 Nov 1923
Sitting Pretty (2, Wodehouse; Bolton), Fulton, 8 April 1924
Dear Sir (2, H. Dietz; E. Selwyn), Times Square, 23 Sept 1924
Sunny (2, O. Harbach and O. Hammerstein II), New Amsterdam, 22 Sept 1925 [incl. Who?, D'ye love me?, Sunny, Two Little Bluebirds]; films, 1930, 1940
The City Chap (2, Caldwell; J. Montgomery, after W. Smith: The Fortune Hunter), 26 Oct 1925
Criss Cross (2, Caldwell and Harbach), Globe, 12 Oct 1926
Lucky (2, B. Kalmar; Harbach), New Amsterdam, 22 March 1927, collab. H. Ruby Show Boat (2, Hammerstein, after E. Ferber), Ziegfeld, 27 Dec 1927 [incl. Ol' Man River, Make Believe, Bill (Wodehouse and Hammerstein), Can't help lovin' dat man, Why do I love you?, You are love]; films, 1929, 1936 [incl. I still suits me], 1951
Blue Eyes (2, Bolton, and G. John), London, Piccadilly, 27 April 1928
Sweet Adeline (musical romance, 2, Hammerstein), Hammerstein's, 3 Sept 1929 [incl. Why was I born?, Don't ever leave me]; film, 1935

The Cat and the Fiddle (2, Harbach), Globe, 15 Oct 1931 [incl. She didn't say yes]; film, 1933
Music in the Air (2, Hammerstein), Alvin, 8 Nov 1932 [incl. The song is you, I've told ev'ry little star]; film, 1934
Roberta (Harbach, after A.D. Miller), New Amsterdam, 18 Nov 1933 [incl. Smoke gets in your eyes]; films, 1935 [incl. I won't dance (Hammerstein and D. Fields), Lovely to Look At (Fields)], 1952
Three Sisters (3, Hammerstein), London, Drury Lane, 9 April 1934
Gentlemen Unafraid (3, Hammerstein and Harbach, after E. Boykin), St Louis, Municipal Opera, 3 June 1938
Very Warm for May (2, Hammerstein), Alvin, 17 Nov 1939 [incl. All the Things You Are]

OTHER WORKS

Films: I Dream too much (D. Fields), 1935; Swing Time (Fields), 1936 [incl. The Way You Look Tonight, A Fine Romance, Pick yourself up]; High, Wide and Handsome (Hammerstein), 1937 [incl. The Folks who Live on the Hill, Can I forget you?]; When you're in Love (Fields), 1937; Joy of Living (Fields), 1938 [incl. You couldn't be cuter]; One Night in the Tropics (Fields), 1940; Lady Be Good! (Hammerstein), 1941 [incl. The Last Time I saw Paris]; You Were Never Lovelier (J. Mercer), 1942 [incl. Dearly Beloved, I'm old fashioned, You were never lovelier]; Cover Girl (I. Gershwin), 1944 [incl. Long Ago and Far Away]; Can't Help Singing (E.Y. Harburg), 1944 [incl. Can't help singing]; Centennial Summer (L. Robin, Hammerstein and Harburg), 1946 [incl. All Through the Day]; Lovely to Look At (Fields), 1952
Songs interpolated into musicals and films, incl. How'd you like to spoon with me? (E. Laska) in I. Caryll: The Earl and the Girl, 1905; 8 songs in S. Jones: King of Cadonia, 1910; 5 songs in H. Bereny: The Girl from Montmartre, 1912; You're here and I'm here (H.B. Smith) in E. Eysler: The Laughing Husband, 1913; 8 songs, incl. They didn't believe me (H. Reynolds), in S. Jones: The Girl from Utah, 1914; 4 songs in Ziegfeld Follies of 1916; 4 songs in Theodore & Co., London, 1916; The last time I saw Paris (Hammerstein) in Lady be Good (film), 1941
Inst: At the Casino, pf (New York, 1902); Scenario, orch, 1941 [on themes from Show Boat]; Mark Twain Suite, orch, 1942

Principal publisher: Harms

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Ewen: The Story of Jerome Kern (New York, 1953)
P.G. Wodehouse and G. Bolton: Bring on the Girls (New York, 1953)
D. Ewen: The World of Jerome Kern (New York, 1960)
S. Green: The World of Musical Comedy (New York, 1960, 4/1980)
A. Wilder: American Popular Song: the Great Innovators, 1900–1950 (New York, 1972)
M. Wilk: They're Playing our Song (New York, 1973)
H. Fordin: Jerome Kern: the Man and his Music (Santa Monica, CA, 1975)
M. Kreuger: Show Boat, the Story of a Classic American Musical (New York, 1977)
M. Freedland: Jerome Kern: a Biography (London, 1978)
G. Bordman: Jerome Kern: his Life and Music (New York, 1980)
A. Lamb: Jerome Kern in Edwardian London (Littlehampton, 1981, enlarged 2/1985)
J.P. Swain: The Broadway Musical: a Critical and Musical Survey (New York, 1990), 15–49
R.H. Kornick: Recent American Opera: a Production Guide (New York, 1991), 158–60
L. Davis: Bolton and Wodehouse and Kern: the Men who made Musical Comedy (New York, 1993)
S. Citron: The Wordsmiths: Oscar Hammerstein 2nd and Alan Jay Lerner (New York, 1995)
A. Forte: The American Popular Ballad of the Golden Era, 1924–1950 (Princeton, NJ, 1995), 52–85
G. Block: 'Show Boat: In the Beginning', Enchanted Evenings: the Broadway Musical from 'Show Boat' to Sondheim (New York, 1997), 19–40, 319–24

RONALD BYRNSIDE, ANDREW LAMB/R

Kernberg, Johann Philipp. See KIRNBERGER, JOHANN PHILIPP.

Kernis, Aaron Jay (b Philadelphia, 15 Jan 1960). American composer. He studied at the San Francisco Conservatory, the Manhattan School (BM 1981) and Yale University. His composition teachers included John Adams, Jacob Druckman, Morton Subotnick and Charles Wuorinen. He first received national recognition when his orchestral work, Dream of the Morning Sky (1982–3), was given its première by the New York PO in 1983. In 1993 Kernis was appointed composer-in-residence of the St Paul Chamber Orchestra. He won the Pulitzer Prize in 1998 for his second string quartet. His eclectic musical language draws upon and juxtaposes a variety of styles, including American popular and vernacular music. His works often exude an exhilaration spiced with wry musical humour or evoke profound emotion. Poetic and visual imagery also abound in his compositions; bright timbres, ascending melodic lines and high registers are frequently employed.

Kernis's oeuvre can be divided into three style periods. His early, 'process' works draw upon rigorous pre-compositional structures. Morningsongs (1982–3), for example, employs a limited number of pitches at any given time; groups of tones change to delineate formal sections. After 1983 Kernis embraced a more intuitive approach, formulating only the large-scale structure of a work before composing. The form of Love Scenes (1986–7) mirrors the decline of a relationship; increasingly angular, dissonant music is sporadically interrupted by fragmented lyrical motives. The colours and complex patterns of Ravenna's Byzantine mosaics are reflected in the rapidly unfolding musical material of his Invisible Mosaic triptych (1986–8); sonic fragments coalesce into coherent patterns, in a musical analogy of the mosaics' gradual disclosure of underlying shape and line. From 1988 Kernis sought greater continuity, simplicity and emotional directness. He began to embrace traditional forms such as the symphony and string quartet, albeit in untraditional ways. Unity is projected in the Symphony in Waves (1989) through the abstract depiction of wave motion in melodic, dynamic, textural and timbral domains. The cycle of works consisting of Symphony no.2 (1991), Still Movement with Hymn (1993), Colored Field (1994) and Lament and Prayer (1996), reflects the horror of war and the composer's sensitivity to other political and social issues. Le quattro stagioni dalla cucina futurismo (1991), a manifesto on food preparation, New Era Dance (1992), an evocation of contemporary urban life, and Goblin Market (1995), an erotic theatrical setting of Rossetti's Victorian tale, display Kernis's extravagant imagination.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Goblin Market (C. Rossetti), nar, pic + fl + a fl, ob + eng hn, cl + E♭ cl + b cl, bn, hn, tpt, pf + synth, perc, str, 1995

VOCAL

Choral: Stein Times Seven (G. Stein), SSATB, pf, 1980; How God Answers the Soul (Mechthild of Magdeburg), SSAATTBB, 1996
Solo: 6 Fragments of Gertrude Stein, S, pic + fl + a fl, 1979; Dream of the Morning Sky (Cycle V, Part I) (N.S. Momaday), S, orch, 1982–3; Nocturne (Bible: Song of Songs), S, tpt, 2 glock, 2 pf, 1982; Morningsongs (J. Anderson), Bar, pic + fl + a fl, 2 cl + b cl, bn, hn, perc, hp, vn, va, vc, 1982–3; America(n) (Day)dreams (M. Swenson), Mez, pic + fl, cl + b cl, hn, tpt, perc, hp, str, 1984; Love Scenes (A. Swir, trans. M.L. Nathan), S, vc, 1986–7; Songs of Innocents I (anon. Sanskrit text, trans. W.S. Merwin, R.L. Stevenson, M. Swenson, W. Ramal), S, pf, 1989; Brilliant Sky, Infinite Sky (J. Joubert, trans. D. Levertov, G. du Maurier, J. Ash,

C. Milosz), Bar, vn, perc, pf, 1990; Le quattro stagioni dalla cucina futurismo (F.T. Marinetti), nar, vn, vc, pf, 1991; Simple Songs (Hildegard of Bingen, Pss, Rumi, Ryokan), S/T, chbr orch, 1991; Songs of Innocents II (C.H. Ross, J. Keats, Swenson, anon.), S, pf, 1991

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Invisible Mosaic III, 1986–8; Sym. in Waves, 1989; Musica celestis, str, 1990 [arr. 2nd movt of Str Qt]; Sym. no.2, 1991; New Era Dance, 1992; Colored Field, conc., eng hn, orch, 1994; Air, vn, orch, 1995; Lament and Prayer, vn, orch, 1996; Too Hot Toccata, 1996; Double Conc., vn, gui, orch, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Music for Trio (Cycle IV), pic + fl + a fl, vc, pf, 1982; Invisible Mosaic I, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1987; Phantom Polka, accdn, 1987; Invisible Mosaic II, pic + fl, ob, cl + b cl, bn, hn, tpt, trbn, tuba, 2 perc, hp, pf + cel, str qt, db, 1988; Before Sleep and Dreams, pf, 1990; Str Qt 'Musica celestis', 1990; Mozart en Route 'A Little Traveling Music', vn, va, vc, 1991; Superstar Etude no.1, pf, 1992; 100 Greatest Dance Hits, gui, str qt, 1993; Still Movement with Hymn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1993; Air, vn, pf, 1995; Str Qt no.2, 1997

Recorded interviews in US-NHob

Principal publisher: Associated

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K.R. Schwarz: ' A Young Musician and his Dilemma', New York Times (27 June1993)

J. Adams: 'An Interview with Aaron Kernis', Conjunctions, xix (1994), 174–90

M. Gustavson: ' Conversation in New York', Contemporary Music Review, x (1994), 121–32

M. Swed: Aaron Jay Kernis (New York, 1995) [Associated catalogue]

J. Kosman: 'String Players' Choice', Strings, xiv (1999), 32–7

MARY LOU HUMPHREY

Kerpely, Jenő. Hungarian cellist, member of the HUNGARIAN QUARTET (i).

Kerpen, Freiherr Hugo Franz Karl Alexander von [Hugo Friedrich] (b ?Engers, 23 March 1749; d Heilbronn, 31 Dec 1802). German composer. From 1762 he lived in Mainz, where in 1779 he became a canon of the cathedral; he later held the same post at the nearby Cathedral of Worms. In Mainz he was associated with an amateur theatre, for which he composed Singspiele. These and his other compositions show that the music education of aristocratic amateurs was particularly well tended in Mainz until the second French invasion of 1797. He avoided the occupation by escaping to Heilbronn where, as in Mainz, some of his works were eventually published. His lucid style favours a series of short, comprehensible motifs, but shows no overall development; instead, Kerpen seems to have held fast to the then widespread practice of musical amateurism.

WORKS

Stage (Singspiele, lost, unless otherwise stated): Der Schiffbruch, 1780; Cephalus und Procris (melodrama, after Ovid), Mainz, 1781, formerly D-DS; Adelheid von Ponthieu (tragic ballet), Mainz, ?1782, vs (Mainz, 1782); Die Räthsel (2, H.G. Schmieder), Mainz, 1790: Magnetisir-Menuet in Air de la nouvelle Contredanse (Mainz, 1794); Claudine von Villa Bella (after J.W. von Goethe), formerly DS

Other vocal: Abschieds-Ode, 1v, pf (Mainz, 1783); 6 ariettes Italiennes à 3 voix (Mainz, 1792); [12] Teutsche Lieder (F. von Matthisson), i (Mainz, 1797), ii (Heilbronn, 1798)

Inst: Sonate, kbd, vn, in Betrachtungen der Mannheimer Tonschule, i/5–7 (Mannheim, 1778), probably also in 3 Sonates, hpd, vn, op.1 (Mannheim, *c*1779); 6 quatuors concertants, op.3 (Mainz, 1786); Sonate, hpd 4 hands, ?op.4 (Mainz, 1788); 7 Variationen ... 'Wir kommen von der Küste', kbd (Heilbronn, ?1799); 6 grandes sonates, pf, vn obbl, op.8 (Heilbronn, ?1799); Grand Concert, pf, orch, op.9 (Heilbronn, ?1800); 2 trios, pf, vn, vc, ?op.9 (Offenbach, n.d.); Sym., E♭, before 1797, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL

A.L. Veit: Mainzer Domherren vom Ende des 16. bis zum Ausgang des 18. Jahrhunderts in Leben, Haus und Habe (Mainz, 1924)

M. Treisch: Goethes Singspiele in Kompositionen seiner Zeitgenossen (diss., Humboldt U. of Berlin, 1951)

A.B. Gottron: Mainzer Musikgeschichte von 1500 bis 1800 (Mainz, 1959)

H. Unverricht: 'Musik in Mainz im Spiegel der sächsisch-thüringischen Allgemeinen Zeitschriften aus dem letzten Viertel des 18. Jahrhunderts', Mainzer Zeitschrift, lx–lxi (1965–6), 44, 47

H.-C. Müller: Bernhard Schott, Hofmusikstecher in Mainz: die Frühgeschichte seines Musikverlages bis 1797, mit einem Verzeichnis der Verlagswerke 1779–1797 (Mainz, 1977)

HUBERT UNVERRICHT

Kerr, Harrison (b Cleveland, 13 Oct 1897; d Norman, OK, 15 Aug 1978). American composer and educationist. His principal studies were with James H. Rogers in Cleveland and with Boulanger in Paris (1921). He returned to the USA in 1921 to begin a long career as a teacher and administrator: first in Cleveland, then briefly at Greenbrier College, West Virginia, and subsequently at the Chase School, Brooklyn, where he remained from 1928 until after World War II. It was there that he became active in several interrelated organizations, among them the ACA and the AMC. He served as executive secretary for both of these as well as serving on the editorial boards of the New Music Edition and New Music Quarterly Recordings. During the immediate postwar years he spent much time abroad as chief of the Music, Art and Exhibits Section of the Army Civil Affairs Division; he was then also a member of the music panel for UNESCO. From 1949 until his retirement in 1968 he was professor of music and composer-in-residence at the University of Oklahoma; he was also dean of the university's College of Fine Arts until 1959. Despite these many activities he composed a wide variety of scores, chiefly during the periods 1935–40 and after 1950. His most extensive work is an opera, The Tower of Kel (1958–60), from which he extracted material for several smaller compositions. In general, Kerr's musical language combines linear chromaticism, vertical dissonances built largely from triads and perfect intervals, and strong rhythms with a feeling for classical form and gesture.

WORKS

Stage: Dance Sonata (ballet), 2 pf, perc, 1938, Bennington, 1938; The Tower of Kel (op, 4, Kerr), 1958–60

Orch: 3 syms., 1927–9, rev. 1938, 1943–5, 1953–4; Movt, str orch, 1936; Dance Suite, 1939–40; Vn Conc., 1950–51, rev. 1956; Variations on a Ground Bass, 1966; Sinfonietta, 1967–8; Episodes from The Tower of Kel, 1971–2

Vocal: 3 Songs (E.St.Vincent Millay), 1v, pf/chbr orch, 1924–8; 6 Songs (A. Crapsey), 1924–8; Notations on a Sensitized Plate (C. Ross), high/medium v, cl, pf, str qt, 1935; Wink of Eternity (H. Crane), chorus, orch, 1937; In Cabin'd Ships at Sea (W. Whitman), chorus, orch, 1971; The Friar's Sermon (Kerr), Bar, pf, 1973 [arr. from The Tower of Kel]; 2 other song cycles, 5 songs, 1919–52

Chbr and solo inst: Poem, pf, 1929; Sonata no.1, pf, 1929; Str qt no.1, 1935; Trio, cl, vc, pf, 1936; Str Qt no.2, 1937; Study, vc, 1937; Pf Trio, 1938; Suite, fl, pf, 1940–41; Ov., Arioso and Finale, vc, pf, 1941–51, arr. vc, orch, 1966–7; 4 Preludes, pf, 1943; Sonata no.2, pf, 1943; Sonata, vn solo, 1954; Frontier Day, pf, 1956; Sonata, vn, pf, 1956; Variations on a Theme from the Tower of Kel, gui, 1971; other pf works

MSS in US-NYamc

Principal publishers: Berben, Boosey & Hawkes, Marks, Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Chase: America's Music (New York, 1955, 3/1987)

A. Ringer: 'Harrison Kerr: Composer and Educator', American Composers Alliance Bulletin, viii/2 (1959), 10–16

R. Mead: Henry Cowell's New Music 1925–1936 (diss., CUNY, 1981)

R.B. Kohlenberg: Harrison Kerr: Portrait of a Twentieth-Century American Composer (Metuchen, NJ, 1997)

STEVEN E. GILBERT

Kerrest, Joost. See KAREST, JOES.

Kerry, Gordon (b Melbourne, 21 Jan 1961). Australian composer. After studying with Barry Conyngham at the University of Melbourne he moved to Sydney in 1986. He devoted himself exclusively to composition during a series of residencies, which include seasons with the Sydney Philharmonia Choirs (1990) and the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts (1991), the inaugural Peggy Glanville-Hicks Fellowship (1994) and a two year Australia Council Fellowship (1999). His opera Medea (1992) has been performed in Australia, Germany and the USA. In 1997 he became a critic with the Sydney Morning Herald; in 1997–8 he was the artistic administrator of Music Viva Australia. His music, characteristically late-20th-century neo-classical in style, is refined in craftsmanship, sensuous in colour and displays an intelligently informed use of historical form. Further information is given in B. Broadstock, ed.: Sound Ideas: Australian Composers Born Since 1950 (Sydney, 1995), 147–8.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Medea (J. Macdonnell, after Seneca), 1992

Orch: Divertimento, 1986; Sinfonietta: Like Meteors from Elysium, 1992; Va Conc., 1992; Harvesting the Solstice Thunders, 1993; Out of Winter, str, 1993; Sinfonia, va, vc, str, 1993; Nocturne, 2 chbr orch, 1994; Splenderà: 3 Short Pieces, 1994–5; Festival Anthem, 1995; Conc., vc, perc, str, 1996; Variations, 1996; Bright Meniscus, 1997; Such Sweet Thunder, 1999

Chbr and solo inst: Winter Through Glass, pf, 1980; Siderus nuncius, org, 1985; Phaselus, b cl, vn, va, gui, mand, perc, 1986; Dream, vn, pf, 1987; Parar, va, pf, 1988; Perpetual Angelus, pf, 1988; After Eliot, pf qt, 1989; Sonata, fl, vc, pf, perc, 1990; Serious Music, 3 perc, 1991; 3 Short Pieces, wind qnt, 1991; Sonata da camera, fl, cl, pf qt, 1991; Tower Music, brass qnt, 1991; Torquing Points, str qt, 1992; No Orphean Lute, pf trio, 1994; L'Azur, ob, cl, bn, vn, va, vc, 1995; No Atmosphere, hp, 1995; Harmonie, wind qnt, 1996; Pf Sonata, 1997; 7 Improvisations, cl, perc, 1998

Vocal: Canticles for Evening Prayer, chorus, 1983; Moonrise (C. Masel), S, pf, 1984; Obsessions (Baudelaire), Mez, pf, 1985; Cant. (after Catullus), SATB, fl, va, vc, pf, 2 perc, 1989; Cant.: New Music (G. Harwood), high v, fl, vc, pf, perc, 1990; Cipangu (W. Hart-Smith), chorus, orch, 1990; Festival Cant., childrens' chorus, SATB, org, 1990; 2 Tropes, SSAA, 1990; Hymn of St John of the Cross, T, hp, 1995; 6 Songs, chorus, 1995; Cant. Davidica, 2 chorus, 1998; Breathtaking, S, ens, 1999

PETER McCALLUM

Kersters, Willem (b Antwerp, 9 Feb 1929). Belgian composer. He studied at the conservatories of Antwerp and Brussels (composition with Poot). From 1961–8 he was programming director of the Limburg regional station of Belgian Radio and Television. In addition he was appointed a harmony teacher at the Antwerp Conservatory in 1962. He became a lecturer at the Maastricht conservatory (1968) and from 1971 until his retirement in 1994 was a professor of composition at the Antwerp Conservatory. For some time he was also a lecturer at the Maastricht Conservatory. Twice he was a guest lecturer at the Internationale Kammermusiktage in Raumberg, Austria.

Kersters has received several awards and distinctions, including the second prize in the Queen Elisabeth Competition (1961), the Trieste Prize (1963) for his ballet Triomf van de geest, the Eugène Baie Prize from the province of Antwerp (1968) and the SABAM Prize for his entire output (1973). In 1978 he composed his Piano Concerto, which was used as a set piece for the Queen Elisabeth Competition.

Kersters is an eclectic composer who does not feel restricted to any system, and aims to express disciplined feeling. Before 1960 his style was expressive within a classical structure, with late Romantic and late Impressionist colour blended with Expressionist characteristics (Divertimento, 1958; Triomf van de geest, 1959). In the 1960s he developed a bitonal chord based on C♯, which he called the tritonus relationship (Two Organ Preludes, 1961; Psalmen, 1961). Later he studied 12-note technique and wrote works that were freely serial (Symphony nos. 1 and 2, 1962–3). In the second half of the 60s his writing became more intuitive, though he continued to use solid structures, with frequent chromaticism (Symphony no.3, 1967) and with percussion playing a more significant role (Anaglyphos, 1969; Capriccio, 1972). At a still later stage the structure is not imposed from without but arises from within the composition, as in such large-scale works as Symphony no.4 (1979), the opera Gansendonk (1980–83) and Het zonnelied (1987).

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Gansendonk (3, Kersters and B. De Nijs, after H. Conscience: Baes Ganzendonck), 1980–3, Antwerp, Opera voor Vlaanderen, 19 Sept 1984

Ballets: Parwati, 1956; Triomf van de geest, 1959; Heer Halewijn, 1973; Uilenspiegel de geus, 1976

Syms.: Sym no.1, 1962; Sym no.2, 1963; Sym. no.3, 1967; Sym. no.4 'Gezelle', 1979; Sym. no.5, 1987

Other orch: Sinfonietta, 1955; Sinfonia concertante, fl, cl, bn, str, 1957; Divertimento, str, 1958; Suite in the Form of a Fr. Ov., 1964; Capriccio, 1972; Laudes, 1973; Halewijn, 1974; Pf Conc., 1978

Vocal: Psalmen, A, male chorus, 5 brass insts, timp, org, 1961; A Gospel Song (black spirituals), 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, 1965; A Hymn of Praise (ps texts), spkr, 3 solo vv, chorus, orch, 1966; Het zonnelied, mixed choir, trp, 2 pf, timp, 1987; Kinderwereld, 1988, children's choir, girls' choir, orch, 1988

Chbr and solo inst: Wind Qnt, 1954; 2 Preludes, org, 1961; 2 str qts, 1962, 1964; Septet, 1966; Pf Qt, 1970; pf pieces, choral works, songs

Principal publishers: CeBeDeM, Maurer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CeBeDeM directory

M. Delaere, Y. Knockaert and H. Sabbe: Nieuwe muziek in Vlaanderen (Bruges, 1988)

DIANA VON VOLBORTH-DANYS

Kertész, István (b Budapest, 28 Aug 1929; d nr Tel-Aviv, 16 April 1973). German conductor of Hungarian birth. He began violin and piano lessons in childhood, later studying the violin and composition at the Ferenc Liszt Academy, Budapest, where his teachers included Kodály and Weiner. He took further conducting instruction from Somogyi, and absorbed the influence of Klemperer (then at the Hungarian State Opera) and Walter in particular. Kertész became resident conductor at Győr in 1953, and two years later moved to Budapest as conductor and répétiteur. He left Hungary with his family after the 1956 uprising and settled in Germany, later taking German nationality.

Kertész was general music director at Augsburg (1958–63), and at Cologne from 1964; his wide repertory there included Tristan und Isolde, Verdi's Stiffelio (the German première) and La clemenza di Tito. He made his British début in 1960 with the Royal Liverpool PO (and in London the same year with the LSO); his American début was in 1961 on a tour with the NDR SO. In 1966 he first appeared at Covent Garden (conducting Verdi's Un ballo in maschera) and, after a world tour with the LSO that year, succeeded Monteux as its principal conductor (1966–8); in addition, he was musical director of the Gürzenich Orchestra in Cologne from 1971 until his death (in a drowning accident) in 1973.

At the outset of his career, Kertész acquired an unusually large and varied repertory, and his performances were characterized by direct, vigorous, unexaggerated interpretations that may at times have lacked some extra quality of individuality to distinguish them. He showed a special concern for the music of Bartók, Henze, Stravinsky and Britten (introducing Britten's War Requiem to Vienna and his Billy Budd to Germany). His many recordings include a memorable complete cycle of Dvořák's symphonies, Bluebeard's Castle and the first western European recording of the full Háry János (all with the LSO), the Brahms and Schubert symphonies (with the Vienna PO) and the first complete recording of Mozart's La clemenza di Tito.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Blyth: 'István Kertész Talks', Gramophone, xlv (1967–8), 369

J.L. Holmes: Conductors: a Record Collector's Guide (London, 1988), 132–3

NOËL GOODWIN

Kerzelli [Kercel, Kerzel, Kerzell]. Family of musicians, possibly Czech. They were active in Moscow in the late 18th century. Information about them is meagre and their works are a notorious bibliographical fog. At least four of them made noteworthy contributions to the Russian musical stage.

(1) Ivan [Johann, Iosif] Kerzelli (fl 1773–80). Composer. His middle initial is given variously as B. or I. As the musical director at the theatre on the Znamenka (1773–80), he arranged the music for Derevenskoy vorozheya ('The Village Soothsayer', December 1777, Moscow), Vasily Maikov's influential 'intermediya' after Le devin du village by Rousseau, which spawned a host of imitations including the most popular of all Russian Singspiele, Mel'nik – koldun, obmanshchik i svat ('The Miller who was a Magician, a Cheat and a Matchmaker'). Its vocal score – 'Overture and Songs from the Intermezzo The Village Soothsayer' (Moscow, 1778) – was the first publication of its kind in Russia. Almost as popular was Rozana i Lyubim ('Rozana and Lyubim', performed at the theatre on the Znamenka, 1778; one song in IRMO), in which Kerzelli supplied music for a conflated adaptation by Nikolay Nikolev of two of Charles Favart's most successful comédies mêlées d'ariettes (Annette et Lubin and Ninette à la cour). Both plays to which Kerzelli contributed, now considered classics of early Russian drama, were of the type in which the score consists of folk and popular tunes (golosi) sung to new words. The extent to which Kerzelli's music was original, and the precise nature of his source tunes, are still matters of debate. What is not debated is the bad impression Kerzelli's treatment of Rozana and Lyubim made on connoisseurs both then and since. Nikolev himself declared, in the preface to the printed libretto, that the primitive music 'tormented' his play: 'where three or four should be singing together, two sing and one or two yawn; what should be sung is spoken and what should be spoken is left out'. Other comic operas in the pastoral tradition of Rousseau to which Kerzelli (or possibly some other member of his family) contributed music na golosï include Lyubovnik – koldun ('The Lover who was a Wizard'; 1 act, libretto by N. Nikolev, 1777) and Derevenskiy prazdnik, ili Uvenchannaya dobrodetel' ('The Village Festival, or Virtue Crowned'; 2 acts, libretto by Maikov, 1777). In various sources the music for all four works is attributed to M.F. Kerzelli, perhaps Ivan Kerzelli's nephew (see below). While this is thought to be a fallacy originating with Gerber, similarly conflicting attributions remain unresolved for Finiks ('The Phoenix'; 3 acts, libretto by Nikolev, first performed in Moscow, ?1779) and Arkas i Irisa ('Arcas and Iris'; 1 act, libretto by Maikov, first performed in Moscow, 1780).

(2) Frants Kerzelli (fl 1794). Composer and cellist, ?brother of (1) Ivan Kerzelli. His best-known work is the comic opera Tri svad'bï vdrug, ili Kak auknetsya, tak i otkliknetsya ('Three Weddings at Once, or The Echo Responds to the Call'; 2 acts, libretto by A. Zheltov), first performed in Moscow in 1794.

Two other members of the family, Mikhail Frantsevich Kerzelli (*b c*1740; d 1804) and Ivan Frantsevich Kerzelli (*b c*1760; d 14/26 May 1820), perhaps sons of (2) Frants Kerzelli, composed for the theatre. From 1801 to 1820 Ivan directed the orchestra at the Petrovsky Theatre; Mikhail was occupied with directing and instructing horn bands. Both were prolific composers of comic operas. No two authorities agree as to who wrote what. On the basis of the title-page of Vasily Levshin's collected librettos (Kaluga, n.d.), Mooser confidently asserted Ivan to be the author of the operas on Levshin's texts; yet Findeyzen, citing the same document, attributed them to Mikhail. Svad'ba gospodina Voldïryova ('Mr Voldïryov's Wedding'), a sequel to the perennial crowd-pleaser Sbiten 'shchik ('The Hot-Mead Vendor') by Knyazhnin and Bullant, was the most popular of these Singspiele. Six string quartets and six duos, opp.1–2, are attributed in RISM to Mikhail.

WORKS

attributed to M.F. or I.F. Kerzelli; first performed in Moscow unless otherwise stated

Gulyan'ye, ili Sadovnik Kuskovskoy [Merrymaking, or The Gardener of Kuskovoe] (1, V. Kolïchev), estate of Count Sheremet'yev, Kuskovo, 1780 or 1781

Plenira i Zelim [Plenira and Selim] (3, trans. B. Blank), 1789

Korol'na okhote [The King Goes Hunting] (3, V. Levshin, after Sedaine), 1793 or 1794

Svad'ba gospodina Voldïryova [Mr Voldïryov's Wedding] (1, Levshin), 1793 or 1794; extract from ov. in Findeyzen

Mnimïye vdovtsï [The Make-Believe Widowers] (3, Levshin, after the Ger.), 1794

Svoya nosha ne tyanet [One does not Mind a Burden of one's Choice] (2, Levshin), *c*1794

Molodïye poskoreye starïkh mogut obmanut' [Youth Will Sooner Cheat than Age] (1, Levshin), estate of Prince Shcherbatov, Litvinovo, 1795

6 str qts, op.1 (Vienna, 1780); 6 duos, 2 vn, op.2 (Vienna, 1780)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL; IRMO; MooserA

N.F. Findeyzen: Ocherki po istorii muzïki v Rossii s drevneyshikh vremyon do kontsa XVIII veka [Studies in the history of music in Russia from ancient times to the end of the 18th century], ii (Moscow and Leningrad, 1929)

T.N. Livanova: Russkaya muzïkal'naya kul'tura XVIII veka e eyo svyazyakh s literaturoy, teatrom i bïtom [Russian musical culture of the 18th century and its connections with literature, the theatre and everyday Life], ii (Moscow, 1953)
A.A. Gozenpud: Muzïkal'nïy teatr v Rossii ot istokov do Glinki: ocherk [The musical theatre in Russia from its origins up to Glinka: a study] (Leningrad, 1959)
G. Bernandt, ed.: Slovar' oper [Dictionary of opera] (Moscow, 1962)
S. Karlinsky: Russian Drama from its Beginnings to the Age of Pushkin (Berkeley and Los Angeles, 1985)
Yu.V. Keldïsh and others: Istoriya russkoy muzïki v desyati tomakh [The history of Russian music in ten volumes], iii–iv (Moscow, 1985–6)

RICHARD TARUSKIN

Kerzina, Mariya Semyonovna [née Pospelova] (b ? Moscow, 1864; d Moscow, 18 Aug 1926). Russian pianist and music organizer. Early in life she took private piano lessons from V.I. Safonov, then from the Moscow pianist P.A. Pabst. She also studied theory with the critic Semyon Kruglikov. In 1888 she married the prominent Moscow lawyer Arkady Mikhaylovich Kerzin (1857–1914), whose interest in Russian music she adopted as they acquainted themselves at the piano with the works of native composers. In 1896 the Kerzins created and organized the Kruzhok Lyubiteley Russkoy Muzïki v Moskve (Circle of Russian Music Lovers in Moscow), which played a large propagandist role (acknowledged in Kerzina's unpublished personal notebook) until 1912 on behalf of Russian chamber and symphonic music in Moscow, especially for St Petersburg composers. The recitals and concerts, which began in a private apartment and eventually moved to prominent concert sites, had the participation of such eminent performers and composers as Rimsky-Korsakov, Glazunov, Cui, Taneyev and Rachmaninoff. Kerzina gave her letters from some of these figures to the Lenin Library in Moscow (now RUS-Mrg) in 1919–20. The circle lavished special attention on the works of Cui (Kerzina's favourite composer, as a result of Kruglikov's influence), who after initial communication in 1898 came to rely increasingly on Kerzina's patronage, Moscow connections and friendship to the end of his life. Even in the ill-health of her last years Kerzina continued to give music lessons.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye.Yu. Zhukovskaya: Muzïkal'naya Moskva kontsa XIX i nachala XX stoletiya [Music in Moscow at the end of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th] (MS reminiscences, quoted in Nazarov)
C. Cui: 'Kruzhok lyubiteley russkoy muzïki' [The circle of Russian music lovers], Novosti i birzhevaya gazeta (4 May 1901)
M. Ivanov-Boretsky: Obituary, Muzïkal'noye obrazovaniye (1926), nos.5–6, p.144
I.L. Gusin, ed.: Ts.A. Kyui: Izbrannïye pis'ma [Selected letters] (Leningrad, 1955)
A.F. Nazarov: 'Kerzinskiy kruzhok' [The Kerzin circle], Tsezar' Antonovich Kyui (Moscow, 1989), 150–56
Yu.V. Keldïsh, ed.: Bol'shaya sovetskaya èntsiklopediya: muzïka [Great Soviet encyclopedia: music] (Moscow, 2/1990)

LYLE NEFF

Kes, Willem (b Dordrecht, 16 Feb 1856; d Munich, 22 Feb 1934). Dutch conductor, composer and violinist. After receiving musical training under A.J.F. Böhme in his home city, he went to Leipzig in 1871 as a violin pupil of F. David, then to Brussels (1875) to study with Henryk Wieniawski and finally to Berlin (1876) to complete his violin studies with Joachim and to study composition under Kiel. In 1877 he played in the Parkorkest, Amsterdam, as soloist and first concertmaster; he directed the Toonkunst choir (1879–89) and an orchestra in Dordrecht (1883–8), and in 1883 was conductor of the Parkorkest, Amsterdam. In the mean time he toured throughout the Netherlands as a soloist and played in Leipzig in 1881. When the Concertgebouw was opened in 1888, Kes was asked to create and conduct a permanent Concertgebouw orchestra; on 3 November he conducted its inaugural concert. Kes's rehearsals were unprecedented in the Netherlands for their thoroughness and attention to detail. He forbade audiences to converse or eat during concerts. His programmes included new works by R. Strauss, Dvořák, Tchaikovsky, Stanford, Chabrier, d'Indy and Chausson, and his efforts to raise and broaden the public taste became a tradition which was carried on by his successor, Willem Mengelberg. In 1890 he founded a specialist orchestra school within the Concertgebouw. He remained in the Amsterdam post until 1895 when he succeeded George Henschel as conductor of the Scottish Orchestra in Glasgow. He was appointed conductor of the Moscow Philharmonic Society in 1898, becoming director of its music drama school in 1901. He returned to Germany in 1905 and directed the orchestra and music school in Koblenz until his retirement from public life in 1926. Among his many compositions transcriptions for orchestra of piano works by Schumann and Brahms have striking elements.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.W. Greig: The Story of the Scottish Orchestra (Glasgow, 1945)
J.H. Giskes: 'De periode Willem Kes (1888–1895)', Historie en kroniek van het Concertgebouw en het Concertgebouworkest 1888–1988. I: Voorgeschiedenis 1888–1945, ed. H.J. van Royen and others (Zutphen, 1988), 27–68

JAN TEN BOKUM

Kessler, Dietrich M(artin) (b Zürich, 21 July 1929). English string instrument maker and viol player of Swiss origin. He was trained as a violin maker at the Schweizerische Geigenbauschule in Brienz under Adolf König, from 1946 to 1950, passing his examinations with distinction. In Switzerland he made violins, violas, cellos, double basses, viols, quintons and guitars. He also studied the cello as a performer. In 1950 he moved to Haslemere, England, where he worked for the firm of Arnold Dolmetsch, making and repairing viols and studying the bass viol with Nathalie Dolmetsch. In 1952 he joined the firm of Albert Arnold Ltd and worked under C.W. Jacklin in string instrument repairing, meanwhile continuing to make viols in his spare time. Kessler began his own workshop in Welling, Kent, in September 1955, and in 1959 moved to London. During this time his instruments, particularly his viols, became increasingly popular, and he was also active as a performer, touring and recording throughout Europe and the USA at various times with the Elizabethan Consort, the English Consort of Viols and the Jaye Consort of Viols. In October 1969 he took over the London firm of Edward Withers Ltd and continued to make and repair viols and violins. He sold the latter firm to Adam Whone in 1987, but continued to work from his workshop at home. Kessler has contributed valuable research into the methods of early English viol making (see EMc, x, 1982, p.340).

Kessler's viols are mostly built to the patterns of the English masters. His workmanship is very clean and the instruments are light in weight, with varnish of orange-brown or reddish hue, double purfling, closed or open or carved scrolls, and beautifully inlaid designs in the manner of Barak Norman and Richard Meares on the back or belly or both. The sound is clear, penetrating and rich. Since 1987 he has become interested in 17th and early 18th-century French viols and has devoted much study to several originals, especially the bass viols of Michel Collichon of Paris, models of which he now produces. Kessler is one of the best modern makers of viols; his instruments bear the label 'Dietrich M. Kessler, London 19 ...', though some earlier ones have 'Dietrich M. Kessler of Zurich, No ... London 19 ...' and others are not labelled in his own name.

MURRAY LEFKOWITZ

Kessler, Thomas (b Zürich, 25 Sept 1937). Swiss composer. After completing studies of German and Romance linguistics at the universities of Zürich and Paris, he studied composition with Hartig, Blacher and Pepping at the Musikhochschule in Berlin (1961–7). In 1965 he founded his own electronic studio in Berlin, and during the period 1968–70 he directed an improvisation group aligned with Cardew's Scratch Orchestra in London. He was then director of the Electronic-Beat studio in Berlin and musical director of the Centre Universitaire International de Formation et de Recherches Dramatiques in Nancy. In 1973 he began teaching theory and composition at the music academy in Basle. There he was later appointed director of the electronic music studio (1984), and founded a new course in audio design (1995). He has also given courses elsewhere and has held a research post at IRCAM.

Kessler's works include a series of solo studies, or 'control pieces', for performers who not only play an instrument but simultaneously handle electronic transformation by means of a synthesizer or latterly a computer. The original stimulus for these works was political, if less overtly so than in his compositions of 1968, which included the revolutionary music for ensemble and tape, with recordings of the student revolts in Paris, and the opera Nationale Feiertage, about Rosa Luxemburg. Smog for trombone and orchestra (1970) is a sort of live musique concrète, dealing with the sound of vehicle exhausts and other environmental noise, and thereby supporting the composer's stand against pollution and despoliation. He also experimented with new orchestral seating plans and included non-European instruments in the orchestra, in order to encourage dialogue across cultural borders and erode Eurocentrism. His search for new tonalities, like his integration of beat and electronic sounds, comes as a reaction to the wider world.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Countdown für Orpheus (ballet), tape, 1966; Nationale Feiertage (op, C. Henneberg), 1969

Orch: Smog, trbn, orch, 1970; Klangumkehr, large orch, 1975; Drumphony, perc, orch, live elecs, 1981; Aufbruch, orch, live elecs, 1990

Ens: Konstellationen I, fl, trbn, vc, pf, 1965; Trio, str trio, 1968; Unisono, 3 cl, 1978; Pujaparwata, gamelan, tape, 1980; Choral, 4 sax, 1991; Inselmusik, sax, mar, pf, 1995–6; Trio II, str trio, 1995–6

El-ac: Piano Control, pf, synth, 1974; Dialoge, 4 players, vocoder, 1977; Violin Control, vn, synth, 1978; Drum Control, perc, cpr, 1983; Flute Control, fl, computer, 1986; Voice Control, 3vv, live elecs, 1993

Tape: Schallarchiv, 1979; Message, 1993

Principal publisher: Bote und Bock

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Burde: 'Kompositionsportrait Thomas Kessler', Melos/NZM, iv (1978), 22–6

L. Koblyakov: 'Thomas Kesslers Control-Stücke', Dissonanz, no.24 (1990), 17–22

THOMAS GARTMANN

Kessler, Wendelin (b Kannawurf, nr Erfurt; fl 1572–80). German poet and composer. He attended the Gymnasium in Erfurt and Jena University, after which he became a tutor to the East Prussian nobility. A further two years of study in Königsberg (now Kaliningrad) led to the post of Kantor in Danzig (now Gdańsk). Henceforth his life was bound up with that of Polykarp Leyser, though it is not known when or how the two met. In 1573 Leyser was made pastor of Göllersdorf (Lower Austria), and he immediately appointed Kessler teacher at the school for nobility in nearby Haselbach. Leyser left Göllersdorf in 1576, and when he was married in Wittenberg in 1580 (to Elisabeth, daughter of Lucas Cranach the younger), Kessler wrote a wedding motet, of which only the tenor part survives (Wittenberg, 1580). Kessler was ordained by Leyser on this occasion, and succeeded him in his post as pastor of Göllersdorf. Kessler's principal surviving work is Selectae aliquot cantiones super Evangelia (Wittenberg, 1582, complete copy in D-Mbs), a collection of Gospel paraphrases in Latin hexameters for Advent to Easter; they are five-part motet-like arrangements which are very close to the style of Lassus in their expressive handling of the text.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.J. Moser: Die mehrstimmige Vertonung des Evangeliums, i (Leipzig, 1931/R)

H.J. Moser: Die Musik im frühevangelischen Österreich (Kassel, 1954)

WALTER BLANKENBURG/CLYTUS GOTTWALD

Kestenberg, Leo (b Rosenberg, Hungary [now Ružomberok, Slovakia], 27 Nov 1882; d Tel-Aviv, 14 Jan 1962). Israeli educationist and pianist of Hungarian birth, active mainly in Germany. After studying the piano with Kullak and Busoni and composition with Felix Draeseke in Berlin, he made frequent appearances as a concert pianist and began teaching at the Stern and Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatories in Berlin. From his student days his political and cultural activities had developed his ideas about the role of music in education and had also equipped him with the organizational experience to put them into practice. In 1918 he became musical adviser to the Prussian Ministry of Science, Culture and Education, becoming in 1922 director of the newly established music department of the Central Institute for Education and Teaching. The institute organized in May 1921 a school music week, the first of eight annual events held in different German towns, where Kestenberg's music reforms were explained and discussed. In the same year Kestenberg's Musikerziehung und Musikpflege was published; the thoughts expressed in this book became gradually translated into a number of government edicts which affected every aspect of music education in Prussia from kindergarten to university level and extended even to the supervision of the qualifications of private music teachers. Up to December 1932 Kestenberg was active in the Education Ministry but with the advent of Nazism he fled to Prague in 1934. There he founded and directed the International Society for Music Education, which held three congresses in the years 1936 to 1938; in 1953 he was elected the society's honorary president. In 1938 he moved to Tel-Aviv, where he became general manager of the Palestine (now Israel Philharmonic) Orchestra. On his retirement in 1945 he concentrated his energies on teaching and founded Israel's first training college for music teachers.

WRITINGS

Musikerziehung und Musikpflege (Leipzig, 1921/R, repr. 1927 and 1990)
Privatunterricht in der Musik (Berlin, 1925; 5/1932 as Der Privatunterricht in der Musik) ed., with W. Günther: Prüfung, Ausbildung und Anstellung der Musiklehrer an den höreren Lehranstalten in Preussen (Berlin, 1925; 3/1928 as Der Musiklehrer: Prüfung, Ausbildung und Anstelung) ed.: Musik im Volk, Schule und Kirche (Reichsschulmusikwoche V): Darmstadt 1926
Schulmusikunterricht in Preussen (Berlin, 1927)
ed.: Musikpädagogische Gegenswartsfragen (Leipzig, 1928)
Musikpflege im Kindergarten (Leipzig, 1929)
Schulmusik und Chorgesang (Leipzig, 1930)
Jb der deutschen Musikorganisation 1931 (Berlin, 1931)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Braun: Die Schulmusikerziehung in Preussen von den Falkschen Bestimmungen bis zur Kestenberg-Reform (Kassel, 1957)
L. Kestenberg: Bewegte Zeiten: musisch-musikantische Lebenserinnerungen (Wolfenbüttel, 1961) [autobiography]
H. Mersmann: 'Leo Kestenberg: 1882–1962', Mf, xv (1962), 209–12
U. Günther: Die Schulmusikerziehung von der Kestenberg-Reform bis zum Ende des Dritten Reiches (Neuwied, 1967)
Dokumente zur Geschichte der Musikschulen (1902–1976) (Regensburg, 1977)
G. Batel: Musikerziehung und Musikpflege: Leo Kestenberg, Pianist, Klavierpädagoge, Kulturorganisator, Reformer des Musikerziehungswesens (Wolfenbüttel, 1989)

□

Ketèlbey, Albert W(illiam) (b Birmingham, 9 Aug 1875; d Cowes, 26 Nov 1959). English composer and conductor. He showed musical promise from an early age and went to Trinity College, London, when he was 13. He became a professional pianist, at 16 was organist of St John, Wimbledon, and was also apparently proficient on the cello, clarinet, oboe and french horn. In his early twenties he toured as a musical director of a light opera company, and at 22 became the musical director at the Vaudeville Theatre; composition and, later, recording for Columbia remained his main professional interests. His student compositions at Trinity College and for some time afterwards (a piano and wind quintet, a string quartet and the Concertstück for piano and orchestra) were probably in a classical vein. His first major light music success was The Phantom Melody, for cello and piano, which won a prize in 1912 offered by the cellist August van Biene for a piece to complement his own popular Broken Melody. Three years later Ketèlby published In a Monastery Garden, originally for piano, and which was followed by other topographical mood pictures and genre pieces which were ideal for the accompaniment of silent films. He also wrote specifically for silent film with such titles as Dramatic Agitato and Mysterious, and his greatest success came in the heyday of the form (1915–29). He continued to publish more serious works often under the name of Anton Vodorinski, usually for solo piano and often with a Russian flavour. Other pseudonyms he adopted were Raoul Clifford, A. William Aston, Geoffrey Kaye, André de Basque and Dennis Charlton. He conducted his own music widely, but latterly hardly left the Isle of Wight.

His gifts for melody and sensitive, colourful scoring ensured continuing popularity with light orchestras and bands until after 1945. The most popular of his hundreds of pieces emphasize emotionalism and sometimes exaggerated effects at the expense of structure and harmonic subtlety.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: contribs. to A Good Time, or Skipped by the Light of the Moon (comic op), 1896; The Wonder Worker (comic op, 2, E. Cadman), Fulham, Grand, 8 Oct 1900
Light orch: The Phantom Melody, 1912 [orig. for vc and pf]; In a Monastery Garden, characteristic int, 1915 [orig. for pf]; In the Moonlight, poetic int, 1919; Souvenir de tendresse, légende, 1919; In a Persian Market, int scene, 1920; Wedgwood Blue, int, 1920; Bells across the Meadows, int, 1921; Gallantry, int-romance, 1921; In a Chinese Temple Garden, oriental phantasy, 1923; Sanctuary of the Heart, méditation religieuse, 1924; Cockney Suite, 1924; Chal Romano, ov., 1924; Algerian Scene, 1925; Jungle Drums, patrol, 1926; By the Blue Hawaiian Waters, tone picture, 1927; 3 Fanciful Etchings, 1928; The Clock and the Dresden Figure, pf, orch, 1930; In the Mystic Land of Egypt, 1931; Caprice pianistique, pf, orch, 1947; Italian Twilight, 1951; many other suites and tone pictures
Fanfares and marches, incl. Knights of the King; With Honour Crowned; Royal Cavalcade
Many arrs., incl. E. Elgar: The Starlight Express; potpourris; music for silent films
Brass band: The Adventurers, ov, 1945; many arrs.
Pf solos (some pubd under pseuds): Sonata, 1888; Rêverie, 1894; A Romantic Melody, 1898; Pensées joyeuses, 1888; 3 Original Pieces (1910): 1 Prelude, c♯, 2 Canzonette, 3 Au village; A Dream Picture, 1915; In a Monastery Garden, 1915; Pastorale, op.27, 1916; 6 Vignettes, 1916; Rêverie dramatique, op.30, 1920; In the Woodlands, 1921; La joie de vivre!, caprice, op.33, 1922; A Song of Summer, 1922; A River Rêverie, 1922; Légende triste, op.35, 1923; Les pèlerins, op.26 no.4, 1925; On the Volga; many other ints; music for silent films; educational music, incl. studies and arpeggio melodies
Other inst solos, incl. Mélodie plaintive, vn, pf, 1906; The Phantom Melody, vc, pf, 1912; several pieces for mand(s)
Works for org, incl. Pastorale, *c*1911; Rêverie dramatique, *c*1911; many arrs.
Vocal: Believe me true (F. Hoare) (1899); Kildoran (C. Bingham) (1902); The Heart's Awakening (Hoare) (1907); Will you forgive (A. Soutar) (1924); other ballads, Blow, Blow, thou Winter Wind (W. Shakespeare), partsongs and anthems, Men of England, patriotic ode (1926)
Principal publisher: Bosworth

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.L. Scowcroft: British Light Music: a Personal Gallery of Twentieth-Century Composers (London, 1997), 59–62
J. Sant: Albert Ketèlby 1875–1959 from the Sanctuary of his Heart (Sutton Coldfield, 2000)

PHILIP L. SCOWCROFT

Kette von Trillern (Ger.: 'chain of trills'). See ORNAMENTS, §8.

Ketting, Otto (b Amsterdam, 3 Sept 1935). Dutch composer. He studied the trumpet at the Royal Conservatory in The Hague and then received lessons in composition from his father, Piet Ketting. In 1954 he became a trumpeter with the Hague Resedentie-Orkest, but in 1961 he abandoned his post to study composition with Hartmann in Munich. Afterwards he devoted himself largely to composing, becoming a lecturer in composition at both the Rotterdam Conservatory and the Royal Conservatory. Ketting has also been active as a conductor, chiefly of 20th-century music. His works have received numerous awards, including Due canzoni (Gaudeamus Prize, 1958), Time Machine (Kees van Baaren Prize, 1973), the Symphonie voor saxofoons en orkest (Matthijs Vermeulen Prize, 1979) and the Symphony no.3 (Barlow Prize, 1992). In addition, the Amsterdam Muziektheater was officially opened in 1986 with the première of Ketting's opera Ithaka.

In the early, sober and introverted Due canzoni (1957) and the exuberant First Symphony (1957–9), the influences of Webern and Berg (both at the time still rarely heard in the Netherlands) are skilfully moulded to Ketting's own ends. Notable is the tension between horizontal and vertical aspects, between serialism and unambiguous tonal points of emphasis. This co-existence of atonality and tonality has remained a characteristic, particularly in Time Machine (1972), the Symphonie voor saxofoons en orkest (1977–8), which contains references to Time Machine, and the Third Symphony (1990).

Ketting's style is a unique blend of Bergian expressiveness and Stravinskian objectivity, which the Symphonie voor saxofoons en orkest, in particular, shows need not be mutually exclusive. Indeed Ketting has in common with both these models a modernist aesthetic, which never allows for a simple tonality or neo-Romanticism. The tightly motoric yet lyrical Symphonie refers to other specific sources – jazz and minimalism, while the Third Symphony points to Mahler, Stravinsky again and Reich. However these remain at the level of allusions, never quotations, and are firmly embedded in the syntax. The Symphonie voor saxofoons en orckest also shows, like the earlier For moonlight nights for flute and 26 players (1973), a 19th-century virtuoso concertante style replaced by a considered exploration of the functioning of an individual or small group in relation to a larger body. Aside from this clearly politically inspired background, the result is one both able to surprise and to move. Ketting displays a more subdued, delicate side in the song cycle The Light of the Sun for soprano and orchestra (1978, rev. 1983) and above all in Summer Moon for soprano and small orchestra (1992).

The distinctiveness of Ketting's musical language comes across no less markedly in his many film scores. While reinforcing the screen image, the music possesses such suggestiveness that it can happily stand alone. Conversely the composer's 'abstract' concert music powerfully provokes figurative associations, not least in the four-part work comprising De overtocht ('The Passage') (1992), Het oponthoud ('The Delay') (1993), De aankomst ('The Arrival') (1993) and Kom, over de zeeën ('Come, Over the Seas') (1994), the last of which was commissioned by the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra. Each piece represents one part of a four-stage journey, full of subtle references to each other within changing contexts. A parallel to such a process may be made with film editing in which a visual vocabulary is developed through shuffling and recombination.

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Stage: Het laatste bericht [The Last Report] (ballet), 1962; Interieur (ballet), 1963; Collage no.7 (ballet), 1967; Dummies (chbr op, B. Schierbeek), 1974, Scheveningen, Kurzaal, 14 Nov 1974; O gij rhinoceros [O, Thou Rhinoceros] (op, 1, Ketting), 1977; Ithaka (op, Ketting and K. Hin), 1986, Amsterdam, Muziektheater, 23 Sept 1986

Film scores: Alleman (dir. B. Haanstra), 1963; Schilderijen van Co Westerik (dir. B. Kommer), 1965; Dokter Pulder zaait papavers (dir. B. Haanstra), 1975; De provincie (dir. J. Bosdriesz), 1991

ORCHESTRAL

Sinfonietta, 1954; Fanfares, wind, perc, 1956; 2 Canzoni, 1957; Für dienen Thron tret'ich hiermit, 1957 [arr. of J.S. Bach]; Passacaglia, 1957; Sym. no.1, 1957–9; Concertino, 2 tpt, orch, 1958; Concertino, orch, jazz qnt, 1960; Divertimento festivo, brass band, 1960; Fanfare et cortège, 1960; Intrada festiva, wind, perc, 1960; Variazioni, 1960; Pas de deux, 1961; Alleman, suite, 1963 [from film score]; Collage no.9, 1963; Collage no.6, orch, free-jazz group, 1966; In memoriam Igor Stavinsky, 1971; Time Machine, wind, perc, 1972; For Moonlight Nights, fl, 26 players, 1973; Adagio, 12 players, 1977; Sym., saxophones, orch, 1977–8; Monumentum, wind, pf, perc, 1983; Capriccio, vn, small orch, 1987; Adagio, 1989; Preludium, 12 sax, 1989; Sym. no.3, 1990; De overtocht [The Passage], ens, 1992; Medusa, a sax, orch, 1992; De aankomst [The Arrival], 1993; Het oponthoud [The Delay], ens, 1993; Kom, over de zeeën [Come, Over the Seas], 1994; Cheops, hn, orch, 1995

VOCAL

Kerstliederen [Christmas Carols], 4-part mixed chorus, small orch, 1953; Song Without Words, S, pf, 1968; The Light of the Sun (song cycle, anc. Egyptian, trans. M. Neefjes), S, orch, 1978, rev. 1983; Arr. M. Ravel: Manteau de fleurs, 1990; Summer Moon (Jap. 12th- and 18th-century poems), S, small orch, 1992

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Conc., org, 1953; 3 Fanfares, brass sextet, 1954; Sonate 1955, brass qt, 1955; Kleine Suite, 3 tpt, 1957; Serenade, vc, pf, 1957; Thema en variaties, cl, bn, pf, 1958; Intrada, tpt, hn, 1958; Collage no.8, fl, pf, 1966; Collage no.8, b cl, pf, 1967; A Set of Pieces, fl, pf, 1967; A Set of Pieces, wind qnt, 1968; Mars, (4 cl, 4 sax)/8 sax, 1979; Quodlibet, b cl, 2 perc, pf, str qt, 1970; Autumn, hn, pf, 1980; Muzik zu einem Tonfilm, a sax, t sax, tpt, trbn, perc, pf, 2 vn, 1982; Summer, fl, b cl, pf, 1985; Pf Trio, 1988, rev. 1995; Winter, a fl, hp, vn, vc, 1988; Song Without Words no.2, fl, 1992

Pf: Prelude and Fugue, 1952; Fugue, 1953; Sonatine no.1, 1956; Komposition mit 12 Tönen, 1956; Collage no.5, 1976

Principal publisher: Donemus

WRITINGS

'Gaudeamus Music Week', Sonorum speculum, no.9 (1961), 19–22

'Thoughts about Ballet Music/Gedanken über Ballettmusik', Sonorum speculum, no.24 (1965), 1–5

'Film Music', Key Notes, x (1979), 20–27

De ongeruste parapluie [The uneasy umbrella] (The Hague, 1981)

ed. M. Brandt and T. Hartsuiker: Time Machine (Amsterdam, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. de Leeuw: 'New Trends in Modern Dutch Music 2', Sonorum speculum, nos.1–5 (1961), 174–81

T. Hartsuiker: 'Otto Ketting and his Time Machine', Sonorum speculum, no.57 (1974), 1–13

E. Schönberger: 'Otto Ketting: his Symphonies, his Film Music and Dutch Musical Life', Key Notes, x (1979), 10–14

L. Samama: 'Otto Ketting's Symphony for Saxophones and Orchestra: Elements of a Technique', ibid., 14–19

L. Samama: 'Aspects of a Symphony as a Reference Game: Otto Ketting's Third Symphony', Key Notes, xxvi/1 (1992), 8–12

E. Voermans: article in Otto Ketting (Amsterdam, 1994) [Donemus catalogue]

MAARTEN BRANDT

Ketting, Piet (b Haarlem, 29 Nov 1904; d Rotterdam, 25 May 1984). Dutch composer, pianist and conductor. He was a pupil of Anton Averkamp in Utrecht and of Pijper (1926–32). He introduced many new piano works to the Netherlands and, with the flautist Johannes Feltkamp and the oboist Jaap Stotijn, formed a trio which toured Europe, Asia and South America. From 1930 to 1956 he taught choral conducting, theory and composition at the Rotterdam Conservatory, and he directed the Amsterdam Musiklyceum (1946–9). Ketting also conducted the Rotterdam Chamber Orchestra (1949–60) and the Rotterdam Chamber Choir, and organized courses for conductors in that city. Under the influence of Pijper, his music became characterized by violent rhythms in a complex system of polymetric patterns. After 1935 his work grew more dependent on melody. It also became increasingly contrapuntal; Baroque forms, largely tonal, recur in his instrumental music. His studies of numerical symbolism in Bach's music were reflected in Fantasia I (1969) and the Tema con sei variazioni in modo cabalistico (1976). Numerous choral works and songs, which show a fondness for the great Dutch 17th-century writers, reflect his devotion to the voice. His choral music was featured in the Scheveningen international choral festivals (1967– 71), and the Vier gedichten (1935) and Preludium, Interludium en Postludium (1971) won major prizes. He was the author of a book, Claude-Achille Debussy (1941).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1929; Sinfonia, vc, orch, 1964; Concertino, bn, orch, 1968; Concertino, cl, orch, 1971; Tema con 6 variazioni in modo cabalistico, fl, orch, 1976; Concertone, va, 15 insts, 1980

Inst: Suite, pf, 1926; 4 sonatinas, pf, 1926, 1926, 1927, 1929; 3 str qts, 1927, 1927, 1929; Sonata, fl, b cl, pf, 1928; Sonata, vc, pf, 1928; Trio, fl, cl, bn, 1929; Sonata, fl, pf, 1930; Fuga, pf, 1934; Partita, 2 fl, 1936; Sonata, fl, ob, pf, 1936; Praeludium en fuga 1, 2, 3, pf, 1940, 1941, 1952; Fuga à 3, pf, 1953; Fantasia I, rec, fl, hpd, 1969; Preludium, interludium en postludium, 2 pf, 1969–71; Preludium en fughetta, a fl/cl, pf, 1970; Fantasia II, hpd, 1973

Vocal: 16 geestelijke liederen, 1v, pf, 1924–5; Het daghet in het Oosten [Day Breaks in the East], SSAATTBB, 1928 (TTBB, 1940); Kinderzangspel, 1v, pf, 1930; De Havenstad (V. van Vriesland), nar, SATB, orch, 1933; Ballade du jeune Marin (A. den Doolaard), SATB, 1934; 4 gedichten (M. Nijhoff), Mez, 15 insts, 1935; De verheerlijkte Kokila [Kokila Glorified] (R. Tagore, trans. B. Verhagen), solo vv, SATB, orch, 1937; 3 Sonnets (W. Shakespeare, trans. Verhagen), 1v, pf, 1938; 2 minnedeuntjes [Love Songs] (J. van den Vondel), 1v, pf, 1939; Deuntien (P.C. Hooft), SSAATTBB, pf, 1940; Deuntje (Hooft), SATB, 1940; Liedeken (Bredero), SATB, 1940; 2 noëls bourguignonnes, SATB, 1943; De getrouwe Haagdis [The Faithful Lizard] (Vondel), SSAA, 1965; 't Gewapend scheld [The Armoured Shield] (Vondel), TTBB, 1965; Ecce gratum et optatum, SATB, 1966; Vocalise, 1v, pf, perc, 1967; De [8] minnedeuntjes (Vondel), SATB, orch, 1967; Quando conveniunt, TTBB, 1968; Verba quellarum (Virgil, Ovid), SSAATTBB, 1970; Jazon en Medea (Vondel), SATB, fl, cl, pf, 1975

Mss in NL-DHgm

Principal publishers: Alsbach, Donemus, Harmonia (Hilversum)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Badings: De hedendaagsche Nederlandsche muziek (Amsterdam, 1936)
W. Paap: 'De componist Piet Ketting', Mens en melodie, xxiii (1968), 2–8
W. Paap: 'Composers' Voice', Key Notes, ii (1975), 48–55 [pp. 52–5 devoted to Ketting's works]
Obituary, Mens en Melodie, xxxix (1984), 360 only

MADDIE STARREVELD-BARTELS/HARRISON RYKER

Kettledrum. A directly struck drum (membranophone) with an egg-shaped or hemispherical body acting as a resonator. See DRUM, §I, 2(i) and TIMPANI.

Keuchenthal [Kochenthal, Küchenthäler], Johannes (b Ellrich, Harz, *c*1522; d St Andreasberg, Harz, 1583). German clergyman and music editor. The son of a priest who adopted the Protestant faith at the onset of the Reformation, he was preaching Luther's teaching in St Andreasberg by 1552. Keuchenthal's collection, Kirchen Gesenge latinisch und deudsch sampt allen Evangelien Episteln und Collecten auff die Sontage und Feste nach Ordnung der Zeit durchs gantze Jhar (Wittenberg, 1573), has been described as the richest and most comprehensive of its kind in the 16th century and is an important source for the liturgy and its music as practised during the early decades of the Reformation. In the preface, the Wittenberg theologian Christoph Pezelius explained that the publication came into being in response to the need of churches and schools for a single volume to replace the many smaller German hymnbooks already in existence and for the arrangement of both Latin and German texts with music printed alongside in chronological order of Sundays and feast days throughout the church year. The volume provides the Latin Mass with its plainsong melodies interspersed with German collects and readings and Lutheran hymns set to chorale melodies. Occasionally Luther's vernacular alternatives to parts of the Latin service are given. Among the liturgies for the principal feast days is a setting of the St Matthew Passion, which Kade demonstrated to be based on one by Walther, and which is known to have been sung in Nuremberg up to the year 1806. Few items in Keuchenthal's publication cannot be traced to earlier sources; he himself acknowledged the Wittenberg songbooks and Johann Spangenberg's collection (1545). In addition to these may be cited the Psalmodia of Lossius (1553), and the songbooks of Kluge (1543), Babst (1545) and the Bohemian Brethren (1566).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. von Tucher: Schatz des evangelischen Kirchengesangs im ersten Jahrhundert der Reformation (Leipzig, 1848), ii, 322–3
O. Kade: Die ältere Passionskomposition bis zum Jahre 1631 (Gütersloh, 1893/R), 172
K. Ameln: 'Johannes Keuchenthal', Jb für Liturgik und Hymnologie, iii (1957), 121–4

GLORIA M. TOPLIS

Keulen, Geert van (b Amsterdam, 1 Oct 1943). Dutch composer and bass clarinettist. His studies included clarinet with Jan Koene, conducting with Kersjes and instrumentation with Henkemans at the Amsterdam Muzieklyceum (1961–71), and private lessons in composition with Heppener (1964) and in bass clarinet with Dick Mesman (1965–6); he also studied conducting with Zinman. As a composer he is mainly self-taught. Since 1966 he has been bass clarinettist of the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra, and he also played with the Netherlands Wind Ensemble (1966–88). He has taught instrumentation (1978–95) and composition (1989–95) at the Amsterdam Conservatory. Active in chamber music as a performer, conductor and organizer, he has also made many instrumentations of works by other, mainly Russian, composers.

Van Keulen's interest as a composer lies foremost in chords and harmony, as may be seen from the titles of various of his pieces: Chords (1974), Koraal (1980), 'Chorale' (the third movement of his Violin Concerto, 1982), Armonia (1988) and Harmoniemusik (1993–4). He has a marked preference for wind ensembles, with an emphasis on the lower instruments. His music is characterized by slowly shifting, often massive pitch fields, combined with quick pulsation.

After the Violin Concerto he has worked towards a harmonic system in which he seeks to combine aspects of tonal harmony with features of serialism. His system is based on the fourfold combination of diatonic tetrachords placed a 5th apart, from which is derived a series of 40 eight-note chords (containing octave doublings). Examples of this technique occur in Toccata and Aria and Terze. The same series has been further diversified in later works, such as Tympan (1990). The result is an assembly of chords which offer ample opportunity for reminiscence of 300 years of harmonic music, including 20th-century idioms. He treats the series as a potentiality: it may be used in its entirety, but also partly. The composer consciously applies a pseudo-tonal rhetoric to the series, employing textural, orchestral, rhythmic and dynamic means.

Van Keulen considers a musical output not as a collection of individual works but as a continuity. His compositions are related to each other, for example by a common chord series, but also by direct quotation: Tympan presents large segments of Terze, and Trompeau, based on Machaut's Ma fin est mon commencement, contains the final chorale of Tympan. His examples in this context are Bruckner, Mahler and Boulez (the 'works in progress').

WORKS

Dramatic: Aan de Wannsee/Am Wannsee (chbr op, L. Ferron, Ger. trans. H. Schneeweiss), 1986; Der Walzer von dem Mann der wenig wusste (theatre concert, P. Mol, trans. D. Schmidt and G. Podt), Bar, spkr, bar sax, 1987

Vocal: Op een paar uren (H. Lodeizen), T, fl, b cl, vn, va, hp, 1964; Scena (after Petronius: Satyricon), chorus, orch, 1983, rev. 1989; Trieste (J. Joyce), S, fl, cl, hp, vib, mand, gui, vn, db, 1984, rev. 1987; Klokken, chorus, school orch, 1991

Orch: Confused Winds, 1972; Interchromie, 15 wind insts, 1973; Sonatas, 1977; Cors et cordes, basset-hn, chbr orch, 1978; Wals, panpipes, 2 sax, 2 perc, 2 pf, 2 elec pf, 2 b gui, 1979–80; Koraal, 1980; Wals, wind band (2 orchs), 1981, rev. 1983; Vn Conc., vn, orch without vns, 1982; Double sur cors et cordes, b cl, chbr orch, 1984; Sinfonia, 1984; Armonia, str, 1988; Toccata and Aria, 2 db, 18 winds, perc, 1988; Terze, 1989; Tympan, large orch, 1990; Fingers, t sax, orch, 1991; Träff, double wind qnt, contrabass cl, db, 1995; Gestel, fl, 3 sax, hn, 3 tpt, 3 trbn, pf, db, 1996

Chbr: Souvenir nostalgique, pastiche, fl, vn, va, vc, 1973, arr. str orch 1973–4; Chords, 2 ob, eng hn, 2 cl, b cl, 2 bn, 3 hn, 2 tpt, trbn, b trbn, 1974; Music for her, pf, 1975, rev. 1979; Onkruid, 5 vn, pf, 1979, arr. 11 insts 1981; Quartet, sax qt, 1987; 12 Studies, fl, 1990; Harmoniemusik, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, 1993–4; Skin, fl + pic, b cl, pf, 1995; Trompeau, Mez, rec, b cl, trbn, vn, db, el gui, perc, pf, 1995; Herz, vn, pf, 1996

Arrs.: M. Musorgsky: Pesni i plyaski smerti [Songs and Dances of Death], low v, fl + a fl, ob, eng hn, cl + b cl, bn, dbn, 2 hn, vc, db, 1977; J. Wagenaar: De schipbreuk, soloists, chorus, orch, 1989; Musorgsky: Kartinki s vïstavki [Pictures at an Exhibition], winds, 1992; Tangos by S. Wolpe, E. Schulhoff, H. Grosz, cl, b cl, a sax, tpt, trbn, hp, pf, vn, vc, 1993; Musorgsky: Bez solntsa [Sunless], B, fl + a fl, ob + eng hn, cl + b cl, bn + dbn, 2 hn, vc, db, 1994; V. Ullmann: 6 Songs (A. Steffens), op.17, S, chbr ens, 1994; Musorgsky: Detskaya [The Nursery], S, chbr ens, 1995; S. Prokofiev: Sarcasms, fl, 3 sax, hn, 3 tpt, 3 trbn, pf, db, 1995; D. Shostakovich: Rayok Antiformalist [The Anti-Formalist Peepshow] (Shostakovich; Dutch trans. R. Lichansky), 2B, chorus, ens, 1996; Shostakovich: Satïri [Satires], op.109, S, ens, 1996; Shostakovich: 4 Verses by Captain Lebyadkin (F.M. Dostoyevsky: The Devils), op.146, B, ens, 1996; Shostakovich: Preface to the Complete Edition of my Works and Thoughts about this Preface (Shostakovich), op.123, B, ens, 1996; Shostakovich: [12] Preludes, op.34, fl, 3 sax, hn, 3 tpt, pf, db, 1997

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Baas: 'A Compilation of Extremes: Geert van Keulen's Violin Concerto', Keynotes, no.20 (1984), 24–9

R. de Groot: 'Keuze en kans in van Keulens harmoniek: de constructie van het "gegevene"', TVNM, xliv/1 (1994), 51–69; xliv/2 (1994), 132–54

R. de Groot: 'Geert van Keulen's "Tympan": the Dismantling and Reconstruction of Western Harmony', Keynotes, xxix/1 (1995), 19–23

E. Wennekes: 'Conversations with van Keulen', Keynotes, xxxi/3 (1997), 8–12

ROKUS DE GROOT

Keulen, Isabelle van (b Mijdrecht, 16 Dec 1966). Dutch violinist and viola player. She started playing the violin at the age of six and gave her first concert at the age of ten. At the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam her teacher was Davina van Wely and she furthered her studies with Boris Gutnikov and Vladimir Spivakov at the Tours Summer Academy and Sándor Végh at the Salzburg Mozarteum. After being a prizewinner at the 1980 competition in The Hague and winning the 1983 Yehudi Menuhin Competition in Folkestone, she won the Eurovision Young Musician of the Year competition in 1984. She quickly became known as a stylish Classical violinist in the tradition of such compatriots as Theo Olof, Herman Krebbers and Jaap van Zweden; but she has also espoused much modern music and since 1990 has established a reputation as a viola virtuoso. Apart from the classics, van Keulen's repertory includes violin concertos by Spohr, Richard Strauss, Dutilleux and Stravinsky, Berlioz's Harold en Italie; and viola concertos by Bartók, Walton and Schnittke. In 1995 she founded the Isos Quartet, in which she plays first violin. She has also appeared as a guest with the Hagen, Orlando and Borodin quartets and at many festivals including Lockenhaus and her own Delft Chamber Music Festival. She teaches at the conservatories of Basle and The Hague. Her recordings include Mozart concertos, the original score of Mendelssohn's E minor Concerto, Lutosławski's Chain II, Dutilleux's L'arbre des songes, Schnittke's Viola Concerto, string quartets by Bruch, the violin and viola sonatas by Shostakovich and a version of Mozart's Sinfonia concertante in which she plays both the violin and the viola parts. Her violin is a 1702 Pietro Guarneri.

TULLY POTTER

Keuris, Tristan (b Amersfoort, 3 Oct 1946; d Amsterdam, 15 Dec 1996). Dutch composer. One of the leading figures in Dutch contemporary music, he studied at the Utrecht Conservatory with Ton de Leeuw (1962–9) and taught music theory and composition at the conservatories in Groningen (1974–7), Hilversum (1977–84), Utrecht (1984–96) and Amsterdam (1989–96). He also gave masterclasses at the Conservatorium of Khristiansand (1984), the Rice University in Houston (1987) and the RNCM in Manchester (1988).

Keuris came to prominence with the Sinfonia for orchestra (1974), when the work won the Matthijs Vermeulen Prize in 1976. The unexpectedly euphonous chords at the close signalled the composer's early adoption of a language and technique which rejected in the main the hallmarks of the postwar avant garde. These are the first traces of those hedonistic and Dionysian qualities that Keuris permitted himself from time to time and which were also to appear later in the virtually breathtaking virtuosity and brilliant orchestration of the Concerto for saxophone quartet and orchestra (1986). Nevertheless, a number of subsequent works, for example the Capriccio (1977–8), the Piano Concerto (1980) and Movements (1981), revealed Keuris's prediliction for structures built from the juxtaposition of highly differentiated materials, which still owes something to modernist example. The Capriccio, written for the Netherlands Wind Ensemble, marked Keuris's arrival at a mature fusion of the complex of elements that typically form his music: an alternation of dramatic activity and moments of stillness or harmonic inertia; polychrome instrumentation; straightforward, though never overly transparent, lyricism; tightly knit chordal voicings; and an overriding sense of organic narrative rooted in a constant development of motifs. Harmonically speaking the piece is perceptibly shaped by fluid, cadentially orientated points of tension and relaxation, such thinking about consonance and dissonance best considered in conjunction with Keuris's notions of 'static' and 'active' rather than with tonality or atonality. The finale of Movements furnishes a powerful example of how a 'frozen chord' (as Keuris describes it) is followed by an unleashing of harmonic direction, coupled with an instrumental brilliance reminiscent of the brass band. The work's Lento movement, with its tranquil bass clarinet solos and subtlety of harmonic-melodic progression, also points to Keuris's command of the compact and concise. Such refinement and economy, aligned with a more overt tonal focus, came increasingly to the fore during the 1980s in such works as the Violin Concerto no.1, the Piano Trio (1984), the Second String Quartet (1985) and the Concerto for saxophone quartet and orchestra (1986).

Towards the end of the 1980s and into the 90s, Keuris turned his attention towards vocal music (To Brooklyn Bridge, 1988; Three Michelangelo Songs; 1990; L'infinito, 1990; Laudi, 1993), which proved fruitful for the development of a richer harmonic language with broader melodic lines. His style, once a complex of Romantic gesture and Stravinsky-like objectivity, thus became more overt and total in its display of Romantic expression. This expressivity continued into his final orchestral works (Three Preludes, Symphony in D, Second Violin Concerto, Arcade), though still embedded in masterly, never superficial, orchestration.

WORKS

Orch: Qt, 1967; Choral Music I, 1969; Conc., a sax, orch, 1971; Sinfonia, 1974; Serenade, ob, orch, 1976; Pf Conc., 1980; Movements, 1981; 7 Pieces, b cl, orch, 1983; Vn Conc. no.1, 1984; Variations, str, 1985; Conc., sax qt, orch, 1986; Aria, fl, orch, 1987; Sym. Transformations, 1987; Catena, wind orch, 1988; 3 Sonnets, a sax, orch, 1989; Antologia, 1991; Conc., 2 vc, 1992; Org Conc., 1993; 3 Preludes, 1994; Arcade, 1995; Sym., D, 1995; Vn Conc. no.2, 1995

Vocal: To Brooklyn Bridge (H. Crane), chorus, orch, 1988; 3 Michelangelo Songs, Mez, orch, 1990; L'infinito (G. Leopardi), S, Mez, A, T, B, ens, 1990; Laudi (G. D'Anunzio), Mez, Bar, 2 choruses, orch, 1993

Chbr: Play, cl, pf, 1967; Sonata, pf, 1970; Sax Qt, 1970; Concertante muziek, cl, bn, hn, 2 vn, va, vc, db, pf, 1973; Muziek, vn, cl, pf, 1973; Fantasia, fl, 1976; Fingerprints, pf, 1976; Sonate, vn, pf, 1977; Concertino, b cl, str qt, 1977, rev. 1979; Capriccio, wind ens, 1977–8; 8 Miniatures, cl, va, db, mand, gui, mar, 1980; Str Qt no.1, 1982; Divertimento, vn, wind qnt, db, pf, 1982; Pf Trio, 1984; Str Qt no.2, 1985; Music for Saxs, sax qt, 1986; Aria, fl, pf, 1987; Cl Qnt, 1988; 5 Pieces, brass qnt, 1988; Intermezzi, wind, 1989; Canzone, cl, 1990; Passeggiate, 4 rec, 1990; Str Sextet, 1994; Chbr Conc., accdn, ens, 1995

Principal publishers: Donemus, Novello

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Schönberger: 'Tonality Reconsidered', Key Notes, no.5 (1977), 18–25

R. de Beer: 'Movements by Tristan Keuris', Key Notes, no.15 (1982), 1–13

J. Kolsteeg: 'The Sound of Misty White', Key Notes, xxix (1994), 10–13

M. Cotton: 'Tristan Keuris: Not Counting but Felling', Full Score, xi (1995), 11 only

E. Wennekes: 'Tristan Keuris (1946–1996): Artist and Craftsman', Key Notes, xxxi (1997), 13–16

LEO SAMAMA

Keurvels, Edward (Hubertus Joannes) (b Antwerp, 8 March 1853; d Ekeren, nr Antwerp, 29 Jan 1916). Belgian composer and conductor. He studied the violin, piano and organ at the Vlaamse Musiekschool in Antwerp, and completed his training in harmony, counterpoint, orchestration and composition with Peter Benoit, director of the school. In 1871 he was appointed répétiteur and accompanist there; in 1882 be became conductor of the Nederlandse Schouwburg, Antwerp, and composed music for its productions. A staunch supporter of Benoit, he worked hard to promote spoken lyric drama (see MELODRAMA) and was closely involved in setting up in 1890 the Nederlands Lyrisch Toneel, where many of Benoit's works were introduced and for which Keurvels composed the lyric drama Parisina. From this theatre developed De Vlaamse Opera (1893), which he conducted for many years. His work for the theatre was prolific and included excellent translations of Wagner's operas. In 1896 he founded and conducted the well-known 'Zoo concerts', held in the Antwerp Zoological Gardens. Besides working closely with Benoit at the Vlaamse Musiekschool, he was also active in founding the Koninklijk Vlaams Conservatorium (1898) and in 1902 set up the Peter Benoit-Fonds for promoting Benoit's works. Some of Keurvels's numerous songs, choruses and cantatas are paraphrases of Flemish music.

WORKS

MSS in B-Ac, Aac

Stage: Parisina (lyric drama, F. Gittens, after Byron), Antwerp, 1890; incid music for Hamlet, Nou

Vocal: Hooggetij (vaderlandse kindercantate, M. Sabbe), vv, orch; De dietsche tale (cant.); Hulde aan het onderwijs; In 't woud, male vv, 1884; Het kloksken van Kafarnaum, vv, 1912; Thabor, vv; Mass, vv, org; songs

Inst: Poppetjes-verdriet, pf; Spelemeien, pf; Kinderideaal, vc

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Celis: 'Vlaanderens rijk muziekpatrimonium: Edward Keurvels (1853–1916)', Vlaams muziektijdschrift, xxii (1970), 104–12

'Archivalia van de vlaamse muziek', Gamma, xxvii (1975), 7–11

MARIE-THÉRÈSE BUYSSENS

Keussler, Gerhard von (b Schwanenburg, Livonia [now Gulbene, Latvia], 5 July 1874; d Niederwartha bei Dresden, 21 Aug 1949). German conductor, composer and musicologist. He spent his youth in St Petersburg. In 1900 he enrolled at the Leipzig Conservatory where he studied the cello, score-reading and counterpoint; at the same time he studied musicology with Kretzschmar and Riemann at the university. From 1906 to 1918 he was active in Prague as a choral and orchestral conductor and also delivered lectures in music history and aesthetics. In 1918 he was appointed director of the Berlin Sing-Akademie and succeeded Siegmund von Hausegger as conductor of the Berlin PO. Meanwhile he continued to make appearances as a guest conductor. In 1926 he was elected to membership of the Berlin Academy of Arts and honoured by the founding of the Keussler-Gesellschaft in Prague. In the following year he and Kurt Thomas were the first recipients of the Beethoven Prize. Keussler went in 1932 to Australia where he conducted in Melbourne and Sydney and did much to promote German music. In 1936 he returned to Germany to direct the masterclass in composition at the Berlin Academy of Arts. He retired from public life in 1945 to devote himself to composition. Keussler was noteworthy not only as a musician but also as a philosopher, critic and poet. He set his own verse in songs and oratorios, among which Jesus aus Nazareth is the best known. The scope of his aesthetic and critical writings attests to his eminence as a scholar.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Wandlungen (sym. drama, 3), 1903; Gefängnisse (sym. drama, 3), perf. 1914; Die Geisselfahrt (sym. drama, 2), perf. 1923; Der Bruder (sym. drama), inc.

Orch: Morgenländische Phantasie, 1909; Juninacht am Meer, sym. poem; Sym. no.1, d, 1925; Sym. no.2, C, 1928; Präludium Solemne, 1934; Australia, sym. fantasy, 1935

Vocal: Auferstehung und jüngstes Gericht, spkr, orch, 1905; Jesus aus Nazareth (orat), 1917; Die Mutter (orat), 1919; An den Tod, spkr, orch, 1922; Zebaoth (orat), 1924; In jungen Tagen (folk orat), 1928; Das grosse Bündnis, A, orch, 1928; Die Burg, boys' chorus, orch, 1929; Asma, A, orch, 1931; Xenion, children's chorus, orch, 1932–3

Songs: 4 vols. (Keussler), 1902–17; 10 books [from Wandlungen]
Folksong arrs. for chorus, arrs. of Palestrina madrigals and canzonets, additions to Mozart Requiem to replace Süssmayr's work

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, O. Junne, Peters

WRITINGS

Die Grenzen der Aesthetik (Leipzig, 1902)
Das deutsche Volkslied und Herder (Prague, 1915)
Händels Kulturdienst und unsere Zeit (Hamburg, 1919)
'Zur Tonsymbolik in den Messen Beethovens', JbMP 1920, 31–46
'Mozarts Requiem ohne Süssmayr', Deutsches MusikJb, i (1923), 210–16
'Sinnetäuschungen und Musikästhetik', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 131–45
'Die Berufsehre des Musikers (Leipzig, 1927)
'Zur Aesthetik des Chorsatzes', Musik in Volk, Schule und kirche (Reichsschulmusikwoche V): Darmstadt, (1926)
'Zu Bachs Choraltechnik', BJb 1927, 106–22
'Zur Aesthetik der Vokalmusik', ZMw, xi (1928–9), 297–300
'Regeneration und Bayreuth', Baltische Monatsschrift, lxii (1931), 339–48
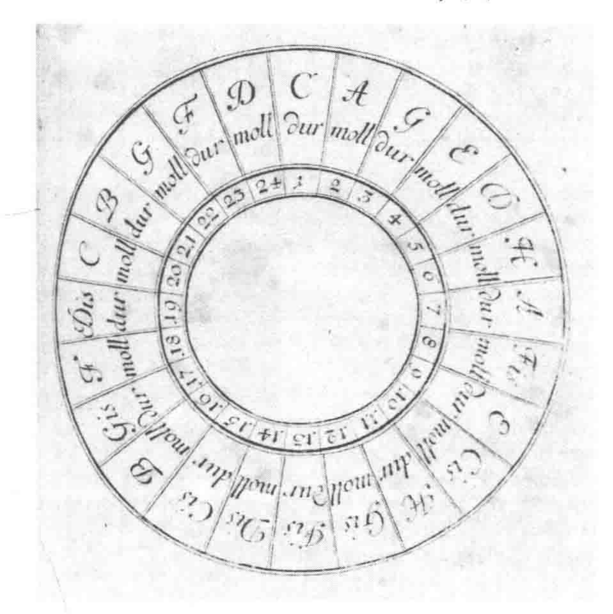
Paul Bucaenus (Riga, 1931)
ed. E. Janetschek: 'Musik und Nationalität', ZfM, Jg.114 (1953), 453–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY



MGG1 (E. Kroll)
H. Abert: 'Geistliche und weltliche in der Musik', Kongress für Äesthetik und allgemeine Kunstwissenschaft II: Berlin 1924, xix (1925), 397–405
'Keussler-Heft', Der Auftakt, ix (1929), 125–60
E. Siemens: 'Gerhard von Keussler', Musica, iv (1950), 210–13

CHARLOTTE ERWIN

Key (i) (Fr. ton; Ger. Tonart; It. tono). In tonal music (see TONALITY), the abstract arrangement of musical phenomena such as melodies, harmonies and cadences around a referential or tonic pitch class. While the French ton and the German Tonart stress the importance of the tonic, the English term has a broader meaning: as a metaphorical 'key', the tonic 'unlocks' or clarifies the arrangement of pitch relations that underlies the music. A tonic thus unifies and coordinates the musical phenomena within its reach: in the key of C major, for example, there is an essential 'C-ness' to the music.

The idea that a piece or a passage lies 'in' a given key may reflect a cultural inclination to conceptualize key as a musical container. A key in this sense involves certain melodic tendencies and harmonic relations that maintain the tonic as the centre of attention; the tonic controls melodic contours in both smaller and larger musical contexts, determines the immediate succession of harmonies, and coordinates the overall succession of medial cadences and modulations in a piece.

Also crucial to the concept of key is the idea that there are two basic modal genera, major and minor, each with different musical characteristics arising largely from the disposition of tones and semitones within thier respective scales. Since each tonic governs both a major and a minor mode, there are (given equal temperament and enharmonic equivalence) a total of 24 keys, two for each of the 12 semitones within the chromatic octave. All 24 possibilities were first arranged in a CIRCLE OF FIFTHS in Heinichen's Der General-Bass (Dresden, 1728; see illustration), though Heinichen's circle had been anticipated by NIKOLAY DILETSKY. Each pair of major and minor modes has the same diatonic collection and key signature, while the collections of adjacent, 5th-related pairs differ by a one sharp or flat. As a model for harmonic succesesion, however, the circle is imperfect, for there are a number of crucial harmonic relations in tonal music that do not conform to this arrangement. Moreover, other representations of the total aggregate were common. In the first volume of Das wohltemperierte Clavier (1722), Bach wrote a separate prelude and fugue for each major and minor mode, which he arranged in ascending semitones within the chromatic octave.

'Musicalischer Circul' (circle of fifths) from Heinichen's 'Der General-Bass in der Composition' (Dresden, 1728)

The modes are further interrelated as follows: the 'parallel' major and minor (e.g. C major and C minor) share the same tonic but have different diatonic collections, while the 'relative' major and minor (C major and A minor) share the same diatonic collection but have different tonics. Within a given diatonic collection, all pitch classes (and the harmonies rooted in them) are subdominant to the tonic, some more so than others. Moreover, a key is not limited to the pitch classes within its particular diatonic collection. In certain circumstances (melodic chromaticism, mixture, tonicization, modulation), the music can use pitch classes from outside its tonic major or minor scale without weakening its sense of orientation towards the tonic.

Keys are often said to possess characteristics associated with various extra-musical emotional states. While there has never been a consensus on these associations, the material basis for these attributions was at one time quite real: because of inequalities in actual temperament, each mode acquired a unique intonation and thus its own distinctive 'tone', and the sense that each mode had its own musical characteristics was strong enough to persist even in circumstances in which equal temperament was abstractly assumed. Though highly specific with respect to different repertories and listeners, these expressive qualities fall into two basic categories, which conform to the basic difference – often asserted as an opposition – between major and minor: major is heard to be brighter and more cheerful than minor, which in comparison is darker and sadder.

BRIAN HYER

Key (ii). In such instruments as the organ, accordion, piano or harpsichord a key is a balanced lever which when depressed by the finger either operates a valve to admit air to a pipe or reed, or mechanically energizes (strikes or plucks) a tuned string.

In mouth-blown instruments it is a mechanical device which governs a tone-hole that is out of reach of, or too large for, the unaided finger. It has three elements, a padded plate or cup to close the hole, a pivoted lever, or shank, and a touchpiece for the finger. This touchpiece may be a ring surrounding a directly fingered hole. Keys when at rest may be either open or closed, and two or more simple levers may be combined to form one key. On brass instruments there may also be a water key to release trapped moisture.

See KEYWORK.

PHILIP BATE

Key, Joseph (bur. Nuneaton, 20 Sept 1784). English psalmodist. He was an excise officer by profession and one of the leading composers of Gallery music. His four volumes of psalmody, the last two published posthumously, are among the best examples of the provincial Anglican repertory; the pieces range from simple tuneful carols to elaborate fuging-tunes and anthems. They were composed specifically for the growing number of ambitious parochial choirs and often include short instrumental symphonies and vocal solos, requiring experienced performers. His writing shows considerable technical skill, with a few Handelian echoes; despite occasional unconventional harmonies, it has an assured rhythmic vitality and melodic line. Some of his anthems remained popular and were republished, in refined versions, in England, Ireland and America well into the 19th century. The carol As shepherds watched their fleecy care became part of the Gallery carolling tradition, appearing in many later manuscripts.

WORKS

8 Anthems on Various Occasions, viz. for Easter Day, Ascension Day, Christmas-Day; Thanksgivings, Funerals &c., also Te Deum (Nuneaton, 1774; rev. 2/1776 with added Jubilate)

11 Anthems on General and Particular Occasions, Interspersed with Symphonies and Thorough Basses … Being Particularly Design'd for the Use of Parochial Choirs, vv, obs, bn (Nuneaton, 1779)

5 Anthems, 4 Collects, 20 Psalm Tunes, 3 Carols, a Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis (Nuneaton, 1785)

5 Anthems and 4 Hymns, on General and Particular Occasions; 10 Psalm Tunes, 7 Carols &c. (?Nuneaton, *c*1790)

18 marches, ?org, lost, mentioned in Baptie and Brown-StrattonBMB

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Brown-StrattonBMB

D. Baptie: A Handbook of Musical Biography (London, 1883)

SALLY DRAGE

Key, Thomas (fl London, *c*1800–1853). English wind instrument maker. He apparently established his business in London about 1800, though its whereabouts are not known. He operated at 2 Pall Mall with John Cramer (*c*1785–1828) as Cramer & Key (1804–8) and, having dissolved the partnership, as Thomas Key (1808–13). He then seems to have worked at 20 Charing Cross for the rest of his life. After his death his son Frederick took over the firm, becoming associated in 1854 with George Rudall as Key, Rudall & Co. Soon afterwards Rudall's partner, the flute maker J.M. Rose of Edinburgh, had his name added to the firm's title (Key, Rudall & Rose) and in 1857 the name of Richard Carte, who had joined the firm in 1850, was also added (Key, Rudall, Rose, Carte & Co.); Key's name was dropped in 1858, though the reason for this is not known. Although Key's principal activity was instrument making and selling, about 1815 he published a set of six waltzes for military band, arranged for piano by James Salmon.

Extant instruments by Key are very numerous, including the four main woodwinds, horns, trumpets and serpents, as well as unusual examples such as the basso hibernicon. His most famous woodwind instruments are the clarinets, of which Luke (1969) located 33 specimens. Generally constructed of boxwood with ivory rings and fitted with six to 13 brass keys, they set a standard of excellence among English instruments in the first half of the 19th century. The virtuoso Henry Lazarus was one of many players to use Key clarinets. The extant bassoons, which produce a distinctive sweetness in the tenor register and show Key's awareness of the value of extra keys and trill mechanisms, date from late in his career.

Key's horns are notably ingenious: one in London (Horniman Museum, Carse Collection), with two Stölzel valves and ten crooks, plays the full range of pitches from B♭ basso to B♭ alto; another in Oxford (Bate Collection) also has two Stölzel valves as well as two master crooks (single and double coil) and seven cylindrical couplers to play at every pitch from G basso to C alto.

For illustration of instruments by Key, see HIBERNICON; HORN, fig.11*a*; SERPENT, fig.1*c* and d.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Humphries-SmithMP; Waterhouse-LangwillI

A. Carse: Catalogue of the Adam Carse Collection of Old Musical Wind Instruments (London, 1951)

F.G. Rendall: The Clarinet (London, 1954, 3/1971, with addl material by P. Bate)

A. Baines: Woodwind Instruments and their History (London, 1957, 3/1967/R)

R. Morley-Pegge: The French Horn (London, 1960, 2/1973)

G. Melville-Mason, ed.: The Galpin Society: An Exhibition of European Musical Instruments, Reid School of Music, Edinburgh University, 16 Aug–7 Sept 1968 (Edinburgh, 1968) [exhibition catalogue]

J.W. Luke: The Clarinets of Thomas Key of London (DMA diss., U. of Missouri, Kansas City, 1969)

A. Baines: The Bate Collection of Historical Wind Instruments (Oxford, 1976)

J. Montagu: The World of Romantic & Modern Musical Instruments (Newton Abbot and London, 1981)

NIALL O'LOUGHLIN

Keyboard (Fr. clavier; Ger. Klaviatur, Tastatur; It. tastiera, tastatura). A set of levers (keys) actuating the mechanism of a musical instrument such as the organ, harpsichord, clavichord, piano etc. The keyboard probably originated in the Greek hydraulis, but its role in antiquity and in non-European civilizations appears to have remained so limited that it may be considered as characteristic of Western music. Its influence on the development of the musical system can scarcely be overrated. The primacy of the C major scale in tonal music, for instance, is partly due to its being played on the white keys, and the 12-semitone chromatic scale, which is fundamental to Western music even in some of its recent developments, derives to some extent from limitations and requirements of the keyboard design. The arrangement of the keys in two rows, the sharps and flats being grouped by two and three in the upper row, already existed in the early 15th century.

1. History. 2. Layout. 3. Experimental keyboards.

1. HISTORY. The earliest European keyboards were simple contrivances, played with the hands rather than the fingers. Praetorius (2/1619) and others after him stated that some primitive organs were played with the fists, the wrists or even the knees, but there is little confirmation of this in medieval documents. The spacing between the organ keys remained that which separated the pipes, sometimes over 10 cm, until an abridgment mechanism was invented. Up to the 13th century the keyboards were usually diatonic except for the inclusion of B♭. They often showed a C as first key. This seems surprising, considering that the musical system was then based on Guido's gamut, the lowest note of which was G (Gamma ut). But the solmization system represented no more than a series of intervals, the theoretical compass of which had to be reduced, by transposition of some of the melodies, when played on an instrument of fixed sounds as an accompaniment to voices. The addition of the B♭ to the early diatonic keyboard was not intended merely for the playing of melodies including that note, but also permitted transpositions by which the Gamma ut, for instance, could be played on the apparent c key. These transpositions compressed the total compass of plainchant to less than two octaves, and, so long as keyboards were used only for the playing of plainchant melodies, no wider range was needed, nor any chromatic degree other than the B♭. The medieval practice of transposition must have caused some difficulties in using the same notation for both vocal and keyboard music, since a given note on the staff may have been played at different places on the keyboard; and in fact it seems that the medieval keyboard repertory usually remained unnotated. For theoretical discussions, a special alphabetical notation was often preferred to the Guidonian terminology; the notation, which has since been dubbed 'organ notation', consisted in attributing the letters A to G to the modern C major scale.

By the beginning of the 14th century, however, the development of polyphony had caused a widening of keyboard compass and the progressive addition of chromatic keys. Johannes de Muris (first half of the 14th century) mentioned keys for f♯ and g♯, and Jaçobus of Liège (*c*1330) wrote that on the organ 'the tone is almost everywhere divided into two semitones'. The late 14th-century organ of Norrlanda in the Statens Historiska Museum in Stockholm still possesses its manual keyboard covering one octave and a 6th, from c to a', fully chromatic, and a pedal keyboard of eight keys, probably from C to B with B♭. The chromatic keys are placed at a higher level and are differently coloured than the diatonic ones, with the exception of the b♭ and B♭, which are ranged among the diatonic ones, as shown in fig.1 (for an illustration of the complete instrument see ORGAN, fig.30). The Robertsbridge Codex (*c*1320), the earliest surviving keyboard music, testifies to the advanced level of keyboard playing sometimes reached in the 14th century; the rapid and flexible melodies, together with a few three-part chords, imply a highly developed finger technique. The range covered is two octaves and a 3rd, from c to e'' (fully chromatic above f). The addition of chromatic keys to the late medieval keyboards may not at first have been intended to permit transpositions other than those involving only one flat in the key signature; it seems that the added chromatic degrees may have been used primarily to gain a certain number of perfect or virtually perfect 3rds in polyphony, and that this function was underlined by their being placed at a different level. The chromatic degrees were in fact sometimes tuned as pure or nearly pure 3rds to some of the diatonic ones, thus foreshadowing

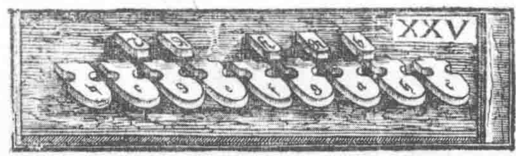
1. Manual keyboard of the positive organ from Norrlanda, c1380 (Statens Historiska Museum, Stockholm)

the mean-tone temperaments of the Renaissance (see TEMPERAMENTS and PYTHAGOREAN INTONATION).

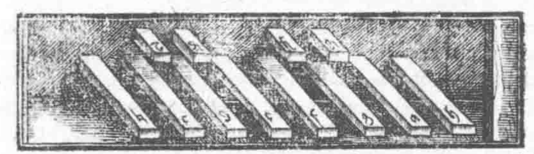
Before the second half of the 15th century the lowest part of keyboard compositions was often based on plainchant, or written in plainchant style. Owing to the limited number of transpositions then performed, there was no need for chromatic degrees other than the B♭ in the bass of the keyboard. This explains why pedal or bass manual keyboards remained diatonic up to a late date. As late as the 17th century, even manual keyboards sometimes lacked the first chromatic degrees when they were provided with a SHORT OCTAVE (sometimes some of the missing chromatic notes were supplied in a short octave keyboard by dividing the lowest raised keys; see BROKEN OCTAVE (I)). In the first half of the 15th century keyboards often began at F or B. The B keyboard was only a slight extension of the medieval c one. The significance of the F keyboard is more complex. The following hypothesis provides a possible explanation: the apparent c key had sometimes been used to play the Gamma ut; when solmization names were given to the keys, it may have seemed more convenient to call Gamma ut the c key (this was feasible at a time when the pattern of raised keys was not yet complete). One note, F fa ut, was then added below the Gamma ut. The F keyboard would thus have been, in effect, a variant of the B one, producing virtually the same pitches. Later in the 15th century, however, some B keyboards were enlarged down to F, so that two types of F keyboards may then have been in existence, about a 4th apart in pitch. This difference of pitch, the origin of which could be traced in the medieval practice of transposition with only one flat, survived for almost two centuries. As late as the 17th century keyboards a 4th apart were sometimes combined in a single instrument, a practice exemplified by the Ruckers transposing harpsichord (see HARPSICHORD, §3(i) and TRANSPOSING KEYBOARD).

The most common keyboard compass in the second half of the 15th century and the first half of the 16th century was from F to a'', often without F♯ or G♯. In Italy, upper limits of c''' or even f''' were common. The instruments reaching f''' were perhaps made at a lower pitch standard. The low limit was extended to C, often with short octave, in the 16th century. From then, the compass of string keyboard instruments increased more rapidly than that of the organ, as the latter had a pedal and octave stops that made a wide compass less necessary.

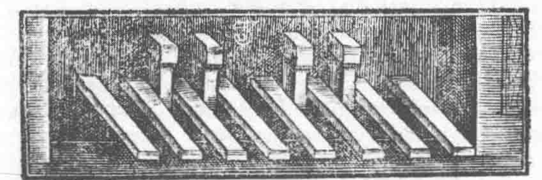
However, organs with a 'long compass' keyboard, extending below C, were common in countries which had a tradition of single-manual organs, e.g. England and Italy from the 15th to the 18th centuries. Harpsichords reached five octaves, usually from F' to f''', about 1700. Pianos attained six octaves, often from F' to f'''', by 1800 and seven octaves, from A'' to a'''', by 1900. Pianos now usually cover seven octaves and a 3rd from A'' to c''''' and some reach eight octaves. Modern organ keyboards rarely cover more than five octaves.



In the 18th and 19th centuries keyboard instruments gained a leading position in European musical practice. This led to attempts to provide all types of instrument with a keyboard mechanism. The most successful of these attempts were the harmonium and the celesta, and very many of the electric and electronic instruments produced in enormous numbers since the 1930s are controlled by means of a keyboard (see ELECTRONIC INSTRUMENTS); but keyboard harps, keyboard guitars or the numerous bowed keyboard instruments (see SOSTENENTE PIANO) have remained mere curiosities. The keys of the hurdy-gurdy often have been given an arrangement similar to that of the ordinary keyboard. The treble keyboard of the accordion is often fitted with piano-style keys; the bass usually has a button keyboard. Carillons are often equipped with a 'baton' keyboard (see CARILLON, §1, esp. fig.1). Attempts to give certain wind instruments a keyboard fingering through a rearrangement of the keys or valves generally met with little success.

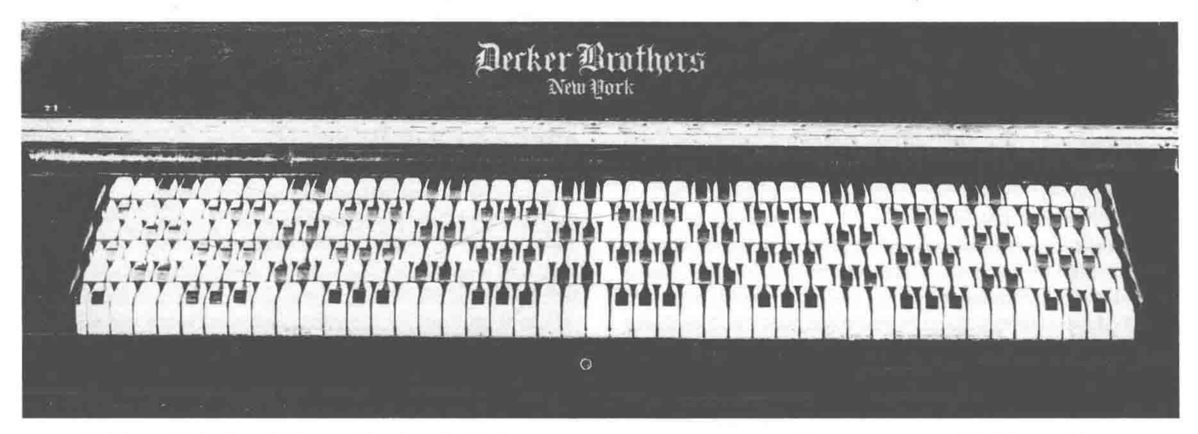


Organs with more than one keyboard have been built at least since the 15th century, allowing contrasts either of compass, pitch or timbre. Transposition on a single manual might also be facilitated by a shifting keyboard (see TRANSPOSING KEYBOARD). The advent of electric and electronic technology has made possible several adaptations of these devices. Electronic organs and synthesizers frequently have keyboards that can be split at a fixed point or in some cases at various points, into parts sounding different timbres. Transposition can be achieved by electric or electronic switching.



Whether a keyboard is sensitive to finger velocity or pressure depends on the associated mechanism. Organ and harpsichord mechanisms are almost insensitive; pneumatic and electric tractions in the organ often eliminate whatever limited sensitivity the mechanism might have had otherwise. Pianos are velocity-sensitive; clavichords are sensitive to both velocity and pressure, even after the key has been depressed (see BEBUNG). The earliest electric and electronic keyboards acted as mere on/off switches, but later instruments have been made pressure-sensitive or velocity-sensitive. In addition, while the sensitivity of mechanical keyboards mainly affected the dynamics of the sound produced, electronic technology allows any parameter to be controlled by pressure or velocity variations.

2. LAYOUT. Both for playing comfort and aesthetic appearance, it is desirable to have all natural key heads of equal width; each head should thus have one-seventh of the octave span. At the same time, it would seem desirable that the natural key tails (i.e. the parts of the natural keys between the sharps) and the sharps all be of equal width, but this is incompatible with the first requirement. Each octave may be considered as divided into two sections separated by straight lines between B and C and between E and F. The section from C to E, which includes three heads and five tails and sharps, should thus also ideally comprise three-sevenths and five-twelfths of an octave; and the section from F to B, which includes four heads and seven tails and sharps, should comprise four-sevenths and, at the same time, seven-twelfths of an octave. Modern keyboards offer a sophisticated solution: the keys look equal in width, but actually present minute discrepancies. In former times the discrepancies were more visible. Arnaut de Zwolle (*c*1440) avoided the problem by making a step in the line between the E and F keys (see HARPSICHORD, fig.2). Italian keyboards often showed a relatively wide key tail for D, while the instruments belonging to the Flemish tradition had wider tails for E and F and for B and C.



Wide keys, as in the early keyboards, suit simple and slow melodies, but make the playing of more than one part in each hand difficult. Narrow keys permit more velocity and an easier playing of chords, but require more precision on the part of the player. In order to account for possible discrepancies in the key widths, it is usual to measure keyboards in terms of the octave span (seven naturals) or the three-octave span (21 naturals). The main source of information on the measurement of medieval keyboards is Praetorius's Syntagma musicum (2/1619), which is perhaps less reliable than is often thought. Praetorius mentioned keys about 8 cm wide for the Halberstadt organ of 1361 (fig.2). 15th-century octave spans, however, seem closer to about 18 cm. In the 16th and 17th centuries an octave span of about 16.7 cm was common, which is surprisingly close to the modern span of 16.5 cm. Narrower keys were often made in the 18th century, with octave spans of about 16 cm or sometimes even 15.5 cm. The shape of the keys varied during the Middle Ages. Some were spade-shaped, as in the Halberstadt keyboards depicted by Praetorius. Others, particularly in portative organs, were T-shaped, somewhat like

2. Manual and pedal keyboards for the Halberstadt organ, 1361: woodcut from Praetorius's 'Syntagma musicum' (2/1619)

3. Detail of the Janko keyboard of an upright piano by Decker Brothers, New York, c1890 (Smithsonian Institution, Washington, DC)

the keys of the hurdy-gurdy. These forms were superseded by rectangular plates in the 15th century, when the keys were often so stubby as to be almost square, and the surface slightly convex (for illustration see PORTATIVE). The natural heads remained quite short, about 3.5 cm, up to the 18th century. Modern piano key heads are 5 cm, the tails and sharps 10 cm long. Short keys are particularly needed in instruments with more than one keyboard, where they facilitate shifting from one keyboard to the other. Longer keys seem preferable for playing music with many sharps or flats. The depth of touch, the height of the sharps above the naturals and, to some extent, all key measurements, depend heavily on the hand position and the finger technique used, which in turn are dependent on the type of mechanism actuated by the keys. Pianos, which call for more muscular force than harpsichords or organs, have a deeper touch. In some modern electronic instruments, the 'keyboard' is but a continuous touch- or pressure-sensitive strip on which the outline of keys are traced (i.e. with no moving parts).

The colour of the keys is a matter of taste and usage, the only requirement being that the pattern of lower and raised keys be underlined by contrasting colours. In the past the naturals were often white and the sharps black, as they are now, but in the 17th and 18th centuries these colours were often reversed. Italian makers generally used brown boxwood naturals with black sharps, and tortoiseshell, mother-of-pearl, or rare precious woods of various colours have also been employed.

3. EXPERIMENTAL KEYBOARDS. The 'sequential keyboard', invented by William A.B. Lunn under the name of Arthur Wallbridge in 1843, aimed at reducing the supremacy of the C major scale. Each octave included six lower keys, for C♯, D♯, F, G, A and B, and six raised ones, for C, D, E, F♯, G♯ and A♯. A similar arrangement was advocated by the Chroma-Verein des Gleichstufigen Tonsystems in 1875–7. Paul von Janko's keyboard (1887–8) is a later application of the same principle. As shown in fig.3 the two rows of keys were triplicated, providing a total of six rows, each slightly higher than the other and each including six keys in the octave. This arrangement permitted the same fingering in all tonalities. Jozef Wieniawski designed a piano with reversed keyboards, patented by E.J. Mangeot in 1876, which was actually made of two superposed pianos, one with the treble at the right as usual and the other with the treble at the left. The purpose was to permit the same fingering for the same passages in both hands. This arrangement is reminiscent of some medieval representations of keyboard instruments where, for reasons that remain unclear, the treble is shown at the left. In 1907 F. Clutsam patented a keyboard with keys arranged in the shape of a fan according to a principle already conceived by Staufer and Heidinger in 1824 and supposed to facilitate playing in the extreme bass and treble. Another important group of experiments concerns the ENHARMONIC KEYBOARD. The fact that the majority of the keyboard repertory has been written for the standard keyboard militates against the success of experiments with its design. For further discussion of unusual keyboards, see MICROTONAL instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 ('Klavier'; F.W. Riedel); PraetoriusSM, ii

G. Le Cerf and E.-R. Labande: Instruments de musique du XVe siècle: les traités d'Henri-Arnaut de Zwolle et de divers anonymes (Ms. B. N. latin 7295) (Paris, 1932/R)

F. Ernst: Der Flügel Johann Sebastian Bachs: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Instrumentenbaues im 18. Jahrhundert (Frankfurt, 1955)

K. Bormann: Die gotische Orgel zu Halberstadt (Berlin, 1968)

J.C. Schuman: '"Reversed" Portatives and Positives in Early Art', GSJ, xxiv (1971), 16–21

E.M. Ripin: 'The Norrlanda Organ and the Ghent Altarpiece', Festschrift to Ernst Emsheimer, ed. G. Hilleström (Stockholm, 1974), 193–6, 286–8

N. Meeùs: 'Some Hypotheses for the History of Organ-Pitch before Schlick', Organ Yearbook, vi (1975), 42–52

C. Page: 'The Earliest English Keyboard: New Evidence from Boethius' De musica', EMc, vii (1979), 308–14

J.H. van der Meer: 'Der G-orientierte Fünfoktavenumfang bei Saitenklavieren', Zur Entwicklung der Tasteninstrumente in der zweiten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts: Blankenburg, Harz, 1985, 7–13

N Meeùs: 'The Origin of the Chromatic Keyboard Layout', FoMHRI Quarterly, no.46 (1987), 43–6

For further bibliography see CLAVICHORD; HARPSICHORD; ORGAN; and PIANOFORTE.

NICOLAS MEEÙS

Keyboard music. Before the mid-17th century composers made little stylistic distinction between one keyboard instrument and another, and players used whichever happened to be available or was best suited to the occasion. Liturgically based works and those containing either long-sustained notes or pedal parts would be heard most often on the organ, and dances and settings of popular tunes on the harpsichord; nevertheless, much of the repertory could be shared. While some high Baroque composers exploited the individual characteristics of the organ, harpsichord or clavichord, it was not until the latter half of the 18th century that a distinctive style for the piano, which had been invented about 1700, began to appear: hence the main divisions of this article.

I. Keyboard music to *c*1750. II. Organ music from *c*1750. III. Piano music from *c*1750. IV. Harpsichord music in the 20th century.

I. Keyboard music to c1750

The term 'keyboard' is here understood to include not only the early string keyboard instruments (the clavichord, harpsichord, virginals etc.), but also the various types of organ (the positive, regal, church organ with and without pedals etc.). See also SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC TO 1660 and EDITIONS, HISTORICAL.

1. 14th and 15th centuries. 2. 16th century. 3. 17th century. 4. The period of J.S. Bach.

1. 14TH AND 15TH CENTURIES. Although the surviving sources of keyboard music go back no further than the second half of the 14th century, players and instruments are known to have existed long before. It seems likely that the lack of an earlier repertory is due at least in part to the loss of manuscripts, but more to the fact that players during the earliest period relied largely on vocal originals and improvisation.

The earliest known keyboard source is the Robertsbridge Codex of about 1360 (GB-Lbl Add.28550). This two-leaf fragment, bound with a manuscript from the former priory of Robertsbridge, Sussex, was written in England, though some of the music in it is based on French vocal originals. The pieces in estampie form with which it begins (one represented by its ending only, and two complete) have stylistic affinities with the monophonic Italian istampitte (in GB-Lbl Add.29987), while the next two pieces are ornamented transcriptions of motets also found in the Roman de Fauvel (F-Pn fr.146). A final, incomplete piece is based on an English vocal cantilena. In the estampies the writing is mostly in two parts, though at cadences the texture tends to become fuller, as often happens in keyboard music. In the motet arrangements the top part of the three-voice original is decorated, or 'coloured', mainly in conjunct motion and in relatively short note values. The remaining parts are generally left unchanged, though occasionally one is omitted or an extra part added. There is no indication of the instrument for which the pieces were intended, although there is evidence from contemporary Spain that similar music could be played on small portable organs (Marshall, E1992).

The bulk of the Reina Manuscript (F-Pn n.a.fr.6771) and the musical sections of the Faenza Manuscript (I-FZc 117) belong respectively to the late 14th century and the early 15th. Only a keyboard setting of Francesco Landini's ballata Questa fanciulla and an unidentified keyboard piece are included among Reina's otherwise exclusively vocal repertory; but the oldest part of Faenza consists entirely of keyboard pieces, though it is sometimes maintained that they were intended for two non-keyboard instruments. There are arrangements of secular vocal works by Italian and French composers of the 14th and early 15th centuries (such as Landini, Jacopo da Bologna, Machaut and Pierre des Molins) and settings of liturgical chants including two Kyrie-Gloria pairs based on the plainchant Mass IV, Cunctipotens genitor Deus (see ex.1, the conclusion of a Kyrie verse). The Kyrie-Gloria settings are the first of countless plainchant settings designed for alternatim performance during the liturgy, in which only the alternate verses are set for organ, while the remainder are sung in unison by the unaccompanied choir. Except for a few three-part cadential chords in Faenza, the pieces in both manuscripts are all in two parts, though many of the secular vocal originals are in three. There are also fragments of Italian origin in Padua (I-Pas S Giustina 553; see PMFC, xii, 1976, p.187) and (probably) Groningen (see Daalen and Harrison, D1984).

Ex.1 Faenza MS: Conclusion of a Kyrie verse ('... eleison')

The remaining 15th-century sources are all German, three of the most significant being Adam Ileborgh's tablature of 1448 (formerly in US-PHci; now privately owned), Conrad Paumann's Fundamentum organisandi of 1452 (D-Bsb Mus.ms.40613), and the Buxheim Organbook of about 1460–70 (D-Mbs Cim.352b). Ileborgh's tablature is notable for its five short preludes, which are the earliest known keyboard pieces (other than dances) that do not rely in any way on a vocal original. In one of them pedals are indicated; and a double pedal part seems to be required in two others, where a florid upper line crosses a pair of lower lines as they move slowly from a 5th to a 3rd and back again. Paumann's Fundamentum is one of several treatises that illustrate techniques used in extemporization and composition. It provides examples of a florid part added above various patterns of bass; of decorated clausulas; of two free parts; and of two parts above a static bass. In addition, the manuscript includes a number of preludes, several two- and three-part pieces based on both sacred and secular tenors, by Georg de Putenheim, Guillaume Legrant, Paumgartner and (presumably) Paumann himself, and an arrangement of Ciconia's Con lagrime. The Buxheim Organbook, which may also be associated with Paumann or his disciples, is the most comprehensive of all 15th-century keyboard sources. It contains over 250 pieces, of which more than half are based on either chansons or motets by German, French, Italian and English composers. They are of two main types. In the first, the whole of the original texture is used, one part being embellished while the rest are left more or less untouched, as in the Robertsbridge motets. In the second, the tenor alone is borrowed, to provide the foundation for what is otherwise a new composition. The rest of the manuscript includes liturgical plainchant pieces, preludes, and pieces based on basse-danse melodies. In the liturgical pieces the plainchant sometimes appears in long equal notes in one part, while the remaining parts have counterpoints in more varied rhythms. But more often the plainchant itself is ornamented or even paraphrased. The preludes are mostly regularly barred (unlike Ileborgh's), and often alternate chordal and florid passages in a way that foreshadows the later toccata. Most of the pieces are in three parts, although sometimes in two and occasionally in four (an innovation for keyboard music). The tenor and countertenor lines (the two lowest in the three-part pieces) have roughly the same compass; and as the countertenor was always added last, as in earlier vocal music, it constantly and often awkwardly has to cross and recross the tenor in order to find a vacant space for itself. Pedals are sometimes indicated by the sign P or Pe; apparently they could also be used elsewhere, for a note at the end of the volume explains that they should always play whichever tenor or countertenor note happens to be the lower.

2. 16TH CENTURY. Printed keyboard music began to appear during the 16th century. Liturgical plainchant pieces remained of paramount importance; but they were joined by settings of Lutheran chorales (hymn tunes), and by an increasing number of secular works such as dances, settings of popular tunes, variations, preludes and toccatas. Of great significance, too, were the sectional contrapuntal forms of keyboard music derived from 16th-century vocal forms, including the contrapuntal keyboard ricercare as well as the canzona, capriccio and fantasy.

The earliest known printed volume devoted at least in part to keyboard music is Arnolt Schlick's Tabulaturen etlicher Lobgesang und Lidlein uff die Orgel und Lauten (Mainz, 1512). Besides lute solos and songs with lute accompaniment, it contains 14 pieces for organ with pedals. They are in either three or four parts and are almost all based on plainchant, an exception being a setting of the vernacular sacred song Maria zart, which foreshadows a later type of chorale prelude by echoing the phrases of the melody in the accompaniment. In Schlick's unique ten-part manuscript setting of the chant Ascendo ad Patrem (I-TRa tedesca 105) no fewer than four of the parts are assigned to the pedals.

The remaining German sources contain dances and arrangements of both sacred and secular vocal music, some being anthologies while others appear to be the work of a single composer. Although most of them are described as being for either 'Orgel' or 'Orgel oder Instrument', they are generally equally well (or even better) suited to harpsichord or spinet. The two earliest are a pair of manuscripts (CH-Bu F.IX.22 and F.IX.58) written by Hans Kotter between 1513 and 1532 for the use of the Swiss humanist Bonifacius Amerbach. In addition to embellished arrangements of vocal works by Paul Hofhaimer, Heinrich Isaac, Josquin Des Prez and others, they include preludes and dances, some of which are by Kotter himself. Typical of the latter is a Spanioler in which the basse-danse melody Il re di Spagna is given to the tenor, each note being played twice in long-short rhythm, while treble and bass have more lively counterpoints. Later tablatures, some printed and others manuscript, are those of Elias Nikolaus Ammerbach (1571, 1583), Bernhard Schmid the elder (1577), Jacob Paix (1583), Christhoff Leoffelholz von Colberg (1585) and August Nörmiger (1598). A new trend is shown by the inclusion of 20 Lutheran chorales in Ammerbach's volume and over 70 in Nörmiger's. The plain melody is generally, though not invariably, given to the top part, while the remaining three parts provide simple harmony with an occasional suggestion of flowing counterpoint. A Fundamentum of about 1520 by Hans Buchner, similar to Paumann's but dealing with a later style of three-part counterpoint, contains the earliest known example of keyboard fingering.

The dances in the tablatures and other sources are often grouped in slow-quick pairs, such as a passamezzo and saltarello, or a pavan and galliard, in which the second dance (in triple time) may or may not be a variation of the first (in duple). Not infrequently they are based on one or other of the standard harmonic patterns known throughout western Europe, of which the passamezzo antico and the passamezzo moderno or quadran were the most common.

In Italy the printing of keyboard music began in 1517 with a book of anonymous arrangements entitled Frottole intabulate da sonare organi. The mainly homophonic textures of the four-part vocal originals (mostly by Bartolomeo Tromboncino) are lightly embellished to give a more flowing effect; but, as is characteristic of keyboard music, the number of parts employed at any moment depends more on the capacity of a player's hands, and the demands of colour and accent, than on the rules of strict part-writing. Similar freedom was exercised, as illustrated in ex.2, by Marco Antonio Cavazzoni, whose Recerchari, motetti, canzoni (1523) was the earliest keyboard publication by a named Italian composer. His brilliant son Girolamo Cavazzoni, perhaps working under the influence of the Spaniard Antonio de Cabezón (see below), developed from his father's rambling ricercares a clearly defined form in dovetailed imitative sections that became the standard pattern of such works. His two books of intavolature (1543) contain hymn and plainchant settings for organ and two canzonas with French titles. One of the latter, the lively Il est bel et bon, is virtually an original composition, for it uses no more than the first bar and a half of the chanson by Passereau on which it is allegedly based, while the other, a version of Josquin's Faulte d'argent, is a very free paraphrase.

During the second half of the century the most important centre for Italian keyboard music was Venice, where Andrea Gabrieli, his nephew Giovanni Gabrieli and Claudio Merulo were numbered among the organists of the Basilica di S Marco. Andrea's keyboard works were issued posthumously between 1593 and 1605 by Giovanni, who added several of his own compositions to his uncle's. Each contributed a set of intonazioni in all the 'tones' or modes – short pieces used during the liturgy either as interludes, or to give the choir the pitch and mode of the music they were about to sing. Like earlier preludes, they often include some brilliant passagework; this led by extension to the toccata, essentially a keyboard piece in several contrasted sections designed to display the varied capabilities of a player and his instrument. The toccatas of Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli rely mainly on the contrast between sustained writing and brilliant passagework; but Merulo enlarged the form by introducing one or more sections of imitative counterpoint. In addition to toccatas all three composers wrote ricercares, ornate chanson arrangements and original canzonas. The ricercares follow the sectional pattern established by Girolamo Cavazzoni; but those of Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli have fewer themes (sometimes only one) and achieve variety by the use of inversion, augmentation, diminution and stretto, and by the importance given to secondary material such as a countersubject or a new thematic tag. Canzonas tend to be lighter in feeling than ricercares, and often begin with a rhythmic formula of three repeated notes, for instance minim–crotchet–crotchet. None of the works requires pedals, and many of them are as well suited to the harpsichord as to the organ.

Ex.2 M.A. Cavazzoni: Intabulation of Plus de regres

The earliest Italian keyboard dances are found in a small anonymous manuscript of about 1520 (I-Vnm Ital.iv.1227). Both here and in the anonymous Intabolatura nova di varie sorte de balli (1551), the melody is confined to the right hand, while the left has little more than a rhythmical chordal accompaniment. More sophisticated textures appear in the dance publications of Marco Facoli (1588) and G.M. Radino (1592), proving that the addition of simple counterpoint and right-hand embellishments can make such pieces sufficiently interesting to be played and heard for their own sake, and not merely as an accompaniment for dancing.

Although England lagged far behind the Continent in printing keyboard music, British composers led the way in developing keyboard techniques. The broken-chord basses characteristic of later string keyboard writing appear in a manuscript of about 1520–40 (GB-Lbl Roy.App.58), which contains an adventurous 'Hornpype' by Hugh Aston and two anonymous pieces, My Lady Careys Dompe and The Short Mesure of My Lady Wynkfylds Rownde, which may also be by him. All three have ostinato left-hand parts. The repertory for organ (manuals only) from about the same period consists of almost 100 liturgical plainchant pieces (GB-Lbl Roy.App.56, Add.15233, Add.29996; and Och Mus.371; see Early Tudor Organ Music, i, ed. J. Caldwell, and ii, ed. D. Stevens, London, 1966–9). The plainchant is used in various ways. It may be given to a single part in long equal notes, decorated rhythmically and/or melodically, or paraphrased so freely as to be almost unrecognizable; or again, either a single section or several sections of the melody may form the basis of an otherwise free composition. At first the most favoured plainchants were the offertory Felix namque and the antiphon Miserere mihi Domine; but after the Reformation these gave place to the antiphon Gloria tibi Trinitas, which, used non-liturgically and often under the title In nomine, remained immensely popular with English composers for more than a century. The only known English setting of the Ordinary of the Mass is by Philip ap Rhys 'of St Paul's in London'. Among the remaining named composers, the two whose works are outstanding in both quality and quantity are John Redford (d 1547) and Thomas Preston. At first glance much of their music may seem vocal in style; but a genuine understanding of the keyboard is shown by the widely ranging parts, the skilful deployment of the hands and the idiomatic figuration. Virtually no ornament signs are used, but written-out shakes and turns are occasionally incorporated in the text.

More of Redford's works are found in the anthology known as the Mulliner Book (*c*1550–75; GB-Lbl Add.30513), to which the other principal contributors were Thomas Tallis and William Blitheman. In addition to many plainchant pieces the manuscript contains simple transcriptions of Latin and English motets, secular partsongs and consort music. Most of the music was probably intended primarily, though not exclusively, for organ; but three anonymous pieces at the beginning of the manuscript, and a later pavan by Newman (no.116), have the chordal basses that distinguish string keyboard music. Similar basses are found in the Dublin Virginal Manuscript (*c*1570; IRL-Dtc D.3.30), which consists almost entirely of anonymous dances. These contain a sprinkling of the double- and single-stroke ornaments and many of the varied repeats or 'divisions' that later became ubiquitous features of the virginals style. The earlier keyboard music of William Byrd, much of which was collected in the manuscript 'My Ladye Nevells Booke' (1591), exploits these idioms in an individual and highly sophisticated fashion.

The only surviving French sources of the 16th century are seven small books of anonymous pieces published by Pierre Attaingnant of Paris in 1530–31. Three are devoted to chanson arrangements (some of them also known in lute versions); two to alternatim plainchant settings of the Mass, Magnificat and Te Deum; one to motet arrangements; and one to dances (galliards, pavans, branles and basse danses). All are described as being 'en la tablature des orgues, espinettes et manicordions'; but the dances and chanson arrangements are best suited to string keyboard instruments, and the remainder to the organ.

The outstanding keyboard composer of the first half of the century was Antonio de Cabezón, organist to Charles V and Philip II of Spain. A number of his works (ascribed simply to 'Antonio') were included in Venegas de Henestrosa's anthology Libro de cifra nueva (1557); but the principal source is the volume of Cabezón's own Obras de música published posthumously in 1578 by his son Hernando. Although both collections are described as being for 'tecla, arpa y vihuela' (keyboard, harp and vihuela), they were intended primarily for keyboard – the plainchant settings for organ, the diferencias (variations) for harpsichord, and the tientos (ricercares) for either instrument. Cabezón's style is severe, with textures that are generally contrapuntal and always in a definite number of parts. The tientos present a number of themes in succession, each section beginning with strict imitation and culminating in free counterpoint, often in relatively small note values. No ornament signs are used, but a favourite embellishment is a written-out shake with turn. Moreover, it seems likely that contemporary players would have added extempore redobles (turns), quiebros (shakes, and upper or lower mordents) and glosas (diminutions), as recommended in Tomás de Santa Maria's treatise, Libro llamado Arte de tañer fantasia (1565). The diferencias are lighter in mood, though still strictly contrapuntal. In one of the finest, El canto llano del caballero, the melody is at first plainly harmonized, then given successively to soprano, tenor, alto, and again tenor, with flowing counterpoint in the remaining voices. As a member of Philip's private chapel, Cabezón visited Italy, Germany and the Netherlands in 1548–51, and the Netherlands and England in 1554–6; yet he appears to have had surprisingly little influence on the many composers he must have met during his travels.

Keyboard music from Poland survives in several manuscripts, of which the most comprehensive is the so-called Lublin Tablature, copied by Jan z Lublina during the years 1537–48 (PL-Kp 1716). It contains some 250 works, mostly anonymous, and includes liturgical plainchant pieces, preludes, dances (often in slow–quick pairs), and arrangements of vocal works with Latin, German, French, Italian and Polish titles. The influence of the German school is apparent throughout and extends even to the notation used.

3. 17TH CENTURY. Among the principal forms and types of keyboard music introduced during the 17th century were suites, genre or character-pieces, paired preludes and fugues, chorale preludes, and (from about 1680) sonatas. Superb organs in northern and central Germany encouraged the use of the newly independent pedal registers, thus underlining the difference between organ and string keyboard idioms. But the earlier more 'generalized' style of keyboard writing tended to persist wherever organs were less highly developed.

During the early part of the century the main advances in technique still took place in England, where the printing of keyboard music began at long last with Parthenia or the Maydenhead of the First Musicke that Ever was Printed for the Virginalls (1612–13). Its three contributors, Byrd, Bull and Orlando Gibbons, represented successive generations of the great school of virginalists that spanned the late 16th and early 17th centuries. The remaining sources of solo virginals music are manuscripts, however, for the apparent sequel, Parthenia In-violata (*c*1624), is for virginals and bass viol. The most comprehensive manuscript source is the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book (*c*1609–19; GB-Cfm 32.g.29), which provides a cross-section of the whole repertory from Tallis (*c*1505–1585) to Tomkins (1572–1656). Besides containing many unique texts, this remarkable anthology shows the ever-growing popularity of secular works such as dances, settings of song-tunes, variations, fantasias and genre pieces.

Typical of the virginals idiom, as developed by Byrd, are textures that range from contrapuntal imitation to plain harmony in either broken or block chords; a constantly varying number of parts; short figurative motifs; and florid decoration – particularly in the 'divisions', or varied repeats, that are often included in the text. Profuse ornamentation is a constant feature of the style, though oddly enough there is no contemporary explanation of the two signs commonly used to designate ornaments – the double and single stroke. Organ music is distinguished mainly by its liturgical function, but also by an absence of broken-chord basses and a preference for contrapuntal textures in a definite number of parts.

Keyboard techniques were enormously extended by Bull, who was the greatest virtuoso of the day, and by Farnaby, a minor master of rare charm. Brilliant effects were achieved by figuration based on broken octaves, 6ths, 3rds and common chords, by the use of quick repeated notes and wide leaps, and even (in Bull's 'Walsingham' variations, MB, xix, 1963, 2/1970, no.85; ex.3) by the crossing of hands. Farnaby's tiny piece 'For Two Virginals' (MB, xxiv, 1965, no.25), one of the earliest works of its kind, consists of no more than a plain and a decorated version of the same music played simultaneously. A clearer grasp of the true principles of duet writing is shown, however, in Tomkins's single-keyboard 'Fancy: for Two to Play' (MB, v, 1955, 2/1964, no.32); for though based on choral procedures, its mixture of antiphonal and contrapuntal textures neatly displays the essential individuality-cum-unity of two performers.

By the time the aged Tomkins died in 1656 younger composers were already turning towards a new style, French-influenced, in which the main thematic interest lay in the top line. The change can be seen clearly in the short, tuneful pieces of Musicks Hand-maide (1663), a collection of 'new and pleasant lessons for the virginals or harpsycon'. One of the few composers named in it is Matthew Locke, whose more ambitious anthology, Melothesia (1673), is prefaced significantly by 'certain rules for playing upon a continued-bass'. It includes seven of his own pieces (voluntaries) for organ and 'for double [i.e. two-manual] organ', and a number of suites (not so named) by himself and others, consisting generally of an almain, corant, saraband and one or more additional movements. Similar suites were written later by Blow and his pupil Purcell, the principal contributors to The Second Part of Musick's Hand-maid (1689); Purcell's were issued posthumously as A Choice Collection of Lessons for the Harpsichord or Spinnet (1696) and four of Blow's appeared two years later with the same title. All these publications were aimed at the amateur. But Purcell's harpsichord music, though small in scale, is no less masterly than his more ambitious works for theatre, court and the church; and at times it achieves a depth and poignancy – particularly in the ground basses of which he was so fond – that is quite disproportionate to its size. Blow was the more significant organ composer of the two. His 30-odd voluntaries and verses (Purcell wrote only half a dozen) are sectional contrapuntal pieces based on either one or two subjects. Two of them (nos.2 and 29 in Watkins Shaw's edition, 1958, 2/1972) unaccountably quote sizeable passages from Frescobaldi's Toccate e partite d'intavolatura di cimbalo (1615), and another (no.5) is similarly indebted to one of Michelangelo Rossi's published toccatas.

More orthodox musical exchanges between the Continent and England had already taken place during the early years of the century. Arrangements of madrigals by Marenzio and Lassus and original works by Sweelinck, organist of the Oude Kerk in Amsterdam, were included in the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book; and even more significantly, Bull, Peter Philips and other Catholic recusants found refuge in the Netherlands and elsewhere, and thus spread abroad the advanced English keyboard techniques. Sweelinck himself was much influenced by the innovations, as can be seen not only from his harpsichord works, but also from his organ variations on Lutheran chorales and his echo-fantasias that exploit the dynamic contrast between one manual and another. Although none of his keyboard works appeared in print, Sweelinck's fame as the foremost teacher in northern Europe brought him numerous pupils, particularly from the neighbouring parts of Germany. The latest techniques were thus passed on to a younger generation of composers, who in their turn carried them still farther afield.

Ex.3 Bull: 'Walsingham' variations

German composers of the period may conveniently be divided into two groups: those who worked in the Protestant north and centre; and those of the Catholic south, including Austria. To the former group belong Sweelinck's pupils, Scheidt and Scheidemann. Scheidt's keyboard works were issued in two collections, the Tabulatura nova (1624) and the Tabulatur-Buch hundert geistlicher Lieder und Psalmen (1650). (In the first of these the description 'new' refers to the use of open score in place of letter notation.) The organ pieces cover a wide range, for in addition to the forms used by Sweelinck they include fugues and canons as well as plainchant settings for use during the Catholic liturgy. The later volume consists of simple four-part settings of Lutheran chorales for accompanying unison singing. One of the sets of variations for harpsichord is based on the English song Fortune my Foe, which was also set by Sweelinck, Byrd and Tomkins. Scheidemann's works, like those of most northerners, remained unpublished. The majority are organ settings of chorales in which the borrowed melody is either left plain, ornamented, treated in motet style, or (more rarely) used as a theme for variations. The most outstanding of all the northerners was, however, Buxtehude, who left his native Denmark in 1668 to become organist of the Marienkirche in Lübeck. His organ preludes and fugues are not unlike toccatas, for they often contain two quite distinct fugal sections in addition to brilliant flourishes and sustained passages. He also wrote numerous chorale settings of various kinds, even including a set of variations on Auf meinen lieben Gott in the form of a dance suite. Some of the works are for manuals only, but the majority make full use of the pedals. Although Buxtehude was primarily an organ composer, the publication in 1941 of the Ryge Manuscript (DK-Kk C.11.49.4°) made available his suites and variations for clavichord or harpsichord; these are so similar in style to those of Nicolas-Antoine Lebègue that the editor did not notice the inclusion of one of Lebègue's suites in the Buxtehude manuscript.

The earliest and most significant German composer of the south was Froberger, who, though born in Stuttgart, held the post of court organist in Vienna for 20 years. His ricercares, canzonas and fantasias are strongly influenced by his master, Frescobaldi, but his toccatas are less Italian in style. Although they begin with the usual sustained chords and brilliant flourishes (ex.4), they generally include two fugal sections on rhythmic variants of a single subject, each section being rounded off with further flourishes. His suites are in an expressive, romantic vein better suited to the clavichord than to the harpsichord. They are French in style, and are said to have been the first to establish the basic suite pattern of four contrasted national dances: i.e. an allemande (German), courante (French) or corrente (Italian), sarabande (Spanish) and gigue or jig (English). In Froberger's autographs the gigue either precedes the saraband or is omitted altogether; but when the works were published posthumously (Amsterdam, *c*1697) the order was changed ('mis en meilleur ordre') and the gigue placed at the end. During the last ten years of his life Froberger travelled widely in Germany, France, the Netherlands and England, meeting Chambonnières and Louis Couperin in Paris and Christopher Gibbons (son of Orlando) in London; thus he too played a significant part in the cross-fertilization of national styles.

Ex.4 Froberger: Toccata no.1, opening

Among the lesser southerners were Alessandro Poglietti, Georg Muffat and J.C.F. Fischer. Although Poglietti was probably an Italian, he became court organist in Vienna shortly after Froberger, and in 1677 presented Leopold I and his empress with an autograph collection of his harpsichord pieces entitled Rossignolo. Besides a ricercare, a capriccio and an Aria bizarra, all based on the Rossignolo theme, it includes a virtuoso 'imitation of the same bird', and an Aria allemagna with 20 variations. Each of the latter has an illustrative title ('Bohemian Bagpipes', 'Dutch Flute', 'Old Woman's Funeral', 'Hungarian Fiddles' etc.), and in number they match the age of the empress, to whom they were dedicated. Muffat's Apparatus musico-organisticus (1690) contains 12 organ toccatas with elementary pedal parts, and four harpsichord pieces of which the large-scale Passacaglia in G minor and the shorter Ciacona in G have a power and breadth more typical of the north than of the south. In contrast to these, the four collections by Fischer are wholly southern in their delicacy of feeling. Les pièces de clavessin (1696) and the Musicalischer Parnassus (1738) are devoted to harpsichord suites, each of which begins with a prelude of some sort and continues with a group of dances or other pieces, not always including the usual allemande, courante, sarabande and gigue. The other two volumes, Ariadne musica (1702) and Blumen Strauss (1732), contain miniature preludes and fugues for organ. The Ariadne group interestingly foreshadows Bach's Das wohltemperirte Clavier in the wide range of its key scheme, and even in some of its themes (Fischer's eighth fugue in E obviously inspired Bach's ninth from book 2).

In Italy the main centre for keyboard music moved from Venice to Naples and then to Rome. From Ascanio Mayone's Diversi capricci (1603 and 1609) and G.M. Trabaci's Ricercate (1603 and 1615) it can be seen that although the Neapolitans retained the strict contrapuntal style of the Gabrielis in their ricercares, they broke new ground in toccatas by shortening the sections, increasing their number and heightening the contrast between one section and the next. The same distinction was made by Frescobaldi, who, as organist of the basilica of S Pietro in Rome, was the most widely acclaimed player and keyboard composer of the day. Although he visited the Netherlands in 1607, when the 45-year-old Sweelinck was at the height of his powers, he was little influenced by the techniques of the north. His works were published during the next 35 years in a series of ten volumes of which some are revised and enlarged editions of others. The three definitive collections are Il primo libro di capricci, canzon francese, e recercari (1626) and the Toccate d'intavolatura di cimbalo et organo with its sequel Il secondo libro di toccate (both 1637). (The first two contain important prefaces by the composer concerning interpretation.) Most of the toccatas, capriccios and canzonas in these collections are equally suited to harpsichord and organ, for though some have a primitive pedal part, it generally consists of no more than long-held notes that are already present in the left hand. The works intended primarily for harpsichord include dances (sometimes grouped in threes, with the opening balletto serving as theme for the following corrente and passacaglia), and sets of variations or partitas, a number of which are based on harmonic patterns such as the romanesca and the Ruggiero. The ricercares and plainchant pieces are essentially organ music, as in the liturgical Fiori musicali (1635), of which Bach possessed a manuscript copy.

One of the few 17th-century Italian publications devoted wholly to dances was Giovanni Picchi's Intavolatura di balli d'arpicordo (1621). Besides the customary passamezzo, saltarello and padoana (pavan), it includes imitations of alien idioms such as a 'Ballo alla polacha', a 'Ballo ongaro' and a 'Todesca'. The corantos in Michelangelo Rossi's Toccate e correnti d'intavolatura d'organo e cimbalo (1630s) are in a lighter, more tuneful style, though his toccatas are still closely related to Frescobaldi's. This new style can be seen even more clearly in the works of Bernardo Pasquini, who was among the first to apply the title 'sonata' to solo keyboard music. Originally it denoted no more than a 'sound piece' as opposed to a 'sung piece' or 'cantata', for it was applied indiscriminately to toccatas, fugues, airs, dances and suites. But Pasquini, following the example of Corelli's ensemble sonatas, also gave the title to solos in more than a single movement. Among his other works are 15 sonatas for two harpsichords, in which each part consists rather oddly of no more than a figured bass (GB-Lbl Add.31501). The 40-odd toccatas of Alessandro Scarlatti are of interest mainly because each contains at least one moto perpetuo section, thus anticipating the much later moto perpetuo type of toccata.

Much French keyboard music of the 17th century appeared in print while the composers were still alive; and as the title-pages generally specified either organ or harpsichord, but not both, there is rarely any doubt about the instrument intended. A manuscript dated 1618 (GB-Lbl Add.29486, probably from the Catholic Netherlands), however, contains over 100 short pieces in the church modes, all anonymous apart from G. Gabrieli's 12 intonazioni. They include preludes, fugae and alternatim settings of the Mass, Magnificat and Te Deum, all simple enough technically for parochial use. More sophisticated are Titelouze's Hymnes de l'église pour toucher sur l'orgue (1623) and Le Magnificat ... suivant les huits tons de l'église (1626), the first French keyboard publications devoted to the works of a single composer. The earlier volume contains settings of 12 plainchant hymns, each consisting of three or four versets for which the plainchant provides either a cantus firmus or several short themes for treatment in contrapuntal motet style. The eight Magnificat settings of the second volume, though also in motet style, are more adventurous harmonically. Titelouze was essentially conservative, however, and his strict polyphonic idiom attracted no immediate disciples. More typically French are the many Livres d'orgue issued during the second half of the century by composers such as Guillaume Nivers, Nicolas-Antoine Lebègue, Nicolas Gigault, André Raison and Jacques Boyvin. They mostly contain short pieces which, though still in the church modes and intended for use during the liturgy, are fairly simple in style and often unabashedly tuneful. As was customary in France, though not elsewhere, the registration is often indicated in the title, for instance 'Récit de nazard' or 'Basse de cromorne'. Also typical is the frequent use of contrasted manuals heard either simultaneously or in alternation. Lebègue was the first Frenchman to exploit the pedals fully, for generally they were either optional or omitted altogether.

The mid-century saw the emergence of the distinctive French harpsichord idiom that exercised a potent influence throughout Europe. In essence it was based on the richly ornamented and arpeggiated textures of lute music. The founder of the school was Chambonnières, who late in life published two books of Pièces de clavessin (1670) containing 60 dances grouped according to key. The commonest types are allemandes, courantes (often in sets of three) and sarabandes; occasionally a gigue or some other dance is added. More of his pieces survive in the Bauyn Manuscript (F-Pn Res.Vm^7.674–5), which also contains almost all the compositions of his pupil Louis Couperin, the one outstanding French keyboard composer who never saw any of his own works in print. In addition to the forms used by his master, Couperin wrote a number of 'unmeasured preludes' of a type peculiar to France. Another pupil of Chambonnières was Jean-Henri D'Anglebert, whose Pièces de clavecin were published in 1689. The volume is unusual in two respects, for it includes five fugues for organ, and 15 of its 60 harpsichord pieces are arrangements of movements from operas by Lully. D'Anglebert's magnificent Tombeau de Mr. de Chambonnières is a good example for keyboard of a type of memorial composition of which French composers have always been specially fond.

4. THE PERIOD OF J.S. BACH. All the forms employed during the 17th century remained in use during the first half of the 18th; but sonatas (of other than the classical type) acquired increasing importance, and ritornello form (derived from the Neapolitan operatic aria) provided the foundation on which every concerto and many extended solo movements were built.

French keyboard composers were untouched by these developments, however, and they continued to confine themselves to dances and genre pieces for harpsichord, and to short liturgical and secular works for the organ. The two outstanding figures among them were Louis Couperin's nephew François Couperin the younger and Jean-Philippe Rameau, a near-contemporary of Bach. François Couperin's four books of Pièces de clavecin (1713–30) are the crowning achievement of the French clavecin school. The 220 pieces range from elegant trifles to the majestic Passacaille in B minor (ordre no.8) and the sombre allemande La ténébreuse (ordre no.3), which is almost too intense in mood for the dance form in which it is embodied. Two organ masses, written at the age of 21, are sufficiently unlike the mature works to have been attributed at one time to his father, François the elder. Couperin's views on teaching, interpretation, ornamentation and fingering are set forth in his L'art de toucher le clavecin (1716, 2/1717), a fascinating treatise which nevertheless often fails to answer questions that remain puzzling. Rameau's instructions to the player are contained in two of the prefaces to his four books of harpsichord pieces issued between 1706 and 1741 (he wrote nothing for organ). The works are generally simpler in texture and less richly ornamented than Couperin's, but more adventurous harmonically and in their use of the keyboard. The composer himself noted that it would take time and application to appreciate the (harmonic) beauty of parts of the piece entitled L'enharmonique; and he provided fingering for the widely spaced left-hand figure in Les cyclopes because of its unusual difficulty. Rameau's final keyboard publication, Pièces de clavecin en concerts (1741), is primarily a collection of five suites for violin, bass viol and harpsichord, but it also includes a solo harpsichord version of four of the movements. This practical plan was anticipated, though in reverse, in Gaspard Le Roux's Pièces de clavessin (1705). There the main works are suites for harpsichord solo, while the arrangements consist of selected movements for trio (instruments unspecified), and several for two harpsichords, the latter being the earliest known French works for that medium. Composers other than Couperin who wrote for both harpsichord and organ include Louis Marchand, L.-N. Clérambault, J.-F. Dandrieu, Dagincourt and Daquin. Most of their works are in the customary forms; but the organ volumes by Dandrieu (1715) and Daquin (*c*1740) are devoted to sets of variations on popular Christmas melodies, entitled 'noëls', a type which first appeared in Lebègue's Troisième livre d'orgue (*c*1685).

One of the greatest of all harpsichord composers was the Italian Domenico Scarlatti, son of Alessandro and exact contemporary of Bach and Handel. The last 35 years of his life were spent in the service of Maria Barbara of Braganza, at first in Portugal and later in Spain; during that period he appears to have written almost all his 555 single-movement sonatas. Apart from a volume of 30 Essercizi per gravicembalo (1738), published under his own supervision, the main sources of his works are two contemporary manuscript collections (I-Vnm 9770–84; and I-PAp AG 31406–20), the first of which was copied for his royal patron. Their contents are similar but not identical, and it has been suggested by Ralph Kirkpatrick (Domenico Scarlatti, Princeton, 1953) that the order of their contents is to a large extent chronological, and that more than two-thirds of the sonatas were, as the manuscripts indicate, originally grouped in pairs, or sometimes in threes, according to key (this order is retained in Kirkpatrick's facsimile, New York and London, 1972, and in Kenneth Gilbert's excellent complete edition, Paris, 1971–84). Although Scarlatti rarely used any structure other than binary form, and seldom aimed at emotional extremes, he achieved an astonishing variety within those self-imposed limits. Moreover, he exploited the keyboard in ways never imagined by any of his contemporaries. In the later works he virtually abandoned his wilder flights of hand-crossing; but he never lost his command of both sparkling brilliance and an unexpected vein of reflective melancholy, his delight in technical and harmonic experiment, and his love for the sounds and rhythms of the popular music of Spain. Five of the sonatas (K254–5, 287–8 and 328) are for two-manual chamber organ without pedals, and some others are not unsuited to a single-manual organ; but by far the greater number are essentially harpsichord works. (Among the harpsichords possessed by his royal patron, however, none of those with more than two registers appear to have had the full five-octave compass required by some of the sonatas.)

Scarlatti's followers in Portugal and Spain, among whom were Seixas and Antonio Soler, wrote numerous single-movement sonatas similar in style to his own; but as an expatriate he exercised little influence on Italian composers, whose sonatas are of several different types. Those by Della Ciaia (1727) are not unlike sectional toccatas; Francesco Durante's (*c*1732) each contain a studio in imitative counterpoint followed by a brilliant divertimento; Benedetto Marcello's (manuscript) are in either three or four movements; and Zipoli's (1716) include liturgical and secular pieces for organ as well as suites and variations for harpsichord. Also intended for either instrument are G.B. Martini's two volumes of sonatas (1742, 1747), the first devoted to two- and three-movement works, and the second to five-movement works that combine features of both the sonata da camera and the sonata da chiesa.

English keyboard composers during the post-Purcell period rarely rose above a level of honest competence. Tuneful airs and lessons, sometimes grouped into suites, appeared in serial anthologies such as The Harpsichord Master (1697–1734) and The Ladys Banquet (1704–35), among whose contributors were Jeremiah Clarke, William Croft and Maurice Greene. In addition, separate volumes were devoted to works by Philip Hart, Clarke, Thomas Roseingrave and Greene. Although Croft was not accorded that distinction, he was the most accomplished composer of the group and the only one to come within hailing distance of Purcell. Indeed, the Ground from his Suite no.3 in C minor is actually ascribed to Purcell in one source. Collections of fugues and/or voluntaries were issued by Hart, Roseingrave, Greene, Boyce and John Stanley. Although described as being 'for the organ or harpsichord', these are best suited to the organ. The early voluntaries consist of a single movement, generally contrapuntal in texture, while the later tend to be in two movements (slow–fast), of which the second is often a fugue. Outstanding among them are the three volumes containing Stanley's 30 voluntaries, in some of which the number of movements is increased to three or four.

A Scarlatti cult was at one time fostered in England, first by Roseingrave's edition of XLII suites de pièces pour le clavecin (1739), which added 12 more Scarlatti sonatas to the 30 published a year earlier in the Essercizi; and secondly by Charles Avison's arrangement of a number of the sonatas as Twelve Concertos (1744) for strings and continuo.

Of far greater significance to English musical life, however, was the arrival of Handel, who settled in London in 1712 after a successful visit two years earlier. Although at first occupied mainly with Italian opera and later with oratorio, he was obliged to publish his [8] Suites de pièces pour le clavecin (1720) in order to counteract the many 'surrepticious and incorrect copies' that were circulating in manuscript. Other collections of his pieces, all unauthorized, appeared later in London and Amsterdam. Some of the suites follow the normal pattern of allemande–courante–sarabande–gigue; but more often they include italianate allegros, fugues, andantes and so on, or consist of nothing else. His keyboard works combine relaxed informality with masterly rhetoric in a way that doubtless reflects the improvisations for which he was famous; this is particularly noticeable in the 14 or 15 concertos for organ, a medium he invented for use during the intervals at his oratorio performances. In many of them the soloist is expected to improvise long sections (even whole movements) where his part is marked 'ad lib'. This would have been a perfectly simple matter for Handel himself, but it does pose problems for other players. Most of the works require an orchestra of no more than strings and oboes, and as all but one are for organ without pedals, the title-pages describe them as being 'for organ or harpsichord'. Among his English successors as composers of organ and/or harpsichord concertos were T.A. Arne, Thomas Chilcot, William Felton, Philip Hayes and John Stanley, whose op.2 string concertos were also issued in a keyboard version.

Meanwhile in Germany the way had been prepared for the greatest of all pre-classical keyboard composers, J.S. Bach. Among his many musical ancestors, other than relatives, the most significant was Buxtehude (see above), whose organ toccatas and chorale fantasias, and highly developed pedal technique, provided foundations on which Bach could build. So great was Bach's reverence for Buxtehude that in 1705 he walked the distance from Arnstadt to Lübeck in order to hear his Abendmusiken – the yearly choral and instrumental performances given on the five Sundays before Christmas. Somewhat less influential were Pachelbel, Kuhnau and Georg Böhm. Nevertheless, Pachelbel's chorale preludes, published in 1683 and 1693, were the forerunners of one important type used by Bach. In this, each successive phrase of the borrowed melody is treated in diminution to provide the theme for a short fughetta, towards whose conclusion the phrase itself appears as a cantus firmus. The keyboard works of Kuhnau, Bach's predecessor at the Thomaskirche in Leipzig, include two notable volumes: firstly, the Frische Clavier Früchte, oder sieben Suonaten (1696), the earliest publication in which the title 'sonata' is given to a solo as distinct from an ensemble work; and secondly, [6] Musicalische Vorstellungen einiger biblischer Historien (1700), the 'musical representations of biblical stories' that provided the model for Bach's early Capriccio sopra la lontananza del suo fratello dilettissimo BWV992. The influence of Böhm, though conjectural, would have been earlier and more direct, for he was organist of the Johanniskirche in Lüneburg when Bach was a choirboy at the nearby Michaeliskirche. Böhm's organ partitas (variations on chorales) and sensitive suites in the French style for clavichord or harpsichord were unpublished, but the evidence of Bach's own works suggests that he must have been familiar with them as a boy.

A near-contemporary of Bach and Handel, and a friend of both, was the prolific Telemann. The admiration of the two slightly younger men for his music can best be understood by reference to works such as the XX kleine Fugen (1731). Although these miniature keyboard fugues are based on the church modes (which were then virtually obsolete), and though they are quite small in scale, each one establishes unerringly a mood as precise as its structure.

Comparatively few of Bach's own keyboard works were published during his lifetime. The most comprehensive collection, the Clavier-Übung, was issued in four parts between 1731 and 1742, of which the first, second and fourth contain compositions for both single and double-manual harpsichord, while the third is mainly devoted to the organ.

Of Bach's total output of over 250 organ works, more than two-thirds are based on chorales. They range from the early sets of Partite diverse BWV766–8, in the style of Böhm, to mature chorale preludes of every type. From the Weimar period come the 46 preludes of the Orgel-Büchlein, 'wherein the beginner may learn to perform chorales of every kind and also acquire skill in the use of the pedals'. In most of them a single, continuous statement of the melody, either plain or ornamented, is supported by an accompaniment whose figuration either symbolizes the words or intensifies the mood of the hymn concerned. They are generally small in scale; yet some of the settings, such as the richly embellished O Mensch, bewein' dein' Sünde gross BWV622, can be numbered among Bach's profoundest utterances. The third part of the Clavier-Übung, from the Leipzig period, contains 21 preludes based on the Catechism and other hymns, of which the six that illustrate the Catechism are set twice – elaborately for two manuals and pedals, and more simply for manuals only. Four quite unconnected keyboard Duettos BWV802–5 are also included in part 3; and the whole volume is framed by the magnificent Prelude and Fugue in E♭ BWV552, known in England as the 'St Anne'. During the same period Bach published the recondite [5] Canonische Veränderungen über das Weynacht-Lied 'Vom Himmel hoch' BWV769, which, as Schweitzer wrote, 'pack into a single chorale the whole art of canon'. He also virtually completed the revision of 18 large-scale chorale preludes, mostly written originally in Weimar; but failing health and eyesight forced him to abandon dictating the last of them, Vor deinen Thron tret ich hiermit BWV668, whose ending luckily is known from other sources. Earlier chorale preludes include 24 copied by his pupil Kirnberger, 28 from various other manuscripts, and a set of six published by Schübler (*c*1746), five of which are arrangements of movements from cantatas.

In almost all of Bach's other organ music, none of which was published, fugue is an essential element. From the beginning of the Weimar period, or even earlier, come four immature and fairly small-scale preludes and fugues BWV531–3 and 535 and two much finer toccatas in C and D minor BWV564–5, all written under Buxtehude's influence. Increasing mastery and individuality is apparent in four later Weimar works – the preludes and fugues in F minor and A BWV534 and 536, the Fantasia and Fugue in C minor BWV537 and the Toccata and Fugue in F BWV540, with its tremendous pedal solos. The finest of all the fugal works are, however, the ten written either during or just before the Leipzig period. They include the Fantasia and Fugue in G minor BWV542, the Prelude (or Toccata) and Fugue in D minor BWV538, known as the 'Dorian', and the six magnificent preludes and fugues BWV543–8, which are Bach's crowning achievements in this form.

The great Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor BWV582 and the six trio sonatas BWV525–30 far transcend their original purpose as instructional works for Bach's eldest son, Wilhelm Friedemann. They are described merely as being 'for two manuals and pedals', so it remains uncertain whether they were intended primarily for organ or for a harpsichord fitted with a pedal-board (such as could be used by organists for home practice).

Much of Bach's music for normal harpsichord and/or clavichord was also didactic in aim. The 15 two-part inventions and 15 three-part sinfonias BWV772–801 were first included in a manuscript collection of keyboard pieces for Wilhelm Friedemann dated 1720, and were described in a revision of 1723 as showing not only how 'to play clearly in two voices but also, after further progress, to deal correctly and well with three obbligato parts ... and above all to achieve a singing style in playing'. Friedemann's book also contained early versions of 11 of the preludes from the first book of Das wohltemperirte Clavier (1722), a more advanced collection of 24 preludes and fugues in all the major and minor keys 'for the use and profit of young musicians desiring to learn, as well as for the pastime of those already skilled in this study'. The second book, containing a further 24 preludes and fugues, was not completed until 1744. Two other manuscripts, dated respectively 1722 and 1725, were compiled for the use of Bach's second wife, Anna Magdalena. The first contains five of the six French suites BWV812–17, each consisting of the usual allemande, courante, sarabande and gigue, with one or more additional dances (Galanterien) following the sarabande. The six so-called 'English' suites BWV806–11 and six partitas BWV825–30 are on a larger scale, for each begins with a prelude of some sort. Those of the English suites (with the exception of no.1) are ritornello-type movements, while those of the partitas are in various forms. The partitas were published singly between 1726 and 1730, and complete in 1731 as part 1 of the Clavier-Übung, of which part 2 (1735) consists of the Italian Concerto BWV971 and the French Overture BWV831 (sometimes known as the Partita in B minor), both for two-manual harpsichord. Part 4 (1742), also for two-manual harpsichord, is devoted to a single work: the monumental Aria with 30 Variations BWV988, usually known as the Goldberg Variations, which Tovey described as 'not only thirty miracles of variation-form, but ... a single miracle of consummate art as a whole composition'.

Slightly later in date is the Musical Offering BWV1079, a collection of fugues, canons etc. for various instruments on a theme provided by Frederick the Great. It includes two ricercares for solo keyboard, of which the second, in six parts, was originally printed in open score. This was not an unusual method of presenting keyboard music when its aim was partly didactic. It was used again for Bach's posthumous Art of Fugue BWV1080, in which the majority of the fugues are clearly intended for solo keyboard, though they have frequently been arranged for various ensembles in the 20th century.

During the Weimar period Bach made solo keyboard versions, some for organ and others for harpsichord, of 22 concertos by various composers, including Vivaldi, Marcello and Telemann. These paved the way for his later concertos for solo harpsichord and strings BWV1052–8, which were the first of their kind (and roughly contemporary with Handel's organ concertos). All seven are arrangements of earlier concertos of his own – mostly for solo violin and strings – several of which have not survived. The only original keyboard work in this form appears to be the Concerto in C for two harpsichords and strings BWV1061; the remaining two for the same medium, and those for three and four harpsichords and strings, are also arrangements of concertos originally by either Bach himself or other composers such as Vivaldi.

In its depth and range of emotion, contrapuntal skill and perfection of design, Bach's keyboard music far surpasses that of any of his contemporaries or predecessors; yet by the time of his death it was generally regarded as old-fashioned. The contrapuntal style was beginning to seem outmoded, and the harpsichord and clavichord were beginning to make way for the fortepiano, which combined the power of the one with the sensitivity of the other. The gradual change can be seen in the works of three of Bach's sons. The eldest, Wilhelm Friedemann, still wrote some fugues; but, like his polonaises and three-movement sonatas, they were in the new empfindsamer Stil, of which his brother Carl Philipp Emanuel was the chief exponent. Philipp Emanuel's numerous sonatas, fantasias, rondos etc., embodying the violent dynamic contrasts typical of the style, were immensely influential; and his book, Versuch über die wahre Art das Clavier zu spielen (1753–62), was the most important treatise of its day. The youngest brother, Johann Christian, was a less original composer; nevertheless, his italianate sonatas and concertos in the galant style gained great popularity in England, where he settled in 1761. And there it was that he met and befriended the eight-year-old Mozart, when that astonishing boy visited London in 1764–5.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A Lists of sources and compositions. B General surveys. C England. D Germany, Austria and Poland. E Italy, Spain and Portugal. F The Netherlands, Belgium and France. G Scandinavia. H Forms.

A: LISTS OF SOURCES AND COMPOSITIONS

Grove6 ('Keyboard music: bibliography'; J. Caldwell) [incl. list of edns]

B. Weigl: Handbuch der Orgelliteratur (Leipzig, 1931)

W.S. Newman: 'A Checklist of the Earliest Keyboard "Sonatas" (1641–1738)', Notes, xi (1953–4), 201–12

J. Friskin and I. Freundlich: Music for the Piano ... from 1580 to 1952 (New York, 1954/R)

H. Alker: Literatur für alte Tasteninstrumente: Wiener Abhandlungen zur Musikwissenschaft und Instrumentalkunde (Vienna, 1962)

K. Wolters: Handbuch der Klavierliteratur (Zürich, 1967)

C.R. Arnold: Organ Literature: a Comprehensive Survey (Metuchen, NJ, 1973)

M. Hinson: Guide to the Pianist's Repertoire, ed. I. Freundlich (Bloomington, IN, 1973) [comprehensive bibliography]

H. Ferguson: Keyboard Interpretation (London, 1975)

B. Gustafson: French Harpsichord Music of the 17th Century (Ann Arbor, 1979)

A.J. Arenson and S. Williams: The Harpsichord Booke: being a Plaine & Simple Index to Printed Collections of Musick by Different Masters for the Harpsichord, Spinnet, Clavichord & Virginall (Madison, WI, 1986)

W.F. Dassinger: 'An Index of Organ Music up to 1750 Based on Plainsong', JMR, vi (1986), 95–170
C. Johnson: Keyboard Intabulations Preserved in Sixteenth- and Seventeenth-Century German Organ Tablatures: a Catalogue and Commentary (diss., U. of Oxford, 1986)
B. Gustafson and D.R. Fuller: A Catalogue of French Harpsichord Music 1699–1780 (New York, 1990)
A. Heinrich: Organ and Harpsichord Music by Women Composers: an Annotated Catalog (Westport, CT, 1991)
S.J. Sloane: Music for Two or More Players at Clavichord, Harpsichord, Organ: an Annotated Bibliography (Westport, CT, 1991)
V. Brookes: British Keyboard Music to c. 1660: Sources and Thematic Index (Oxford, 1996)

B: GENERAL SURVEYS

ApelG; FrotscherG; MGG1 ('Klaviermusik', W. Apel, K. von Fischer; 'Orgelmusik', F.W. Riedel, T.M. Laquer); ReeseMR
A.G. Ritter: Zur Geschichte des Orgelspiels (Leipzig, 1884/R)
M. Seiffert: Geschichte der Klaviermusik (Leipzig, 1899/R)
O. Kinkeldey: Orgel und Klavier in der Musik des 16. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1910/R)
A. Pirro: 'L'art des organistes', EMDC, II/ii (1926), 1181–359
K.G. Fellerer: Orgel und Orgelmusik: ihre Geschichte (Augsburg, 1929)
G. Schünemann: Geschichte der Klaviermusik (Berlin, 1940)
G.S. Bedbrook: Keyboard Music from the Middle Ages to the Beginnings of the Baroque (London, 1949/R)
L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht: Deutsche und italienische Klavier-Musik zur Bach-Zeit (Leipzig, 1954)
A.E.F. Dickinson: 'A Forgotten Collection' [D-Bsb Ly.A1 and A2], MR, xvii (1956), 97–109
F.W. Riedel: Quellenkundliche Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik für Tasteninstrumente in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1960, 2/1990)
Y. Rokseth: 'The Instrumental Music of the Middle Ages and Early 16th Century', NOHM, iii (1960), 406–65
W. Young: 'Keyboard Music in 1600', MD, xvi (1962), 115–50; xvii (1963), 163–93
A.E.F. Dickinson: 'The Lübbenau Keyboard Books' [D-Bsb Ly.A1 and A2], MR, xxvii (1966), 270–86
W. Apel: 'Solo Instrumental Music', NOHM, iv (1968), 602–708
W.R. Denison: Recitative in Baroque Keyboard Music (diss., Florida State U., 1969)
M. Kugler: Die Musik für Tasteninstrumente im 15. und 16. Jahrhundert (Wilhelmshaven, 1975)
J.R. Shannon: Organ Literature of the Seventeenth Century: a Study of its Style s (Raleigh, NC, 1978)
O. Schumann: Handbuch der Klaviermusik: Konzert- und Hausmusik vom 16. Jahrhundert bis heute (Munich, 1982)
K. Wolff: Masters of the Keyboard: Individual Style Elements in the Piano Music of Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and Schubert (Bloomington, IN, 1983)
C.R. Arnold: Organ Literature: a Comprehensive Survey (Metuchen, NJ, 1984)
N. del C. Fernandez: 'Music for Two Keyboards: Prior to the Advent of the Piano', Piano Quarterly, xxxiv (1986), 41–5
P. Gradenwitz: Kleine Kulturgeschichte der Klaviermusik (Munich, 1986)
H. Klotz: Über die Orgelkunst der Gotik, Renaissance und Barok (Kassel, 1986)
W. Apel: Collected Articles and Reviews, iii: Early European Keyboard Music (Stuttgart, 1989)
P. Hollfelder: Geschichte der Klaviermusik: historische Entwicklungen, Komponisten mit Biographien und Werkverzeichnissen, nationale Schulen (Wilhelmshaven, 1989)
The Harpsichord and its Repertoire: Utrecht 1990
J. Viret: 'La musique d'orgue au XVIe siècle: état actuel des éditions', Orgue francophone, ix–x (1990–91), 6–18, 10–27
M. Ladenburger, ed.: Beiträge zu Orgelbau und Orgelmusik in Oberschwaben im 18. Jahrhundert (Tutzing, 1991)
L. Jones: 'Fourteenth-and Fifteenth-Century Keyboard Music', Companion to Medieval and Renaissance Music, ed. T.W. Knighton and D. Fallows (London, 1992), 131–4
U. Molsen: Barockes Klaverspiel: ein Lese-, Spiel- und Nachschlagebuch der Klaviermusik des Barock (Hamburg, 1994)

C: ENGLAND

C. van den Borren: Les origines de la musique de clavier en Angleterre à l'époque de la Renaissance (Brussels, 1913; Eng. trans., 1913)
W. Niemann: Die Virginalmusik (Leipzig, 1919)
M. Glyn: About Elizabethan Virginal Music and its Composers (London, 1924, enlarged 2/1934)
L. Neudenberger: Die Variationstechnik der Virginalisten im Fitzwilliam Virginal Book (Berlin, 1937)
R. Donington and T. Dart: 'The Origin of the English In Nomine', ML, xxx (1949), 101–6
G. Reese: 'The Origin of the English "In Nomine"', JAMS, ii (1949), 7–22
D. Stevens: The Mulliner Book: a Commentary (London, 1952)
E.E. Lowinsky: 'English Organ Music of the Renaissance', MQ, xxxix (1953), 373–95, 528–53
T. Dart: 'New Sources of Virginal Music', ML, xxxv (1954), 93–106
J.L. Boston: 'Priscilla Bunbury's Virginal Book', ML, xxxvi (1955), 365–73
H.J. Steele: English Organs and Organ Music from 1500–1650 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1958)
R.L. Adams: The Development of Keyboard Music in England during the English Renaissance (diss., U. of Washington, 1960)
P.F. Williams: English Organ Music and the English Organ under the First Four Georges (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1963)
J.K. Parton: Cantus-Firmus Techniques and the Rhythmic Elements of Style in the Organ Works of the Early Tudor Era (diss., North Texas State U., 1964)
J.A. Caldwell: British Museum Add.MS 29996 (diss., U. of Oxford, 1965)
J.A. Caldwell: 'Keyboard Plainsong Settings in England, 1500–1660', MD, xix (1965), 129–33
H.D. Johnstone: 'An Unknown Book of Organ Voluntaries', MT, cviii (1967), 1003–7
G. Beechey: 'A New Source of 17th Century Keyboard Music', ML, l (1969), 278–89
A. Curtis: Sweelinck's Keyboard Works: a Study of English Elements in Seventeenth-Century Dutch Composition (London and Leiden, 1969, 2/1972)
M.C. Maas: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music: a Study of Manuscripts Rés. 1185, 1186 and 1186 bis of the Paris Conservatory Library (diss., Yale U., 1969)
T. Dart: 'An Early Seventeenth-Century Book of English Organ Music for the Roman Rite', ML, lii (1971), 27–38
B.A. Cooper: 'The Keyboard Suite in England before the Restoration', ML, liii (1972), 309–17
M. Boyd: 'Music MSS in the Mackworth Collection at Cardiff', ML, liv (1973), 133–41
J.A. Caldwell: English Keyboard Music before the Nineteenth Century (Oxford, 1973)
F. Routh: Early English Organ Music from the Middle Ages to 1837 (London, 1973)
M. Tilmouth: 'York Minster MS M. 16(s) and Captain Prendcourt', ML, liv (1973), 302–7
B.A. Cooper: English Solo Keyboard Music of the Middle and Late Baroque (diss., U. of Oxford, 1974)
R. Petre: 'A New Piece by Henry Purcell', EMc, vi (1978), 374–9
G. Nitz: Die Klanglichkeit in der englischen Virginalmusik des 16. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1979)
J.A. Caldwell: 'Keyboard Plainsong Settings in England, 1500–1660: addenda et corrigenda', MD, xxxiv (1980), 215–20
J.A. Caldwell: 'The Influence of German Composers on English Keyboard Music in the Seventeenth Century', Deutsch-englische Musikbeziehungen: Nuremberg 1980, 39–50
B.A. Cooper: 'Keyboard Sources in Hereford', RMARC, no.16 (1980), 135–9
N. Temperley: 'Organ Settings of English Psalm Tunes', MT, cxxii (1981), 123–8
R.J. Klakowich: Keyboard Sources in Mid-17th-Century England and the French Aspect of English Keyboard Music (diss., SUNY, 1985)
W.H. Piehler: Stylistic Features of English Organ Voluntaries during the 17th Through 19th Centuries (diss., U. of Connecticut, 1985)
P. Holman: 'A New Source of Restoration Keyboard Music', RMARC, no.20 (1986–7), 53–7
B. Cooper: English Solo Keyboard Music of the Middle and Late Baroque (New York, 1989)
G.A. Cox: Organ Music in Restoration England: a Study of Sources, Styles and Influences (New York, 1989)

J.B. Hodge: English Harpsichord Repertoire: 1660–1714 (diss., U. of Manchester, 1989)
C.L. Bailey: English Keyboard Music, c.1625–1680 (diss., Duke U., 1992)
B. Cooper: 'Keyboard Music', Music in Britain: the Seventeenth Century, ed. I. Spink (Oxford, 1992), 341–66
J. Harley: British Harpsichord Music (Aldershot, 1992–4)
O. Memed: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music: Benjamin Cosyn (New York, 1993)
J. Irving: 'John Blitheman's Keyboard Plainsongs: another "Kind" of Composition?', PMM, iii (1994), 185–93
C. Price: 'Newly Discovered Autograph Music of Purcell and Draghi', JRMA, cxx (1995), 77–111
J.L. Speller: 'Organ Music and the Metrical Psalms in Eighteenth-Century Anglican Worship', The Tracker, xxxix/2 (1995), 21–9
C.D. Maxim: British Cantus Firmus Settings for Keyboard from the Early Sixteenth Century to the Middle of the Seventeenth Century (diss., U. of Wales, Cardiff, 1996)

D: GERMANY, AUSTRIA AND POLAND

F. Arnold and H. Bellermann: Das Locheimer Liederbuch nebst der Ars organisandi von Conrad Paumann (Wiesbaden, 1864, rev. 3/1926/R)
R. Eitner: 'Das Buxheimer Orgelbuch', MMg, xix–xx (1887–8), suppl.
M. Seiffert: 'J.P. Sweelinck und seine direkten deutschen Schüler', VMw, vii (1891), 145–260
A. Chybiński: 'Polnische Musik und Musikkultur des XVI. Jahrhunderts', SIMG, xiii (1911–12), 463–505
Z. Jachimecki: 'Eine polnische Orgeltabulatur aus dem Jahre 1548', ZMw, ii (1919–20), 206–12
P. Nettl: 'Die Wiener Tanzkompositionen in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts', SMw, viii (1921), 45–175
A. Scheide: Zur Geschichte des Choralvorspiels (Hildinghausen, 1926)
W. Merian: Der Tanz in den deutschen Tabulaturbüchern (Leipzig, 1927/R)
G. Kittler: Geschichte des protestantischen Orgelchorals (Ueckermünde, 1931)
W. Apel: 'Die Tabulatur des Adam Ileborgh', ZMw, xvi (1933–4), 193–212
O.A. Baumann: Das deutsche Lied und seine Bearbeitungen in den frühen Orgeltabulaturen (Kassel, 1934)
A. Booth: German Keyboard Music in the 15th Century (diss., U. of Birmingham, 1954–5)
R.S. Lord: The Buxheim Organ Book: a Study in the History of Organ Music in Southern Germany during the Fifteenth Century (diss., Yale U., 1960)
L. Schierning: Die Überlieferung der deutschen Orgel- und Klaviermusik aus der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1961)
E. Southern: The Buxheim Organ Book (Brooklyn, NY, 1963)
O. Mischiati: 'L'intavolatura d'organo tedesca della Biblioteca nazionale di Torino', L'organo, iv (1963), 1–154
J.R. White: 'The Tablature of Johannes of Lublin', MD, xvii (1963), 137–62
H.R. Zöbeley: Die Musik des Buxheimer Orgelbuchs (Tutzing, 1964)
C.D. Harris: Keyboard Music in Vienna during the Reign of Leopold I, 1658–1705 (diss., U, of Michigan, 1967)
G.T.M. Gillen: The Chorale in North German Organ Music from Sweelinck to Buxtehude (diss., U. of Oxford, 1970)
S. Wollenberg: Viennese Keyboard Music in the Reign of Karl VI (1712–40): Gottlieb Muffat and his Contemporaries (diss., U. of Oxford, 1975)
A. Poszowski: 'Clavichord und Cembalo in der polnischen Musik der 1. Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts', Vom Notenbild zur Interpretation, ed. E. Thom and R. Bormann (Magdeburg, 1978), 53–62
Die süddeutsch-österreichische Orgelmusik im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert: Innsbruck 1979
W. Breig: 'Die Virginalisten und die deutsche Claviermusik der Schütz-Generation', Deutsch-englische Musikbeziehungen: Nuremburg 1980, 51–74
C. Pollack: Viennese Solo Keyboard Music, 1740–1770: a Study in the Evolution of the Classical Style (diss., Brandeis U., 1984)
H. Federhofer and W. Gleissner: 'Eine deutsche Orgeltabulatur im Stadt- und Stiftsarchiv Aschaffenburg', AcM, lvii (1985), 180–95
B. Brzezińska: Repertuar polskich tabulatur organowych z pierwszej połowy XVI wieku (Kraków, 1987)
F. Kessler: Danziger Orgel-Musik des 16. bis 18. Jahrhunderts (Stuttgart, 1988)
G.A. Webber: A Study of Italian Influence on North German Church and Organ Music in the Second Half of the Seventeenth Century, with Special Reference to the Collection of Gustav Duben (diss., U. of Oxford, 1988)
K. Beckmann: 'Echteitsproblems im Repertoire des hanseatischen Orgelbarocks', Ars organi, xxxvii, (1989), 150–62
P. Walker, ed.: Church, Stage, and Studio: Music and its Contexts in Seventeenth-Century Germany (Ann Arbor, 1990) [incl. articles on kbd music by L. Archbold, D.E. Bush, A. Edler, C. Johnson, C. Lasell and V.J. Panetta]
M. Zimmerman: 'Johann Pachelbel als Schnittpunkt der europäischen Einflüsse auf die deutsche Orgelmusik des 17. Jahrhunderts', Gottesdienst und Kirchenmusik, iii (1994), 81–2

E: ITALY, SPAIN AND PORTUGAL

K. Jeppesen, ed.: Die italienische Orgelmusik am Anfang des Cinquecento (Copenhagen, 1943, enlarged 2/1960)
D. Plamenac: 'Keyboard Music of the 14th Century in Codex Faenza 117', JAMS, iv (1951), 179–201
D. Plamenac: 'New Light on Codex Faenza 117', IMSCR V: Utrecht 1952, 310–26
N. Pirrotta: 'Note su un codice di antiche musiche per tastiera' [I-FZc 117], RMI, lvi (1954), 333–9
R. Lunelli: L'arte organaria del Rinascimento in Roma (Florence, 1958)
J.F. Monroe: Italian Keyboard Music in the Interim between Frescobaldi and Pasquini (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1959)
B. Hudson: A Portuguese Source of Seventeenth-Century Iberian Organ Music (diss., Indiana U., 1961)
H. Anglès: 'Die Instrumentalmusik bis zum 16. Jahrhundert in Spanien', Natalicia musicologica Knud Jeppesen septuagenario collegis oblata, ed. B. Hjelmborg and S. Sørenson (Copenhagen, 1962), 143–64
K. Jeppesen: 'Ein altvenetianisches-Tanzbuch' [I-Vnm Ital.V. 1227], Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer zum sechzigsten Geburtstag, ed. H. Hüschen (Regensburg, 1962), 245–63
R. Hudson: The Development of Italian Keyboard Variations on the Passacaglio and Ciaccona from Guitar Music in the Seventeenth Century (diss., UCLA, 1967)
M. Kugler: Die Tastenmusik im Codex Faenza (Tutzing, 1972)
G. Doderer: Orgelmusik und Orgelbau im Portugal des 17. Jahrhunderts: Untersuchungen an Hand des MS 964 der Biblioteca Publica in Braga (Tutzing, 1978)
J.L. Ladewig: Frescobaldi's 'Recercari et Canzoni Franzese' (1615): a Study of the Contrapuntal Keyboard Idiom in Ferrara, Naples and Rome, 1580–1620 (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1978)
A. Silbiger: Italian Manuscript Sources of 17th Century Keyboard Music (Ann Arbor, 1980)
A. Silbiger: 'The Roman Frescobaldi Tradition, c.1640–1670', JAMS, xxxiii (1980), 42–87
M. van Daalen and F. Harrison: 'Two Keyboard Intabulations of the Late Fourteenth Century on a Manuscript Leaf now in the Netherlands', TVNM, xxxiv (1984), 97–108
J. Clement: 'La musica española para teclo en el siglo XVIII', RdMc, viii (1985), 15–21
B.M. Nelson: The Integration of Spanish and Portuguese Organ Music Within the Liturgy from the Latter Half of the Sixteenth Century to the Eighteenth Century (diss., U. of Oxford, 1986)
G. Doderer: 'Algunos aspectos nuevos de la musica para clavecin en la corte Lisboeta de Juan V', Musica antiqua, viii (1987), 26–31
G. Galvez: 'Aspectos ornamentales en la musica española para tecla del siglo XVIII', Musica antiqua, vii (1987), 11–16; viii (1987), 23–4
R.F. Judd: The Use of Notational Formats at the Keyboard: a Study of Printed Sources of Keyboard Music in Spain and Italy c.1500–1700, Selected Manuscript Sources Including Music by Claudio Merulo, and Contemporary Writings Concerning Notations (diss., U. of Oxford, 1989)
M. Pérez Gutiérrez: 'Algunas reflexiones sobre el nuevo estilo artístico de mediados del siglo XVIII en la música de tecla de la península ibérica en relación con Europa', Livro de homenagem a Macario Santiago Kastner, ed. M.F. Cídrais Rodrígues, M. Morais and R.V. Nery (Lisbon, 1992), 265–83
K. Marshall: 'The Organ in 14th-Century Spain', EMc, xx (1992), 549–57

C. Johnson, ed.: Historical Organ Techniques and Repertoire: an Historical Survey of Organ Performance Practices and Repertoire, i: Spain, 1550–1830 (Boston, 1994)
B. Nelson: 'Alternatim Practice in 17th-Century Spain', EMc, xxii (1994), 239–56
N.J. Barker: Italian Keyboard Music c.1580–1630: an Investigation of Compositional Procedure (diss., U. of London, 1995)

F: THE NETHERLANDS, BELGIUM AND FRANCE

A. Méreaux: Les clavecinistes de 1637 à 1790 (Paris, 1867)
C. van den Borren: Les origines de la musique de clavier dans les Pays-Bas (nord et sud) jusque vers 1630 (Brussels, 1914)
Y. Rokseth: La musique d'orgue au XVe siècle et au début du XVIe (Paris, 1930)
N. Dufourcq: La musique d'orgue française de Jean Titelouze à Jehan Alain (Paris, 1941, 2/1949)
A. Curtis: Introduction to Nederlandse klaviermuziek uit de 16e en 17e eeuw, MMN, iii (1961)
T. Dart: 'Elisabeth Eysbock's Keyboard Book', STMf, xliv (1962), 5–12
E. Southern: 'Some Keyboard Basse Dances of the Fifteenth Century', AcM, xxxv (1963), 114–24
D. Fuller: 18th-Century French Harpsichord Music (diss., Harvard U., 1965)
T.K. Brown: The French Baroque Organ Tradition: a Critical Analysis of Works by Representative Composers (diss., Florida State U., 1967)
A. Curtis: Sweelinck's Keyboard Works: a Study of English Elements in Seventeenth-Century Dutch Composition (London and Leiden, 1969, 2/1972)
F. Peeters and M.A. Vente: De orgelkunst in de Nederlanden van de 16de tot de 18de eeuw (Antwerp, 1971)
B. Gustafson: French Harpsichord Music of the 17th Century, i–iii (Ann Arbor, 1979)
E. Higginbottom: The Liturgy and French Classical Organ Music: a Study of the Liturgical Background to Organ Music in France during the 17th and 18th Centuries (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1979)
J.P. Kitchen: Harpsichord Music of 17th-Century France, with Particular Emphasis on the Work of Louis Couperin (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1979)
G. Morche: Muster und Nachahmung: eine Untersuchung der klassischen französischen Orgelmusik (Berne, 1979)
D.J. Ledbetter: Harpsichord Music and Lute Music in Seventeenth-Century France: an Assessment of the Influence of Lute Music on Keyboard Repertoire (diss., U. of Oxford, 1985)
R.F. Bates: From Mode to Key: a Study of Seventeenth-Century French Liturgical Organ Music and Music Theory (diss., Stanford U., 1986)
P.M. Bedard: 'Une nouvelle source pour la musique française de clavier des XVIIe et XVIIIe siècles: les manuscrits de Vitre', RdM, lxxii (1986), 201–35
B. Scheibert: Jean-Henry D'Anglebert and the Seventeenth-Century Clavecin School (Bloomington, IN, 1986)
D. Ledbetter: Harpsichord and Lute Music in 17th-Century France (London, 1987)
D.A. Maple: D'Anglebert's Autograph Manuscript, Paris, B.N. Rés.89ter: an Examination of Compositional, Editorial, and Notational Processes in 17th-Century French Harpsichord Music (diss., U. of Chicago, 1988)
C.H. Bates: 'French Harpsichord Music in the First Decade of the 18th Century', EMc, xvii (1989), 184–96
H.H. Rabe: Studien zur Rondoform in der französischen Clavecinmusik zwischen Spätbarock und Frühklassik (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1989)
M. Souter: Sixteenth-Century Intabulation Processes and their Relationship to the Formation and Understanding of Sweelinck's Keyboard Style (diss., U. of Oxford, 1990)
F. Hammond: 'The Influence of Girolamo Frescobaldi on French Keyboard Music', Recercare, iii (1991), 147–67
N. Sato: 'Zur Gattung freie Komposition der nederländischen Claviermusik um die Zeit Sweelincks', Ongakugaku, xxxviii (1992), 98–117
G.B. Stauffer: 'Boyvin, Grigny, D'Anglebert, and Bach's Assimilation of French Classical Organ Music', EMc, xxi (1993), 83–4
M. Martin: 'Preciosité, Dissimulation and le bon goût: Societal Conventions and Musical Aesthetics in 17th-Century French Harpsichord Music', The Consort, no.51 (1995), 4–12

G: SCANDINAVIA

E. Nordenfeld-Åberg: 'The Harpsichord in 18th-Century Sweden', EMc, ix (1981), 47–54
I. Myrner: 'Scandinavian Late 16th-Century Keyboard Music at the Court of Christian IV', Livro de homenagem a Macario Santiago Kastner, ed. M.F. Cidrais Rodrígues, M. Morais and R.V. Nery (Lisbon, 1992), 205–27

H: FORMS

NewmanSBE
R. Eitner: 'Tänze des 15. bis 17. Jahrhunderts', MMg, vii (1875), suppl.
T. Norlind: 'Zur Geschichte der Suite', SIMG, vii (1905–6), 172–203
L. Schrade: Die ältesten Denkmäler der Orgelmusik als Beitrag zu einer Geschichte der Toccata (Munster, 1928)
E. Valentin: Die Entwicklung der Tokkata im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert bis J.S. Bach (Munich, 1930)
E. Epstein: Der französische Einfluss auf die deutsche Klavier-Suite im 17. Jahrhundert (Würzburg, 1940)
J.L. Hibberd: The Early Keyboard Prelude (diss., Harvard U., 1940)
M. Reimann: Untersuchungen zur Formgeschichte der französischen Klavier-Suite (Regensburg, 1941)
L. Schrade: 'The Organ in the Mass of the 15th Century', MQ, xxviii (1942), 329–36, 467–87
R. Murphy: Fantasia and Ricercare in the Sixteenth Century (diss., Yale U., 1954)
S. Podolsky: The Variation Canzona for Keyboard Instruments in Italy, Austria and Southern Germany in the Seventeenth Century (diss., Boston U., 1954)
I. Horsley: 'The 16th Century Variation', JAMS, xii (1959), 118–32
F.M. Siebert: Fifteenth-Century Organ Settings of the Ordinarium Missae (diss., Columbia U., 1961)
H.C. Slim: The Keyboard Ricecar and Fantasia in Italy, ca. 1500–1550, with Reference to Parallel Forms in European Lute Music of the Same Period (diss., Harvard U., 1961)
R.S. Douglass: The Keyboard Ricercar in the Baroque Era (diss., U. of North Texas, 1963)
G.H. Farndell: The Development of Organ Magnificat Settings Found in Representative German Composers between 1450 and 1750 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1966)
C. Cannon: The 16th-and 17th Century Organ Mass: a Study in Musical Style (diss., New York U., 1968)
P. Schleuning: Die freie Fantasie: ein Beitrag zur Erforschung der Klaviermusik des 18. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1970)
M.J. Smiley: The Renaissance Organ Magnificat (diss., U. of Illinois, 1970)
M.C. Bradshaw: The Origin of the Toccata, MSD, xxviii (1972)
S.E. Hanks: The German Unaccompanied Keyboard Concerto in the Early Eighteenth Century, Including Works of Walther, Bach, and their Contemporaries (diss., U. of Iowa, 1972)
R.B. Lynn: Renaissance Organ Music for the Proper of the Mass in Continental Sources (diss., Indiana U., 1974)
H. McConnell: The Lutheran Chorale in the Sixteenth-Century German Keyboard Tablatures (diss., U. of Colorado, 1974)
N. Bergenfeld: The Keyboard Fantasy of the Elizabethan Renaissance (diss., New York U., 1978)
C. Pfeiffer: 'Das französische prélude non mesuré für Cembalo: Notenbild, Interpretation, Einfluss auf Froberger, Bach, Händel', NZM, Jg.140 (1979), 132–6
S.C. Park: The Seventeenth-Century Keyboard Suite in South Germany and Austria (diss., Bryn Mawr College, 1980)
R. Hudson: Passacaglio and Ciaccona: from Guitar Music to Italian Keyboard Variations in the 17th Century (Ann Arbor, 1981)
J. Beder: The Fitzwilliam Virginal Book Dances: the Fusion of Rhythm and Tonal Structure in the Late Renaissance (diss., CUNY, 1982)
G.A. Webber: A History of the Praeludium in North German Organ Music of the 17th Century from its Origins to Buxtehude (diss., U. of Oxford, 1982)
C. van Eyndhoven: 'Geschiedenis van de orgelmis in Duitsland vanaf haar ontstaan tot het midden van de 18de eeuw', Adem, xix (1983), 173–7
G. Pont: 'Handel's Overtures for Harpsichord or Organ, an Unrecognized Genre', EMc, xi (1983), 309–22
D.C. Sanders: The Keyboard Sonatas of Giustini, Paradisi and Rutini: Formal and Stylistic Innovations in Mid-Eighteenth-Century Italian Keyboard Music (diss., U. of Kansas, 1983)
R. Troeger: 'Metre in Unmeasured Preludes', EMc, xi (1983), 340–45

I. Feddern: The Development of the Seventeenth-Century French Organ 'hymne': Titelouze to Grigny (diss., Indiana U., 1985)
B. Sponheuer: 'Die norddeutsche Orgeltoccata und die "höchsten Formen der Instrumentalmusik": Beobachtungen an der grossen e-moll-Toccata von Nicolaus Bruhns', Schütz-Jb 1986, 137–46
M. Tuck: 'The Alternatim Organ Mass', American Organist, xx (1986), 60–65
C. Goldberg: Stilisierung als kunstvermittelnder Prozess: die französischen Tombeau-Stücke im 17. Jahrhundert (Laaber, 1987)
P. Le Prevost: Le prelude non mesuré pour clavecin (France 1650–1700) (Baden-Baden, 1987)
A. Edler: 'Fantasie and Choralfantasie: on the Problematic Nature of a Genre of Seventeenth-Century Organ Music', Organ Yearbook, xix (1988), 53–66
M. Huggel: 'Preludes non mesurés: eine wenig bekannte Kompositionsgattung im Barock', Musik und Gottesdienst, xlii (1988), 61–7
J. Dehmel: Toccata und Präludium in der Orgelmusik von Merulo bis Bach (Kassel, 1989)
J.P. Montagnier: 'La fugue pour clavier en France vers 1700–1730: à propos des deux fugues de Pierre Fevrier', RdM, lxxvi (1990), 173–86
J.-P. Muller: 'La fantaisie pour clavier au XVIIIe et au début du XIXe siècle', Bulletin de la Société liégeoise de musicologie, lxix (1990), 1–7
S.C. Perry: The Development of the Italian Organ Toccata, 1550–1750 (DMA diss., U. of Kentucky, 1990)
D. Teepe: Die Entwicklung der Fantasie für Tasteninstrumente im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert: eine gattungsgeschichtliche Studie (Kassel, 1990)
P.A. Boncella: The Classical Venetian Organ Toccata (1591–1604): an Ecclesiastical Genre Shaped by Printing Technologies and Editorial Policies (diss., Rutgers U., 1991)
C. Tilney: The Art of the Unmeasured Prelude for Harpsichord: France 1660–1720 (London, 1991)
D. Schulenburg: 'La toccata del primo Barocco e l'avvento della tonalità', RIM, xxvii (1992), 103–23
R.W. Troeger: 'The French Unmeasured Harpsichord Prelude: Notation and Performance', Early Keyboard Journal, x (1992), 89–119
R.T. Wilson: The Development of the German Keyboard Canzona and its Reflection in the Work of Gottlieb Muffat (diss., U. of Rochester, 1992)

II. Organ music from c1750

The development of organ music after the mid-18th century was influenced by a number of factors, notably the rise of the piano as a solo instrument, the growth of the symphony orchestra, and, after the mid-19th century, the secular organ recital. Equally influential, especially from the end of the 19th century onwards, was the impact of new technologies upon organ construction.

1. The Classical period, 1750–1830. 2. The Romantic period, 1830–1920. 3. Extremism and eclecticism in the 20th century.

1. The Classical period, 1750–1830. For much of the second half of the 18th century German organ music lived in the shadow of J.S. Bach, as did that in France and England. Among the more prominent German composers were Bach's sons C.P.E. and W.F. Bach, and certain of his pupils, such as J.L. Krebs and J.C. Kittel, as well as members of the so-called Bach circle, including J.P. Kirnberger, J.F. Agricola, G.A. Sorge, and the theorist F.W. Marpurg. C.P.E. Bach and Krebs in particular wrote many free and chorale-based works strongly tinged with the galant style of the period, and, although overshadowed by his better-known ensemble music, C.P.E. Bach's organ music is often adventurous.

It is largely in the functional music – the chorale preludes – that the influence of the earlier period is most strongly felt. Those of W.F. Bach are mostly in contrapuntal form, and those of J.P. and J.C. Kellner are also quite retrospective in style. Even the short chorale preludes in Kittel's Der angehende praktische Organist (1801–8) are quite conservative, although his Grosse Präludien are less so. Krebs, in contrast, could exploit affekt quite effectively in his chorale preludes, as the 'sobbing' motifs in his Ach Gott! erhör mein Seufzen attest; and J.C. Oley demonstrated, in his few surviving chorale preludes, that he was a master of the galant style. Krebs, W.F. Bach and others also wrote fairly straightforward, larger fugal works. But for organ works approaching the Mannheim style of the symphonists, one must look to C.P.E. Bach's italianate Preludio e sei sonate per organo (1790), which display an almost complete break with the idiom of his father. His brother, J.C. Bach also wrote some sonatas for organ, as well as three organ concertos in the Classical style, doubtless inspired by the popularity of the genre in post-Handelian England.

The Lutheran aesthetic, of which Bach was a part, had much less influence on Catholic southern Germany and its neighbours Austria, Switzerland, Bohemia and Moravia. Here organs were generally of simpler design, with fewer reeds and often only rudimentary pedal divisions. Free forms, influenced by Froberger and the Italians, as well as by J.C.F. Fischer and Georg and Gottlieb Muffat, were the norm: fairly short toccatas, versets and fughettas, presumably intended for use in the Mass, are found in abundance in the organ works of J.E. Eberlin, J.G. Albrechtsberger and Czechs such as Josef Seger, all of whom also wrote some substantial larger-scale works.

The best-known Classical composers from this region are the two Haydns and Mozart. While Michael Haydn wrote some short liturgical pieces, the main contributions of Joseph Haydn and Mozart are in the form of concerted works (Haydn's organ concertos, Mozart's 'Epistle' sonatas) and, curiously, music for mechanical instruments. Haydn's Flötenuhrstücke are pleasing miniatures written for tiny organs in Count Esterházy's musical clocks, but Mozart's fantasias (K594 and 608), composed for a larger mechanical instrument of greater compass and resources, have been successfully transcribed for performance on a normal keyed organ, and are among the most frequently performed organ works of the Classical period.

In England the music of Handel was more influential during the second half of the 18th century than that of Bach. Although Handel wrote very little music specifically for organ, movements from his chamber music and oratorios were freely transcribed for the organ, and composers such as Maurice Greene and Charles Wesley consciously imitated his style. Handel was unquestionably the inspiration for the many organ concertos written during the second half of the 18th century (and into the early 19th) by John Stanley, Thomas Arne, Charles Avison, Thomas Chilcot, Philip Hayes, William Felton and Charles and Samuel Wesley.

The voluntary, which had developed in the Restoration period as a simple one-or two-movement piece, usually consisting of a slow movement followed by either a canzona-like fugue or a cornet or reed stop solo, had, by Stanley's time, evolved into a sonata-like multi-partite form, often consisting of between three and five movements of varying styles. William Walond, T.S. Dupuis, William Russell and others continued to develop the form toward a more Classical style, but were in some ways restricted by the instrument, whose basic stop-list had varied little since the early 18th century, and which did not possess pedals until very late in the 18th century, and then only in larger instruments. Around 1800 new movements such as airs and minuets began to appear in the voluntary, and composers began to abandon the old name in favour of 'sonata' or even 'concerto'. But the influence of older composers was still strong, and as late as about 1815 Matthew Camidge noted on the title-page of his Six Concertos (op.13) that 'The Author in this Work has Endeavoured to imitate the particular Style of Music which has been so long Admired namely that of Handel & Corelli'.

In France political upheavals played a part in stunting musical development in this period and, as in England, the tonal design of the organ had become very standardized. While there are differences between the organ described in Dom Bédos de Celles' L'art du facteur d'orgues (1766–78) and those built a century earlier, they are subtle and slight. F.H. Clicquot's splendid organ in Poitiers Cathedral, completed virtually on the eve of the French Revolution, coincided with a transitional period in music. By this time French organ music was already beset with the secularisms so deplored by Charles Burney in The Present State of Music in France and Italy (1771), such as the minuets, jigs and 'hunting pieces' that he heard C.B. Balbastre improvise between verses of the Magnificat. Yet Balbastre also composed some noëls of undeniable charm. Other composers from the second half of the 18th century who made important contributions include Michel Corrette, whose Premier livre d'orgue contains liturgical music in traditional idiom, and Guillaume Lasceux, another conservative whose liturgical works and noëls nonetheless have a hint of the galant about them. Perhaps one of the most interesting figures of the post-Revolutionary period was A.P.F. Boëly, active throughout the first half of the 19th century. Like Samuel Wesley in England, he was an admirer of Bach and something of an eccentric; he wrote fugues, liturgical pieces and noëls that are traditional in style, yet also composed other works in what might be called a 'proto-Romantic' idiom.

In Italy and the Iberian countries, although organs changed very little in tonal or mechanical appointments from the 17th century until nearly the mid-19th century, writing for the instrument was quite up-to-date in the Classical period, especially in Spain, resembling more the harpischord and piano music of the era. This paradox is perhaps best illustrated by Antonio Soler, a pupil of Domenico Scarlatti, who, despite having taken holy orders, left no liturgical organ music, but wrote several sonatas and some delightful concertos for two organs. The liturgical music of his contemporary Jose Lidón was in a more conservative idiom. In Italy, as in Spain, a contemporary keyboard style prevailed in the liturgical compositions of G.B. Martini, Galuppi and many lesser-known late 18th- and early 19th-century writers. Giuseppe Gherardeschi, for example, although he wrote much straightforward liturgical music, also provides an example of the secular encroachments on organ music in his Sonata per organo a guisa di banda militare che suona una marcia.

The period around 1800 marked the end of an era for the organ and its music throughout Europe. Organ design had virtually ceased to evolve, and much of the music written was conservative and retrospective in nature. Indeed, this appears to have been what certain church authorities preferred. The roots of the so-called Bach tradition can be traced to this period, and some early 19th-century organist-composers such as J.C.H. Rinck, a pupil of Bach's pupil Kittel, took pride in a musical pedigree that linked them to Bach himself, as did Rinck's pupil A.F. Hesse and Hesse's pupil J.N. Lemmens.

As is perhaps typical of such a period, there were several attempts around 1800 to codify various practices in organ building, registration and performance. One of the earliest such works to appear in German was Jakob Adlung's Musica mechanica organoedi (1768). Dom Bédos de Celles' treatise on French organ building was soon followed by F.-H. Clicquot's in 1789 and Lasceux's on performance and registration, written in 1809 but apparently never published. During the 1790s the English composers Francis Linley, Jonas Blewitt and John Marsh published detailed tables of registrations, versions of which were copied in England and North America well into the 19th century. These writings have become valuable resources for understanding the practices of the 18th century soon to be swept away in the early 19th century.

2. The Romantic period, 1830–1920. By the beginning of the 19th century the organ and its music had lost the pride of place they held during the Baroque period, when almost every composer played and wrote for the organ. After the end of the 18th century many major composers, though capable of playing the organ, wrote nothing of any importance for it: Beethoven composed a few clock pieces and student fugues and Rossini some little organ pieces, but these are not in the same class as the rest of their output; and while Chopin apparently played an organ improvisation at the funeral of the tenor Adolphe Nourrit in 1839, he displayed no interest in writing for the instrument.

At issue was the matter of expression. At a time when composers such as Berlioz were driving the orchestra to ever greater extremes of expression, when the fortepiano, whose name signifies its range of expression, was still relatively new, and when grand opera, which explored the most expressive of all instruments, the human voice, was so popular, the organ remained an instrument of block dynamics. In the first decade or so of the 19th century expressiveness in the organ was limited to a small, rudimentary and rather ineffectual Swell box. This was found mostly in England and France, and occasionally in southern Germany and Spain, but composers made little significant use of it.

Of the major composers active in Germany in the first half of the 19th century, only Mendelssohn wrote any substantial organ compositions. Despite his love of Bach's music and the block-dynamic structure of most of the organs he knew in Germany, his organ works, including those in the traditional prelude-and-fugue form, are infused with a Romantic aesthetic. Mendelssohn's knowledge of the instrument allowed him to create expressive effects without the aid of a Swell box, often by simple manipulation of texture and pitch, as in the closing bars of his Sonata I. Mendelssohn's popular Six Sonatas were first published in London in 1845 by Coventry and Hollier, who had asked him to write some voluntaries; Mendelssohn claimed not to know what the term meant, suggesting that they be called sonatas instead. Recent research has shown that some of the movements were in fact written earlier and revised for inclusion in the sonatas.

Although generally of lesser stature than Mendelssohn, other notable German organ composers in this period include A.W. Bach (one of Mendelssohn's mentors), A.G. Ritter, M.G. Fischer, J.G. Töpfer, J.C.H. Rinck and A.F. Hesse. Rinck and Hesse in particular composed a considerable corpus of organ music in a variety of forms, and Rinck's influence spread far beyond Germany with the publication of a translation of his Practical Organ School in London (1820) and later in New York. An important element in Rinck's organ technique was a smooth legato, with 'not the least opening or space' between adjacent notes.

Perhaps the most interesting development in France in the early 19th century was the introduction, about 1812, of the reed organ or orgue expressif; its use was espoused by Berlioz and Rossini. After 1830 a new generation of performer-composers began to emerge including, most notably, L.J.A. Lefébure-Wély, who established his reputation at St Roch in Paris with his bombastic 'thunderstorm' improvisations. This sort of performance was not limited to France: Lemmens also composed a popular 'storm' piece, and crowds flocked to hear Jacques Vogt's performances to large audiences of 'thunderstorms' on the great organ of Freiburg Cathedral, which were described by an unimpressed George Sand as depicting 'rain, wind, hail, distant cries, dogs in distress, travellers praying, disaster in the chalet, whimperings of frightened children, bells of lost cattle, crash of thunder, creakings of the fir trees, devastation of the potato crop'.

In 1829 F.J. Fétis predicted that the 'expressive organ', whether pipe or reed, would become the basis of a musical revolution. He was proved correct in 1833, when Aristide Cavaillé-Coll secured the contract to build the organ for the abbey of St Denis in Paris, which, with its substantial full-compass Récit expressif, took a bold step toward that revolution, and other builders, such as Louis Callinet and John Abbey, soon followed suit. Organists and composers at this time were divided between the serious and rather retrospective (Boëly, Benoist) and those who favoured a light and popular style (Lefébure-Wély, Fessy) typified by works such as Lefébure-Wély's Bolero de concert. By the mid-19th century the showpieces of the popular camp had gained the ascendancy and were being used to urge builders to provide greater expressiveness and more imitative stops.

In England during the 1830s and 40s visiting continental musicians such as Mendelssohn and Sigismund Neukomm helped to create an audience for organ recitals, while, at the same time, an interest in organs for secular public places was developing. In 1833 William Hill began constructing a large instrument in Birmingham Town Hall that was soon to have an impact on other large organs in town halls and cathedrals. Like its counterpart at St Denis, it contained a large expressive division and a number of reed stops; the organist H.J. Gauntlett was closely involved in its design. In England, as on the Continent, much of what passed for organ music in early recitals consisted of transcriptions, thunderstorm representations and improvisations on well-known melodies. In 1843 S.S. Wesley is said to have improvised for 40 minutes on Handel's 'O! Ruddier than the cherry', culminating in a statement played upon the Grand Ophicleide, a loud reed stop that had recently been added to the Birmingham organ.

In England, France and Germany the development of a more expressive and imitative organ and the creation of an idiomatic Romantic organ repertory were closely linked. In Belgium, closely linked to the French movement, perhaps the most influential figure was J.N. Lemmens, a pupil of Hesse and a teacher of Widor and Alexandre Guilmant, and a self-proclaimed transmitter of the 'Bach tradition'. Organ building in the Netherlands, Scandinavia, Iberia and Italy remained conservative for a time, and there was little significant compositional activity, although in Italy a popular type of improvisation flourished and flamboyant composers such as Padré Davide emulated the style of Lefébure-Wély.

Romantic organ composition began to mature in the mid-19th century, as composers of greater importance were drawn to the developing instrument. Although Friedrich Ladegast's organ in Merseburg Cathedral, the largest in Germany when it was built in 1855, had no expressive division, it did have many imitative stops and some registrational aids; Liszt composed and performed his Prelude and Fugue on B–A–C–H for its inauguration. At the same time both Schumann and Brahms became interested in the organ: Schumann composed his Six Fugues on B–A–C–H in 1845, and Brahms his preludes and fugues in A minor and G minor in 1856, followed by the chorale prelude and fugue on 'O Traurigkeit, O Herzeleid' and a fugue in A♭ minor, not published until the 1880s. While Liszt went on to compose other organ works, Schumann's only other works suited to the organ were actually written for pedal-piano, and Brahms did not turn to organ composition again until the year of his death, when he prepared for publication his 11 Chorale Preludes (op.122).

In Paris, organ composition began to develop more seriously with the works of César Franck. In 1854, along with Lemmens and Edouard Batiste, he took part in the inauguration of the new Ducroquet organ in St Eustache, each playing some of his own music. In 1857 Saint-Saëns performed his own Fantaisie on the rebuilt organ in St Merry, and in the same year Franck was appointed organist of Ste Clotilde, where the splendid new Cavaillé-Coll organ became the inspiration for some of the most enduring organ works of the mature Romantic period, beginning with his Six pièces (1856–64) and culminating in the Trois chorals (1892).

In England W.T. Best, renowned as a recitalist, was appointed organist of St George's Hall, Liverpool, in 1855. Although not, perhaps, of the stature of some of the continental composers, Best, along with the cathedral organist S.S. Wesley and the London organist Henry Smart, was part of a movement that produced some substantial organ works in the mid-19th century, including Wesley's Choral Song and Best's virtuoso Introduction, Four Variations and Finale on 'God Save the Queen', frequently performed at the opening of town hall organs from Liverpool to Sydney.

The driving force behind much organ composition in the second half of the 19th century was the secular organ recital. The substantial and fully developed Romantic organ, with at least one expressive division and a broad selection of colour and imitative stops, was an essential feature of the church, cathedral and concert hall. Shorter utilitarian pieces for church use, often of some merit and charm, continued to be written, but the major composers, especially those who were themselves organists clearly put their best efforts into their larger works. Liszt's fantasy and fugue on 'Ad nos, ad salutarem undam' (1850) is a work of massive proportions, as is the sonata on the 94th Psalm by his pupil Julius Reubke. The title of Franck's Grand pièce symphonique (1860) indicates the direction in which organ composition was moving, breaking the ground for the ten Symphonies of Widor, the large-scale sonatas of J.G. Rheinberger and Guilmant, and the extended chorale fantasias of Reger. Works such as these helped to re-establish the organ as a legitimate medium for mainstream music in this period, and to create a secular audience for it.

In America no organ music of significance was composed until the second half of the 19th century. In 1863 a large Walcker organ was installed in Boston Music Hall; other domestically built concert hall organs followed in New York, Cincinnati, Chicago and elsewhere, and organ recitals soon became an established part of American musical life. Young composer-performers such as Dudley Buck, J.K. Paine and Eugene Thayer, who had spent time studying in Europe (mainly in Germany), published many substantial organ works, as did the second generation of students, including G.W. Chadwick, Clarence Eddy, Horatio Parker, Arthur Foote and G.E. Whiting, and many lesser figures such as H.M. Dunham and W.H. Clarke. Their organ works often took the form of concert variations on popular hymns and songs, or grand sonatas, and if these composers sometimes leant too heavily on sweet chromaticism or blustery bombast, they were also capable of producing well-crafted fugues and canons. Despite the fact that their work falls short of that of Franck, Widor, Rheinberger or Reger, it nonetheless exudes a naively exuberant charm.

Towards the end of the 19th century, the infinitely expressive orchestra began to exert an ever greater influence upon organ design and composition. Franck praised this quality in his Ste Clotilde instrument, which he described as 'an orchestra'. Widor stated that 'the modern organ is essentially symphonic', but in his Technique de l'orchestre moderne (1904) warned that the organ's expressiveness must be employed 'with conscientious reserve and artistic feeling; otherwise we shall ignore the essential characteristics of the instrument and convert it into a pseudo-orchestra'. His advice was heeded more in France than elsewhere, with the result that idiomatic organ music, albeit highly expressive and often cast in symphonically inspired forms, continued to be written there well into the 20th century, while a 'pseudo-orchestral' style developed in other countries.

In Germany organs of great size and ponderous sonority were being built by the end of the 19th century, and builders including Walcker, Sauer and Schulze introduced curiosities such as free reeds and stops of excessively wide or narrow scale. Consoles became more cumbersome (Walcker built at least five with four manuals and two pedalboards), and while French, English and American organs remained relatively simple mechanically until very late in the century, still employing slider chests and forms of 'Barker machine' assistance even in large organs, the Germans actively experimented with individual pipe-valve soundboard designs and pneumatically operated action components.

The composer who wrote most prolifically and idiomatically for these instruments was Max Reger. His massive chorale fantasias, sonatas and other large-scale works were meticulously crafted to exploit to the fullest the colourful and expressive resources of a large German Romantic organ. His friend and champion, the virtuoso organist Karl Straube, stated that 'the sole aim of his adagissimi, vivacissimi, molto agitato, più molto agitato (quasi allegro vivace), with the whole dynamic range from pppp to ffff, was a soul-moving performance'. In contrast, the well-wrought sonatas of Rheinberger are expressive in a more restrained and less passionate way, perhaps because he wrote for an organ with no Swell, and had to achieve expressive effects in the old way, by adding and subtracting stops. A different approach again is seen in the work of Sigfrid Karg-Elert, who confined himself mainly to writing small-scale but expressive character-pieces, more appreciated in English-speaking countries than in Germany.

While France and Germany dominated organ music around 1900, the contributions of other countries must not be overlooked. In England C.H.H. Parry, C.V. Stanford and Elgar made significant contributions, and Elgar's Sonata in G (1895) is one of the most notable works of the period. Other composers of importance included Niels Gade in Denmark, Joseph Jongen in Belgium and M.E. Bossi, a noted organist and prolific composer who probably more than any other may be credited with bringing Italian Romantic organ music to full flower.

3. Extremism and eclecticism in the 20th century. Perhaps the greatest influence on organ music in the opening decades of the 20th century was the technological development that revolutionized the instrument. Mechanical blowing and electrically and pneumatically operated key and stop actions effectively removed any remaining limitations on the size of an organ or the location of its components. These developments also allowed individual stops to be extended and lent to different divisions and at more than one pitch. Registration aids such as easily adjustable combination pistons allowed greater flexibility, and the effectiveness and number of expression boxes was increased. The German love of very large organs received new impetus, resulting in instruments such as the five-manual, 164-stop organ built by Walcker in 1912 for the Michaeliskirche in Hamburg. In America, too, huge instruments were built not only for concert halls but also for sites such as the Grand Court of Wanamaker's Department Store in Philadelphia and were heard frequently by large audiences.

Composers and performers everywhere inherited from the previous period a fondness for the orchestral repertory and the symphonic style, and found the new organs much to their liking. In France, however, the strongly Parisian-influenced Romantic school of composition evolved gracefully into the 20th century as teachers passed the aesthetic on to their students. Franck counted among his pupils Gabriel Pierné, d'Indy, J.G. Ropartz, Louis Vierne, Charles Tournemire and Alexandre-Samuel Rousseau; Widor, a fellow student of Lemmens and Franck's successor at the Paris Conservatoire, taught Marcel Dupré, Vierne, Milhaud and other important figures of the first half of the 20th century, as did his successor Guilmant, whose pupils included Bonnet and Duruflé.

The output of this pre-World War II French generation was prodigious and of an extremely high quality, often expressive and emotional, but refined and kept from excesses by the constraints of strict conservatory training and the continuing influence of the late Romantic organs of Cavaillé-Coll and Mutin. Influential, too, was the strong tradition of elaborate improvisation: works such as Dupré's Le chemin de la croix (1931–2) originated as improvisations, while Tournemire's impressive Victimae paschali was transcribed by Duruflé from a recorded improvisation. Dupré in particular stands out as a performer, teacher and composer, counting among his pupils Jehan and Marie-Claire Alain, Jeanne Demessieux, André Fleury, Jean Langlais and Messiaen. While composing and performing in the secular world, all these musicians, like their predecessors, held church positions and never lost contact with the church and its traditions. Plainchant (the basis of works such as Tournemire's L'orgue mystique, 1927–32) and the cycles of the liturgical year are strong threads running throughout this repertory, and Dupré's Variations sur un noël (1922) continues a tradition dating from the Baroque period.

There was no comparable school in Germany after the death of Reger in 1916, nor any serious continuation of the tradition of larger-scale works. Composers such as Max Drischner and Heinrich Kaminski produced small-scale works of merit, Günter Raphael wrote substantial works in many forms, including concerted pieces, and Hindemith wrote three organ sonatas of lasting value (1937–40). In Austria important composers included Franz Schmidt, a pupil of Bruckner who composed a number of works in traditional forms; J.N. David, a prolific writer of chorale-based works who also composed some large-scale pieces as well as works for organ and orchestra; and Schoenberg, whose only significant organ work is the Variations on a Recitative (1941), which broke new ground tonally and stylistically. In Italy, composers such as Ravanello, Respighi, Melchiorre Mauro-Cottone, Raffaele Manari and Casella continued in the late Romantic tradition of Bossi.

Although the full symphonic style of organ building and playing originated in Britain, it flourished in the USA and Canada. Two of its strongest exponents, the organ builder Robert Hope-Jones and the organist-composer E.H. Lemare, were native Britons who enjoyed their greatest success in the USA. Hope-Jones's engineering expertise and innovative tonal ideas resulted in the 'unit orchestra', later transformed into the 'Mighty Wurlitzer' cinema organ used to accompany silent films. More mainstream (in that they were largely found in churches and concert halls), but equally innovative, were the symphonic-style organs of the Skinner, Austin and Aeolian firms, with their large string divisions and many imitative reed and flute colours. Aeolian and the German firm Welte excelled in building self-playing symphonic-style organs, which by the 1920s had become indispensable status symbols in the homes of the wealthy, and which were indirectly responsible for preserving the playing of many notable organists. One such virtuoso, as surviving player-organ rolls attest, was Clarence Eddy, the first major American organist to tour Europe. Transcriptions of orchestral and operatic music had been popular for over half a century, but the large early 20th-century American organs provided the ideal medium for such music. In 1915 Lemare, then organist of St George's Hall, Liverpool, was engaged to perform at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco; shortly after he moved permanently to the USA, where he held several posts as municipal organist. He not only excelled in arranging and playing transcriptions of fiendish difficulty, but was a prolific composer who effectively exploited the symphonic organ; his Study in Accents is an exercise in the use of the expression boxes. He is remembered today mainly for his sentimental Andantino in D♭, however, best known in its adaptation as the foxtrot song 'Moonlight and Roses'. In his memoirs he recalled his 'feeling of revulsion' the first time he was 'forced to listen to this degradation' of his composition.

Other trends tempered American music in the pre-war period, however. Older composers such as J.H. Rogers and H.R. Shelley continued to write in a conservative style derived from their 19th-century mentors, and others such as Harry Alexander Matthews, Harvey Gaul, Garth Edmundsen, Joseph Clokey, Seth Bingham, Clarence Dickinson, Powell Weaver, Everett Titcomb and Eric Delamarter produced great quantities of character-pieces for both church and recital use. T. Tertius Noble, organist of York Minster from 1898 to 1912, moved to New York in 1913, where he established the tradition of English liturgical music at St Thomas and wrote a number of organ works, most of them for church use, although his Introduction and Passacaglia (1934) became popular as a recital piece. Similarly, Healey Willan moved from England to Toronto, where he dominated Canadian church music for nearly half a century and produced a corpus of organ music that paralleled Noble's. Another influential immigrant was Pietro Alessandro Yon, who came to New York from Rome in 1921 and composed both church and recital pieces, the best known of which is his Christmas pastorale, Gesù bambino (1917).

In England perhaps the most notable composer of organ music in this period was Vaughan Williams, although his output was small. Britten wrote even less for the organ, but Herbert Howells, in addition to his two sets of Psalm Preludes, written between 1915 and 1939, wrote several large-scale rhapsodies and sonatas. Less profound but quintessentially British are the well crafted hymn-preludes and character-pieces of Percy Whitlock. Other important British organ composers of the early and mid-20th century include Frank Bridge, Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, Alfred Hollins, E.C. Bairstow, George Oldroyd, H.D. Statham, Robin Milford and Harold Darke.

During the second quarter of the 20th century both old and new influences from mainstream music began to be felt in organ composition, probably at least partly in reaction to the narrowing-down of so much composition and performance to the symphonic style. Earlier in the century F.A. Guilmant had published his editions of 17th- and 18th-century French organ music, and Albert Schweitzer and others had called for a return to the tonal concepts of the Baroque organ. In the 1920s and 30s a renewed interest in Bach led to well attended series of recitals of his complete organ works, performed by distinguished organists such as Dupré, E. Power Biggs and Lynnwood Farnam. Farnam also introduced into his recitals transcriptions derived from Renaissance and Baroque sources. Composers experimented with the adaptation of older forms and devices, resulting in such works as Marcel Dupré's Le tombeau de Titelouze (1942–3), Howells's Master Tallis's Testament (1940) and Seth Bingham's Baroques, Suite (1943).

This 'neo-Baroque' movement was most pronounced in Germany, where some of its manifestations could be perceived as stridently anti-Romantic. Early organs were studied, and attempts were made to reproduce their salient characteristics from as early as the 1920s. An important group of composers emerged from this movement, writing lean, angular, block-dynamic works in the forms of earlier centuries, but tinged with 20th-century tonal and rhythmic devices. Among the most influential advocates of this style were Ernst Pepping, Helmut Walcha, Hermann Schroeder and Hugo Distler, whose chorale-based works still enjoy considerable popularity among church musicians. Helmut Bornefeld, Joseph Ahrens, Siegfried Reda and Hans Friedrich Micheelsen are among those who wrote larger works influenced by the neo-Baroque movement. As the movement spread to the Netherlands and Scandinavia, examples of the style are found by composers such as Marius Monnikendam, Willem Mudde and Jan Zwart in the Netherlands, Flor Peeters in Belgium, Carl Nielsen and Finn Viderø in Denmark, and Ludvig Nielsen in Norway. Music in England, France and southern Europe was less affected by it, and its chief advocates in America were immigrants such as Ludwig Lenel, Jan Bender, Walter Buszin and Paul Bunjes.

At the same time the first experiments with a more modernist style were beginning. One of its most important manifestations is in the work of Messiaen, who skilfully wove into the expressive, Parisian liturgical style elements of atonality, polyrhythms, Middle Eastern music and, as in his Chants d'oiseaux (1951), birdcalls. The American Leo Sowerby similarly wrote both sacred and secular music, ranging from straightforward hymn settings and romantic character-pieces such as Comes Autumn Time (1916) to his angular Symphony in G (1930). Among the better-known American modernists writing organ music in the pre-war period were Sessions, Copland, Howard Hanson, W.G. Still, Virgil Thomson, Henry Cowell, Roy Harris, Robert Bennett, Castelnuovo-Tedesco and Piston, whose Chromatic Study on the Name of Bach (1940) employs pure serial technique.

After World War II came a period of rich cross-fertilization: European organists emigrated to America, Americans went to Europe to study, and, freed from wartime restrictions on travel, performers of many nationalities gave concerts throughout the world. The postwar period saw both a resurgence of neo-Baroque dogmatism and an increase in aleatory music, perhaps the best known example being Ligeti's Volumina (1961–2), which relied heavily on effects such as turning on the blower while holding down the keys and drawing and retiring stops while leaning randomly on many keys. The combination of organ and pre-recorded electronic sounds also had a brief vogue during the 1960s. William Bolcom's Black Host for organ, tape and percussion (1967) was one of the more successful efforts; Daniel Pinkham, Richard Felciano, Mauricio Kagel, Henk Badings and others also experimented with this medium. Some composers, such as Bengt Hambraeus, continued to work in the serial style, and its influence is also felt in such pieces as Vincent Persichetti's Shimah b'koli (1962) and Petr Eben's Musica dominicalis (1958), both of which became staples of the concert repertory. An unabashed neo-Romanticism suffused the work of composers such as Richard Purvis and Everett Titcomb in America and Eric Thiman and Alec Rowley in England; their music was chiefly popular among church organists. During the last decades of the 20th century this stylistic pluralism became less pronounced, coinciding with a renewal of interest in a more eclectic type of organ design. In little more than half a century the pendulum of taste had swung from the lush and bottom-heavy symphonic organ to the strident and top-heavy neo-Baroque style. In between it had passed through a significant attempt at a multi-purpose tonal scheme, and by the late 1970s, bolstered by the serious study of early organs and the performance practice of all periods, a more historically informed eclectic organ began to emerge. With it came a postmodern style of organ music, less given to extremes and more concerned with the true idiom of the organ.

Experimentation continued, but while many composers of the late 20th century wrote important works for organ with other instruments, there was a decline of interest in electronic effects, alternative notation and extra-musical effects in organ composition. Anton Heiller successfully blended Romanticism and Modernism in works such as his popular Tanz-Toccata (1970), while Messiaen refined his esoteric musical language in the Livre du St Sacrament (1985). Langlais's pupil Naji Hakim continued the French modernist tradition with major works such as Hommage à Igor Stravinsky (1988), while Guillou worked in a more improvisational style. Younger composers such as William Albright and Bolcom successfully blended jazz and blues elements into their music during the 1980s and 90s. In England Kenneth Leighton, Jennifer Bate, Peter Hurford, William Mathias and others created substantial works in their own postmodern style, as did Americans such as Daniel Pinkham, Ned Rorem, Emma Lou Diemer, Dan Locklair and Clavin Hampton, who had equal success with both large and small forms. Significant schools of organ composition also began to emerge in eastern Europe, Latin America, Asia, Australia and New Zealand.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GENERAL REFERENCE

FrotscherG; La MusicaE ('Organo'; L.F. Tagliavini); MGG1 ('Orgelmusik'; F.W. Riedel, W. Apel and T.-M. Langner); MGG2 ('Orgelmusik'; F.W. Riedel, W. Apel/M. Zywietz, H. Schauerter Maubouet)

Musica Sacra: Vollständiges Verzeichnis aller seit dem Jahre 1750–1867 gedruckt erschienener Compositionen für die Orgel, Lehrbücher für die Orgel ... usw (Erfurt, 1867)

D. Buck: The Influence of the Organ in History (London, 1882, 2/1911)

T. Forchhammer and B. Kothe: Führer durch die Orgel-Literatur (Leipzig, 1890, 3/1931)

H.C. Lahee: The Organ and its Masters (Boston, 1903/R, 2/1927)

L. Hartmann: Die Orgel: gemeinverständliche Darstellung des Orgelbaus und Orgelspiels (Leipzig, 2/1904, 3/1921)

C.F.A. Williams: The Story of Organ Music (London, 1905/R, 2/1916)

C.W. Pearce: The Organist's Directory ... with a Full List of Voluntaries (London, 1908)

H.H. Statham: The Organ and its Position in Musical Art (London, 1909)

H. Grace: The Complete Organist (London, 1920/R)

F. Sauer: Handbuch der Orgel-Literatur: ein Wegweiser für Organisten (Vienna, 1924)

D.E. Berg: The Organ: Composers and Literature (New York, 1927)

H. Westerby: The Complete Organ Recitalist: British and American (London and New York, 1927)

C.M. Widor: L'orgue moderne (Paris, 1928)

K.G. Fellerer: Orgel und Orgelmusik: ihre Geschichte (Augsburg, 1929)

C.F. Waters: The Growth of Organ Music (London, 1931, enlarged 2/1957)

B. Weigl: Handbuch der Orgelliteratur (Leipzig, 1931)

H. Westerby: The Complete Organ Recitalist: International Repertoire Guide to Foreign, British, and American Works (London, 1933)

A.C. Delacour De Brisay: The Organ and its Music (London, 1934)

H. Klotz: Das Buch von der Orgel (Kassel, 1938, 9/1979; Eng. trans., 1969)
G.D. Cunningham: 'The History and Development of Organ Music', MT, lxxix (1938), 685–7, 769–70, 848–9, 924–5; lxxx (1939), 50, 205–6, 282–3, 366–7 [series of articles]
F. Münger: Choralbearbeitungen für Orgel (Kassel, 1952)
G.A.C. de Graaf: Literatur over het orgel (Amsterdam, 1957)
V. Lukas: Orgelmusikführer (Stuttgart, 1963; Eng. trans., 1989, as A Guide to Organ Music)
C. Probst: Literatur für Kleinorgel (Zürich, 1964)
F. Jakob: Die Orgel: Orgelbau und Orgelspiel von der Antike bis zur Gegenwart (Berne, 1969, 3/1974)
E. Kraus: Orgeln und Orgelmusik: das Bild der Orgellandschaften (Regensburg, 1972)
G.S. Rowley: A Biographical Syllabus of the History of Organ Literature: the Nineteenth Century (Iowa City, IA, 1972)
C.R. Arnold: Organ Literature: a Comprehensive Survey (Metuchen, NJ, 1973, 3/1995)
C.R. Arnold: 'A Bird's-Eye View of Organ Composition since 1960', Music: the AGO and RCCO Magazine, ix (1975), 23–7
H. Lohmann: Handbuch der Orgelliteratur (Wiesbaden, 1975)
T.R. Nardone: Organ Music in Print (Philadelphia, 1975)
M. Kratzenstein: Survey of Organ Literature and Editions (Ames, IA, 1980)
E. Sollenberger: Organ Compositions of the 20th Century (Chapel Hill, NC, 1980)
A. Heinrich: Organ and Harpsichord Music by Women Composers: an Annotated Catalog (New York, 1991)
R. Judd, ed.: Aspects of Keyboard Music: Essays in Honour of Susi Jeans (Oxford, 1992)
A. Silbiger, ed.: Keyboard Music before 1700 (New York, 1995)

SELECTED SPECIALIST JOURNALS

Acta organologica (Berlin, 1967–)
Canadian Music Journal (Sackville, NB, later Toronto, 1956–62)
Choir and Organ (London, 1993–)
The Diapason (Chicago, 1909–)
JBIOS (Oxford, *c*1977–)
Music: the AGO Magazine (New York, 1967–) [from 1968 (no.10) Music: the AGO and RCCO Magazine, from 1979 The American Organist]
The Organ (1921–)
Organists Review (Southport, 1967–)
Organ Yearbook (Amsterdam, 1970–)
Het orgel (Rotterdam, 1886–)
Sydney Organ Journal (Sydney, 1970–)

SPECIFIC STUDIES

H. von Bülow: 'Alexander Winterberger und das moderne Orgelspiel', NZM, xlv (1856), 1–3; Eng. trans. in Dwight's Journal of Music, x (1856), 65–6
R.J. Voigtmann: 'Der Einfluss der neudeutschen Schule auf das Orgelspiel', NZM, lxv (1869), 30–31
H.H. Statham: 'Wanted: a Composer for the Organ', MT, xx (1879), 633–5
A.G. Ritter: Zur Geschichte des Orgelspiels, vornehmlich des deutschen, im 14. bis zum Anfange des 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1884/R)
O. Dienel: Die moderne Orgel: ihre Einrichtung, ihre Bedeutung für die Kirche und ihre Stellung zu J.S. Bachs Orgelmusik (Berlin, 1891)
F.-W. Donat: Christian Heinrich Rinck und die Orgelmusik seiner Zeit (Bad Oeynhausen, 1931)
N. Dufourcq: 'La pénétration en France de l'oeuvre d'orgue de J.S. Bach', ReM, no.131 (1932), 27–39
K.G. Fellerer: Studien zur Orgelmusik des ausgehenden 18. und frühen 19. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1932/R)
H. Kelletat: Zur Geschichte der deutschen Orgelmusik in der Frühklassik (Kassel, 1933)
H.-J. Wagner: Die Orgelmusik in Thüringen in der Zeit zwischen 1830 und 1860 (Berlin, 1937)
N. Dufourcq: 'Panorama de la musique d'orgue française au XXe siècle', ReM, nos.180–84 (1938), 369–76; nos.185–7 (1938), 35–44, 120–25; nos.188–91 (1939), 103–16
N. Dufourcq: La musique d'orgue française de Jehan Titelouze à Jehan Alain: les instruments, les artistes et les oeuvres, les formes et les styles (Paris, 1941, 2/1949)
M. Schneider: Die Orgelspieltechnik des frühen 19. Jahrhunderts in Deutschland, dargestellt an den Orgelschulen der Zeit (Regensburg, 1941/R)
H. Distler: 'Die Orgel unserer Zeit', Musica, i (1947), 147–53
C.E. Vogan: The French Organ School of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries (diss., U. of Michigan, 1948)
F. Peters: 'The Belgian Organ School', HMYB, vi (1949–50), 270–80
W. Sumner: 'The French Organ School', HMYB, vi (1949–50), 281–300
A. Kalkoff: Das Orgelschaffen Max Regers im Lichte der deutschen Orgelerneuerungsbewegung (Kassel, 1950)
H. Bornefeld: Orgelbau und neue Orgelmusik (Kassel, 1952)
R. Walter: 'Die zeitgenossische deutsche Orgelmusik', Melos, xx (1953), 37–40
H.J. Moser: 'Orgel und Orgelspiel', Die evangelische Kirchenmusik in Deutschland (Berlin, 1954), 418–54
W. Kolneder: 'Johann Nepomuk David und das Orgelschaffen in Österreich', ÖMz, xiii (1958), 262–5
W. Stockmeier: Die deutsche Orgelsonate der Gegenwart (diss., U. of Cologne, 1958)
'Organ Music of our Century', MT, cii (1961), 44–5, 175–8, 311–12, 723–5; ciii (1962), 184–5; civ (1963), 54–5, 208–9; cv (1964), 134–5, 924–6; cvi (1965), 374–5 [various authors]
P. Williams: English Organ Music and the English Organ under the First Four Georges (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1963)
R.J. Kremer: The Organ Sonata since 1845 (diss., Washington U., St Louis, MO, 1963)
B. Owen: 'American Organ Music and Playing, from 1700', Organ Institute Quarterly (1963), 12–15
P. Williams: 'J.S. Bach and English Organ Music, 1800–35', ML, xliv (1963), 140–51
R. Quoika: Die Orgelwelt um Anton Bruckner: Blicke in die Orgelgeschichte Alt-Österreichs (Ludwigsburg, 1966)
P. Williams: The European Organ 1450–1850 (London, 1966/R)
A. Haupt: 'Orgelkunst in Italien', Der Kirchenmusiker, xviii (1967), 241–5
D.C. Johns, P. Gehring and P.M. Young: 'A Survey of Contemporary Organ Music', Church Music [St Louis] (1967), no.2, pp.25–35
R.M. Rudd: Stylistic Trends in Contemporary Organ Music: a Formal and Stylistic Analysis of post World War II Works, 1945–1965 (diss., Louisiana State U., 1967)
Orgel und Orgelmusik heute: St Märgen 1968
F. Högner: 'Max Reger und die deutsche Orgelbewegung', Ars organi, xvi (1968), 1153–8
E. Routley: The Musical Wesleys (London, 1968/R)
S. Waumsley: The Organ Music of Oliver Messiaen (Paris, 1968/R)
F. Douglass: The Language of the Classical French Organ (New Haven, CT, 1969)
M. Weyer: Die deutsche Orgelsonate von Mendelssohn bis Reger (Regensburg, 1969)
A.J.G. Jones: A Survey of Organ Works Based on the Motive B–A–C–H (diss., U. of Texas, 1970)
O. Biba: 'The Unknown Organ Music of Austria', The Diapason, lxii/2 (1970–71), 10
F. Peeters and M.A. Vente: Die orgelkunst in de Nederlanden van de 16de tot de 18de eeuw (Antwerp, 1971)
H. Busch: 'Max Reger und die Orgel seiner Zeit', Musik und Kirche, xliii (1973), 63–73
J. Caldwell: English Keyboard Music before the Nineteenth Century (Oxford, 1973)
F. Routh: Early English Organ Music from the Middle Ages to 1837 (London, 1973)
P. Schwarz: Studien zur Orgelmusik Franz Liszts: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Orgelkomposition im 19. Jahrhundert (Munich, 1973)
B.D. Wye: 'Gregorian Influences in French Organ Music before the Motu Proprio', JAMS, xxvii (1974), 1–24
R.A. Kotek: The French Organ Mass in the 20th Century (diss., U. of Illinois, 1974)
C. Johnson: 20th-Century Solo Organ Music which is Indeterminate with Respect to Performance (diss., Northwestern U., 1975)
H. Mayer: 'Avant-Garde Organ Music in the Netherlands', Key Notes, ii (1975), 37
M. Sutter: 'Liszt and his Role in the Development of 19th Century Organ Music', Music: the AGO and RCCO Magazine, ix (1975), 35–9
G. Cantagrel and H. Halbreich: Le Livre d'or de l'orgue français (Paris, 1976)
M.-L. Jacquet: 'La musique d'orgue après Jehan Alain', ReM, no.316 (1978), 135
B. Owen: 'Fugues, Fantasia, and Variations', Journal of Church Music, (1979), 2–4, 46–8

G. de la Salle: 'L'Orgue Symphonique', ReM, no.326 (1979), 173
P. Williams: The Organ Music of Bach (Cambridge, 1980–84)
D. Fuller: 'Zenith and Nadir: the Organ versus its Music in Late 18th Century France', L'orgue à notre époque: Montreal 1981, 129–50
B. Hambraeus: 'Aristide Cavaillé-Coll, Charles-Marie Widor: the Organ and the Orchestra', ibid., 161–8
E.W. Hancock: 'Organ Music by Black Composers', American Organist, xv/1 (1981), 36–7
B. Owen: 'Brahms's "Eleven": Classical Organ Works in a Romantic Age', Journal of Church Music, xxv/9 (1983), 5–9
W. Noble: 'Canadian Organ Composition since 1945', American Organist, xviii/2 (1984), 50–53
J. Ropek: 'A Survey of Modern Organ Music in Czechoslovakia', Organists' Review, lxxii (1987), 97–101
P. Williams: Playing the Organ Works of Bach: some Case Studies (New York, 1987)
A. Armstrong: 'Alexandre Guilmant: American Tours and American Organs', The Tracker, xxxii (1989), 15–23
J. Dibble: 'Stanford and the Organ Recitals at Trinity College, Cambridge, 1872–1890', JBIOS, xviii (1994), 158–70
O. Ochse: Organists and Organ Playing in 19th-Century France and Belgium (Bloomington, IN, 1994)
C.S. Ripley: 'Organ Music by French Women Composers', American Organist, xxviii/11 (1994), 56–61
L. Archbold and W.J. Peterson: French Organ Music from the Revolution to Franck and Widor (Rochester, NY, 1995)
E. Kooiman: 'Jacques Lemmens, Charles-Marie Widor, and the French Bach Tradition', American Organist, xxix/3 (1995), 56–64
B.L. Leach: 'Organ Music by Israeli Composers: a Tradition of Diversity', The Diapason, lxxxvi/7 (1995), 12–13
M. Szoka: 'Current Streams in Polish Organ Music', The Diapason, lxxxvi/5 (1995), 11–13
A. Heiller: 'Orgelbouw en improvisatie', Het orgel, cxiii (1996), 11–14
M.T. Terry: 'African-American Organ Literature: a Selective Overview', The Diapason, lxxxvii/4 (1996), 14–17
C.S. Ripley: 'Concert Organ Music by Women Composers in the United States', American Organist, xxxi/2 (1997), 56–64
M. Murray: French Masters of the Organ (New Haven, CT, 1998)

THE ORGAN AND THE LITURGY

BlumeEK
W. Riley: Parochial Music Corrected: Containing Remarks on … the Use of Organs and the Performance of Organists (London, 1762)
F.W.T. Linke: Der rechte Gebrauch der Orgeln beym öffentlichen Gottesdienste (Altenburg, 1766)
D.G. Türk: Von den wichtigsten Pflichten eines Organisten (Halle, 1787/R, 2/1838)
F. Kessler: Der musikalische Kirchendienst (Iserlohn, 1832)
J.H. Göroldt: Die Orgel und deren zweckmässiger Gebrauch bei dem öffentlichen Gottesdienst (Quedlinburg, 1835)
R.S. Candlish: The Organ Question: For and Against the Use of the Organ in Public Worship (Edinburgh, 1856)
R.J. Voigtmann: Das neuere kirchliche Orgelspiel (Leipzig, 1870)
J.F. Bridge: Organ Accompaniment of the Choral Service (London, 1885)
F. Zimmer: Die Kirchenorgel und das kirchliche Orgelspiel (Gotha, 1891)
G. Rietschel: Die Aufgabe der Orgel im Gottesdienst bis in das 18. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1893/R)
W. Baumann: Das Orgelspiel im evangelischen Gottesdienst (Karlsruhe, 1915)
K.G. Fellerer: Beiträge zur Choralbegleitung und Choralverarbeitung in der Orgelmusik des ausgehenden 18. und beginnenden 19. Jahrhunderts (Strasbourg, 1932, 2/1980)
R. Lachmann: 'Das moderne Choralvorspiel als gottesdienstliche Gebrauchsmusik', Zeitschrift für Kirchenmusiker, xx (1938), 60
J.G. Mehl: Die Aufgabe der Orgel im Gottesdienst der lutherischen Kirche (Munich, 1938)
R. Haupt: Die Orgel im evangelischen Kultraum in Geschichte und Gegenwart (Northeim, 1954)
M. Blindow: Die Choralbegleitung des 18. Jahrhunderts in der evangelischen Kirche Deutschlands (Regensburg, 1957)
N. Danby: 'Organ Design for English Liturgy', JBIOS, i (1977), 57–9
A. Luff: 'The Liturgical Use of The Organ in English Worship', Ars et Musica in Liturgia: CelebratoryVolume Presented to Caspar Handers, ed. F. Brouwer and R.A. Leaver (Utrecht, 1993), 117–27

III. Piano music from c1750

The century after the death of J.S. Bach saw a dramatic rise in the popularity and prestige of the piano, both as a household instrument and as the vehicle for some of Western music's most enduring masterpieces. Although the principal contributions were made by relatively few composers, virtually all those active before World War I wrote music for or with piano.

1. The advent of the piano. 2. The Classical sonata. 3. Romanticism and the miniature. 4. The age of virtuosity. 5. 19th-century national trends. 6. The growth of pianism, 1900–1940. 7. The avant garde and after.

1. THE ADVENT OF THE PIANO. The dominance of the harpsichord was not broken overnight; indeed, not until the dawn of the 19th century did the newer instrument altogether vanquish its plectra-activated rival. As late as 1802, Beethoven's three keyboard sonatas of op.31, though clearly designated for the 'pianoforte' by their composer, were published in Nägeli's series Repertoire des clavecinistes. Conversely, in 1732 Lodovico Giustini had published sonatas designated specifically for the 'cimbalo di piano e forte'. Although it became evident shortly after J.S. Bach had played on Silbermann's improved models in 1747 that the future belonged ultimately to the piano, the two designs co-existed peacefully throughout the second half of the 18th century. In January 1777 Mozart composed the Concerto in E♭ K271 on commission for a French claveciniste (i.e. harpsichordist). He performed it himself on a 'wretched' fortepiano in Munich in October 1777; the following January his sister played it on a harpsichord in Salzburg. The differences between performances on these two opposed instruments were narrower than they might seem today. The early piano was housed in a frame largely identical to that of the harpsichord, with equally light stringing. The fortepiano offered new possibilities for gradations in volume, but its tone was still characterized by the rapid decay of the harpsichord's. In terms of sheer sound, a triple-strung French double from this period produced as much, if not more, volume than its double-strung rival.

Conservative French composers such as A.-L. Couperin (1727–89) and Jacques Duphly (1715–89) continued to cultivate a lavishly intricate style perfectly suited to the opulent double harpsichords made by the Flemish builder Taskin. In Italy, the birthplace of the piano, Platti, Galuppi and others wrote music equally suited to either harpsichord or piano. The same interchangeability – doubtless designed to encourage sales – prevailed among the Iberians (Soler, Seixas, Blasco de Nebra), the Germans and Bohemians (some in Germany or Austria, such as Neefe in Bonn or Kozeluch in Vienna; others abroad, such as Schober and Eckhardt in Paris or Hässler in Russia), and the English (Nares, Hook). C.P.E. Bach, arguably the greatest keyboard player and composer in the generation after his father's, expressed a preference in his Versuch of 1753 for the subtle gradations and Bebung of the clavichord over any of its more extrovert relatives. In spite of their general designation as 'Clavier-Sonaten', the series from the 1760s and 70s (often characterized as 'leichte' or 'pour l'usage des dames') were probably intended primarily for this most private of instruments. Along with the sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti, whose distribution turns out to have been far wider than was once believed, they exercised a considerable influence on the early sonatas of Haydn, who admitted: 'Anyone who knows me very well must realize that I owe a great deal to Emanuel, that I understood and studied him diligently'. Beginning in 1780 with C.P.E. Bach's second collection of Sonaten nebst einigen Rondos ... für Kenner und Liebhaber, the 'fortepiano' is specified, a designation that carried through to his sixth and final set in 1787. Their composer revelled most in the kinds of dramatic contrasts of range and register that the new instrument made possible. Simple dynamic contrasts, though not as concentrated, are already called for in the six 'cembalo' sonatas dedicated to the Duke of Württemberg and published in 1744; these, achieved by discreet changes in registration, are fully realizable only on a two-manual instrument. The more complex range of effects that saturates the 'Kenner und Liebhaber' series – encompassing pp to ff and numerous shades in between – was scarcely equalled before late Beethoven. They are best understood as a natural extension of the registration shifts from three decades earlier. Nevertheless, as late as 1788 C.P.E. Bach was able to compose a Double Concerto for harpsichord and fortepiano, W47, in which the writing for the solo instruments is essentially identical: the chief delight lies simply in the tonal contrasts between them.

The rapid, experiment-orientated evolution of keyboard instruments during this period was reflected in the musical styles that flourished. The inevitable breakdown in High Baroque continuity was not to be fully replaced by Classical phrase structure until the 1780s; hence composers embracing Empfindsamkeit had to content themselves with a series of small-scale dramatic effects whose overall impact was often less than the sum of its parts. A great many movements in C.P.E. Bach's output fulfilling the minimum requirements of sonata form are diluted by the remoteness of secondary modulations and a surfeit of thematic material; indeed, only a composer of his extraordinary inventiveness could maintain interest amid such stylistic upheaval. His older brother Wilhelm Friedemann, in some respects even more gifted than Emanuel, never took final leave of his father's style. In an eclectic production that included sonatas, fugues and polonaises (these last enjoyed a vogue in the 19th century), nowhere was the dilemma of composers after the mid-century portrayed more clearly. Their younger half-brother Johann Christian shunned the complexities of the north for the relaxed galant style acquired during his formative years in Italy. His two sets of keyboard sonatas, opp.5 and 17, are model specimens of music created for domestic consumption: facile (though not without occasional technical challenges), diatonic to a fault and highly polished. Between J.C. and C.P.E. Bach, virtually all the ingredients necessary for Viennese Classicism were present. Mozart seems to have acknowledged this when, although it was scarcely noticed in London, he mourned the death of J.C. Bach in 1782. About C.P.E. he is alleged to have said: 'He is the father, we are the children'. As late as 1809 Beethoven could write to Breitkopf & Härtel that 'I have only a few items from Emanuel Bach's keyboard works, yet some of them not only provide the real artist with great pleasure, but also serve as objects to be studied'.

2. THE CLASSICAL SONATA. Although the music of the sons of Bach is among the earliest to benefit from sympathetic performance on the fortepiano, it is doubtful that any of them ever enjoyed the opportunity of performing on instruments as reliable as those praised by Mozart when he visited Stein's workshop in 1777. Even more than the singing tone, the composer was impressed by the regularity and evenness of the action, with its deceptively simple escapement. Though eventually rendered obsolete by the steadily increasing size of concert halls throughout the 19th century, Stein's design was both perfectly engineered on its own terms and perfectly suited to the world that Mozart was about to enter. After exclaiming that K284/205*b* (with its surprisingly lengthy set of variations as a finale) 'sounds exquisite' on Stein's instrument, Mozart – further stimulated by the Mannheim style with its emphasis on contrast – set down in the next several weeks two sonatas (K309/284*b* and 311/284*c*) more dramatically expansive and brilliant than any of the half-dozen surviving examples composed previously. These were succeeded the following summer by the first of his two sonatas in the minor mode, K310/300*d*, a work of remarkable intensity and tautness. In the space of a few years, and in direct response to developments in instrument design, Mozart had succeeded in transforming the easy-going three-movement form inherited from J.C. Bach (whose sonatas he had arranged as keyboard concertos at the age of nine) into a vehicle for considerable display and elaborate working-out.

With his final break from the archbishop in May 1781 and the decision to take up permanent residence in Vienna, Mozart inaugurated a series of masterpieces for keyboard dominated by 17 remarkable concertos, in which virtuosity is blended with a superb sense of operatic pacing. Though fewer in number, the ten solo sonatas now known to have been created after the move to Vienna (portions of K330–32/300*h, i, k* may have been composed a few months earlier) afford a unified view of the composer's development. A few, such as the 'little keyboard sonata for beginners', K545, were designed to fulfil pedagogic needs, but the remainder encompass a broad spectrum of mature styles. The group of four sonatas K330–33/300*h, i, k*, 315*c* (traditionally ascribed to Mozart's Paris sojourn of 1778, but now known to date from between 1781 and 1784) demonstrate his sure handling of practically every Classical form: sonata, both with coda (K332 finale) and without (K333 first movement); theme and variations (K331 opening movement); binary (K331 Menuetto and Trio); ternary (K330 Andante); rondo-type (K331 finale) and sonata-rondo (K333 finale). The last-named of these, with its tutti–solo opposition and elaborate cadenzas, offers a prime example of cross-fertilization with the concertos Mozart was composing during the same period. His treatment of all these forms is rarely perfunctory; the coda to the finale of K332 incorporates a buffa theme presented in the exposition but slyly omitted from the recapitulation. The Alla turca of K331 adopts the thematic virtues of the straight rondo while employing an ingenious ABCBAB scheme to skirt its inherent structural squareness. The highly decorated version of the Adagio of K332 published by Artaria in 1784 (and presumably originating with Mozart) shows that improvised embellishment remained an integral component of his style; present-day performers might do well to contemplate the gulf between their abilities and Mozart's before undertaking their own decorations. The two-piano sonata, K448/375*a*, composed less than ten months after his arrival in Vienna on a commission from his talented pupil Josepha von Auernhammer, gravitates towards virtuoso display while displaying Mozart's intuitive understanding of the 'orchestral' capabilities of two fortepianos; the syncopated chordal responses in the opening Allegro's closing group are particularly striking. The composer's contact with the music of J.S. Bach and Handel at the concerts of Baron Gottfried van Swieten in 1782–3 resulted in a modest burst of contrapuntal works, including the underrated Prelude and Fugue in C, K394/383*a*, written at the urging of Constanze Weber.

Although Mozart soon tired of aping an archaic Baroque style, the effects on his own music of his experiences with Bach and Handel were profound and long-lasting. The unique single-voiced opening of K533 invokes the atmosphere of fugue, realized more fully in the second group, as well as in the minor-mode episode of the Rondo (published in 1788 with the two movements of K533 though composed in 1786). The opening movement of the Sonata in D K576, perhaps Mozart's masterpiece in this genre, bristles with lean, athletic counterpoint; it maintains the composer's predilection for the open-ended half-cadence that moves to the dominant in the exposition, while remaining in the tonic for the recapitulation (nearly half of the 35 major-mode sonata movements in the keyboard sonatas use this 'bifocal close'). Baron van Swieten's advocacy of C.P.E. Bach immediately stimulated two fantasias K396/385*f* and 397/385*g*, both remaining fragments, although the second, in D minor, is still a favourite. The Fantasia in C minor K475, a work of great emotional scope, was published at the head of the sonata in the same key, completed five months earlier. Its impact on Beethoven's obsessive bouts with C minor can scarcely be exaggerated. A late Fantasia in F minor K608, composed in March 1791 for a mechanical organ but published as early as 1799 for piano four-hands, deserves more frequent hearings. Yet by far the most important development during this period was Mozart's deepening relationship with Haydn, whom he probably first met in 1781. Although Haydn's musical influence is most readily traceable in Mozart's mature chamber music, it is still felt in movements such as the monothematic opening Allegro of K570, or in the bold choice of the lowered submediant as the secondary key of the Adagio of K576. The remarkable two-year period framed by the composition of Le nozze di Figaro and of Don Giovanni saw Mozart add four jewels to the crown of his works for keyboard, including the four-hand sonata K497, an unqualified masterpiece; an inspired set of four-hand variations K501; the chromatically rich A minor Rondo K511 and an outstandingly expressive Adagio in B minor K540. All this music was written for a five-octave instrument about which Mozart is not known to have voiced reservations. When the recapitulation of a sonata movement threatened to exceed its compass, his imagination was fused by the limitation, resulting in some of his most adroit touches, as in the opening movements of K333/315*c* (ex.5) or the concerto K449. The concert instrument used by Mozart and built by Anton Walter about 1780 included only two tone-modifying devices: a pair of knee-levers that raised either all the dampers or only the treble ones (the presence of hand-stops as well for the dampers on the original suggests Mozart may have requested the addition of knee-levers, perhaps taking his cue from Stein's instruments); and a handstop over the middle of the keyboard that placed a thin strip of cloth between the hammer and the strings, acting as a mute. In passages such as the middle section of the Andante of K330/300*h*, this sourdine imparts an ethereal effect fundamentally different from that achieved with the shift on a modern instrument. Both the mute and the raising of the dampers were regarded in Mozart's time as special effects; his celebrated remark that phrases should 'flow like oil' has often been construed as an unqualified endorsement of legato, inviting indiscriminate application of the modern damper pedal. In practice, both the rapid tonal decay on the fortepiano and the articulative richness of Mozart's scores preclude any uniform solutions. It is no condemnation of present-day instruments that the carefully marked phrasing at the opening of K332/300*k* (ex.6) is almost impossible to achieve naturally except on a fortepiano.

Ex.5 Mozart: K333/315*c*

Haydn's reputation rested far less than Mozart's on his abilities as a keyboard performer. His longstanding positions as composer-in-residence to aristocratic patrons, including three decades of service to the Esterházy family, filled his days with the closely monitored composition of sacred, operatic, orchestral and chamber music, as well as with supervising performances. It is all the more surprising that Haydn found the time to compose over 60 multi-movement works for solo keyboard. Fewer than 50 of these can be proved authentic, and about a dozen more early harpsichord works were attributed to Haydn during his lifetime. As fewer than a dozen autographs (some only fragments) of Haydn's solo sonatas survive, the severe problems of chronology and authenticity among works circulating in the 1750s and 60s are likely to remain unresolved unless new evidence is discovered. Most of these early pieces appear to have been teaching aids intended for the amateur, perhaps the children of Haydn's aristocratic patrons. It is unlikely that all, or even most, of them have survived. Entitled 'divertimento' or 'partita', they typically consisted of three movements, most often two fast outer ones encasing a minuet, though not infrequently with the latter as a finale. Apart from a few simple binary forms in works of questionable authenticity (HXVI:7–9), virtually all the non-minuet movements present rudimentary sonata forms with modest transitions and well-demarcated secondary groups. Clearly designated for harpsichord, they exude the easy-going galant manner of G.C. Wagenseil without an obsessive reliance on the broken-chord basses purportedly popularized by Domenico Alberti. Significant increases in technical demands, perhaps stimulated by Scarlatti, are registered in the group of sonatas that includes HXVI:45, 19 and 46, composed in the late 1760s. The last movement of the Sonata in A♭ (no.46) foreshadows the irresistible buffa finales that Haydn was to perfect in the sonatas, quartets and symphonies of the 1780s and 90s. Beginning around 1771 with the first works called 'sonate' (HXVI:18, 20 and 44), Haydn's unpretentious style is blended with increasingly complex emotional moods, easily traceable to the influence of C.P.E. Bach. The single dynamic marking in the autograph fragment of the Sonata in C minor (no.20) can still be rendered on a two-manual harpsichord, but by the time Artaria published this landmark in 1780 it included a wealth of additional dynamics (including a crescendo in the finale) that demanded the new flexibility of the fortepiano. The five other sonatas that appeared simultaneously (HXVI:35–9) are the last Haydn approved 'per il clavicembalo, o forte piano'. It may have been more than a coincidence that the trio of sonatas published in 1784 by Bossler (HXVI:40–42), and calling specifically for fortepiano, were the first that Haydn composed after the start of his friendship with Mozart. In 1788 Haydn wrote to his publisher Artaria that he had been compelled to purchase a new fortepiano in order to do justice to the three piano trios HXV:11–13.

Ex.6 Mozart: K332/300*k*

Allegro

Haydn's long life allowed him to continue to absorb and recast the most important advances of Viennese Classicism. The sonatas of Haydn's maturity are all the more remarkable for the stylistic distance that their composer had traversed to create them. The obligatory da capo minuet of previous decades disappears almost entirely; when required to supply one about 1789, the composer responded in the Sonata in E♭ (HXVI:49) with a large-scale 'Tempo di minuet' containing an elaborately rewritten repeat. A standard three-movement, fast–slow–fast scheme avoids tedium by incorporating at least one movement not in regular sonata form: the alternating major–minor variations (a favourite technique) that open HXVI:39 and close no.34; the spacious binary form with rondo elements that concludes HXVI:50; or the unexpected sonata-rondo that opens HXVI:51. But Haydn proved equally drawn in this period to a two-movement grouping, providing Beethoven with a point of departure for his subsequent experiments. Two of the three two-movement sonatas that appeared together in 1784 (in G and D) go so far as to abandon any references to sonata style. In the finale of no.40 Haydn took special delight in punctuating cadences with abrupt leaps of three octaves (ex.7); the fortepiano, with its clearly delineated registers, conveys the humour of these gestures with particular effectiveness. The pervasive imitation throughout the finale of the Sonata in D may reflect Haydn's encounters with J.S. Bach at Baron van Swieten's. Equally important is the surge of cantabile writing found in the slow movement of the Sonata in E♭ written in about 1789 for Marianne von Genzinger, to whom Haydn extolled the virtues of a fortepiano by Wenzel Schantz. In the freewheeling Fantasia in C (HXVII:4), published at about the same time, Haydn instructs the performer at two points to hold the cadential octave until the tone dies away; on a well-regulated modern grand the sound lingers for almost a minute. Between his first and second London sojourns, the composer penned an elaborate keyboard farewell to the double variation (HXVII:7), built on a pair of utterly non-symmetrical themes that erupt during only the third variation into a rhapsodic coda. Three highly individual sonatas (nos.50–52) composed during the next year in London provide a fitting climax to Haydn's output in this medium. The 'open pedal' demanded in the first movement of no.50 marks the migration of the Viennese knee-levers to a location on the forward supporting legs of English models where they could be depressed with the foot. The finale of the same work exploits the five-and-a-half-octave range of the newest English models; their fuller, weightier sound may be partly responsible for the symphonic grandeur that permeates the opening movement of no.52. Throughout his career Haydn's approach to sonata form was punctuated by surprise and experiment, continually nourished by his longstanding fascination with monothematicism. Even more than in the music of Mozart, Haydn's frequent changes of texture and spiky rhythms depend upon the quick response and rapid tonal decay of the early piano.

Ex.7 Haydn: HXVI:40

The most remarkable aspect of Beethoven's monumental 32 keyboard sonatas (including three teaching pieces in the spirit of Mozart's K545) is that they continue to expand and refine a genre that seemed to have reached perfection in the music of Haydn and Mozart. Three early sonatas (WOO 47) published before the composer was 13 present rather stiff imitations of C.P.E. Bach's Sturm und Drang style. By the time he brought out his three op.2 sonatas in Vienna in 1796, Beethoven had obviously made a thorough study of Mozart and Haydn, in spite of his exaggerated claim to have learnt nothing from his most celebrated teacher. The older man's influence is easily traceable in the conciseness and wit of the Sonata in F op.10 no.2 or in the humorous scherzos of op.2 nos.2 and 3 borrowed from Haydn's quartets. But the most persistent strand up to op.22 is the loose, additive post-Classical language already discernible in Mozart's late piano concertos. Virtually every gambit in the opening movement of Mozart's K467 – the piano opening and subsequent tutti explosion, the bifocal close preceding a dramatic interjection of the minor dominant, the wealth of closing ideas that confirm the major – appear in the first movement of op.2 no.3, in the same key. The con gran espressione of op.7 and the Largo e mesto of op.10 no.3 invest Beethoven's slow movements with new dignity and pathos. Blatant sectionalism pervades the Rondo finales of opp.7 and 22; here, as elsewhere, what separates Beethoven from the transitional generation of Clementi, Dussek, Hummel and Weber is his unflagging reliance on the sonata principle. By the 1790s the pressures on composers to abandon the symmetrical resolution of sonata form were considerable. Muzio Clementi, essentially a contemporary of Mozart who lived well into the new century, played an important role in these developments. His nearly six dozen keyboard sonatas published between 1779 and 1821 take Mozart as their point of departure (opp.7, 9 and 10 were published in Vienna), with greater emphasis on virtuoso techniques (such as the rapid parallel 3rds and octaves of op.2 no.4) and italianate melody, especially in slow movements. After their contest before Joseph II on Christmas Eve 1781, Mozart characterized Clementi as a 'mere mechanicus'. The substantial increase over the next decade in the scale of his works is not matched by a corresponding increase in the capacity of thematic material to support the larger structures. Clementi's recapitulations frequently exhibit only a casual relationship to his expositions, with minimal attention paid to resolving long-range harmonic tension. The virtues of his last and best-known sonata, op.50 no.3, subtitled 'Didone abbandonata', remain those of lean, athletic textures and dramatic changes of mood familiar from his earliest works. Curiously, although he was closely tied to piano manufacture from the 1790s, little of the increased capacity of the new six-octave instruments is reflected in Clementi's keyboard music, probably because most of it was composed by 1805.

Between 1817 and 1826 Clementi brought out a series of volumes under the title Gradus ad Parnassum, devoted to the attainment of a fluent technique. Debussy paid an affectionate tribute to the popularity of these exercises in his 'Doctor Gradus ad Parnassum' from Children's Corner. Clementi was joined in these endeavours by two other distinguished men, Carl Czerny and J.B. Cramer. Czerny had studied as a youngster with Beethoven before becoming a private instructor from the age of 15, numbering among his pupils Theodor Kullak, Thalberg, Stephen Heller and the young Liszt. Although Liszt frequently played Czerny's Sonata no.1 in A♭ op.7, it was as an indefatigable pedagogue that Czerny chose to make his mark. In more than 800 works devoted largely to technical studies (the best known being the Vollständige theoretisch-praktische Pianoforte-Schule op.500), Czerny compiled and codified the technical advances of the piano during a period of extremely rapid development. If Czerny's methods were already beginning to show signs of age before his death, he continued to command the respect and admiration of his peers. Cramer, although an essentially conservative force like Czerny, was (according to Ries) considered by Beethoven to be the finest pianist of his day. He is remembered chiefly today for two fine sets of 42 studies each, published in 1804 and 1810 and endorsed by Beethoven, Schumann and Chopin.

Foreshadowings of at least a dozen composers from Beethoven and Schubert to Liszt and Brahms have been detected by proponents of the music of J.L. Dussek. In terms of pianistic figuration, there is no doubt that Dussek was a pioneer; formally he was much less so, relying heavily on the rondo and other sectional schemes. No hard evidence remains to show that Beethoven was familiar with his music, as can be demonstrated in the case of Clementi. Nearly 30 sonatas (several bearing programmatic titles) composed between 1788 and 1812 bear witness to a highly eclectic style stimulated by Dussek's peripatetic career as a travelling virtuoso. His association with the firm of Broadwood contributed to an expansion of the piano's range to six octaves (C′–c″″) as early as 1794. J.N. Hummel's ties to Viennese Classicism were considerably stronger, for he had studied with Mozart as a child and returned frequently to Vienna. Until the 1820s Hummel's fame nearly rivalled Beethoven's. Apart from an early sonata issued in London, his five remaining works in this genre were published in Vienna between 1805 and 1825, including a near-masterpiece, the Sonata in F♯ minor op.81, which appeared just after Beethoven's op.106. The exposition of its opening movement arrives in A major after a generous interlude in C major, pointing up Hummel's continued loosening of high Classical structures, as well as his anticipation of Schumann's harmonic palette (ex.8). Like Clementi's and Dussek's, Weber's career was marked by extensive travels; unlike either, his principal field of activity was opera. When, on examining the score of Der Freischütz in 1823, Beethoven remarked that its composer 'must write operas, nothing but operas', he displayed a keen appreciation of Weber's special gifts. Throughout his four sonatas (all but the third in four movements) the pacing is consistently operatic, aided by directives such as con duolo, mormorando and consolante in no.4. Running passage-work over simple chordal accompaniments, as in the first movement of the Sonata in A♭, look forward to such patterns in the works of Chopin. For his own part, Weber remarked in 1810 that Beethoven's compositions after 1800 were 'a confused chaos, an unintelligible struggle after novelty'.

Weber was almost certainly referring to Beethoven's resolve not to settle into the structurally less demanding language of the proto-Romantics. In the highly experimental sonatas of opp.26–8 it looked as if Beethoven might indeed pursue this path. The A♭ Sonata dispenses altogether with straight sonata form. Both of the op.27 sonatas exhibit novel structures, and op.28 is noteworthy for its off-tonic beginning and third-related modulatory scheme. The conflicts in Beethoven's style around 1800 are drawn cleanly in op.27 no.2 (the 'Moonlight'), whose famous opening demands the intimacy of the drawing-room, while its stormy and very public finale pushes the five-octave instrument inherited from Mozart right to (though not beyond) its limits. Op.31 no.3 was the last four-movement sonata until the inaptly labelled 'Hammerklavier' (the generic term for the Viennese piano after 1815) of 15 years later. In the autumn of 1802 Beethoven wrote to the publisher Breitkopf & Härtel concerning the 'new manner' of his two sets of variations, opp.34 and 35. Continuing with the Waldstein, and even more emphatically with the 'Appassionata', Beethoven recreated the taut, integrated aesthetic of the high Classical period, though on a greatly intensified scale. It scarcely seems an accident that this dramatic turnabout in Beethoven's style paralleled equally dramatic developments in the Viennese piano. Within six years the instrument nearly doubled its weight and more than trebled its string tension. The menacing opening of op.57,

Ex.8 Hummel: op.81

plumbing the lowest note on the keyboard, is unthinkable without the powerful yet clear bass of the new six-octave models. The lush sweetness of these instruments is reflected in the two movements of op.78, Beethoven's only work in F♯ and a particular favourite of the composer's. 'Les Adieux', op.81*a*, composed in the same year and key as the 'Emperor' Concerto, provided a fitting close for the solo sonata to the 'heroic decade'. Both opp.90 and 101 show a closer affinity with the later styles of Schubert and Mendelssohn respectively, revealing a composer once again at the crossroads. Much like op.57 of a dozen years earlier, the monumental Sonata in B♭ op.106 marked Beethoven's final return to an expanded vision of the high Classical style, spurred by another burst in the size and weight of Viennese pianos. The frequent choice of non-dominant secondary areas in sonata movements after 1817 is overshadowed by continually deepening levels of thematic integration, such as the relentless chains of descending 3rds that saturate the first movement of op.106 (ex.9). The Adagio of this remarkable work, placed after the Scherzo and in the remote key of F♯ minor, is both the longest and the most deeply felt among Beethoven's slow movements. But it was the composer's renewed interest in fugue, first seen in the finales of op.101 and the cello sonata op.102 no.2, that dominated the late style. The equally fugal yet diametrically opposed finales of both opp.106 and 110 show the extent to which Beethoven could impose his will upon the intractable rules of counterpoint. Closely allied with this absorption was the practice of variation, culminating in the Arietta of op.111, whose transcendent blend of variation and sonata inspired Kretschmar's impassioned homage in Thomas Mann's Dr Faustus. When invited to contribute a variation on the publisher Diabelli's 'Schusterfleck' of a waltz, Beethoven responded over a period extending from 1818 to 1823 with a series of 33 variations that constitute a final compendium of Classical techniques. He took his leave from the piano with his third cycle of (as Beethoven referred to them) Bagatelles op.126, which not only served as an experimental laboratory for the late quartets but also anticipated the character-pieces of the Romantics.

Ex.9 Beethoven: op.106

Although Schubert never billed himself as a pianist, he produced a prodigious quantity of keyboard music over scarcely more than a decade, including 11 solo sonatas, substantial fragments of nine others, three sets of Impromptus and Moments musicaux, and more than 400 dances for occasional use. During his lifetime the 16-bar Trauerwalzer D365 no.2 became so popular that its citation did not require the identification of Schubert as the composer. He began half a dozen sonatas before completing D537, the first of three impassioned works in A minor. Two of these, along with the 'little' A major (a perennial favourite) are in only three movements; otherwise Schubert – unlike Beethoven after 1802 – preferred the spaciousness of a four-movement plan. Among the dance movements scherzos are most represented, but a work as late as the Fantasia in G D894 (1826) presents an old-fashioned Menuetto. In certain respects Schubert was formally less experimental than Beethoven. All of his opening movements are in sonata form; after 1819 all but one of his finales are sonata-rondos or even simpler straight rondos. His slow movements are slightly more adventurous, favouring the two- and three-part forms whose simple contrasts proved so appealing to the next generation. But it is the relationship in Schubert's music between theme and tonality that differentiates him from his great contemporary and that so profoundly influenced Brahms and Mahler. The 'heavenly length' praised by Schumann points up the leisurely unfolding of long, arching themes rooted in song. Rather than struggling to create dynamic transitions along Beethovenian lines, Schubert viewed the obligatory modulation in expositions as an opportunity for a series of bold, common-tone key changes that minimize the structural significance of the secondary tonality. In movements such as the finale of the C minor Sonata D958 this process is carried to almost bizarre lengths; in others, such as the deeply moving Molto moderato that opens the last of the late sonatas, D960, the motion through the flattened submediant (both major and minor) is achieved effortlessly through what amounts to thematic transformation. Schubert's models in these sonatas, which compare in importance with those of late Beethoven, are clearly the mature sonatas of Hummel (to whom he planned to dedicate his final three). Although lacking the technical challenges routinely confronted in Beethoven's music, their figuration is rarely perfunctory; a compelling performance demands an outstanding sensitivity to proportion and pacing. The two exceptions to these moderate technical demands are the Sonata in D D850, composed during the same summer, that of 1825, which saw the composition of the 'Great' C major Symphony, and, emphatically, the 'Wanderer' Fantasy, a work of unabashed virtuosity whose continuous structure inspired the cyclic forms of Liszt. The song that provides the starting-point for its slow section, and from which the work derives its name, provides perhaps the most splendid example in Schubert of the poignant contrast between major and minor.

Schubert's interest in smaller forms ran considerably deeper than Beethoven's, and resulted in some of his finest efforts. The two sets of four impromptus and the six Moments musicaux (a title invented by the publisher Leidesdorf) were created largely in the last two years of the composer's life, at least partly in response to exhortations from publishers for less demanding music. It is a tribute to Schubert's greatness that he was able to produce masterpiece after masterpiece among works directed solely at the domestic market. Only the first of the op.142 impromptus uses sonata form, inspiring some writers to interpret its other three members as the remainder of a four-movement sonata. At least half of the 14 pieces in these works are straightforward ternary forms with verbatim repeats of their opening sections. Others, such as op.94 no.2, introduce the double variation (ABA′B′A″ inherited from Haydn and later exploited by Mahler. The care lavished by Schubert on the countless sets of ländler, German dances, waltzes and ecossaises (the first three of these stylistically indistinguishable) far exceeded the demands of the form; many invite enrichment by the discreet addition of the pedal-activated buff or Janissary stops in vogue during the first quarter of the 19th century. Their application was mandatory in the fashionable battle pieces first popularized by Kocžwara's The Battle of Prague (c1788). Although Schubert rarely exploited the available range of the Viennese pianos (none of the last three sonatas uses the extra 4th added in the bass around 1816), his relationship to these instruments is considerably more sensual than that of Beethoven. The idiosyncratic wide spacing of chords, so frequently featuring the 3rd in the soprano, and the placement of tunes in the clear, singing tenor register reflect the special virtues of the pianos on which Schubert composed and performed.

Schubert's achievements in smaller forms were not without precedent in works by two Bohemian composers, Jan Tomášek and Jan Voříšek. With a series of evocatively titled eclogues, rhapsodies or dithyrambs published between 1807 and 1818, Tomášek laid good claim to being the originator of the short character-piece that proved so appealing to Romantic composers. His pupil Voříšek took up residence in Vienna, where he enjoyed fruitful relationships with Beethoven, Hummel and Schubert. Although documentation is lacking, it seems likely that Voříšek's impromptus influenced Schubert's compositions of the same name.

3. ROMANTICISM AND THE MINIATURE. After the deaths of Beethoven (1827) and Schubert (1828) the decline of the sonata was swift and precipitous. Although its prestige remained enormous, largely because of the achievement of Beethoven, stylistic developments turned rapidly in other directions. The sonatas of Schumann, Chopin and Brahms, however imaginative in certain respects, project a sense of imitation rather than continued evolution. Schumann was one of the first composers to give his character-pieces poetic titles rather than using generic titles such as 'impromptu' or 'bagatelle'. In Germany the chief architect of this aesthetic shift was Robert Schumann, who used his editorship of the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik as a forum for proclaiming both Chopin and the young Brahms. Composed during the 1830s, Schumann's first 23 opus numbers were all for solo keyboard, including several of his best-known works. From his op.1 (the Abegg Variations) on, the voice is clear and assured, characterized by an extraordinarily poetic harmonic imagination, strong root movements, frequent doublings and a preference for the middle range of the piano. Although Robert and Clara did not receive the grand manufactured by Conrad Graf until their marriage in 1840 (the instrument was later bequeathed to Brahms), the music composed by both demonstrates the warmth and intimacy of the Viennese instruments. Many of his most successful works, including Papillons op.2, the Davidsbündlertänze op.6, Carnaval op.9 and Kreisleriana op.16, consist of cycles of miniatures whose interdependency is analogous to that found in the later song cycles like Dichterliebe. In Carnaval a series of epigrammatic mottos provides a modicum of musical connection, but the deeper unity is more elusive, based on harmonically open beginnings or closes and a keen sensitivity to contrasts in mood. Along with figures from the commedia dell'arte, Schumann presents sympathetic portraits of Clara Wieck, Chopin and Paganini, as well as of Eusebius and Florestan, the introvert and extrovert sides of his own musical personality. It is surprising to find the density of short internal repeats – betraying binary origins – in movements of wide-ranging harmonic freedom such as those in Kreisleriana (inspired by E.T.A. Hoffmann's character and dedicated to Chopin). Often accompanying these repetitive forms are the kinds of motoric rhythm familiar from the Baroque (Schumann acknowledged that his music was closer in spirit to Bach than to Mozart). The predilection for building on short, symmetrical harmonic sequences can lead to a marked squareness, often rescued by highly original figuration. Apart from the opening movements of the three sonatas, sonata form surfaces only rarely in Schumann's works. An effective example is the finale of the Faschingsschwank aus Wien op.26, whose opening rondo remains one of the composer's freshest inspirations.

In such works as the Studien nach Capricen von Paganini op.3, the Toccata op.7, the Etudes symphoniques op.13 and the Phantasie op.17, Schumann made important contributions to an expansion of the piano's range and sonority, keeping pace with the new iron-framed instruments being built in the 1830s. The Phantasie, dedicated to Liszt and whose proceeds Schumann contributed to the fund for the Beethoven monument in Bonn, is considered by many to be his masterpiece. With its pointed references to the last of Beethoven's songs from An die ferne Geliebte, it offers an eloquent farewell to Classicism. In spite of a reliance on structures of the da capo type and strong subdominant leanings, it is one of Schumann's most successful large-scale works, concluding with a serene slow movement in C that evokes the spirit of the Arietta finale of Beethoven's op.111. Schumann's considerable reliance on the metronome has been attacked on numerous occasions, but used with care (and sometimes modified by Clara's own editorial suggestions) his markings provide a very useful guide. He was also one of the first composers to designate long passages as simply 'mit Pedal', confirming the shift of the dampers' function from that of a special effect to a continuous ingredient in the texture. Finally, Schumann's commitment to high-quality pieces in his studies for children resulted in such welcome additions to this repertory as the Kinderszenen op.15 and most especially the Album für die Jugend op.68.

Although Schumann's innovations appeared less radical by the end of the century, they remained more far-reaching than those of his contemporary Mendelssohn. After leading a revival of Bach's St Matthew Passion in 1829, Mendelssohn issued a series of keyboard works that included preludes and fugues (a set of six appeared in 1837), capriccios and fantasias, evoking a Baroque atmosphere overlaid with post-Classical phrase structure. A favourite arrangement was the slow introductory opening succeeded by a fleet Allegro or even Presto, most familiar from the Rondo capriccioso op.14, composed when Mendelssohn was only 15. A quarter of his output consists of eight books of Lieder ohne Worte, shorter lyric pieces predominantly in simple ternary form, whose moderate technical demands offered sustenance to the amateur player in danger of being swamped in a sea of virtuosity.

The designation 'revolutionary' is properly reserved in the 19th century for a figure such as Chopin. In spite of precedents to be found in the music of Hummel and Field, even Chopin's earliest works are stamped with an originality that could scarcely have been expected. All of his more than 200 works involve the piano (the vast majority are for piano solo), and in this respect he typifies the increasing specialization of the Romantics. Only a handful of concertos, sonatas and chamber works employed what were by now academic forms. Otherwise Chopin preferred generic titles that readily conjured up poetic images (ballade, barcarolle), though he stopped short of overt programmaticism, maintaining the tradition of absolute music in the two composers he most revered, Bach and Mozart. His discomfort with large, multi-movement forms is betrayed in the two youthful concertos, whose opening movements reverse the customary sequence of modulations in exposition and recapitulation. Visits to Vienna in 1829 and 1831 saw the première, on an instrument placed at Chopin's disposal by Conrad Graf, of the variations on 'Là ci darem la mano' (the work to be greeted by Schumann's prophetic review: 'Hats off, gentlemen, a genius!'). The Waltz in E♭ op.18, the first of the large concert waltzes, was also set down in Vienna. But Chopin's decision in the autumn of 1831 to take up at least temporary residence in Paris sealed the decline of the imperial capital and marked the ascendancy of the French metropolis to its position as the centre of new musical fashion for the next 90 years. Most importantly for the evolution of the piano, developments now shifted to the French-English design. Both the more conservative English action retained by Pleyel and the repitition action patented by Erard in the 1820s (the model for virtually all modern grand actions) provided more leverage with less effort than the increasingly cumbersome Viennese action, whose mechanical disadvantage multiplied as the instruments grew in size and weight. Many of Chopin's effects depend upon the increased sustaining power, particularly in the treble, of the newest French instruments. At the same time, both Pleyel and Erard's flat-strung pianos retained a clarity and transparency, even in the bass, that was aided by a more lightweight and efficient damping system. Gone for good were the exotic multiple pedal stops of the Viennese instruments; Romantic pianists made do with the damper and shift pedals now standard on English models. Chopin's preference for the more intimate sound of the Pleyel (whose action was slightly shallower than that of the Erard and had virtually no after-touch) shows that he resisted over-simplified notions of 'progress'.

On his arrival in Paris, Chopin began the regular and systematic cultivation of almost ten different genres. Dominant among the smaller forms were the mazurkas and nocturnes, which collectively reveal an astonishingly varied approach to ternary form. The modal colouring of the Mazurka in C♯ minor op.41 no.4 (caused by the use of the lowered 2nd and 7th degrees) sets up the return to the opening A section via the augmented 6th rather than the dominant, a technique that was to become a Romantic cliché. While still a youth in Warsaw Chopin had access to an intriguing new genre of composition by the Irishman John Field: the nocturne. Field's first four compositions bearing this atmospheric title appeared in St Petersburg and Moscow in 1812, and doubtless made their way to Warsaw soon after. To Field goes the credit for evolving the arpeggiated accompaniment over which an expressive melody is free to spin out. Traces of the nocturne as it was inherited from Field are evident in op.9 no.2 (a perennial favourite of amateurs) but Chopin soon transformed the species to accommodate a much wider emotional range. The extreme contrasts of op.15 no.1 provide a memorable early example; 15 years later the highly ornamented return in the Nocturne in B op.62 no.1 raises subtlety to new heights while assimilating Chopin's love of Italian bel canto. Although performers frequently present them in different groups, many of these sets were arranged by Chopin as collections unified in sequence of mood and tonal plan. The almost 20 waltzes are more openly sectional, as befits their dance origins, and prompted some of the composer's most spontaneous melodies, reinforced in the larger concert waltzes by ingenious repetition schemes. His most direct homage to Bach, the 24 Preludes, encompasses an array of formal schemes far richer than their aphoristic character might suggest. A large number are built on a single phrase that requires only a single repetition rather than contrasting material to attain completeness. An even more virtuoso treatment of repetition underlies the Berceuse op.57, where a simple alternating pattern of tonic and dominant harmonies repeated 54 consecutive times supports a remarkably free and florid set of seamless melodic variations. A similar union of circumscribed harmonies and operatic display (frequently in duet textures) informs the equally remarkable Barcarolle op.60, which captures perfectly the gentle undulations of a Venetian gondola without the sentimentality so often attached to the genre.

Apart from his one youthful sonata, Chopin's experiments in this form produced two highly individual works, both in the old-fashioned four movements though with the scherzo placed second. In both opening allegros the focus on thematic rather than tonal processes leads to a marked sectionalization between vigorous first and lyrical second groups. The finale of the B♭ Sonata is one of the most original movements Chopin ever wrote, subjugating all the traditional elements to a single bare, fleeting texture. His ten or so remaining large-scale works (all in one movement) evince two opposed approaches. The polonaises, the first three scherzos and the second ballade employ large-scale ternary or rondo structures built around highly contrasted material. However, the three remaining ballades (in G minor, A♭ and F minor), as well as the Scherzo in E op.54, the Fantasy op.49 and the Polonaise-Fantasy op.61, each offer highly individual solutions to the special formal problems posed by thematic transformation and seamless transitions. The influence of sonata procedures is obvious in the first and last ballades and in the Fantasy, though with a minimum of emphasis on resolving material from secondary keys in the tonic. By establishing A♭ major as emphatically at the close as it does F minor in its opening, the Fantasy promotes the interchangeability of relative major and minor; the conclusion in A minor of the F major Ballade, which made such an impression upon Schumann, provides an even stronger example of Chopin's undermining of a single, central tonality. Although the Fantasy Impromptu, published posthumously, has always been the most popular of Chopin's compositions in this vein, his 'fantasy' masterpiece is doubtless the Polonaise-Fantasy, in which the most heroic and extrovert characteristics of the genres cultivated by Chopin are blended with the most intimate flights of fancy. Performances that ignore the single basic tempo marking of Allegro maestoso obscure the underlying unity.

4. The age of virtuosity. Keyboard virtuosos had travelled across Europe since the mid-18th century, but the bulk of published music was aimed at the amateur market. Beginning with Beethoven, the situation was rapidly transformed; Czerny reported to the composer in a conversation book that a woman in Vienna could still not play the opening of the Hammerklavier Sonata even though she had been practising it for months. The 84 studies of Cramer, published in 1804 and 1810, were considered by Beethoven to be the 'best preparation for his own works', receiving praise in the next generation from Schumann. Czerny's Vollständige theoretisch praktische Pianoforte-Schule op.500, although not published until 1839, codified earlier practices. The era of the Romantic virtuoso was properly launched with the publication of Chopin's two sets of études in 1833 and 1837 (though the earliest were composed in 1829). He combined the solution to a single technical problem (including rapid parallel 3rds, 6ths or octaves in the same hand; black keys, large jumps) with works of intrinsic artistic merit, worthy of placement alongside any others in the concert repertory. Schumann's description of op.25 no.1 as 'a lovely picture in a dream' acknowledges Chopin's highly original figuration, in which 'it would be a mistake to suppose that he allowed us to hear every one of its small notes' (ex.10). He was equally adroit in studies that develop touch rather than bravura, especially evident in the three composed in 1839 for inclusion in Moscheles's Méthode des méthodes.

The only 19th-century performer capable of doing justice to the expansive arpeggios of Chopin's op.10 no.1 was said to have been Franz Liszt, and it was he who carried the evolution of the Romantic pianist to its fever pitch. Beginning at the astonishingly early age of 15, and inspired by the example of Paganini, Liszt published between 1826 and 1849 (he retired from concert touring in 1848) almost three dozen studies encompassing a dazzling spectrum of keyboard effects, an achievement not supplemented until the publication of Debussy's 12

Ex.10 Chopin: op.25 no.1

Etudes during World War I. The orchestral basis of these efforts is illustrated by the well-known Mazeppa, which demands three staves for the opening tune. A similar orchestral effect is imparted by the superhuman leaps in Liszt's transcription of Paganini's La campanella. Unlike Chopin's, Liszt's studies are peppered with improvisatory cadenzas and flourishes remarkable for their constant inventiveness. More than any other 19th-century figure, Liszt kept the tradition of improvisation alive, and there is no doubt that the printed version of the studies represent the distillation of years – perhaps even decades – of performance experience. The title 'transcendental' given to the best-known set (final version, 1852) proved an apt description of Liszt's technique, for only one that transcended the capabilities of virtually all his contemporaries could do justice to his own music.

Apart from a rash of studies, Liszt produced a bewildering array of works for solo piano, many of which underwent continuous revision during his lifetime, and many of which remain unavailable in any reliable modern edition. The proportion of 'salon music' among his output is far less than that found among such contemporaries as Thalberg and Henselt. Outstanding among the larger collections are the three volumes of Années de pèlerinage, aural mementos of Liszt's sojourn in Switzerland and Italy. His sources of inspiration were frequently literary (the three Petrarch sonnets) or scenic (Au bord d'une source, Les cloches de Genève), but are programmatic in only the most evocative sense. The 'fantasia quasi sonata' (the 'Dante' Sonata) that closes the second year is a large-scale work of tremendous intensity, in which the symbolic interval of the tritone serves as a unifying motto. The series of four Mephisto waltzes presents a comprehensive catalogue of the 'demonic' devices that proved so attractive to Liszt. The work now reckoned his most impressive is the B minor Sonata (1852–3), which succeeds in harnessing technical brilliance to the architectural demands of four-movements-in-one. The sonata is perhaps Liszt's most impressive display of thematic transformation, built upon an edifice of five mostly cryptic and open-ended motifs. It would be a serious error, however, to overlook the tremendous investment made by Liszt in arrangements, transcriptions and works based on previous material. Most important among the latter are the 21 Hungarian Rhapsodies based on processed folk material, planting the seeds for the nationalistic movements at the end of the century. Liszt's high opinion of Schubert is reflected in the more than 60 song transcriptions, including the complete Schwanengesang and Winterreise. His many operatic transcriptions and paraphrases are now rarely heard, but in his own day they not only provided opportunity for technical display but served many of the functions of the gramophone. Liszt lavished considerable care upon such arrangements, and in his Réminiscences de Don Juan (on Mozart's Don Giovanni) he left behind a graphic representation of technique as sexual conquest.

Although much has been made of Liszt's enthusiastic endorsement of Steinway's new overstrung models in the 1870s, the vast majority of his music for piano was composed during the period in which he endorsed the flat-strung Erards with equal enthusiasm. He even found time to provide testimonials for Chickering, and for the Bösendorfer with its old-style Viennese action. In any event, all the instruments used by Liszt were equipped with softer wire and more elastic accretions of felt and leather hammer coverings than modern concert instruments. His long career spanned a phenomenal period in the piano's development, and he never tired of dreaming up new and seemingly unattainable effects, such as the 'vibrato assai' that features in his transcription of Schumann's Widmung (ex.11).

Liszt's achievements inspired both competitors and imitators. His sharpest competition in the late 1830s was from Thalberg, who dazzled audiences with his novel

Ex.11 Liszt: Transcription of Schumann's Widmung

Geist, mein bess - res Ich!
a tempo con somma passione fff vibrato assai
rinforz.

device of placing the melody in the thumbs while surrounding it with a sea of arpeggios, giving the impression that more than one piano was being played. Thalberg specialized in operatic paraphrases (that on Rossini's Moïse enjoyed particular popularity) and variations such as those on God Save the Queen; none of his extensive output remains in the active repertory today. A similar fate has befallen the transcriptions and salon pieces of two other celebrated virtuosos, Herz and Henselt. The most interesting and original pianistic figure next to Liszt in the mid-century was Alkan, who spent much of his life in obscurity. Novel (and sometimes epic) notions of structure and harmony have served to rekindle interest in Alkan's music, whose variety rivals that of his better known contemporaries. His virtuosity was uncompromising, at times requiring an almost superhuman stamina.

Brahms's virtuosity took Beethoven's Hammerklavier as its starting-point, as the rhythms and proportions of his C major Sonata, published when he was scarcely 20, show. After the three early sonatas, however, Brahms turned his attentions elsewhere. The chief focus during the late 1850s and 1860s was variation form. The 25 Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Handel op.24 injected new life into a genre virtually moribund since Beethoven's set for Diabelli four decades earlier. Brahms summarized his technique – more severe and less effect-orientated than that of Liszt – in two striking sets of variations on Paganini's Caprice no.24. Typical among the uncompromising problems aired are the 'blind' octaves in no.11 of the second book (ex.12). Beginning with the Eight Piano Pieces of op.76, published when he was in his mid-40s, Brahms focussed almost exclusively for the next 15 years on six groups of smaller pieces described variously as Capriccio, Intermezzo, Rhapsody, Ballade or Romanze. Although he occasionally included literary inscriptions (from Sternau over the Andante of the F minor Sonata, from Herder at the beginning of op.117), Brahms's fundamental allegiance remained with the absolute music tradition of the Viennese Classicists. Strife between him and the avant-garde advocates of Liszt and Wagner proved inevitable. A few of these shorter works fulfil the dramatic demands of sonata form (the B minor Capriccio and the B♭ Intermezzo from op.76), but Brahms relied most heavily, as had Chopin and Schumann before him, on the simple ternary scaffolding. If he rarely infused it with the endless flexibility of Chopin, Brahms's resourcefulness, particularly in matters of rhythm and phrase, rarely faltered. Regardless of mood, he gravitated towards the middle and lower registers of the piano, preferring chains of closely spaced, poignant dissonance to clearly articulated textures. In spite of opportunities to experiment with the newer, high-leverage actions, Brahms remained loyal until the very end to the Viennese models that soon after his death were to pass into obscurity. He remains one of the few composers in the Western tradition for whom nostalgia for a bygone era provided a fresh and original impulse.

Ex.12 Brahms: op.35

5. 19TH-CENTURY NATIONAL TRENDS. By the 1870s the piano and its literature had attained a pre-eminence unrivalled both in the salons of the upwardly mobile middle class and on the concert stage. It claimed a repertory from Bach to Brahms that was, and remains, beyond comparison in its scope and its extent. In Mozart's time there had been relatively little distinction between teaching or domestic pieces (sonatas, variations) and those intended for public consumption (primarily concertos and chamber music). After Beethoven's death the emphasis among professionals on the development of a 'superhuman' technique (assisted by mechanical aids such as finger stretchers and dumb keyboards) led to a bifurcation of the solo repertory. A few major composers like Schumann attempted to fill the void with instructional cycles of high quality (Album für die Jugend); others such as Stephen Heller, who also composed large quantities of ambitious music, are remembered primarily for a steady stream of undemanding pieces aimed at the amateur market.

To expect the flood of masterpieces that had issued forth for almost a century to continue indefinitely would have been unrealistic even had it not been that the piano's popularity reached a peak, to be followed by a shift of focus back to the orchestra. The piano continued to inspire composers and performers alike, but much of the activity now took place beyond the main arenas of Germany, Austria and France.

As in opera and orchestral music, nationalist piano music, particularly that of Liszt, betrayed considerable western European influences. Almost all the Russian composers of the time wrote for piano. The salon pieces of Glinka, Borodin and Rimsky-Korsakov are surpassed in interest by those of Tchaikovsky, but it was two other Russians who made the major contributions. Perhaps the most original of these was Musorgsky's Pictures from an Exhibition (1874), a series of tableaux inspired by paintings of Victor Hartmann and linked by a recurring promenade theme in 5/4 metre. The writing, both stark and colourful, captures the folk flavour more effectively than Ravel's opulent orchestration. Balakirev's Islamey (two versions, 1869 and 1902) has acquired a certain status as the most technically demanding work in the virtuoso repertory – too difficult for even its composer, an accomplished pianist – but it is also skilfully written and dramatically effective.

The English-speaking world boasted its most successful 19th-century keyboard composer in Sterndale Bennett, most of whose music is unknown today. Admired by Schumann and Mendelssohn, and himself a great admirer of Beethoven, Bennett developed a piano style that avoided empty display but made considerable demands upon the performer, and maintained most interest in shorter forms. The American MacDowell, like most of his countrymen, received a thoroughly European training that included the encouragement of Liszt and Raff. Though remembered primarily for the Woodland Sketches (1896), an amiable series of portraits in the spirit of Schumann, he composed a substantial amount of ambitious music including four sonatas and more than two dozen concert études; the best of this repertory is receiving more frequent hearings today, especially in the USA.

The greater publicity accorded to the French impressionists has served to obscure the unique achievements of Spanish composers at the end of the century. It is easily forgotten that Albéniz's style was already well formed before Debussy wrote his most important piano works. He enjoyed good relations with both Debussy and Ravel; the influences among the three composers were mutual. Albéniz's major keyboard works, beginning with La vega (?1898) and culminating in the four books of his suite Iberia (1905–8), were contemporary with important keyboard works of Debussy. Though not as subtle structurally, these pieces are marked by spontaneity and novel figurations, including skilful evocations of both guitar and castanet. Granados excelled in the best tradition of salon music, as in the seven Valses poéticos, but his most important publication was the series of Goyescas (1909–12) stimulated by his favourite painter. The best work of Falla and Turina builds upon the achievements of Albéniz and Granados.

Born in Liège in the year that Beethoven completed his Missa solemnis, César Franck did not complete his two most important piano works, the Prélude, choral et fugue (1884) and the Prélude, aria et final (1887), until Romanticism was about to enter its twilight. In the Prélude, choral et fugue (ex.13) especially, he succeeded in tempering a Lisztian technique and cyclic procedures to solemn purpose, often recalling (and almost demanding) an organ pedal board. Though greatly influenced by Wagner, Chabrier is often most characteristic in his piano pieces, which contributed in France to the emancipation of dissonance and the interest in modal melodies. Saint-Saëns, Dukas and d'Indy did not invest their solo piano music with anything like the interest of their orchestral compositions (and, in Saint-Saëns's case, of his keyboard concertos).

The most important French composer for solo piano in the generation before Debussy was Fauré. Although he cultivated the by then celebrated genres of Chopin (especially the nocturne, impromptu and barcarolle), he brought to each a highly idiosyncratic figuration based upon equal importance of the hands and free polyphony within an arpeggiated background. Unlike much late Romantic keyboard music, Fauré's character-pieces sound less difficult than they are but repay careful study. While Debussy was still writing in a post-Romantic style his contemporary Erik Satie was setting down the three Gymnopédies (1888) that, in their sardonic simplicity, helped stake out the composer's iconoclastic position in French musical life. These were succeeded by more than a dozen sets of humorous piano pieces with provocative titles such as Sonatine bureaucratique; more than his actual music, Satie's acerbic unpretentiousness has exercised considerable influence on 20th-century composers such as John Cage.

Ex.13 Franck: Prélude, choral et fugue

6. The growth of pianism, 1900–1940. If the 20th century was less dominated by the piano than was the 19th or late 18th, the range of its achievement in terms of widening the instrument's expressive potential, is notable. Although few of its composers contributed to the repertory to quite the same extent as many of their ancestors, both Rachmaninoff and Skryabin stand comparison with Chopin and Liszt as virtuoso performers of their own exploratory keyboard works. But while Rachmaninoff made his way into the new century by expanding upon distinctly 19th-century style of piano playing, Skryabin developed a more searching harmonic language which brought him closer to Schoenberg, Webern and Berg than to his compatriot. Another contemporary, Charles Ives, was evidently the most radical of an outstanding generation of composers (among them Stravinsky, Bartók and Prokofiev) who were unwittingly to found a tradition of 20th-century pianism. Moreover, the continuing importance of the piano as a solo instrument has made it possible to chart the main lines of 20th-century musical thinking from a study of the piano music alone, particularly since a number of composers (including Debussy, Skryabin, Bartók, Schoenberg, Boulez and Stockhausen) have made some of their most important stylistic discoveries through their keyboard works.

Although it may appear that Bartók was the most radical of the early 20th-century composers in attitude to keyboard technique, Debussy, barely a generation his senior, represents an even more fundamental secession from the 19th-century pianistic tradition. His imaginative disregard of the essentially percussive qualities of the instrument enabled him to develop a new pianism, dependent on sonority rather than attack, on subtle dynamic shading rather than sustained cantabile. His own playing was evidently notable for its range of colour within a pianissimo dynamic (aided by the use of both pedals) and this is reflected in a Chopinesque notation that details every nuance of touch, as well as of dynamics and phrasing. Precise indications of pedalling are rare, but Debussy's use of sustained bass notes reveals a new awareness of the possibilities of the sustaining pedal and of the minute differences that can be obtained between the total clarity of legato pedalling and the total blurring of undamped strings (see ex.14).

Ravel's more traditional virtuosity, however, marries this new impressionism to a bravura inherited from Liszt, developing a characteristic brilliance of keyboard usage that was, in turn, to have as great an influence on Bartók as were Debussy's more far-reaching experiments in keyboard sonority. As early as 1911, Bartók was stressing the percussive aspect of the instrument through the use of ostinato rhythms; this xylophonic approach was later extended to embrace the more vibraphone-like qualities of a laissez vibrer that made expressive use of the suspension and decline of a sound as well as of its initial attack. Bartók was also to continue a Beethovenian investigation of the sharply defined contrasts possible within the instrument's wide dynamic range, and of the contrasts in sound quality suggested by its high, middle and low registers. He continued Debussy's exploration of the resonances obtainable from overlapping harmonies coloured by the sustaining pedal, which later proved equally important in the light of instrumental techniques developed after World War II.

Ex.14 Debussy: La terrasse des audiences du clair de lune

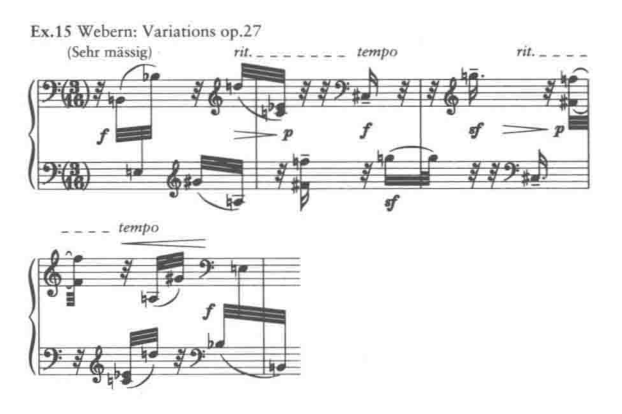
Where Debussy's most important contribution to contemporary pianism had resulted from his refusal to acknowledge the essentially mechanical limitations of the instrument, Ives was to make his contribution through a disregard for the limitations of the ten fingers of the pianist, some of his chords necessitating the assistance of a third hand or the pianist's arms. If Ives was ahead of his time, his almost exact contemporary, Rachmaninoff, while making a sizable contribution to piano literature, proved less significant in relation to the future of both musical thought and keyboard technique. Similarly, Prokofiev's nine sonatas and numerous smaller pieces are characteristic of his own stylistic scope and Lisztian virtuosity rather than indicative of future developments. The same is true of the works of other important composers of piano music during the first three decades of the century, including Valen, Pijper, Dohnányi, Martinů, Casella, Skalkottas, Shostakovich and, most notably, Hindemith.



Schoenberg, though not himself a pianist, made his two most important musical discoveries – atonality and, later, 12-note composition – through the medium of the piano. The last of the Three Pieces op.11 (his first published work for solo piano, 1909) was confidently cast in a language that owed little either to the impressionistic colouring of contemporary French music or to the more Romantic, large-scale gestures of the late 19th-century Austro-German keyboard composers. The massive stretch of its atonal counterpoints, combined with the extreme contrasts of its fleeting textures and eruptive dynamics (in addition to the introduction of keyboard harmonics in the first piece of the set) remained unsurpassed for almost 40 years, until overtaken by still more demanding techniques after World War II. Equally significant in the trend away from Romantic rhetoric, his Six Little Pieces op.19 explore the expressive qualities of the instrument (mostly at the lowest end of the dynamic range) with a restraint more typical of his friend and pupil, Webern, whose single mature work for the piano was such a major landmark. Webern's Variations op.27 invoke a much earlier concept of instrumental music as an extension of, and almost indistinguishable from, vocal music. The essential simplicity of the piece becomes complex through the continual overlap of wide-ranging contrapuntal lines (and thus of the pianist's hands), demanding a new technical approach to extended part-writing, as well as to the delicate balance between harmonic and rhythmic phrasing (see ex.15). This piece, with its structural finesse and abstracted espressivo, has cast its benevolent shadow on most subsequent composers of piano music.

Stravinsky's pianistic influence extends well beyond the few works he originally wrote for keyboard, not least because he was one of the first composers to establish the piano as an orchestral instrument (Symphony in Three Movements, Petrushka, The Wedding). His piano (or piano duet) versions of many of his orchestral works are, in effect, original pianistic conceptions, such was his instinctive feeling for the characteristic spacing of keyboard sonorities.

It was in 1912 that Cowell first began to experiment with hand and arm clusters as a means of colouring and outlining his melodic shapes and of creating harmonic areas rather than defined chords. In addition to these keyboard effects, he later explored the production of sounds directly from the strings themselves, either as pizzicatos, as glissandos on single strings or across the strings (as in The Banshee) or in conjunction with silently depressed keys (in order to produce arpeggiated chords, as in Aeolian Harp), or as harmonics, produced by the simultaneous stopping of relevant strings.

7. The avant garde and after. The possibilities explored by Cowell were woven by Cage into the aleatory fabric of his most substantial work for piano, Music of Changes. Cage also undertook a more radical examination of the piano as a resonating body: the accompaniment to his song, The Wonderful Widow of Eighteen Springs, is rendered entirely on various parts of the frame, with which the strings are made to resonate in sympathy by depressing the sustaining pedal. Moreover, he transformed the basic sound quality of the instrument by a

Ex.15 Webern: Variations op.27

Ex.16 Messiaen: Mode de valeurs et d'intensités

'prepared' extension of its timbral possibilities: by forcing certain strings to vibrate against wedges of various materials (metal, wood, rubber etc.), he opened up a particularly astonishing range of keyboard sonorities in his Sonatas and Interludes for prepared piano (1946–8). Other composers then turned to enriching the basically harp-like sounds obtained by acting directly on the strings, whether with various types of beater, plectra or cluster-producing blocks of differing length, weight and constitution, or with objects placed on the strings, to be set in motion by the action of the hammers. Together with the kinds of electronic enhancement now more readily to hand, the continuing development of sounds from within and around the instrument's body may be limited only by the patience and physical reach of the player.

It seems unlikely, however, that such methods of sound production will become established ingredients of instrumental technique unless and until manufacturers can agree to standardize the piano's internal structure. The relative indeterminacy of results may account for the fact that inside-piano effects have been generally ignored by those composers who have contributed importantly to the mid-20th century piano literature, including Copland, Feldman and Tippett, as well as Messiaen, Boulez, Berio and Stockhausen.

Even the most opulent of Messiaen's later works have a muscular background related to the kind of rhythmic counterpoint he first developed in Mode de valeurs et d'intensités (1949), where the basic idea of a rhythmic ostinato was widened into an ostinato system of serial control over the separate elements of duration, dynamics and attack as well as pitch. This made almost insuperable demands on the performer (as, later, did Boulez's Structures for two pianos and Stockhausen's early piano pieces) since such precise rhythmic and dynamic definition, within lines broken by jagged extremes of pitch, are scarcely realizable except by electronic means (see ex.16). The intellectual strictures of this piece merged with a freer, unmistakable pianism in his Cantéyodjayâ and in the vast Catalogue d'oiseaux, creating a range of keyboard colour as pervasive in its influence on the works of younger composers as was that of Bartók or Stravinsky on the music of an earlier generation.

Boulez's three sonatas and Stockhausen's first 11 Klavierstücke (all dating from the late 1940s and 1950s) stand as models of contemporary keyboard writing, both for the variety of their neo-virtuosity and for the range of their textural contrasts and expressive sonorities. Musically they display a sharp-edged violence whose stinging contrasts (which had at first seemed unplayable) have had the effect of enlarging both the scope and the standards of virtuoso pianism. They also demand an ability to define each degree of a dynamic palette that extends from ppp to fff and beyond, in combination with as many varieties of touch or attack. In the case of Stockhausen, these controls must additionally be linked to an ability to play clusters of precisely defined exterior limits, whether these take the form of single attacks, arpeggiated decorations or multiple glissandos (see ex.17).

In such works, and in pieces by such stylistically diverse composers as Barraqué, Dallapiccola, Berio, Pousseur, Xenakis, Carter and Cage, pedal technique is no longer left to the good taste of the performer but must comply with the specific demands of the score. The use of the sustaining pedal has become as integral to musical expression as dynamics or phrasing: techniques such as half-pedalling, after-pedalling (catching the resonance of a chord after releasing the attack) and flutter-pedalling (effecting the gradual release of an attack) have become commonplace. Increasing numbers of works (Boulez's

Ex.17 Stockhausen: Klavierstück X

Clusterglissandi schnell und leicht ohne Rücksicht auf nicht ansprechende Tasten ohne cis

Sonata no.3, Stockhausen's Klavierstücke V–XI and Berio's Sequenza IV, for instance) also require the use of the centre sostenuto pedal found on concert instruments to free selected strings from the damping mechanism, so allowing them to vibrate in sympathy with notes which may subsequently be sounded. Berio's Sequenza IV, built on the ground bass effect of such sustained notes or chords continually reinforced by the movement of the decorations imposed upon them, is a spectacular study in the use and management of this pedal.

With the influence of the international avant garde on the wane, the age of pan-European masterworks would seem gradually to have given way to a period of retreat and of nationalist consolidation. Of those born in the 1920s, Xenakis has persisted with a keyboard virtuosity beyond the reach of all but the exceptional few, as indeed have Ferneyhough and others of the 1940s generation. While Stockhausen's Klavierstücke XII–XVI (1978–84) double as instrumental episodes in Licht, his operatic work-in-progress, and Boulez's single-movement Incises (1994) is likewise to form part of a larger whole, Carter's Night Fantasies (1980) and Ligeti's Etudes (1985–) are slowly working their way into the repertory of those pianists seeking maximalist challenge in an era increasingly dominated by the minimalist. But while there is a growing number of composers (many from former USSR countries, including Pärt, Gorecki and Gubaidulina) whose predominantly contemplative music seldom finds room for a non-sustaining instrument such as the piano, there is plenty of evidence that traditional keyboard techniques continued to flourish in more popular vein elsewhere: Rzewski's Winnsboro Cotton Mill Blues (1980) and Nancarrow's only work not written for player-piano, the stylish Two Canons for Ursula (1989), are two fine examples of a transatlantic virtuosity that was clearly alive and well in the closing years of the century.

IV. Harpsichord music in the 20th century

The revival of the harpsichord (since 1889, when the firms of Erard, Pleyel and Tomasini each displayed newly made harpsichords at the Paris Exposition) led to a distinct, modern harpsichord style in which timbre as material to work with became an important feature of the composition. The development of the modern concert harpsichord modelled after the so-called Bach disposition of the alleged BACH HARPSICHORD (catalogue no.316 at the Musikinstrumenten-Museum, Berlin), with two manuals and a variety of stops, usually disposed 1 x 4′, 2 x 8′ and 1 x 16′, therefore had an influence on the style of many compositions, including Hugo Distler's Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings op.14 (1935–6). In this concerto, Distler made use of the then fashionable neo-Baroque Terrassendynamik ('terraced dynamics') and introduced echo effects by alternating between tutti registration and registration without the 16′ stop.

Roman Haubenstock-Ramati, in his Concerto for Harpsichord and Orchestra (1978; based on his Recitativo ed Aria, 1954–5), also used the registration effects of an instrument with the 'Bach disposition' plus harp stop and theorbo stop (on the 8′ and 16′). Haubenstock-Ramati was possibly the first composer to exploit fully the harpsichord's percussive quality. He introduced the harpsichord as a noise-making, pointilistic solo instrument in the spirit of musique concrète. His Concerto was the first of several works, by various composers, to exploit the modern harpsichord's potential as the only traditional acoustic instrument (with the exception of the organ) upon which the availability of a pre-determined variety of stop combinations permits serial employment of the parameter timbre in a consequently mechanistic manner.

The interplay between pedal stops on the two-manual keyboard forms the basis of another style of composition for the modern concert harpsichord, most obviously in Continuum by György Ligeti (1968). The composition's first sound, the interval G–B♭, demonstrates the aspect of changing timbres that is used throughout this composition: it is repeated many times prestissimo (resembling chains of trills), yet with alternating registration each time. Thus, the sound event receives a certain dynamic spatial structure, although it remains (for a certain period) static and has no development in traditional terms of musical construction. Ligeti referred in this context to the realization of 'acoustic illusions', influenced by the graphic art of Maurits Escher. Ligeti's composition has had many followers, from the negative parody of the title in Discontinuum, composed in 1978 by François Vercken, to the eclectic use of the trill as the dominant material for composition in works such as Penderecki's Partita (1971, rev.1991), Klaas de Vrie's Toccata Americana (1978), Hope Lee's Melboac (1983), Kaija Saariaho's Jardin secret II (1984–6) and Ruth Zechlin's Diagonalen (1990).

Another possibility offered by the two-manual harpsichord is the introduction of different temperaments on each of the manuals. In his *Tombeau de Marin Marais*for Baroque violin, two bass viols and harpsichord (1967), Pierre Bartholomeé suggested dividing the octave into 21 equal steps. Hans Zender, too, extended the traditional tempered system for the harpsichord in his Kantate nach Meister Eckhart (1980). Other compositions, in which each manual of the two-manual instrument has its own temperament, are Minos (1978) by Anneli Arho, The female modes (1985) by Ted Ponjee, and – designated for any keyboard instrument, but most effectively performed on the harpsichord – Fantango (1984) by Jukka Tiensuu.

Some compositions make use of the contrasting sound of two different keyboard instruments, such as piano and harpsichord. Martinů's Concert pour clavecin et petit orchestre (1935) is presumably the first work with such a combination of instruments. Here the orchestral forces include piano, flute, bassoon and strings. Elliott Carter's Double Concerto for harpsichord and piano with two chamber orchestras (1961) is the best known composition that features the contrast between those two keyboard instruments. In his cover notes to a recording of this work (Nonesuch H 71314, 1975), Carter wrote that 'the harpsichord and piano . . . are each given music idiomatic to their instruments, meant to appeal to the imaginations of their performers and cast them into clearly identifiable, independent roles'. Written for a particular model of harpsichord made by the American harpsichord builder John Challis (1907–74), with a great variety of timbres and a unique dynamic gradation of each stop owing to full-position and half-position hitches, the differentiation in sound that Carter employs in the harpsichord part matches the richness of shading of which the piano is capable.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GENERAL REFERENCE

W. Niemann: Das Klavierbuch: Geschichte der Klaviermusik und ihre Meister (Leipzig, 1922)
E. Blom: The Romance of the Piano (London, 1928)

D.F. Tovey: Essays in Musical Analysis (London, 1935–9/R, abridged 2/1981)
A. Lockwood: Notes on the Literature of the Piano (Ann Arbor and London, 1940)
A. Loesser: Men, Women and Pianos: a Social History (London, 1940)
W. Georgii: Klaviermusik (Zürich and Freiburg, 1941, 4/1965)
D. Brook: Masters of the Keyboard (London, 1946)
E. Hutcheson: The Literature of the Piano (New York, 1948, 2/1964/R)
J. Friskin and I. Freundlich: Music for the Piano … from 1580 to 1952 (New York, 1954/R)
J. Gillespie: Five Centuries of Keyboard Music (Belmont, CA, 1965/R)
F.E. Kirby: A Short History of Keyboard Music (New York, 1966)
K. Wolters: Handbuch der Klavierliteratur, i (Zürich and Freiburg, 1967)
M. Hinson: Keyboard Bibliography (Cincinnati, 1968)
D. Matthews, ed.: Keyboard Music (London, 1972)
M. Hinson: Guide to the Pianist's Repertoire, ed. I. Freundlich (Bloomington, IN, 1973) [comprehensive bibliography]
D. Gill, ed.: The Piano (London, 1981)

SPECIFIC STUDIES

NewmanSCE; NewmanSSB
E.J. Dent: 'The Pianoforte and its Influence on Modern Music', MQ, ii (1916), 271–94
A. Cortot: La musique française de piano (Paris, 1930–48/R; i–ii, Eng. trans. of vol. i only, 1932/R)
C. Parrish: The Early Piano and its Influence on Keyboard Technique and Composition in the Eighteenth Century (diss., Harvard U., 1939)
J.F. Russell: 'Mozart and the Pianoforte', MR, i (1940), 226–44
N. Broder: 'Mozart and the "Clavier"', MQ, xxvii (1941), 422–32
E. Reeser: De zonen van Bach (Amsterdam, 1941; Eng. trans., 1946)
C. Parrish: 'Haydn and the Piano', JAMS, i/3 (1948), 27–34
J. Kirkpatrick: 'American Piano Music: 1900–1950', Music Teachers' National Association: Proceedings, xliv (1950), 35–41
F.H. Garvin: The Beginning of the Romantic Piano Concerto (New York, 1952)
D. Stone: The Italian Sonata for Harpsichord and Pianoforte in the Eighteenth Century (1730–90) (diss., Harvard U., 1952)
A.G. Hess: 'The Transition from Harpsichord to Piano', GSJ, vi (1953), 75–94
K. Dale: Nineteenth-Century Piano Music (London, 1954/R) [foreword by Myra Hess]
H.F. Wolf: The 20th Century Piano Sonata (diss., Boston U., 1957)
E. Blom: 'The Prophesies of Dussek', Classics Major and Minor (London, 1958), 88–117
N. Demuth: French Piano Music (London, 1958)
T.L. Fritz: The Development of Russian Piano Music as Seen in the Literature of Mussorgsky, Rachmaninoff, Scriabin, and Prokofiev (diss., U. of Southern California, 1959)
P.F. Ganz: The Development of the Etude for Pianoforte (diss., Northwestern U., 1960)
J. Lade: 'Modern Composers and the Harpsichord', The Consort, no.19 (1962), 122–8
E. Badura-Skoda: 'Textural Problems in Masterpieces of the 18th and 19th Centuries', MQ, li (1965), 301–17
T.A. Brown: The Aesthetics of Robert Schumann (New York, 1968/R)
L.D. Stein: The Performance of Twelve-Tone and Serial Music for the Piano (diss., U. of Southern California, 1965)
M.J.E. Brown: 'Towards an Edition of the Pianoforte Sonatas', Essays on Schubert (New York, 1966), 197–216
K. Heuschneider: The Piano Sonata in the 18th Century in Italy (Cape Town, 1966)
D.L. Arlton: American Piano Sonatas of the Twentieth Century: Selective Analysis and Annotated Index (diss., Columbia U., 1968)
M.K. Ellis: The French Piano Character Piece of the Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries (diss., Indiana U., 1969)
E. Glusman: The Early Nineteenth-Century Lyric Piano Piece (diss., Columbia U., 1969)
K. Michałowski: Bibliografia chopinowska 1849–1969 (Kraków, 1970)
W.S. Newman: 'Beethoven's Pianos versus his Piano Ideals', JAMS, xxiii (1970), 484–504
H. Truscott: 'The Piano Music – I', The Beethoven Companion, ed. D. Arnold and N. Fortune (London, 1971)
K. Michałowski: 'Bibliografia chopinowska 1970–1973', Rocznik chopinowski, ix (1975), 121–75
E. Badura-Skoda: 'Prolegomena to a History of the Viennese Fortepiano', Israel Studies in Musicology, ii (1980), 77–99
H.M. Brown: 'Style in contemporary Harpsichord Writing', Composer, l xxvi–lxxvii (1982), 17–20
D. Burge: Twentieth Century Piano Music (New York, 1990)
R.L. Todd, ed.: Nineteenth-Century Piano Music (New York, 1990)
P.D. Roberts: Modernism in Russian Piano Music – Scriabin, Prokofiev, and their Russian Contemporaries (Bloomington, IN, 1993)
M. Elste: 'Kompositionen für nostalgische Musikmaschinen: das Cembalo in der Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts', JbSIM (1994), 199–246
D. Witten, ed.: Nineteenth-Century Piano Music: Essays in Performance and Analysis (New York, 1997)

JOHN CALDWELL (bibliography with CHRISTOPHER MAXIM) (I), BARBARA OWEN (II), ROBERT WINTER (III, 1–5), SUSAN BRADSHAW (III, 6–7), MARTIN ELSTE (IV)

Keyed bugle [key bugle, Kent bugle, Royal Kent bugle, Kent horn etc.] (Fr. bugle à clefs, trompette à clefs, cor à clefs; Ger. Klappenhorn, Klappenflügelhorn; It. cornetta a chiavi; Dutch Klephoorn). A conical, wide-bore, soprano brass instrument, with sideholes controlled by keys similar to those found on woodwind instruments. It is the precursor of the modern flugelhorn. In the Hornbostel-Sachs system it is classified as a trumpet.

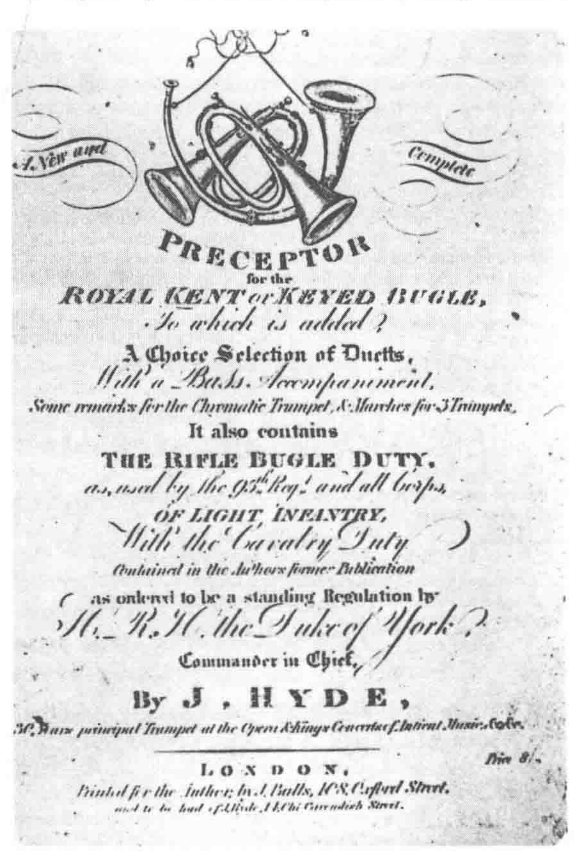
Keyed bugles are important in the brass band movement on both sides of the Atlantic. Early examples had only five keys, but instruments with up to 12 are found. The key closest to the bell (B♮ on an instrument in C) is the only one that remains open when the instrument is at rest; the others are opened to provide a chromatic sequence (C♯, D and E♭ by the right hand, E and F, on the lower part of the instrument, by the left), which may be augmented by alternatives and trill keys. Some later instruments have a whole-tone valve in place of the E and F keys. Most have a single loop (fig.1), but short, double-wound models are also found. Most early keyed bugles were pitched in C with a crook to B♭; later, others appeared in high E♭.

Most keyed bugles were made of copper with brass or German silver keys and fittings; instruments made of solid silver, gold and tortoiseshell also exist. Most of the fingering systems are extensions of the original concept, but the instruments made by Kersten of Dresden are notable exceptions: here an attempt was made to divide the arrangement of six keys equally between the hands. Keyed bugle mouthpieces are similar to those used on modern flugelhorns and 19th-century cornets in that they have a deep and conical cup. The mouthpieces are made of brass or ivory and are sometimes silver-plated. The rims tend to be flatter and sharper in shape than modern ones. As a result of the wide conical bore and the deep conical mouthpiece, a very mellow and woolly sound is produced, similar to but not identical with the sound of the modern flugelhorn. Because of the sonic phenomena associated with venting, the keyed bugle has a unique timbre.

The bandmaster of the Cavin Militia, Joseph Haliday (*c*1772–1827), added five keys to the common military bugle in Dublin in 1810. Haliday's patent (British patent no.3334) is dated 5 May 1810. Shortly after the instrument's invention, Haliday is believed to have sold the patent rights to the Dublin maker Matthew Pace for £50. It must have been about this time that a sixth key was added. While Haliday was stationed in Wexford with his band, J.B. Logier wrote his Introduction to the Art of

1. Keyed bugle by Metzler & Co., London, c1820–40 (Horniman Museum, London)

Playing on the Royal Kent Bugle (1813), dedicating it to the Duke of Kent. It is probable that Logier made Haliday's 'bugle horn' commercially successful by stamping 'Royal Kent Bugle' on instruments sold to military bandsmen (which Haliday, as a nationalistic Irishman, was unlikely to have done). Haliday attempted to discredit Logier, but he no longer had control of his invention.



One of the most famous English keyed bugle players was John Distin, whose playing may have inspired keyed bugle obbligato parts in some English operas of the period. Many English orchestral trumpeters also played the keyed bugle. Keyed bugles were commonplace in most British bands by the time of the Allied occupation of Paris in 1815. After Grand Duke Konstantin of Russia heard Distin playing with the Grenadier Guards Band, he asked the Parisian instrument maker Halary (Jean Hilaire Asté) to duplicate the English instruments. Halary's instrument (French patent no.1849, 1821) extended the idea of the keyed bugle to a whole consort of instruments, the tenor and bass members of which he called ophicleides. In 1822 a rider was attached to the original patent allowing for an even greater range of instruments, some of which were apparently never produced. Halary's instruments were approved by the Académie des Beaux-Arts, and the Athénée des Arts awarded him a medal for his achievement. This provoked a surge of keyed bugle making in London and the main European musical centres as well as in the USA. The American names of Graves and E.G. Wright and the British firms of Percival, Pace and Köhler represent a high standard of craftsmanship; many beautiful instruments have survived in museums and private collections.

In Germany, catalogues mention Klappenhorn or Klappenflügelhorn frequently among listings of military and wind music, but the keyed bugle was not considered seriously as an orchestral or solo instrument. However, it met with great success in the USA where famous soloists like Richard Willis (the first director of the West Point Military Academy Band), Francis ('Frank') Johnson (a black bandmaster in Philadelphia) and Edward ('Ned') Kendall performed solos and band pieces that were to establish an important tradition. The earliest documented use of the keyed bugle in the USA occurred in 1815. Many performers received ornate gift or presentation bugles: Frank Johnson was given a handsome silver one by Queen Victoria; some performers are known only through the inscriptions on the bugles they were given.

By the 1840s most bands in the USA were supplied with valved instruments, and both keyed and valved instruments were used. Kendall's famous duel with the great cornet player Patrick S. Gilmore in 1856 has been thought to signal the demise of the keyed bugle in the USA. Keyed bugles were, however, still used on both sides of the Atlantic up to the mid-1860s.

Most method books for the keyed bugle contain a selection of operatic airs and popular tunes (in solo and duet form). Band arrangements with parts for keyed bugle are common in catalogues of the period. Contemporary programmes indicate that vocal solos with keyed bugle obbligato were popular, but few selections were published in this format. An example of this type of parlour literature is a ballad by T. Phillips, entitled The Last Bugle (Philadelphia, 1822).

The keyed bugle was assigned important parts in a number of stage works including Bishop's The Miller and his Men (1813) and Guy Mannering (1816), Phillips's The Opera of the Russian Imposter (1822), Rossini's

A New and Complete

PRECEPTOR

for the

ROYAL KENT or KEYED BUGLE,

To which is added

A Choice Selection of Duetts,

With a Bass Accompaniment,

Some remarks for the Chromatic Trumpet, & Marches for 3 Trumpets,

It also contains

THE RIFLE BUGLE DUTY,

as used by the 95th Regt. and all Corps

OF LIGHT INFANTRY,

With the Cavalry Duty

Contained in the Authors former Publication as ordered to be a standing Regulation by

H. R. H. the Duke of York

Commander in Chief,

By J. HYDE,

LONDON,

2. Title-page of J. Hyde's 'A New and Complete Preceptor for the Royal Kent or Keyed Bugle' (London, c1818)

Semiramide (1823) and Rudolphe Kreutzer's Ipsiboé (1824). The parts for trompettes à clefs in the Paris score of Rossini's Guillaume Tell and in Meyerbeer's Robert le diable were, according to Dauverné, played on valved instruments and not the keyed bugles that the score indicated. At least two substantial works for solo bugle and orchestra are known, A.P. Heinrich's Concerto for Kent Bugle or Klappenflügel (1834) and Joseph Küffner's Polonaise pour le cor de signal-à-clef obligée (1823).

Substantial parts for the keyed bugle appear in the repertory of the Cyfarthfa Band, a 19th-century ensemble formed from the ranks of the Cyfarthfa Iron Works at Merthyr Tydfil, Wales; a sample of this repertory was recorded by the Wallace Collection on period instruments in 1995. The interest in period instrument performances of American Civil War brass band music has encouraged the use of keyed bugles in such ensembles. The Chestnut Brass Company has been a leader in this area, recording the music of Frank Johnson and other 19th-century American popular composers. The English composer Simon Proctor has contributed a Concerto (1991) for keyed bugle and orchestra which was given its first performance by Ralph Dudgeon and the Richmond (Virginia) Philharmonic in 1994.

See also REGENT'S BUGLE.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove5 (R. Morley Pegge)
J.B. Logier: Introduction to the Art of Playing on the Royal Kent Bugle (Dublin, 1813, 2/*c*1820–23)
J. Hyde: A New and Complete Preceptor for the Royal Kent or Keyed Bugle (London, *c*1818)
E. Goodale: The Instrumental Director (Hallowell, 3/1829) [only this edn has keyed bugle instructions]
Noblet: Nouvelle méthode de bugle (Paris, 1831)
Z.T. Purday, ed.: Tutor for the Royal Kent Bugle (London, *c*1835)
Tully: Tutor for the Kent Bugle (London, *c*1838)
Scherer: Méthode de bugle (Paris, 1845)
B.A. Burditt: The Complete Preceptor for the Bugle (Boston, *c*1850)
H.B. Dodworth: Dodworth's Brass Band School (New York, 1853)
A. Carse: Musical Wind Instruments (London, 1939/R)
A. Carse: The Orchestra from Beethoven to Berlioz (Cambridge, 1948/R)
R. Morley Pegge: 'The Horn and Later Brass', Musical Instruments through the Ages, ed. A. Baines (Harmondsworth, 1961, 2/1966/R), 266–85
A. Baines: European and American Musical Instruments (New York, 1966)
J. Wheeler: 'New Light on the Regent's Bugle, with some Notes on the Keyed-Bugle', GSJ, xix (1966), 65–70
R.E. Eliason: Keyed Bugles in the United States (Washington DC, 1972)
R.E. Eliason: Graves & Company, Musical Instrument Makers (Dearborn, MI, 1975)
A. Baines: Brass Instruments: their History and Development (London, 1976/R)
R.E. Eliason: 'The Dresden Key Bugle', JAMIS, iii (1977), 57–63
R.T. Dudgeon: The Keyed Bugle, its History, Literature and Technique (diss., U. of California, San Diego, 1980)
R.T. Dudgeon: 'Joseph Haliday, Inventor of the Keyed Bugle', JAMIS, ix (1983), 53–67
R.T. Dudgeon: The Keyed Bugle (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1993)

RALPH T. DUDGEON

Keyed trumpet (Fr. trompette à clefs; Ger. Klappentrompete; It. tromba a chiavi). A trumpet, generally with two double bends held in a horizontal plane. In the type developed by the Austrian trumpeter Anton Weidinger (1766–1852), the keys are brought together on one side of the instrument so as to be operated by one hand only; the other hand merely holds the instrument. Austrian specimens are usually fingered with the left hand, Italian ones with the right. The keys cover soundholes, and when opened raise the pitch: the key nearest the bell by a semitone, the next by a tone etc. Some trumpets have four, and some six keys, but five is the most common number (for illustration, see TRUMPET, fig.7*d*).

The first keyed trumpets were pitched in D and E♭. Later (*c*1820) they were made in G, A or A♭, with crooks for lower pitches; with the fixed position of the soundholes, this resulted in differing intonation and fingering, according to the crook employed. In Italy, they were also constructed in families of various sizes.

The first keyed trumpet was made in Dresden in *c*1770 (according to information in Schubart's Ideen zu einer Ästhetik der Tonkunst), and in 1791–2 Nessmann built a keyed trumpet in Hamburg. This was praised by Gerber (Neues historisch-biographisches Lexikon, 1812–14). In an advertisement for his 'Grand Public Concert' given in Vienna (28 March 1800) Weidinger stated that work on his 'organisirte Trompete', which had taken seven years, was finally accomplished. He also claimed the concert to be the first public performance on the instrument, which was equipped with several keys. However, in 1798 Weidinger had played in Kozeluch's Symphonie concertante for mandolin, trumpet, double bass, keyboard and orchestra at a public concert; the instrument used was called 'organisirte Trompete', so that the 'first performance' of 1800 must have been on a perfected model. The concert also included Haydn's Trumpet Concerto in E♭, written for Weidinger as early as 1796; the Kozeluch work is less demanding and less chromatic.

With Weidinger the keyed trumpet gained considerable success as a solo instrument. It was also used in military music from about 1820, especially in Austria and Italy, but towards 1840 it was superseded by the valve trumpet. Reconstructions of keyed trumpets have been made since 1971 by the firm of Instrumentenbau Egger (Basle) and distributed by Meinl & Lauber.

The tone of the keyed trumpet is softer and less penetrating than that of the previously employed natural trumpet, frequently being compared with a sonorous oboe or clarinet.

The keyed trumpet is not to be confused with the KEYED BUGLE, a member of the flugelhorn family, although it, too, was often called trompette à clefs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Carse: Musical Wind Instruments (London, 1939/R)
P. Bate: The Trumpet and Trombone (London, 1966/R)
R. Dahlqvist: The Keyed Trumpet and its Greatest Virtuoso, Anton Weidinger (Nashville, TN, 1975)
H. Heyde: Musikinstrumenten-Museum der Universität Leipzig, iii: Trompeten, Posaunen, Tuben (Leipzig, 1980)
R. Dahlqvist: Bidrag till trumpetens och trumpetspelets historia: från 1500-talet till mitten av 1800-talet, med särskild hänsyn till perioden 1740–1830 (Göteborg, 1988) [with Eng. summary]

REINE DAHLQVIST

Key note. The note by which the key of a composition, or a section thereof, is named and from which its scale starts, i.e. the FINAL of a church mode or the TONIC of the major or minor mode.

Keyrleber [Keirleber], Johann Georg (b Nürtingen, Württemberg, 27 Nov 1639; d ?Stuttgart, ? after 1691). German composer. He went to Tübingen University in 1657 and obtained the master's degree in 1660. Between 1662 and 1674 he taught at Güglingen, Markgröningen, Neuffen and Alpirsbach. From 1677 he lived at Frankfurt and on 4 October that year he became a master at the Gymnasium. On 31 January 1678 he was appointed senior chorister at the Barfüsserkirche and soon became director of the choir school. He was dishonourably discharged on 19 April 1683 after being prosecuted for slander. After various petitions on his behalf had been rejected he earned his living from 1685 as a musician in charitable institutions and hospitals in Stuttgart. He clearly became a social outcast, and this is reflected in his fly-sheet Dem Drey-Einigen wahren Gott ... dedicirt, in which elements of antiquity, Christianity, humanism, theology, music and the graphic arts are combined in an unusual way; the music consists of a perpetual canon and an arietta, both in eight parts. The sacred concerto In festum Ascensionis is specially notable for its instrumental scoring, for two violins, two cornetts, two trombones, bass viol, bassoon, dulcian and violone. Keyrleber is known to have written at least four works (now lost) for Frankfurt and Nürtingen between 1677 and 1683.

WORKS

Aggratulatio musico-poetica, qua Leopoldo Imperatori romano ... dies natalis, qui extat hujus 1691. an. 19 martij, canon (n.p., ?1691)

Dem Drey-Einigen wahren Gott, Obristen Capellmeistern ... Regens Chori der Cherubin und Seraphin ... eine ... künstliche Music ... nehmlich in dreyen Systematibus ein Canon Perpetuus ... eine Arietta ... präsentirt und dedicirt, 8vv (n.p., n.d.); facs. in Maier, ed. in Kunz

Perpetuum mobile musico-poeticum, das ist, Immerwehrender Arbeit Ewigwehrender Gnaden-Lohn, perpetual canon, 6vv (n.p., *c*1691)

In festum Ascensionis, sacred concerto, 4vv, 2 cornetts, 2 trbn, 2 vn, b viol, bn, dulcian, vle, D-F

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; MGG1 (U. Siegele); WaltherML

C. Valentin: Geschichte der Musik in Frankfurt am Main vom Anfange des XIV. bis zum Anfange des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Frankfurt, 1906/R), 188ff

H. Maier: 'Der Chemnitzer Liederblatt-Fund', Heimatbeilage der Nürtinger Zeitung (17 Dec 1955)

E. Kunz: 'Das entschlüsselte Chemnitzer Liederblatt', Lokalbeilage der Nürtinger Zeitung (31 March 1956)

EBERHARD STIEFEL

Keys, Ivor (Christopher Banfield) (b Littlehampton, Sussex, 8 March 1919; d Birmingham, 7 July 1995). English musician and educationist. He received his schooling at Christ's Hospital where he studied the organ with C.S. Lang. In 1933 he took the ARCO and in 1934 the FRCO (he was then the youngest player to do so). After studying at the Royal College of Music (1936–8), notably with Thalben-Ball, he won an organ scholarship to Christ Church, Oxford, in 1938 and became cathedral sub-organist there. He took the BA and BMus in 1940, and after war service returned to Oxford in 1946, gaining the DMus in that year. In 1947 he became a lecturer at the Queen's University, Belfast; in 1950 he was appointed reader, and in 1951 Sir Hamilton Harty Professor of Music. In 1954 he became professor of music at Nottingham University and from 1968 until his retirement in 1986 he was Peyton and Barber Professor of Music at Birmingham University. He was president of the Royal College of Organists, 1968–70. He was made CBE in 1976.

Keys's activities always centred on music-making, whether as pianist, organist, harpsichordist or conductor. He gave series of television lectures on music in 1967 and 1976–7. His writing is marked by its clarity of expression and demonstrates his broad range of interests. Among his compositions, his Clarinet Concerto, Magnificat and Nunc dimittis are the best known.

WRITINGS

The Texture of Music: from Purcell to Brahms (London, 1961)

'German Music', Twentieth Century German Literature, ed. A. Closs (London, 1969), appx

Brahms Chamber Music (London, 1974/R)

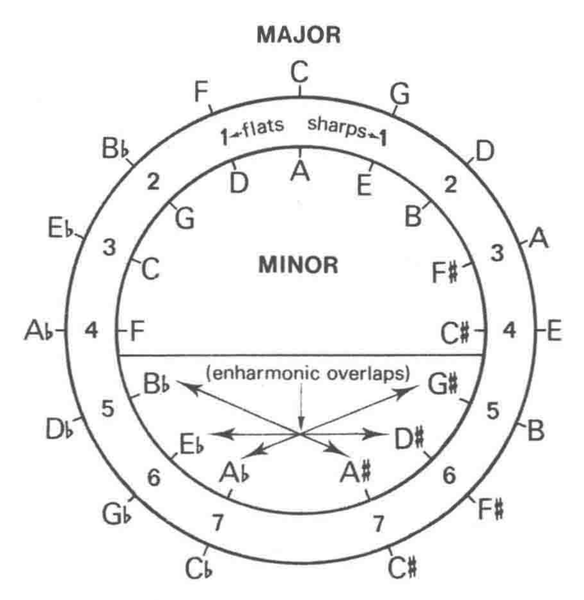
Mozart: his Music in his Life (London, 1980)

Johannes Brahms (London, 1989)

DAVID SCOTT/R



Key signature. In Western notation the group of sharp or flat signs placed at the beginning of a composition, immediately after the clef, or in the course of a composition generally after a double bar. The signs affect all notes of the same names as the degrees on which they stand, and thus define the key of the composition. The illustration shows the signatures of major and minor keys (it also, in effect, shows the circle of 5ths, first described by J.D. Heinichen, in Der General-Bass, 1728).

The use of ♭ as a prefacing signature at the beginning of a staff is found in the earliest manuscripts using the staff (11th–12th centuries). A signature of two flats appears in the conductus Hac in die rege nato (I-Fl 29.1, f.332*r*) in both voices for six whole systems (f.333*r*); the piece begins and ends without signature. The 'partial' signature – that is, the composite one arising where different individual parts have different signatures (usually a lower one having one more flat than an upper one) – is found in the 13th century and became common in the 14th (for discussion of its significance see MUSICA FICTA).

The association of a signature with a definite key is a late 18th-century development. Before this pieces were often written with, in minor keys, one flat fewer (e.g. Bach's 'Dorian' Toccata and Fugue BWV538), or, in major keys, one sharp fewer (e.g. Handel's Suite in E, Set 1 no.5 for harpsichord), than would be used in the modern system. The increasingly chromatic writing of late 19th- and 20th-century music frequently led to the abandonment of key signatures.

See also ACCIDENTAL and NOTATION, §III, 3(i), 4(vi).

□

Key signatures of major and minor keys

Keywork. The term used to denote collectively the various mechanical contrivances which have been devised to supplement the fingers in controlling the tone holes of wind instruments. The function of a key is to enable finger pressure applied at a convenient point to open or close a hole of any required size in any required position. Without the prior existence of established principles of keywork, some modern instruments designed following rational acoustic lines, for example the saxophone or heckelphone, could not have been realized.

1. Early history. 2. Early form and construction. 3. Modern form and construction. 4. 19th- and 20th-century systems. 5. Experimental and unusual systems: (i) Modified Boehm system flutes (ii) Boehm system clarinets, oboes and bassons (iii) Fully vented classic systems for flutes (iv) Mechanized throat keys for the clarinet.

1. Early history. From very early days the need has been felt to provide wind instruments with a more extensive and musically useful scale than the mere harmonic series proper to a tube of fixed length. The process of varying the 'effective length' of a tube by means of side holes opened and closed by the fingers has been used empirically since the neolithic period, as shown for example by bone pipes preserved in burial places, but the systematic disposition of such holes seems to belong to a much later cultural stage. The oldest surviving examples of organized side hole arrays known at present are of Sumerian origin, and date from about 2800 BCE. Thereafter deliberately positioned side holes are found in instruments of successive cultures up to the eclipse of the Roman Empire and the coming of the Dark Ages, but there is no sure evidence among them of any device in the nature of a key to supplement the fingers, unless the mechanisms used on some Greek auloi to close off unwanted holes when playing in specific modes are accepted as such (see Aulos, §I, 5(v)).

From the 12th century CE onwards there is some evidence of both reed pipes and flutes with six holes giving a diatonic scale of seven degrees, the octave being sounded by overblowing the lowest note. This organization also provided certain more or less satisfactory intermediate tones by the process of 'fork fingering'. In addition, the overall compass was sometimes extended by lengthening the tube and boring a further hole which could be stopped by the lowermost little finger. By the early 16th century such pipes were being made in various sizes paralleling the different ranges of the human voice, and it was at this stage that practical difficulties began. The acoustic laws relating the size and position of side holes made possible the placing of the six primary holes in two fairly close-set groups of three, but this device could be carried only so far. By simple proportion the longer the tube, the wider the spacing between holes necessary for reasonable intonation, soon exceeding the stretch of the normal hand. On some instruments the player can adjust the pitch of certain notes by blowing; when the limit of this ability is reached mechanical assistance becomes essential.

The first primitive keys were most likely designed to assist the little finger; the oldest surviving authoritative illustrations, by Virdung (1511) and Hans Burgkmair (Maximilian's Triumphal Procession, *c*1516–18), show no other arrangement. Accounts of the Duke of Burgundy for 1423 and 1439, recording the purchase of 'bombardes à clef' and 'teneurs à clef' for the court, show that keys were in fact used nearly a century earlier. Teseo Ambrosio's account of the Phagotum offers some proof that a more advanced application of simple keys existed by the 1530s, and Praetorius in Theatrum instrumentorum (1620) shows keys for the thumbs on both large shawms and bassoon types. From this period on there is evidence of an increasing use of simple mechanism, although at the end of the 18th century it remained somewhat crude and often inefficient. As late as 1815 Gustave Vogt, professor of oboe at the Paris Conservatoire, questioned the efficiency of keys and advocated using as few as possible. At that time instrument makers in Germany and Austria were already quite generous in providing them.

At least three centuries seem to have elapsed between the invention of keys for wind instruments and their application to improve the layout of the primary holes. Borjon de Scellery, in a celebrated plate published with his Traité de la musette (1672), depicted a large oboe (possibly a quinte de hautbois; see Oboe, §II, 4, fig.3) which appears to have something of the sort, and a few similar instruments are preserved in continental museums as 'basses de musette', but these are thought to have been exceptional and their history is obscure. A bass transverse flute by Jan Beuker in the Paris Conservatoire collection has two jointed open keys which much improve the primary layout; the instrument dates from the first half of the 18th century. Similar instruments employing simple second-order levers were illustrated in Diderot's Encyclopédie in 1769 ('Lutherie') and were being made by Delusse of Paris in about 1760. In 1810 the London maker Malcolm MacGregor patented an instrument of this type and the principle was revived again by Abel Siccama of London in the 1840s. These apparently unrelated recurrences of a single idea prove the difficulty of tracing clear and unbroken lines of development (if indeed such exist) with keywork as with many other features of musical instruments. There is unfortunately no authoritative instrumental historian between Martin Agricola (published 1528 and later) and Praetorius (1619), a period rich in important developments. It is well to keep in mind that through natural conservatism or prejudice new devices were often slow to replace older, less efficient ones, and to avoid reading into slender evidence more than is warranted.

The use of keys to create a chromatic scale probably began about the last quarter of the 18th century, firstly with the transverse flute. Before that time resistance fingerings (fork fingerings and half-hole fingerings) had furnished all the primary semitones except the lowest and with reed instruments, where this technique was quite satisfactory, it continued to do so for many more years; even today this process is of much service. Modern research has explained why the acoustic properties of the one-key flute make it more difficult to 'pull' into tune when resistance fingerings are used than was, for example, the 18th-century oboe, and no doubt this deficiency stimulated experiment with chromatic keys.

2. Early form and construction. The earliest known closed keys were simply cut out of a single piece of sheet brass, with the touch, shank and pad cover all incorporated into the unit (fig.1*a*). The pad cover was faced with leather either sewn or cemented on. Early open keys assumed two configurations, the more common being similar to the closed key except that it required two interlinked shanks, each having its own transverse pivot (fig.1*b*). The other type was a second-order lever, with a pivot on one end of the shank, a padded plate on the

1. Examples of keywork from the 17th century to the 20th other and a touchpiece in the middle. In both cases the pivot was a wire passing through upward-bent and perforated lugs. This arrangement was somewhat delicate and was provided with protective covers of wood or metal in almost all the earliest examples (see SHAWM, fig.1). In the later 17th century the key shank lay in a slot cut in a ring, later reduced to a block left standing above the surface of the body tube. A small hole bored tangentially through both ring and shank carried a close-fitting pivot pin. This arrangement is in fact efficient, if inelegant, and remained in use until the early 1900s (fig.1*c*).

In the early 18th century metal saddles of channel section, screwed or pinned to the joint, began to augment or replace the wooden mounting blocks (fig.1*d*). Their principal use was on bassoons as it was difficult to leave a wooden ring or block standing when carving a large, irregularly shaped joint, but metal saddles also appeared on oboes and clarinets, often in combination with the older wooden blocks or rings. The existence of both types of mountings on the same instrument does not necessarily indicate that the saddles were later additions.

The tightness of the seal between pad and joint depended on the resilience of the facing material and the shape of the pad seat. Fashioning the earliest pad seats involved merely flattening the tube surface around the hole, but by the end of the 17th century in France pad seats were more developed. The form of the padded plate and of the touchpiece sometimes helps to date woodwind instruments. The earliest known padded plates were round or racquet-shaped. In France at the end of the 17th century they were either round or rectangular, and by the end of the 18th century octagonal plates were fitted by many oboe makers who used characteristic decoration (see Young). The 'fishtail' shape, seen on some touchpieces (fig.1*b*), may indicate an origin before the firm adoption of the 'left hand above right' playing position, although on oboes it survived as an ornament perhaps as late as 1830. Early return-springs consisted of a leaf of hard brass fixed to the surface of the instrument body and pressing upwards against the key body. Later a spring of brass, then steel, was screwed or riveted to the key itself and, to reduce friction and wear, bore on a slip of metal set into the surface of the body tube. When nearly all woodwind keys were simple, they were named according to the note sounded when the finger was applied. With more modern, integrated fingering systems this system of nomenclature has become inadequate.

3. MODERN FORM AND CONSTRUCTION. A device fundamental to all modern keywork made its first appearance in about 1800 on instruments of high quality. A pair of turned metal pillars is attached to a fitted metal footplate or screwed directly into the tube wall. The pivot associated with these pillars may be either a tube threaded on to a steel axle supported between the pillars (fig.1*e*), or a solid rod supported by conical pivot screws, one in each of the paired pillars (fig.1*f*). About 1830 a most useful variant of key design appeared, in which the padded plate and touchpiece were attached to the opposite ends of a long rod or tube pivoted between pillars as described above. When both the touchpiece and padded plate extend from the rod in the same direction, the key is an open key (fig.1*g*). When they extend in opposite directions, it is closed (fig.1*h*). Keys of this sort were a great improvement over long levers where wide stretches had to be bridged; since a key of the new type was anchored at each end by a pillar, there was less chance that the position of the touch or pad would be disturbed by a flexing of the shank.

By the mid-18th century cast or forged bar metal had begun to replace sheet metal for key shanks, but brass remained the usual metal for keywork through the early 19th century, with silver at times for superior instruments. White bronzes – generically known as German silver or nickel silver – were introduced about 1830 and became the standard material for modern keywork. In the late 19th century the hand production of standard-pattern keys in quantity flourished as a home industry in France, contributing much to the ability of French makers to sell instruments of decent quality at highly competitive prices.

Another advance was the invention of the needle spring (fig.1*i*), most probably by Auguste Buffet jeune in Paris about 1838: a tempered wire of gold or steel is anchored in one of the pillars, while its free end bears on a tiny hook soldered to the key tube. The bias of such springs is very easily adjusted and they are widely used today on instruments of all sizes.

Pad airtightness was considerably improved around the middle of the 19th century by the invention of stuffed pads, or 'elastic plugs' as some makers called them. These were 'purses' of fine kid, filled with a ball of lamb's wool and drawn together with a thread. Like the natural fingertip, they were flexible and adapted themselves to seal the holes. As the pads could not be easily attached to flat cover-plates with shellac, the cement in common use, the key-heads were themselves modified to a hemispherical cup or 'saltspoon' form (fig.1*j*). But stuffed pads tended to bulge in use and 'shade' the tone hole, flattening the pitch and damping the tone. The modern pad thus comprises a cardboard disc, a layer of felt and a covering of fine kid, animal membrane or waterproof plastic film, supported in a much shallower, flatter cup. Some modern pads are made of resilient, homogeneous plastic, and many professional oboes are padded mainly with cork. Pad seats have developed into carefully cut recessed cones on non-metal instruments (fig.1*k*) and raised collars in the walls of metal ones (fig.1*l*).

4. 19TH- AND 20TH-CENTURY SYSTEMS. During the middle third of the 19th century improved acoustical knowledge, manufacturing innovations and escalating performance demands inspired revolutionary developments in keywork, especially interdependent systems in which keys acting on different tone-holes were linked. New devices addressed the same tasks to which earlier, individual keys had been applied: bridging the distance between the sidehole and its operating finger, extending the range and replacing or improving fork fingerings. The brille (Ger.: 'spectacles'), a device based on a ring surrounding a side hole, helped to equalize the tone of fork-fingered notes. Although Frederick Nolan apparently used such rings as early as 1808, the true potential of the device was not realized until Theobald Boehm combined a pair of rings with a satellite pad cup on his flute of 1831 (fig.1*m*). By allowing three fingers to control four open holes the brille provided greatly improved venting for fork-fingered notes, and gave inventors the means to devise logically inspired fingering systems with far less regard for the physical limitations of the hand. The clutch uses levers with interlinked ends to modify key action. Early open keys used a clutch to connect the two key-shanks, one of which carried the touch and the other the pad cup. In this application the height adjustment of the clutch was not critical. About 1840 Buffet jeune assigned new responsibilities to the clutch by creating a mechanism in which both lever arms carry a pad cup. In this case the height of the clutch must be carefully adjusted by shims or an adjusting screw (figs.1*n* and 1*o*) to ensure that both pad cups close their associated holes simultaneously and completely. Such a clutch may be termed critical. By proper use of critical clutches many complex actions can be devised: for example, the function of a brille can be duplicated in a mechanism which uses closed pad cups instead of rings (fig.1*p*). The use of opposing springs was another mid-century innovation. Typically, this mechanism involves a weak opening spring fitted to a satellite pad cup which is normally held closed by one or more levers equipped with stronger closing springs. Useful results may be obtained by applying both opening and closing pressures simultaneously. One of the earliest applications of this device was the G♯ mechanism for flutes (fig.1*q*) devised by Vincent Dorus and Louis Lot in 1837–8 (see BOEHM, THEOBALD). Frédéric Triébert's système 5 oboe of about 1855 provides a possibly more useful example (fig.1*r*). Two subordinate mechanisms complete the list of devices used in modern fingering systems: the rocker, which resembles a seesaw (fig.1*s*), and the bridge bar, which carries motion around intervening mechanisms mounted on the same axle.

The range of a woodwind instrument is extended by lengthening the tube at the lower end to add lower notes or by facilitating the production of the higher harmonics in order to add or stabilize higher notes. In both cases keywork is essential. The note produced when all six primary holes are covered is called the six finger note and marks the lower end of the domain of the primary fingers. Notes below that comprise the extension: these are usually controlled by the little fingers of both hands, using keywork. On bassoons and some low-pitched clarinets the added tube is so long that the thumbs must also be employed. The challenge faced by builders devising keywork for the extension was to use two comparatively weak fingers to control several notes (at least three, usually four or more) in a sure, smooth manner. Keywork for the extension has generally involved simple keys and clutches, and sometimes opposing springs. Smoothness was achieved by providing duplicate touches so that the fingers could alternate, by providing rollers between touches so that they could slide gracefully from key to key, by using opposing springs so that pressing certain keys simultaneously gave the desired result, or by any combination of these. There is more variety among extension mechanisms than among keywork controlled by the principal fingers, and this variety seems to be based on the traditions of the individual woodwind types rather than on logical considerations. Although the demands on the extensions of modern woodwind instruments are similar, every woodwind type retains its characteristic extension design.

On all woodwind instruments except flutes the production of higher harmonics is usually aided by small vents high on the instrument's body, controlled by keys operated by the left thumb. These octave or register keys are often simple closed keys. One is usually sufficient for clarinets, while bassoons may require three or more. Many modern oboes, most bass clarinets and nearly all saxophones have an automatic register mechanism which, when activated by pressing the left thumb touch, chooses between two register vents on the basis of linkages with elements of the lower keywork. There are many variations of this ingenious mechanism but most require clutches, rockers and opposing springs (fig.1*s*).

19th-century fingering systems that have been widely adopted have represented one of two general approaches. One type, exemplified by the Albert-Oehler clarinet and the conservatoire system oboe, evolved pragmatically as mechanical devices were added to enhance the capabilities of the six traditional finger-holes (evolutionary). On the other type, over which Theobald Boehm had a great deal of influence, a geometrically correct series of holes for the semitones was calculated and a suitable mechanism devised to control them (Boehm system); for example the Boehm flute and the saxophone. With the exception of bassoons all modern woodwind instruments of both types have a brille controlled by the primary fingers of the right hand. The type of brille used helps to identify which of the two approaches a particular instrument represents. On evolutionary instruments the rings of the brille surround the lower two holes and the satellite pad cup lies between the two upper holds. When the three principal fingers of the right hand are lifted consecutively from the bottom, the intervals produced are tone, tone, semitone. On oboes and similar instruments the notes produced are D, E, F♯ and G, and the satellite vent produces a fork F with a tone approaching that of the other pitches. Such instruments invariably have a prominent closed key for F which lies between the lower two holes (fig.1*t*). On Boehm system instruments, raising the right-hand fingers consecutively gives tone, semitone, tone: that is, D, E, F, G on flutes and similar instruments. The rings of the brille surround all three finger-holes, and the satellite pad cap is located above the highest finger-hole where (when closed by the lowest ring) it improves the fork F♯ (fig.1*u*). Most modern flutes, oboes and saxophones now have padded plates instead of rings (fig.1*p*).

5. EXPERIMENTAL AND UNUSUAL SYSTEMS. Beside the mechanisms which have gained general acceptance there is an interesting group of experimental and rejected mechanisms, many of which show remarkable ingenuity. In general, these were attempts to solve some perceived problem which the standard mechanisms do not, in the mind of the inventor, sufficiently address.

(i) Modified Boehm system flutes. Boehm proposed that ideally every semitone on a woodwind instrument should have its own hole, that the hole should be correctly placed geometrically, as large as practically possible and associated with an open-standing key. The realization of this concept is termed full venting. Modern flutes and saxophones approach this ideal, but practical considerations prevent its full implemation. Attempts to bring the flute's mechanism closer to the ideal have involved the addition of open G♯ and D♯ keys, and a separate vent for C♯. Boehm himself considered improvements in all these areas and was a strong advocate of the open G♯. This represents one of the few instances in which Boehm's idea was not accepted by modern flautists. He also considered an open D♯, but felt that having the player hold the D♯ key open was better because it stabilized the playing position. Inventions by others provided open G♯ and D♯ keys, but at the cost of illogical and unwieldy control of the instrument's lowest notes. Some inventors also attempted to improve the venting of e‴ and f♯‴ by devising various complex mechanisms. Those working along these lines included J.C.G. Gordon, R.S. Rockstro, Cornelius Ward, T. van Everen, François Bourne, Djalma Julliot and, more recently, Alexander Murray.

(ii) Boehm system clarinets, oboes and bassoons. Several attempts were made to apply Boehm's concepts of keywork and full venting to instruments other than the flute. Buffet jeune transferred much of Boehm's keywork to the clarinet but wisely refrained from adopting the concept of full venting; his instrument (patented 1844) has become the standard. Several builders added elements of Boehm's keywork to oboes and bassoons, with or without using full venting. Perhaps the best-known attempts were made by the Triébert firm in Paris, for which Boehm provided (at least in the case of the bassoon) the geometric schemata for tone hole size and placement. Elegant and complex, Thiébert-Boehm system oboes and bassoons still exist in museums but their tone quality is deemed uncharacteristic, probably due to the brightening effect of the large, open-standing tone holes. Along similar lines, various saxophone-fingered oboes were tried. Builders associated with these experiments include Adolphe Sax, H.J. Haseneier, A.J. Lavigne, John Sharpe, Ward, C. Kruspe and the firms Gautrot, Triébert, Boosey & Hawkes, Buffet and Heckel.

(iii) Fully vented classic systems for flutes. A number of flute makers desired to obtain the acoustical benefits of full (or at least increased) venting while retaining, in essence, the fingerings of the classic instrument. Builders working along these lines included Siccama, Richard Carte, R.S. Pratten, Giulio Briccialdi and John Clinton. Some later designs from Rudall, Carte contrived to put both Boehm and classic finger patterns on the same instrument, letting the player decide which to use. An interesting inversion of the movement towards full venting is the existence of keywork designed to decrease the venting of certain notes in order to preserve, as much as possible, the classical venting. An example may be found in the right-hand mechanism of Viennese oboes by Zuleger.

(iv) Mechanized throat keys for the clarinet. Generations of amateur clarinettists have been annoyed by the need to move the left index finger from its home position over the first finger-hole in order to play the closed keys for g♯′, a′ and b♭′, and several builders have invented keywork that controls these throat vents without displacing this finger. These keywork systems connect the vents to rings surrounding the primary side holes of either or both hands; they are usually complicated and, although they can be made to work, none has ever achieved much acceptance by professional players. Those engaged in devising this sort of mechanism include V.-C. Mahillon, the firm of Rudall, Rose, Carte & Co., Antonio Romero y Andía, G.H. Child and, in the middle of the 20th century, T.F. McIntyre.

A small but remarkable set of woodwind instruments exists on which a semitone or chromatic series of changes is produced as the principal fingers are lifted consecutively, instead of the usual diatonic progression. The goal of the inventors was to eliminate all (or nearly all) keywork. The difficulty with this concept lies in the unalterable fact that humans are not endowed with enough fingers to control a 12-note chromatic scale without keywork or fork fingerings, to say nothing of supporting the instrument. Nevertheless, C.T. Giorgi produced, at the turn of the 20th century, an 11-hole, keyless, chromatic vertical flute which required the use of every finger and thumb as well as the side of the left index finger for musical purposes. Other inventors augmented or replaced some of the open holes with keys, but the basic chromatic fingering pattern which defines instruments of this type has made them generally unacceptable to professional musicians. Other inventors who have worked on such instruments incude Siccama, Ward, R. Burghley, and H.L. Schaffner.

See FINGERING, §III, 1–2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-Langwilll; YoungHI
T. Boehm: Die Flöte und das Flötenspiel (Munich, 1871/R; Eng. trans., 1922/R)
V.-C. Mahillon: Catalogue descriptif & analytique du Musée instrumental du Conservatoire royal de musique de bruxelles (Ghent and Brussels, 1880–1922, repr. 1978 with addl material; i, 2/1893; ii, 2/1909)
R.S. Rockstro: A Treatise on the Flute (London, 1890, 2/1928/R)
A. Carse: Musical Wind Instruments (London, 1939/R)
F.G. Rendall: The Clarinet (London, 1954, 3/1971 by P. Bate)
P. Bate: The Oboe (London, 1956, 3/1975)
A.C. Baines: Woodwind Instruments and their History (London, 1957, 3/1967)
L.E. Gilliam and W. Lichtenwanger: The Dayton C. Miller Flute Collection: a Checklist of Instruments (Washington DC, 1961)
L.G. Langwill: The Bassoon and Contrabassoon (London, 1965)
P. Bate: The Flute (London, 1969, 2/1979)
P. Bate: The Bate Collection of Historical Wind Instruments (Oxford, 1976)
N. Toff: The Development of the Modern Flute (New York, 1979/R)
J. Voorhees: The Classification of Flute Fingering Systems (Buren, 1980)
G. Joppig: Oboe und Fagott (Berne, 1981; Eng. trans., 1988)
W. Waterhouse: The Proud Bassoon: the Waterhouse Collection of Bassoons and Related Items (Edinburgh, 1983)

PHILIP BATE/JERRY VOORHEES

Khachaturian, Aram (Il′ich) (b Tbilisi, 24 May/6 June 1903; d Moscow, 1 May 1978). Armenian composer, conductor and teacher. He is considered by some to be the central figure in 20th-century Armenian culture and, along with Prokofiev and Shostakovich, was a pillar of the Soviet school of composition. He influenced the development of composition not only in Armenia but also in Asia and South America. His name graces the Grand Concert Hall in Yerevan, a string quartet has been named after him and a prize in his name was instituted by the Armenian Ministry of Culture. His house was opened as a museum in 1978 and since 1983 the International Khachaturian Fund in Marseilles has held competitions for pianists and violinists.

Khachaturian's earliest musical impressions came from hearing folk music in Tbilisi and listening to his mother sing (he dedicated his opus one, the Pesnya stranstvuyushchego ashuga ('The Song of the Wandering Ashugh' to her in 1925). While studying at the Tbilisi Commercial College (1913–20) he played in an amateur wind band and started composing piano pieces. In 1921 he moved to Moscow where he entered the university to study biology (1922–5) and the Gnesin Institute to study the cello with Bïchkov and Borisyak. He then transferred to the composition faculty where his teachers were Glier and Gnesin; during this period he also wrote incidental music for the Second Armenian Drama Studio, where his brother S. Khachaturov directed. He subsequently studied at the Moscow Conservatory for a number of years (1929–34, postgraduate work 1934–6), taking composition classes with Gnesin and then Myaskovsky, orchestration with Vasilenko and harmony with Georgy Konyus. He was accepted into the Composers' Union in 1932, and although he served for a while as deputy chairman of its organizing committee (1939–48), Zhdanov's denunciation of him in 1948 as a formalist effectively curtailed his activities in officialdom until 1957 when Khachaturian was appointed board secretary of the union, a post he held until his death.

Khachaturian wrote over 50 works during his student years. These range from the Pesnya-poèma ('Song-Poem') for violin and piano (1929), written under the influence of hearing an ensemble of Armenian ashugh in Moscow, the Seven Fugues for piano (1928), to which seven recitatives were added in 1966 and the famous Toccata for piano (1932), to the Trio for clarinet, violin and piano (1932) which, on Prokofiev's recommendation, was performed and published in Paris. In 1933 he wrote the orchestral Tantseval'naya syuita ('Dance Suite') based on Armenian, Azerbaijani, Georgian and Uzbek themes and he married his conservatory classmate Nina Makarova (1908–76). Although his graduation piece, the First Symphony, demonstrates that his originality and artistry was developing rapidly, it was the Piano Concerto (1936) that first possessed the brilliance of colour, vitality and synthesis of symphonism and improvisation characteristic of his mature style. While this work became the basis for the genre of instrumental concerto in Armenian music, Khachaturian was the first composer in the country to write music for films with sound; he retained an active interest in cinema until the end of his life. Many of his film scores were made into orchestral suites: for example, material from the documentary V.I. Lenin became the Oda pamyati Lenina ('Ode in Memory of Lenin').

During the years leading up to World War II Khachaturian enjoyed the friendships of a wide range of people including the writers Romain Rolland, Gor'ky and Shahinian, the artist Sar'ian, as well as the performers Oborin and Oystrakh (for whom he wrote concertos) and composers including Prokofiev, Shostakovich and Spendiarian. Later on, this circle encompassed Boulanger, Chaplin, Hemingway, Karajan, Messiaen, Rostropovich, Rubinstein, Sibelius, Stravinsky and Szeryng. He stayed in Yerevan in 1939 and the visit stimulated the composition of the ballet Schast'ye ('Happiness'), while the next two years saw the production of the Violin Concerto and the incidental music for Lope de Vega's The Widow of Valencia and Lermontov's Maskarad. After the USSR entered the war he wrote the ballet Gayane (in which he used some of the Schast'ye material) and the Second Symphony both of which, like the Violin Concerto, received state prizes. These two works represent the summation of the two main lines of Khachaturian's writing: the neo-folkloristic style and dramatic romanticism. The most important works of the postwar years include the Cello Concerto (1946), the Third Symphony (1947) and the ballet Spartacus (1950–54) which was first performed at the Kirov Theatre in Leningrad in 1956 and in a revised form at the Bol'shoy in Moscow in 1968.

Khachaturian began conducting in 1950 and made appearances with programmes of his own works in over 30 countries. In the same year he was appointed to teach composition at the Gnesin Institute and the Moscow Conservatory; his pupils included Ėshpay, Gabunia, Khagagortian, Rïbnikov and Vieru. The 1960s saw the composition of three concerto-rhapsodies for violin (1961), cello (1963) and piano (1968), all with orchestra and then in the 1970s he wrote solo sonatas for the string instruments. By this time, his birthday was celebrated in Moscow, St Petersburg, West Berlin, Paris and in many Caucasian towns. He received official recognition throughout his career, from the Order of Lenin in 1939 to Hero of Socialist Labour in 1973.

Khachaturian was the first composer to place Armenian music within an international context. By synthesizing the musical achievements of his age with Armenian traditions such as peasant song, urban instrumental folklore, the art of the ashugh, the ornamental style of medieval monody and the purism of national idioms of Komitos, he created a new aesthetic. The various folk trends which impacted on his style were responsible for the development of the principles of improvisation, virtuosity, metrical and rhythmic variation, polythematicism, and use of monologue which dominates the trilogies of instrumental concertos. One commentator has remarked upon the metaphoric qualities within the first of these trilogies, stating that the Violin Concerto 'has the freshness of the morning', the Piano Concerto 'the burning rays of the midday sun' and the Cello Concerto 'the dusky light of sunset' (Khubov, 1962, p.133). Likewise, the concert rhapsodies that constitute the second trilogy are unified by their sharing of a formal design which consists of an 'introduction, solo cadenza, a slow theme with homophonic development, a fast theme with polyphonic development and a coda in which both themes are combined' (Tigranova, 1973, p.123). The extrovert manner of Khachaturian's style which is exemplified in these works finds an introverted counterpart in the instrumental sonatas, which are imbued with a reflective, almost Baroque spirit. Although he did not regain the popularity he enjoyed with works written in the 1940s and 50s, Khachaturian did remain loyal to two main idiomatic features, namely the direct and diffuse employment of variation technique and form, and the free treatment of sonata, suite-like and other forms reliant on contrast. In his melodic writing, he developed motifs from old Armenian rhetoric and hymnal monody and he employed many dance melodies as a basis for motoric rhythmic writing. His use of many folklore sources, especially of the ashugh tradition, had an impact on rhythmic diversity. Khachaturian's use of rhythm was determined by a dynamic attitude towards the relationship between metre and rhythm and that between periodicity, accented groups and aperiodicity. Polymetric and multi-layered structures were widely employed in ballets and symphonic works. The need to differentiate such layers brought about Khachaturian's polyphonic thinking which ranged in context from classical polyphony to ostinato approaches. The ashugh influence was responsible for the virtuosic writing common in his instrumental works and informed the hedonistic optimism that his music is often held to express. Khachaturian stated that his harmonic language came from 'imagining the sounds of folk instruments with their characteristic tuning and resulting range of overtones' (Sovetskaya Muzïka (1952), no.5), which explains his widespread harmonic use of seconds, fourths and fifths, all associated with the tuning of the saz, and also his avoidance of chord structures based on thirds. His often garish orchestral writing combines European tradition with Eastern soundworlds; the orchestra is frequently augmented by folk percussion instruments and many other eastern instruments are actually imitated. His virtuosic versatility in orchestration garnered praise from Shostakovich, and the inventive brilliance of the timbre he achieved place him in direct line of succession from various early 20th-century composers, Ravel in particular. Khachaturian's music was one of the bridges that most effectively connected European and Eastern traditions during the 20th century.

Aram Khachaturian, 1977

WORKS

(selective list)

Edition: Sobraniye sochineniy v dvadtsati chetïryokh tomakh [Collected works in 24 volumes] (Moscow, 1982–91)

STAGE AND DRAMATIC

Ballets: Schast'ye [Happiness] (3, G. Hovhanesian, choreog. I. Arbatov), 1939, Yerevan, Theatre of Opera and Ballet, Sept 1939; Gayane (4, K. Derzhavin, choreog. N. Anisimova), 1942, Perm', 9 Dec 1942, rev. (3, B.V. Pletnyov, choreog. V. Vajnonen), 1957, Moscow, Bol'shoy, 1957 [from Schast'ye]; Spartacus (4, N. Volkov, choreog. L. Yakobson), 1950–54, Leningrad, Kirov, 26 Dec 1956, rev. (3, Yu. Grigorovich, choreog. Grigorovich), 1968, Bol'shoy, 1968

Incid music: Baghdasar akhpar (A. Paronian), 1927; Arevelian atamnabuzh [An Eastern Dante Specialist] (Paronian), 1928; Khatabala (G. Sundukian), 1928; The Widow of Valencia (Lope de Vega), 1940; Maskarad [Masquerade] (M. Lermontov), 1941; Lermontov (B. Lavrenyov), 1954; Makbet (W. Shakespeare), 1955; Korol' Lir [King Lear] (Shakespeare), 1958: see INSTRUMENTAL (Orch) [suites]

Film scores (dirs. names in parentheses): Pėpo (A. Bek-Nazarov), 1935; Zangezur (Bek-Nazarov), 1938; Salavat Yulayev (Ya. Protazanov), 1941; Russkiy vopros [The Russian Question] (M. Romm), 1948; Stalingradskaya bitva [The Battle of Stalingrad] (V. Petrov), 1949; Admiral Ushakov (Romm), 1953; Saltanat (V. Pronin), 1955; Kostyor bessmertiya [The Bonfire of Immortality] (A. Narodnitsky), 1956; Otello (S. Yutkevich), 1956; Poyedinok [The Duel] (Petrov), 1957

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Tantseval'naya syuita [Dance Suite], 1933; Sym. no.1, 1934; Pf Conc., 1936; Vn Conc., 1940; The Widow of Valencia, suite, 1940 [from incid music]; Gayane, 3 suites, 1940–43 [from ballet]; Sym. no.2 'Simfoniya s kolokolom' [Sym. with a Bell], 1943, rev. 1944; Maskarad, suite, 1944 [from incid music]; Russkaya fantaziya [Russian Fantasy], 1944; Vc Conc., 1946; Sym. no. 3 'Sym.-Poem', 1947; Oda pamyati Lenina [Ode in Memory of Lenin], 1948; Stalingradskaya bitva [The Battle of Stalingrad], suite, 1949 [from film score]; Torzhestvennaya poėma [Solemn Poem], 1950; Spartacus, 3 suites, 1955 [from ballet]; Spartacus, sym. pictures, 1955 [from ballet]; Privetstvennaya uvertyura [Ov. of Salutation], 1958; Lermontov, suite, 1959 [from incid music]; Conc.-Rhapsody, vn, orch, 1961; Conc.-Rhapsody, vc, orch, 1963; Conc.-Rhapsody, pf, orch, 1968

Chbr: Elegy, vc, pf, 1925; Pesnya stranstvuyushchego ashuga [The Song of the Wandering Ashugh], vc, pf, 1925; Dance, vn, pf, 1926; The Dream, vc, pf, 1926; Piece, vc, pf, 1926; Pantomime, ob, pf, 1927; Allegretto, vn, pf, 1929; Pesnya-poėma 'V chest' ashuga' [Song-Poem 'In Honour of an Ashugh'], vn, pf, 1929; Dvoynaya fuga [Double Fugue], str qt, 1931; Sonata, vn, pf, 1932; Trio, cl, vn, pf, 1932; Nocturne, vn, pf, 1941 [from incid music Maskarad]; Suite, 2 pf, 1945; works for wind band

Solo inst: Poem, pf, 1925; Andantino, pf, 1926; Waltz-Caprice and Dance, pf, 1926; Waltz-Etude, pf, 1926; Detskiy al'bom 1 [Children's Album no.1], pf, 1926–47; Poem, pf, 1927; 7 Recitatives and Fugues, pf, 1928–66; Syuita, pf, 1932; Tokkata, pf, 1932; Khoreograficheskiy val's [Choreographic Waltz], pf, 1944; Waltz, pf, 1952 [from incid music Maskarad]; Sonatina, pf, 1959; Pf Sonata, 1961; Detskiy al'bom 2 [Children's Album no.2], pf, 1965; Sonata-fantaziya, vc, 1974; Sonata-monolog, vn, 1975; Sonata-pesnya [Sonata-Song], va, 1976

VOCAL

Poėma o Staline/Pesnya ashuga [Poem on Stalin/Song of the Ashugh] (M. Bayramov), chorus, orch, 1938; Gosudarstvennïy gimn Armyanskoy SSR [National Anthem of the Armenian SSR] (A. Sarmen), 1944; 3 kontsertnïye arii [3 Concert Arias] (trad., Hov. Tumanian, M. Peshiktashlian), S, orch, 1946; Oda radosti [Ode to Joy] (S. Smirnov), Mez, chorus, vn, ens, 10 hp, orch, 1956; Ballada o Rodine [Ballad about the Motherland] (A. Garnakerian), B, orch, 1961; choral and solo songs, folksong arrs.

Principal publishers: Sovetskiy Kompozitor, Muzïka

WRITINGS

'O gruzinskoy muzïke' [On Georgian music], SovM (1936), no.10, pp.43–6

'Kak ya ponimayu narodnost' v muzïke' [How I understand national character in music], SovM (1952), no.5, pp.39–43

'Desyataya simfoniya Shostakovicha' [Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony], SovM (1954), no.3, pp.23–6

'Muzïka fil'ma' [Film music], Iskusstvo kino (1955), no.11, pp.30–38

'Neskol'lko mïsley o Prokof'yeve' [A few thoughts on Prokofiev], S. Prokof'yev: materialï, dokumentï, vospominaniya, ed. S. Shlifshteyn (Moscow, 1966), 400–06

ed. I. Popov: A. Khachaturyan: stat'i i vospominaniya [Khachaturian: articles and reminiscences] (Moscow, 1980)

eds. M. Ter-Simonian and Ya. Khachikian: O muzïke, muzïkantakh, o sebe [On music, musicians and myself] (Yerevan, 1980) with G. Shneyerson: Aram Khachaturyan: stranitsï zhizni i tvorchestva [Khachaturian: pages from my life and work] (Moscow, 1982)

ed. M. Arutyunian: A. Khachaturyan: pis'ma [Khachaturian: letters], i (Yerevan, 1983)

eds. G. Harutyunian and M. Harutyunian: A. Khachaturyan: pis'ma, ii (Yerevan, 1995)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (M. Biesold)

G. Khubov: Aram Khachaturyan: ėskiz kharakteristiki [Khachaturian: a brief sketch] (Moscow, 1939)

G. Abraham: Eight Soviet Composers (London, 1943)

I. Belza: 'Khachaturyan', Handbook of Soviet Musicians (London, 1943, 3/1945)

G. Shneyerson: Aram Khachaturyan (Moscow, 1958; Eng. trans., 1959)

G. Tigranov: Baletï Arama Khachaturyana (Moscow, 1960, 2/1974)

E. Karagyulian: Simfonicheskoye tvorchestvo A. Khachaturyana [Khachaturian's symphonic works] (Yerevan, 1961)
M. Rostropovich: 'O Kontserte-rapsodii Khachaturyana', Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1963), no.20, pp.9–10
N. Shakhnazarova: 'Aram Khachaturyan i muzïka Vostoka' [Khachaturian and the music of the East], Muzïka i sovremennost', ii (1963), 218–40
F. Streller: Aram Chatschaturjan (Leipzig, 1968)
G. Chebotarian: Polifonia v tvorchestve A. Khachaturyana [Polyphony in Khachaturian's music] (Yerevan, 1969)
G. Geodakian, ed.: Aram Khachaturyan: sbornik statey [Khachaturian: a collection of articles] (Yerevan, 1972)
A. Khanbekian: 'O dissoniruyushchikh akkordakh u A. Khachaturyana' [The dissonant chords in Khachaturian's music], Muzïka narodov Azii i Afriki, ed. V. Vinogradov, ii (Moscow, 1973), 75–85
R. Kharadzhanian: Fortepiannoye tvorchestvo A. Khachaturyana [Khachaturian's piano music] (Yerevan, 1973)
D. Shostakovich: 'Podlinnaya narodnost'' [An authentic national character], Kommunist (6 June 1973)
D. Shostakovich: 'Prazdnik iskusstva' [A festival of art], SovM (1973), no.6, pp.13–16
I. Tigranova: Lirika v tvorchestve A. Khachaturyana [Lyric poetry in Khachaturian's music] (Yerevan, 1973)
A. Khanbekian: 'Narodnaya diatonika i yeyo rol' v politonal'nosti A. Khachaturyana' [Diatonicism in folk music and its role in Khachaturian's polytonality], Muzïka i sovremennost', viii (1974), 131–60
G. Tigranov: Aram Khachaturyan (Leningrad, 1978; new edn, 1987)
G. Geodakian: ' Traditsionnoye i novatorskoye v muzïke Arama Khachaturyana' [The traditional and the innovative in Khachaturian's music], Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik, ed. S. Ziv, iii (1979), 89–110
D. Person: Khachaturyan: noto-bibliograficheskiy spravochnik [Khachaturian: a handbook of music publications and a bibliography] (Moscow, 1979)
D. Arutyunov: Aram Khachaturyan i muzïka Sovetskogo Vostoka: yazïk, stil', traditsii [Khachaturian and the music of the Soviet East: the language, style and traditions] (Moscow, 1983) [incl. Eng. summary]
N. Mikoian: Kinomuzïka Arama Khachaturyana (Moscow, 1984)
V. Yuzefovich: Aram Khachaturian (New York, 1985) [in Eng., Russ. edn 1990]
Ş. Arzruni: 'Khachaturian's "In the Folk Idiom"', Keyboard Classics, x/5 (1990)

SVETLANA SARKISYAN

Khachaturyan, Karen (Surenovich) (b Moscow, 20 Sept 1920). Russian composer, nephew of ARAM KHACHATURYAN. He studied under Shebalin, Shostakovich and Myaskovsky at the Moscow Conservatory, where he was later appointed professor heading the orchestration department. He is an Honoured Representative of the Arts of the RSFSR, a People's Artist of the RSFSR and a laureate of the State Prize. He carries on the traditions of Shostakovich, especially in his early works. His style is characterized by economy of means, while thematic material often has an instrumental character. His orchestral writing is expressive and varied; initial rhythmic impulses play a major role, as do ostinati in dynamic terms. He has used serial techniques and elements of Armenian folklore are also encountered. He makes wide use of polyphonic forms and polyphony as a means of development. His ballet Chippolino ('Cippolino') has enjoyed great success and the Russian performers of his work include Leonid Kogan, David Oystrakh, Kirill Kondrashin, and Gennady Rozhdestvensky.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Prostaya devushka [The Simple Girl] (operetta, S. Tsenin, after V. Shkvarkin), 1959, Moscow, 1959; Chippolino (ballet, G. Rïkhlov, after G. Rodari), 1973, Kiev, 1974; Belosnezhka [Snow White] (ballet, G. Mayorov, after Brothers Grimm), 1995, Moscow, 1995

Choral: Tsveti i zdravstvuy, molodost' [Let youth Blossom and Prosper] (cant., Ya. Kupala, V. Lebedev-Kumach, A. Dostal), 1948; U verbï odinokoy [By the Lonely Willow] (cant., M. Lisyansky), 1950; Mig istorii [A Moment of History] (orat documentary texts of the Revolution), SPKr, chorus, orch, 1971

Inst: Sonata, vn, pf, 1947; Sinfonietta, orch, 1949; Molodyozhnaya uvertyura [Youth Ov.], orch, 1951; Sym, no.1, 1955; Sonata, vc, pf, 1966; Sym. no.2, 1968; Str Qt, 1969; Pf Conc., pf, chbr orch, 1973

Trio, hn, vn, pf, 1981; Sym. no.3, 1982; Str Trio, 1984; Vc Conc., 1984; Ėpitafiya, sym., str orch, perc, 1985; Difiramb v chest' Prokof'yeva [Dithyramb in Honour of Prokofiev], orch, 1991

Incid music, cartoon film scores, children's music

MSS in RUS-Mcm

Principal publishers: Sovetskiy Kompozitor, Muzgiz, Sikorski

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Nest'yev: 'Karen Khachaturyan i yego simfoniya' [Khachaturian and his symphony], SovM (1955), no.9, pp. 43–50
M. Uspenskaya: Karen Khachaturyan (Moscow, 1959)
D. Shostakovich: 'Poyot violonchel'' [The cello sings], Pravda (25 Nov 1967)
Ye. Dolinskaya: Karen Khachaturyan (Moscow, 1975)

GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA

Khadzhiyev, Parashkev (b Sofia, 27 April 1912; d Sofia, 28 April 1992). Bulgarian composer. He was taught initially by his parents, both leading figures in the early years of Bulgarian opera; he then studied composition with Vladigerov and the piano with Stoyanov at the State Music Academy in Sofia (1933–5) before completing his studies in Vienna (with Joseph Marx) and Germany. In 1940 he became a lecturer at the Sofia Academy.

Khadzhiyev was one of the most prolific Bulgarian opera composers and one of the most frequently staged. His spontaneously emotional side and inborn theatrical sense are evident in both dramatic and humorous contexts, and in writing for children he proved especially effective. The individuality of his musical language rests above all on his characteristic melodies, built on elements of Bulgarian folk music. His output also contains certain chamber pieces that have been highly influential in Bulgaria, namely the first and second string quartets and sonatas for violin and piano. The latter in particular are among the finest examples of Bulgarian chamber music. Other well-known works include Mladezhka tantsova syuita ('Youth Dance Suite', 1952), the Concertino for violin and orchestra (1942) and several of the songs for children.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC
for fuller list see GroveO [Hadjiev]

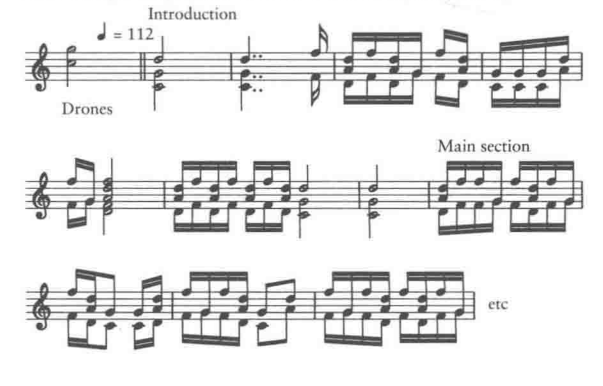
Ops: Imalo yedno vreme [Once upon a Time], perf. 1957; Lud gigiya [The Madcap], perf. 1959; Albena, perf. 1962; Yulska nosht [July Night], perf. 1964; Milionerat [The Millionaire], perf. 1965; Ritsaryat [The Knight], perf. 1969; Zlatnata vabalka [The Golden Apple], perf. 1972; Leto 893 [The Year 893], perf. 1973; Tsar Midas ima magazeshki ushi [King Midas has Asses' Ears], perf. 1976; Mariya Desislava, perf. 1978; Ioannis rex, perf. 1981; Paradoksi, perf. 1982; Az, Klavdiy [I, Claudius], perf. 1984; Zvezda bez ime [A Star without a Name], perf. 1985; Mnimiyat bolen [The Hypochondriac], perf. 1987; Babinata pitka [Granny's Loaf], perf. 1989; Ioan Kukuzel, 1989; Revizor [The Inspector General], 1989

Other: Sluzhbogontsi [Careerists] (musical), perf. 1972; Cyrano de Bergerac (musical), perf. 1974; over 100 radio operettas for children; film scores

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Skitsi [Sketches], 1940; Vn Conc., 1941; Concertino, vn, orch, 1942; Fl Conc., 1945; Mladezhka tantsova syuita [Youth Dance Suite], 1952

Chbr: Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1940; 3 piesi [3 Pieces], wind qnt, 1942; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1946; Sonata no.3, vn, pf, 1946; Str Qt no.1, G, 1948; Album, children's pieces, pf, 1951; Str Qt no.2, c, 1953; 3 albuma leki piesi za detsa [3 Albums of Light Music for Children], 1958–61; Sonata no.4, vn, pf, 1978



Principal publishers: Nauka i iskustvo (Sofia), Muzika (Sofia)

MAGDALENA MANOLOVA

Khāen [kaen, khene, khen]. Bamboo free-reed mouth organ of LAOS and north-east THAILAND. It consists of bamboo pipes grouped together in two rows and graduated from longest to shortest. The free reeds of a copper-silver alloy are mounted in the pipe walls inside a carved wooden windchest called tao ('gourd'). The openings around the windchest are caulked with a kind of insect waste called khisut. Finger-holes are burnt above the windchest so that all the fingers may be used to open and close the holes. Khāen are made in four sizes: khāen hok ('six'), a child's toy with six pipes; khāen jet ('seven') with 14 pipes; khāen paet ('eight') with 16 pipes; and khāen kao ('nine') with 18 pipes. By the 1970s khāen paet were nearly universal, measuring approximately one metre in length, although instruments measuring two to three metres were common before about 1950. Although found throughout north-east Thailand and Laos, khāen making is centred in Roi Et province and especially in the sub-district town of Sī Kaeo. Khāen are properly held tilted to the left or right with the hands cupped over the windchest. The 16 pipes of the khāen paet play 15 pitches (one doubled at the unison) within a range of two octaves consisting of semitones and whole tones averaging 100 and 200 cents respectively. Although there is certainly no Western influence, the pitches may be compared to the piano's naturals from a to a'', but their physical arrangement follows no recognizable pattern. Instead the pipes have been arranged to facilitate fingering and to avoid the technical problem of playing three consecutive pipes. Inhaling and exhaling produce identical pitches, but pipes sound only when fingerholes are covered.

Whether playing solo or accompanying a singer, khāen players, who are virtually always male, have at their disposal three pentatonic modes (lai) for each of the region's two commonly known scale systems, called san (expressible as G–A–C–D–E or 5–6–1–2–3) and nyai (A–C–D–E–G or 6–1–2–3–5). The san modes are called sutsanaen (G–A–C–D–E), po sai (C–D–F–G–A) and soi (D–E–G–A–B) while the nyao modes are called nyai (A–C–D–E–G) and noi (D–F–G–A–C); the third nyao mode (E–G–A–B–D) lacks a name. Each mode requires that one or two drones be played either by closing finger-holes with either the fingers or bits of khisut wax. Notes are played singly, in octaves, or in combination with other notes (ex.1). Khāen players choose a mode according to the singer's range. Besides modal improvisation in each lai, most competant players also render programmatic pieces such as Māeng phu tom tok ('Bees around the flowers'), Lom phat sai khao ('The wind through the hills') and Lai rot fai (an imitation of a steam engine). Most khāen players in Laos improvise on one of that country's dozen or so regional vocal accompaniment patterns, rarely naming their playing by its mode. Schools in north-east Thailand sometimes organize khāen ensembles (khāen wong) to play central Thai classical songs. (For illustration see LAOS, fig.1.)

Ex.1 Khāen piece in po sai; rec. and transcr. T. Miller (Miller, 1985)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GEWM, [iv] ('Thailand' T. Miller)

R. de Berval, ed.: 'Présence du royaume Lao', France-Asie, xii (1956), 703–1153; Eng. trans., 1959 as Kingdom of Laos

D. Yupho: Khrụang dontri Thai [Thai musical instruments] (Bangkok, 1957, 2/1967; Eng. trans., 1960, 3/1987)

J. Chonpairot: Kaen Wong [The khāen ensemble] (Mahasarakam, Thailand, 1972)

T. Miller: 'Free-Reed Instruments in Asia: a Preliminary Classification', Music East and West: Essays in Honor of Walter Kaufmann, ed. T. Noblitt (New York, 1981), 63–100

T. Miller: Traditonal Music of the Lao: Kaen Playing and Mawlum Singing in Northeast Thailand (Westport, CT, 1985)

TERRY E. MILLER

Khagagortian, Eduard (Aramovich) (b Tbilisi, 15 July 1930; d Moscow, 3 Jan 1983). Armenian composer. He learnt the violin in Tbilisi music schools before he studied composition with Egiazarian at the Yerevan Conservatory (graduating in 1954) and then with Aram Khachaturian at the Moscow Conservatory (graduating in 1964). He was later Khachaturian's assistant at the conservatory and the Gnesin Institute. He became a board member of the Composers' Union in 1964 and was deputy to the chairman of the board of the Moscow branch in 1970. In 1973 he became deputy editor of the publishers Sovetskiy kompozitor and was nominated Honoured Representative of the Arts of the RSFSR in 1979. He is considered to have made a signifcant contribution to the musical culture of the former USSR. He is a composer with an outstanding lyrical and dramatic gift, and this, coupled with his expertise in the area of folk music (of which he made several recordings) defined his compositional style. His ability to think on the broadest scale and his mastery of orchestral colour attracted him to the writing of symphonic works and music for the theatre and for film.

WORKS
(selective list)

Str Qt, 1949; Blbul yev vard [The Nightingale and the Rose] (ballet, after A. Isahakyan), Yerevan, 1954; Sona (ballet, 3, A. Gharibyan), Yerevan, 1956; Shun u katun [The Cat and the Dog] (children's comic op, 2, after H. Tumanyan), Yerevan, 1957; Pf Qnt, 1960; Sym. no.1, 1962; Sym. no.2, str orch, 1965; Cl Conc., 1966; Sym. no.3, solo org, 1969; Hp Conc., 1970; Sym. no.4, 1973; Shapka s ushami [The Cap with Earflaps] (children's comic op, 3, N. Sats and N. Polyakov, after Tumanyan), Moscow, 1976; Str Qt, 1976; Sonata, fl, 1979; Sonata, vc, 1979; Sym. no.5, chbr chorus, orch incl. Armenian folk insts, 1980; Karinė (musical comedy), Moscow, 1981; Vn Conc., 1983; over 100 film scores; pf cycles

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye. Dolinskaya: 'Sochineniye redkogo zhanra' [A composition of a rare genre], SovM (1973), no.8, pp.17–19

Ye. Orlova and V. Likht: 'Mir chudom predstayot peredo mnoy: zametki o muzïke E. Khagagortyan' [The world appears before me as a miracle: notes on the music of Khagagortian], SovM (1982), no.2, pp.21–6
E. Khagagortian: Stat'i, vospominaniya [Articles and reminiscences], ed. Ye. Dolinskaya (Moscow, 1987)

YELENA DOLINSKAYA

Khaikin [Khaykin], Boris (Ėmmanuilovich) (b Minsk, 13/26 Oct 1904; d Moscow, 10 May 1978). Russian conductor. He studied at the Moscow Conservatory with Nikolay Malko and Konstantin Saradzhev (conducting) and A.F. Gedike (piano), graduating in 1928. His artistic principles as an opera conductor were formed under the influence of Stanislavsky, at whose opera theatre he was conductor (1928–35), preparing productions of Il barbiere di Siviglia and Carmen. In 1936 he replaced S.A. Samosud as principal conductor and artistic director of the Maliy Opera Theatre, Leningrad, where he followed his predecessor's example in promoting Soviet opera: he conducted (among other things) the première of Kabalevsky's Colas Breugnon and the first Leningrad performance of Dzerzhinsky's Virgin Soil Upturned, as well as notable productions of operas by Rimsky-Korsakov, Musorgsky and Tchaikovsky. In 1943 Khaikin became principal conductor and artistic director of the Kirov Theatre, where he conducted the première of Prokofiev's The Story of a Real Man. He also staged Kabalevsky's The Family of Taras and Dzerzhinsky's Prince-Lake. In 1954 Khaikin became conductor at the Bol'shoy Theatre, where he continued to champion Soviet music.

Khaikin's conducting was distinguished by fine artistry, secure taste and a sure understanding of style; and in his opera performances he used the drama inherent in the music to heighten the characterization on stage. He conducted abroad: Khovanshchina in Florence (1963), The Queen of Spades in Leipzig (1964); and he made successful appearances as an orchestral conductor (he took part in the Leningrad PO's tour of Italy in 1966). He taught at the Leningrad Conservatory (1935–53), and in 1954 became professor of conducting at the Moscow Conservatory; among his pupils were Kirill Kondrashin and Edgar Tons.

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY/R

Khain, Johannes. See KHUEN, JOHANNES.

Khaïrat, Abu-Bakr (b Cairo, 10/27 April 1910; d Cairo, 25 Oct 1963). Egyptian composer and architect. As a child he had direct contact with the masters of traditional music who often visited his father's home. He began violin lessons at the age of five with a Turkish teacher, but he became more interested in the piano, which he continued to study for many years, later giving the first performance of his Piano Concerto in C minor op.10. However, architecture was his chosen profession, and after graduating from the university he received a scholarship to study this in France, where he also had private lessons in the piano, harmony and composition with Conservatoire teachers. Back in Egypt he had a successful career as an architect: he designed the complex of the Academy of Arts, comprising the ballet, cinema and drama institutes, the conservatory and the Darwish concert hall. He also continued to compose. His early works are in a romantic style without specific Egyptian features, but he then searched for a national idiom, interesting himself in some aspects of urban folk music. This resulted in, among other works, the colourful Second Symphony 'La folklorique' in G minor op.21, where in the second movement he used the tune of a 'stick dance' and in the third the 'handkerchief dance' popular at Alexandrian weddings. He came closer to the Egyptian spirit in choral orchestral works, such as Lamma bada (performed under Münch at the opening concert in the Darwish hall), a polyphonic version of the ancient monodic mūwashshaḥ.

Among Khaïrat's other nationalist compositions are the Suite folklorique, the Third Symphony and the overture Isis; works without obvious Egyptian traits include the piano concerto, the Poem op.18 for piano, the piano sonatas, the Sextet for flute and strings, and other chamber pieces. Khaïrat belonged to the first generation of Egyptian composers to draw on Western methods, a generation whose enthusiasm often exceeded their expertise, though their role as pioneers is unquestionable. Western rhythmic and melodic influences are present in Khaïrat's style, but his melody has an obvious national flavour, particularly when it is derived from folk music or traditional modes such as the higaz (with augmented 2nd). He was the first Egyptian composer to use sonata form, facing the problem of adapting the scheme to essentially lyrical oriental material; sometimes, as a result, the development section is curtailed. Founder-director of the Cairo Conservatory (1959–63), he received the state prize for composition and other honours. His orchestral music was performed in the USSR, Romania and Yugoslavia, and some of it was recorded in the 1960s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Choral: Ya nasmat al subh (cant.), op.31, chorus, orch; Aih el-ebara [What is the Matter?] (S. Darwīsh, Ṣ. Jaheen), chorus, orch; Ḍaraa'ah Invocation (A. 'Atahiya), op.32, chorus, orch, 1961; Lamma bada yatathanna [When my love with coquetry appeared] (ancient mūwashshaḥ), chorus, orch, *c*1959

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, c, op.10, 1944; Sym. no.1, f, op.20; Sym. no.2 'La folklorique', g, op.21, 1955; Isis, ov., D, after T. El-Hakim, 1956; Sym. no.3, C, op.23, 1958; Al-Mutatābia'a al sha'abiyyah [Folk Suite], c, op.24; Sonata, a, op.27, vn, str; Pf Conc. no.2, f, op.33, 1962

Solo vocal: 'Naẓratun wāḥidatun' [Only One Look] (M. Khaïrat), op.28, S, pf

Chbr and solo inst: Lyric Studies, ops.2, 3, 4, 9, 12, 13, 15, pf; Poem, f♯, op.18, pf; Concert Study, op.19, pf; Suite, cl, pf; Sextet, fl, str qnt

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Z. Naṣṣār: Al musīqa al Miṣriyya al mutatawwirah [Egyptian art music] (Cairo, 1990), 49–59
'A.T. Zakī: A'alām al-musīqua al-Miṣriyyah'abr 150 sanah [Great figures of Egyptian music through 150 years] (Cairo, 1990), 223–5
S. El Kholy: Al qawmiyyah fi musiqa al-qarn al-ishreen [Nationalism in 20th-century music] (Kuwait, 1992), 304–13

SAMHA EL KHOLY

Khalīl ibn Aḥmad, al- (b Basra, *c*718; d Basra, *c*790). Arab philologist. He is regarded as the father of Arab lexicography and the sciences of prosody and musical metrics. His writings on music include Kitāb al-nagham ('Book on the "notes"') and Kitāb al-īqā' ('Book on metre and rhythm'). These works are lost, but seem to have been influential on the musical teaching of Isḥāq al-Mawṣilī and his school. The sources of al-Khalīl's musical theory are not known. Besides the Arab tradition, with its Syriac-Byzantine and Persian elements, Indian views may have influenced his theory of musical metrics. He probably had no knowledge of the classical Greek music theorists and no practical knowledge of music; his works on musical theory were judged by scholars such as al-Naẓẓām (d 845) and al-Jāḥiẓ (d 868) less favourably than his philological writings. As with Isḥāq al-Mawṣilī, his name is linked with the view which was current in antiquity and fundamental to Arab teaching: that musical metrics is a sister discipline to prosody. The revival of this view in the West in medieval times does not preclude its transmission by the Arabs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EI2 (R. Sellheim)

A. Codazzi: 'Il trattato dell'arte metrica di Giovanni Leone Africano', Studi orientalistici in onore di Giorgio Levi della Vida, i (Rome, 1956), 180–98

E. Neubauer: 'Al-Ḫalīl ibn Aḥmad und die Frühgeschichte der arabischen Lehre von den "Tönen" und den musikalischen Metren', Zeitschrift für Geschichte der arabisch-islamischen Wissenschaften, x (Frankfurt, 1995–6), 255–323

ECKHARD NEUBAUER

Khaml, Antonín. See KAMMEL, ANTONÍN.

Khan, Abdul Karim (b Kirana, 11 Nov 1872; d 27 Oct 1936). North Indian (Hindustani) vocalist. He spent his early life among families of sāraṅgī players and khayāl performers. He studied with his father, Kale Khan, a court musician at Bharatpur, and with his cousin-brother Nanne Khan, formerly a court musician at Bidar. He also learnt from the sāraṅgī playing of other members of his family.

His first position was teaching the household women at the Baroda court. He was influenced by Maharaja Sayajji Rao of Baroda who was fascinated by musical notation and by the possibility of teaching Indian music in institutions rather than through the traditional guru-śiṣya system. Abdul Karim's methodical inclination led him to work with two individuals who wanted to discover the basis of scale-building in Indian music. He sang for Rao-Bahadur K.G. Deval, who published his conclusions in The Hindu Musical Scale and the Twenty-Two Shrutees (Pune, 1910), and assisted Ernest Clements, a scholar of Western music, who published Introduction to the Study of Indian Music (New York, 1913). When Clements began experimenting with a fixed-śruti harmonium, Abdul Karim's interest declined.

As a young singer he toured Maharashtra and Karnataka, spending periods in Sholapur and Kolhapur. In 1910 he began a music school in Belgaum, the Arya Saṅgīt Vidyalaya, offering individual guru-śiṣya training. He subsequently opened a branch of the school in Pune with his renowned Kirana cousin Abdul Wahid Khan and another in Bombay which offered collective classroom teaching. After a period in Mysore, Abdul Karim settled permanently in Miraj in 1927, teaching and touring to give concerts.

Abdul Karim Khan's singing voice was high, sweet and pliant. In performing khayāl, he cultivated elongation of pitches and mīṇḍ (possibly from sāraṅgī style), emphasizing pitch over rhythm and speed. Designated as his musical heir, Balkrishnabuwa Kapileshwari continued his teacher's work on music theory and wrote his biography (1972). Other important students were Roshanara Begum, Behre Buwa and Sawai Gandharva.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

V.H. Deshpande: Gharāndāj gāyakī (Marathi, 1961; Eng. trans., 1973, 2/1987, as Indian Musical Traditions: an Aesthetic Study of the Gharanas in Hindustani Music)

B. Kapileshwari: Saṅgīt ratna Abdul Karimkhan yancha gīvancharitra [Life story of the jewel of music, Abdul Karim Khan] (1972)

K.O. Dixit: 'Khansaheb Abdul Karim Khan and the Kirana Gharana of Hindustani Music', Quarterly Journal of the National Centre for the Performing Arts, ii/1 (1973), 37–43

J.S. Jariwalla: Abdul Karim: the Man of the Times: Life and Art of a Great Musician (Bombay, 1973)

B.C. Wade: Khyāl: Creativity within North India's Classical Vocal Tradition (Cambridge, 1984)

RECORDINGS

Khansahib Abdul Karim Khan, Columbia 33ECX 3253 (1966)

Echoes of a Golden Voice, perf. A.K. Khan, Columbia 33EXC 3304 (1975)

Classical Music of India, perf. A.K. Khan, Columbia 33ECX 3251 (1983)

BONNIE C. WADE

Khan, Ali Akbar (b Shivpur, East Bengal [now Bangladesh], 14 April 1922). Indian sarod player. The global expansion of the classical music of North India in the late 20th century is associated with two pioneering artists: the sarod player Ali Akbar Khan and his brother-in-law, the sitār player Ravi Shankar. While neither was the first Indian artist to tour the West, their touring and teaching was of premier importance in popularizing Hindustani classical music among Western musicians.

Ali Akbar Khan is the son of Allauddin Khan, who was widely respected for his fusion of many separate regional styles into a modern concert style which influenced many instrumentalists and established instrumental music on a par with long-respected vocal traditions. Allauddin Khan taught this style to several musicians including his son Ali Akbar, Ravi Shankar, the flautist Pannalal Ghosh and the sitār player Nikhil Banerjee.

When Ali Akbar was born, his father was court musician to the Maharaja of Madhya Pradesh. The family home, the Madina Bhavan, was an ashram for music. Ali Akbar was taught the traditional literature of rāga and tāla in Hindustani style and was expected to practise for several hours every day. During his teens he studied side by side with Ravi Shankar, and when they emerged as young artists in the 1940s, they astounded their audiences with the brilliance of their technique as well as the depth of their knowledge. After a short period as a music director of All-India Radio in Lucknow, Ali Akbar became court musician to the Maharaja of Jodhpur. Following the dissolution of the court system, Ali Akbar moved to Bombay and was music director for several films, winning awards for the scores of The Hungry Stones and Devi.

The development of his classical concert career was assisted by his recording of the rāga Chandranandan, which he composed in the recording studio, 'and then I had to get the recording to learn how the rāga went', as he describes the creation of one of his signature rāgas. He decided to concentrate on the classical music of his training, and in 1955 he founded the Ali Akbar College of Music in Calcutta to pass on the teachings of his father. Later that year Yehudi Menuhin invited him to come to the United States to record and appear on television. The recording was the first long-playing recording of Indian classical music and convinced Ali Akbar that there was interest in the West for Hindustani classical music. After several tours, he began to teach near San Francisco in 1965. Word of his teaching spread rapidly after the beginning of the Beatles' association with the music of Ravi Shankar, and in 1968 he founded the Ali Akbar College of Music in Berkeley (later in San Rafael). He taught a new generation of musicians including his sons Ashish, Alam and the late Dhyanesh Khan and the Western students George Ruckert, Ken Zuckerman, James Pomerantz, Bruce Hamm, Daisy Paradis, Peter van Gelder and Richard Harrington; the sarod player Zuckerman has opened a branch of the Ali Akbar College in Basle.

Ali Akbar Khan was awarded many titles and honours including the Padma Bhushan, which he received in 1988. Other awards included the McArthur Fellowship, the Shiromani Hall of Fame Award and a fellowship from the NEA. He received honorary doctoral degrees from Rabindra Bharati University and the California Institute of the Arts. During the 1990s he continued to record, perform and teach from his base at the Ali Akbar College in California.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

R. Shankar: My Music, my Life (New York, 1968)

W. van der Meer: Hindustani Music in the 20th Century (The Hague, 1980)

A.A. Khan and G. Ruckert: Introduction to the Music of North India (St Louis, 1991)

A.J. Miner: Hindustani Instrumental Music in the Early Modern Period (New Delhi, 1996)

RECORDINGS

Rags Pilu and Shri, perf. A.A. Khan, Angel 35283 (1955)

Ustad Ali Akbar Khan, Master Musician of India, Connoisseur Society CS 462 (1966) [rāgas Chandranandan and Gauri Manjari]

The Forty Minute Raga: Rag Marwa, perf. A.A. Khan and M. Misra, Connoisseur Society CS 2008 (1968)

Journey, perf. A.A. Khan and others, Triloka 184-2 (1990)

Passing on the Tradition, AMMP CD9608 (1996)

GEORGE RUCKERT

Khan, Alladiya (b Jodhpur, *c*1855; d 1946). North Indian (Hindustani) vocalist. He was the originator of the Alladiya Khan gharānā of khayāl. He came from a family of Hindu-Gaud Brahmans who converted to Islam in the 18th century and studied with his court-musician father, Khwaja Ahmed Khan, and an uncle (either Daulat Khan of Jodhpur or Jehangir Khan, scholar and court singer of Dagar-style dhrupad and khayāl at Uniara). However, Alladiya was inspired by the Gwalior-style khayāl singing of Mubarak Ali Khan, a court musician in Jaipur. Alladiya spent his early career in the Deccan and in Bombay; he worked at the Kolhapur court from 1914 to 1929 and thereafter lived in Bombay until his death.

When he was about 40, serving at Ambetha, the prince required him to sing every morning, afternoon and night successively for a number of days. The near-ruin of his voice meant that he could no longer emphasize ālāp of dhrupad, so he developed a distinctive style of khayāl akin to dhrupad, cultivating both rāga and rhythm fully and keeping the textual and musical composition more intact than many khayāl singers would. His style was also said to be 'difficult'. He knew many drum compositions and would create texted melodic passages (bol-bāṭ) to match the rhythm, instantly, in any rāga. He sang in fairly slow tempo, usually in Tīntāl, good for rapid, melismatic tān. He sang in unknown rāgas, many of them combinations of two rāgas with complex structures. He was also famed for singing sādrā (compositions in Jhaptāl in khayāl style) and the rhythmic fast genre tarānā.

Two disciples who achieved national prominence make the Alladiya Khan gharānā exceptional, KESARBAI KERKAR and MOGHUBAI KURDIKAR, acclaimed women vocalists who successfully persevered in a musical world dominated by men.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V.H. Deshpande: Gharāndāj gāyakī (Marathi, 1961; Eng. trans., 1973, 2/1987, as Indian Musical Traditions: an Aesthetic Study of the Gharanas in Hindustani Music)

B.L. Sharma: 'Contribution of Rajasthan to Indian Music', Journal of the Indian Musicological Society, ii/2 (1971), 32–47

N.N. Shukla: 'Alladiya Khan: as I Knew Him', Journal of the Indian Musicological Society, ii/3 (1971), 14–25

V.H. Deshpande: 'The Alladiya Khan Gharana', Quarterly Journal of the National Centre for the Performing Arts, i/1 (1972), 2–5

B.C. Wade: Khyāl: Creativity within North India's Classical Vocal Tradition (Cambridge, 1984)

BONNIE C. WADE

Khan, Allauddin (b Shivpur, Tripura, ?1881; d Maihar, Madhya Pradesh, 6 Sept 1972). Indian instrumentalist (principal instruments SAROD and violin). He was the son of Sadhu Khan, a farmer and an amateur musician who learnt the sitār from the rabāb player Kazim Ali Khan; Allauddin's brother Aftabuddin played the tablā. His remarkable life story has contributed to his legendary status and is also the subject of some controversy; he is believed by some to have lived to the age of 110, although the conjectural birth date of 1881 is more likely.

He ran away from home as a child in order to pursue a musical career. Having reached Calcutta, he received training in vocal music from Gopal Chandra Bhattacharya, alias Nanu or Nulo Gopal. Following Gopal's death he switched to instrumental music, learning the violin from the Hindu thinker Swami Vivekanand's brother Amritlal Dutta, alias Habu Dutta; the clarinet, Western music and staff notation from Lobo Prabhu, band master at Eden Gardens, Calcutta; the mṛdaṅga and the tablā from Nandlal Babu, alias Pandit Nandlal; and other instruments including the śahnāī. He eventually took up the sarod under Ustad Ahmad Ali Khan, who took him to the Rampur court of Nawab Bahadur Hamid Ali Khan, then a great centre for classical music. There he became a disciple of the bīn and rabāb maestro Ustad Wazir Khan, under whom he further developed his mastery of the sarod, and also learnt from other notable musicians.

In 1918 he was recruited to be the guru of Maharaja Brij Narain Singh of Maihar. He remained based in Maihar for the rest of his life, where besides teaching the Maharaja he sponsored and directed the Maihar Band and ultimately became chief court musician. He also made a number of commercial recordings and toured as a concert artist. In 1935 he toured Europe with Uday Shankar's dance troupe and met Uday's younger brother Ravi Shankar, who was to become one of his most famous disciples. Other famous pupils include two of his five children, Ustad Ali Akbar Khan (sarod) and Annapurna Devi (sitār and surbahār), as well as the sitār player Nikhil Banerjee, the flautist Pannalal Ghosh and the sarod players Timir Baran and Sharan Rani.

He was one of the most important figures behind the rise in the status and popularity of instrumental music in India over the 20th century, due to a number of significant technical and stylistic innovations such as the development of dhrupad-style instrumental ālāp and the use of a wider range of tāl than had previously been used in instrumental music. Some of his followers name a musical tradition in his honour as 'Maihar gharānā' or 'Allauddin gharānā'. Universally known as Bābā (father/grandfather), he is regarded as a personification of the synthesis of Hindu and Islamic traditions in the subcontinent, being both a devout Muslim and a devotee of the Hindu goddess

Sharada Ma. His many honours include the President's Award (1952), the Padma Bhushan (1958) and the Padma Vibhushan (1971).

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

L.N. Garg: Hamāre saṅgīt ratn [Our music jewels] (Hathras, 1957)
R. Shankar: My Music, my Life (New York, 1968)
J. Bhattacharya: Ustad Allauddin Khan and his Music (Ahmedabad, 1975)
A. Khan: Amar katha [My story] (Calcutta, 1980)
S. Mishra: Great Masters of Hindustani Music (New Delhi, 1981)
B.R. Deodhar: Pillars of Hindustani Music (Bombay, 1993)
A. Miner: Sitar and Sarod in the 18th and 19th Centuries (Wilhelmshaven, 1993)

RECORDINGS

Rāgs Kaushi Bhairav, Hem, perf. A. Khan, HMV ECLP 2757 (1976) [sarod]
Rāgs Lalit, Jila, perf. A. Khan, Megaphone (India) JNLX 1008 (1976) [sarod]
Megaphone (India) JNLX 1003 (*c*1975) [sarod and violin]

MARTIN CLAYTON

Khan, Amir (b Kalanau, 1912; d 31 Dec 1973). North Indian (Hindustani) vocalist. Resident most of his life in Indore, he was an exceptional self-styled Hindustani vocalist. Rather than receiving formal instruction, he grew up with the music of various artists including his father, Shri Mir Khan (a sāraṅgī player of the Dhanadhtha gharānā and a court musician at Indore), the vocalist Rajab Ali Khan (a court musician at Dewas), the vīṇā player Murad Khan, the vocalists Amanat Khan and Aman Ali Khan of Bombay and particularly the Kirana gharānā vocalist Abdul Wahid Khan.

Amir Khan's improvisatory khayāl style was marked by a slow-speed ālāp-style singing, emphasizing the rāga with little acceleration of the tāla and rhythmic play. He made extensive use of the mellow lower register of his voice. He was unusually careful about enunciating the text, including final consonants, and he had a distinctive manner of introducing a sudden fast ornament on a pitch in a relatively reposeful melodic context as a way of indicating the approach to a melodic cadence. In khayāl, he also liked to improvise melody to sargam (pitch syllables); he even ornamented pitches sung to sargam. His tān were varied, including passages starting in the lower register and rippling into the high register. He sang easily in the three octaves required of the best singers. Because his vilambit laya was so slow, khayāl sung at a moderate speed offered a striking contrast; he liked to pair a composition of moderate speed with a fast one or with a tarānā. Occasionally he sang a sequence of compositions using the three speeds, with a change of rāga for musical interest.

One of India's finest 20th-century musicians, Amir Khan was a fellow of Bihar's Sangeet Natak Akademi, received the President's award from the Sangeet Natak Akademi (New Delhi) in 1967 and was named Padma Bhushan in 1971 by the President of India.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

V.H. Deshpande: Gharāndāj gāyakī (Marathi, 1961; Eng. trans., 1973, 2/1987, as Indian Musical Traditions: an Aesthetic Study of the Gharanas in Hindustani Music)
S.K. Saxena: 'Ustad Ameer Khan: the Man and his Art', Journal of the Sangeet Natak Akademi, no.31 (1974), 5–12
B.C. Wade: Khyāl: Creativity within North India's Classical Vocal Tradition (Cambridge, 1984)

RECORDINGS

Ameer Khan, EALP 1253 (1960); reissued as EMI 6TC S 02B 5090 (1981) [rāgas Marwa and Darbārī Kānaḍā]
Khayal, perf. A. Khan, HMV EASD 1331 (1968); reissued as EMI TC-CKDA 10013 (1978)
Ustad Amir Khan, EASD 1357 (1970) [rāgas Hansdhwani and Malkauns]; Malkauns reissued as EMI 6TCS 02B 5090 (1981)
Ustad Amir Khan, ECLP 2765 (1976) [khayāl Bilas Khani Todi and Abhogi]

For further recordings see M.S. Kinnear: A Discography of Hindustani and Karnatic Music (Westport, CT, 1985)

BONNIE C. WADE

Khan, Amjad Ali (b Gwalior, 9 Oct 1945). Indian sarod player. He learned from his father Ustad Hafiz Ali Khan (1888–1972), court musician at Gwalior and a disciple of the bīn and rabāb maestro Ustad Wazir Khan; he also studied briefly with the vocalist Krishnarao Shankar Pandit. His family traces its history back through Hafiz Ali Khan's father Nanhe (or Nanne) Khan and grandfather Ghulam Ali (*d c*1850), a musician associated with the court of Rampur and regarded by many as the first player of the Sarod. Amjad's great-great-grandfather Ghulam Bandagi Khan Bangash was a soldier-equestrian from Afghanistan who established the family in India and played the rabāb as a hobby.

He is an extremely gifted and popular concert and recording artist, one of the leading instrumentalists of his generation. His sons Amaan Ali Bangash and Ayaan Ali Bangash have followed in his footsteps and are both talented sarod players. His many honours include a UNESCO Award (1970), the Padma Shri (1975) and the Padma Bhushan (1991). In 1994 he was appointed honorary visiting professor of Indian music, University of York.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

A.A. Khan: 'My guru, my Father', Ustad Hafiz Ali Khan Memorial Music Festival, ed. P.S. Jha (Calcutta, 1973)
A. Miner: Sitar and Sarod in the 18th and 19th Centuries (Wilhelmshaven, 1993)
A.D. Sharma: Musicians of India Past and Present (Calcutta, 1993)

RECORDINGS

Ustad Amjad Ali Khan, HMV EASD 1348 (1970) [rāga Durga and Nandkauns]
The King of Ragas, the Raga of Kings, HMV ECSD 2824 (1979) [rāga Darbari]
Maestro Amjad Ali Khan, NRCD 0050 (1995) [rāga Bhimpalasi]

MARTIN CLAYTON

Khan, Bade Ghulam Ali (b Lahore, *c*1901; d 23 April 1968). North Indian (Hindustani) vocalist. He was born into a family of musicians and studied with his uncle, Kale Khan; like Kale, he remained independent without court appointment. In 1940 he achieved immediate fame with an appearance at the All-India Music Conference at Calcutta, and throughout the rest of his life he appeared in concerts and made recordings and radio broadcasts. He performed khayāl, ṭhumrī and bhajan.

At Partition (1947), when Lahore, his ancestral home, became part of Pakistan, he became a citizen of that new country. He continued to perform in India, however, and after 1957 acquired Indian citizenship. Known as 'bade' because he was both 'large' physically and 'great' musically, Ghulam Ali willingly performed for general audiences to popularize the classical music of the élite. In 1962 he was designated Padma Bhushan by the Government of India and received the President's Award for Hindustani Vocal Music from the Sangeet Natak Akademi, New Delhi.

In Punjabi manner, Ghulam Ali accompanied himself on the svarmaṇḍal. His voice was sweet and elastic, easily traversing a three-octave range. Exquisite khayāl performances featured expressive, slow exploration of the rāga on the composition text, skilfully crafted bol-tān and a wide variety of types of tān. He created slow, expressive melody to the sargam syllables, a hallmark of the Patiala gharānā style, but he also used sargam for rhythm and speed. He made more use than most vocalists of the rhythmic cadence called tihāī. He was highly praised for the intense sincerity and emotion of his singing.

The Patiala gharānā style has continued through Ghulam Ali's son, the late Munnawar Ali Khan, and his grandson, Raza Ali Khan, as well as disciples from outside his family.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

V.H. Deshpande: Gharāndāj gāyakī (Marathi, 1961; Eng. trans., 1973, 2/1987, as Indian Musical Traditions: an Aesthetic Study of the Gharanas in Hindustani Music)

V.C. Maudgalya: 'Bade Ghulam Ali Khan', Indian Music Journal, no.9 (1968), 35–6

A.D. Ranade: 'Ustad Bade Ghulam Ali Khan (1901–1968)', Quarterly Journal of the National Centre for the Performing Arts, x/2 (1981), 17–21

B.C. Wade: Khyāl: Creativity within North India's Classical Vocal Tradition (Cambridge, 1984)

RECORDINGS

Ragas Darbari Kanada and Kaushi Dhani, perf. B.G.A. Khan, HMV EALP 1265 (n.d.)

Ragas Goonkali and Malkauns, perf. B.G.A. Khan, HMV EALP 1258 (c 1960)

Ustad Bade Ghulam Ali Khan, HMV EALP 1516 (1973) [thumrī in rāgas Tilak Kamod, Mishra Khamaj and Bhairavi]

For further recordings see M.S. Kinnear: A Discography of Hindustani and Karnatic Music (Westport, CT, 1985)

BONNIE C. WADE

Khan, Bundu (b Delhi, 1880–86; d Liyapatabad, Pakistan, 1955). Indian sāraṅgī player. His father was Ali Jan Khan, but Bundu received most of his early musical training from his mother's father Abdul Ghani Khan, whose passion for the sāraṅgī earned him the nickname of Sangi Khan. Bundu Khan's devotion to the instrument was to become legendary. His most important teacher was probably his uncle Mamman Khan, and the relationship continued after Bundu Khan left Delhi and became a court musician to Maharaja Tukojirav of Indore, a position he held for more than 25 years. During this time he not only consolidated his reputation as the leading sāraṅgī player of the first half of the century but also developed his aspirations as a musicologist. He published a short-lived journal and other writings on rāga and collaborated with the famous scholar V.N. Bhatkhande on his huge compilation of rāgas and compositions. He later returned to Delhi, where he was employed by All India Radio. In 1948, shortly after the partition of India, he followed other members of his family to Pakistan. He was equally famous as an accompanist to the leading singers of his age and as a soloist, and he developed a technique to imitate other instruments as well as the voice. Among his pupils were several other famous sāraṅgī players including his son Umrao Khan, Abdul Majid Khan and Mohammad Sagiruddin Khan.

NEIL SORRELL

Khan, Faiyaz (Husain) (b Agra, 1881; d 5 Nov 1950). North Indian (Hindustani) vocalist. He was trained by Ghulam Abbas and his brother Kallan Khan and by Fida Husain Kotavala, his paternal uncle. Ghulam Abbas was systematic in his teaching, requiring Faiyaz to memorize a large number of melodies and to listen analytically to important contemporary musicians. According to Agra gharānā tradition, he studied dhrupad as well as khayāl. In 1906 he won his first gold medal, singing in Mysore at the Dussehra festival; from that time he cherished winning and wearing medals. In 1911 the ruler of Mysore dubbed him Aftab-i-musīqī (Urdu: 'Sun of Music'), by which title he was known thereafter. In 1911 Faiyaz became an honoured musician at the Baroda court. Singing at the invitation of other princes, he won a musical competition in 1921, receiving from the Maharaja of Indore a large monetary prize or, according to a second account, a precious bejewelled necklace. He travelled widely and participated in music conferences arranged by the scholar Vishnu Narayan Bhatkhande. At the Lucknow conference in 1925 the title Saṅgīt cūdāmaṇi was conferred on him, and in Allahabad he earned the titles Saṅgīt bhāskar (Hindi: 'Sun of Music') and Saṅgīt saroj ('Musical Lotus'). He sang on major radio stations and made commercial recordings, and became known all over India.

His musical style was unmistakably that of the Agra gharānā. He had a powerful low-pitched voice with a range of over two and a half octaves and was skilled in laykārī. From his dhrupad training, he introduced into khayāl the singing of ālāp and non-tom before beginning the composition; this became part of Agra gharānā khayāl style. Unlike other Agra gharānā musicians he performed lighter genres; ṭhumrī, dādrā and ghazal. His repertory was enormous, and he was a gifted composer, using the mudrā (pen name) Prem Piya.

A charismatic performer and an exceptionally fine musician, Faiyaz Khan played an important role in popularizing classical music among growing urban audiences. Although he never liked to teach, many members of the family as well as others learnt from him. His death marked the near-end of the tradition of princely patronage.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

V.H. Deshpande: Gharāndāj gāyakī (Marathi, 1961; Eng. trans., 1973, 2/1987, as Indian Musical Traditions: an Aesthetic Study of the Gharanas in Hindustani Music)

R. Mehta: Āgrā gharānā: paramparā gāyakī aur chīzeṅ [Agra gharānā: lineage, style and compositions] (Baroda, 1969)

B.R. Deodhar: 'Aftab-e-mousiki Ustad Fayyaz Khan (1881–1950)', Quarterly Journal for the Performing Arts, x/1 (1981), 27–32

B.C. Wade: Khyāl: Creativity within North India's Classical Vocal Tradition (Cambridge, 1984)

RECORDINGS

Classical Music of India, perf. F. Khan, HMV EALP 1292 (1965)

Faiyaz Husain Khan, HMV EALP 1365 (1971); reissued as EMI TC-CKDA 10014 (1978) [rāgas Bhankar and Des [Desh]

For further recordings see M.S. Kinnear: A Discography of Hindustani and Karnatic Music (Westport, CT, 1985)

BONNIE C. WADE

Khan, Ghulam Raza [Khān, Ghulām Razā] (fl mid-19th century). Indian sitār player and singer. He was a musician of the ḍhāṛī class, a hereditary professional musician. His father Natthu Khan alias Ghulam Ali Khan was a musician employed by Nawab Ahmad Ali Khan of Rampur (reigned 1822–40). Ghulam Raza Khan established himself as a leading musician in the court of Nawab Wajid Ali Shah of Lucknow (reigned 1847–56), but was banished from court in 1850. He ultimately settled in Patna with his son Ali Raza, also a renowned sitār player.

He gives his name to a type of instrumental composition, the razākhānī gat, and more generally to a style of playing, the razākhānī or Purab (eastern) bāj (see also KHAN, MASIT). Modern *razākhānī gat*s are normally set in the 16-beat Tīntāl, played at medium-fast or fast tempo and based on stereotypical patterns of strokes (bols) (ex.1).

Ex.1 Typical rāzākhanī gat pattern in Tīntāl

X = sam (beat one); dā/di = inward stroke; rā/ri = outward stroke
♩ = 1 matra

This type is one of the staples of contemporary sitār and sarod technique in virtually all traditions. Earlier published *razākhānī gat*s show a variety of stroke patterns, thus it is not clear at which point this type became dominant. Moreover, none is explicitly credited to Ghulam Raza Khan; some believe that this composition type and playing style was developed by his son Ali Raza, while others believe that it was created by Masit Khan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Miner: Sitar and Sarod in the 18th and 19th Centuries (Wilhelmshaven, 1993)

A.D. Sharma: Musicians of India Past and Present (Calcutta, 1993)

MARTIN CLAYTON

Khan, Imrat (b Calcutta, 17 Nov 1935). Indian sitār and surbahār player and composer. His family has played a unique and distinguished role in the history of North Indian classical music. His grandfather Imdad Khan (*c*1848–1920) and his father Enayat Khan (1895–1938) were the foremost sitār and surbahār players of the 19th and early 20th centuries. His elder brother is the renowned sitār player Vilayat Khan, from whom he received his training in sitār. He studied the surbahār with his uncle Wahid Khan and vocal music with his maternal grandfather Bande Hasan Khan. By the end of the 20th century Imrat Khan was acknowledged as the greatest living exponent of the surbahār, a bass version of the sitār developed by his great-grandfather Sahabdad Khan (see illustration). It has a low and resonant tone suited to the exploration of the most subtle nuances of a rāg and is played solo without tablā accompaniment.

In 1956 Imrat Khan joined the Indian cultural delegation to the Soviet Union. Since then he has become famous as an ambassador for Indian music and has established an international reputation as a master of both sitār and surbahār. In 1971 he was the first Indian musician to perform at the Henry Wood Promenade concerts. Imrat Khan has played his own compositions for many films and has made numerous recordings both in India and abroad. In 1988 he was presented with the Sangeet Natak Akademi Award. He has taught at many colleges and universities throughout the world. His four sons are internationally known performers: Nishat (b 1960) plays the sitār, Irshad (b 1963) the sitār and surbahār, Wajahat (b 1964) the sarod and Shafaatullah (b 1965) the tablā.

GERRY FARRELL

Khan, Masit [Khān, Masīt] (fl early 19th century). Indian sitār player. He was descended from the most famous of all Indian musicians, the Mughal Emperor Akbar's court musician Tansen, through the rabābiyā line of Tansen's son Vilas Khan. Although accounts of his immediate ancestors differ, he is believed to have been the son of Firoz Khan alias Adarang, the pioneer of khayāl singing. He was succeeded by his son Bahadur Khan (*d c*1841) and his sister's son Dulha Khan, who were prominent sitār players in early 19th-century Delhi. By far the most famous of the early sitār players, he was based in Delhi, thus the style of playing which he pioneered is known as either the masītkhānī bāj or Delhi bāj (see also KHAN, GHULAM RAZA).

Imrat Khan playing the surbahār

His major contribution to the sitār repertory was the introduction of the gat-toḍā; toḍā refers to the improvised extension or development of the gat). His gat compositions combined fixed stroke patterns with rāg melodies inspired by or borrowed from dhrupad (vocal) compositions; they were generally set in the 16-beat Tīntāl and played at a medium-slow tempo. The stroke pattern now regarded as standard for a masītkhānī gat is shown in ex.1. This is

Ex.1 Standard masītkhānī gat pattern in Tīntāl

X = sam (beat one); dā/di = inward stroke; rā/ri = outward stroke
♩ = 1 matra

one of the bases of contemporary sitār and sarod technique in virtually all traditions. Most modern instrumentalists play these compositions at a much slower tempo than would have been common in Masit Khan's time, and consequently this basic stroke pattern is frequently elaborated.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dhar: Senia gharana: its Contribution to Indian Classical Music (Delhi, 1989)
A. Miner: Sitar and Sarod in the 18th and 19th Centuries (Wilhelmshaven, 1993)
A.D. Sharma: Musicians of India Past and Present (Calcutta, 1993)

MARTIN CLAYTON

Khān, Muḥammad Jum'a (b Al Mukalla, *c*1903; d Al Munkalla, 1963). Yemeni instrumental performer. He was born to a Yemeni mother and a Punjabi father who was a soldier in the army of sultan Qu'ayti. As an adolescent Khān joined the sultan's musical ensemble, in which he played Western instruments and became familiar with a repertory of Western military band music and Indian music. At the same time he learnt the qanbūs (lute) with Sa'd Allāh Faraj, who had been a pupil of the distinguished Yafi musician Sulṭān al-Shaykh 'Alī (d *c*1903).

On being placed in charge of the sultan's ensemble, Khān began to introduce tunes from Hadramawt into its repertory and brought Arab influences into its work. He learnt to play the 'ūd, which superseded the Yemeni qanbūs in the 1930s, and began to draw on various sources of Hadramawt popular song from both the coast and the interior. These included religious chant, such as Yā man tahall bidhikrihi ('Thou whose Name it is Permitted to Speak', a poem by the Sufi al-Burā'ī), and dān poetry such as Dhā fazl naṣmeh ('This is my First Verse'). He also composed settings for classical Arab poetry and the work of modern poets such as al-Maḥḍār. To this Yemeni inheritance he added certain elements of Indian origin, particularly melodic features, creating a new repertory now known as 'awādī. With his own ensemble he made about 100 78 r.p.m. recordings for several recording companies in Aden and for Aden Radio. He was a significant figure in the development of the urban music of Hadramawt and left an important artistic heritage for musicians such as Abū Bakr Bal-Faqīh and Muḥammad Bin Shāmikh.

JEAN LAMBERT

Khan, Vilayat (b Gauripur, Bengal [now Bangladesh], 28 Aug 1924). Indian sitār player and composer. He was born into a distinguished family of professional musicians that traces its lineage back to the 16th-century court musician Tānsen and has played a central role in the development of North Indian classical instrumental music. His grandfather Imdad Khan (*c*1848–1920) and father Enayat Khan (1895–1938) were the foremost surbahār and sitār players of the 19th and early 20th centuries. They brought many innovations to sitār performance and Imdad Khan was one of the first sitār players to be recorded. Vilayat Khan is the elder brother of Imrat Khan. His initial training in sitār was with his father. After his father's death he continued his studies with his mother Bashiran Begum and his maternal grandfather the vocalist Bande Hasan Khan. A child prodigy, performing widely at the age of 12, he has since become a major figure in the world of music with a reputation as one of the greatest exponents of sitār performance in the 20th century. He has toured worldwide and has made numerous recordings both in India and abroad. His recordings of rāga Yaman and rāga Darbārī are considered classic performances and have been reissued many times. His compositions have included several film scores, notably that for Satyajit Ray's Jalsa ghar ('The Music Room').

Although firmly rooted in tradition, Vilayat Khan's style of playing is innovative in many respects. He has developed new tunings for the sitār and the gāyakī (vocal) style, which emphasizes brilliance of tone, clarity of line, complexity of bol and the technique of mīṇḍ. The formal and expressive aspects of gāyakī style are influenced by vocal forms such as khayāl and ṭhumrī, and Vilayat Khan is an accomplished vocalist. By continuing the development of a vocal style in sitār performance he has continued in the tradition of his father and grandfather. This style of playing is now recognized as a distinct genre of sitār playing, followed by students throughout India and the world. He has taught many of India's eminent sitār players including his own son Shujat Hussain Khan (b 1960), Arvind Parikh (b 1927) and Kalyani Roy (b 1931).

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

N. Jairazbhoy: The Rāgs of North Indian Music (Bombay, 1971/R)
A. Miner: Sitar and Sarod in the 18th and 19th Centuries (Wilhelmshaven, 1993)

RECORDINGS

Supreme Genius of Ustad Vilayat Khan, EMI EASD 1332 (1968) [rāga Darbārī Kānaḍā]
Rāga Bhairavī, perf. V. Khan, India Archive Music IAMCD 1001 (1991)
Rāga Jaijaivāntī, perf. V. Khan, India Archive Music IAMCD 1010 (1993)

GERRY FARRELL

Khandoshkin, Ivan Yevstafyevich (b 1747; d St Petersburg, 29/30 March 1804). Russian violinist and composer. A pupil of Tito Porta, he was the finest Russian violinist of the 18th century. From 1765 he was a musician at the Russian court and taught the violin at the Academy of Fine Arts; later he was court Kapellmeister. In 1783 he was on the staff of Knipper's Free Theatre, St Petersburg and in 1785 was invited by Potyomkin to become director of his projected music academy at Yekaterinoslav. This enterprise failed, and in 1789 Khandoshkin returned to St Petersburg, where he continued to perform until his death. Besides three unaccompanied violin sonatas modelled on the works of Bach, Khandoshkin composed several sets of variations on Russian folktunes, which display his own extraordinary virtuosity. A viola concerto, published in 1947 and attributed to Khandoshkin, is now thought to be spurious.

WORKS

published in St Petersburg unless otherwise stated

Chançons russes avec des variations, vn, b (Amsterdam, 1781); 6 sonatas, 2 vn (Amsterdam, 1781), lost; Shest' starinnykh russkikh pesen [6 Old Russ. Songs], with variations, vn, va (1783); 2 pol'skikh [2 polonaises], Molodka molodaia, Kak u nas vo sadochke, orch (Moscow, 1786), lost; 6 russkikh pesen [6 Russ. Songs], with variations, 2 vn (1794); Chansons russes variées, 2 vn, op.2 (1796); 3 sonates, vn, op.3 (*c*1800); other works listed in Mischakoff

BIBLIOGRAPHY

IRMO, i; MooserA, ii

I.M. Yampol'sky: Russkoye skripichnoye iskusstvo [Russian violin playing] (Moscow, 1951)

A. Mischakoff: Khandoshkin and the Beginning of Russian String Music (Ann Arbor, 1983) [incl. list of works]

B. Schwarz: 'Khandoshkin's Earliest Printed Work Rediscovered', Slavonic and Western Music: Essays for Gerald Abraham, ed. M.H. Brown and R.J. Riley (Ann Arbor and Oxford, 1985), 81–6

GEOFFREY NORRIS/R

Khandzta, Grigol of [Handzt'a, Gregory of]. See GEORGIA, §II, 2.

Khanon" [Khanin] (Solov'yov-Savoyarov), Yury Feliksovich (b Leningrad, 1965). Russian composer and pianist. Although he entered the Leningrad Conservatory in order to study composition, his traits both as artist and individual caused his expulsion; he was, however, accepted back in 1985 and thanks to the tact and personal intervention of Vladimir Tsïtovich – with whom he studied orchestration – he graduated in 1988. Khanon" soon disassociated himself from social institutions and artistic groups. His works were occasionally heard in Leningrad, Moscow and Sverdlovsk in concerts where Khanon" also performed works by Satie, who was then little known in Russia. These concerts were covered by the press but the musical establishment ignored them; despite a further concert cycle in 1991 entitled, in parody, 'Khaninskiye chteniya' ('Khanon"'s Readings'), he has not made any attempt to promote or popularize his work. Many of his pieces have never been performed; since 1994 his lifestyle has been a closed book.

Although Khanon" calls Satie and Skryabin his teachers, it is not the music of these composers that attracts him but their tendency to link – some would say subordinate – their music to an idea. According to Khanon", a composer is an ideologist with regard to his musical material. Elements of play (both semantic and phonetic), paradox, the absurd and nonsense (word inversion and invention, pseudo-quotation and limerick) all lend Khanon"'s aesthetic a desire to outrage the listener. He has not followed a single contemporary strain of composition and has founded two trends: 'ėkstremal'naya muzïka' ('extreme music') in 1988 and 'srednyaya muzïka' ('average music') in 1990. For a while, Khanon" achieved notable success with film music – for his score to Aleksandr Sokurov's film Dni zatmeniya ('Days of the Eclipse') he received the 1988 Felix Prize. Despite this beginning of European fame, he then gave up working with the film industry and did not reply to any of the commissions sent to him. Instead, he continued to work on pieces in canonic form, giving his works the suffix 'oc.' or opus canonicus. The orchestra he employs in several of his works consists of 37 players; it is frequently treated in the manner of a Baroque ensemble. Khanon"'s literary works are numerous and as original in form as his music: Skryabin kak litso ('Skryabin as a Person') is written in the style of a memoir with actual events of the composer's biography interspersed with stylized fictitious narrative. 2124 copies of the book were published by a publisher called Tsentr sredney muzïki ('The Centre for Average Music') at the author's expense; in appearance, the volume resembles a 19th-century exclusive edition. Khanon" has one of the largest collections in Russia of Mexican palms and South African stapelias. As a pianist, he has recorded preludes by Skryabin in specially formulated order as well as works by Satie and himself.

WORKS

(selective list)

oc. – opus canonicus

Dramatic: Shag vperyod: dva nazad [One Step Forward and Two Back] (ballet,1, Khanon"), oc.24, 1986; Shagrenevaya kost' [Os de chagrin] (ballet, 3, op-entr'acte, Khanon" and N.Kholyavko, after H. de Balzac: Peau de chagrin), oc.37, 1989; Shagrenevaya kost' [Bone of Sorrow] (op-entr'acte, 1), oc.38, 1990; Treskunchik (ballet, 1, Khanon"), oc.43, 1990; Tusklaya zhizn' [A Dull Life] (op, 1, Khanon"), oc.54, 1993; Zizhel' [Giselle] (ballet, 2, Khanon"), oc.55, 1993; La forza del destino (op omonima, 2, Khanon"), oc.59, 1995 [based on Verdi's op]; Norma (op incognita, 2, Khanon"), oc.65, 1997 [based on Bellini's op]

Inst: Kontsert dlya dirizhyora s orkestrom [A Conc. for Conductor and Orch], oc.16, org, pf, small orch, 1985; Ubogiye notï [Wretched Notes], oc.18, pf, str orch, 1985; Nekiy kontsert [A Certain Conc.], oc.31, pf, orch, 1987; Simfoniya sobak [A Sym. of Dogs], oc.35, small orch, 1989; Smutnïye p'yesï, neyasnogo proiskhozhdeniya [Murky Pieces, of Obscure Origin], oc.42, pf, 1990; Sredniy temperirovannïy klavir [The Average Tempered Clavier], oc.39, pf, 1990; Srednyaya simfoniya [An Average Sym.], oc.40, orch, 1990; Udovletvoritel'nïye p'yesï [Satisfactory Pieces], oc.56, pf, 1994; Restorannïye p'yesï [Restaurant Pieces], oc.57, pianola, 1995; 3 ėkstremal'nïye simfonii, oc.60, orch, 1996; Okostenevshiye prelyudii [Ossified Preludes], oc.67, pf, 1998

Vocal-orch: Vnutrenniye pesni [Inner Songs], oc.30, Bar, orch, 1987; 25 polozhitel'nïkh pesen [25 Positive Songs] (A. Fet), oc.33, Bar, orch, 1988; Sportivnïye uprazhneniya dlya mïsli [Sports Exercises for a Thought], oc.44, 1v, orch, 1990; Publichnïye pesni [Public Songs] (Khanon"), oc.34, 1–15 vv, orch, 1988–9; Malen'kaya nochnaya muzïka [A Little Night Music], oc.53, 2vv, room-sized orch, 1992; Perelistïvaya lyudey [Leafing Over People], oc.50, 2 male vv, orch, 1992

Songs: Kamennoye litso [A Face of Stone] (30 teaching songs, F. Tyutchev), oc.41, 1v, pf, woodblock, 1990; Beseda s publikoy [A Talk with the Public] (30 similar songs, Khanon"), oc.51, 1v, pf, 1991; Malen'kiye detskiye p'yesï bol'shogo soderzhaniya [Small Children's Pieces with a Big Message], oc.46, opt. 1v, pf, 1991; Pesni vo vremya yedï [Songs Whilst Eating] (Khanon"), oc.49, Bar, pf, 1991

Film scores

WRITINGS

'Lobzan'ya panter i gien: rasskaz o A.N. Skryabine' [The kisses of panthers and hyenas: a story about Skryabin], Ogonyok (23 Dec 1991)

'Aleksandr Nikolayevich: Yanvarskiye tezisï, k 120-letiyu so dnya rozhdeniya A.N. Skryabina' [January theses, for the 120th anniversary of the birth of Skryabin], Smena (7 Jan 1992)

'Moya malen'kaya khaninskaya skryabiniana' [My own little Skryabiniana, Khanon"-style], Mesto pechati (1992), no.2, pp.104–35

'Beseda s psikhiatrom v prisutstvii uvelichyennogo izobrazheniya A.N. Skryabina' [A talk with a psychiatrist in the presence of an enlarged portrayal of Skryabin], Mesto pechati (1993), no.4, pp.173–92

'Moya malen'kaya pravda o toy voyne: rasskaz' [My little truth about that war: a short story], Mesto pechati (1994), no.5, pp.24–8

'Samïye neozhidannïye rasteniya' [The most unexpected plants], Tsvetovodstvo (1995), no.1, p.32 only

Skryabin kak litso [Skryabin as a person] (St Petersburg, 1995)

'Stapelii na severe' [Stapelias in the north], Tsvetovodstvo (1995), no.2, pp.32–3

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Yusipova: 'Kompozitor mïsli' [The composer of thought], Teatr (1990), no.11, pp.94–7 [interview]

L. Yusipova: 'Motif neprerïvnogo muzïkal'nogo razvitiya' [The motif of continuous musical development], Muzïka v SSSR (1990), no.2, pp.46–8 [interview]

O. Abramenko: 'Khanonicheskoye litso Aleksandra Skryabina' [A Khanonical portrayal of Skryabin], Chas pik (21 Jan 1998) [book review of Skryabin kak litso]

LYUDMILA KOVNATSKAYA

Khap. Central and northern Lao term for vocal music (the southern Lao equivalent is lam), used particularly to designate melodies that are generated from the speech tones of the text; see LAOS, §1.

Kharja. See ZAJAL.

Kharkiv (Russ. Khar'kov). Ukrainian city. It is the second largest city in Ukraine. It is the historical capital of Sloboda Ukraine, an autonomous region settled in the 17th century with a Cossack tradition of self-government. The Ukrainian Cossacks founded Kharkiv in 1654 when they built a fortified settlement on the plateau between the Kharkiv and Lopan rivers. In the mid-18th century Kharkiv, because of its proximity to the Donets Basin and the trade routes between central Ukraine, Russia, the Caucasus and the Black Sea ports, began to play a major role in the administration of the Russian Empire and quickly became an important industrial, scientific and cultural centre. From 1920 to 1934 it was the capital of the Ukrainian SSR.

Formal education was established in Kharkiv when the Byelgorod seminary was transferred by Prince Golitsyn to Kharkiv in 1726, and became a college in 1734. Under M. Kontsevych music courses were established and in 1773 the composer Artemy Vedel taught there (at which time classes in vocal and instrumental music were initiated). Music culture in the early days revolved around opera, serf-orchestras and various ensembles operated by the wealthy families. In 1780 a theatre was built which, in addition to plays, began to stage operas by Mozart, Paisiello, Cimarosa, Spontini, Spohr, Cherubini and works by Russian composers, such as M.M. Sokolovs'ky's The Miller who was a Wizard, a Cheat and a Matchmaker (1779). Formal concert life started in 1810 when I. Vitkovsky, a former pupil of Haydn and now teacher at the newly established university, conducted Haydn's The Seasons, soon followed by The Creation.

The formation of the Kharkiv University in 1805 along with a university press made Kharkiv an important educational and publishing centre in Ukraine and the Russian Empire. Among teachers of music theory at the university were I.S. Ryzhs'ky, a philologist and the first rector, the theorist and composer Gustav Hesse de Calve, who wrote a two-volume Theory of Music (1818) and I. Lozins'ky, who published a book on violin method. Important ethnographic studies were initiated, student collectives regularly performed Ukrainian folk music, and a famous bandura performing school was established. From the 1810s Kharkiv was a leader in the Ukrainian linguistic, ethnographic, historical and literary renaissance. Among the significant cultural leaders who studied or worked in Kharkiv, many of them members of the Kharkiv Romantic School, were P.P. Sokal's'ky, composer and ethnomusicologist, and his nephew, the composer and pianist V.I. Sokal's'ky (1863–1919). But by 1848 all publications and even lectures were subject to censorship. This culminated in the Ems Ukase of 1876, which essentially forbade the development of Ukrainian culture. During the difficult years between 1848 and 1905, Kharkiv hosted many clandestine organizations of different nationalistic and political outlooks. Despite the adverse conditions, music in Kharkiv profited immensely at this time from the many activities initiated by the organizer and conductor I.I. Slatin and the activities of the Russian Musical Association (the Kharkiv branch was established in 1868). It was Slatin who gave the première of V.I. Sokal's'ky's Symphony in G minor in 1894. A yearly season of ten symphony and ten chamber music concerts was inaugurated and many musical luminaries made regular appearances, among them Tchaikovsky, Nikisch, Glazunov, Rubinstein and Skryabin.

A permanent opera company was established in Kharkiv in 1874 and was the first to stage Lysenko's Christmas Eve (1883). In 1918 the company became the National Opera and in 1920 the Russian State Opera. In 1925 it emerged as the Ukrainian State Capital Opera, the first Ukrainian opera theatre with a resident company. In 1931 the theatre became the Kharkiv Theatre of Opera and Ballet; in 1934 'Academic' was added to the title and finally in 1944 the Lysenko Kharkiv State Academic Theatre (of Opera and Ballet) was born. In 1924 the first Ukrainian-language opera, Lysenko's Taras Bulba, was given its première. A relatively short period of experimentation came to a halt when Moscow declared the new dogma of socialist realism. By 1934 the company had produced 32 operas and 11 ballets, including new works such as Lyatoshyns'ky's The Golden Ring, Valentyn Kostenko's Karmelyuk and Lysenko's Taras Bulba. That tradition continued well into the 1980s. Among the notable opera and ballet premières were The Break by Volodymyr Femelidi, The Communist by Dmytro Klebanov and Vitaly Hubarenko's The Stone Guest.

The Philharmonic Society was established in 1928, and includes a symphony orchestra, an orchestra of folk instruments, a popular music orchestra and various chamber and vocal ensembles. There is also an orchestra in residence at Kharkiv Radio and Television.

The educational centre of the city's life in the 20th century was the conservatory. Kharkiv Music School was established in 1883, and in 1917 it became the Kharkiv Conservatory, then the Music Academy (1920), Music Institute (1921), Music and Drama Institute (1923), Kharkiv State Conservatory (1934), and then, in 1963, the Kharkiv Kotlyarevsky Institute of Arts. In 1998 the word 'State' was added: Kharkivs'ky Derzhavnyy Instytut Mystetstv. The outstanding teacher who in 1922 founded the composition faculty at the Kharkiv Music Institute was Semyon Bogatyryov. Under his tutelage there developed the first group of Ukrainian composers, among them Mykhailo Tits, Dmytro Klebanov, Yuly Meytus, Andry Shtoharenko and Mykola Kolyada. Another notable musician associated with the Institute was David Oistrakh, who began his career by winning the Ukrainian Violin Competition in Kharkiv in 1930. In the 1950s and 60s Klebanov was a crucial figure. Among his students was Valenty Bibyk, who in the 1970s and 80s, as composer and teacher, rejuvenated the musical scene and influenced the next important generation of Kharkiv composers, such as Oleksandr Shchetyns'ky, Oleksandr Grinberg and Aleksandr Gugel'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ME (Y.L. Shcherbinin; also 'Khar'kovsky teatr operï i baleta', Y.A. Stanishevsky)

P.P. Sokal's'ky: Russkaya narodnaya muzïka, velikorusskaya, i malorusskaya v yeyo stroyenii melodicheskom i ritmicheskom i otlichnaya yeyo ot osnov sovremmenoy garmonicheskoy muzïki [Russian folk music, Great Russian and Ukrainian, its melodic and rhythmic structure and its difference from the principles of contemporary harmonic music] (Kharkiv, 1888; Ukrainian trans., 1959, ed. M. Khomichevsky)

Y. Stanishevsky: 'Traditsii i novatorstvo: Kharkivs'kyy operi – 40 rokiv' [Tradition and experimentation: 40 years of Kharkiv opera], Prapor (1965), no.11

K. Krasnopol's'ka: 'Symfonichna muzyka kharkivs'kykh kompozytoriv' [The symphonic music of Kharkov's composers], Ukrainske muzykoznavstvo, ii (1967), 33–43

I.M. Myklashevsky: Muzychna i teatral'na kultura Kharkova XVIII–XIX st. [Musical and theatrical culture in Khar'kov in the 18th and 19th centuries] (Kiev, 1967)

I. Pyrohova: 'Iz istoriï muzykal'noho zhettya Kharkova' [From the history of musical life in Khar'kov], Ukrainske muzykoznavstvo, iii (1968)

I. Pyrohova: 'Rol' presy u stanovlenni y rosvitu muzykalnoï kul'tury Kharkovu' [The role of the press in the musical life of Khar'kov], Ukrainske muzykoznavstvo, iv (1969), 3–12

Y. Shcherbynin: 'Bilya dzherel muzychnoï osvity v Kharkovi' [Near the sources of music education in Kharkiv], Ukrainske muzykoznavstvo, vi (1971), 228–37

VIRKO BALEY

Kharlap, Miron Grigor'yevich (b Łódź, 12/25 Jan 1913; d Moscow, 17 Nov 1994). Russian musicologist. He studied the piano under V.N. Argamakov at the Moscow Conservatory, graduating in 1931, and from 1935 to 1973 assisted at the conservatory as a accompanist for conducting classes. He also worked in the research department at the conservatory (1945–50). Despite not receiving a specialist musicological or philological education, he gained recognition for his research in these fields, with his attention being devoted primarily to questions concerning rhythm in music. He studied the evolution of rhythm, particularly the process that turns folk poetry and its musical expression into musical form, and compared the notation of musical measures with other systems of rhythm, including that of classical verse. Within this research he studied in particular the rhythmic language of Beethoven. He also examined the connection between mode and rhythm and developed the concept of the 'intonational foot', which is the rhythmic unit within folk poetry that possesses a pair of emphases, one high and the other low, both of equal importance. In this way he showed that in folklore the rhythm of poetry is dependent on the rise and fall of the intoned melody and is a function of both music and speech.

WRITINGS

'Ritmika Bėtkhovena' [The rhythms of Beethoven], Bėtkhoven, ed. N.L. Fishman (Moscow, 1971), 370–421

'Narodno-russkaya taktovaya sistema i problema proiskhozhdeniya muzïki' [The Russian traditional system of musical time and the problem of the origin of music], Ranniye formï iskusstva, ed. S.Yu. Neklyudov (Moscow, 1972), 221–73

'Metr' [Meter], ME

'Ispolnitel'skoye iskusstvo kak ėsteticheskaya problema' [Performance art as an aesthetic problem], Masterstvo muzïkanta-ispolnitelya, ii (1976), 5–67

'Taktovaya sistema muzïkal'noy ritmiki' [The system of time-division in musical rhythm], Problemï muzïkal'nogo ritma, ed. V.N. Kholopova (Moscow, 1978), 48–104

Ritm i metr v muzïke ustnoy traditsii [Rhythm and meter in music of the oral tradition] (Moscow, 1986)

'Notnïye dlitel'nosti i paradoks ikh real'nogo zvuchaniya' [Note durations and the paradox of their actual sound], MAk (1997), no.1, pp.170–81; no.2, pp.99–109

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Mazel': 'Novaya teoriya proiskhozhdeniya lada' [A new theory of the origin of mode], SovM (1973), no.9, pp.85–7

IRINA BARANOVA

Khayāl (Pers.: 'thought, fancy'). A type of vocal composition in North Indian art music and the style in which such compositions are performed (see INDIA, §III, 5(i), (iii)(b). The song comprises two rhyming lines of verse, in Hindi, usually on secular themes. They are set to any of the more 'serious' classical modes (the lighter ones being more suitable for ṭhumrī) and to an appropriate metre (see INDIA, §III, 4(iv)). Performance does not normally begin with an elaborate ālāp (unlike in dhrupad) but with the composition itself, sung by a solo singer (male or female), accompanied by the drone lute tambūrā (or tānpurā), the paired kettle-drums tablā, and by the bowed lute sāraṅgī or the harmonium; elaborate melodic and rhythmic improvisation may then follow. A slow-tempo khayāl may be followed by a fast khayāl in the same rāga. The style is more highly ornamented than that of dhrupad, with heavy use of gamak (see INDIA, §III, 3(i)(c)), and florid passage-work (tān). The khayāl style is also rendered on a variety of instruments including the sitār, sarod and sāraṅgī. Traditionally associated with the court of Hussain Shah Sharqi of Jaunpur (1457–76), khayāl was an established style in Delhi by the mid-17th century, and became the dominant style throughout North India during the 19th century. In the course of its development, techniques of improvisation were adapted from the ālāp and laykāri of dhrupad.

RICHARD WIDDESS

Khaykin, Boris. See KHAIKIN, BORIS.

Khentova, Sof'ya Mikhaylovna (b Vitebsk, 27 June 1922). Russian musicologist. She initially enrolled at the Moscow Conservatory, but the war interrupted her studies and she was evacuated to Gor'kiy, where she worked as a journalist on local newspapers and made appearances as a concert pianist. Returning to the Moscow Conservatory in 1944, she studied with Lev Oborin, and completed her education at the Leningrad Conservatory, where she studied with Grigory Buze from 1947 to 1949. She was a piano teacher at the special music school attached to the Leningrad Conservatory from 1949 to 1954. She took the Candidate of Arts degree at the Conservatory in 1954, and became senior lecturer in 1957 and professor in 1968.

Khentova's early academic interest was in the methodology and history of performance. She also wrote a number of monographs on pianists such as Gilels, Van Cliburn, Richter and Artur Rubinstein. However, in 1947 she came into contact with Shostakovich, on whom she later wrote prolifically, and her work on the composer earned her the doctorate in 1984. She has edited Shostakovich's film score Skazka o pope i rabotnike yego Balde (Leningrad, 1981), and translated a number of books into Russian. Her own books have been translated throughout the Russian Republics, Eastern and Central Europe and Japan.

WRITINGS

'Lunnaya sonata' Bėtkhovena [Beethoven's 'Moonlight' Sonata] (Leningrad, 1961, 2/1977)

Shostakovich, pianist (Leningrad, 1964)

ed.: Vïdayushiyesya pianistï-pedagogi o fortepiannom iskusstve [Outstanding pianists and piano teachers] (Moscow, 1966)
Muzïkanti o svoyom iskusstve [Musicians on their own art] (Moscow, 1967)
Podvig A. Toskanini [The feat of Toscanini] (Leningrad, 1968)
ed.: F. Shopen kakim mï yego slïshim [Chopin as we hear him] (Moscow, 1970)
Zhizn' voploshchonnaya v muzïke [A life embodied in music] (Leningrad, 1972)
ed.: Voprosï fortepiannogo tvorchestva, ispolnitel'stva i pedagogiki [Questions associated with works for the piano, performing and teaching] (Leningrad, 1973)
Molodïye godï Shostakovicha [The early years of Shostakovich] (Leningrad, 1975–80)
O muzïke i muzïkantakh nashikh dney [On the music and musicians of our day] (Leningrad, 1976, 2/1988)
Rasskazï o D. Shostakoviche [Stories about Shostakovich] (Moscow, 1976)
D.D. Shostakovich v godï Velikoy Otechestvennoy Voynï [Shostakovich during World War II] (Leningrad, 1979)
Shostakovich v Petrograde-Leningrade [Shostakovich in Petrograd-Leningrad] (Leningrad, 1979, 2/1981)
Melodii velikogo vremeni [The melodies of a great time] (Leningrad, 1980)
D. Shostakovich: tridtsatiletiye 1945–1975 [Shostakovich: the 30 years 1945–75] (Leningrad, 1982)
Podvig voploshchonnïy v muzïke [A feat embodied in music] (Volgograd, 1984)
Solov'yov-Sedoy v Petrograde-Leningrade [Solov'yov-Sedoy in Petrograd-Leningrad] (Leningrad, 1984)
Shostakovich: zhizn'i tvorchestvo [Shostakovich: life and works] (Leningrad, 1985–6, 2/1996)
D. Shostakovich na Ukraine [Shostakovich in the Ukraine] (Kiev, 1986)
D. Shostakovich v Moskve [Shostakovich in Moscow] (Moscow, 1986)
ed.: Vasily Pavlovich Solov'yov-Sedoy: vospominaniya, stat'i, materialï [Solov'yov-Sedoy: reminiscences, articles, materials] (Leningrad, 1987)
Lyubimaya muzïka [Favourite music] (Kiev, 1989)
Shostakovich i Sibir' [Shostakovich and Siberia] (Novosibirsk, 1990)
Rostropovich, dirizhyor [Rostropovich, conductor] (St Petersburg, 1993)
Udvitel'nïy Shostakovich [The amazing Shostakovich] (St Petersburg, 1994)
Rostropovich (St Petersburg, 1995)
Pushkin v muzïke D. Shostakovicha [Pushkin in the music of Shostakovich] (Leningrad, 1996)
V mire Shostakovicha [In the world of Shostakovich] (Moscow, 1996)
Pianistï XX veka [Pianists of the 20th century] (St Petersburg, 1997)

MARINA MOISEYEVNA MAZUR

Khessin, Aleksandr Borisovich (b St Petersburg, 19 Oct 1869; d Moscow, 3 April 1955). Russian conductor and teacher. He studied composition under Solov'yov at the St Petersburg Conservatory, and conducting under Nikisch in Leipzig and Mottl in Karlsruhe. He was principal of the Moscow Philharmonic School (1905), and in 1910 became musical director and chief conductor of the Sheremetev Concert Society. He conducted concerts from 1910 to 1912 in London, Paris and Berlin, including the European première of Skryabin's Le poème de l'extase. From 1915 to 1917 he conducted opera at the People's House in Petrograd, and at the Mariinsky (later Kirov) Theatre (1918–19). He helped to organize the Moscow Philharmonia in 1922, and in 1924 began teaching at the Moscow Institute of Dramatic Art. From 1935 to 1941 he was director (and from 1936 to 1938 artistic adviser) of the opera studio at the Moscow Conservatory; he also taught the class in opera training, and was appointed professor in 1939. Khessin's work as director of the Soviet Opera Company of the All-Russian Dramatic Society (1943–53) was significant; he introduced new Soviet operas to the Moscow public in concert performance (among them Prokofiev's War and Peace, Koval's Sevastopol'tsï and Kasyanov's Foma Gordeyev), and staged other operas not performed in the Moscow repertory, such as Gershwin's Porgy and Bess, Moniuszko's The Haunted Manor, Smetana's Dalibor and Taneyev's Oresteia. He wrote Iz moikh vospominaniy ('From my reminiscences', Moscow, 1959).

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY/V. LEDIN

Khierzinger. See KÜRZINGER family.

Khmer Republic. See CAMBODIA.

Khnes [Khness, Khnies], Jurij. See KNEZ, JURIJ.

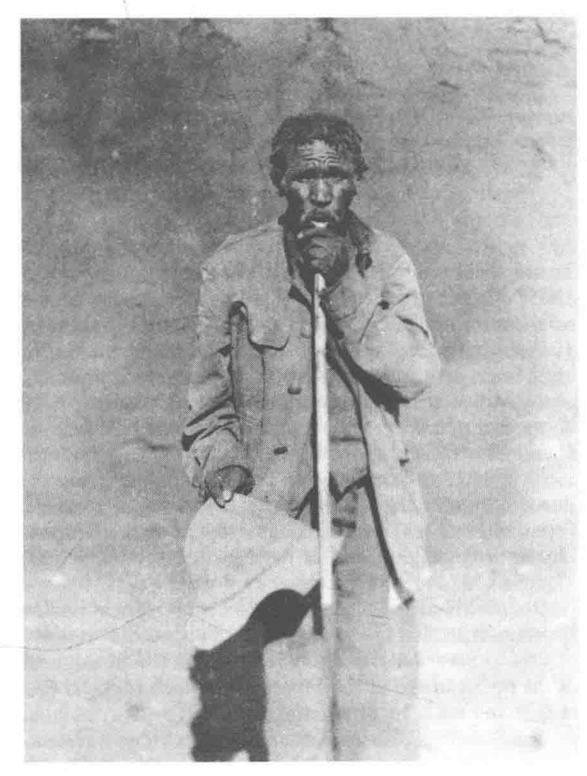
Khoikhoi music. Music of the Khoikhoi or 'Hottentot' people of southern Africa. In 1497 Vasco da Gama, on landing at Cape St Blaise near the southernmost tip of Africa, was greeted with the music of four or five flutes. A band of over 100 flute players dancing in a circle was later reported by Meerhoff, in 1661, according to Godée-Molsbergen (1916). Unlike other southern and central African peoples, the Khoikhoi or 'Hottentot', as they later came to be called, were yellowish-brown in colour. They were pastoral nomads and spoke a language that was rich in 'click' consonants. Beaulieu, in 1620, noted that they also played musical bows, and in 1668 Dapper first described their unusual string-wind instrument, the GORA.

The origin of the name 'Hottentot' is uncertain. Maingard ascribed it to a dance-song refrain, citing Beaulieu who visited the Cape in 1620: 'leur salut ordinaire en nous rencontrant est de danser une chanson dont le commencement, les parties et la fin est "hautitou"'. The Hottentots refer to themselves by the name 'Khoikhoin' (sing. Khoikhoi). Historical writings distinguish four major groups, usually referred to as the Cape Hottentots, Eastern Hottentots, Korana and Nama (or Namaqua). Their total number in the 17th century is estimated at about 50,000. Their descendants became assimilated into the so-called Cape 'coloured' (mixed-race) population, and scarcely any remnants of their language and culture now survive in the Cape Province of South Africa. But it has been established that Khoikhoi dialects are still spoken among a few scattered groups living in South-west Africa, Botswana and southern Angola; these groups resemble the neighbouring San ('Bushmen') and were previously mistaken for San (Westphal, 1963). Ethnically and linguistically, Khoikhoi are unrelated to the Bantu or the San, but possible connections with the Sandawe and Hadzapi (Hatsa) of north-eastern Africa, who also use 'clicks', have been suggested.

1. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. From a number of eye witness accounts since the 15th century, it appears that the principal instruments used by Khoikhoi for ensemble performance were single-note flutes. A type of drum, made from a wooden or clay milk-pot over which a deerskin or sheepskin was tied (fig.1), was used by women for song accompaniment, and to accompany dancing. It was played with the fingers of the right hand, and some writers have noted that pitch was regulated by pressure on the membrane with the left thumb and forefinger.

Solo instruments comprised the gora and two other types of MUSICAL BOW. Among less important instruments



1. Khoikhoi woman playing a pot drum: drawing by Charles Bell, 1834 (MuseumAfrica, Johannesburg) were the bullroarer and a signal whistle made from bone. Some early observers noted the use of animal horns and, in one case, a form of horn made from a hollow seaweed stalk. In the 18th century, imitations of the European violin were attempted, and a type of three-string lute, commonly known as the RAMKIE, was adopted from slaves from Malabar. This was later imitated by Bantu peoples throughout southern Africa. Khoikhoi-speaking groups in South-west Africa have to some extent adopted Western instruments such as the guitar, melodeon and harmonica. Those in Botswana use a few instruments borrowed from Bantu peoples, notably a lamellophone from the Nambzwa (Nambya or Shona) and a drum from the Mbukushu.

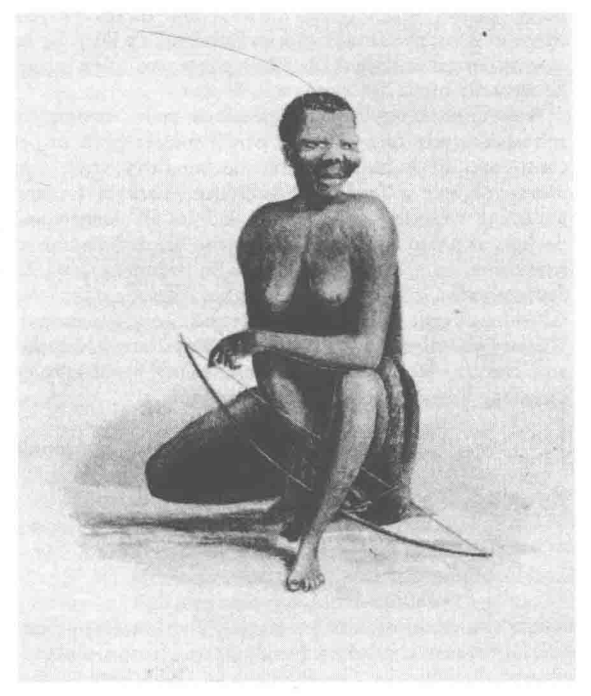
In former times, among the Nama and Korana Khoikhoi, flutes usually consisted of narrow reeds with a bore of about 1 cm, fitted with movable plugs of fibre, adjusted by means of a tuning-stick. In the absence of reed, flutes were sometimes made from the bark of acacia roots. The flutes were always played by adult males. Each player supplied only a single note, and these notes were sounded in alternation while dancing. The scale comprised four notes, representable as D, C, A, G, in descending order. When there were more than four players, octaves and unisons of these notes were added. The flute was blown by placing the open end on the hollowed tongue, which gripped it by suction and also formed a trough for directing the airstream across it. A Korana flautist is shown in fig.2. Kirby (1931, 1932 and 1934) has given a comprehensive description of these flutes and other early Khoikhoi instruments.

The gora is a unique form of mouth-resonated bow (fig.3), sounded by blowing on a quill attached to the bow-string. Two other types of musical bow used by the Nama and Korana have been described by Kirby in detail (1932 and 1934); he considered both to be adaptations of the ordinary hunting bow borrowed from the San early in the 17th century. One type was a simple, unbraced mouth bow played only by men. One end of the stave was held in the right-hand corner of the mouth, while the other was supported by the left hand. The string was then plucked by the right forefinger and the fundamental tone elicited; at the same time the player, by altering the shape of his mouth, could select and amplify certain higher harmonics, as in playing the jew's harp. Kirby has transcribed a melody based on the 3rd to 8th partials with the omission of the 7th partial. This form of musical bow and its playing technique are widely distributed in southern Africa. Another slightly larger type of musical bow was played only by women. Mouth resonance was not employed. Instead, the lower end of the stave rested on the ground, as shown in fig.4, or against a skin milk-bag, wooden dish or even a tin can, which served as a resonator. Some later accounts described a different technique from that depicted in fig.4: the player, sitting on the ground, placed the top of the bow against her left shoulder and, in addition to the fundamental obtained from the open string, produced a stopped note a tone higher by pressing her chin against the string. The 2nd harmonic partials of both these notes were also produced by touching the centre of the string with the left-hand forefinger. This technique appears to have been restricted to the Nama and Korana and to the Bantu-speaking Tswana, who most probably borrowed it from them. In Uganda, however, Trowell and Wachsmann have noted 'chin stopping' among the Acoli (Acholi) and the Alur, though a different type of bow is used.

2. FLUTE DANCES. There are a number of accounts of Khoikhoi flute-ensemble performances from 17th- and 18th-century observers; most refer to the Nama Khoikhoi. The first reference to flutes among the Korana was by Wikar in 1778 (according to Moritz, 1918), and it seems



2. Korana flautist sounding a reed flute

3. Gora: (a) complete instrument; (b) detail of quill that their flute dance was essentially the same. There is also evidence, from early in the 19th century, that certain San, and also some of the Bantu-speaking Tswana, had adopted the Khoikhoi flute dance, which is still performed among the Tswana. The Venda and neighbouring peoples of the northern Transvaal also have a flute dance, but there are basic differences, which suggest it was not derived from the Khoikhoi dance. Among the Nama and the Korana, flute dances were apparently the most important form of collective musical activity. They were performed on special occasions, such as when a chief wished to honour a distinguished guest. The dance usually lasted from before sunset until the following morning, and oxen were slaughtered for the dancers. Among the Korana there were occasional 'competitions' between villages in which the flute dance was important. Some 18th-century writers suggested a connection between the Nama flute dance and moon worship.

4. Khoikhoi woman playing a musical bow: drawing by Charles Bell, 1834 (MuseumAfrica, Johannesburg)

The flute players, who were always adult males, danced anti-clockwise round their leader who beat time in the centre with a stick. Women formed an outer circle (or inner circle, according to one report by Tachard in 1686), moving in the opposite direction while clapping their hands and dancing. L. Schultze described a Nama performance, seen in 1907, as follows: 'The dance movements of the men consist of small jumps, both legs being bent weakly at the knees, and the feet placed one before the other. The dancer moves slowly forwards and backwards in this manner, bent forward, his head bowed over his chest, and his lips on the reed. The women "chassez" forward with small, and often most graceful steps, swaying about, protruding their posteriors, and rocking their buttocks from the haunches, clapping their hands loudly before their faces, while they sing with an expression of the greatest excitement. There is no fixed number of dancers'. A detailed discussion of Khoikhoi flute dances is provided by Kirby (1934). He cited all the major documentary sources and supplemented these with the results of his own fieldwork.

3. VOCAL MUSIC. An early reference to song is given by Grevenbroek (*c*1689; ed. I. Schapera, 1933), who noted that women, among the Cape Khoikhoi, 'sing an old song, nearly always the same, and to accompany it they strike their hands on a skin which is stretched over a pot'. Kolb and Lichtenstein attempted transcriptions of songs. The use of intervals from the harmonic series resembling those produced on the gora has been noted, as has the use of a four-note scale matching the tuning of flutes in the flute dance. However, two of the six traditional Korana songs transcribed by Kirby (1932) are hexatonic. In recent field recordings of songs from Khoikhoi-speaking as well as San groups in South-west Africa, Botswana and southern Angola, the four-note 'flute-dance scale', representable as D, C, A, G, is common, but variants such as D, B, A, G and D, B, G, F also occur. In songs from this area, a form of yodelling is quite common, in which alternating vowel qualities are used rather than words. In earlier literature, a similar feature may possibly account for Nama song texts such as that cited by J.E. Alexander (1838): 'He also sung in low chorus, "Uwahu", to the "ei, oh! ei, oh! ei, oh – oh! oh! oh!" and the clapping of the hands of the women'. However, there is considerable evidence that not all Khoikhoi song texts were sung on vocables, and it seems that speech-tones had a definite influence on melody when lexical texts were used.

Mention of communal dance-songs is infrequent in earlier literature, but these seem to be the most important form of collective musical activity today among Khoikhoi-speaking groups (often mistaken for San) in South-west Africa, Botswana and southern Angola. The flute dance appears to be no longer known, though the use of a four-note vocal scale resembling that of flute-dance music is common. It is possible that the music derives largely from San sources, since neighbouring San practices are very similar. Dance-song performances may either be recreational, connected with initiation, or for healing by inducing a state of trance in one or more participants. Women and girls, divided into groups around a central fire, sing and clap in hocket style while dancing. An outer circle of male participants enhances the rhythm with leg-rattles while dancing, but they do not sing. Additional percussion may be provided by striking on metal hoe-blades to yield rhythmic patterns.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. de Beaulieu: Mémoires du voyage aux Indes orientales du général Beaulieu (Paris, 1664)
O. Dapper: Naukeurige beschrijvinge der Afrikaensche gewesten (Amsterdam, 1668, Eng. trans., 1670; Ger. trans., 1670/R)
G. Tachard: Voyage de Siam des Pères Jésuites (Paris, 1686)
P. Kolb: Caput bonae spei hodiernum (Nuremberg, 1719, Eng. trans., The Present State of the Cape of Good Hope)
M.H.K. Lichtenstein: Travels in Southern Africa in the Years 1803, 1804, 1805 and 1806 (London, 1812–15/R)
J.E. Alexander: An Expedition of Discovery into the Interior of Africa (London, 1838/R)
L. Schultze: Aus Namaland und Kalahari (Jena, 1907)
E.C. Godée-Molsbergen: Reizen in Zuid Afrika, i (The Hague, 1916/R), 57
E. Moritz: 'Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Deutsch-Süd-west Afrika', Mitteilungen aus der deutschen Schutzgebung, xxxi (1918), 87
P.R. Kirby: 'The Gora and its Bantu Successors: a Study in South African Native Music', Bantu Studies, v (1931), 89–109
P.R. Kirby: 'The Music and Musical Instruments of the Korana', Bantu Studies, vi (1932), 183–204
P.R. Kirby: 'The Reed-Flute Ensembles of South Africa: a Study in South African Native Music', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxiii (1933), 313–88
I. Schapera: The Early Cape Hottentots Described in the Writings of ... Johannes Gulielmus de Grevenbroek (1695) (Cape Town, 1933/R)
P.R. Kirby: The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (London, 1934, 2/1965)
P.R. Kirby: 'A Further Note on the Gora and its Bantu Successors', Bantu Studies, ix (1935), 53–61
L.F. Maingard: 'The Origin of the Word "Hottentot"', Bantu Studies, ix (1935), 63–7
M. Trowell and K.P. Wachsmann: Tribal Crafts of Uganda (London, 1953)
E.O.J. Westphal: 'The Linguistic Prehistory of Southern Africa', Africa, xxxiii (1963), 237–65
M. Wilson and L. Thompson, eds.: The Oxford History of South Africa, i: South Africa to 1870 (Oxford, 1969)
E.O.J. Westphal: 'Observations on Current Bushman and Hottentot Musical Practices', Review of Ethnology, v/2–3 (1978), 9–15
D.K. Rycroft: 'Comments on Bushman and Hottentot Music recorded by E.O.J. Westphal', Review of Ethnology, v/2–3 (1978), 16–23

DAVID K. RYCROFT

Khoisan music. For the music of the Khoisan-speaking people of southern Africa, a semi-nomadic people with a tradition of hunting and gathering, see BUSHMAN MUSIC. They were historically referred to as 'Bushmen', a name that many still prefer. To avoid negative connotations associated with this term, the Nama name 'San' has also been used, though this is now considered by some to be even more derogatory.

The primary social unit of the people is a band usually consisting of between 20 and 50 members related either by blood or by marriage. They have no leaders or formal legal institutions, and their mode of social organization is among the most simple and egalitarian known.

Although once occupying much of southern Africa, the Khoisan are now confined mainly to BOTSWANA, NAMIBIA and ANGOLA. Few live in the traditional manner, as the encroachments of cattle farming and the modern world have forced many of them away from the old ways and on to the farms where they occupy only a menial and insecure position. Their once lively and coherent culture has been deeply eroded by the changing world around them.

Khokhlov, Pavel (Akinfiyevich) (b Spassky, Tambov, 21 July/2 Aug 1854; d Moscow, 20 Sept 1919). Russian baritone. He studied law in Moscow, also taking lessons in violin and piano, and in singing first with Yury Arnol'd (who upset his voice by making him study bass parts) and later with Aleksandra Aleksandrova-Kochetova. He made his début at the Moscow Bol'shoy as Valentin (19 Feb/3 March 1879), remaining with the company until his retirement in 1900; he also appeared at the Mariinsky in St Petersburg (1881, 1887–8), and sang in concerts in the provinces.

His rich, warm voice and generous artistry quickly made an impression, and he was particularly successful as Yevgeny Onegin (singing the role at the first Bol'shoy performance, 11/23 January 1881, and thereafter 138 times in Moscow alone) and as Rubinstein's Demon; he also appeared in Prague (1889) in these two roles, which he virtually made his own.

A scrupulous stylist, conscientious in his constantly refreshed study of a role, he was a master both of bel canto and of a more flexible declamatory style, and moreover had a fine stage presence. Various factors, including overwork and drink, led to an early vocal decline, as noted by Tchaikovsky, who liked and admired Khokhlov, in a letter to Yuuliya Shpazhinskaya of 23 September/5 October 1886. His other roles included Don Giovanni, Verdi's Renato, Di Luna and Giorgio Germont, Wagner's Wolfram and Telramund, Meyerbeer's Nélusko and Nevers, Weber's Ottokar, and many Russian roles including Boris Godunov and Prince Igor.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Durïlin: P.A. Khokhlov 1854–1919 (Moscow and Leningrad, 1947)
Yu. Yakovlev: P.A. Khokhlov (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950)

JOHN WARRACK

Kholbio, Simon. See KOLB, SIMON.

Kholminov, Aleksandr Nikolayevich (b Moscow, 8 Sept 1925). Russian composer. He graduated from Golubev's class at the Moscow Conservatory in 1950. Secretary of the USSR Composers' Union, he holds the title Honoured Art Worker of the RSFSR and the State Prize. Operas, cantatas and songs form the bulk of his output, all of them dealing with contemporary themes. Links with the Russian tradition are evident in Kholminov's melodic breadth, his use of Russian protracted song and in the epic, monumental quality of his work. He achieved popularity most decisively with the Pesnya o Lenine ('Song about Lenin'), which entered the 'golden fund' of Soviet popular song. The most significant of his operas is Optimisticheskaya tragediya, produced at the Bol'shoy in 1966. In this work Kholminov's characteristic closeness to the Russian popular song tradition is apparent.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Optimisticheskaya tragediya (3, Kholminov, after V. Vishnevsky), 1964; Anna Snegina (2, A. Mashistov, after S. Yesenin), 1966; Shinel' [The Overcoat], Kolyaska [The Carriage] (both after N. Gogol'), 1971; Chapayev (3, Kholminov, after D. Furmanov), 1973; Dvenadtsataya seriya [The 12th Series] (1, V. Shukshin), 1976; Van'ka (1, A. Chekhov), 1979; Brat'ya Karamazovï [2, The Brothers Karamazov] (after F. Dostoyevsky), 1981; Goryachiy sneg [2, Hot Snow] (after Yu. Bondarev), 1984; Stalevarï [The Steel Melter Foremen] (2, Kholminov), 1987; Plodï prosveshcheniya [The Fruits of Enlightenment] (2, after L. Tolstoy), 1990

Cants.: Zdravstuy, rodina! [Hail, my Country!] (Yu. Kamenetsky), 1960; Lenin s nami [Lenin is with us] (V. Mayakovsky), 1967; Radi zhizni na zemle [For the Sake of Life on Earth] (V. Mayakovsky), 1975; Lenin, 1980; Tsveti, nasha rodina [Blossom, our Motherland] (M. Isakovsky, A. Prokof'yev, A. Tvardovsky), 1982; Perestupiv prorog voynï [Having Crossed the Threshold of War] (A. Tvardovsky), 1985

Orch: Geroicheskaya poėma [Heroic Poem], 1954; Rozhdyonnïye burey [Born in the Storm], sym. poem, 1960; Sym. no.1, 1973; Sym. no.2, 1975; Sym. no.3, 'Andrey Rublyov', chorus, orch, 1977; Conc., fl, str, 1978; Liricheskaya syuita [Lyrical Suite], 1980; Prazdnichnaya poema [Festive Poem], 1980; Conc. grosso, chbr orch, 1988; Suite from op Kolyaska [The Carriage], chbr orch, 1988; Conc., va, str, 1989; Sym. no.4, 1990; Sym. no.5, 1993

Chbr inst: Pf Qt, 1947; Detskiy al'bom [Children's Album], pf, 1970; 3 str qts: 1980; 1985; 1986; 24 prelyudii, pf, 1994

Vocal cycles: 4 balladï, 1954; Chasï ozhidaniya [The Hours of Waiting] (S. Kaputikian), 1968; Bïl perviy grom [It was the First Thunder] (M. Karem), 1970

Songs: Pesnya o Lenine [Song on Lenin] (Kamenetsky), 1955; Pesnya druzhbï [Song of Friendship] (Kamenetsky), 1959; Oda rodine [Ode to my Country] (Yu. Polukhin), 1962; Oktyabr' 17-go goda [October '17] (M. Matusovsky), 1964

Film music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Sabinina: 'Nachalo puti' [The path's beginning], SovM (1957), no.8, pp.47–51

D. Kabalevsky: 'Tvorchestvo molodïkh' [The work of the young], SovM (1958), no.12, pp.3–15 [on Pesnya o Lenine]

V. Viknogradov: 'Revolyutsionno-romanticheskaya opera', SovM (1966), no.5, pp.44–8 [on Optimisticheskaya tragediya]

G. Grigor'yeva: 'Gogolevskiye operï A. Kholminova' [The Gogolian operas of A. Kholminov], Muzïka i sovremennost', iii (Moscow, 1979), 182–99

GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA

Kholopov, Yury Nikolayevich (b Ryazan', 14 Aug 1932). Russian musicologist and music teacher. He studied with I.V. Sposobin (1948–54) at the Moscow Conservatory, where he also completed his postgraduate studies in 1960 with S.S. Bogatïryov after three years of military service (1955–8). He began teaching music theory at the conservatory in 1960 and was appointed senior lecturer in 1972 and professor in 1983; during this time he also taught at other music schools in Moscow. His students, who include prominent musicologists such as Saponov and Cherednichenko and composers such as Smirnov and Firsova, have acknowledged his influence. Having published over 600 items on a broad range of themes, he is internationally recognized as an outstanding scholar; his awards include the International Bartók Medal in 1981 and the State Prize of Russia in 1990 and he has been made an Honoured Representative of the Arts of the Russian Federation (1995) and a member of the Academy of Europe (1996).

Kholopov initially established his reputation as teacher by reforming the music theory courses he taught, abandoning biases which had built up during the 'struggle against formalism' and restoring the link to traditional theories of form. He also broadened the span of history under study to include the music of the pre-Middle Ages and the 20th century, and created new composition and piano exercises to aid the student's understanding of theory. Basing his exercises on original sources, his teachings increased a historical perspective in music theory by encouraging students to harmonise in styles ranging from the Baroque to the 20th century.

As a scholar who both generates and inspires original ideas, Kholopov met with much resistance from reactionary circles early in his career. Despite already having authored two books, he was not allowed to defend his *Kandidat*dissertation Sovremennïye chertï garmonii Prokof'yeva in 1966 due to severe, ideologically-based criticism. The work, remarkable for its scope and innovative approaches, was finally accepted ten years later and in the following year Kholopov defended the DSc dissertation Ocherki sovremennoy garmonii ('Essays on Contemporary Harmony'). In these two dissertations and in many other writings, Kholopov has sought to resolve the problems associated with contemporary harmony. He has broadened his field of inquiry in his later work to include modality in medieval and Renaissance music and the harmonic systems of Classical and Romantic music, offering fresh insights into the latter, which he relates to musical form (Garmoniya: teoreticheský kurs, 1988). In an attempt to grasp the essence of music, he has presented an overview of the entire history of musical thought to trace the 'invariable factor' linking music of all ages. In addition to his work as a scholar and a teacher, he has discovered and written about many young contemporary Russian composers, such as Denisov, Schnittke, Gubaydulina and Volkonsky.

WRITINGS

O garmonii [On harmony] (Moscow, 1961)

with V.N. Kholopova: Fortepiannïye sonatï Prokof'yeva (Moscow, 1961)

'O tryokh zarubezhnïkh sistemakh garmonii' [On three foreign systems of harmony], Muzïka i sovremennost', iv (1966)

Sovremennïye chertï garmonii Prokof'yeva [Modern traits in the harmony of Prokofiev] (Moscow, 1967; CSc diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1976)

'Printsip klassifikatsii muzïkal'nïkh form' [The principle of classifying musical forms], Teoreticheskiye problemï muzïkal'nïkh form i zhanrov, ed. L.G. Rappoport (Moscow, 1971), 65–94

'Die Spiegelsymmetrie in A. Weberns Variationen für Klavier, Op.27', AMw, xxx (1973), 26–43

Ocherki sovremennoy garmonii [Essays on contemporary harmony] (Moscow, 1974; diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1977)

'Symmetrische Leitern in der russischen Musik', Mf, xxviii (1975), 379–407

Sovremennaya muzïka v sisteme muzïkal'no-teoreticheskogo obrazovaniya: obzornaya informatsiya [Contemporary music in the system of musical and theoretical education: review of information] (Moscow, 1977)

Muzïkal'no-teoreticheskaya sistema Khaynrikha Shenkera [The musical and theoretical system of Heinrich Schenker], Muzikalni khorizonti, no.12 (1978) [in Bulg.]

'Kanon: genezis i ranniey etapï razvitiya' [The canon: its genesis and early stages of development], Teoreticheskiye nablyudeniya nad istoriyey muzïki, ed. Yu.K. Yevdokimova, V.V. Zaderatsky and T.N. Livanova (Moscow, 1981), 127–57
'Muzïka XX veka v vuzovskom kursye analiza muzïkal'nïkh proizvedeniy' [20th-century music in the music analysis courses of the higher educational establishments], Sovremennaya muzïka v teoreticheskikh kursakh vuza, ed. L.S. D'iachkova (Moscow, 1981), 119–41
'Izmenyayushcheyesya i neizmennoye v evolyutsii muzïkal'nogo mïshleniya' [The variables and the invariables in the evolution of musical thinking], Problemï traditsiy i novatorstva v sovremennoy muzïke, ed. A.M. Gol'tsman and M.E. Tarakanov (Moscow, 1982), 52–104
Metod analiza muzïkal'noy formï [A method for analysing musical form] (Minsk, 1982)
'Kto izobryol 12-tonovuyu muzïku?' [Who invented 12-tone music?], Problemï istorii avstro-nemetskoy muzïki: pervaya tret' XX veka, ed. M.L. Muginshtein (Moscow, 1983), 34–58
'Prinzipien der musikalischen Formbildung bei J.S. Bach: die Struktur der Bachschen Fuge im Kontext der Entwicklung von Harmonik und Thematismus', BMw, xxv (1983), 97–104
Zadaniya po garmonii [Harmony assignments] (Moscow, 1983) with V. Kholopova: Anton Vebern: zhizn' i tvorchestvo [Anton Webern: life and work] (Moscow,1984; Ger. trans., 1989; It. trans., 1990)
'O garmonii Kh. Shyuttsa' [On the harmony of H. Schütz], Genrikh Shyutts: sbornik statei, ed. T.N. Dubravskaya (Moscow, 1985), 133–77
Problemï na muzikalnata nauka [Problems of musical science], Muzikalni khorizonti, nos.17–18 (1986); nos.19–20 (1986) [collected articles; in Bulg.]
'"Strannïye bemoli" v svyazi s modal'nïmi funktsiyami v russkoy monodii' ['Strange flats' associated with modal functions in Russian monody], Problemï deshifrovki drevnerusskikh notatsiy, ed. S. Kravchenko and A. Kruchinina (Leningrad, 1987), 106–29
Garmoniya: teoreticheskiy kurs [Harmony: a theoretical course] (Moscow, 1988)
'Musorgsky kak kompozitor XX veka' [Musorgsky as a composer of the 20th century], M.P. Musorgsky i muzïka XX veka, ed. G.L. Gdovinsky (Moscow, 1989), 65–92
'K yedinomu polyu zvuka': nr.2 K. Stockhausen' [Towards a single field of sound], Musikkultur in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland/Muzïkal'naya kul'tura v Federativnoy Respublika Germaniya: Leningrad 1990, 167–75
'O sistemye muzïkal'nïkh form v simfoniyakh Chaykovskogo' [On the system of musical form in the symphonies of Tchaikovsky], SovM (1990), no.6, pp.39–45
'Muzïkal'no-teoreticheskaya kontseptsiya A.F. Loseva: teoriya muzïkal'nogo vremeni' [The musical and theoretical concept of Losev: the theory of time in music],Problemï muzïkal'noy teorii, ed. V. Protopopov and others (Moscow, 1991), 3–11 with V. Tsenova: Edison Denisov (Moscow, 1993; Eng. trans., 1995)
'K probleme muzïkal'noy formï v drevnerusskoy monodii' [On the problem of musical form in old Russian monody], Sergiyevskiye chteniya, i (1993), 40–52
'O formakh postizheniya muzïkal'nogo bïtiya' [On the forms of comprehending musical reality], Voprosï filosofii, iv (1993), 106–14
Garmonicheskiy analiz [Harmonic analysis] (Moscow, 1996)
'Ladï Shostakovicha: struktura i sistematika' [Shostakovich's modes: structure and systematisation], Shostakovichu posvyashchayetsya: sbornik statey k 90-letiyu kompozitora, ed. Ye.B. Dolinskaya (Moscow, 1997), 62–77 with V. Kholopova: Muzïka Veberna [The music of Webern] (Moscow, 1999)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Denisov, D. Smirnov and N. Taftikidi: 'Klassicheskaya garmoniya – sovremennïm vzglyadom' [Classical harmony – with a contemporary eye], SovM (1990), no.9, pp.107–9
Laudamus: k shestidesyatiletiyu Yuriya Nikolayevicha Kholopova [For the 60th birthday of Yury Nikolayevich Kholopov] (Moscow,1992)

TAT'YANA S. KYUREGYAN

Kholopova, Valentina Nikolayevna (b Ryazan', 14 Dec 1935). Russian musicologist, sister of Yury Kholopov. She graduated from the Moscow Conservatory with a diploma in theory and composition (1954–9) having studied under L.A. Mazel', V.A. Zuckermann and R.I. Gruber, and completed a postgraduate degree there in 1962 and the Kandidat degree in 1968. In 1960 she began teaching music analysis at the conservatory and she was appointed senior lecturer in 1974 and professor in 1987. In 1991 she became head of the department of interdisciplinary studies for musicologists and in 1993 she was made dean of the faculty for teachers in higher education. She has also taught at the Gnesin Music College (1960–85) and lectured at conservatories in Gor'kiy (now Nizhniy Novgorod) (1962–3), Beijing and Shanghai (1991–2). Many of her pupils such as Stoyanova have had international careers and her achievements in teaching and research have earned her the Béla Bartók Prize (1981) and the Boris Asaf'yev Prize (1991).

Kholopova's earlier writings focus on the study of rhythm: in her dissertation of 1968 she examines the rhythmic style of 20th-century Russian composers in light of her theories on the relation of rhythm and metre, accent in music, the function of rhythm in musical form and the classification of rhythm types; in her study of 1983 she analyses how the rhythm of the Russian language helped to shape the assymetric rhythmic formulae characteristic of Russian music from ancient times to the present day, including znamennïy chant, 17th- and 18th-century choral concertos, opera and 20th-century music. A promoter of modern Russian composers, she has also authored monographs on Webern (with Kholopov, 1984), Schnittke (with Ye.I. Chigareva, 1990) and Gubaydulina (with E. Restagno, 1991). Her later writings have concentrated on musical aesthetics and semantics in an attempt to discover both what comprises the specific quality of music, and what relates music to other art forms (Muzïka kak vid iskusstva, 1990).

WRITINGS

Voprosï ritma v tvorchestve kompozitorov XX veka [Question of rhythm in the works of the 20th-century composers] (diss., Moscow Conservatory, 1968; Moscow, 1971)
'Russische Quellen der Rhythmik Stravinskys', Mf, xxvii (1974), 435–46
'O prototipakh funktsiy muzïkal'noy formï' [On the prototypes of functions in musical form], Problemï muzïkal'noy nauki, iv (1979), 4–22
Faktura [Texture] (Moscow, 1979)
Muzïkal'nïy ritm [Musical rhythm] (Moscow, 1980)
Muzïkal'nïy tematizm [Musical thematicism] (Moscow, 1983)
Russkaya muzïkal'naya ritmika [Rhythm in Russian music] (Moscow, 1983)
Melodika [Use of melody] (Moscow, 1984) with Yu.N. Kholopov: Anton Verbern: zhizn' i tvorchestvo [Anton Webern: life and work] (Moscow, 1984; Ger. trans., 1989; It. trans., 1990)
'"Klassicheskiy kompleks" tvorchestva Stravinskogo v kontekste russkoy muzïki' [The 'classical complex' in the work of Stravinsky in the context of Russian music], I.F. Stravinsky: stat'i: vospominaniya, ed. G.S. Alfeyevskaya and I.Ya. Vershinina (Moscow, 1985), 40–68 with Ye.I. Chigareva: Al'fred Shnitke (Moscow, 1990); Ger. trans. of chap. 7 in Kunst und Literatur, xxxvi/2 (1988), 250–71
'Rodion Schschedrin Werke der achtziger Jahre', 'Rodion Schschedrin im Gespräch mit Walentina Cholopowa', Sowjetische Musik im Licht der Perestroika: Interpretationen – Quellentexte – Komponistenmonographien, ed. H. Danuser, H. Gerlach and J. Köchel (Laaber, 1990), 221–7, 280–5
Muzïka kak vid iskusstva [Music as an art form] (Moscow, 1990–91/R) with E. Restagno: Gubaidulina (Turin, 1991; Russ. trans. as Sof'ya Gubaydulina, 1996)
'Boris Tishchenko: rel'yefi spontannosti na fone ratsionalizma' [Contours of spontaneity against a background of rationalism],

'Impul'sï novatorstva i kul'turnïy sintez v tvorschestve Sergeya Slominskogo' [The impulse towards innovation and cultural synthesis in the works of Sergey Slominsky], 'Labirintï tvorchestva Romana Ledenyova' [Labyrinths in the works of Roman Ledenyov], 'Sekretï moskovskoy shkolï v "chistoy muzïke" Vladislava Shutya' [The secrets of the Moscow School in the 'absolute music' of Vladislav Shoot], Muzïka iz bïvshego SSSR, i, ed. V. Tsenova and V. Barsky (Moscow, 1994), 56–71, 41–55, 139–54, 208–21

'"Ėmotsional'naya forma" i Chaykovsky' ['Emotional form' and Tchaikovsky], Muzïka (1994), no.1, pp.3–17

'Ritmika Ėdisona Denisova' [Edison Denisov's use of rhythm], Muzïka Ėdisona Denisova, ed. V. Tsenova (Moscow, 1995), 24–38

'Victor Suslin: otkrïtiye shansov, propushchennïkh progressom' [Victor Suslin: the discovery of opportunities that progress let slip], Muzïka iz bïvshego SSSR, ii (Moscow, 1996), 229–54 with Yu.N. Kholopov: Muzïka Antona Veberna [The music of Anton Webern] (Moscow, forthcoming)

'Prepodaval li Vebern v Moskovskoy konservatorii, ili Razmïshleniya na puti iz Shankhaya v Parizh' [Whether Webern taught at the Moscow conservatory, or Reflections on the way from Shanghai to Paris], MAk (1998), nos.3–4, pp.8–13

Formï muzïkal'nïkh proizvedeniy [Forms of musical pieces] (Moscow, 1999)

TAT'YANA S. KYUREGYAN

Khrennikov, Tikhon Nikolayevich (b Yelets, 28 May/10 June 1913). Russian composer. He started to learn to play the piano at the age of nine, and to compose from the age of 13; his first teachers were Vladimir Agarkov and Anna Vargunina. In 1929 he moved to Moscow and was enrolled at the Gnesin Academy of Music and studied composition with Mikhail Fabianovich Gnesin; in 1932 he was accepted as a second-year student at the Moscow Conservatory. There he studied in Shebalin's composition class and the special piano class of Heinrich Neuhaus. During these years he became known for his First Piano Concerto op.1 (1932–3), which he performed a number of times, his First Symphony op.4 (1933–5), which he submitted as his graduation work in 1936, and also his incidental music for Shakespeare's comedy Mnogo shuma iz nichego ('Much Ado about Nothing'), which was put on at the Vakhtangov Theatre. It was in 1936, at the suggestion of the celebrated producer Nemirovich-Danchenko, that he began to compose the opera V buryu ('Into the Storm'); work on the opera and its staging went on for almost three years.

From 1963 he ran the composition class at the Moscow Conservatory. He has received numerous awards: Laureate of the USSR State Prizes (1942, 1946, 1951, 1967) and of the RSFSR (1979); the Order of Lenin (1963, 1971, 1973, 1983); the Order of the Workers' Red Banner (1966); Order of the Hero of Socialist Labour (1973); Laureate of the Lenin Prize (1974); People's Artist of the RSFSR (1954) and of the USSR (1963). In 1974 he was elected a deputy to the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

It was during the 1930s that the characteristic features of Khrennikov's style were formed; over the next 60 years these features, which include lyricism and an attraction to popular theatrical genres, have not changed. From the very beginning his naive optimism was reflected in his music. Thanks to this, he was noticed and supported by Stalin and the Party officials headed by Zhdanov, the Secretary of the Central Committee, and by Shepilov, the deputy chief of the department of agitation and propaganda, which aimed to create enthusiasm for socialism in Soviet culture. In 1948 he was appointed Secretary of the reorganized Union of Composers and was given the task of implementing the Party's rigid policy of control of Soviet music. Thus, Khrennikov found himself in a position to openly criticize the most celebrated composers such as Prokofiev, Shostakovich and Myaskovsky. For a period of 43 years Khrennikov was repeatedly 're-elected' to the post of secretary, until, following the collapse of the USSR, the Union of Composers was dissolved (December 1991). During these years he did much to secure the grip of the Union of Composers on the musical life of the country. He guardedly supported international contact between musicians, and – paradoxically, considering his anti-modernist stance – was the initiator of the invitation made to Stravinsky to visit Russia in 1962. Occupying an executive post, Khrennikov was able to make personal use of the links the Union had with the authorities; nonetheless, for all the demagogy of his public statements and reports (the texts of which were partly written and controlled by the party bodies of the Union of Composers and of the Central Committee) he protected some members of the Union of Composers from the ultimate repression suffered by many members of the Union of Writers and the Union of Artists, whose administration enjoyed fewer political favours.

Though initially influenced by Shebalin and Hindemith (especially in his instrumental music), and later by Prokofiev (in his stage works) Khrennikov's mature style is deeply traditional. His tendency towards a popular musical language and towards melody (thanks to which he willingly and very successfully wrote film music) played an important part in his operas, though even in his operas on revolutionary themes, such as Into the Storm and Mat' ('Mother'), his characters possess a spiritual dimension and the music remains lyrical. Arias and monologues are quite often replaced by songs written in everyday folk style; actual folk melodies, however, are quoted very rarely (except in Mother where the melodies of three revolutionary songs are heard as the action unfolds). The use of turns of phrase associated with folksongs in the opera Into the Storm gave grounds for associating the work with the Soviet song opera. At the same time Khrennikov's opera was criticized for its tendency towards prosaic turns of phrase, for its lyricism, and for the lack of grandiose, heroic and revolutionary themes. His so-called comic operas undoubtedly have more in common with turn-of-the-century operetta than with any other model. There has been little development in their anachronistic formula of sentimental waltzes and other standard dance and song forms, their varied repetition of a limited amount of original material and their repertory of stock comic clichés.

After the 1960s Khrennikov returned to the concert platform, appearing as the soloist in his three piano concertos, successfully putting across the infectious emotion, the salient turns of phrase, and the energetic motion of the music. His delight in concert virtuosity, and the contacts he gained through his post with outstanding Russian performers (such as Leonid Kogan and Mstislav Rostropovich) served as stimuli for the composition of two violin concertos (1958–9, 1975) and a cello concerto (1964), which were heard internationally during the 1960s and 70s. His interest in the genre continued with the addition of a second cello concerto (1985) and a fourth piano concerto (1991). In his later works (e.g. the Third Symphony) he has striven towards a more sophisticated musical language, even to the point of using a 12-note theme. However, he is not at ease with serialism

(which he denounced vociferously in earlier years) and the results are unconvincing. The episodic layout of the Third Symphony is emblematic of this: its three movements (a short fugue, fully-fledged intermezzos, and a finale) are boldly optimistic and the attempts at an advanced language are at odds with its overall conception.

Since the end of the 1980s Khrennikov renewed his interest in creative work; some of these later compositions are characterized by a mood of philosophical self-absorption (the three Shakespeare sonnets) which is untypical of his earlier works, others show the natural continuation of the melodic openness, emotion, and natural and garish theatricality (the ballet Napoleon Bonaparte, 1995). In 1994 he published his memoirs Tak ėto bïlo ('That is how it was') which contained previously secret material from the Party archives.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

V buryu [Into the Storm] (4, A. Fayko, after N. Virta: Odinochestvo [Loneliness]), op.8, 1936–9, Moscow, Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, 10 Oct 1939; rev. 1952, Moscow, Stanislavsky-Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, 12 Oct 1952

Frol Skobeyev (comic op, 4, S.A. Tsenin, after D. Averkiyev), op.12, 1945–50, Moscow, Stanislavsky-Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, 24 Feb 1950; rev. as Bezrodnïy zyat' [The Low-Born Son-in-Law] (2), 1966, Novosibirsk, 29 Dec 1966

Mat' [Mother] (4, Fayko, after M. Gorky), op.13, 1952–7, Moscow, Bol'shoy, 26 Oct 1957

100 Chertey i odna devuska [100 Devils and One Girl] (operetta, 3, after Ye. Shatunovsky), op.15, 1962–3, Moscow, Operetta Theatre, 16 May 1963

Belaya noch' [White Night] (musical chronicle, 3, after Shatunovsky), op.17, 1966–7, Moscow, Operetta Theatre, 23 May 1967

Mal'chik-velikan [The Boy Giant] (children's op, 3, N. Shestakov), op.18, 1968–9, Moscow, Children's Music Theatre, 19 Dec 1969

Mnogo shumu. . . iz-za serdets [Much Ado. . .because of Hearts] (comic op, 2, B. Pokrovsky, after W. Shakespeare: Much Ado about Nothing), 1971–2, Moscow, Chamber Music Theatre, 11 March 1972

Doroteya (comic op, 2, Ya. Khaletsky, after R.B. Sheridan: The Duenna), op.27, 1982–3, Moscow Stanislavsky-Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, 26 May 1983

Zolotoy telyonok [The Golden Calf] (comic op, 2, Khaletsky and I. Sharoyev, after I. Il'f and Ye. Petrov), op.29, 1984–5, Moscow, Stanislavsky-Nemirovich-Danchenko Music Theatre, 9 March 1985

Golïy koro' [The Naked King] (comic op, 2, R, Rozhdestvensky and Sharoyev, after Ye. Shvarts), op.31, 1986–7, Leningrad, Malïy, May 1988

OTHER WORKS

Ballets: Nash dvor [Our Yard] (1, N. Kasatkina and V. Vasilyov), op.19, 1969; Lyubov'yu za lyubov' [Love for Love] (2, V. Bokkadoro and Pokrovsky, after Shakespeare: Much Ado about Nothing), op.24, 1976; Gusarskaya ballada [A Hussar's Ballad] (3, O. Vinogradov, after A. Gladkov), op.25, 1977–8, rev. 1979–80; Napoleon Bonaparte (2, A. Belinsky and A. Petrov), op.40, 1994–5; Kapitanskaya dochka [Captain's Daughter] (2, A. Petrov, after A.S. Pushkin), op.42, 1999, Omsk, Music Theatre, April 1999

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, op.1, 1932–3; Sym. no.1, op.4, 1933–5; Sym. no.2, op.9, 1940–42, rev. 1944; Vn Conc. no.1, op.14, 1958–9; Vc Conc. no.1, op.16, 1964; Pf Conc. no.2, op.21, 1971; Sym. no.3, op.22, 1973; Vn Conc. no.2, 1975; Pf Conc. no.3, op.28, 1983; 3 Pieces, op.26, vn, orch, 1983; Vc Conc. no.2, op.30, 1985; Pf Conc. no.4, op.37, 1991

Vocal: Romansï (A.S. Pushkin), op.3, 1935; Romansï (S. Yesenin), 1935; Oda k 300-letiyu russkogo flota [Ode to the Tricentenary of the Russian Fleet], op.41, 1996; 3 soneta (Shakespeare), op.32, 1988; songs with pf, choral works with pf and unacc.

Chbr and solo inst: 5 p'yes [5 Pieces], op.2, pf, 1933; 3 p'yesi [3 Pieces], op.5, pf, 1934–5; Str Qt, op.33, 1988; 5 p'yes [5 Pieces], op.35, ww, 1990; Sonata, op.34, vc, 1990

Incid music: Mik, 1933–4, orch suite, op.3, 1934; Mnogo shumu iz nichego [Much Ado about Nothing], 1935–6, orch suite, op.7, 1936; Don Kikhot [Don Quixote], 1941, orch suite, op.10, 1941; also 22 film scores

Principal publisher: State Music Publishing House, Moscow

WRITINGS

ed. V. Rubtsova: Tak ėto bïlo: Tikhon Khrennikov o vremeni i o sebe [That is how it was: Khrennikov on time and himself] (Moscow, 1994)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Kaltat: T.N. Khrennikov (Moscow, 1946)
L. Sinyaver: Tikhon Khrennikov (Moscow, 1947)
V. Kukharsky: Tikhon Khrennikov (Moscow, 1957)
T. Boganova: Kinomuzïka T.N. Khrennikova [The film music of Khrennikov] (Moscow, 1961)
Yu. Kremlyov: T. Khrennikov: 'Mat'' opera [Khrennikov: The opera 'Mother'] (Leningrad, 1961)
S. Ivanov: Opera T.N. Khrennikova 'V buryu' (Moscow, 1962)
M. Roytershteyn: Skripichnïy kontsert T.N. Khrennikova [Khrennikov's Violin Concerto] (Moscow, 1962)
Yu. Kremlyov: Tikhon Khrennikov (Moscow, 1963)
Yu. Korev: T.N. Khrennikov i yego vtoraya simfoniya [Khrennikov and his Second Symphony] (Moscow, 1965)
I. Martïnov: Tikhon Khrennikov (Moscow, 1967, 2/1987)
G. Orjonikidze: Mnogo shumu iz nichego [Much Ado about Nothing] (Moscow, 1967)
O. Levtonova: Simfonii i kontsertï T. Khrennikova (Moscow, 1972)
D. Person: T.N. Khrennikov: noto-bibliograficheskiy spravochnik [musico-bibliographical catalogue] (Moscow, 1973, 2/1987)
I. Martïnov, ed.: Tikhon Khrennikov: stat'i o tvorchestve kompozitora [Khrennikov: articles about his creative work] (Moscow, 1974)
L. Grigor'yev and Ya. Platek: Yego vïbralo vremya [The times chose him] (Moscow, 1983)
I. Vorontsova: O stile i muzïkal'nom yazïke T.N. Khrennikova [On the style and musical language of Khrennikov] (Moscow, 1983)
I. Shekhonina: Tvorchestvo T.N. Khrennikova [The works of Khrennikov] (Moscow, 1985, 2/1991)

VALENTINA RUBCOVA

Khristoskov, Petar (b Sofia, 8 March 1917). Bulgarian violinist and composer. He made his début at the age of ten. In 1936 he graduated from the class of Sasha Popov at the Sofia State Music Academy and from 1940 to 1943 he attended the Berlin Hochschule für Musik. During these years he made successful appearances in Berlin, Munich, Vienna and Salzburg. He was appointed leader of the Berlin Opera in 1943 but in the same year returned to Bulgaria, where he joined and later served as leader (1952–4) of the Sofia PO. From 1945 he taught at the Sofia State Academy. He has appeared regularly as a soloist in Asia as well as Europe, with his wife, the pianist Zlatka Arnaudova, and in a trio with Dimiter Nenov and Konstantin Popov. His compositions combine virtuoso writing, the non-diatonic quality of Bulgarian folk music and a contemporary means of expression involving chromatic use of harmony and inventive expressive melody.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Vn Conc. no.1, op.6; Concertino, op.8, vn, orch; Vn Conc. no.2, op.9; Toccata, op.10, vn, orch; Conc. for Orch, op.16; Suite, str, op.17; Vc Conc. no.1, op.19; Pf Conc. no.1, op.23; Vc Conc. no.2, op.25; Pf Conc. no.2, op.28; Vn Conc. no.3, op.35; Double Conc., op.37, vn, vc, orch; Triple Conc., op.39, vn, vc, pf, orch; Double Conc. no.2, op.40, vn, vc, orch

Vocal-orch: op.20, S, A, orch; op.41, B, orch

Chbr and solo inst: 12 capriccios, op.1, vn; Moto perpetual, op.2, vn, pf, orchd; Suite, op.7, vn; Suite, op.13, vn; Improvisation and Presto, op.14, va, pf, orchd; Fantaziya, op.15, vc; 3 rapsodii, op.21, vn; 24 capriccios, op.24, vn; Prelude and Dance, op.34, vn

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Draganova: 'Tri tvorbi na Petar Khristoskov' [Three works by Khristoskov], Balgarska muzika, xxiv/8 (1973), 16–20

Ye. Geneva: 'Petar Khristoskov: izpalnitel, pedagogg' [Khristoskov: performer and teacher], Balgarska muzika, xxviii/4 (1977), 60–62

N. Kulaksazova: 'Petar Khristoskov: kompozitor', Balgarska muzika, xxviii/4 (1977), 62–3

G. Bliznev: 'Zhiznenostta na kaprichiite' [The vigorous capriccios], Balgarska muzika, xxxviii/2 (1987), 9 only

ANDA PALIEVA

Khristov, Dimitar (b Sofia, 2 Oct 1933). Bulgarian composer and theorist. He studied composition with Goleminov at the Bulgarian State Music Academy in Sofia until 1956; later, in 1963, he spent six months in the BRD, France, the Netherlands and the USA on a UNESCO scholarship. In 1960 he was appointed to teach counterpoint at the Sofiya Academy. Concurrently he worked at the Institute of Music of the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences, heading the department of music teaching and psychology there from 1973, and served as general secretary of the International Music Council (1975–9); as executive member of the ISME (1974–8) and of its research commission (1976–86); and as vice-president of the Union of Bulgarian Composers (1972–85). He was chief editor of the journal Balgarska muzikoznaniye, and in 1994 launched Muzika: vcera–dnes ('Music: yesterday–today'). In his compositions Khristov uses the most modern compositional techniques while basing his style on peculiarities of the folk music of the Shoppe region (western Bulgaria), namely diaphonic writing, parallel 2nds and a motorial principle of musical development. His later works are laden with spiritual or philosophical concerns.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Igra [Play] (3, P.A. de Alarcón and R. Ralin), 1978; Zlata ribka [The Goldfish] (2, Ralin), 1984

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1956; Sym. no.1, 1958; Sym. Episodes, 1962; Sym. no.2, 1964; Sym. no.3, 1968; Miniatures concertantes, 1970; Vc Conc., 1970; Vn Conc. no.1, 1970; Ov. with Fanfares, 1974; Pf Conc. no.2, 1983; Play for Violincelli, 1983; Perpetuum mobile in pianissimo, 1987; Grupi-Trupi [Groups-Troupes], 1988; Tikho adazhio [Silent Adagio], 1989; Cantilena sopra due toni, 1990; Merry-Go-Round of Suffering, 1991; Collapse in Silence, 1992; Blown Away by the Wind, 1993; Up High I Look for You, 1993; Pf Conc. no.3, 1993; Await your Pizzicati, 1994; It Streams, It Runs Out, 1994; I Rise in the Chaos, 1995; I Set It Ajar, I Peep In, 1996; Vn Conc. no.2, 1997; Vn Conc. no.3, 1998

Chbr and solo inst: 10 pf sonatas, 1962–98; Conc., 3 small drums, 5 insts, 1967; Str Qt, 1970; Qt, fl, va, hp, hpd, 1973; Yanuari [January] (I.D. Radichkov), spkr, perc ens, 1990; Toccata on All Souls' Day, pf, 1993; The Double Bass goes off to the Sky, 1994; Hoods after the Terrible Rain, pf, 1994; Fall out, fall off, drop off, wind qt; trios, pieces for solo vn, vc

Song cycles, choral works

Principal publishers: Modern, Nauka i izkustvo

WRITINGS

Sapadni khorizonti [Western horizons] (Sofia, 1966)

Kompozitsionni idei v fugite na Dobre temperovanoto piano ot J.S. Bakh (Sofia, 1968)

Khipoteza sa polifonichniya stroey [Hypothesis about polyphonic structure] (Sofia, 1970)

Kam teoretichnata osnova na melodikata [Theoretical foundations of melodic structure] (Sofia, 1973–89)

Kompositorat i obshtestvento sasnaniye [The composer and the social sciences] (Sofia, 1975)

with Manolov: Textbook for Counterpoint (1988)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Koranlakov: 'Zanyakoi stilistichni cherti v tvorchestvoto na Dimitar Khristov i Krasimir Kyurkchiyski' [On aesthetical traits in the works of Khristov and Kyurkchiyski], Balgarska muzika, xxi/1 (1970), 47–61

S. Zakhariyeva: 'Dimitar Khristov na 50 godini: kompozitorat, obshtestvenikat, pedagogat, muzikovedat – koy ot tyakh?' [Khristov is 50: composer, public figure, teacher, musicologist – which of these is he?], Balgarska muzika, xxxiv/8 (1983), 13–17

Ye. Docheva: 'Teatralnite strasti na Dimitar Khristov' [The theatrical passions of Khristov], Balgarska muzika, xxxv/4 (1984), 20–24

I. Nikolova: 'Khudozhestveni postizheniya i v uchebnata literatura' [Artistic achievements in didactic literature], Balgarska muzika, xxxvii/3 (1986), 14–16

ANDA PALIEVA

Khristov, Dobri (b Varna, 14 Dec 1875; d Sofia, 23 Jan 1941). Bulgarian composer, choral conductor and writer on music. A self-taught musician by the time he completed his secondary schooling in Varna in 1894, he wrote several short pieces and conducted the school choir that he had founded as well as the choir of the music society Gusla. Until 1900 he earned his living by teaching music in a primary school, but with financial support from the Varna townspeople he was able to study composition with Dvořák at the Prague Conservatory (1900–03). On his return to Varna he resumed music teaching and conducting, but in 1907 moved to a secondary school post in Sofia and became choirmaster at the opera house, founded in 1908. He was director of the state music school in Sofia (1918–20) and in 1922 he joined the staff of the State Music Academy as lecturer, becoming professor (1926–33) and, for a short time, director. In 1928 he became the first Bulgarian musician elected to the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences. From 1935 to his death in 1941 he conducted the choir in the Aleksandr Nevsky Memorial Church in Sofia.

Khristov's compositions, based on Bulgarian folk music remain popular in Bulgaria, particularly his choral works. His theoretical study of Bulgarian rhythms was the first Bulgarian work on the country's traditional music.

WORKS
(selective list)

2 Balkanski suiti, orch, 1903, 1916; Festive Overture 'Ivailo', 1906; Tutrakanska yepopeya [Tutrakan Epic Song], orch, 1907

Choral works, incl. Balkanski pesni [Balkan Songs], 1912; Makedonski pesni [Macedonian songs], 1928; Dobrinka i slantseto [Dobrinka and the Sun], ballad, 1931; Fugue on a Balkan Song, chorus, orch, 1933; Izvorcheto peye [The Fountain Sings], 375 educational songs, 1936

25 songs, incl. Yergenski pesni [Bachelors' Songs], n.d.; Khaydushki pesni [Haiduk Songs], 1914; 66 chansons populaires des bulgares macédoniens, 1931; 110 folksong arrs.

Church music, incl. 2 liturgies, 1925, 1934

Folksong arrs. for chbr ens and for wind orch

Principal publisher: Bulgarian Academy of Sciences

WRITINGS

'Ritmichnite osnovi na narodnata ni muzika' [The rhythmic bases of Bulgarian folk music], Sbornik za narodni umotvoreniya i narodopis, xxvii (1913), 1–48

Tekhnicheskiyat stroyezh na balgarskata narodna muzika [The technical structure of Bulgarian folk music] (Sofia, 1928, 2/1956; Russ. trans., 1959)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Brashovanov: 'Dobri Christov', Jb der Deutsch-Bulgarischen Gesellschaft (Leipzig, 1942), 386

I. Kamburov: Dobri Khristov (Sofia, 1942)

V. Krastev: Dobri Khristov (Sofia, 1954; Russ. trans., 1960)

V. Krastev, ed.: Muzikalno-teoretichno i publitsistichno nasledstvo na Dobri Khristov (Sofia, 1971)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA

Khu, Emilios. See RIADIS, EMILIOS.

Khubov, Georgy Nikitich (b Kars, Turkey, 26 April/9 May 1902; d Moscow, 6 Nov 1981). Russian musicologist and critic. After completing his studies at the Moscow Conservatory (1926–31) he worked on the editorial staff of Pravda as a consultant musical sub-editor (1934–57) and held various important posts on the board of the Soviet Composers' Union; he was also editor of the journal Sovetskaya muzïka (1952–7). He then published several significant works, which appeared after years of exhaustive research; his monographs on Bach and Khachaturian, for instance, developed essays that he had published before the war. In his books on Borodin, Musorgsky and Khachaturian he examined the oriental motifs in Russian classical and Soviet music in detail.

WRITINGS

A.P. Borodin (Moscow, 1933)
Sebast'yan Bakh (Moscow, 1937, enlarged 4/1963)
'Pyataya simfoniya D. Shostakovicha' [Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony], SovM (1938), no.3, pp.14–28
Aram Khachaturyan: èskiz kharakteristiki [Aram Khachaturian: a character sketch] (Moscow, 1939)
ed.: A.N. Serov: Izbrannïye stat'i [Selected essays] (Moscow, 1950–57)
Zhizn' A. Serova [The life of Serov] (Leningrad, 1950)
O muzïke i muzïkantakh: ocherki i stat'i [Music and musicians: essays and articles] (Moscow, 1959)
Aram Khachaturyan (Moscow, 1962, 2/1967)
Musorgsky (Moscow, 1969)

IGOR' BÈLZA

Khuen [Khain, Kuen], Johannes (b Moosach, nr Munich, 1606; d Munich, 14 Nov 1675). German poet and composer. He became a student at the Jesuit school in Munich in 1623, taking the traditional courses and participating in the musical activities of the church and the court. He completed his studies in 1625 and became a member of the larger Marian congregation. Ordained a priest in 1630, he became a private chaplain at the Warttenberg Chapel, Munich, the following year, and in 1634 he received the benefice of the Three Kings at the Peterskirche there. He held these two positions for the rest of his life.

Khuen belonged to Jacobus Balde's circle in Munich. Khuen's output consists almost exclusively of religious poems, for which he also wrote music. Usually consisting of 12 stanzas and organized into cycles of 12 poems each, they appeared mainly in two large collections, the Epithalamium Marianum (1636, enlarged 4/1644) and Tabernacula pastorum (1650–55). The Virgin Mary as the patron saint of Bavaria was the focus of local devotional practice. Khuen built on the tradition of a litany-like religious folksong (Ruf), merging its elements with early Italian monody which had been disseminated through Khuen's predecessor at the Peterskirche, Georg Victorinus. Khuen also often used secular models, as found in Tabernacula pastorum. His poetic style, though indulging in the imagery of flowers, jewels and music, is naive and simple and harmonizes with his use of the Bavarian idiom. His development as a composer shows the gradual abandonment of traditional traits (modality, frequent triple metre) in favour of such characteristics of early monody as major–minor tonality and more expressive, rhythmically varied melody. Khuen's work far surpasses any previous Catholic religious poetry in the vernacular; he influenced poets such as Procopins von Templin, Albert Poissl, Abraham Megerle and Maria Antonia Walpurgis. German Romanticism savoured his provincialism, and Clemens Brentano included two of his songs in his Des Knaben Wunderhorn of 1808. A few of Khuen's songs are still sung in Bavarian Catholic churches.

WORKS

Edition: Johannes Khuen: Ausgewählte Texte und Melodien, ed. R. Hirschenauer and H. Grassl (Munich, 1961)

all pubd in Munich

Convivium Marianum, Freudenfest dess himmlischen Frauenzimmers, mit 12 neuen Gesänglein geziert (1637)
3 schöne neue geistliche Lieder (1637)
Epithalamium Marianum, oder Tafel Music, dess himmlischen Frauenzimmers, mit neuen geistlichen Gesänglein gezieret (1636, lost; 2/1638, enlarged 4/1644)
Florilegium Marianum, der brinnendt Dornbusch (1638)
Die geistlich Turteltaub (1639)
Cor contritum et humiliatum, Engelfreud oder Bussseufftzer (1640)
Mausoleum Salomonis, der Potentaten Grabschrifft, Urlaub und Abschidt (1641)
Epithalamium Marianum, Tafel Music, Freudenfest, und Lustgarten Mariae . . . und dero gantzen himmlischen Frauenzimmer (1644)
Tabernacula pastorum, die geistliche Schäfferey (1650–55)
Munera pastorum, Hirten-Ambt, und anweisung der geistlichen Schäfferey getreulich vorzustehn (1651)
Gaudia pastorum, Schäffer Freud, oder Triumph der geistlichen Schäfferey (1655)
Marianum Epithalamium, Tafel Music, Ehren Mahlzeit, Lust-Garten, und Bluemen-Feld (1659)
Mausoleum Salomonis, 50 Klaglieder (1665)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B.A. Wallner: 'Johannes Kuen, Benefiziat von St. Peter', St Peterskalender (Munich, 1920)
C. von Faber du Faur: 'Johann Khuen', Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, lxiv (1949), 746–70 [incl. bibliography]
B. Genz: Johannes Kuen: eine Untersuchung zur süddeutschen geistlichen Lieddichtung im 17. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Cologne, 1957)
S. Gmeinwieser: 'Johannes Khuen: ein Münchner Komponist im 17. Jahrhundert', Metronom, vii (1961)
V.D. Laturell and G. Mooseder: Moosach: die Entstehungs- und Entwicklungsgeschichte eines Münchner Stadtteils (Munich, 1980), i, 260–62

TRAUTE MAASS MARSHALL/STEPHAN HÖRNER

Khues [Khuess, Khüess], Jurij. See KNEZ, JURIJ.

Khumalo, (James Steven) Mzilikazi (b Vryheid, Natal, 20 June 1932). South African composer. A teacher and specialist in the Zulu language, he obtained the doctorate for his linguistic work in 1988 from the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, becoming the head of its African languages department in the same year. Largely self-taught as a composer, most of Khumalo's works are choral and set Zulu texts in Tonic Sol-fa notation. His commissions include a choral work for the enthronement of Archbishop Desmond Tutu in 1986. Among the many arrangements and transcriptions of his compositions is P.L. van Dijk's orchestration of Five African Pieces. An executive member of several professional musical organizations, Khumalo is also active as a choirmaster and adjudicator for choral contests in South Africa; he has received prizes for his adult choirs, his works and his studies of African languages.

DANIEL AVORGBEDOR

Khurtsia, Noko (Nikoloz) (b Menji, nr Senaki, 15 Feb 1905; d Tbilisi, 26 Oct 1949). Georgian traditional singer (tenor). He acquired the majority of his traditional folk repertory of his native Samegrelo (a region in western Georgia) from his family. In 1921 he was invited to sing in a choir by an influential Megrelian singer, Rema Shelegia. In the late 1920s and early 30s he organized and led choirs at Tbilisi University and Tbilisi Agricultural University (where he also studied). From 1936 Khurtsia became a leading soloist and an artistic vice-director of the Georgian State Folksong and Dance Ensemble. With personal appearances throughout Georgia and in many republics of the then USSR, radio appearances and studio recordings, Khurtsia was regarded as the best performer of Megrelian songs. Some of his versions (such as the dance Kharira and the military song Utus lashkruli) remain very popular. He had a beautiful 'velvet' toned voice, a wide vocal range and a virtuoso technique.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

G. Lado: 'Noko Khurtsia', Kartuli khalkhuri simgeris ostatebi, i (Tbilisi, 1954), 127–34

Noko Khurtsia, Recordings of the 1930–40s, Melodiya M3O 47951 000 (1987)

JOSEPH JORDANIA

Khusrau, Amir (b Patiyali, Etah District [now in Uttar Pradesh], India, 1253; d Delhi, 27 Sept 1325). Indian poet, scholar and musician. He was the son of a Turk who entered India under the early Delhi Sultanate as a military officer. Named Dehlavi ('of Delhi') and given the honorific title Hazrat ('excellence'), his Persian and Hindavi poems made him one of the most hallowed names in Indian literary history. The origin of Hindustani music has traditionally been attributed to him, but this is an exaggeration; he has also been credited with a number of more specific musical innovations in the field of instruments, genres and rāga. Among the most famous of these attributions are the invention of the sitār, which appears to be due to a confusion with an 18th-century musician of the same name, and of the vocal genre khayāl, which is almost certainly a misunderstanding over terminology. But there is evidence both from his own writings and in other historical sources that he was musically gifted and accomplished. He served as a high-ranking officer and poet at the courts of a number of successive rulers of the Khilji and Tughluq dynasties in the Delhi Sultanate; his writings have provided a great quantity of valuable primary source material for the history of this period. He became a disciple of the Sufi saint Nizām-ud-Dīn Auliyā, and many religious qavvālī texts and ghazal attributed to him have survived and are still sung.

See also INDIA, §II, 2(ii)(b).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Habib: Life and Works of Hazrat Amir Khusrau of Delhi (Aligarh, 1928)

M.W. Mirza: The Life and Works of Amir Khusrau (Delhi, 1935/R)

C.A. Storey: Persian Literature, a Bio-Bibliographical Survey, ii/3 (London, 1939), 495–505

S. Sarmadee: 'Musical Genius of Amir Khusrau', Amir Khusrau: Memorial Volume (New Delhi, 1975), 33–41 [pubn of Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, Government of India]

A. Miner: Sitar and Sarod in the 18th and 19th Centuries (Wilhelmshaven, 1993), 17–21

F. Delvoye: 'Indio-Persian Literature on Art-Music: some Historical and Technical Aspects', Confluence of Cultures: French Contributions to the Indio-Persian Studies, ed. F. Delvoye (New Delhi, 1994), 93–130

JONATHAN KATZ

Khyāl, Hafīzullah (b Kabul, 1931). Afghan singer and composer. He came from an upper-class family, part of the Mohammadzai (royal) clan which had previously had no involvement with music as a profession. In 1949 he gave his first broadcast as a singer. He became a schoolteacher, but resigned in 1953 and began a career at the radio station. There he occupied various staff positions as well as being employed as a singer and songwriter. He received some training in singing from Ustād Ghulām Husein (father of Ustād Sarāhang) in the context of music courses organized and held at the radio station. In 1965 he studied thumri and ghazal singing with Ustad Salāmat Ali Khān in Pakistan.

Khyāl became one of Afghanistan's most celebrated singers and composers of popular songs for radio broadcasting. As a songwriter he was prolific, and he won many prizes for his singing and compositions. He had many students; he coached them and wrote songs for them to record for Radio Afghanistan. The most famous were the women singers Mahwash, Jhila and Nahid, and the male singer Rahīm-e Ghafārī. In 1979 (following the coup d'état) he retired from Radio Afghanistan. He moved to New York in 1989 to continue his activities as a singer, teacher and composer.

ABDUL-WAHAB MADADI (with JOHN BAILY)

Khym [Chym, Kyhm], Carl (b Bohemia, *c*1770; d after 1819). Bohemian oboist and composer. He spent most of his life in Vienna as an oboe virtuoso and composer. On the title-page of his Sextuor op.9 he called himself 'Employé de sa majesté'. His known works include duets for clarinets (opp.1–2, 1798), flutes (op.6, 1800) and oboes (op.11 no.1, 1819), dances for keyboard, variations for keyboard and for strings (including a set on Mozart's 'Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen' from Die Zauberflöte for violin and viola, 1800), and the Sextuor for flute, clarinet, violin, two violas and cello (1803). He also arranged several of Beethoven's chamber works for string quintet and published songs from Dittersdorf's Das rote Käppchen in vocal score.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; GerberNL; MGG1 (U. Rau); SchillingE

U. Rau: Die Kammermusik für Klarinette und Streichinstrumente im Zeitalter der Wiener Klassik (diss., U. of Saarbrücken, 1975)

ULRICH RAU/R

Kibkalo, Yevgeny (Gavrilovich) (b Kiev, 12 Feb 1932). Russian baritone. He graduated from Vladimir Politkovsky's class at the Moscow Conservatory in 1956, was engaged that year as a soloist by the Bol′shoy, then studied at the La Scala opera school in 1963. His distinctive qualities were his beautiful, even voice and warm tone, his musicality and his excellent sense of ensemble. He sang in the first Bol′shoy performances of Prokofiev's War and Peace (Andrey) and The Story of a Real Man (Aleksey); his other roles included Tchaikovsky's Yeletsky, Mazepa and Yevgeny Onegin; Rossini's and Mozart's Figaro; and Demetrius in Britten's A Midsummer Night's Dream. He performed in many countries, and was made People's Artist of the RSFSR in 1959.

I.M. YAMPOL′SKY/R

Kichler, Johann. See KÜCHLER, JOHANN.

Kick drum. Bass drum played with a foot pedal. See DRUM KIT.

Kidson, Frank (b Leeds, 15 Nov 1855; d Leeds, 7 Nov 1926). English musical antiquary and folksong collector. Although of the school of William Chappell, he differed from it in accepting the validity of the oral tradition of folksong. He was a founder member of the Folk-Song Society in 1898 and one of the editors of its early journals; in 1906 he also contributed 30 songs and folk tales which he had himself collected in Yorkshire. Moreover, he anticipated Cecil Sharp's rediscovery of the English folkdance tradition, for as early as 1890 he published a volume, Old English Country Dances (tunes only), and in 1915 he wrote, in association with Mary Neal, English Folk Song and Dance. He was also an accomplished amateur painter and expert on old Leeds pottery – on which, with his brother, he wrote the standard book, Historical Notes of the Leeds Old Pottery (1892). He contributed about 400 articles on a wide variety of subjects to Grove 2–4. His outstanding achievement, an index of English songs, running to 100,000 entries, was never published but is now in the Mitchell Library, Glasgow, which also holds his collection of about 9000 volumes of folksong, 18th-century popular music, books and manuscripts. He published a valuable catalogue of British music publishers and engravers, and also several volumes of folksongs, of which the most important are Songs of Britain with piano accompaniments by Martin Shaw and A Garland of English Folk-songs and English Peasant Songs, both with accompaniments by Alfred Moffat. Leeds University gave him an honorary MA in 1923. The bulk of his library remains unstudied and the extent of his contribution to folksong scholarship has yet to be evaluated.

EDITIONS

Old English Country Dances Gathered from Scarce Printed Collections and from Manuscripts (London, 1890)
Traditional Tunes: a Collection of Ballad Airs, chiefly obtained in Yorkshire and the South of Scotland (Oxford, 1891/R)
The Minstrelsy of England: a Collection of 200 English Songs ... popular from the 16th Century to the middle of the 18th Century (London, 1901)
75 British Nursery Rhymes (London, 1904)
Children's Songs of Long Ago (London, 1905)
The Golden Wedding: a Yorkshire Idyl (London, 1910)
English Songs of the Georgian Period (London and Glasgow, 1911)
Dances of the Olden Time (London and Glasgow, 1912)
Songs of Britain (London and New York, 1913)
English Country Dances arranged for Children's Performance (London, 1914)
Old English Country Dance Tunes (London, 1915)
100 Singing Games, Old, New, and Adapted (London and Glasgow, 1916)
A Garland of English Folk-Songs (London, 1926; 16 songs rev. E. Poston, 1968)
Folk Songs of the North Countrie with their Traditional Airs (London, 1927)
English Peasant Songs with their Traditional Airs (London, 1929)
The Minstrelsy of Childhood (n.p., n.d.)
Old Country Dance and Morris Tunes (London, n.d.)

WRITINGS

'New Lights upon Old Tunes', MT, xxxv–viii (1894–7) [ser. of 8 articles]
British Music Publishers, Printers and Engravers, London, Provincial, Scottish, and Irish, from Queen Elizabeth's Reign to George the Fourth's (London, 1900/R)
English Folk-Songs Some Conclusions (London, 1907)
'Some Illustrated Music-Books of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries: English', MA, iii (1911–12), 195–208
'A Study of Old English Song and Popular Melody prior to the Nineteenth Century', MQ, i (1915), 569–82 with M. Neal: English Folk-Song and Dance (Cambridge, 1915/R)
'John Playford and Seventeenth-Century Music Publishing', MQ, iv (1918), 516–34
The Beggar's Opera: its Predecessors and Successors (Cambridge, 1922/R)
'Handel's Publisher, John Walsh, his Contemporaries and Successors', MQ, vi (1920), 430–50

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Broadwood: Obituary, MT, lxviii (1927), 42–3
L. Broadwood and others: 'Portrait of Frank Kidson by Some of His Friends', JEFDSS, v (1946–8), 127–35
H.G. Farmer: 'The Kidson Collection', The Consort, no.7 (1950), 12–17
A.E. Green: Foreward to F. Kidson: Traditional Tunes (Wakefield, 1970)
F. Howes: Folk Music of Britain – and Beyond (London, 1970/R)
R. Palmer: A Checklist of Manuscript Songs and Tunes Collected from Oral Tradition by Frank Kidson (London, 1986)
R. Palmer: 'Kidson's Collecting', Folk Music Journal, v (1986), 150–75

HERBERT THOMPSON, WILLIAM C. SMITH/ FRANK HOWES/ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Kiefer, Bruno (b Baden-Baden, 9 April 1923; Porto Alegre, 27 May 1987). Brazilian composer, teacher and writer on music of German birth. After moving to Porto Alegre, Brazil in 1934, he studied the flute, the piano, composition and conducting at the Federal University of Rio Grande do Sul. He also had private lessons with Koellreutter, who introduced him to serialism. For several years he was a flautist in the Porto Alegre SO, and he also worked with the chamber orchestra of the institute, where in 1969 he was appointed to teach history. He directed the music division of the Education Secretariat of the state of Rio Grande do Sul and the free music seminars in Porto Alegre, and also taught at the Federal University of Santa Maria. He became more active as a composer in the early 1960s, cultivating an abstract style with neo-classical elements and some serial procedures.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Diálogo, pf, orch, 1966; Convertimento, fl, cl, bn, str, 1970
Vocal: 5 motetos profanos, 2 female vv, eng hn, hn, 2 trbn, 1964; Missa do casamento, chorus, org, 1965; Cantata do encontro, chbr chorus, wind qnt, 1967
Chbr: Str Qt no.2, 1959; Incógnitas, cl, str trio, 1971; Linhas contorcidas, fl, cl, bn, 2 vn, vc, db, 1980
Pf: 2 sonatas, 1958, 1959; Terra selvagem, Prenuncios, 2 pf, 1971

WRITINGS

Elementos da linguagem musical (Porto Alegre, 1970)
História e significado das formas musicais (Porto Alegre, 1970)
História da música no Brasil (Porto Alegre, 1976)
A modinha e o lundu, duas raízes da música popular brasileira (Porto Alegre, 1977)
Mignone, vida e obra (Porto Alegre, 1983)
Villa-Lobos e o modernismo na música brasileira (Porto Alegre, 2/1986)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ministério das Relações Exteriores, Divisão de Difusão Cultural: Catálogo das obras de Bruno Kiefer (Brasília, 1975)
V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)
F. Mattos and J. Corrêa, eds.: Bruno Kiefer (Porto Alegre, 1994)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Kiefert, (Johann) Carl (b Cologne, 1855; d Eastergate, Sussex, 26 Nov 1937). German orchestrator, musical director and composer, active in England. Educated in Cologne and Meiningen, he came to London in 1880 as a cellist in the Saxe-Meiningen court orchestra, performing at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane. Having settled in London, he worked as a theatre conductor and arranger, becoming the principal orchestrator for musical comedies of composers such as Lionel Monckton and Leslie Stuart, and also turning out the standard dance arrangements. Works for which he acted as musical director and orchestrator included Stuart's Florodora (1899), The School Girl (1903) and Havana (1908) and Monckton's

The Quaker Girl (1910) and The Dancing Mistress (1912). His effective, if unadventurous, and inevitably somewhat Germanic style of orchestral sound came to typify the Edwardian musical comedy. He himself composed scores for two touring musicals, The Ballet Girl (1897) and The Gay Grisette (1898).

ANDREW LAMB

Kieffer, Aldine S(illman) (b Saline Co., MO, 1 Aug 1840; d Dayton, VA, 30 Nov 1904). Music publisher and tunebook compiler. His father died shortly after he was born, and he grew up in Singer's Glen, Virginia, under the influence of his grandfather, JOSEPH FUNK. In 1865 he and William S. Rohr revived Funk's periodical the Southern Musical Advocate and Singer's Friend, but it was discontinued in 1869. The following year he began (with others, as the Patent Note Publishing Co.) to issue the Musical Million and Fireside Friend, a monthly periodical edited by Kieffer, which was a primary instrument for the promotion of shape-note gospel hymnody in the South. In 1872 Kieffer formed a new company, Ruebush, Kieffer & Co. (later the Ruebush-Kieffer Co.) with his brother-in-law, the singing-school teacher Ephraim Ruebush, and John W. Howe, to publish the Musical Million, which continued to appear regularly until 1914. Kieffer was also a poet and composer, his most popular works being My Mountain Home, Grave on the Green Hillside, Twilight is Falling and To my Blanket. With his associates he published 18 songbooks between 1868 and 1898.

See also SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY, §3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.P. Jackson: White Spirituals in the Southern Uplands (Chapel Hill, NC, 1933/R)

P.M. Hall: The 'Musical Million': a Study and Analysis of the Periodical Promoting Music Reading through Shape-Notes in North America from 1870 to 1914 (diss., Catholic U. of America, 1970)

G.I. Showalter: The Music Books of Ruebush & Kieffer, 1866–1942: a Bibliography (Charlottesville, VA, 1975)

C.E. Morrison: Aldine S. Kieffer and Ephraim Ruebush: Ideals Reflected in Post-Civil War Ruebush-Kieffer Company Publications (diss., Arizona State U., 1992)

HARRY ESKEW

Kieken, Johannes. See PULLOIS, JOHANNES.

Kiel. City in northern Germany, on the Baltic Sea. From 1284 to 1518 it was a member of the Hanseatic League and from 1460 to 1867 it was part of the Duchy of Holstein-Gottorp, which was under Danish rule after 1773. From 1867 it was the capital of the Prussian province of Schleswig-Holstein, and its musical significance dates from that time.

In the Middle Ages Kiel had two ecclesiastical institutions. The Franciscan monastery was dissolved in the wake of the Reformation in 1530 and under the name of Heiligengeist- or Kloster-Kirche belonged to the parish of St Nikolai. The university, founded in 1665, was housed in the old monastery buildings until 1768. The Nikolaikirche, the town church, played a decisive role in the town's musical life. From 1322 until shortly after 1526 its patrons were the Augustinian canons of Bordesholm, who were also patrons of the Lateinschule (established 1320). The Kantor, who trained the pupils in liturgical singing, was the school's headmaster; the choirs of boys and priests generally consisted of eight to 12 voices. Until the Reformation the organist was also a priest; afterwards he was appointed by the church authorities or by the town council. The separate posts of Kantor and organist were united for the first time in 1810 when they were both held by the Thuringian G.C. Apel, a pupil of J.C. Kittel. After his death (1841) the posts were again separated until 1874, when they were permanently united. Shortly before this the organist Carl Stechert had founded a choir, which did not survive, however; in 1922 the church founded the St Nikolaichor, which still has a fine reputation.

Kiel's theatrical traditions go back to the 17th century, but the city did not have a permanent theatre company until 1841, when the Altes Stadttheater was built on the site of the demolished Opern- und Komödienhaus (1764); this theatre had an orchestra from 1907, contracted from the Verein der Musikfreunde (founded 1901). Also in 1907 the Neues Stadttheater was built; Fritz Stein, a pupil of Reger, became the first municipal director of music in 1925, and between the wars a high standard of opera performance was attained there. A summer theatre, the so-called Tivoli theatre, was opened in 1845, but was destroyed by fire in 1870. In 1890 this theatre was re-established in a suburb of Kiel and was later renamed the Schillertheater; in 1907 it came under municipal administration as the Kleines Theater, but ceased musical productions at that time. It was renamed the Schauspielhaus in 1919, and was used for opera performances between 1945 and 1953 while the Neues Stadttheater was being rebuilt after destruction in World War II. The Neues Stadttheater reopened in 1953 with Fidelio, and in the following decades Kiel became one of the most important centres of modern music drama in Germany, staging, for instance, the first performances of Aribert Reimann's Ein Traumspiel (1965) and Renato de Grandis's Gloria al re (1967, as Es lebe der König).

From the early 19th century public concerts took place in the hall of the Harmonie Gesellschaft (founded 1800), and in the great hall of the university; from 1841 the Stadttheater was used, as was the Tivoli theatre from 1845 to 1870. In 1935 the hall of the trade unions' building was converted into a concert room. After World War II the newly built Ostseehalle was used temporarily for concerts, until the inauguration in 1965 of a large and a small concert hall in the castle, rebuilt in collaboration with NDR, which has a broadcasting station there.

Although civic musicians were responsible for the instrumental accompaniment of church music after the Reformation, the tradition of organized instrumental music originated in the private musical gatherings of students and professors. From these beginnings a Musikverein (1776–96) developed under the direction of the professor of Danish law, Holger de Fine Olivarius. A circle of accomplished amateurs gathered regularly under the direction of G.C. Apel in the family home of Otto Jahn (later the biographer of Mozart) and together with a vocal group formed the basis of the Instrumentalverein, established in 1835 and continued into the 1870s. Thereafter concert life was provided only by military musicians and private bands until 1897, when a private symphony orchestra was organized.

Choral societies began in the 18th century, when a student collegium musicum cultivated church music. In 1820 the Singverein was formed from members of Apel's amateur circle, and was enlarged by Carl Grädener to form the Allgemeiner Gesangverein in 1841. In 1844

Grädener founded the Kieler Gesangverein, which absorbed the older group in 1871 and survived until 1914. During the industrialization of the city towards the end of the 19th century a number of workers' choral societies were founded, and from 1919 to 1929 Stein conducted an Oratorienverein which he had established. Among the popular choirs the Kieler Liedertafel (1841) is the oldest. From 1907 the theatre had its own opera chorus, the Städtischer Chor.

At the peak of its cultural life Kiel held several festivals of more than local significance. The first of the Schleswig-Holstein music festivals, arranged by Hermann Stange, took place in 1875 under the direction of Joachim, and there were five more in Kiel up to 1902. The cathedral in Kiel is still one of the festival's most popular venues. Stein, besides giving performances during the Kieler Herbstwochen für Kunst und Wissenschaft, also organized the 55th Tonkünstlerfest des Allgemeinen Deutschen Musikvereins (1925), the second Handel Festival (1928) and the 18th German Bach Festival (1930).

The first classes in music at the university were given by the Kantor J.C. Oehlers (1781–1810) in the Homiletisches Seminar, established in 1775 as part of the theology department. Until 1914 this remained a duty of the Nikolaikirche Kantor or organist. Apel was appointed honorary academic director of music in 1818, a post which was formalized in 1848, when Carl Grädener was appointed. However, Grädener left Kiel a year later and the post was vacant until 1878, when Stange was appointed. The main responsibility was practical music-making, but Grädener had already given public lectures on general music theory. In 1921 Stein established a music department at the university, which became an independent institute in 1923. Under Stein's successors, who have included Friedrich Blume (1933), Walter Wiora (1958), Walter Salmen (1966) and Friedhelm Krummacher (1976), practical music-making diminished in favour of historical, analytic and ethnological research and teaching. In 1930 H.-J. Therstappen, a lecturer in music, created in the university an Arbeitsgruppe für Neue Musik, which existed until 1936; in 1957 it was re-established as the Arbeitskreis für Neue Musik by Kurt Gudewill, and since 1959 has been one of the students' study groups.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. von Gersdorff: Beiträge zur Christian Albrecht von Geschichte des Theaters in Kiel zur Zeit des Herzogs Holstein-Gottorp: 1659–1694 (Kiel, 1911)

G. Junge: Die Geschichte des Theaters in Kiel unter den dänischen Herrschaft bis zur Errichtung einer stehenden Bühne (1774–1841) (Kiel, 1928)

R. Meyer and H. Niederauer: Festschrift zum 50jährigen Bestehen des Hauses am Kleinen Kiel (Kiel, 1957)

W. Danielsen: Hundert Jahre Kieler Theater, 1841–1944 (Kiel, 1961)

K. Hortschansky: Katalog der Kieler Musiksammlung: die Notendrucke, Handschriften, Libretti und Bücher über Musik aus der Zeit bis 1830 (Kassel, 1963)

K. Gudewill: 'Musikpflege und Musikwissenschaft', Geschichte der Christian-Albrechts-Universität Kiel, 1665–1965, v/1 (Neumünster, 1969), 189–244

U. Haensel: Musikgeschichte Kiels im Mittelalter (Bonn, 1971)

K. Stahmer: Musik in Kiel: eine kommentierte Dokumentation zum Musikleben einer Grossstadt im Jahr 1967 (Munich, 1974)

W. Pfannkuch: 'Opernaufführungen in Kiel 1780–1798', Opernstudien: Anna Amalie Abert zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. K. Hortschansky (Tutzing, 1975), 91–102

P. Dannenberg: Immer wenn es Abend wird: dreihundert Jahre Theater in Kiel (Hamburg, 1983)

UWE HAENSEL/R

Kielland, Olav (b Trondheim, 16 Aug 1901; d Bø, Telemark, 5 Aug 1985). Norwegian conductor and composer. He studied architecture before entering the Leipzig Conservatory in 1921, studying composition with Wittenbecher and Krehl, and conducting with Otto Lohse. Later he took conducting classes with Weingartner in Basel. For several years he was accompanist and conductor at theatres in Oslo and Göteborg, and in 1933 was appointed conductor of the Oslo PO, which post he retained until the Nazis closed the orchestra in 1943. Between 1945 and 1948 he reorganized and conducted the Trondheim SO, and from 1951 he led the Bergen PO. From 1955 he devoted himself to composing, studying Norwegian folk music and working as a guest conductor.

He made his début as a composer in 1925 with an orchestral Prelude and Fugue, and his output, despite his hectic conducting schedule, included several orchestral works, among them four symphonies and a concerto each for the piano and the violin. His Concerto grosso norvegese for strings and horn (1951) was widely played; also popular were his piano pieces, the collection Villarkorn ('Troll Seeds'), from the same year. His love of Norwegian folk music permeates almost all his works, which often show the formal aspects and textures of neoclassicism. He received a number of awards and prizes, among them an honorary annual grant for artists.

WORKS

Orch: Sinfonia I, op.3, 1935; Suite, op.8, 1938; Vn Conc., op.7, 1940; Marcia nostrale, op.11, 1943; Melodia per strumenti a corda, op.15b, 1947; Concerto grosso norvegese, op.18, 1951; Brand (incid music, H. Ibsen), 1956; Sinfonia II, op.21, 1961; Marcia del coraggio, op.24, 1968; Sinfonia III, op.23, 1970; Ouvertura solenne, op.25, 1974; Sinfonia IV, op.26, 1977; Pf Conc., op.27, 1977

Vocal with orch: Mot Blåsnøhøgdom (O. Setrom), op.14, 1947; 6 Sivle Songs, op.17, 1951

Choral works, songs, pf pieces, str qt

ARVID O. VOLLSNES

Kienlen, Johann Cristoph (b Ulm, bap. 14 Dec 1783; d Dessau, 7 Dec 1829). German composer. He was the son of a Stadtmusicus at Ulm. Holzer showed that he appeared as a prodigy pianist and singer at the age of seven. With the help of some rich patrons he continued his studies at Munich (1802) and Paris (*c*1803–6, under Cherubini), and was then Stadtmusikdirektor in his native town for a short time. He returned to Paris in 1809 (when two sonatas were published by Naderman), travelled to Munich in 1810 (producing his Claudine von Villa Bella) and then to Stuttgart and Vienna. Here Schnyder von Wartensee became his pupil and followed him to Baden (near Vienna) when Kienlen was appointed music director to Baron Zinnicq, who ran a private theatre there and at Pressburg (now Bratislava). Kienlen returned to Vienna in 1815 and from 1817 lived for several years in Berlin, at first without an official appointment; in 1823 he became the singing instructor at the royal theatre. He is said to have died insane and in poverty.

WORKS

4 ops and Singspiele, 1810–16, incl.: Claudine von Villa Bella (Spl, 3, J.W. von Goethe), Munich, 9 Sept 1810, D-Bsb; Petrarca und Laura (op, 3, E.N. Schlager), Pressburg, 1816, Bsb

Incidental music for 3 plays, Berlin, 1817–23, lost

Introduction and songs for E.T.A. Hoffmann's Undine, Bsb

*c*80 songs, pf acc., in 7 collections (1810–17), incl.: 12 Lieder von Goethe (Leipzig, 1810); 7 Lieder aus Goethe's Faust (Berlin, ?1817), US-NH

Symphony (Posen, ?1825); 2 sonatas, pf (Paris, *c*1809); other pf music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; FétisBS
X. Schnyder von Wartensee: Lebenserinnerungen (Zürich, 1887)
E. Holzer: 'Ein vergessener schwäbischer Musiker', Die Musik, viii/3 (1908–9), 145–51

ALFRED LOEWENBERG/DAVID CHARLTON

Kienzl, Wilhelm (b Waizenkirchen, nr Linz, 17 Jan 1857; d Vienna, 3 Oct 1941). Austrian composer. When he was three his family moved to Graz where he studied the piano with Johann Buwa and the violin with Ignaz Uhl. In 1872 he began piano lessons with Mortier de Fontaine, a pupil of Chopin. While a student at Graz University he studied composition with Rémy; he also attended von Hausegger's lectures in music history and came to know Adolf Jensen, who encouraged him to pursue composition and discussed the works of Schumann and Wagner with him. In 1876 Kienzl continued his musical studies at Prague University with Krejčí; from there he travelled to Bayreuth with von Hausegger to attend the first performance of the Ring. This confirmed his already strong attachment to Wagner's music. In the next year he studied at Leipzig University and briefly with Liszt in Weimar, completing his formal education in Vienna. His dissertation, Die musikalische Deklamation, was completed in 1879 and gave expression to his ideas about opera and the history of music. In the same year he returned to Bayreuth where he spent a considerable amount of time as a member of the close circle around Wagner. His disagreement with some members of the group regarding musical matters soon terminated his stay, but he remained an admirer of Wagner and his music. He attended nearly every Bayreuth Festival during his lifetime as well as lecturing and writing on Wagner. His first impressions of Bayreuth are recorded in the Miszellen of 1886.

From 1879 to 1883 Kienzl travelled throughout Europe, meeting nearly all of the important musicians of the period, lecturing, and giving recitals with the violinist Richard Sahla and the singer Aglaja Orgéni. He was appointed director of the German opera in Amsterdam (1883), but soon returned to Graz where he completed his first opera, Urvasi (1884). Later he assumed the direction of the Steiermärkischer Musikverein there (1886); his responsibilities included the Graz Conservatory and the organization of orchestral concerts of new music, as well as the programming of Liederabende. In 1889 he conducted in Hamburg and later in Munich, where his opera Heilmar der Narr was first performed in 1892. Although these travels and his frequent lecturing often interrupted his residence in Graz, he still found time there and at Aussee, his summer residence, to compose. It was there that he completed his most successful opera, Der Evangelimann, whose immediate popularity resulted in productions all over Germany and Austria.

Kienzl remained in Graz until 1917. The essays written during these years contain important and interesting commentaries on the works of his comtemporaries. In 1917 he moved to Vienna, having exhausted the musical possibilities of the provincial city. It was there that he composed the anthem of the first Austrian republic (1918) to words by the chancellor, Karl Renner. His first wife, Lili Hoke, a Bayreuth singer, died in 1919. Henny Bauer, whom he married in 1921, wrote the texts for his last three operas and was a lifelong champion of his music. After completing these operas, Kienzl effectively gave up large-scale composition to concentrate on songs and choral music. He wrote in 1925: 'I cannot be and will not be atonal, but refuse just the same to be banal or antiquated'. His lecturing, conducting and composition continued, although he never came to understand the new music. Because of increasing illness he stopped composing in 1936 and watched with dismay as his operas disappeared from the repertory in Germany and Austria. With Humperdinck, he was responsible for the revival of Romanticism in opera, continuing the tradition of Weber, Lortzing and Wagner.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

Urvasi (3, A. Gödel, after Kalidāsā), op.20, 1884, Dresden, 20 Feb 1886, rev. 1909
Heilmar der Narr (3, W. Kinzel sr, after M. Hartmann), op.40, 1891, Munich, 8 March 1892
Der Evangelimann (musikalisches Schauspiel, 2, Kienzel, after L.F. Meissner), op.45, 1894, Berlin, 4 May 1895
Don Quixote (musikalische Tragikomödie, 3, Kienzel, after M. de Cervantes), op.50, 1897, Berlin, 18 Nov 1898
In Knecht Ruprechts Werkstatt (Weihnachtsmärchenspiel, 1, H. Voigt), op.75, 1907, Graz, 25 Dec 1907
Der Kuhreigen (musikalisches Schauspiel, 3, R. Batka, after R.H. Bartsch), op.85, 1911, Vienna, 23 Nov 1911
Das Testament (musikalische Tragikomödie 2, Kienzl, after P. Rosegger), op.90, Vienna, 6 Dec 1916
Hassan der Schwärmer (3, H. Bauer, after A Thousand and One Nights), op.100, 1921, Chemnitz, 27 Feb 1925
Sanctissimum (melodramatische Allegorie, 1, Bauer), op.102, 1922, Vienna, 14 Feb 1925
Hans Kipfel (Spl, 1, Bauer, after old Viennese story), op.110, 1927

CHORAL

2 Songs, op.14; 3 Pieces, op.17, male vv; 3 Songs, op.19, 4 female vv; 5 Tanzweisen, op.21b, 4vv/4 female vv; Landsknechtslied (H. Lingg), op.23, male vv, orch; Zur Trauung, op.26; 3 Songs, op.36, male vv; 3 Pieces, op.54, male vv; 5 Songs, op.58, 4 female vv; 6 volkstümliche Lieder, op.59; 6 volkstümliche Männerchöre, op.60; 5 Songs, op.63, female vv, hp/pf ad lib; Wach' auf, mein Volk! (A.A. Naaff), op.64, male vv, orch; Das Volkslied, Heerbannlied der deutschen Stämme, op.65, male vv
Fasching (O.J. Bierbaum), op.67, T, Bar, B, male vv, orch; 4 Songs, op.68, male vv; 6 Songs, op.72, male vv, perc; 8 Songs, op.76, 4 female vv; 3 Pieces, op.78, male vv; 2 Geschichtsbilder (Lingg), op.79, male vv, orch; Deutsche Ritterlieder (H.W. Günthersberger), op.86, male vv, orch; Das Lied vom Kaiser Arnulf (Graevell), op.88, male vv, orch; 3 Pieces, op.89, male vv; Im Schlachtendonner, op.92, male vv; Ostara (H. Hagen), op.93, male vv, orch; Deutsch-Österreich (national anthem, K. Renner), op.101, male/mixed vv
Nachtmusikanten, 5 pieces, op.103, male vv; Arbeiterlied (E. Fischer), op.104, male vv; 4 Songs, op.105, male vv; 2 Pieces, op.107, male vv; 5 Songs, op.112, male vv; Spar-Hymne (H. Giebisch), op.115, mixed vv, orch; Chor der Toten, op.118 (K.F. Meyer), mixed vv, orch for 1v, pf unless otherwise stated

LIEDER

2 Lieder, op.1; 4 Lieder, op.2; 2 Gedichte (A.Grün), op.4; 9 Lieder im Volkston, op.6; 8 Lieder der Liebe, op.8; Liebesfrühling, op.11 (cycle, F. Rückert); Süsses Verzichten, cycle, op.16; Geliebt-Vergessen, cycle, op.18; 3 Albumblätter, op.24; 3 Lieder, op.25; Abschied, op.27; Kuriose Geschichte, op.28; 3 Volkslieder, op.31; 3 Lieder, op.32; Frühlingslieder, op.33; 2 Lieder aus Osten, op.35; 2 Lieder, op.37; 2 Lieder, op.38; 2 Lieder, op.39; 2 Lieder, op.42; 4 Lieder, op.44; 4 Japanische Lieder, op.47; Waldmeister, op.49
6 Lieder, op.55; Verwelkte Rosen, op.56, 1v, pf/hp; 4 volkstümliche Gesänge, op.57; 4 Lieder, op.61; 3 Gesänge, op.66; 3 Gesänge, op.69a, 1v, pf/hmn; Moderne Lyrik, op.71; Aus Onkels Liedermappe, op.73; Weihnacht, op.74; 5 Gesänge, op.81; 5 Gesänge, op.82; Ein Weihnachtslied, op.83, 1v, hmn/org/pf; 3 Duets, op.84, male v, female v, pf; Nachsommerblüten, op.87; Das Lied vom Weltkrieg, op.91

7 Lieder und Gesänge, op.94; Aus des Volkes Wunderhorn, op.96; Deutsch-Österreich (national anthem, Renner), op.101, 1v, pf ad lib; 7 Lieder und Gesänge, op.106, 2 Gräwer [siebenbürgisch]; 6 Lieder vom Glück, op.111; 6 Lieder, op.114; Spar-Hymne, op.115; Vocalise-Etüde, op.116; 2 vaterländische Gesänge, op.117, unpubd; 7 Lieder, op.120, unpubd; 3 Lieder, op.121, unpubd; 4 Lieder (L. Fahrenkrog), op.123 [unpubd]; La delaissée (An den entschwundenen Geliebten) [unpubd; text by Kienzl added to Chopin: Nocturne, op.27/2]

PIANO

Skizzen, op.3; Kahnszene, op.5; Bunte Tänze, op.10; Aus alten Märchen, op.12, pf/pf duet; Aus meinem Tagebuche, op.15, 3 vols.; 30 Tanzweisen, op.21, 3 vols., pf/pf duet; Scherzo, a, op.29; Kinderliebe und -leben, op.30; Romantische Blätter, 10 Phantasiestücke op.34; Tanzbilder, op.41, 3 vols., pf/pf duet; Daheim!, 7 kleine Klavierstücke op.43; Dichterreise, op.46, 10 Stimmungsbilder, 2 vols.

(Kleiner) Carneval, op.51, 2 vols.; Bilder aus dem Volksleben, Vortragsstudien op.52; Abendstimmungen, op.53, pf duet; Neue Klavierstücke, op.62, 2 vols.; O schöne Jugendtage!, op.80, 3 vols.; 20 Stücke in Ländlerform, op.95, 2 vols., pf/pf duet; Variationen über das Strassburglied aus der Oper 'Der Kuhreigen', op.109b [unpubd]

OTHER WORKS

3 Phantasiestücke, op.7, vn, pf; Pf Trio, f, op.13; Str Qt no.1, b, op.22; Abendstimmungen, op, 53, str orch, hp; 2 Pieces, op.69b, hmn; Adagio (Trost in Tränen), op.69c, vc, hmn/org/pf; 8 Chorale Preludes, op.77, 2 vols., org; Str Qt no.2, c, op.99; Waldstimmungen, op.108, 4 hn; Symphonische Variationen über das Strassburglied aus der Oper 'Der Kuhreigen', op.109a, orch; Str Qt, E, op.113; Lied ohne Worte, 2 vn, [unpubd]

Melodramas: Die Brautfahrt (J.F. von Eichendorff), op.9, spkr, pf/orch; 2 Melodramas (R. Hamerling, F.K. Ginzkey), op.97, spkr, pf; Die Jungfrau und die Nonne (G. Keller), op.98, spkr, choruses, orch; 3 melodramas to music by Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin; Ein Marienballade von François Villon (De Montcorbier), op.119; numerous arrs.

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Breitkopf & Härtel, Forberg, Heinrichshofen, Kahnt, Kistner, Leuckart, Reibenstein, Ries & Erler, Siegel, Universal, Weinberger, Zimmermann

WRITINGS

Die musikalische Deklamation (Leipzig, 1880)
Miszellen (Leipzig, 1886) [essays]
ed.: F. Brendel: Grosse und kleine Musikgeschichte (Leipzig, 1886–9)
'Titus' von Mozart: Einrichtung für deutsche Bühnen (Vienna, 1893)
Die Gesamtkunst des XIX. Jahrhunderts: Richard Wagner (Vienna, 1904, 2/1908)
Aus Kunst und Leben (Berlin, 2/1904) [essays]
Im Konzert (Berlin, 1908) [essays]
Betrachtungen und Erinnerungen (Berlin, 1909) [essays]
Meine Lebenswanderung: Erlebtes, Erschautes (Stuttgart, 1926)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Hagen, ed.: Festschrift . . . Wilhelm Kienzl (Graz, 1917)
O. Wessely: 'Wilhelm Kienzl und Adolf Jensen', Oberösterreichischer Kulturbericht, xxxvii (1948)
H. Kienzl: 'Kleine Begebenheiten aus einem reichen Leben', Wiener Zeitung (1951), 220ff
H. Sittner: Kienzl–Rosegger: eine Künstlerfreundschaft (Zürich, 1953) [incl. diaries, work-list and correspondence]
H. Sittner: 'Wilhelm Kienzl', Grosse Österreicher, x, Neue österreichische Biographie ab 1815 (Vienna, 1957), 111–16
A. Yoshida: Wilhelm Kienzls Bühnenwerke (diss., U. of Vienna, 1983)
V. Redtenbacher: (K)ein Evangelimann: Die historische Brandlegung (Vienna, 1990)

JOSEPH CLARK/GERHARD J. WINKLER

Kiepura, Jan (b Sosnowiec, 16 May 1902; d Harrison, NY, 15 Aug 1966). Polish tenor. He studied in Warsaw with Tadeusz Leliva, making his début in Lwów as Faust in 1924. He sang at the Vienna Staatsoper (1926–37) as Cavaradossi, Calaf, Rodolfo (La bohème), Manrico, Don José and created the Stranger in Korngold's Das Wunder der Heliane (1927, Hamburg). In 1928 Kiepura sang Cavaradossi at the Paris Opéra and Calaf to acclaim at La Scala, where he created Marchese Marcarille in Lattuada's Le preziose ridicole (1929). He made his American début at Chicago in 1931 as Cavaradossi and his Metropolitan début in 1938 as Rodolfo, singing there until 1942 as Don José, the Duke, Massenet's Des Grieux and Cavaradossi. He also sang in Chicago (1939–42). He made a number of romantic films in the 1930s, which show his ebullient personality and exciting voice. Other recordings reveal his easy, forward production and lyrical charm. He often appeared with his wife, the soprano Marta Eggerth.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV (R. Celletti; R. Vegeto)
J. Waldorff: Jan Kiepura (Warsaw, 1974/R)
W. Panek: Jan Kiepura (Warsaw, 1992)

LEO RIEMENS/ALAN BLYTH

Kiesewetter, Raphael Georg (b Holleschau [now Holešov, Czech Republic], 29 Aug 1773; d Baden, 1 Jan 1850). Austrian musicologist. Son of Alois Ferdinand Kiesewetter (1739–93), a doctor and writer on medicine, he studied philosophy at the University of Olomouc and then law at the University of Vienna. Leaving the university without completing his studies, he became an official in the chancellery of the imperial army, whose headquarters were in Schwetzingen; he remained there until 1801. In 1807 he became a councillor in the war office in Vienna. He was raised to the nobility in 1843 with the title 'Edler von Wiesenbrunn'. He was pensioned in 1845 and retired to Baden three years later.

As a youth Kiesewetter was taught the piano and singing; he later learnt to play the flute, and as an adult he had lessons in the bassoon and the guitar. Among his teachers in theory was Albrechtsberger. From 1801 he took part as a bass singer in many public and private concerts in Vienna. From 1816, in his own house, he organized annual concerts devoted to vocal music of the 16th to 18th centuries. In connection with these concerts he formed a collection of old scores which he bequeathed to the Austrian National Library and which later provided important research material for his nephew, August Wilhelm Ambros. His continuous involvement in Viennese concert life, in particular with the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, earned him many honours, among them honorary membership of the Congregazione ed Accademia di S Cecilia in Rome (1840) and in the Akademie der Künste in Berlin (1843).

Kiesewetter's pioneering achievements were in the field of musicology, which, like Fétis, he came to by way of music history and theory. In his books, many of which he had previously prepared in the form of essays for journals, he dealt with the problems of the music of non-European Mediterranean cultures and of the Ancient Greeks, as well as the history of western music from the early Middle Ages until the Viennese Classical period. His major work, the Geschichte der europäisch-abendländischen oder unsrer heutigen Musik, is particularly noteworthy as the last exposition of the evolutionary concept of history of the Age of Enlightenment. His studies of the music of the Netherlands established him as one of the originators of research into the history of style; his Schicksale und Beschaffenheit des weltlichen Gesanges was written in the early days of topographical music research and the history of genres. In compiling Die Musik der Araber he was the first to enlist the help of an orientalist, Joseph Freiherr von Hammer-Purgstall (1774–1856), which enabled him to base his presentation on the original Arab source material; this book was justly considered unsurpassed until the end of the 19th century. For his scholarly achievements, Kiesewetter was made a corresponding member of the Imperial Academy of Sciences, Vienna, in 1849.

WRITINGS

Geschichte der europäisch-abendländischen oder unsrer heutigen Musik (Leipzig, 1834, 2/1846/R; Eng. trans., 1848)
Über die Musik der neueren Griechen nebst freien Gedanken über altaegyptische und altgriechische Musik (Leipzig, 1838)
Guido von Arezzo: sein Leben und Wirken (Leipzig, 1840)
Schicksale und Beschaffenheit des weltlichen Gesanges vom frühen Mittelalter bis zur Erfindung des dramatischen Styles und den Anfängen der Oper (Leipzig, 1841/R)
Die Musik der Araber (Leipzig, 1842/R) ed.: Der neuen Aristoxener zerstreute Aufsätze über das Irrige der musikalischen Arithmetik und das Eitle ihrer Temperaturrechnungen (Leipzig, 1846/R) [incl. articles by Kiesewetter]
Catalog der Sammlung alter Musik des k.k. Hofrathes Raphael Georg Kiesewetter Edlen von Wiesenbrunn in Wien (Vienna, 1847)
Gallerie der alten Contrapunctisten: eine Auswahl aus ihren Werken in verständlichen Partituren (Vienna, 1847)
Über die Octave des Pythagoras (Vienna, 1848)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Fuchs: Obituaries, NZM, xxxii (1850), 89, 101; Revue et gazette musicale de Paris, xvii (1850), 97
A. Fuchs: 'Raphael Georg Kiesewetter', Blätter für Musik, Theater und Kunst, i (1855), 155, 171, 191, 195
W.B. Squire: 'A Letter from Kiesewetter to Pearsall', MT, xliii (1902), 93–5
H. Kier: 'Kiesewetters historische Hauskonzerte: Zur Geschichte der kirchenmusikalischen Restauration in Wien', KJb, lii (1968), 95–119
H. Kier: Raphael Georg Kiesewetter, 1773–1850: Wegbereiter des musikalischen Historismus (Regensburg, 1968)
H. Kier: 'Musikalischer Historismus im vormärzlichen Wien', Die Ausbreitung des Historismus über die Musik, ed. W. Wiora (Regensburg, 1969), 55–72
P. Bohlman: 'R.G. Kiesewetter's "Die Musik der Araber": a Pioneering Ethnomusicological Study of Arabic Writings on Music', AsM, xviii/1 (1986), 164–96

OTHMAR WESSELY

Kiev. City in Ukraine. It is the historical, cultural and spiritual capital of Ukraine. The conversion of Ukraine to Christianity (988) brought the acceptance of the Byzantine rite, and with that came Byzantine sacred music via the Greeks and the Bulgarians. By the second half of the 11th century, the Kievan Monastery of the Caves had become the centre for religious music in Ukraine and had developed an original style based on Byzantine traditions and local folk music. This employed two types of non-linear motation for its monophonic singing, znamenna (written above the words of the liturgical services) and kondakarna (used to note down liturgical singing, specifically the kontakia). This liturgical music developed into an original Kievan monodic style known as Kyivskiy raspev, or znamennïy raspev, since it used neumatic notation. Kiev's political importance diminished in the 13th and 14th centuries and did not regain its stature until the Polish-Lithuanian union of 1569 brought the Ukrainian Church under Western influence. This resulted in the adoption of Western musical theories and polyphony at the Kiev Mohyla Academy (1615–1915). The Mohyla Academy adapted these new musical theories and became, in the 17th and early 18th centuries, the musical centre of the eastern Slavonic world. At the height of its development, during the Hetmanate period (the name of the Ukrainian Cossack state, 1648–1782), the Mohlya Academy had an orchestra of 100 and a chorus of 300. The polyphonic style matured in Kiev and contributed to the evolution of the choral concerto, which was then transmitted to Moscow via the many Ukrainian singers and composers who went there to develop professional music careers. The Mohyla Academy produced several generations of composers, the most notable (and one of the last) being Artemy Vedel (1767–1810), and influenced a whole generation of other Ukrainian composers (including Maksym Berezovs'ky and Dmytro Bortnyans'ky) working for the newly dominant Russia. By the early 19th century Kiev had lost its musical primacy to Moscow.

In the 19th century musical culture in Kiev was dominated by various societies. The most important was the Kiev branch of the Russian Music Society, which, in addition to sponsoring concerts, established a music school (where the Czech violin teacher Otakar Ševčík taught, 1875–93). This school provided the foundation for the later conservatory. Under its auspices many famous figures appeared in Kiev, among them Lysenko, Rubinstein, Tchaikovsky, Rachmaninoff, Chaliapin and Koussevitsky. Central to the development of a Ukrainian national style and the leading figure in its 19th-century music circles was Mykola Lysenko. After settling in Kiev in 1876 he was very active as a composer, pianist, choral conductor, ethnomusicologist and teacher. In 1904 he established in Kiev the Muzychno Dramatychna Shkola ('Music and Drama School') for students between the ages of nine and 17. In 1918 this school became the base for Muzychno-Dramatychny Institut im. Lysenka ('The Lysenko Institute of Music and Drama'). In spite of his reputation, but because of his strong national and political beliefs, he was shunned by the influential Russian Music Society, without whose support certain doors would remain shut.

In 1913, the Kiev Conservatory was formed from the Kiev School of Music, which had existed from 1868 under the aegis of the Russian Music Society. The second principal was Glière (1914–20). In its early years it boasted an excellent faculty, producing a number of important performers, among them Vladimir Horowitz. In 1925 the Soviet government reorganized music education, renaming the conservatory a music school for younger students, while the older ones were sent to the Lysenko Institute. The conservatory was restored in 1934; in 1938 an opera studio was added to it, and in 1940 it became known as the P.I. Tchaikovsky Kiev State Conservatory. In 1995 it was renamed Natsional'na Muzychna Akademia imeni Chaykovs'koho, Kyiv ('the Tchaikovsky National Music Academy, Kiev'). As well as Glière, Lyatoshyns'ky and Revuts'ky have also taught at the faculty and among the many distinguished graduates are Valentin Sil'vestrov, Yevhen Stankovych, Myroslav Skoryk, Ivan Karabyts and Vitaly Hodzyats'ky. Today it is the largest music school and research centre in Ukraine.

Opera was an important and very popular musical development in the 19th century in Kiev. Although professional operatic activities can be traced to 1803, the first opera house built with city funds was completed in 1805–6. In 1851 the theatre was closed, and in 1856 a new city theatre was built on the site of the present Kyivs'kyy Natsional'ny Teatr Opery ta Baletu imeni T.H. Shevchenka ('Shevchenko National Theatre of Opera and Ballet'). The first operatic production took place in 1856 with the opera The Ukrainians by M. Karol. In 1867, under the auspices of the Kiev branch of the Russian Music Society, a permanent opera company, the Russian Opera Company, was formed. This was the first official theatre to be organized in a province. It was praised by Tchaikovsky, and a number of important singers appeared on its stage. The development of a Ukrainian national opera in Kiev occurred in the early 1920s after the Russian Opera Company was disbanded in 1917. It was at this time that operas were first sung in Ukrainian. In 1926 the Kyivs'ka Derzhavna Akademichna Ukrains'ka Opera ('Kiev State Academic Opera') was inaugurated. In 1934 it became the Kyivs'kyy Derzhavnyy Akademichnyy Teatr Opery ta Baletu ('Kiev State Academic Theatre of Opera and Ballet'), and finally, in 1939, adopted the title Shevchenko State Academic Theatre of Opera and Ballet. Before World War II the Opera cultivated a number of Ukrainian singers, such as Mariya Litvinenko-Wohlgemut, Ivan Kozlovsky and Borys Hmyrya. In the late 1920s a wave of experimentation swept through it (a good example being the cubist production of Lyatoshyns'ky's The Golden Ring). During the years of Soviet SOCIALIST REALISM the productions and repertory were forced to serve the needs of communist ideology by greatly simplifying theatrical and musical values. After World War II, in the 1950s and 60s, the Kiev Opera expanded its activities and again achieved an international reputation. It began to tour abroad, after Ukrainian independence, in France, Italy, Egypt and Japan, and was renamed the Schevchenko National Opera of Ukraine in 1995.

The Stalinist years were traumatic ones for Kiev (Lyatoshyns'ky kept a packed suitcase by the door, waiting to be arrested), but the post-Stalinist thaw brought in a new renaissance, reminiscent of the experimental 1920s. The sixties and seventies are known as the period of the Kiev avant garde. This was a small group of composers and performers, all of them associated with Lyatoshyns'ky, who broke with the still prevailing dogma of socialist realism. The event that brought attention to the activities of the Kiev avant garde was an article by the Ukrainian musicologist Halyna Mokreyeva, 'Letter from Kiev', which appeared in the Polish journal Ruch muzychny in 1962. It announced that Kiev was home to a new generation of composers. This group, which consisted of Silvestrov, Leonid Hrabovs'ky, Hodzyatsky, Volodymyr Huba, Vitaly Patsera, Igor Blazhkov and Halyna Mokreyeva, revolutionized the Ukrainian musical establishment. By 1980 the Kiev-based publishing house Muzychna Ukraïna had published two significant booklets, one on Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire and one on the music of Charles Ives by the musicologist Stepaniia Pavlyshyn.

Since independence, Kiev has retained its cultural leadership in Ukraine and enjoys a rich variety of performing ensembles. One of the more important, and the one with the greatest performing tradition, is the Natsional'nyi Zasluzhenyi Akademichnyi Orkestr ('National Merited Academic SO of Ukraine'). Organized as the Orkestr Ukrains'koi SSR ('State Symphony Orchestra of Ukrainian SSR Derztavnyi Symponichnyi') in 1937, its music directors have included Natan Rakhlin and Igor Blazhkov and in more recent years the Ukrainian-American Theodore Kuchar, under whose direction it has recorded many compact discs. The Kiev Chamber Orchestra performed many premières of western and Soviet composers under the direction of Blazhkov in the 1970s. More recently the State Chamber Ensemble Kiev Soloists (better known as the Kiev Camerata) has attracted international attention and the Lysenko String Quartet has toured and recorded extensively. The choral tradition, which has always been strong in Kiev, today includes the Lyatoshyns'ky Chamber Choir, the Veryovka Choir, the Dumka Choir and the Kiev Chamber Choir. The principal music publishing institution is Muzychna Ukraïna (established in 1967), which, in addition to publishing scores and books, produced a series entitled Literary Portraits of Ukrainian Composers. Festivals have also proliferated, the principal ones being the Kiev Music Fest and Music Premières of the Season (annual since 1990) and the international piano competition named after Horowitz (bi-annual since 1995).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Aseyev: Mystetstvo starodavn'oho Kyiva [The arts of ancient Kiev] (Kiev, 1969)

L. Arkhimovych: Shlakhy rozvytku ukrains'koï radyans'koï opery [Paths of development of Ukrainian soviet opera] (Kiev, 1970)

Y. Stanishevs'ky: Ukrains'kyy radyans'kyy muzychnyy teatr, 1917–1967 [Soviet Ukrainian music theatre, 1917–1967] (Kiev, 1970)

M. Hordiychuk: 'Na shlyakhu do stvorennya ukraïnskoï opery v Kyivi' [On the way to the creation of the Ukrainian opera in Kiev], Ukrainske muzykoznavstvo, x (1975), 93–113

For further bibliography see UKRAINE, §I.

VIRKO BALEY

Kikkawa· [Satō], Eishi (b Mino, nr Hiroshima, 13 Feb 1909). Japanese musicologist. Born Eishi Satō, he changed his family name when he married Setsuko Kikkawa in 1938. In 1930 he entered Tokyo University, where he studied music history with Hisao Tanabe and aesthetics with Yoshinori Ōnishi. After graduating in 1933, he tried to become a music publisher, but returned to university in 1937 for further research into ancient documents of Japanese music. A lecturer in Japanese music history at Tokyo University (1946–69), he also held posts at Tokyo Music School (1946–9), Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music (1962–76) and Musashino College of Music (1966–74). In 1949 he became one of the directors of the Society for Research in Asiatic Music, and in 1948 became responsible for many music programmes on NHK. For his works on Japanese music he received, in 1972, the Medal of Honour with Purple Ribbon and the Broadcasting Cultural Prize.

His major contribution to musicology is his book, Nihon ongaku no rekishi ('A history of Japanese music', 1965), the best-documented discussion of the subject. His special field, however, is the music for shamisen or for koto, the most popular genre of Japanese music since the 17th century. He is also known for his works on Michio Miyagi, whom he knew personally; he has been the director of the Miyagi Michio Kinen Kaikan (Miyagi Memorial Institute) since its foundation in 1978.

WRITINGS

'Art of Blind Musician Miyagi', Contemporary Japan, xii (1943), 693–723

'Shamisen no sawari ni tsuite' [On Sawari effects of the shamisen], Toa ongaku ronso: Tanabe sensei kanreki kinen, ed. S. Kishibe (Tokyo, 1943), 193–212

Nihon ongaku no seikaku [The characteristics of Japanese music] (Tokyo, 1948, 2/1979; Ger. trans., 1984)

Hōgaku kanshō [The appreciation of Japanese music] (Tokyo, 1952, 2/1953)

'Nihon engeki no hōgaku ni oyoboshita eikyō' [The influence of drama upon Japanese music], Bigaku, no.13 (1953), 27–38

Hōgaku meikyoku sen: nagauta [Masterpieces of Japanese music: nagauta] (Osaka, 1955)
'Sangen denrai kō' [Study on the introduction of shamisen], Tōyō ongaku kenkyū, xiv–xv (1958), 29–53
Hōgaku kanshō nyūmon [An introduction to the appreciation of Japanese music] (Osaka, 1959, 10/1972)
Miyagi Michio den [The life of Michio Miyagi] (Tokyo, 1962, 4/1990)
'Meiji no nihon ongaku kan' [On the dispute over Japanese traditional music in the Meiji era], Bigaku, no.60 (1965), 1–9
Nihon ongaku no rekishi [A history of Japanese music] (Tokyo and Osaka, 1965, 10/1986)
Hōgaku eno shōtai [An invitation to Japanese music] (Tokyo, 1967)
'Sōkyoku to jiuta no rekishi' [A history of koto music and jiuta], 'Rokudan to Yatsuhashi Kengyō' [Rokudan and Yatsuhashi Kengyō], 'Yatsuhashiryū sōkyoku ni tsuite' [On koto music of the Yatsuhashi school], Sōkyoku to jiuta, Tōyō ongaku sensho, iii (Tokyo, 1967), 21–47, 127–36, 115–26
'Gagaku to kinsei hōgaku' [Gagaku and Japanese music of recent years], Gagaku-kai, xxxxviii (1968), 48–53
Nihon ongaku kanshō kyokushū [Examples of Japanese music] (Tokyo, 1970)
'Nihon ongaku ni okeru shōchō-giho' [The symbol technique in Japanese traditional music], Bigaku, no.80 (1970), 1–9
'Gendai hōgaku no chichi Miyagi Michio ni oyoboshita yōgaku no eikyō' [The influence of western music on Michio Miyagi, the father of modern Japanese music], Musashino ongaku daigaku kiyō, vi (1972), 18–37
Nihon ongaku no biteki kenkyu [An aesthetic study of Japanese music] (Tokyo, 1984)
Nihon ongaku no bunkashi [A cultural history of Japanese music] (Osaka, 1989)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Nihon ongaku to sono shūhen: Kikkawa Eishi sensei kanreki kinen ronbun-shū [On and about Japanese music: articles to celebrate the 61st birthday of Professor Eishi Kikkawa] (Tokyo, 1973) [incl. biography and list of works]
E. Kikkawa: Shashaten'an Shujin Kaisōroku [The autobiography of Eishi Kikkawa] (Tokyo, 1994)

MASAKATA KANAZAWA

Kikta, Valery Grigor'yevich (b Vladimirovka, Donetsk region, Ukrainian SSR, 22 Oct 1941). Ukrainian composer. He studied at the Moscow Choral School (1950s), graduated from the composition class of Bogatïr'yov at the Moscow Conservatory (1965) and completed his postgraduate studies under Khrennikov (1967); in 1992 he became teacher of orchestration at the Moscow Conservatory.

Characteristic of Kikta's musical style are a natural lyricism and the influence of Slavonic folklore, from the ancient bïlina, tunes associated with the skomorokhi (equivalents of the Western jongleurs) and the gusli, to present-day vesnyanki (spring songs). The oratorio Knyaginya Ol'ga ('Princess Olga'), the skomorokhi entertainment Pro prekrasnuyu Vasilisu Mikulishnu ('About the Beautiful Vasilisa Mikulishna') and the ballet Vladimir Krestitel' ('Vladimir the Baptizer of Rus'') are imbued with old Russian imagery. The choral concertos Khvala masteru ('Hymn of Praise to the Master, 1978) and Khorovaya zhivopis' (Choral Painting, 1978) attracted public attention by their sumptuous, neo-baroque harmony. These concertos, and the monumental cycle Rossiya na raspyat'ye, na raspyat'ye ('Russia on the Cross, on the Cross'), seek to combine the traditions of Russian 18th-century part-writing with elements of aleatory and atonality. By the mid-1990s the composer's choral music also reflected a growing interest towards spirituality, for example in Rozhdestvenskiy triptikh ('A Christmas Triptych') and the Velikopostnaya molitva ('Prayer for Lent').

A number of Kikta's works have been inspired by the music of Tchaikovsky and Stanisław Ludkewicz, and more than once he has quoted the themes of these composers (on the work of the latter Kikta has published several articles in the Soviet press).

WORKS
(selective list)

BALLETS

Zolotaya igra [Golden Game], 1963; Danko, 1964; Posvyashcheniye [Dedication] (Kikta and V. Ovchinnikov, choreog. M. Marterosian), 1975; Mukha-tsokhotukha [The Chatterbox Fly], 1973–5; Dubrovsky, 1979; Svet moy, Mariya! [My Darling Mariya!] (2, N. Katugin), S, female chorus, orch, 1984; Legenda ural'skikh predgoriy [Legend of the Foothills of the Urals], 1986; Svyataya Olesya/Polesskaya koldun'ya [Holy Olesya/Sorceress of Poles'ye], 1987–8; Otkroveniye [Revelation] (2, M. Lavrovsky), 1990; Vladimir Krestitel' [Vladimir the Baptizer of Rus'] (2, Lavrovsky), 1989–90; Belaya kokarda [The White Cockade], 1994–5; Freski Sofii Kiyevskoy [The Frescos of the Kiev St Sofia Cathedral], 1995

VOCAL

Choral: Knyaginya Ol'ga [Princess Olga] (orat, L. Vasil'yeva), 1970; Kantata o materi [Cant about a Mother], T, female chorus, org, bells, hp, 1973; Pro prekrasnuyu Vasilisu Mikalishnu [To Beautiful Vasilisu Mikulishnu] (comedy, K. Danilov), spkr, female chorus, Russ. folk insts, 1974; Razboynich'ï balladï Zakarpat'ya [Robbers' Ballads of the Trans-Carpathians] (folklore), male chorus, end-blown fl, bells, 1976; Khvala masteru [Hymn of Praise to the Master] (choral conc., V. Lazarev), chorus, 1978; Khorovaya zhivopis' [Choral Painting], (choral conc.), male chorus, 1978; Tul'skiye pesni [Songs of Tula] (folklore), female chorus, 1980; Svyatoy Dnepr [Holy Dnieper] (orat, 11 scenes, S. Maydanskaya, after Old Russ. chronicles), chorus, 1992; Rossiya na raspyat'ye, na raspyat'ye [Russia on the Cross, on the Cross] (choral chronicle], 1993; Bozhestvennaya Liturgiya sv. Ioanna Zlatousta [Divine Liturgy of St John Chrysostom], chorus, 1994; Rozhdestvenskiy triptikh [Christmas Triptych] (trad., Orthodox), B, chorus, 1995; Velikopostnaya molitva [Prayer for Lent] (A.S. Pushkin), chorus, 1996

Song cycles, 1v and pf: Plach o poteryannom serdtse [Lament for the Lost Heart] (I. Takuboko), 1966; Za gran'yu temnotï [Beyond the Line of Darkness] (Ya. Kontkovskaya), 1968; Probuzhdeniye [Awakening] (Pushkin), 1972; Vozvrashcheniye k Pushkinu [Return to Pushkin] (Lazarev), 1978

INSTRUMENTAL

Concs.: no.1, pf, orch, 1965; 13 tpt, 1971; no.2, pf, orch, 1972; tuba, orch, 1973; org, 1982; ob, orch, 1983–91; no.3, pf, orch, 1986; Concerto-novella, 2 pf, chbr orch, 1993; Conc. for Orch 'Ukrainskiye kolyadki, shchedrivki i vesnyanki' [Ukr. Christmas Carols, New Year Songs and Spring Songs]

Other instr: 3 pf sonatas: 1967, 1968, 1970; 2 sonatas, bn, pf: 1977, 1979; 6 suites, org: 1966, 1968 (2), 1969, 1970, 1989; pieces for Russ. folk inst orch, hp, children, incid music

Principal publishers: Sovetskiy kompozitor, Muzïka (Moscow)

WRITINGS

'P. Chaykovsky v skul'pture' [Tchaikovsky in sculpture], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1990), no.4, pp.20–22
Pushkihskaya musïkal'naya panorama xix–xx vekov [Puskhin's musical panorama, 19th to 20th centuries] (Moscow, 1998)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Dubravskaya: 'Valery Kikta', Kompozitorï Moskvï, ii (Moscow,1980), 62–80
V. Pavlov: 'Svet moy, Mariya!' [My darling Mariya!], SovM (1987), no.3, pp. 37–40
B. Yegorova: 'Novïye baletï na syuzhetï Pushkina' [New ballets on subjects by Pushkin], Muzïka Rossii, viii (1989), 135–50
Yu. Yevgrafov: 'Ozhivayut obrazï Kiyevskoy Rusi' [Images of Kievan Rus' come to life], Balet (1996), no.1

YURY IVANOVICH PAISOV

Kīlānī, Rīm Yūsuf. See KELANI, REEM YOUSEF.

Kilar, Wojciech (b Lwów [now L'viv, Ukraine], 17 July 1932). Polish composer. He studied the piano and composition with Woytowicz, firstly at the Katowice Academy (1950–55) and then at the State Higher School of Music in Kraków (1955–8). He was one of the first Polish composers to attend the Darmstadt summer school (1957), and in 1959–60 he was a pupil of Boulanger in Paris. A prominent composer of film music, he has worked with directors such as Kutz, Has, Zanussi, Wajda, Kieślowski, Coppola, Polański and Campion. Among the prizes he has received are the Lili Boulanger Award (1960, for Oda Béla Bartók in memoriam), the Polish Composers' Union prize (1975), the State Prize (1980), the Jurzykowski Foundation Award (New York, 1983), the Solidarity Prize (1989), an ASCAP award (1993, for Bram Stoker's Dracula) and the Kieślowski Prize (1996).

Although known popularly for his work in film, he is also the author of a distinct and successful body of concert pieces. After the Bartókian and eclectic Oda (dedicated to the people of Hungary in the aftermath of the 1956 Hungarian uprising), Kilar experimented with serialism (Herbsttag, 1960) before developing, in the 1960s, a somewhat picturesque language using extended instrumental and vocal techniques. The seeds of his established style are apparent in the strong rhythmic propulsion and sustained sonorities of Solenne (1967) (here and elsewhere in his music there are strong parallels with Górecki) and in the tonality of Upstairs–Downstairs (1971).

With Krzesany (1974), the first and best known of several vivid works inspired by the Polish mountains, Kilar became notorious for his unabashed directness of expression: unassuming folk ideas are treated symphonically with recourse to repetitive rhythms, phrasing and harmonic progressions. A religious side of his art surfaces in Bogurodzica, which uses Poland's most famous medieval hymn, and in the Boléro-derived Exodus. In the Piano Concerto (1997) Kilar's reductionism draws not only on chants of the Roman Church but also on Beethoven and on recognizable French sources. Cast from a cinematic perspective, his concert works written after Krzesany have been variously regarded as spuriously kitsch, naively devotional or intuitively postmodern.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Concertino, fl, str, 1953; Mała uwertura [Little Ov.], 1955; Sym. no.1, str, 1955; Sinfonia concertante (Sym. no.2), pf, orch, 1956; Oda Béla Bartók in memoriam, vn, brass, perc, 1957; Conc., 2 pf, perc, 1958; Riff 62, 2 cl, 3 sax, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, perc, pf, str, 1962; Générique, 1963; Springfield Sonnet, 1965; Przygrywka i kolęda [Prelude and Christmas Carol], 4 ob, str, 1972; Krzesany, sym. poem, 1974; Kościelec 1909, sym. poem, 1976; Orawa, str, 1986; Choral vorspiel, str, 1988; Requiem dla Ojca Kolbe [Requiem for Father Kolbe], pf, perc, str, 1990–96; Pf Conc., 1997

Vocal: Suita beskidzka [Beskid Suite] (folk texts), T, chorus, orch, 1956; Kołysanki [Lullabies] (J. Czechowicz), S, 3 cl, bn, hn, hp, pf, 1957; Herbsttag (R.M. Rilke), A, str qt, 1960; Diphthongos, chorus, perc, 2 pf, str, 1964; Solenne, amp S, brass, perc, pf, str, 1967; Upstairs–Downstairs, 2 girls'/boys' choruses, orch, 1971; Bogurodzica [Mother of God] (trad.), chorus, orch, 1975; Siwa mgła [Grey Mist] (folk texts), Bar, orch, 1979; Fanfare, chorus, orch, 1979; Exodus, chorus, orch, 1981; Victoria, chorus, orch, 1983; Angelus (Ave Maria), S, chorus, orch, 1984; Króluj nam Chryste [Reign over us, Christ] (Kilar), chorus/1v, pf, 1995; Jakżeż ja się uspokoję [How Calmed I Am] (S. Wyspiański), 1v, pf, 1996; Agnus Dei, chorus, 1996

Chbr and solo inst: 2 suites, pf, 1949, 1950; 12 preludiów, pf, 1951; Wariacje na temat Paganiniego, pf, 1951; Pf Sonata, 1952; Wind Qnt, 1952; Sonata, hn, pf, 1954; Training 68, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1968

Film scores (dirs. in parentheses): Nikt nie woła [No-One Calling] (K. Kutz), 1960; Milczenie [The Silence] (Kutz), 1963; Salto (T. Konwicki), 1965; Westerplatte (S. Różewicz), 1967; Lalka [The Doll] (W. Has), 1968; Struktura kryształu [The Structure of Crystal] (K. Zanussi), 1969; Sól ziemi czarnej [Salt of the Black Earth] (Kutz), 1969; Perła w koronie [Pearl in the Crown] (Kutz), 1971; Życie rodzinne [Family Life] (Zanussi), 1971; Iluminacja (Zanussi), 1973; Bilans kwartalny [Balance Sheet] (Zanussi), 1974; Ziemia obiecana [Promised Land] (A. Wajda), 1974; Barwy ochronne [Camouflage] (Zanussi), 1976, Smuga cienia [The Shadow Line] (Wajda), 1976; Trędowata [The Leper] (J. Hoffman), 1976; David (P. Lilienthal), 1979; Kontrakt (Zanussi), 1980; Paciorki jednego różańca [Beads of One Rosary] (Kutz), 1980; Przypadek [Blind Chance] (K. Kieślowski), 1981; Kronika wypadków miłosnych [Chronicle of Amorous Events] (Wajda), 1986; Korczak (Wajda), 1990; Leben für Leben: Maximilian Kolbe (Zanussi), 1990; Bram Stoker's Dracula (F.F. Coppola), 1992; König der letzten Tage (T. Toelle), 1993; Death and the Maiden (R. Polański), 1994; Cwał [Full Gallop] (Zanussi), 1996; The Portrait of a Lady (J. Campion), 1996

Incid music, music for radio and TV

Principal publishers: PWM, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMuz (A. Machowska)

B. Pociej: 'Herbsttag Wojciecha Kilara', RM, v/21 (1961), 10 only

T. Marek: 'Bogurodzica by Wojciech Kilar', Polish Music (1977), no.1, pp.19–24

J. Łużyńska: 'Dźwięki i obrazy' [Sounds and pictures], RM, xxxvii/10 (1993), 3 only

A. Chłopecki: 'Postmodernistyczny Wojciech Kilar' [Postmodern Wojciech Kilar], Opcje: kwartalnik kulturalny (1994), no.3

A. Stachowski: 'Muzyka filmowa Wojciecha Kilara', Opcje: kwartalnik kulturalny (1994), no.3, pp.97–102

K. Podobińska and L. Polony: Cieszę się darem życia [I enjoy the gift of life] (Kraków, 1997) [interviews]

ADRIAN THOMAS

Kilenyi, Edward (b Békésszenentandás, 25 Jan 1884; d Tallahassee, FL, 15 Aug 1968). American composer and violinist of Hungarian birth. He was the father of pianist Edward Kilenyi (b 1910). The elder Edward received his general education principally in Budapest and Szarvas, receiving the BA in 1902 at the State College, Hungary, and then studied briefly at the Scuola Nazionale Musicale in Rome with Mascagni and at the Cologne Conservatory (1902–7). At Columbia University, where he was a Mosenthal Fellow, he studied with Daniel Gregory Mason and received the MA (1915) and the PhD. Kilenyi is best remembered as a teacher of George Gershwin, whom in 1919–21 he instructed in theory and advanced harmony while also providing advice on orchestration and conducting. He published accounts of Gershwin's study with him as well as a number of articles on music, including a study of Hungarian music (MQ, v, 1919, pp.20–39); he also edited Folksongs from Mexico and South America (with Eleanor Hague, 1914). Kilenyi was associated with the motion picture industry for over thirty years as music director for various early sound films, including Abie's Irish Rose (1928) and Tillie's Punctured Romance (1939).

Though few of his original works are available in print or have been recorded, a vocal score of his opera The Cry of the Wolf is held at the Library of Congress and the film The Adventures of Chico (1937), for which he wrote the music, has been preserved at several libraries in the USA.

WORKS

Str Qt, 1912; Ov. (incid music, Kleist), 1913; Modern Variations on an Old English Tune, vn, pf, 1915; The Cry of the Wolf (op, 1, C.E. Parker), 1916; Str Qnt; other works for vn; songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove3

E. Kilenyi: Gershwiniana: Recollections and Reminiscences of Times Spent with my Student George Gershwin (n.p., 1963)

Obituary, Variety, no.252 (21 Aug 1968)

ALLAN B. HO

Kilgen. American firm of organ builders. It was founded in New York by George Kilgen (b Merchingen, nr Osterburken, Germany, 19 March 1821; d St Louis, MO, 6 Dec 1902), who had been apprenticed to Louis Voit (1802–83) in Durlach, Germany. Kilgen emigrated to the USA with a group of political refugees in 1848, finding employment with the Jardine firm before he established his own firm in 1851. In 1873 he moved his company to St Louis, where it prospered. In 1886 the firm became George Kilgen & Son when Charles Christian Kilgen (b New York, 22 April 1859; d St Louis, 6 May 1932) joined as a partner. The firm's most distinguished work dates from the period of the latter's presidency, and includes instruments for St Patrick's Cathedral, New York (1928), and St Justin's Church, Hartford, Connecticut (1932).

After the death of Charles Christian, dissension broke out between his sons Alfred (1886–1974), George (1891–1972), Charles (1895–1975) and Eugene Kilgen (1897–1967), and the original firm dissolved in 1939. Eugene formed a new company under the name of Kilgen Organ Co., which closed in 1960, and his three brothers formed Kilgen Associates, which went bankrupt in 1943.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'American Organ Builders of Today: George Kilgen & Son', The Diapason, xv/12 (1923–4)

W.H. Barnes: The Contemporary American Organ (Glen Rock, NJ, 8/1964)

O. Ochse: The History of the Organ in the United States (Bloomington, IN, 1975)

BARBARA OWEN

Kilian, Johann [Hans] (b 1515/1516; d Neuburg an der Donau, 29 Dec 1595). German composer and printer. A medal dated 1555 gives his age as 39. In his early youth he went to Neuburg to the court of Count Palatine Ottheinrich, whose treasurer he was in 1544. Ottheinrich had introduced the Lutheran doctrine in 1542 and he helped Kilian to establish a publishing house for reformed literature and music which issued its first publications in 1545 but which was ravaged by war in 1546 and not reopened until 1556. In the same year Ottheinrich became Elector Palatine, had Kilian as his secretary and in 1558, just before he died, awarded him an annual payment of 200 florins 'for life'. At the same time Kilian gave up publishing. He was also interested in alchemy, and Ottheinrich left him the collection of works by Paracelsus that he had helped him assemble. Except for an isolated reference in 1594 nothing is known of his later years. Nor do we know anything of his musical education.

His four-part setting of the chorale O Herr, mein Gott was published as an appendix to Caspar Huberinus's Vom Christlichen Ritter (Neuburg, 1545). The fourth volume of Georg Forster's Frische teutsche Liedlein (Nuremberg, 1556) contains his four-part song Ach Lieb, ich muss dich lassen, which uses as its bass the tenor of Isaac's Innsbruck, ich muss dich lassen; Sebastian Ochsenkun published the same song and Kilian's motet Laudate dominum in his Tabulaturbuch auff die Lauten (Heidelberg, 1558). These pieces show that Kilian was a skilful composer, who well knew how to use cantus firmus techniques. An inventory of 1544 (D-HEu Pal.Germ.318) also records some lost pieces by him: a motet, Memor esto, and 11 different German songs (whose texts survive).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Schottenloher: Pfalzgraf Ottheinrich und das Buch (Münster, 1927)

S. Hermelink: 'Ein Musikalienverzeichnis der Heidelberger Hofkapelle aus dem Jahr 1544', Ottheinrich-Gedenkschrift zur vierhundertjährigen Wiederkehr seiner Kurfürstenzeit in der Pfalz, 1556–1559, ed. G. Poensgen (Heidelberg, 1956), 247–60

A. Layer: 'Pfalzgraf Ottheinrich und die Musik', AMw, xv (1958), 258–75

LINI HÜBSCH-PFLEGER

Killmayer, Wilhelm (b Munich, 21 Aug 1927). German composer. The son of a school teacher, he spent his early childhood in the rural surroundings of Mitterndorf, near Dachau. After his father's early death in 1932, he moved to Munich, where he began to study the piano in 1933. From 1945 to 1951 he attended Herrmann Wolfgang von Waltershausen's seminar, passing the state final examination in conducting and composition. He went on to study composition with Orff, at first privately (1951–3) and later in masterclasses at the Munich Hochschule für Musik (1953–4). He also studied musicology at Munich University, where his teachers included Rudolf von Ficker and Walter Riezler (1949–52). After winning the Fromm Music Foundation prize in 1954 for his Missa brevis, he decided to concentrate on composition. Other honours include bursaries from the Villa Massimo, Rome (1958, 1965–6), the Förderpreis of the city of Stuttgart (1959), the Prix Italia (1965), a bursury from the Paris Cité des Arts (1970), membership in the Bavarian Academy of Fine Arts (1972) and the Berlin Academy of Arts (1980), and the Paul Hindemith prize of the Schleswig-Holstein Music Festival (1989).

After his second residency at the Villa Massimo and while enjoying several levels of success as a composer and interpreter, Killmayer suffered a crisis which led him to change his surroundings and dissolve his existing professional ties. From 1968 to 1975 he lived in Frankfurt, where he earned his living writing scores for the theatre and cinema, and associated with literary figures such as Max Frisch and Oskar Wiener. In 1973 he was appointed to a composition chair at the Munich Hochschule für Musik.

The technical, stylistic and expressive spectrum of Killmayer's music is both diverse and multi-layered, ranging from cantabile, song-like writing, through dramatic tension and depressive numbness, to comedic entertainment. His early works show the influence of Stravinsky on the one hand, and Orff on the other, especially in his fondness for rhythmic ostinatos, motorically sustained climaxes spread over long musical spans and intricate metrical puzzles. His development also shows signs of an abiding confrontation with the musical tradition of the 18th and 19th centuries. Robert Schumann is a constant presence, evoked directly in Schumann in Endenich – Kammermusik no.2 (1972), but also discernible in the cycles of romances from the 1980s.

Killmayer's musical language seems to have evolved out of the tension between a critical confrontation with classical modernism and a simultaneously emphatic relation to traditional music up to Mahler and Debussy. The first works marking a breakthrough in this respect were the orchestral Due canti and Divertissement, and the one-movement piano concerto (all 1957). An almost Italian singing line is combined in these pieces with dramatic, motoric developmental processes. A radical style change in the 1960s and early 70s produced disconcertingly quiet, abstemious pieces, suggesting a retreat from normal musical life into a private world. The most important works of this period are characterized on the one hand by startling passages of musical stasis, and on the other by extensive, continuous courses of movement grounded in differently layered and aligned ostinato textures. After this period, and partly in response to his intensive confrontation with literature, Killmayer embarked upon a new evaluation of melody. The three cycles of settings of late poems by Friedrich Hölderlin (1982–91) are the major achievement of this third stylistic phase. His virtuoso play with types and topoi in works such as the Bagatellen for cello and piano (1990–91) and the Fünf neue Klavierstücke (1986–8) also made him a significant figure in musical postmodernism. Works from the 1990s, such as Trois études blancs for piano (1990–91) and La joie de vivre for small orchestra (1996), project a tonal abstraction in which the potential for tension is extracted from individual pitches and brief phrases.

WORKS

STAGE

Ops: La buffonata (ballet-op, T. Dorst), 1959–60, Heidelberg, 30 April 1961; La tragedia di Orfeo (after A. Poliziano), 1960–61, Munich, 9 June 1961; Yolimba oder Die Grenzen der Magie (musical theatre, T. Dorst and Killmayer), 1962–3, Wiesbaden, 15 March 1964, rev. 1970, Munich, 9 May 1970; Une leçon de français (Eine Französischstunde) (musical scene), 1964, Stuttgart, 19 Oct 1966

Ballets: Pas de deux classique, 1964; Encore, 1970; Pardies, 1972–4

ORCHESTRA

6 leichte Stücke, str orch, 1952; 2 canti, 1957; Divertissement, 1957; Pf Conc., 1 movt, 1957; Pezzi ed intermezzi, vc, pf, orch, 1968; Sym. no.1 'Fogli', 1968; Sym. no.2 'Ricordanze', 14 insts, 1968–9; Fin al punto, str orch, 1970; Sym. no.3 'Menschen-Los', 1972–3, rev. 1988; Nachtgedanken, 1973; The Broken Farewell, D-tpt, small orch, 1977; 4 poèmes symphoniques, 1977–80: Jugendzeit, Verschüttete Zeichen, Überstehen und Hoffen, Im Freien; Grande sarabande, str orch, 1980; Zittern und Wagen, 1980; Sostenuto, vc, str orch, 1984; La joie de vivre, small orch, ob obbl, 1996

VOCAL

Choral (unacc. mixed chorus, unless otherwise stated): 4 Canzonen (trad.), 1950; 4 Canzonen (Petrarch), 1951–2; Canti amorosi (old French, old Italian, T. Tasso) S, T, mixed chorus, 1953–4; Missa brevis, 1954; Lieder, Oden und Szenen (J.W. von Goethe), 1962; Geistliche Hymnen und Gesänge (Racine), 1964; Romantische Chorlieder (L. Tieck), 3vv men's chorus, hn ad lib, 1965; 7 rondeaux (C. d'Orléans), solo vv, women's chorus, 1966; Laudatu I–II (Francis of Assisi), double chorus, 1967–9; Lauda (J. da Todi), double chorus, opt. orch, 1968; Cantetto (G. Ungaretti), 1971; 4 Chorstücke (Ungaretti, G. Meli, A. Scandelli, C. Janequin, J.F. von Eichendorff), 1971–90; Lazzi (Killmayer), 5 scherzos, women's chorus, 1977; Speranza (Killmayer), 5vv mixed chorus, 1977; Sonntagsgeschichten (Killmayer), 1982–5; Neue Sprichwörter und Geschichten (Killmayer), 1987; . . . was dem Herzen kaum bewusst (Eichendorff), men's chorus, 1995; Pindar, 2 odes, mixed chorus, org, 1999

Other vocal: 3 Lieder (H. Heine), T, pf, 1947; Reveries (M. Mariée, d'Orléans, C. Marot), S, pf, perc, 1953; Romanzen (F. García Lorca), S, pf, perc, 1954; 8 Shakespeare-Lieder, T, vn, cl, bn, pf, perc, 1955; Le petit Savoyard (French folksongs), S, 7 insts, 1956; Sappho (Gk.), 5 lieder, S, small orch, 1959–60; 3 canti di Leopardi, Bar, orch, 1965; 3 Gesänge (F. Hölderlin), Bar, pf, 1965; Antiphone, Bar, small men's chorus ad lib, orch, 1967; Blasons anatomiques du corps féminin I, S, A-cl, vn, vc, pf, 1968; Altissimu (Francis von Assisi), S, t rec, bongo, 3 tom-toms, timp, 1969; Preghiere (Ps lxviii), Bar, orch, 1969; Salvum me fac, Bar, pf, 1969–71; Tamquam sponsu (Ps xxiii), S, insts, 1974; Französisches Liederbuch (various), S, Bar, chbr ens, 1979–80; Merlin-Liederbuch (T. Dorst), 4vv, chbr ens, 1981–6; Hölderlin-Lieder, T, orch/pf: I, 1982–5; II, 1983–7; Aussicht (Hölderlin), Bar, 9 insts, 1989; Blasons anatomiques du corps féminin II, S, pf, 1991; 3 Lieder (Eichendorff), T, pf, 1991; 5 Lieder (Sappho), S, pf, 1993–5; 8 Lieder (G. Trakl), T, pf, 1993; 9 Lieder (P. Härtling), Mez, pf, 1993; 8 poésies (Mallarmé), S, pf, 1993; Die Zufriedenheit (Hölderlin), T, pf, 1993; Heine-Portrait (Heine), T, pf, 1994–5; 8 poésies (Mallarmé), S, small orch, 1994–5; Neue Heine-Lieder, T, pf, 1998

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Ens: Kammermusik, jazz ens, 1957; Balletto, rec ens, perc, 1959; 3 danze, ob, perc, 1959; Per nove strumenti, ob, A-cl, bn, F-hn, str qt, db, 1968; 3 pezzi, tpt, pf, 1968; Str Qt, 1969; The woods so wilde (Kammermusik no.1), fl, va, gui, 3 perc, 1970; Schumann in Endenich (Kammermusik no.2), pf, elec org/hmn, 5 perc, 1972; Kindertage (Kammermusik no.3), fl, va, gui, elec org, pf, accdn, zither, 5 perc, 1973; Führe mich, Alter, nur immer in Deinen geschnörkelten Frühlings-Garten! Noch duftet und taut frisch und würzig sein Flor, 13 insts, 1974; Str Qt [no.2], 1975; Brahms-Bildnis, pf trio, 1976; Str Trio, 1984; Humoreske, vn, pf, 1987; 5 Romanzen, vn, pf, 1987; 5 Romanzen, vc, pf, 1989; 8 Bagatellen, vc, pf, 1990–91; Fantasie, vn, pf, 1992; Die Schönheit des Morgens, 5 romances, va, pf, 1994

Pf: Polka, 1955–6; Canto melismatico, 1956–88; An John Field, nocturnes, 1975; Pardies, pf 3 hands/2 pf, 1972; 3 Klavierstücke, 1982; 5 neue Klavierstücke, 1986–8; 3 études blancs, 1990–91; 12 études transcendentales, 1991–2; Rundgesänge und Morgenlieder, 1993

Principal publishers: Schott

Principal recording companies: Wergo, EMI, Orfeo

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (S. Mauser); MGG2 (S. Mauser)

U. Dibelius: 'Komponieren als ein Abenteuer der Fantasie: zur Musik von Wilhelm Killmayer', NZM, Jg.143, no.12 (1982), 20–23

S. Mauser: 'Musik als Sprache: anmerkungen zu Wilhelm Killmayers Klavierstück 1', NZM, Jg.143, no.12 (1982), 23–6

D. Rexroth: 'Die Perspective einer "Grossen Zeit": Wilhelm Killmayers Weg zu den Hölderlin-Liedern', NZM, Jg.148, nos.7–8 (1987), 33–8

S. Mauser: 'Jenseits von Freiheit oder Notwendigkeit: zur Asthetik von Wilhelm Killmayer', Nomos (1988), 28–31

S. Mauser: 'Wilhelm Killmayers Klavierstück Phantasie-Paraphrase', Melos, li (1992), 43–62

S. Mauser, ed.: Der Komponist Wilhelm Killmayer (Mainz, 1992)

SIEGFRIED MAUSER

Kilpinen, Yrjö (Henrik) (b Helsinki, 4 Feb 1892; d Helsinki, 2 March 1959). Finnish composer. He studied at the Helsinki Music Institute with Furuhjelm (1908–9, 1911–12, 1916–17), with Heuberger in Vienna (1910–11) and in Berlin with Juon and Taubmann (1913–14). He travelled extensively in Scandinavia and central Europe, especially Germany. He became an honorary professor in 1942 and was elected to the Finnish Academy in 1948. In the same year he founded the Society of Friends of the Solo Song (after his death the Yrjö Kilpinen Society). He also founded the Savonlinna Days of Music, from which the Savonlinna Festival was to develop.

As a composer Kilpinen concentrated almost exclusively on the lied. His works were first recognized in 1918 by the critic Evert Katila, and other reviews further advanced his career. He quickly gained many admirers, but also was accused of composing too prosaically and too quickly. Performances by well-known singers such as Gerhard Hüsch and Astra Desmond promoted his work abroad, and in Nazi Germany of the 1930s, where he was seen as continuing the great German lied tradition of Schubert and Wolf, he was particularly popular. Characteristic of Kilpinen's output are extensive song cycles to texts by the same poet, which often reflect the poet's stylistic changes. Even in the early 1920s, in settings of Larin-Kyösti, Huugo Jalkanen, L. Onerva and V.A. Koskenniemi, Kilpinen attached himself to the lied tradition. The period he spent with Swedish poets (*c*1922–6), however, marked a stylistic paring-down, and alongside intellectual and humorous matter, there is philosophical reflection. The settings of V.E. Törmänen's Tunturilauluja ('Songs of the Fells', 1926 and 1928) have a true melodic invention and show to their best advantage Kilpinen's stylistic features – open 4ths, 5ths and octaves, and bare piano textures, with a fondness for pedal points and ostinatos. While in Germany he set more than 75 songs by Morgenstern, and they show the influence of Musorgsky. In his later work he returned to Finnish poetry, exchanging Expressionism for the archaic language of the Kanteletar (64 songs, op.100). Stylistically Kilpinen remained an isolated phenomenon; he did not adopt the new techniques of his contemporaries, but, in his tendency towards neo-classicism, nor did he continue the national Romantic tradition. His standing has been contested, but many of his songs, in their austere way, are rather fine.

WORKS
(selective list)

Song cycles: Reflexer [Reflections] (P. Lagerkvist), opp.33–4, 1922; Fantasi och verklighet [Fantasy and Reality] (E. Josephson), 1922; Hjärtat [The Heart] (B. Bergman), 1922–3; Tunturilauluja [Songs of the Fells] (V.E. Törmänen), opp.52–4, 1926–8; Lieder der Liebe I–II (C. Morgenstern), op.59, 1928; Lieder um den Tod (Morgenstern), op.62, 1928; Sommarsegen (A. Sergel), 1932–3; Spielmannslieder (Sergel), 1932–3; Grabstein (H.F. von Zwehl), op.80, n.d.; Herbst (H. Hesse), op.98, 1942; Lieder um eine kleine Stadt (B. Huber), 1942; Hochgebirgswinter (Hesse), 1954

Many other songs (total over 750), half unpubd

Other works: over 30 male choruses, 6 pf sonatas, other pf pieces; Sonata, vc, pf; Suite, vc, 1936–7; Sonata, vn, pf, inc.

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Fazer, Hansen

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Legge: The Songs of Yrjö Kilpinen (London, 1936)

T. Karila: Yrjö Kilpinen (Porvoo, 1964) [with list of works]

ERKKI SALMENHAARA

Kilwardby, Robert (*b c*1215; d Viterbo, 10 Sept 1279). English theologian and scientist. He was a teacher of arts in Paris (*c*1237–45), noted for his extensive knowledge of Aristotle and for his numerous writings on subjects ranging from the liberal arts to religion. He later joined the Dominicans and was provincial prior of the order in England between 1261 and 1272. In 1273 he was consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury and in 1278 was named Cardinal-Bishop of Porto and Santa Rufina. His introduction to all sciences (including music), De ortu scientiarum (ed. A.G. Judy, London, 1976), was possibly written about 1250, some time between his entry into the Dominican order and the completion of his theological studies.

In De ortu scientiarum Kilwardby synthesized musical ideas by earlier scholars, especially Boethius, reinterpreting some aspects on the basis of the intensive reception of Aristotle's works. The central problem of defining the essence of music and its relationship to the other sciences was not, however, resolved satisfactorily: typically for his time, the author wavered between a Neoplatonic interpretation of music as a mathematical science and an Aristotelian one based on principles of logic and empiricism. The increasing influence of Aristotle apparent in De ortu ultimately led to a re-evaluation of what came to be called musica practica: with its extensive set of logically formulated rules for an evolving mensural notation, the status and intellectual involvement of the practical musician could no longer be questioned.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.G. Judy, ed.: Robert Kilwardby: De ortu scientiarum (London, 1976)

T. Kaeppeli: Scriptores Ordinis Praedicatorum medii aevi, iii (Rome, 1980)

E. Hirtler: Die Musik als 'scientia mathematica' von der Spätantike bis zum Barock (Frankfurt, 1994)

ANDREAS GIGER

Kim, Earl [Eul] (b Dinuba, CA, 6 Jan 1920; d Cambridge, MA, 19 Nov 1998). American composer of Korean descent. He began piano lessons at the age of nine, and was a pupil of Homer Grun for seven years. In 1939 he began composition and theory studies with Schoenberg at UCLA, but transferred a year later to the University of California, Berkeley, where he worked with Ernest Bloch. His education was interrupted by service in the US Army Intelligence Service during World War II. After the war he returned to Berkeley, where he studied with Sessions (MM 1952). He taught at Princeton (1952–67) and Harvard (1967–1990) univerisites and remained active throughout his career as a conductor, vocal coach and pianist. His work has been championed by a number of prominent performers, among them Beardslee, Perlman, Upshaw and Benita Valente. His many honours include commissions from the Fromm, Koussevitzky and Naumberg foundations, and the Library of Congress; grants from the Ingram Merrill and Guggenheim foundations, and the NEA and the Paris Prize, the National Institute of Arts and Letters Award, the Brandeis Creative Arts Medal and the Mark Horblit Award of the Boston SO. He was co-founder and former president of Musicians Against Nuclear Arms.

Although the harmonic materials, forms and expressive worlds of Kim's music vary significantly from piece to piece, his music is generally spare, delicate and subtly inflected. Crafting an eclectic compositional language from various sources, he incorporated aspects of tonal and post-tonal procedures non-systematically. Text-setting played a central role in his compositional development. During the 1960s and 70s, he devoted himself to extended settings of Samuel Beckett; later he composed numerous solo and vocal ensemble settings of Rainer Maria Rilke, Stéphanie Mallarmé and Anne Sexton, among others. His writing for voice demonstrates a sensitive response to the rhythms and intonations of spoken language and to the range of dramatic and lyrical possiblities of vocal production, whether the text is spoken (Melodrama, 1975; Dear Linda, 1992), dramatically intensified (Lines, 1975) or sung (Now & Then, 1981). In his text-settings, instrumental accompaniments often mirrors the text, moving in rhythmic unison with the voice, doubling vocal lines or following the contours of spoken language. Kim described the formal and perceptual ascpects of his music by making an analogy to the aesthetic of the Japanese stone garden. He proposed that the garden:

> summed up my theory of composing: discrete images not taken in by the eye or ear at once, but seen or heard consecutively. At the end there is a whole that is somehow synthesized from all these separate pieces. Multiplicity becomes unity ... transitions take plave by means of silences. Statements are being made when nothing is being said.

WORKS

Op: Footfalls (1, S. Beckett), 1983

Vocal: Letters found near a Suicide (F. Horne), S, pf, 1954; Exercises en route (Beckett), S, fl, ob, cl, vn, vc, perc, actors, dancers, film, 1963–70: Dead Calm, Rattling On, Gooseberries, she said, They are Far Out; Narratives (Beckett), actress/female nar, actor, S, 2 tpt, trbn, 2 vn, 2 vc, pf, TV, lights, 1973–8: Monologues, Melodrama I, Lines, Eh Joe, Melodrama 2, Duet, Earthlight; Now & Then, S, fl, va, hp, 1981: On the Meadow (A. Chekhov), Thither (Beckett), Roundelay (Beckett); Where Grief Slumbers (G. Apollinaire, A. Rimbaud), 7 songs, S, hp, str orch, 1982; Scenes from a Movie (R.M. Rilke), S, B, vn, vc, pf, 1986–8: I The 7th Dream, II The 11th Dream; 4 Lines from Mallarmé, 1v, fl, vib, 4 perc, 1989; 3 Poems in French (P. Verlaine, C.P. Baudelaire), S, 2 vn, va, vc, 1989; Where Grief Slumbers, S, hp, 4 vn, 2 va, 2 vc, 1989; Some Thoughts on Keats and Coleridge, SATB, 1990; Scenes from a Movie (R.M. Rilke), Bar, chorus, hp, str orch, 1991: III The 26th Dream; Dear Linda (A. Sexton), female v, fl, vc, mar, pf, perc, 1992

Inst: Bagatelles, pf, 1948–50; Dialogues, pf, orch, 1959; Vn Conc., 1979; Caprices, vn, 1980; Cornet (Rilke), nar, orch, 1983; Scenes from Childhood, brass qnt, 1984; The White Hour, chbr orch

3 early works, withdrawn

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

Principal publisher: Composers Collaborative, Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Barkin: 'Earl Kim: Earthlight', PNM, xix/1–2 (1980–81), 269–77

G.L. Jeffers: Non-Narrative Drama: Settings by Virgil Thomson, Ned Rorem and Earl Kim of Plays by Gertrude Stein and Samuel Beckett (diss., UCLA, 1983)

J. Tassell: 'Golden Silences: the Flowering of Earl Kim', Boston Globe Magazine (27 Feb 1983)

M.-E. Jeon: 'I am Concerned with What is Good', Sonus, vii/11 (1987), 1–9 [interview]

MARTIN BRODY

Kim, Hi Kyung (b Seoul, 15 March 1954). American composer of Korean birth. She studied at Seoul National University and the University of California, Berkeley, as well as at IRCAM and the Ecole Normale Supérieure in Paris. Her principal composition teachers included Imbrie, Olly Wilson, Grisey and Sung-Jae Lee. A member of the music department at the University of California, Santa Cruz, she founded the Pacific Rim Festival of Contemporary Music there in 1996. Kim's extensive research on Elliott Carter and traditional Korean music is reflected in her compositions. Rhythmic complexity and formal intricacy underlie even her most accessible works, and many of her structural and timbral ideas owe something to Korean folk music. Her honours include the Walter Hinrichsen Award from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, and fellowships from the Tanglewood Music Center, the MacDowell Colony, the Charles Dodge Foundation and Meet the Composer.

WORKS

Pathway, pf, 1973; Romance, pf, 1973; Dialogue, vn, pf, 1974; Crash, str qt, 1975; Fugue, pf, 1975; Resistance, S, pf, 1975; Sonata no.1, pf, 1975; Conversation, orch, 1976; Harmony, wind qnt, 1976; Looking at New Heaven and Earth, cho, pf, 1976; Satisfaction, chbr ens, 1977; A-Ri, S, str qt, 1983; Intrigues, cl, prep pf, 1985; Reflection, cl, 1985; Encounter, cl, b cl, bn, vc, 5 perc, 1986; Short Dance, str qt, 1987; Step, cptr, 1988; What are Years?, S, fl, cl, vn, db, gui, 1988; Dance, str qt, 1990; When you Rush, chbr ens, 1991; Islands in the Bay, perc, orch, 1993; Unknown Lives, chbr ens, 1995; Breaking the Silence, pf trio, 1996; After the Fall, cl, b cl, 1998; Crystal Drops, 2 pf, 1998; Primitive Dance, str qt, 1998

JOSHUA KOSMAN

Kim, Young Uck (b Seoul, 1 Sept 1947). American violinist of Korean birth. He studied with Galamian at the Curtis Institute (1961–9) and made his orchestral début in 1963 with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy in a concert broadcast on national television. In 1966 he made his New York recital début, and from this time his solo career rapidly reached international status. He also teaches and in 1988 was appointed professor of string studies at the Hochschule für Musik in Detmold. In 1992 he gave the première of Gunther Schuller's Violin Concerto at Carnegie Hall, New York, and the European première with the Rotterdam PO. In 1980 he formed a piano trio with Emanuel Ax and Yo-Yo Ma, which has successfully toured internationally; their recording of the Dvořák trios won an award in 1988. Kim's solo recordings have been highly acclaimed, especially those of all the Mozart concertos. Kim's playing is innately musical with a sweet tone, yet also very personal in approach. He plays the 'Cessole' Stradivarius dating from 1716. (D. Rooney: 'Prodigy Matured', The Strad, xcix, 1988, 308–11)

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Kimball. American firm of reed organ, piano and organ makers. It was founded in Chicago in 1857 by William Wallace Kimball (b Rumford, ME, 22 March 1828; d Chicago, 16 Dec 1904), the firm becoming known as the W.W. Kimball Co. Sensing the growing commercial importance of Chicago, he moved there in 1857; a chance purchase of a consignment of pianos at an auction shortly afterwards launched his career as a piano dealer. A few years later he added reed organs to his stock, but for over 20 years he purchased his instruments from East Coast manufacturers. In 1865 Kimball married Evalyne Cone, whose brother Albert (d 1900) soon entered the firm, eventually becoming treasurer. The fire in Chicago (1871) destroyed the Kimball store but this was only a temporary setback, and in 1880 Kimball opened his first factory, for the manufacture of reed organs. In 1882 the firm was incorporated with Kimball, Cone and Edwin S. Conway as principals, and in 1887 piano manufacturing was begun. Kimball's business credo stressed volume, reasonable price and quality of construction; he encouraged his technicians to develop improvements, and many patents were granted for reed organ designs and improvements in piano plates. These factors doubtless helped Kimball to secure the highest awards for organs, reed organs and pianos at the World's Columbian Exposition (1893). Among the technicians were a number of skilled immigrants, including Peter Tapper and one Guricke, both trained in Bechstein's piano factory in Berlin, and Frederic Hedgeland, who trained in his family's organ works in England and in 1890 superintended a new pipe organ building department for Kimball, remaining until 1908, when he was succeeded by Oscar Hagstrom. Beginning with an ingenious small 'portable' organ of two manuals and pedals which employed free reeds for its pedal stops, the firm soon began building larger organs, and during the first half of the 20th century produced many notable instruments, including several for large churches in Chicago, a reconstruction of the organ in the Mormon Tabernacle, Salt Lake City (1901), and the organ in the Municipal Auditorium of Pretoria, South Africa (1935). The firm also produced a large number of cinema organs in the period 1914–30, under the direction of Robert Pier Elliot; the largest such instrument was built in 1924 for the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles.

In 1883 Kimball's nephew Wallace Lufkin (d 1945) joined the firm, eventually becoming its president, as did another nephew, Curtis Kimball (d 1936). In 1896 the firm began making self-playing organs, followed by player pianos in 1901. From 1915 to 1925 they also manufactured a gramophone invented by Albert Huseby, who was superintendent of the piano works. The reed organ branch of the firm closed in 1922, having produced 403,390 instruments, while the organ building branch continued until 1942, with a total of 7326. Curtis Kimball became president of the firm on his uncle's death, and was in turn succeeded by Lufkin. W.W. Kimball, a grand-nephew of the founder, became president in 1945, and many other family members remained in the firm's hierarchy. After World War II the Kimball firm concentrated chiefly on pianos; in 1955 a new factory was built for that purpose in Melrose Park, Illinois. In 1959 Kimball became part of the Jasper Corporation of Jasper, Indiana, which has wide interests in timber and furniture making, and it moved to Indiana in 1961. The company took over Bösendorfer of Vienna in 1966, and some Bösendorfer features have been incorporated into Kimball pianos.

In 1961 the company began to manufacture electronic organs designed for home use. The company subsequently became known as the Kimball Piano and Organ Co., and in the mid-1970s the parent corporation became Kimball International. The sound of the Kimball electronic organ is normally generated by 12 oscillators using frequency division, and an electronic rhythm section and automatic bass are included. The majority of current models are two-manual 'spinet' organs with 37 or 44 notes on each manual and a one-octave pedal-board.

See REED ORGAN.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Dolge: Pianos and their Makers (Covina, CA, 1911–13/R)
V.A. Bradley: Music for the Millions: the Kimball Piano and Organ Story (Chicago, 1957)
N.H. Crowhurst: Electronic Organs, iii (Indianapolis, 1975)
O. Ochse: The History of the Organ in the United States (Bloomington, IN, 1975)
D. Junchen: Encyclopedia of the American Theatre Organ, i (Pasadena, CA, 1985)

BARBARA OWEN

Kimball, Jacob (b Topsfield, MA, 15 Feb 1761; d Topsfield, 24 July 1826). American composer, tune book compiler and singing master. He served as a fifer at the outset of the War of Independence. In 1780 he graduated from Harvard College; later he studied law and was reportedly admitted to the Bar in New Hampshire. He was mainly occupied, however, as a schoolmaster and singing teacher. He apparently died in poverty. Kimball published two collections devoted almost entirely to his own music: The Rural Harmony (Boston, 1793) and The Essex Harmony (Exeter, NH, 1800). Among his 124 published compositions, some were widely known through editions of the popular Village Harmony (Exeter, from 1796 on). A manuscript dated 1808 at the Essex Institute, Salem, contains 63 Kimball tunes that were never published. Some of his works have recently been edited by H. Eskew and K. Kroeger (in Selected Works of Samuel Holyoke (1762–1820) and Jacob Kimball (1761–1826), New York and London, 1998). All his music displays careful craftsmanship and a grasp of European theoretical principles exceeding that of most of his American contemporaries.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.J. Metcalf: American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (New York, 1925/R), 111–14
G.C. Wilcox: Jacob Kimball, Jr. (1761–1826): his Life and Works (diss., U. of Southern California, 1957)
G.C. Wilcox: 'Jacob Kimball: a Pioneer American Musician', Essex Institute Historical Collections, xciv (1958), 356–78

RICHARD CRAWFORD/NYM COOKE

Kimbalom (Hung.). See CIMBALOM.

Kimbell, David (Rodney Bertram) (b Gillingham, Kent, 26 Jun 1939). English writer on music and teacher. He studied music at Oxford (MA 1961) and was awarded the degree of DPhil in 1968 for a critical study of the early operas of Handel. From 1965 to 1978 he lectured at the University of Edinburgh and was appointed professor and Master of Music at the University of St Andrews in 1979. In 1987 he was made professor at the University of Edinburgh.

Kimbell's principal research interests are Italian opera, German Romantic music and the music of Handel. His publications include an important study of Verdi (1981), which traces the composer's progressive transformation of an inherited operatic tradition, a history of Italian opera (1991) and a monograph on Bellini's Norma (1998). These works examine the artistic qualities of the music with particular reference to its biographical and cultural context, and build on his substantial knowledge of Italian history and literature. He has also edited both the 1711 and 1731 versions of Rinaldo for the Hallische Händel-Ausgabe (II/4/i, Kassel, 1993; II/4/ii, Kassel, 1996).

WRITINGS

'Poi . . . diventò "L' Oberto"', ML, lii (1971), 1–7
'Il trovatore: Cammarano and Garcia Gutiérrez', Il teatro e la musica di Giuseppe Verdi: Milan 1972, 34–44
'The Young Verdi and Shakespeare', PRMA, ci (1974–5), 59–73
'Aspekte von Händels Umarbeitungen und Revisionen eigener Werke', HJb, 1977, 45–67
'Verdi's First rifacimento: I Lombardi and Jérusalem', ML, lx (1979), 1–36
Verdi in the Age of Italian Romanticism (Cambridge, 1981)
'Variation Form in the Piano Concertos of Mozart', MR, xliv (1983), 95–103
'Romantic Opera, 1830–1850: Italy', NOHM, ix (1990), 140–85
Italian Opera (Cambridge, 1991)
Vincenzo Bellini: Norma (Cambridge, 1998)
ed., with R. Savage: Donald Francis Tovey: the Classics of Music (Oxford, forthcoming) [previously uncollected essays and lectures]

ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Kimber, William [Bill, Merry] (b Headington Quarry, Oxon, 1872; d after 1949). English traditional concertina player and morris dancer. Kimber's grandfather and father were both central figures in the Headington Quarry Morris team that has danced annually at Whitsuntide since at least the mid-18th century. Kimber, who accompanied the Headington Quarry Morris team from 1888, learnt his concertina technique from his father.

It could be argued that the folkdance movement was founded on Boxing Day 1899, when CECIL SHARP saw the Headington Quarry Morris team perform. Sharp noted morris tunes from Kimber the next day and, when Mary Neil invited Kimber to London to teach the girls at the Esperance Guild, Sharp became reacquainted with him. Kimber subsequently became integral to Sharp's didactic folkdance programme: Sharp lectured and played the piano; Kimber danced and played the concertina. They taught regularly at Chelsea Polytechnic and the Royal Academy of Music, and played several times at the Queen's Hall and the Steinway Hall. After Sharp's death, Kimber continued the same working relationship with Douglas Kennedy, Sharp's successor in the English Folk Dance Society (see ENGLISH FOLK DANCE AND SONG SOCIETY).

Between the wars, Kimber trained and played for various morris teams in the Oxford area and for the Headington Quarry Morris team when it was revived in 1949. Kimber is held in great esteem both because of his roots and his authority as a morris dancer and musician.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

William Kimber, EFDSS LP1001 (1963)
The Art of William Kimber, Topic 12T249 (1974)
K. Chandler: Ribbons, Bells and Squeaking Fiddles (London, 1993)
The Voice of the People, ed. R. Hall, ix: Rig-a-Jig-Jig: Dance Music of the South of England, various pfmrs, Topic TSCD 659 (1999) [incl. notes by R. Hall]

REG HALL

Kim Ch'angjo (b South Chŏlla Province, Korea, 1865; d 1920). Korean kayagŭm player. He is widely considered in Korea to have been the founder of the sanjo genre for solo melody instrument and drum. He is reputed to have combined certain types of shaman instrumental music, especially sinawi, with melodic and rhythmic patterns characteristic of p'ansori dramatic narrative singing to produce the virtuosic instrumental sanjo, an enormously popular genre among traditional musicians in modern Korea. He was proficient in playing several other string and wind instruments and was especially accomplished in kayagŭm pyŏngch'ang, in which a soloist accompanied by a drum both plays the kayagŭm and sings in a p'ansori style.

Kim Ch'angjo had a number of important disciples who became the leaders of several subsequent schools of sanjo, and modern sanjo schools which can trace their ancestry directly to Kim are the most highly revered. Among his disciples was Han Sŏnggi, who in turn taught Kim Ch'angjo's granddaughter Kim Chukp'a (1911–89). Kim Chukp'a was probably the most noted sanjo player of the late 20th century and was named an Intangible Cultural Treasure for her kayagŭm sanjo in 1979.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Song Bang-Song: The Sanjo Tradition of Korean Kŏmun'go Music (Seoul, 1986), 95–8
Kim Haesuk: Sanjo yŏn'gu (Seoul, 1987), 49, 121–3

ROBERT C. PROVINE

Kim Chung-gil [Kim Chŏnggil] (b Seoul, 28 Jan 1934). Korean composer. After a long period of military service he studied at Seoul National University with Kim Sehyŏng and Kim Sŏngt'ae (BA, MA), then with Isang Yun and others at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Hanover (1970–2). In 1983 he was appointed professor at Seoul National University; he has been president of the Contemporary Music Society in Seoul and vice-president of the Asian Composers' League. His music for dance, theatre and film as well as his concert music has earned him many awards in Korea (1979–92). His compositions have been performed in Pyongyang as well as Seoul, and in cities worldwide including Moscow, Paris and Vienna.

Kim is one of the most prolific of Korean composers. Early works such as the Trio (1962) are influenced by Stravinsky's Petrushka and by Debussy's use of pedals and repeating phrases. These two devices, which became trademarks of Kim's music, characterize the four movements of Kop'ung (1981), where they are combined with modal elements and ornamentation derived from traditional Korean music. Serial techniques, which Kim studied in Germany, dictate the structure of Ch'ŏng (1970), Yŏng (1973) and Yŏbaek (1974). In Hausdorff Spatium (1975) concepts of space are explored through the repetition and overlapping of cells within serial rows. In the influential Ch'uch'omun (1979), for eight traditional Korean instruments, Kim provides short melodies for each instrument on a single sheet of notation, each of which is repeated at will, and prescribes the order of entry but not the alignment of parts. Later works have moved in two directions. Kim has explored timbre and indeterminacy in series of works such as Ŏllaejit (1988, 1990) and Urfiguration (1989–98), but he has also composed prolifically for film, drama and public events, writing the official fanfares for both the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Seoul Olympic Games. His writings include 20-segye ŭi saeroun ŭmak ('20th-century new music', Seoul, 1997).

WORKS

Orch: Yul '83 [Rhythm '83], cl, str, 1983; Sangch'ungyul [Mutual Rhythm], 1983; Sarang hanŭn naŭi choguk [The Country I Love], 1987; Ch'ukchŏnsŏgok [Prelude on Celebration], 1988; Ch'ŏngsonyŏnŭl wihan kwanhyŏnak chogok [Suite of the Adolescent], 1989; 6·25 40-nyŏn puch'o (40th Anniversary of the Outbreak of the Korean War), 1990; Uridŭl sesang [Our World], 1991; Celebration, ov., 1996; Urfiguration, 1998

Chbr: Trio, vn, cl, pf, 1962; Topological Space, brass septet, 1968; Normal Space, brass septet, 1968; 3 Flöten und Schlagzeug, 3 fl, perc, 1973; 5 Stücke, brass qnt, 1973; Der Brennpunkt, ww ens, 1974; Yŏbaek [Blank Space], str qt, 1974; Das Spatium, str qnt, 1978; Ch'uch'omun [Autumn, Grass, Literature], 8 Korean trad. inst, 1979; Pi [Secret], str ens, 1982; Wisang '84 [Phase '84], str, perc, 1984; Fanfare '86, brass, perc, 1984; P'ungnyu hyŏnak hapchugok, Korean trad. str ens, 1985; Yul '85 [Rhythm '85], 3 cl, perc, 1985; '88 Olympic Fanfare, brass, perc, 1988; Ŏllaejit, 4 tuba, 1988; Kŭnwŏnhyŏngsang (Urfiguration), 8 ww, 1989; Ww Qnt, 1991; Fanfare Expo '93, brass, perc, 1993; Wŏnhyŏngsang '94 (Urfiguration '94), 15 fl, 1994; Wŏnhyŏngsang '97, 3 perc, Korean trad. ens, 1997

1–2 insts: Ch'ŏng [Blue], fl, 1970; Kyŏng [Scenery], cl, pf, 1971; Variation for Perc, 1973; Yŏng [Shadow], cl, pf, 1973; Liedchen, 2 ob, 1974; Hausdorff Spatium, pf, 1975; Pi, vc, 1978; Ch'oriptong [Young Married Man], vn, 1979; Piano choguk ŭi Kop'ung [Ancient Style Suite], pf, 1981; Hausdorff Spatium II, org, 1982; Sori omnŭn sori [Sound without a Sound], 2 perc, 1984; Suyŏsan [Suyŏ Mountain], Korean trad. ens, 1984; Sasŏl [Story], vn, pf, 1985; Yul '90 [Rhythm '90], hp, 1990; Ŏllaejit '90, hp, 1990; Ch'oriptong '96, fl, pf, 1996

Choral: Ch'ŏngsan pyŏlgok, SATB, timp, 1975; Sŏdang ŭi yul [Rhythm of a Village Schoolhouse], SATB, str, 1982; Kwich'ŏn (Chŏn Sangbyŏng), SATB, perc, 1996

Film scores: Kawi pawi po, 1974; Mandala, 1981; Kil sottŭm, 1985; Asianŭn hana [Asia is One], 1987; Ajae aje Para aje, 1989; Pyŏgŭl nŏmŏsŏ [Beyond All Barriers], 1989; Segyenŭn Sŏullo, Sŏurŭn segyero [The World to Seoul, Seoul to the World], 1989; Myŏngja ikkikko ssonya [Myŏngja Akiko Sonya], 1992; Tallinŭn Han'gugin [The Distinctiveness of Koreans], 1994; Moŭmgok [Vocalization], 1995

Music for dance: Chong [Bell], 2 perc, fl, ob, vc, 1983; Taeji ŭi sori [Song of the Great Earth] (ballet), 1984; Kalmang [Earnest Desire], 1985; Ch'unhyang ŭi sarang [The Love of Ch'unhyang] (ballet), 1986; Han ŭi kkŭt [End of Remorse], 1986, Asia ŭi sonnim [Asia's Guest], 1986; Kyŏŭl kkot mit pom [Winter Flower with Spring], 1986; Hondon [Chaos], 1988

Music for theatre: Motakpul ach'imisŭl [Bonfire Morning Dew], 1984; Pult'anŭn yŏul [Flaming Shoal], 1984; Tap [Tower], 1984; Hamlet, 1985; Mansŏn, 1985; Hanŭl mank'ŭm mŏnara, 1985; P'unggŭm sori [Organ Sound], 1985; Sanbul [Forest Fire], 1988

Principal publisher: Sumundang

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (Chun-Mi Kim)
A. Killick: New Music for Korean Instruments (MA diss., U. of Hawaii, 1990)
M. Dilling: Musics of the Seoul Olympic Ceremonies (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1991)
K. Chŏnggil: Chakkokka ŭi ch'osang (Seoul, n.d.)
Yu Ilhan, Chŏng Sŭngjae, eds.: Chung-gil Kim: His World of Music (Seoul, 1991)

KEITH HOWARD

Kim Kisu (b Seoul, 22 Nov 1917; d Seoul, 21 Oct 1986). Korean composer and musicologist. After graduating in 1936 from the Korean court music institute, then known as the Yiwangjik aakpu, he joined it and its successor, the National Centre for Korean Traditional Performing Arts, as a musician, rising to become its director (1973–7). He is widely considered the first modern composer of music for traditional Korean instruments. He helped set up a middle and high school for traditional music, devising workbooks to replace rote learning for the taegŭm, p'iri, kayagŭm, kŏmun'go, haegŭm and tanso. He transcribed thirteen volumes of Korean music in an updated Korean notation system, chŏngganbo. A versatile performer on the kŏmun'go and tanso and of court dance, he was appointed by the government to two cultural positions, Chongmyo cheryeak ('Rite to Royal Ancestors', 1964) and the mask dance Ch'ŏyongmu (1971).

Kim composed over 70 pieces, mainly for large ensembles of traditional instruments. His first acknowledged piece, Hwanghwa mannyŏn chigok (1939) is no longer played, since it sets a poem considered to celebrate the Japanese colonial power. Kohyangso (1944), written in Harbin in the final days of the colonial era, is full of nationalist pride; after he fled with the South Korean government to the Pusan enclave during the Korean war, his works became intensely patriotic. Both Chŏngbaekhon (1952), celebrating the declaration of independence in 1919, and Hawŏnch'un (1952), describing the beauty of Korea at new year, were broadcast from Pusan during the war. Tashi on Sŏul (1953), first performed in Seoul in September 1953, was probably written after Kim returned to the capital but before the armistice was signed. In all these pieces, the language is that of traditional lyric songs, kagok. There is little place for emotion, and no deliberate use of harmony. Kim adapts Western conventions, writing in staff notation with time signatures, and replacing the traditional ensemble director with a conductor. In the 1960s he moved away from lyric songs, instead adding accompaniment to metric melodies, as in Owŏl ŭi norae, a piece celebrating the new regime of Park Chung Hee.

WORKS
(selective list)

all for Korean instruments

Inst: Seuyŏng [Drizzle], taegŭm, kŏmun'go, ajaeng, changgo, 1941; Kohyangso [Birthplace], 1944; Songgwangbok [Liberation Praise], orch, 1952; Hawŏnch'un [Celebrating the Beginning of Spring], orch, 1952; Chŏngbaekhon [Pure White Spirit], orch, 1952; Myŏngdanp'ung [Bright Morning Wind], 4 ww, perc, 1952; Tashi on Sŏul [Return to Seoul], orch, 1953; Ch'unghonje [Ritual for the War Dead], orch, 1953; P'abungsŏn [Breaking the Bonds], orch, 1954; Nae maŭm chŏnsŏl [The Legend of my Soul], orch, 1955; Sae Nara [New Land], orch, 1962

Vocal: Hwanghwa mannyŏn chigok [10,000-Year Chrysanthemum] (Yi Nŭnghwa) 1v, orch, 1939; Kaech'ŏnbu [The Nation's Origin], 1v, orch, 1952; Owŏl ŭi norae [May Song] (Yi Sangno), 2-pt chorus, ens, 1961

Music for dance: Tanjongaesa, 1956; Ch'ŏyongnang [The Story of Ch'ŏyong], 1956

WRITINGS

Han'guk minyo 50-kokchip [50 Korean folksongs] (Seoul, 1958)
Han'guk ŭmak [Anthology of Korean music] (Seoul, 1969–78)
Kugak inmun [Introduction to Korean music] (Seoul, 1972)
Kugak chŏnjip [Complete collection of Korean music] (Seoul, 1974–85) with Kang Sajun: Haegŭm chŏngak [Court music for Korean fiddle] (Seoul, 1979) with Kang Sajun: Kayagŭm chŏngak [Court music for Korean zither] (Seoul, 1979)
Namch'ang kagok paeksŏn [100 male lyric songs] (Seoul, 1979)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Yi Sŏngch'ŏn: 'Han'guk ŭmak ch'angjak ŭi yŏksa wa Kim Kisu ŭi ŭmak' [The history of creativity in Korean music and Kim Kisu's music], Han'guk ŭmak, xxiii (Seoul, 1987), 3–4
Chŏn Inp'yŏng: Han'guk chakkok inmun [A guide in musical composition for Korean instruments] (Seoul, 1989)
K. Howard: 'Blending the wine and stretching the wineskins: new Korean music for old Korean instruments', Festschrift for Dr Lee Hye-Ku (Seoul, 1998)

KEITH HOWARD

Kimmerling, Robert [Johannes Evangelist] (b Vienna, 8 Dec 1737; d Oberweiden, 5 Dec 1799). Austrian composer and teacher. He was educated as a student and choirboy by the Benedictines at Melk Abbey, Lower Austria, from 1748 until 1754, when he took his vows. As a novice he was sent to Vienna to study composition with Joseph Haydn, perhaps from 1756 to 1758, but more certainly from November 1760 until April 1761, during which time he was exposed to keyboard works by C.P.E. Bach, F. Nicolai and G.M. Rutini and vocal music by Galuppi, C.H. Graun and Pergolesi. He then returned to Melk as music director, 1761–77; he spent the last 22 years of his life as a minister in the parishes of Getsdorf, Weikendorf and Oberweiden.

Kimmerling's solid reputation as a composer rested primarily on his stage works produced in connection with visits of the imperial court to Melk in 1764 and especially with the nuptial visit of Marie Antoinette in 1770, for which he composed his biblical Singspiel Rebecka, die Braut Isaaks (music lost). Over 60 of his works, mostly sacred and composed before 1777, survive, but their stylistic and technical characteristics seeem to show little influence of his teacher, Haydn. He made his most important contributions as a teacher and as an early supporter of Haydn within the Viennese periphery. At least four of the 50 choirboys whom he recruited and trained at Melk (K.I. Andorfer, G.J. Hauer, F.F. Petrack and Ignaz Rudolf) became music directors themselves, thereby helping to perpetuate the tradition of Haydn's teachings and music in Austria into the 19th century.

WORKS

Liturgical: 13 masses, 1767–77, A-Gd, GÖ, H, SE, SEI, CZ-Bm, Trebon, 3 lost; 3 requiem settings, ?1763–1790, A-M, SEI, CZ-OP; 2 Marian ants, 1762–84, A-Gd, SEI, MT, MZ; 29 other works, 1768–75, GÖ, M, MT, MZ, Neuhofen/Ybbs, SE, SEI, SL, Wn, CZ-Bm

Other vocal: Jocosa musica (Spl), Melk, 22 April 1764, lost; Applausus de Tobiae historia (op or ludus comicus, B. Schuster), Melk, 22 April 1767, lost; Rebecka, die Braut Isaaks (Spl, B. Schuster), 21 April 1770, lib (Vienna, 1770), music lost; Schäferspiel, comp. Feb 1771, lost; 3 lieder, D-DT, doubtful; other lieder, lost, mentioned in Kühnel catalogue, 1802

